This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

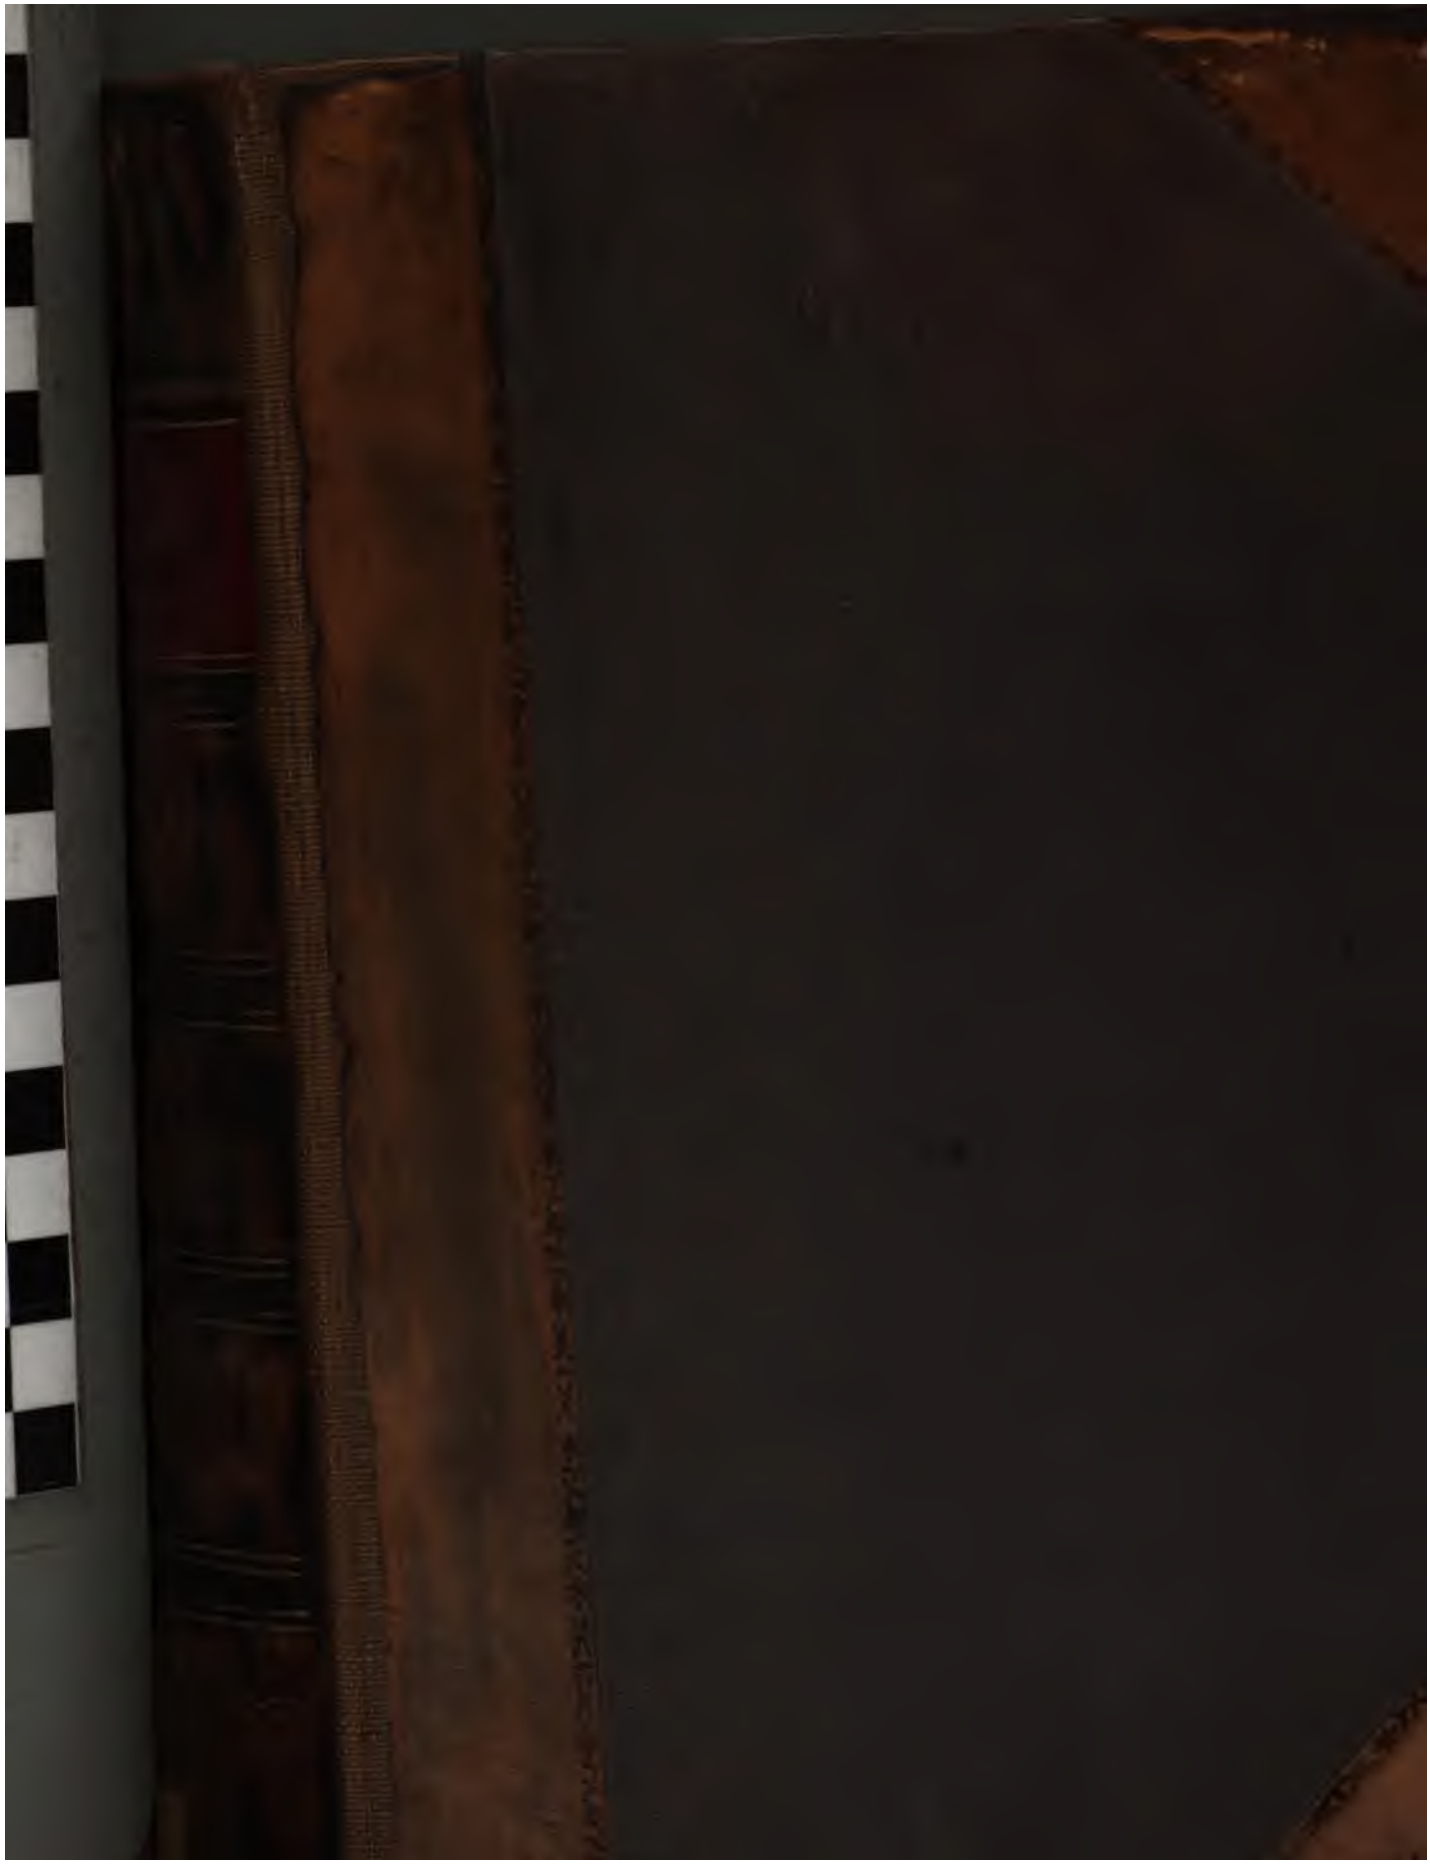
+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

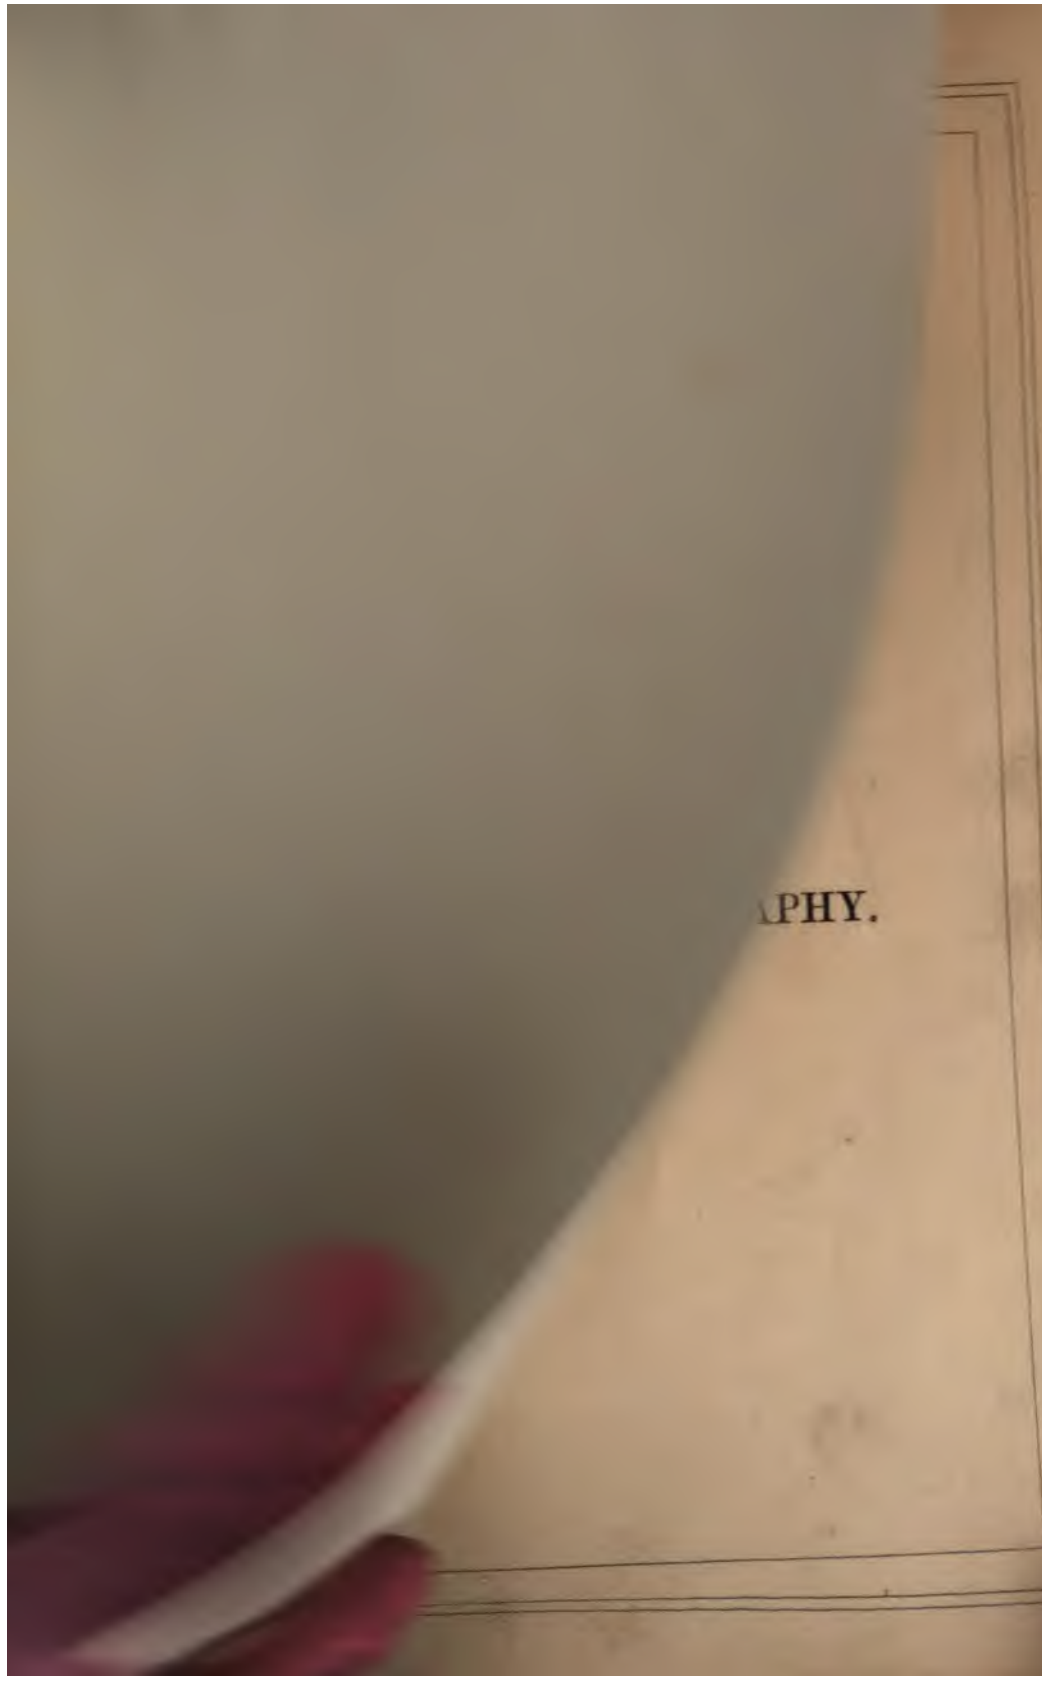
Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at `http://books.google.com/`



600043841Q

Cam. Ref.

2101 d. 1



THE

COMPREHENSIVE

DICTIONARY OF BIOGRAPHY.

UNIFORM WITH THIS VOLUME,

THE LIBRARY GAZETTEER:

OR,

DICTIONARY OF DESCRIPTIVE AND PHYSICAL GEOGRAPHY,

COMPILED FROM THE MOST RECENT AUTHORITIES;

WITH

An Introductory Treatise on Physical Geography.

BY

JAMES BRYCE, LL.D., F.G.S.,

MASTER OF THE MATHEMATICAL DEPARTMENT IN THE HIGH SCHOOL OF GLASGOW.

ILLUSTRATED BY MAPS AND NUMEROUS ENGRAVINGS.

One large Volume, price 21*s. half-bound.*

BIBLIOTHECA BODLEIANA

William Shakspeare

THE

COMPREHENSIVE

DICTIONARY OF BIOGRAPHY;

EMBRACING

A SERIES OF ORIGINAL MEMOIRS

OF

THE MOST DISTINGUISHED PERSONS OF ALL COUNTRIES,

LIVING AND DEAD.

TO WHICH IS ADDED,

A Classified List of the most Distinguished Persons of all Times, ARRANGED CHRONOLOGICALLY.

Illustrated by a Series of Steel Portraits, and numerous Engravings of the Birth-places, Monuments, and other Memorials of Departed Genius.

LONDON AND GLASGOW:
RICHARD GRIFFIN AND COMPANY,
Publishers to the University of Glasgow.
1860.

L 101 d 1

GLASGOW:
PRINTED BY BELL AND BAIN.

PREFACE.

NEXT to the consideration of the HOLY SCRIPTURES, no study is so useful and profitable as that of BIOGRAPHY. The lessons to be learnt from contemplating the fortunes and misfortunes—the difficulties and achievements—of those individuals who now figure, or have figured, in the drama of life, are the most valuable guides we can have for the formation of our own characters, in teaching us, from their experience, what we ought to imitate—what to avoid. The importance, also, of the study as a department of HISTORY cannot be over-estimated; indeed, the life of every eminent character, and of every person who has been conspicuously engaged in the conduct of any department of public affairs, makes a portion of the history of his country. In addition to these considerations, its deeply interesting nature amply rewards and stimulates the labours of those who make it their study.

With these observations the Publishers beg to submit the present work, and confidently expect for it a large share of public favour.

The COMPREHENSIVE DICTIONARY OF BIOGRAPHY has been arranged under Three Divisions.

The First Division contains a series of Memoirs of the most distinguished persons of all times and countries, who have gone to "that undiscovered country from whose bourne no traveller returns."

The Second Division comprises Sketches of those living "Worthies" whose position or services entitle them to a niche in the Temple of Fame.

The Third Division forms an Analytical and Chronological Table of the Names mentioned in the work. This department is entirely a new feature, and will be found the most complete List yet published of Names celebrated in Literature, History, Philosophy, Science, and the Arts.

In the carrying out of this scheme the Publishers entrusted the execution of the principal lives of each class of remarkable men to practised writers, who have cultivated the corresponding departments of Learning; and from whom they had therefore reason to expect Biographical Notices really characteristic, and of assured value.

In the departments appertaining to History, Politics, Law, Military Science and Art, and Ecclesiastical Affairs, valuable assistance has been obtained from Sir Archibald Alison, John Hill Burton, Professor Creasy, Professor Eadie, Professor Ferguson, and Mr. Rich. The latter has also endeavoured to delineate the peculiar character and services of the leading Mystics.

Classical Authors are treated by Professor Ferguson. Theological and Religious Literature was given in charge to Professor Eadie and Dr. Jamieson. Poets, Novelists, and other great Men of Letters, are described by Professor Spalding: a Memoir of Shakespeare is from the pen of Charles Knight, and Notices of the Bards of Scotland from James Hedderwick and Thomas Davidson.

The principal names in the department of the Mathematical and Physical Sciences were entrusted to Sir David Brewster and Professor Nichol. In the Experimental Sciences, the department of Chemistry has been treated by Dr. R. D. Thomson; that of Natural History by Dr. Baird; and Applied Science by Professor Gordon. The distinguished names in Medical Science are treated by Mr. M'Connechy. The eminent Geographers have been attended to by Dr. Bryce, who has endeavoured, by considerable research, to give exact information on the discoveries made by great travellers.

In Mental Philosophy Professor Nichol has furnished a résumè of the doctrines taught by many of the Founders of the great schools, under their respective names.

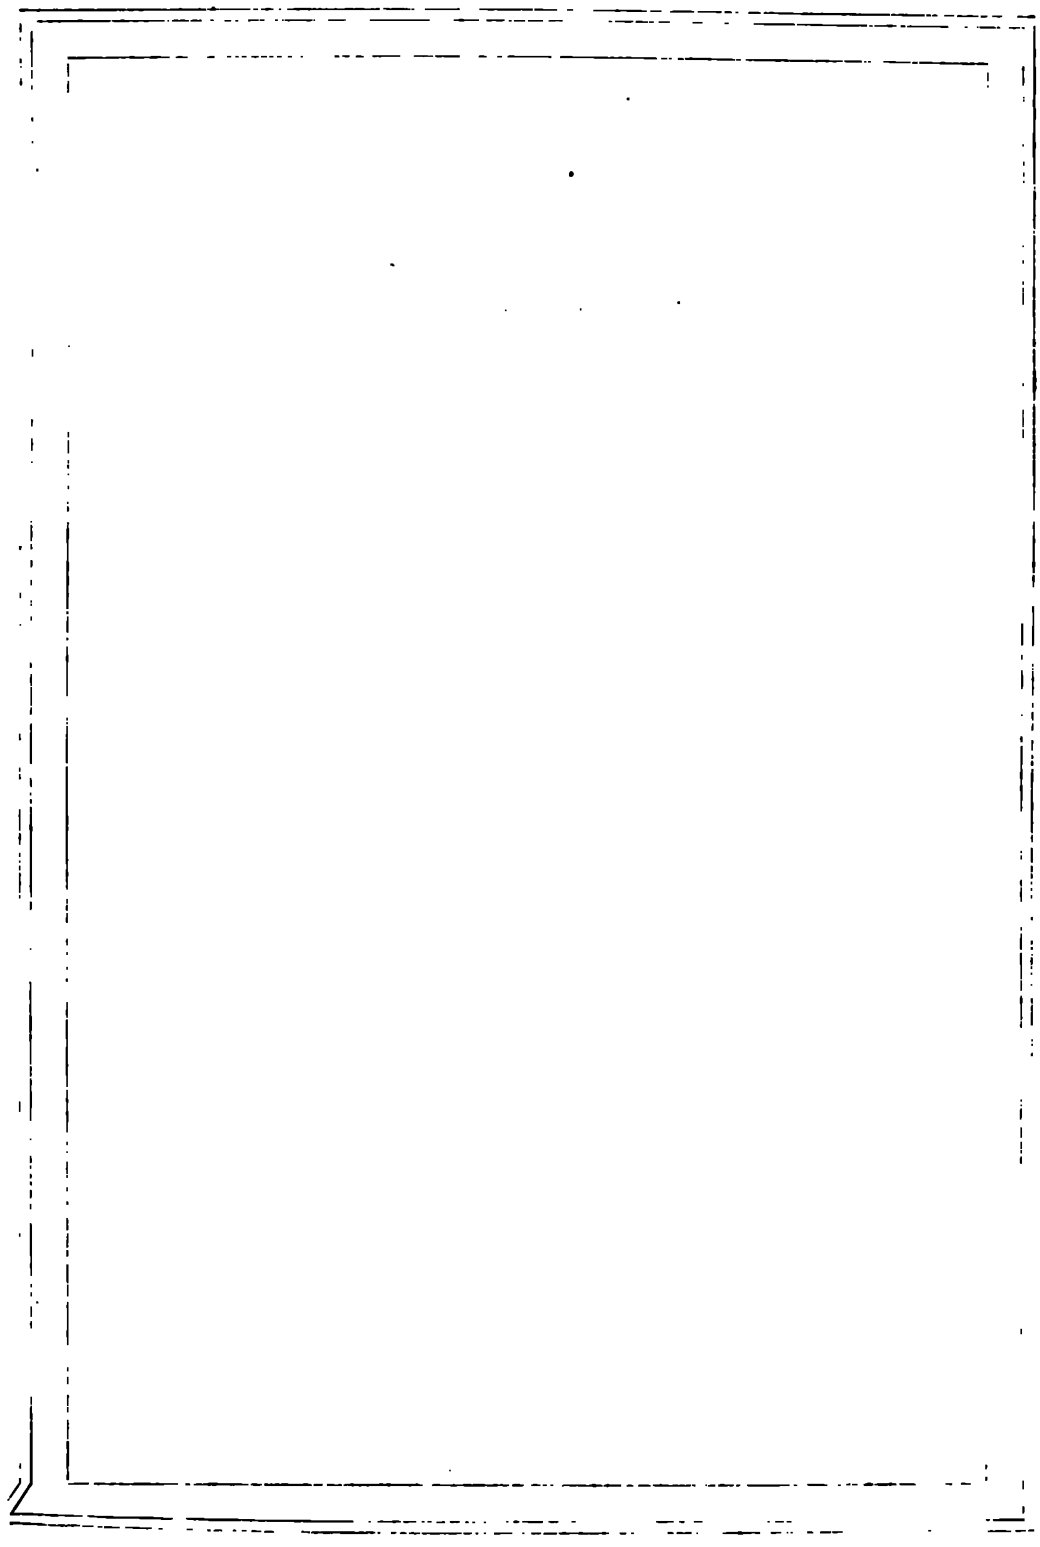
The List of Articles written by Professor Eadie in Theology and Church History, includes the Fathers and Reformers, besides many of the Mediæval Divines and Schoolmen. Dr. Jamieson's catalogue is graced by the names of our Modern Divines, Missionaries, and Philanthropists.

In the department of the Fine Arts, the great Painters, Engravers, Sculptors and Architects are characterized by Mr. Wornum, whose exact acquaintance with the literature of these subjects is well known. The same may be said regarding the Musicians, under the charge of Mr. Manson; and of the great Actors, whose lives have been written by the dramatic writer and critic Mr. Heraud.

LIST OF WRITERS.

Initials.
A.A.	Sir Archibald Alison, Bart., D.C.L., F.R.S.E.
W.B.	William Baird, M.D., F.L.S. British Museum.
D.B.	Sir David Brewster, K.H., F.R.S. L. & E., LL.D., &c. Principal of the United College of St. Salvador and St. Leonard, St. Andrews.
J.B.	James Bryce, Jun., A.M., F.G.S. Head Master of the Geographical Department, High School, Glasgow.
J.H.B.	John Hill Burton, Esq. Author of a History of Scotland.
E.S.C.	E. S. Creasy, M.A. Professor of History in the University of London.
T.D.	Thomas Davidson, Esq.
J.E.	John Eadie, D.D., LL.D. Professor of Biblical Literature, United Presbyterian Church.
G.F.	George Ferguson, A.M. Professor of Humanity, King's College, Aberdeen.
L.D.B.G.	Lewis D. B. Gordon F.R.S.E. Professor of Civil Engineering in the University of Glasgow.
J.H.	James Hedderwick, Esq.
J.A.H.	John A. Heraud, Esq.
R.J.	Robert Jamieson, D.D. Minister of St. Paul's, Glasgow.
C.K.	Charles Knight, Esq.
J.M'C.	James M'Connechy, Esq.
J.M.	James Manson, Esq.
J.P.N.	John P. Nichol, LL.D. Professor of Astronomy in the University of Glasgow.
E.R.	Elihu Rich, Esq.
W.S.	William Spalding, A.M. Professor of Logic and Metaphysics in the University of St. Andrews.
R.D.T.	Robert Dundas Thomson, M.D., F.R.S. L. & E., F.C.S. Professor of Chemistry, St. Thomas's Hospital College, London.
R.N.W.	Ralph N Wornum, Esq. Department of Practical Art, Marlborough House, London.

The Articles which have no initials attached to them are, with few exceptions, written by the Editor.



ABAGA-KHAN, emperor of the Moguls, distinguished as an opponent of the crusaders, d. 1282.

ABAGARUS. See ABGARUS.

ABAI, HUSSEIN, author of a Harmony to the various Commentaries on the Koran.

ABAILARD. See ABELARD.

ABAISI, TOMMASO, a sculptor employed with his two sons in the cathedral of Ferrara, 1451.

ABAKER-KHAN. See ABAGA-KHAN.

ABAKUM, a Russian ecclesiastic, slain 1684.

ABALANTIUS, LEO, a Greek, who aided in the murder of Nicephorus.

ABALPHAT, a native of Ispahan, celebrated for having translated the work of Apollonius on Conic Sections into Arabic.

ABANCOUR, C. X. J., FRANQUEVILLE D', nephew of the celebrated Calonne, and one of the victims of the French revolution, 1792.

ABANCOURT, C. FREROT D', a French officer, born 1801, author of 'Memoirs on Turkey.'

ABANCOURT, F. J. WILLEMAIN D', author of 'Fables,' &c., 1754-1803.

ABANO. See APONO.

ABANTIDAS, a tyrant of Sicyon, k. B.C. 251.

ABARBANEL. See ABRABANEL.

ABARCA, or AB-ARCA, SANCTIUS, king of Arragon and Navarre, killed in an engagem., 926.

ABARCA, D. JEROMIANO, author of a history of Arragon, lived in the 16th century. To another of the same family a history of Levant is attributed.

ABARCA, MARTIN DE, a nobleman of Arragon, eminent for his love of literature and knowledge of numismatics: about the end of the 16th century.

ABARCA, DONA MARIA DE, a Spanish lady, distinguished as an amateur painter, time of Rubens.

ABARCA, PEDRO DE, a Jesuit of Spain, eminent as an historian and theologian, 1619-1682.

ABARIS, a reputed magician of Scythia.

ABAS, an ancient sophist, to whom certain historical commentaries are attributed.

ABASCAL, D. JOSE FERN., viceroy of Peru during the South American war of independence. He was a native of Madrid. 1743-1821.

ABASCANTUS, a physician of Lyons, 2d cent.

ABASSA, a Turkish officer, strangled 1634.

ABASSA, ABBATSA, or A'BBAZAH, a sister of Haroun al Raschid, whose singular marriage and its results have furnished the romantic incidents of many an oriental story.

ABASSARUS, the name of an officer who was charged by Cyrus with the rebuilding of the Temple.

ABASSON, an impostor who persuaded the French and the Grand Turk that he was the grandson of Abbas, and was finally put to death.

ABATE, ANDREA, an artist of Naples, d. 1732.

ABATI, DEGLI, a mediæval Florentine family, one of whom is placed in the ninth circle of hell, by Dante, for his treacherous conduct to the Guelphs.

ABATI, an Ital. ecclesiastic and poet, 16th cent.

ABATI, ANTHONY, an Italian poet, d. 1667.

ABATI, an Italian physician of the 16th century.

ABATI, NICOLO, a painter in fresco, employed at Fontainebleau and many Italian palaces, born 1512, died 1571, called also Dell 'Abate. His relations Anthony and Peter of the same name were also distinguished as painters.

ABATIA, F. ANTONI, an alchymist, 17th cent.

ABATINI, GUIDO UBALDO, a fresco painter of Rome, 1600-1656.

ABATUCCI. See ABBATUCCI.

ABAUNZA, PETER, a Spanish au., 1599-1649.

ABAUZIT, FIRMIN, an esteemed French author, distinguished also by the friendship of Sir Isaac Newton, born at Uzes, 1679, died at Geneva, 1767.

ABAZA, a Turkish pasha, remarkable for his military talents and official career, died 1636.

ABBA, author of a work explaining the difficult words of the Talmud, 1543.

ABBA, ARICA, a Jewish rabbi of the 3d cent.

ABBA, THULLE, king of the Pelew Isles, 1783.

ABBACO, PAUL DEL, a Florentine poet and astronomer, cotemporary with Boccaccio.

ABBADABU, AMON, sultan of Seville, 1042, noted for his magnificence and military talents.

ABBADIE, JAMES, a celebrated Protestant theologian, 1658-1727.

ABBADIE, the author of a Dissertation on the Conversion of the Gauls, published in 1702.

ABBADIE, VINCENT, a French surgeon, translator of MacBride's Essays, 1766.

ABBAS, an uncle and zealous partizan of Mahomet, died 653.

ABBAS, EBU ABBAS ABDALLAH, surnamed Rabbhani, was a son of the foregoing, and chief of the Sahabuh or companions of the prophet, d. 687.

ABBAS I., the seventh shah or king of Persia, by whom the ancient seat of empire was transferred to Ispahan. This prince is celebrated for his victories over the Ottomans. Many acts of domestic cruelty tarnish the successes of a long reign of 41 years: died 1628, aged 70.

ABBAS II., the son and successor of Sephy, became shah of Persia, 1642, at the age of 13; died 1699 from the effects of his debaucheries. The most remarkable event of his reign was the conquest of Candahar.

ABBAS III. succeeded to the throne of Persia when only eight months old, and died in 1736, after a merely nominal reign, under the usurpation of Nadir Shah.

ABBAS, ALI, a Persian physician and astronomer of the 10th century.

ABBAS, IBU ABD-L-MUTALIB, paternal uncle of Mahomet. His great grandson founded the dynasty of the Abassides.

ABBAS, HALY. See ALI BEN-ABBAS.

ABBAS, MIRZA, prince royal of Persia; distinguished by his efforts to introduce the culture of Europe among his countrymen, 1785-1833.

ABBASAH, 1558-1634, a pasha of the Turkish empire. Distinguished as a military leader in two successive revolts.

ABBATUCCI, JA. P., a native of Corsica, distinguished in its wars with the Genoese and the French, afterwards opposed to Paoli, 1726-1812.

ABBATUCCI, CHARLES, son of the foregoing, became general of brigade in the French army, and was killed at the early age of 26, 1796.

ABBATISSA, a poet of Sicily, 1570.

ABBE, H., a painter, lived at Antwerp, 1670.

ABBE, LOUISE, called La Belle Cordonniere, celebrated for her personal attractions and poetical talents, lived at Lyons in the 17th century.

ABBEVILLE, CLAUDE D', a Capuchin father, one of a mission to Marignon, the history of which he wrote, 1614.

ABBIATI, FILIPPO, an historical painter in oil and fresco, born at Milan 1640, died 1715.

metropolis, where he attacked the Realism of his old master with such dialectic dexterity and vigour, that Champeaux's school was speedily extinguished. By and bye his antagonist was made bishop of Châlon-sur-Marne, and Abelard commenced to study theology under Anselm at Laon. Having by his transcendent talent made the seminary at Laon his envious enemy, he returned to Paris, and opened a School of Divinity with unrivalled popularity. In that school were trained many men, from various countries, who afterwards arrived at high ecclesiastical honours—one pope, nineteen cardinals, and above fifty bishops. In this zenith of his fame, when, according to his own confession, pride and luxury had seduced him, he fell in love with, and seduced his pupil, Heloise, a young and fatherless lady not over twenty years of age, and a niece of canon Fulbert, one of the Parisian ecclesiastics. Heloise was conveyed to Brittany, and bore a son in the house of Abelard's sister. The canon insisted upon a marriage, which accordingly took place, a union which Heloise openly denied, to her uncle's great vexation. Abelard next placed her in the convent of Argenteuil; but her uncle took a terrible revenge for the abduction of his niece, by means of some hired ruffians who broke into Abelard's chamber, and inflicted on his person a disgraceful mutilation. Heloise on this took the veil and became a nun, and Abelard retired as a monk into the Abbey of St. Denis. At length he resumed his prelections, but had the misfortune of being suspected of heresy, and was condemned in 1121, by a council which met at Soissonns. Disgusted with the persecuting and exasperated monks of St. Denis, for he had denied their St. Denis to be 'Dionysius the Areopagite,' he retired to Troyes, and selected a retreat which his subdued and chastened spirit named the Paraclete, or Comforter, and in this convent Heloise was at length established as superior. But the unfortunate recluse next provoked the ire of his neighbour, Bernard of Clairvaux, and again for suspected heresy did the council of Sens put its brand upon him. He appealed to Rome, but did not follow out his appeal. Worn out with fatigue, persecution, and infirmity, he at length took refuge in the priory of St. Marcel, where he died 21st April, 1142, at the age of 63. His body, first interred at Cluni, was soon removed to the Paraclete; and twenty years afterwards Heloise was buried beside him at her own request. Their ashes lay undisturbed for 300 years; but in 1497 they were transferred to the church of the abbey; then in 1800 removed to the garden of the Musée Français, in Paris; and lastly, in 1817, they were deposited beneath a Gothic shrine in the cemetery of Pere la Chaise.—The brilliant talents and oratory of Abelard are beyond dispute. As a subtle and accomplished dialectician he had no rival. His 'Conceptualism' forms an epoch in the history of mind, and gave a salutary impulse to the age in which he lived. In his 'Theologia' we discover a vigorous and original mind, often hampered by its position and ecclesiastical subordination, but often asserting its native freedom and untrammelled right, as, for example, in his illustration of the mutual provinces of reason and faith. In his book on Ethics, which he quaintly called 'Scito te Ipsum,' he opposes the Romish doctors on many points of morality; and in his other Treatise, 'Sic et Non'—'Yes and No,' he exposed their boasted uniformity of doctrine, and produced in a series of 157 rubrics, the contradictory opinions of the older teachers of the church. His works were published at Paris in 1614; and at the same place in 1836, Cousin published 'Ouvrages inedits d'Abailard.' [J.E.]

[Tomb of Abelard and Heloise.]

ABELIN, J. Ph., better known as Jean Louis Gottfried, a German historian, 17th century.

ABELL, Jno., a musician, celebrated at the court of Charles II.

ABELLI, Louis, bishop of Rhodes, 1604-1691.

ABELLY, Ant., a Fr. ecclesiastic, emin. as a preacher, confessor to Catherine de Medicis: 16th ct.

ABELLY, Louis, a Fr. ecclesiastic, author of numerous theological works, 1603-1691.

ABENCHAMOT, an Arabian chief, whose exploits against the Portuguese were the admiration of the 16th century.

ABENDANA, Jac., a Spanish Jew, author of a Hebrew Commentary, died 1685.

ABEN-EZRA, a celebrated rabbin, astronomer, and mathematician of Spain, whose commentaries on the Sacred Scriptures are in high repute, both among Jews and Christians, fl. in the 12th cent.

ABERCROMBIE, John, author of several works on horticulture, published originally under his own name and that of Mawe, 1726-1806.

ABERCROMBIE, John, M.D., the eminent author of 'Enquiries concerning the Intellectual Powers,' published 1830, and the 'Philosophy of the Moral Feelings,' published 1833, was born at Aberdeen, Nov. 11, 1781, and attained the highest rank as a practical and consulting physician at Edinburgh; died Nov. 14, 1844.

ABERCROMBY, Alex., Lord, youngest brother of Sir Ralph, a judge of Scotland, and occasional essayist in connection with Mackenzie, 1745-1795.

ABERCROMBY, Dav., a Scotch physician and author, 17th century.

ABERCROMBY, Sir John Robt., lieut.-gen., second son of Sir Ralph, took the Isle of France while governor of Madras in 1810; died 1817.

ABERCROMBY, Patrick, a Scotch historian, physician to James II., died 1726.

ABERCROMBY, Sir Ralph. This gallant and skilful soldier, and upright and humane man, ABGARUS, either the proper name or the title of several kings of Edessa, one of whom was cotemporary with our Saviour, and is said to have written to him.

ABGILLUS, a prince who accompanied Charlemagne to the holy land, and is known by his surname of PRESTER JOHN.

ABIAH, the second son of Samuel.

ABIATHAR, high priest in the time of David.

ABICHT, J. G., a German orientalist, 1672-1740.

ABIGAIL, the wife of Nabal and David.

ABIHU, one of the sons of Aaron.

ABIJAH, son of Jeroboam, king of Israel.

ABIJAH, king of Judah after Jeroboam.

ABIJAH, the wife of Ahaz, and mother of Hezekiah, king of Judah.

ABILDGAARD, P. CH., a Danish physician and naturalist, died 1808.

ABILDGAARD, N. A., brother of the foregoing, an historical painter, 1744-1809.

ABILDGAARD, SOREN, a Danish nat., d. 1791.

ABIMELECH, a k. of Israel, killed B.C. 1206.

ABINGER, JAMES SCARLETT, Lord, an eminent English practising barrister and judge, was born in Jamaica about the year 1769. His family was eminent and influential in the West Indies, and his younger brother, Sir William Anglin Scarlett, became chief justice of Jamaica. He studied at Trinity College, Cambridge, entered at the Middle Temple, and was called to the bar on the 8th July, 1791, taking his degree of A.M. three years later. His practical sagacity, aided by a full, handsome person, which gave him, even in youth, an appearance of sedate importance, procured for him a rapid and lucrative business. His temper, discretion, and industry, were always to be relied on; and few English barristers, while yet junior counsel, have been intrusted with the sole management of so many important cases. There was nothing striking or inspiring in his eloquence, nor was he remarkable for original or profound legal views; but he had the most lucrative of all characters attached to his professional fame, that of getting many verdicts. A writer in the public press, signing himself 'Lorgnette,' who seems to have intimately studied his career, summed up his characteristics as a practical lawyer by saying:—'Watchfulness, prudence in the management of a case, great moral courage in the choice or rejection of the means to be used on behalf of a client, experience of human nature, and great self-denial in the exhibition of that experience; these were the chief agencies by which he acquired his ascendancy over juries; while it is not surprising that he should have also acquired great influence over the bench, when he added intimate knowledge of the intricacies of law to an unusual personal preference for judges, and the prestige which almost unvarying success gave him.' He received a silk gown in 1816. He had before that date made unsuccessful attempts to get into parliament, where he first sat in 1818 for Peterborough, a nomination seat. He was one of the many eminent lawyers whose peculiar forensic powers have failed to please the House of Commons, and he was not much heard there except on professional matters. He had been an advocate of Romilly's law reforms, and was generally counted in the Whig ranks, but he took a distinct step in a gradual change, by becoming attorney-general under Canning in 1827. When Sir Charles Wetherall was dismissed in 1829, for opposition to Catholic emancipation, Scarlett took a farther step by becoming again attorney-general under the Wellington administration, and he followed up his accession by severe prosecutions of the opposition papers. In 1834 he was made chief baron of the Exchequer, and raised to the peerage by the title of Baron Abinger. He died on 7th April, 1844, of paralysis, which attacked him when on circuit at Bury St. Edmonds. His first wife, married in 1792, died in 1829, and he was married a second time, a few months before his death. [J.H.B.]

ABINGTON, THOS., an English hist., 1560-1647.

ABINGTON, FR., a comic actress, 1731-1815.

ABIOSI, an Italian phys. and astrol., 15th cent.

ABIRAM, one of the seditious Jews, Numb. xvi.

ABISBAL, ENRIQUE O'DONNELL, Count of, a Spanish general who achieved many successes against the French, 1770-1834.

ABISHAI, a nephew of David, king of Israel, and one of the commanders of his army.

ABLAVIUS, a præfect, murdered by Constans.

ABLESON, JOHN, a naval commander, 17th ct.

ABNER, first cousin and captain of the host to Saul, murdered by Joab, B.C. 1068.

ABNEY, SIR TH., distinguished for his friendship to Dr. Watts, and his public spirit while lord mayor of London in 1700; died 1722.

ABOS, the name of two brothers who distinguished themselves by the defence of Malta against the Turks, end of the 17th century.

ABOS, author of the opera of 'Tito Manlio.'

ABOU, a judge cel. under Haroun al Raschid.

ABOU AMROU. See AHMED-BEN MOHAMMED.

ABOVILLE, F. M., Count D', a French general, 1730-1817.

ABRABANEL, ISAAC, a Portuguese Jew, author of numerous commentaries, 1437-1508.

ABRADATAS, a king of Susa, of whom a beautiful fiction is related by Xenophon.

ABRAHAM, the patriarch of the Jews, was probably the youngest son of Terah, a descendant of Shem. The chronology of his life is uncertain, but it dates beyond 2000 years B.C.

ABRAHAM, NICH., a learned Jesuit, 1589-1656.

ABRAHAM, A SANCTA CLARA, a Roman Cath. preacher, highly popular in Vienna, and remarkable for his eccentric writings, 1642-1709.

ABRAHAM, ST., an anchorite of the 4th cent.

ABRESCH, FR. LOUIS, a celebrated critic and hellenist, 1699-1782.

ABREU, ALEXIS, a med. wr. of Portugal, 1622.

ABREU, DON J. ANT., a Sp. annalist, d. 1775.

ABREU, J. M. DE, a geometrician, 1754-1805.

ABRIAL, A. J., a Fr. statesman, highly distinguished by Napoleon, 1750-1828.

ABRIL, a teacher of the classics, 1530-1590.

ABRILOLA, an Arabian poet, 973-1057.

ABROSI, an astrol. and phys. of Italy, 16th cent.

ABRUZZI, a landscape painter, 18th century.

ABRUZZO, BALTH., a Sicilian phil., 1601-1665.

ABSALOM, the son of David, k. B.C. 1023.

ABSALOM, archbishop of Lund, distinguished for his public spirit and exploits in arms no less than for his learning, 1128-1191.

ABSCHATZ, ASSMAN VON, a German statesman and poet, 1646-1699.

ACHARDS, ELEAZAR, bp. of Avignon, d. 1741.
ACHARIUS, ERIC, a botanist, 1757-1819.
ACHARY, or ASHARI, founder of a Mahommedan sect, called after his name in the 9th cent.
ACHENWALL, GODFREY, a celebrated Prussian jurist, the founder of statistics, 1719-1772.
ACHER, N., a French judge, author of an abridgment of 'Plutarch's Lives,' died 1807.
ACHERLEY, ROGER, a polit.writer, 1727-1740.
ACHERY, J. L. D', a learned monk, 1609-1685.
ACHILLAS, minister and general of Ptolemy.
ACHILLES, one of the great chiefs of the Homeric poems, is represented as the grandson of Æacus, and son of Peleus, king of the Myrmidones. His share in the siege of Troy, and particularly the death of Hector, is described in the Iliad, and his death in the 24th book of the Odyssey.
ACHILLES, ALEX., a Prussian nobleman, au. of works on physical science, d. in poverty 1675.
ACHILLES, TATIUS, a Christian bishop, and author of a Greek romance in the 3d century.
ACHILLINI, the name of three Italians of the 16th century, disting. in professional literature.
ACHISH, a king of Gath, with whom David took refuge, B.C. 1060.
ACHMET I., sult. of the Ottomans, 1588-1617.
ACHMET II. succdd. as sultan 1691, d. 1695.
ACHMET III. succdd. 1703, depsd. 1730, d.1736.
ACHMET, dey of Algiers, from 1805-1808.
ACHMET, a gen. of Solyman, exec. for rebelln.
ACHMET, an Arabian wr. on dreams, 4th cent.
ACHMET-GIEDIC, grand vizier under Mahomet II., was one of the greatest warriors and statesmen that ever conducted the affairs of a nation. He was the idol of the people and the army. After repeated displays of magnanimity, he was secretly strangled by order of Bajazet, 1482.
ACHTER, ULR., a Bavar. musician, 1777-1803.
ACHTSCHELLING, LUCAS, a painter, 16th c.
ACIDALIUS, VALENS, a classical wr., 16th ct.
ACIEY, MICHEL V., a Fr. sculptor, 1736-1799.
ACILIUS, AVIOLA, a Roman officer, burnt alive, B.C. 19.
ACILIUS, AVIOLA, consul of Rome, 54.
ACILIUS, CAIUS, a Roman soldier of distinguished valour, in the time of Julius Cæsar.
ACILIUS, GLABRIO, consul of Rome, 2d ct. B.C.
ACILIUS, GLABRIO, consul of Rome, 91.
ACINDYMUS, SEPTIMUS, Roman governor of Antioch, 4th century
ACINDYMUS, GR., a controversial au., 14th ct.
ACINELLI, a Genoese historian, 18th century.
ACK, JOHANN, a painter on glass, 16th century.
ACKER, PETER, a painter on glass, 15th cent.
ACKERMANN, CONRAD, a comedian of Hamburgh, esteemed the Garrick of Germany, d. 1771.
ACKERMANN, J. F., a physiologist, 1765-1813.
ACKERMANN, J. CH. GOTTLIEB, an eminent phys. and medical writer of Germany, 1756-1801.
ACKERMANN, RUDOLPH, a German tradesman settled in London, noted for his improvements in lithography, &c., 1764-1834.
ACKERSDYCK, COR., a writer on Logic, 1666.
ACKMAN, WM., a Scotch artist, cotemporary with the poet Thomson, whose merits he was the first to appreciate.
ACKWORTH, G. DR., one of the reformation authors, a favourite of Archbishop Parker.
ACOLUTH, ANDR., an orientalist, 1654-1704.
ACONTIUS, JAS., an eminent philosopher and divine, converted to the protestant faith, 16th cent.
ACORIS, king of Egypt, 4th century, B.C.
ACOSTA, CHR., a surg. and naturalist, 16th ct.
ACOSTA, GABRIEL, a divine of the 17th cent.
ACOSTA, J., edt. of the Calcutta Times, d. 1820.
ACOSTA, JOSH., a Peruvian Jesuit, author of a history of the West Indies, died 1600.
ACOSTA, MANUEL, author of a history of the Jesuit missionaries to the East, 1541-1604.
ACOSTA, URIEL, a Portuguese, distinguished for his inquiring spirit, who after many times changing his creed and enduring much persecution, committed suicide, 1640 or 1647.
ACQUAVIVA, A. M., Duke of Atri, distinguished as a patron of literature, and the first publisher of an encyclopædia, d. 1529. Many others of this family are remarkable as commanders, statesmen, and men of letters.
ACREL, OLAF, a Swedish surgeon, 1717-1807.
ACRON, HELENIUS, a Roman grammarian.
ACRON a Sicilian physician, 5th century, B.C.
ACRON, or ACRONIUS, JOHN, a physician and mathematician of Friesland, 16th century.
ACRONIUS, JOHN, a Dutch writer in opposition to the church of Rome, 17th century.
ACROPOLITA, G., a Byzantine histor., d. 1283.
ACROPOLITA, CONST., son of the preceding, a theologian and minister of state.
ACROTATUS, son of Cleomenes, k. of Sparta, rendered himself odious by the murder of Sosistratus; he died without having reigned.
ACROTATUS, grandson of the foregoing, became king of Sparta, B.C. 268, killed in battle.
ACTON, JOHN or JOSEPH, the son of an Irish physician, settled at Besançon, became prime minister at the court of Naples towards the close of the last century, and is noted as a bitter opponent of the French, 1737-1808.
ACTORIUS, NASON, hist., age of Augustus.
ACTUARIUS, JO., a Greek physician, 13th ct.
ACUNA, ANT., bishop of Zamora, notorious for his part in the civil wars of the period, behd. 1521.
ACUNA, CHR., a Jesuit missionary, author of a work descriptive of the river Amazon.
ACUNA, FERNANDO DE, a native of Madrid, a great favourite with the emperor Charles V., and a writer of pastoral poetry, died 1680.
ADA, queen of Caria, B.C. 344.
ADEUS, or ADDEUS, a Greek poet, 4th ct. B.C.
ADAIR, JAMES, an Indian trader, author of a work in which he deduces the descent of the North American Indians from the Hebrews, pub. 1775.
ADAIR, JAMES, serjeant at law, distinguished as a counsellor and recorder of London, died 1798.
ADAIR, JAMES MAKITTRICK, a Scotch physician, auth. of several professional works, d. 1802.
ADAIR, JOHN, F.R.S., a Scotchman, distinguished as an hydrographer, end of 17th century.
ADALARD, abbot and founder of New Corbie, which was designed by him as a nursery of missionaries to convert the northern nations. This distinguished monk was cousin-german of Charlemagne, and was born about the year 753.
ADALBERON, archbishop of Rheims, distinguished for his learning and statesmanship, consecrated Hugh Capet, 987, and died 988.
ADALBERON, ASCELIN, bishop of Laon, also a politician, noted for his treachery, died 1030.

for one period of four years. He was all his life, more or less, concerned in public business, and lived to a good old age. The juncture of his death was remarkable: it occurred in 1826, on the 4th of July, the anniversary of the declaration of independence. Before breathing his last, he made the remark, 'Jefferson survives;' but it was not so—Jefferson had died at an earlier hour on the same day. [J.H.B.]

ADAMS, JOHN QUINCEY, an American statesman, the son of John Adams, was born at Braintree, Massachusets, on the 11th July, 1767. He received his name of Quincey from his maternal grandfather, an influential citizen of the colony, who died just as his celebrated grandchild was born. Adams was cradled in the revolution, and when but nine years old heard the first reading of the declaration of independence from the old state house in Boston. He accompanied his father in his missions to France and Holland, and there acquired the knowledge of foreign languages and countries, and the wide systematic views which made him invaluable to a country in which such qualifications were necessarily rare. He took a degree at Harvard with high distinction in 1787. In 1791, under the signature of 'Publicola,' he suggested some grave doubts about the soundness of the principles actuating the French revolutionists, very remarkable as the production of a republican pen. In 1803, he was sent from the state of Massachusets as representative to the senate in congress, and sat until 1808. He had been for a short time professor of rhetoric in Harvard, when, in 1809, he was appointed representative of the States at the court of Russia, and began his brilliant and multifarious diplomatic career. In London he completed the negotiations for the conclusion of the second British American war. He was called home in 1817, to serve in the cabinet of President Monroe. On the election of a president in 1825, the name of Adams was returned with those of Jackson, Crawford, and Clay; but as there was not for any one candidate the majority of electoral votes required by the constitution, the selection fell into the hands of the representatives who chose Adams. He retired in 1829, declining the party advocacy, which it was said might ensure his re-election, and he has been looked back on with regret as the last of those who occupied the chair without being borne into it by a victorious faction. In 1831 he began a career of valuable services as a member of the House of Representatives. He made many enemies by his sympathy with the cause of negro emancipation. He was an active pamphleteer, and contributed to periodical literature. He died, full of years and honours, on the 23d of February, 1848, and it has been customary to speak of him as the last of the old and higher class of American statesmen. [J.H.B.]

ADAMS, JOS., an em. medical au., 1758-1818.

ADAMS, SAM., one of the most ardent defenders of American independence, member for Massachusets in the first general congress, noted for his inflexible integrity, 1722-1803.

ADAMS, SIR TH., lord mayor of London, 1645, distinguished as a royalist, 1586-1667.

ADAMS, WM., an English divine, a friend of Dr. Johnson, and author of an answer to Hume on Miracles, 1707-1789.

ADAMSON, PAT., abp. of St. Andrews, equally noted for his talents and misfortunes, 1586-1599.

ADAMSON, HY., nephew of the preceding, and author of a curious poem, died 1639.

ADAMUS SCOTUS, a cel. author of the 12th century, best known for his curious 'Dialogue between the Reason and the Soul.'

ADAMUS DORENSUS, a wr. on music, 13th c.

ADANSON, MICHEL, a celebrated botanist, was born at Aix, in Provence, in 1727, died in 1806. He was educated at Plessis, studied in Paris under Reaumur and Bernard de Jussieu at the Garden of Plants, and afterwards made a voyage to Senegal. He remained in Africa five years, and during his sojourn there collected an immense number of plants and animals. Upon his return to France, he found that Linnæus had already promulgated his artificial System of Nature to the scientific world. To Adanson this arrangement, and the arbitrary nomenclature of Linnæus, were particularly distasteful. His grand aim was to produce a classification of the objects of nature, based upon the natural relations which these have one with another. The first work in which he proposed this method was his 'Voyage to Senegal,' in which he made an attempt to classify the mollusca according to the structure of the animal, and not the shell which they inhabit. The next was his 'Families of Plants,' in which he strove to carry out the same principles in botany as he had commenced in conchology. He has not been very successful in this attempt, as a comparison between his system and that of Linnæus will show; but still, along with his teacher, Bernard de Jussieu, he has the merit of indicating a method of arrangement of plants by their natural affinities, in opposition to the artificial system then in vogue. He possessed a great knowledge of botany, and was an accurate observer. He is the author of a very interesting account of the immense tree called by the natives of Africa the Baobab; since named after him Adansonia. He wrote also an account of the trees which produce the gums of commerce. At the revolution, Adanson was reduced to great poverty, but afterwards received a small pension from government. His will directed that a garland of flowers, selected from the 58 families of plants which he had established, should be the only decoration of his coffin. [W.B.]

ADAOUST, a Provençal poet, died 1819.

ADASHEV, ALEXIS, cel. in Russian history as the minister of Ivan the terrible, and disting. by his virtues and talents, died in prison, 1561.

ADASHEV, DAN., younger brother of the preceding, disting. himself against the Tartars, and was executed, together with his little son, and all the near relations of Alexis, soon after the death of that minister.

ADDA, one of the kings of Northumbria.

ADDA, a disting. artist and soldier of Italy.

ADDINGTON, ANTH., a physician and politician, father of Lord Sidmouth, 1713-1790.

ADDINGTON, S., DR., a dis. minis. 1729-1796.

ADDISON, G. HY., author of 'Indian Reminiscences,' born 1793.

ADDISON, LANCELOT, father of the celebrated writer, and dean of Lichfield, was early distinguished by his attachment to the Stuarts. He is the author of several works; 1632-1703.

sure, to extrinsic circumstances: and it could not have been successful at all had not dramatic art been then in a state of decay. It is a series of dialogues rather than a drama: its speeches, often eloquent, and almost always morally noble, are seldom truly poetical, and never passionate or pathetic: and there is an equal feebleness in the incidents and in the characters. It must be allowed, likewise, that no very great value belongs to any of his prose writings, except his contributions to the Spectator and other periodical papers. These, however, make up a large mass of literary compositions, and possess distinguished merit and importance. In the history of English style, a marked epoch is constituted by the appearance of the writers who are oftenest described as the Wits of Queen Anne's time: and among these there were none who exerted, on the manner of later authors, so strong an influence as Addison. His grace and refinement, accompanied by an admirable command of familiar idioms, gave him a charm that was wanting in the bare and stern writings of Swift: and he was superior to Steele, not only in these points, but also in his comparative freedom from looseness and inaccuracy, and in his power of rising to dignity without losing ease or freedom. In respect to matters higher than style, the merit of the Periodical Essays is chiefly shared between Steele the projector, and Addison, the only other steady and active contributor. In those sketches of character and manners, and those fragments of invented stories, which were the most popular things in the Tatler and its successors, Steele showed more decisive originality, and greater breadth and force of humour: but his coadjutor excelled him by far both in delicacy of sentiment, and in the skill, ingenuity, and consistency with which he worked up his materials into finished pictures. To Addison the Spectator owed, with hardly any exception, its papers of a more elevated and solid cast, those which made it an instrument of enlightenment to its contemporaries, and entitle it to the grateful attention of posterity. Such were its critical dissertations, always abounding in good taste and eloquent expression, the best of these being the criticisms which did so much for recalling notice to Milton: such were the papers on the 'Pleasures of the Imagination,' efforts (highly meritorious in the circumstances,) towards ascertaining the principles on which philosophical criticism must be founded: and such, also, were many meditative and religious papers, some of them purely didactic in form, and others allegorical, and all of them excellent alike for their high ethical tone, and for their natural and fine reflectiveness. If Addison's prose writings were once overvalued, the neglect and depreciation with which it has lately been fashionable to treat them, involve an error which goes at least as far the opposite way. [W.S.]

ADDISON, Thos., an Engl. Jesuit, 1634-1685.

ADDY, Wm., a writer on stenography, 17th cent.

ADEL, or ADIL, k. of Sweden, 5th or 6th cent.

ADELAIDE, the amiable queen of William IV., whom she married 1818; she was daughter of the Duke Saxe-Meiningen; born 1792, died 1849.

ADELAIDE, the good and beautiful empress of Germany, was the daughter of Rodolph II., king of Burgundy; she was taken from a prison to marry the emperor Otho I. 951; died 999

ADELAIDE, mistress of Albert, duke of Bavaria; assassinated by his son, 1392.

ADELAIDE of Savoy, the widow of Louis the Fat, and wife of Montmorency, assumed the veil in the abbey of Montmartre, and died 1153.

ADELAIDE, marchioness of Susa, and founder of the dominion enjoyed by the house of Savoy in Piedmont, was the contemporary and rival of the celebrated Matilda, duchess of Tuscany, 11th cent.

ADELAIDE, Madame Marie, eldest daught. of Louis XV. and aunt of Louis XVI. k. of France, born 1730, fled before the revolutionary storm, 1791, died at Trieste, 1800.

ADELAIDE, Eugenie Louisa, sister of Louis Philippe, and his best counsellor, was born 1777; she was privately married to Gen. Athelin; died 31st December, 1847.

ADELAIS, second queen of Henry I. of Engl. cel. by the troubadours as 'the fair maid of Brabant,' and ancestress of the Howards, died 1151.

ADELARD, a learned monk of the 12th cent.

ADELASIA, queen of Sardinia, 13th century.

ADELBOLD, bishop of Utrecht, died 1027.

ADELBURNER, M., an astronomer, died 1779.

ADELER, Curtius, a naval com. in the service of the Venetians and Danes, 1622-1675.

ADELFRID, a Saxon king, whose succession united the prov. of Bernicia and Deira, 559.

ADELGISUS, king of the Lombards, 8th cent.

ADELGISUS, prince of Beneventum, 9th cent.

ADELGREIF, J. A., a German scholar of high attainments, who believed that he was the representative of God upon earth, that he was accompanied by seven angels, and that he had a mission to banish all evil from the world; executed on a charge of sorcery, 1636.

ADELHER, a schoolman and divine, 12th cent.

ADELUNG, Jac., a musician, 1699-1762.

ADELUNG, John Ch., known throughout Europe as a philologist. His great works are a grammatical and critical Dictionary of the German tongue, and a work of vast research called 'Mithridates,' in which the remarkable affinities between the words of all languages are discovered. His general knowledge of literature and the arts is also displayed in various historical treatises, more especially in a cyclopædia of what he terms 'Human Folly.' He resided at Leipzig and Dresden, usually devoting fourteen hours a-day to hard study, and yet noted for his good cheer. His works in all make about seventy volumes. He was never married; 1734-1806. [E.R.]

ADELUNG, Fr., nephew of the preceding, also distinguished as an historian and linguist, b. 1768.

ADELWALCH, a king of Sussex, slain 686.

ADEMAR, or AYMAR, an historian, 11th cent.

ADEODATO, an Italian artist, 12th century.

ADEODATUS, pope after Boniface IV., 614-617. Another of the same name elected 673.

ADER, Wm., a phys. of Toulouse, an. of a work on the diseases cured by our Saviour, pub. 1621.

ADET, P. A., a writer on chemistry, envoy from France to the United States, 1796.

ADGILLUS, first Chr. king of Frisia, 8th cent.

ADHAD-EDDAULAH, sultan of Persia, died 983, after a glorious reign of 34 years.

ADHED, last caliph of the Fatimite dynasty, dethroned by Saladin, and died 1171.

ADHELM, bp. of Sherborne, the first ecclesi-

ADRIANI, M. V., a Greek scholar, chancellor of Florence, died 1521.

ADRIANI, J. B., his son, an hist., died 1574.

ADRIANI, M., son of the last named, d. 1604.

ADRIANO, a Spanish painter, d. 1650.

ADRICHONIUS, CH., a Dutch hist. 1533-1585.

ADRY, J. F., rhetorician and hist., 1749-1818.

ADSO, HERMERICUS, a monastic wr., 10th cent.

ADUARTE, DIEGO, a Spanish hist., d. 1637.

ÆCIDES, or ÆCIDAS, a king of Epirus, said to be a descendant of Achilles, killed B.C. 313.

ÆCIDES, k. of the Molossi, after Alex. the Gt.

ÆDESIA, a female Platonist, the mother of Ammonius.

ÆGIDIUS, k. of the Franks from the deposition to the recall of Childeric; assassinated 464.

ÆGIDIUS, DE COLUMNA, a monastic philosopher and theologian, disting. in the 13th century.

ÆGIDIUS, PETER, a Flemish lawyer, d. 1533.

ÆGIMUS, an ancient Greek physician.

ÆGINHARD, the secretary of Charlemagne, author of annals of his reign, and equally celebrated for his love adventure with the emperor's daughter.

ÆLF, a Swedish theologian, 18th century.

ÆLFRIC, ST., surnamed the Grammarian, was archbishop of Canterbury in the middle of the 10th century. He is distinguished as one of the brightest luminaries of the age in which he lived, d. 1005.

ÆLIAN, the celebrated author of a 'History of Animals,' a 'Treatise on Providence,' &c., distinguished for the purity with which he wrote the Greek tongue, supposed to have lived in the 2d cent.

ÆLIAN, CLAUDIUS, a Roman military writer.

ÆLIAN, a general in the time of Valens.

ÆLIANUS, MECCIUS, a Greek physician.

ÆLIUS MELISSUS, a Roman jurist, 2d cent.

ÆLIUS SEXTUS, one of the most cel. Roman jurists, successively edile, consul, and censor; au. of the earliest known work on jurisprudence.

ÆLST. See AALSH.

ÆMILIANI, ST. JER., a noble Venetian, the founder of an hospital and religious order, 16th cent.

ÆMILII, The, one of the most ancient and noble of the patrician families of Rome.

ÆMILIUS, ANTH., a Dutch hist., 1589-1660.

ÆMILIUS, G., a Latin poet, related to Luther.

ÆMILIUS, PAULUS, consul of Rome, B.C. 216 and 219, slain at the battle of Cannæ.

ÆMILIUS, PAULUS, son of the preceding, distinguished in the Macedonian war, 3d cent. B.C.

ÆMILIUS, PAU., an em. hist. of Verona, d. 1529.

ÆNEAS, one of the heroes of Troy.

ÆNEAS, a Greek military author, 360 B.C.

ÆNEAS, or ÆNGAS, a monastic writer, 9th c.

ÆNEAS GAZÆIUS, a Platonist, 5th cent.

ÆNESIDEMUS, a sceptical phil., 1st century.

ÆPINUS, the assumed name of Hoeck, one of the most zealous of Luther's followers, 1499-1533.

ÆPINUS, FRANZ, a German philosopher, 1724.

ÆRIUS, founder of a sect of the 4th century.

ÆRSEUS. See ÆRTSEN.

ÆRTGEN. See AARTGENS.

ÆRTSEN, or ÆRSENS, PETER, an em. hist. painter, called Pietro Longo, on account of his tallness. There are several Flemish painters of the same name, three known to be sons of the preceding.

ÆSCHINES, an orator of Athens, 4th ct. B.C.

ÆSCHINES, a poor Athenian philosopher, the personal friend and pupil of Socrates.

ÆSCHRION, an ancient physic. of Pergamos.

ÆSCHYLUS, a celebrated Greek dramatic writer, was born of a noble family at Eleusis in Attica, B.C. 525, and died at Gela in Sicily, B.C. 456. From an anecdote which is related of him by Pausanias, it appears that his youthful fancy was early captivated by the exhibitions of the drama; and he accordingly devoted his life to the service of the tragic muse. At the age of twenty-five, B.C. 499, he first presented himself at the festival of Bacchus as a competitor for the public prize; and fifteen years afterwards, B.C. 484, gained his first victory. The pre-eminence which he thus acquired was successfully maintained till B.C. 468, when he was defeated in a similar contest by his younger rival, Sophocles; an event which exercised a strong influence over the rest of his life. Mortified at the indignity which, as he thought, had thus been put upon him, he quitted Athens and went to the court of Hiero, king of Syracuse. Of the remaining portion of his life but little is known, except that he continued to prosecute his favourite pursuit; and that his residence in Sicily was of some duration, may be inferred from the fact that it was sufficient to affect the purity of his language. His thirteenth and last victory was gained B.C. 458. On the manner of his death, which was singular, the ancient writers are unanimous. While sitting motionless in the fields, his bald head was mistaken for a stone by an eagle which happened to be flying over him with a tortoise in her bill. The bird dropped the tortoise to break the shell, and the poet was killed by the blow. Æschylus is said to have been the author of 70 tragedies, of which only seven are now extant. The improvements which he introduced in the economy of the drama, were so important as to gain for him the distinction of the Father of Greek Tragedy. To the single actor of Thespis he added a second, and thus presented the regular dialogue. He abridged the length of the choral odes and made them subservient to the main interest of the plot; substituted a regular stage for the moveable wain of his predecessor; provided appropriate scenic decorations, and dresses for the actors; and removed all deeds of murder and bloodshed from public view. His style is bold, lofty, and sublime, full of gorgeous imagery and magnificent expressions, suitable to the elevated characters of his dramas. His plays have little or no plot; and have therefore been blamed as deficient in dramatic interest. But Æschylus was illustrious not merely as a poet. Along with his brother Cynaegirus he distinguished himself so highly in the battle of Marathon, B.C. 490, that his exploits were commemorated by a descriptive painting in the theatre of Athens; and it is probable that he took part in the subsequent battles of Artemisium, Salamis, and Platææ. His warlike spirit is vividly pourtrayed in his tragedies, the 'Persians' and the 'Seven against Thebes.' [G.F.]

ÆSOP, generally known for the Fables attributed to him, lived in the 6th century B.C. His history is not well authenticated, but it is understood that he was born in Phrygia, and acquired his Greek education as a slave in Athens. He is regarded as the inventor of the apologue, of which his own compositions are also the purest models. They have been trans. into all modern languages.

ÆSOP, JOSEPH, a Hebrew poet, 16th century.

guished himself by the subjugation of a great part of Britain, of which he was made governor by the emperor Vespasian. His successes and his high character excited the jealous fears of Domitian, by whom he was covertly withdrawn from public employment, and soon after died, 93.

AGRICOLA, Fr., an eccles. au., 1575-1616.

AGRICOLA, Geo., a metallurgist, 1494-1555.

AGRICOLA, G. A., a horticulturist, 1672-1738.

AGRICOLA, John, a controversial divine, the opponent of Luther and Melancthon, and leader of the Antinomians, 1492-1566.

AGRICOLA, Nich., a Swedish reformer, d. 1557.

AGRICOLA, Rodolphus, one of the restorers of science and letters in Europe, 1442-1485.

AGRICOLA, St., bishop of Chalons, 6th cent.

AGRIPPA, an ancient sceptical philosopher.

AGRIPPA, an astronomer of the 1st century.

AGRIPPA, Camillus, an Italian arch., 16th c.

AGRIPPA DE NETTESHEIM, Henry Cornelius, a talented mystic philosopher, secretary to the emperor Maximilian, 1486-1535.

AGRIPPA I., Herod, grandson of Herod the Great, and under Claudius, king of all Palestine, died 44. See Acts xii. 23.

AGRIPPA II., Herod, son and successor of the preceding, died about the close of the 1st century.

AGRIPPA, Marcus Vipsanius, general of the Roman armies, and friend of Augustus Cæsar, born 64 or 63 B.C. His virtues and military talents contributed greatly to the felicitous course and the glory of the reign of Augustus, whose daughter he married, and whom he would have succeeded in the empire, but d. before him, B.C. 12.

AGRIPPA, Menenius, consul of Rome, B.C. 503.

AGRIPPINA, the daughter of Vipsanius Agrippa, and wife of Cæsar Germanicus, was born some time before B.C. 12; d. in banishment, A.D. 35.

AGRIPPINA, daughter of the preceding, and mother of the infamous Nero, was born some time before A.D. 17; assassinated A.D. 60.

AGUADO, Fr., a Spanish Jesuit, 1572-1654.

AGUESSEAU, Henry D', a French statesman, 1634-1715.

AGUESSEAU, Henry Francis D', son of the preceding, a cel. magistrate and advocate, finally chancellor of France, 1668-1751.

AGUILA, C. J. E. D', a French hist., d. 1815.

AGUILLON, Francis, a mathema., died 1617.

AGUIRRA, J. S. D', a cel. Sp. prelate, d. 1699.

AGUJARI LUCREZIA, an It. singer, d. 1783.

AGYLÆUS, H., a jurist, disting. in the war of the United Provinces against Spain, 1533-1595.

AHAB, king of Israel, 915 to 893 B.C.

AHAZ, king of Judah, died B.C. 722.

AHAZIAH, king of Judah, B.C. 885.

AHAZIAH, king of Israel, died B.C. 897.

AHLE, J. R., a Ger. musician, 1625-1673.

AHLE, J. G., son of the preceding, died 1707.

AHLWARDT, C. G., a Ger. philolog., 1760-1830.

AHLWART, Peter, a learned German, celebrated as the founder of the Ahelites, 1710-1791.

AHMED, an Arabian poet, 10th century.

AHMED-BEN-FARES, surnamed El Razi, author of an Arabic Dictionary, 10th century.

AHMED-BEN-MOHAMMED, or ABOU AMROU, a Moor of Spain, celebrated as an oriental poet and annalist, died 970.

AHMED-BEN-THOULOUN, an Egyptian chief, founder of the dynasty of the Thoulounides, 9th century.

AHMED Ghiedik. See Achmet Giedic.

AHMED-KHAN, emp. of the Moguls after his brother, Abaker-Khan, 1282, killed 1284.

AHMED RESMY HADJY, chancellor of the Turkish empire, author of an account of his own embassies.

AHMED-SHAH EL ABDALY, an Affghan chief, founder of the kingdom of Candahar and Cabul, cel. for his victories over the Sikhs, d. 1773.

AHRENDT, or ARENTS, M. F., a great traveller and investigat. of Scandinavian antiquities, d. 1824.

AHRUN. See Aaron of Alexandria.

AHUITZOL, king of the Aztecs before Montezuma II., when they were conq. by the Spaniards.

AIBEK, First Mameluke sultan of Egypt, 1254, assassinated 1257.

AIDAN, one of the earliest preachers of Christianity in Britain, afterwards bp. of Lindisfarne, died 651.

AIGNAN, Stephen, a political writer and tragic poet of France, 1773-1824.

AIGNEAUX, R. and A., le Chevalier, Sieurs D', two brothers, noted as classical scholars, 16th century.

AIKIN, E., a writer on architecture, died 1820.

AIKIN, John, M.D., celebrated as a miscellaneous writer, chiefly on moral and biographical subjects, was born at Kibworth-Harcourt, in Leicestershire 1747, and in 1764 became a student at the university of Edinburgh, but pursued his professional and literary career in London. His medical memoir appeared in 1780; and his principal work, the General Biographical Dictionary, the labour of which he shared with Dr. Enfield, at various intervals from 1799 to 1815. From 1796 to 1806 he was also editor of the 'Monthly Magazine,' and for nearly half a century continued to enrich our literature with numerous elegantly written and useful dissertations. Died at the age of 75, 1822. [E.R.]

AIKMAN, Wm., a Scotch painter, 1682-1731.

AILLAND, P. T., a Fr. ecclesiastic, 1759-1826.

AILLY, P. D', a cardinal and theological disputant, president of the council of Constance by which John Huss was condemned, 1350-1419.

AILMER. See Aylmer.

AILRED, ETHELRED, or EALRED, a well-known ancient historian, 1109-1166.

AIMAR, Rivault, jurist and adv., 16th cent.

AIMAR VERNAI, Jacques, a French peasant celebrated as a diviner, 17th century.

AIMOIN De Varennes, a French poet, 13th c.

AIMON, or AIMOIN of Fleury, a French historian, died 1008.

AIMON, or HAYMOND, an historian, and disciple of Alcuyn, died 853.

AIMON, bishop of Valence, 943-977.

AIMON, an ascetic writer, died 1174.

AINSWORTH, Henry, a nonconformist divine, celebrated as a Hebrew scholar and Biblical commentator, died 1622.

AINSWORTH, Robert, author of the well-known Latin Dictionary, 1660-1743.

AIRAULT. See Ayrault.

AITKEN, Robert, a printer, noted as a journalist, &c., during the American revolution, d. 1802.

AITON, William, an Engl. botanist, d. 1793.

dosius, and the division of the empire between his sons Honorius and Arcadius, renewed the disgraceful intrigues which had been kept in suspense by his able administration. The public immorality and political baseness of the period were only equalled by the private vices of the degenerate Romans; and the conviction became general that nothing could avert the disorganization by which society was threatened. At this juncture the Gothic hordes were set in motion by a party inimical to the government of Arcadius in the east, and Alaric, whose wild ambition had been flattered by these overtures, commenced his famous march from the Danube. It is possible that his fortunes had been rising since the death of the Gothic king Athanaric, A.D. 381, but nothing certain is known of his early history save that he belonged to the princely family of the Balti, descended from the Asæ or demigods of Scandinavia. The course of Alaric at the head of his victorious troops was through Thrace, Dacia, Macedonia, and Thessaly, into Achaia, and everywhere the officers of Arcadius betrayed their trust, or refused to fight; while the most glorious monuments of Grecian art fell a sacrifice to these martial iconoclasts, whose name is still synonymous with that of destroyer. The emperor of the west, taking alarm at his unexampled successes, sent an army to the aid of his brother, under the command of Stilicho, by whom Alaric was kept in check, and prepared for terms of accommodation with a foe for whom he had no other feeling than that of contempt, 398. By the terms of the armistice—for it was really only an armed truce which ensued—the Gothic chief was acknowledged master of the Eastern Illyricum by the emperor of the east, who also declined the further assistance of Stilicho; and by his own followers proclaimed king of the West Goths, and of all the tribes who acknowledged their kindred or allegiance. Situated between the two empires, and subject to the continued hostility of the Romans, Alaric employed himself in perfecting the equipment and discipline of his troops, and after two years of preparation suddenly forced the passage of the Alps. His usual success attending him in a succession of battles and sieges, he was on the point of capturing Honorius, when, at the critical moment, Stilicho arrived with a levy of troops collected from Germany and the other barbarian provinces of the empire. The result was the final retreat of Alaric to his own government; but he had now measured his strength against the legions of Rome in the sunny plains of Italy, and had also come to a good understanding with Stilicho, a man of splendid abilities, and of a kindred origin with himself, though he was now the sword and buckler of the western empire. After the retirement of Alaric, Italy was invaded by a host of the Gothic tribes, commanded by Radagaisus, who were defeated by Stilicho, and distributed over the face of the country. Alaric was rewarded for the strict neutrality which he observed on this occasion by a rich present from the Roman senate; but he demanded a more fertile province for the settlement of his own people. While this demand was in agitation, Stilicho was basely murdered at the instigation of Honorius, whose tottering throne his arms and diplomacy had so long upheld, and who had grown jealous of his popularity—perhaps, also, of his affinity with the powerful king of the Goths, and of the friendly understanding between the two leaders. The threatening attitude now assumed by Alaric, as the avenger of his friend, attracted the discontented of all Italy to his standard, and invitations from the court of Honorius were not wanting to excite him to the enterprise. He commenced his second march towards Rome in the year 405, and after a victorious progress entered the eternal city, its first conqueror in six centuries. On this occasion his extreme moderation, and perfect command of his troops, have won for him the applause of the most cautious historians—his exactions only amounting to a few thousand pounds' weight of gold and silver, and certain costly robes of silk and pieces of scarlet cloth. Retiring from the city to negotiate, he pitched his camp in the plains of Tuscany, but was drawn into Rome a second time by the perfidy of Honorius. He now deposed a sovereign with whom it was manifest no faith could be kept, and made Attalus, a much esteemed Roman præfect, emperor. The friends of Honorius, however, on the departure of Alaric, endeavoured to rally again; the new emperor was deposed; and the negotiations which Alaric set on foot at a distance from the seat of empire, proved fruitless. These events, in fine, brought the now angry conqueror of Rome for the third time into the midst of its doomed palaces and temples, and the city was given up to pillage. In all probability the nameless horrors of such a scene, infamous as the sack of Rome is represented, were not greater in degree than similar disasters which have occurred within the memory of man, and under the eye of more enlightened commanders. —The fall of Rome was followed by the desolating march of Alaric and his troops towards the coast, where he was preparing to embark for Sicily; but was surprised by a short illness, which terminated in his death, A.D. 410. His faithful followers prepared his grave in the bed of the river Busentinus, which they diverted from its channel for the purpose; and when the waters once more rolled in their accustomed course, the workmen were put to death, that no tongue might tell where the hero lay buried, with the choicest spoils of Rome to do him honour. [E. R.]

ALARIC II., was the ninth king in descent from Alaric the Great, and succeeded his father Euric, who had really added the Gothic monarchy of Spain to that of Gaul, A.D. 484. Alaric had the misfortune to ascend the throne at the critical period when the Franks, under the celebrated Clovis, were extending their dominions at the expense of the neighbouring potentates, and was weak enough to surrender Syagrius, the prince of Soissons, who had been defeated, and had taken refuge at his court, to the Frank king. The affronts to which he submitted seem to have chafed the proud spirits of his high-minded and chivalrous subjects, and the general discontent which it occasioned was aggravated by religious differences arising from the constantly increasing opposition of his bishops to the tenets of Arianism, always held by the Gothic kings. Under these circumstances his kingdom was invaded by Clovis, with the avowed design of extirpating the Arian heresy, and a battle being fought at Vouélle, in which the two princes met in personal conflict, Alaric fell worthily by the references, quotations, and digressions. Still, his ardent pursuit of knowledge, and his patient attempt to present it in a connected and systematic form, must ever cause him to be regarded with peculiar veneration. His works, collected and published at Cologne, in 1621, fill 41 folio volumes, three of which are taken up with an explication of the 'Sentences' of Peter Lombard. [J. E.]

ALBI, BERNARD D', friend of Petrarch, d. 1350.

ALBICANTE, J. A., an Ital. poet, 16th century.

ALBICUS, or ALBICIUS, a phys. and arbp. of Prague, noted for his lenient treatment of the Hussites, died 1427.

ALBINI, AL., an Italian painter, died 1630.

ALBINOVANUS, a Rom. poet, age of August.

ALBINUS, a Rom. gen. proclaimed emp. same time as Septimus Severus, deftd. by him A.D. 197.

ALBINUS, a Roman procurator under Nero.

ALBINUS, consul of Rome B.C. 157.

ALBINUS, BERNARD, a Germ. phys., d. 1711.

ALBINUS, BERNARD SIEGFRED, eldest son of the preceding, a great anatomist, 1696-1770.

ALBINUS, CHR. B., brother of the preceding, also distinguished as an anatomist, died 1778.

ALBO, JOS., a Spanish rabbi, 15th century.

ALBOIN, king of the Lombards, 6th century.

ALBON, a civilian and man of letters, d. 1789.

ALBON, JACQUES D', marquis de Fronsac, better known as the maréchal de St. Andre, an eminent French general, killed at the battle of Dreux, 1562.

ALBONI, PAOLO, a landscape painter, d. 1730.

ALBRECHT, J. SEB., a naturalist, 1695-1774.

ALBRECHT I., prince of Anhalt, died 1316.

ALBRECHT II., his son and successor, d. 1362.

ALBRECHT I., elector of Saxony, d. 1260.

ALBRECHT II., second son of Al. I., d. 1297.

ALBRECHT III., suc. as elector 1419, d. 1422.

ALBRECHT of Bavaria. See ALBERT.

ALBRECHT of Brunswick. See ALBERT.

ALBRECHT of Mecklenburgh. See ALBERT.

ALBRECHT, a German poet, 13th century.

ALBRECHTSBERGER, JOHANN GEO., the most learned contrapuntist of modern times, was born at Kloster Neuburg, a small town in Lower Austria, in the year 1736. He acquired his first knowledge of the organ and composition of M. G. Monn. In 1772 he was appointed court organist at Vienna, and subsequently chapel-master at the cathedral of St. Stephen's in the same city. He had for his pupils some of the most eminent musicians of the last age, and amongst these the name of Beethoven figures as the chief. Haydn had the greatest friendship and esteem for Albrechtsberger, and it is said that he frequently consulted him professionally. His principal work is his 'Elementary Treatise on Composition,' which was first published at Leipzig in 1790. Albrechtsberger died in 1803. [J.M.]

ALBRET, CHAS., lord of, constable of France, commander of the French army at the battle of Agincourt, where he was killed, 1415.

ALBRET, ALAIN, lord of, grandson of the preceding, a general under Louis XII., died 1522.

ALBRET, JEAN D', son of the preceding, married to Catherine, queen of Navarre, died 1516.

ALBRET, JEANNE D', daughter of Margaret, queen of Navarre, and mother of Henry IV. of France, died 1572.

ALBUMAZAR, an Arabian philos., 9th cent.

ALBUQUERQUE, min. of Alph. XI., d. 1354.

ALBUQUERQUE, ADOLPHUS, founder of the Portuguese dominion in the East Indies, d. 1515.

ALBUQUERQUE, C. E., an historian, d. 1688.

ALBUQUERQUE, M., a Portuguese general, died 1646.

ALBUTIUS, C., a Rom. orator, time of Augustus.

ALCAMENES, a Greek sculptor, 5th ct. B.C.

ALCAMENES, king of Sparta, 8th cent. B.C.

ALCÆUS, a Greek lyric poet, 6th cent. B.C.

ALCÆUS, a somewhat later poet of Messenia.

ALCÆUS, a Greek comedian, 4th cent. B.C.

ALCIATI, ANDR., an Italian jurist, one of the first to revive the study of literature, died 1550.

ALCIATI, FR., cardinal, nephew of the preceding, also a distinguished jurist, died 1580.

ALCIATI, TERENCE, a Jesuit, 17th century.

ALCIBIADES, a Christian martyr, 2d cent.

[Alcibiades—From an Ancient Bust.]

ALCIBIADES, the son of Cleinius, one of the most remarkable men of antiquity, was born at Athens about B.C. 449. He inherited from his parents the highest rank, with almost boundless wealth, and was endowed with a person unusually handsome, with manners the most fascinating, and with talents which would have raised him to the highest distinction independently of the advantages which fortune had bestowed upon him. Left an orphan at an early age, he was placed under the wardship of his relative Pericles; and became the favourite pupil and companion of Socrates. But his great qualities were marred by inordinate vanity and love of notoriety, which led him into wanton and offensive excesses; evil tendencies which the lessons of the philosopher failed to counteract. The stirring events of the Peloponnesian war, B.C. 431-404, could not fail to call into active operation the energies of a mind so ambitious and so unscrupulous; and accordingly, from his first appearance in public life, B.C. 421, when he prevented the truce between Sparta and Athens from being carried into effect, he made the interests of his country and his own reputation alike subservient to his schemes of ambition. In B.C. 419 he was chosen general, and during the next three ALENCON. A long line of counts and dukes of this name were celebrated in the middle ages, from the 11th to the 15th cent., the greater number of whom were of the blood royal of France.

ALENIO, JULIUS, a Jesuit missionary, d. 1649.

ALER, PAUL, a French Jesuit, author of the 'Gradus ad Parnassum,' 1727.

ALES, ALEX., a theologian, 13th century.

ALES, ALEX., a Lutheran divine, d. 1565.

ALESIO, M. P. D', an Italian painter and engraver, a pupil of Michael Angelo, d. 1600.

ALESSANDRI, ALESSANDRO, a lawyer and scholar of Naples, author of some curious essays on dreams and apparitions, &c., 15th century.

ALESSI, GALEAS, arch. of the Escurial, d. 1572.

ALEXANDER, a philosopher of the 1st cent., preceptor to the emperor Nero.

ALEXANDER, ST., a Christian martyr, 177.

ALEXANDER of Paris, a Norman poet, 12th c.

ALEXANDER, an English abbot, excommunicated and imprisoned by Pandulph, d. 1217.

ALEXANDER, APHRODISIENSIS, a famous Aristotelian philosopher, 3d century.

ALEXANDER, J., a Scotch engraver, celebrated for his copies of Raphael, 18th century.

ALEXANDER, NOEL, a Dominican, writer of a church history in 26 volumes, 1639-1724.

ALEXANDER, POLYHISTOR, so called from his vast erudition, 15th century B.C.

ALEXANDER, SOLOMON, right rev., a learned Talmudist, converted to Christianity, and made bishop of Jerusalem, 1799-1845.

ALEXANDER, THOS., earl of Selkirk, known as a political writer and colonist, died 1820.

ALEXANDER, WM., an artist, author of a work on the costume of China, 1786-1816.

ALEXANDER, SIR W., Earl of Stirling, a statesman and poet of Scotland, d. 1640.

ALEXANDER, WILLIAM, a major-general in the American army; usually called Lord Stirling, from his claim to the earldom, died 1783.

ALEXANDER, J., a writer on algebra, 1693.

ALEXANDER, TRALLIANUS, a Gr. phys., 6th c.

ALEXANDER AB ALEXANDRO. See ALESSANDRI.

ALEXANDER DE MEDICI. See MEDICI.

ALEXANDER I., succeeded his father as king of Macedon, B.C. 501, died B.C. 451.

ALEXANDER II., the elder brother of Philip, the father of Alexander the Great, succeeded as k. of Macedon, B.C. 369. Assassinated B.C. 367.

ALEXANDER III., surnamed the Great, son of Philip, king of Macedonia, was born at Pella in the autumn of B.C. 356. In the short space to which we are necessarily restricted, it is impossible to do more than enumerate a few of the leading events in the life of this extraordinary man. In his fourteenth year, B.C. 342, Alexander was placed under the immediate tuition of Aristotle, and continued to receive his instructions till he was unexpectedly called to the throne. Under the superintendence of such a master the powerful mind of Alexander was rapidly developed, and enriched with stores of practical and useful knowledge. His physical education also was carefully attended to; he was trained to expertness in all manly exercises; and in horsemanship is said to have excelled all his contemporaries. When sixteen years old, B.C. 340, Philip, setting out on an expedition against Byzantium, delegated to him the government during his absence. Alexander's first essay in arms was made two years later, B.C. 338, at the battle of Chæronea, by which his father established the Macedonian supremacy in Greece. The murder of Philip in B.C. 336, when about to march into Asia at the head of the combined forces of Greece, raised Alexander to the throne at the age of twenty; and involved him in difficulties from which the promptest energy could alone have saved him. Several of the Grecian states, still fretting under the effects of the battle of Chæronea, concerted measures for throwing off the galling yoke, but the vigorous promptitude of the youthful sovereign frustrated their plans, and awed them into submission. The assembled Greeks at the Isthmus of Corinth, with the single exception of the Lacedæmonians, elected him as successor to his father in the command against Persia, thus virtually acknowledging him as their sovereign. Having now quelled opposition in the south, he turned his attention to the barbarians in the north, B.C. 335, and west, who had renounced their allegiance, and established his dominion from the northern limits of Scythia to the shores of the Hadriatic. Alexander now devoted himself to preparations for his Persian expedition; and, crossing the Hellespont in the spring of B.C. 334, gained his first victory over the Persian army on the banks of the Granicus, a small stream which falls into the Sea of Marmora. After reducing the towns on the western coast of Asia Minor, he marched to Gordium in Galatia, where he untied with his sword the famous Gordian knot, and thereby established his claim as the conquerer of Asia. Having been joined here by reinforcements from Macedonia, he proceeded through the centre of Asia Minor to Cilicia, where he nearly lost his life by bathing when over-heated in the waters of the Cydnus. His second engagement with the Persians took place on the plain of Issus, on the shores of the Gulf of Scanderoon, B.C. 333, and ended in the total defeat of Darius, who fled to the eastern bank of the Euphrates, leaving his mother, wife, and children in the hands of the conqueror. The ALEXIS (Le Jeune) IV., reigned with his father after the deposition of the preceding, until he was himself deposed and put to death, 1204.

(Alexander—From an Antique Gem.)

ALEXIS (Ducas) V., reigned a few months after the murder of the preceding, when he was dethroned by the crusaders, and put to death by order of Baudoin.

ALEXIS the False, an impostor who endeavoured to pass for Alexis II. in 1191.

ALEXIS, Drago Comnenus, a descendant of the Commenes, served in the French army, became governor of Perche, and died 1619.

ALEXIS del Arco, a Sp. painter, 1625-1700.

ALEXIS, Michaelovitsch, czar of Russia; born, 1629; succeeded, 1645; died, 1677.

ALEXIS, Petrovitsch, son of Peter the Great, disinherited by his father, and died in 1719.

ALEXIS, William, a Norman monk and poet, supposed to have been martyred, 15th century.

ALEXIUS, Comnenus. See Alexis.

ALEYN, Charles, an English poet, d. 1640.

ALF, Abdal, a Persian poet, 15th century.

ALFARABIUS, an Arabian philos., 10th cent.

ALFARAZDAC, an Arabian poet, 8th century.

ALFARO, Juan De, a Spanish painter, 17th c.

ALFENUS, Varus, a Roman jurist, 1st c. B.C.

ALFIERI, a Roman architect, died 1767.

ALFIERI, Count Vittorio, descended of a family both noble and rich, was born in 1749, at Asti, in Piedmont. Left an orphan in childhood, he early displayed his self-willed obstinacy of character; and his education left him nearly as ignorant as it found him. At the age of sixteen he became the uncontrolled master of his fortune and his conduct; and for several years his career was one of restless wandering and dissipation. A love of horsemanship and horses was one of his two strongest passions: the other involved him in a series of profligate amours, of which the most scandalous had its scene in London. A love-affair, not at all more creditable, in which he engaged on returning to Turin in 1772, had the effect of awakening for the first time his poetical susceptibility and his ambition of literary fame. His qualifications for success were as unpromising as possible. He appears to have added, during his travels, little or nothing to the very small stock of knowledge with which he left school; and he never showed any aptitude for observation either of men or of other objects external to him. In point of language, he was even whimsically deficient. He had learned no Latin: the Italian dialect of his native province is hopelessly corrupt: and, while he was totally unpractised in writing, he spoke but indifferently even French, the language of the Piedmontese nobility and court. The young poet, inspired by the thirst for glory yet more than by his newly-awakened love of letters, set himself determinedly to vanquish all difficulties, by now educating himself. He learned Latin enough to put some of the classical writers at his command; and he studied assiduously both the Tuscan or literary dialect of Italy, and the principles of the drama, the kind of composition by which his fancy had been attracted. After bringing a play on the stage at Turin, in 1775, he took up his residence at Florence, for the study of the Italian tongue in a region where it is purely spoken.—In 1783, he published his first series of tragedies, the Filippo, Polinice, Antigone, and Virginia. A second series of six tragedies, appearing afterwards, contained, among others, the Timoleone and the Rosmunda. In the third and last series, which embraced nine, were the two Brutuses, the Maria Stuarda, the Conspiracy of the Pazzi, and the Saul, which contests with his Filippo the honour of being his best work. In the meantime, however, his studies suffered many interruptions; and he travelled much, chiefly that he might be near a lady to whom he had become attached in Florence. This was the Countess Stolberg, who derived the title of Countess of Albany from being the wife (ill-used and neglected) of the Chevalier Charles Edward Stuart. After the death of this unfortunate prince, in 1788, his widow and Alfieri lived together, and were understood to have been privately married. They were in Paris during the massacre of 1792, and, escaping with difficulty, resided thenceforth at Florence. Alfieri's literary employments were now prosecuted with increasing ardour; in his forty-eighth year he began to learn Greek, for the purpose of studying the Attic drama; and he wrote a large number of pieces, embracing satires in verse, a strange kind of political comedies, and his Memoirs of his own Life. He died in 1803, and was buried in the famous Florentine church of Santa Croce.—His character was exceedingly peculiar, and notwithstanding some fine and elevated points, cannot but be pronounced unamiable. Its most prominent features were an indomitable energy of will, which was shown by the whole of his literary career, a ceaseless craving for celebrity, and a boundless self-esteem, which exhibited itself in a reserved haughtiness of manner, and made him really a bigoted aristocrat at heart, while professing and supposing himself a violent democrat. Not less singular are his Tragedies, the works on which his literary fame depends. In their structure, they carry to the furthest possible extreme the unity and simplicity of the French drama of the seventeenth century. Their representation of character is monotonous and deficient in individuality, but sometimes very powerful, as in the portrait of Philip II.; and, in respect of sentiment, their strength lies in the gloomy and deeply tragic. The diction has, perhaps, more of vigour than any other works in the same language, though this excellence is gained at the cost of adopting a conciseness which is always rugged, and sometimes obscure; and the versification is as unmelodious as any combination of Italian words could be made. Altogether these are remarkable works, which cannot soon be forgotton, but whose literary merit will always be differently estimated by different critics. [W. S.]

ALFONSO I., surnamed the 'Catholic,' b. 693, elected king of Oviedo and Asturias, 739, d. 757.

ALFONSO II., called the 'Chaste,' succeeded as king of Asturias, 791, abdicated 835, died 842.

ALFONSO III., surnamed the 'Great,' b. 848, k. of Asturias 866, added the kingdom of Leon to his dominions, and was dethroned by his son, 910.

ALFONSO IV., surnamed the 'Monk,' king of Leon and Asturias 924, abdicated 930, died in a monastery, 933.

ALFONSO V., b. 994, king of Leon 999, prepared the way by his conquests and policy for the union of Castile; killed at the siege of Viseu, 1028.

his being set by the peasant's wife to watch the baking of some cakes, and when—his mind far away devising projects for relieving his country from the invaders—he allowed the cakes to burn, the honest woman scolding him sarcastically as one ready enough to attend to the function of eating them, though he could not be at pains enough to watch them.—After he had been a few months in this retreat, he found means to gather some of his most trusty followers, and to make at last a small army, which harassed the conquerors, and gradually increased. There is a well-known legend of his preparing at last for a pitched battle with the leader of the Northmen, Guthrun or Gorm, and ascertaining beforehand the state and number of the forces, by penetrating the camp in the disguise of a harper. The battle which followed crowned a series of successes, and in the year 897 restored him to his throne. It was his policy not to attempt the extirpation of the marauders, but to christianize and civilize them, mixing them up with the other inhabitants of the country. The Danish chiefs, from fellow-kings, sunk to tributaries, and, in the year 894, Alfred might be said to be king of England. He had not been long at rest, however, ere the Danes, reinforced from the continent, and headed by a powerful leader, Hastings, drove him into a new and arduous conflict, which terminated in his favour in the year 897. In the meantime he built vessels, and trained men so effectively in maritime warfare, that he has been deemed the founder of the British navy. He confirmed and consolidated the Saxon institutions, which divided the country into grades of municipalities, making the several communities of citizens checks on each other's conduct, by being responsible for the offences committed within their respective communities. Thence he has been called the inventor of the arrangement of the country into shires, hundreds, and tithings, though he probably only regulated and confirmed what had been previously in existence. He has been called the author of trial by jury, but in our present understanding of the system, it was not in practice until long after his day. He was a great scholar and author, and translated Boethius on the Consolations of Philosophy, with other works, into Saxon. He died either in 899 or 900. The memoir of him, which bears the name of his contemporary Asser, was long deemed a genuine life, but its authenticity has of late been doubted. [J.H.B.]

ALGARDI, ALEX., an Italian sculp., 17th ct.

ALGAROTTI, FRANCIS, a Venetian, equally skilled in the sciences, letters, and arts, 1712-1764.

ALHAZAN, an Arabian astronomer, died 1038.

ALI, BEN-ABBAS, commonly called ABBAS HALY, a celebrated physician b. in Persia, d. 982.

ALI, a near relation and confidential vizier of Mahomet, equally eloquent as an apostle, and valiant as a warrior of the new faith. Succeeded to the caliphate 655, murdered by a faction 661.

ALI, an Almoravide sultan of Africa and Spain, succeeded 1107, died 1143.

ALI, sultan of Africa, 1331-1351.

ALI, king of Granada, 1466-1483.

ALI, of Oude, the adopted son and successor of the late Nabob, ASUF-UD-DOWLAH, was born of a poor servant 1781. Having broken faith with the English he was deposed, and subsequently imprisoned for the murder of the English resident. Died in his confinement 1817.

ALI, BEG, a native of Poland, first dragoman of Mahomet IV., celeb. for his skill in lang., d. 1675.

ALI, BEY or BEG, chief of the Mamelukes, distinguished for his surprising valour and genius, born 1728, killed 1773.

ALI, IBN BUWAYH, founder of a Persian dynasty in the 10th century.

ALI, IBN HAMMUD, founder of a dynasty in Cordova and all Moham. Spain, 10th century.

ALI, PACHA, of Jannina, was born about the year 1750, at the little fortified village of Tepelenè, in Albania, in European Turkey. Ali's family belonged to one of the Albanian tribes that had long embraced Mahometanism; and his ancestors for some generations had been chieftains of Tepelenè.—Ali's father had been stripped of the greater part of his possessions by a confederacy of the neighbouring chiefs; and when the old man died of a broken heart, Ali was but a boy of fourteen years. But Ali's mother, Khamko, survived, and was a woman of remarkable energy. She successfully defended Tepelenè, the last remnant of her son's heritage, against his father's foes: and to her example and influence, much both of the vigour and of the ferocity which characterized Ali in after years, may be attributed. As the lad grew up, the mother trained him to make glory and revenge the sole objects of his existence. He collected a small band of armed followers, and made repeated forays into the lands of his hostile neighbours. Sometimes he sought adventures and booty alone, as a common freebooter, or Klephtis, according to the modern Greek title.—Ali's early youth was passed in this adventurous manner; and many of the vicissitudes that he encountered are far more romantic than any novelist ever invented. By the time that he was twenty-four, he had recovered the greater part of the hereditary territories of his family; his wealth and his retainers were increasing rapidly, and his fame as a military chief was spread throughout Albania, and the neighbouring provinces.—He now began to intrigue for promotion and influence at the sultan's court; and lavished his treasures for that purpose in bribes among the leading members of the divan at Constantinople. Partly by these arts, and partly on the strength of the more creditable claims which he acquired by doing good service at the head of a body of Albanians in the war of 1787, against Austria and Russia, Ali obtained official rank and favour from the sultan. He was made pacha of Tricala, in Thessaly, and soon held other appointments; but his great object was to obtain the pachalic of Jannina, in southern Albania, and by audacious craft and bribery, he succeeded in this in 1788. Jannina thenceforth was the capital of his dominions.—Ali proved almost invariably an overmatch for the other pachas who entered into rivalry with him. He sometimes put them down by open force, but he more frequently ridded himself of such adversaries by secret assassination, or by sowing calumnies against them at the sultan's divan. The suppression of the little local chiefs, and the subjugation of the independent towns and tribes in Albania, was a task of more difficulty. In particular, the tribe of the Suliotes resisted him with the noblest courage; and called into activity against them that fiendish ALLARTE, Marie Gay, a French novelist and translator, 1750-1821.

ALLARUS, Leo, a Greek physician, d. 1669.

ALLEGRAIN, Et., a French painter, d. 1736.

ALLEGRAIN, C. G., a French sculpt., d. 1795.

ALLEGRI. See Correggio.

ALLEGRI, Alex., an Italian poet, 16th cent.

ALLEGRI, Greg., an Italian composer, author of the 'Miserere,' 1590-1640.

ALLEGRINI, Fr., an Italian painter, d. 1785.

ALLEIN, Joseph, author of the 'Alarm to Unconverted Sinners,' 1623-1688.

ALLAN, Ethan, a distinguished general of the American revolution, d. 1789.

ALLEN, Ira, brother of the preceding, and secretary of Vermont, d. 1814.

ALLEN, John, chancellor of Ireland, murdered by the Earl of Kildare, 1534.

ALLEN, John, M.D., a distinguished historian and political writer, 1771-1843.

ALLEN, Paul, an American poet, d. 1826.

ALLEN, Th., a mathematician, 1542-1632.

ALLEN, T., antiquarian, 1803-1833.

ALLEN, W. H., an American naval officer, b. 1784; killed in action, 1813.

ALLESTREE, R., a celebrated divine, 17th c.

ALET, J. C., a French engraver, 17th century.

ALLEY, W., an English reformer, died 1570.

ALLEY, Rev. Jerome, LL.D., a theological and political writer, 1778-1826.

ALLEYN, Edward, a celebrated actor of the 16th century, the companion of Shakspeare, and a benefactor to learning and his country, as the founder of Dulwich College, was born in London, 1st September, 1566. It is probable that he was introduced to the stage through his mother's second marriage with a haberdasher and player, named Brown, and it is certain that he had a joint share with him and one Richard Jones in certain 'playing apparels, play books, instruments, &c.' In 1592 Alleyn married Joan Woodward, step-daughter of the theatrical manager, Philip Henslowe, and in conjunction with his new relative undertook the management of the Rose Theatre, Bankside, for a short season. After their separation Alleyn appears to have visited the provinces by himself, but in 1600 they united again to build a new theatre, called 'The Fortune,' situated in Cripplegate; and were also joint patentees in 'the mastership of his majesty's games of bears, bulls, and dogs,' exhibited at Paris Garden, which they rebuilt in 1606. In the same year Alleyn purchased the manor of Dulwich from Sir Francis Calton, and ten years afterwards, the death of Henslowe left him sole proprietor of their various speculations, to which he had already added a share in the Blackfriars Theatre, supposed to have been Shakspeare's interest in it, purchased in 1612. A career like this betokens a prosperous and clever man, and accordingly he was known by his contemporaries as 'famous Ned Alleyn.' In Ben Jonson's estimate, he was equal to the great actors of Rome, and seems most to have excelled in majestic parts. Greene's 'Orlando Furioso,' and Marlowe's 'Jew of Malta,' are mentioned as characters of his. The burning down of the Globe and Fortune Theatres turned the current of his fortunes; but before this reverse he had delighted in acts of benevolence, and sequestered all his lands to the college, designed for the support of one master, one warden, and four fellows, three of whom were to be ecclesiastics, and one a skilful organist, and also of six poor men, six women, and twelve boys to be educated in good literature. After some legal difficulties the patent passed the Great Seal on the 21st June, 1619, and on the 13th September following, Alleyn having formally and publicly dispossessed himself of all property in the foundation, entered it with his wife as inmates of the establishment and equals of those for whose comfort and elevation it was intended. He still, however, continued master of the king's games; and his diary represents him as occasionally baiting before the king at Greenwich. It was during his residence in the college, indeed, that the Fortune Theatre was burned down, which he forthwith rebuilt. Having lost his wife in 1624, Alleyn married again, and expired himself on the 25th November, 1626; by his will endowing twenty almshouses, ten in the parish of St. Botolph, and ten in St. Saviour's, Southwark, besides leaving considerable legacies to his widow and relatives.—The motive to these various acts of munificence has been superstitiously ascribed to the circumstances of Alleyn having been surprised by the apparition of the devil in one of his performances; but no intelligent reader will pay the slightest regard to so absurd a story. There may have been some vanity—the player's peculiar fault—in the transaction; since Alleyn manifested a partiality for people bearing his own appellation, and directed that the master of the college should always be of the name of Allen or Alleyn. This situation is now of great value; the revenues of the foundation being large. The college is also rich in works of art, Alleyn himself having left a considerable number of pictures, and Sir Francis Bourgeois in 1810 having bequeathed to it his valuable collection. Papers in the handwriting of Alleyn and Henslowe are also among its treasures. Alleyn's diary, which has been published by the Shakspeare Society, is particularly instructive touching the condition of the dramatists of the time. For the most part, they were exceedingly poor, and the remuneration paid for their works was very small. Those who, like Shakspeare and Alleyn, had the theatres in their possession, profited largely by the prevailing taste; but the workers in the mines of the drama laboured hard in obscurity for the pre-into the Netherlands, giving him powers which superseded all the ordinary governors and magistrates of the provinces. At the head of 20,000 chosen troops, Alva now commenced his reign of terror at Brussels. He formed a council of 12 of his most unscrupulous and merciless officers, which he called the Council of Troubles, but which soon acquired, and deserved, the name of the Council of Blood. The council had unlimited power over the properties and the lives of the Netherlanders. Every one who was charged with heresy or disloyalty, was dragged before this tribunal, which dealt out confiscation, torture, and death, throughout the unhappy country. Tumults soon followed, which gave a pretext for letting loose the ferocious soldiery on the wretched inhabitants; and the Spanish troops were permitted, and even encouraged by their commanders, to practise an amount of licentious brutality and fiendish cruelty, such as cannot be read of without shuddering, and which excited general horror even in that age of religious wars. Alva's avowed maxim was that the king would rather see the whole country a desert, than permit a single heretic to live in it. By treacherously pretending great favour and respect towards the counts of Egmont and Horn, two of the principal chiefs of the Netherlanders, he succeeded in getting these noblemen into his power, and then arrested them and put them to death after a mock trial. The other national leader of the provinces, Prince William of Orange, more wisely distrustful of Alva, kept away from his court; and when the maddened population of the northern provinces took up arms against the intolerable tyranny of Spain, the Prince of Orange became their chief, and levied an army in Germany, with which he sought to rescue his country from Alva. This was the commencement of the glorious Dutch war of independence, which was maintained for 68 years, and ended in the separation of the seven united provinces from the dominion of Spain. In the first five years of that war, which passed before Alva's recall from his command, he fully displayed the high nature of his military talents in battle and in siege, and still more in the cautious skill of his manœuvres. But the spirit of resistance which he had aroused was unconquerable. He was ill seconded by the Spanish court; and his troops, ill paid and ill supplied, grew insubordinate and mutinous. Alva was recalled in December, 1573, after a command of six years, during which he boasted that he had brought 18,000 persons to the scaffold, besides the almost countless numbers that had been massacred at Haarlaem, and other revolted cities which his troops took by storm, and those also who perished under the unrecorded acts of wanton cruelty which the soldiery were allowed to practise throughout the unhappy country. In 1582 Alva was once more employed by his sovereign, and led the expedition against Portugal.—The aged general completely conquered that country in ten weeks, and placed its crown on Philip's head; an acquisition which might seem to counterbalance the calamitous war in the Netherlands. This was the last act of Alva's long and active life, for he died in the same year, at the age of 74. [E.S.C.]

[The Fortune Theatre.]

ALVARADO, Don Pedro, one of the companions of Cortez, killed 1541.

ALVARADO, Alph. De, one of the companions of Pizarro, died 1553.

ALVARES, Affonso, a popular dramatic writer of Portugal, 17th century.

ALVAREZ, Eman., a Portuguese grammarian, rector at Evora, 1526-1582.

ALVAREZ, Ferd., a Port. poet, 16th century.

ALVAREZ, Fr., a Port. divine, died 1540.

ALVAREZ, Gomez, a Sp. poet, 1488-1538.

ALVAREZ, Jose, a Sp. sculptor, died 1827.

ALVAREZ, Juan, a Sp. lawyer, died 1546.

ALVAROTTO, Jas., an Ital. lawyer, d. 1542.

ALVENSLEBEN, P. C., count of, a diplomatist and historian of Hanover, 1745-1802.

ALVIANO, Bart., a Venetian general, disting. in the wars of the republic, 1455-1515.

ALVINTZY, Peter, a classical scholar and minister of Hungary, 17th century.

ALVINZY, an Austrian officer, 1726-1810.

ALXINGAR, J. B., a Germ. poet, died 1797.

ALYATTE I., king of Lydia, 761-747 B.C.

ALYATTE II., king of Lydia, 610-559 B.C.

ALYPIUS, the architect employed by Julius to rebuild the Temple of Jerusalem, 363.

ALYPIUS, an African bishop, died 430.

ALZATE-Y-RAMIREZ, J. A., an astronomer and geographer, 18th century.

AMAD-EDDOULAT, sultan of Persia, 933 to 949, founder of the Bouian dynasty.

AMADEUS. The counts of Maurienne of this name are the ancestors of the house of Savoy. Amad. I. and II. are of uncertain date. Amad. III. fl. 1103-1148; Amad. IV., count of Savoy, 1233-1253; Amad. V. 1285-1323; Amad. VI. 1343-1383; Amad. VII. 1383-1391; Amad. VIII. 1391-1451; Amad. IX. 1465-1472.

AMADIO, And., an illuminator, 15th century.

AMADUZZI, J. C., a Rom. scholar, 18th cent.

AMAIA, Fr., a Spanish lawyer, died 1640.

AMAGE, a queen of ancient Sarmatia.

AMAK, a Persian poet, 6th century.

AMALARIUS, the founder of Christianity in Saxony; archbp. of Treves 810; ambassador from Charlemagne to Constantinople 813, died 814.

AMALARIUS, an eccles. writer, 9th century.

AMALTHEUS, archbp. of Athens, died 1600.

AMALTHEUS, the name of several Latin poets; Jerome, 1460-1517; Mark Antony, his brother, 1475-1558; Francis, a younger brother, married 1505; Jerome, son of Francis, 1506-1574; John Baptist, another son, 1525-1573; Cornelius, younger br. of the preced., 1530-1603.

AMAND, Mark Antony Gerard, lord of St., a French poet, 1594-1661.

AMAR, J. P., a col. member of the French convention, b. 1750, tried for conspiring with Babeuf and acquitted, 1795, died 1816.

AMAR, Du Rivier, a miscellaneous author and translator, born 1765.

AMARA-SINHA, a Hindoo poet and grammarian, author of a Sanscrit dictionary, 1st c. B.C.

AMARETTI, Abbe C., a mineralogist, b 1743.

AMARITON, Jean, a philosopher, 16th cent.

AMARAL, Ant., a learned Port., 1753-1820.

AMASEO, Romulus, a Latin scholar and teacher of the Belles Lettres at Padua, 1489-1552.

AMASIS, king of Egypt, 6th century B.C.

AMATI, a violin maker, lived about 1600.

AMATUS, a Jewish physician, 16th century.

AMES, WILLIAM, a controversial div., d. 1633.
AMFREVILLE, THE MRQUIS. D', a French naval commander, time of Louis XIV.
AMHERST, JEFFREY, Lord, an officer disting. in Flanders and America, 1717-1797.
AMHURST, N., a miscell. writer, 1701-1742.
AMICO, ANT., an antiquarian, died 1641.
AMICO, FAUSTIN, an Ital. poet, 16th century.
AMICO, VITO, a theol. and antiq., 18th cent.
AMICONI, GIACOMO, a Ven. painter, d. 1753.
AMILCAR, the father of Hannibal, k. 228 B.C.
AMIOT, FATHER, a Fr. Jesuit and missionary to China, disting. by his long residence and researches in that country, 1718-1794.
AMINTA, a burlesque poet, 16th century.
AMLETH, a prince of Jutland, 2d cent. B.C.
AMMAN, JOST, a Swiss painter, died 1591.
AMMAN, JOHN CONRAD, a distinguished teacher of the deaf and dumb, 1669-1724.
AMMAN, JOHN, a lecturer on botany, d. 1740.
AMMAN, PAUL, a professor of physiology, natural history, and botany, died 1691.
AMMANATI, B., an Ital. sculptor, 16th cent.
AMMIANAS, a Latin historian, 4th century.
AMMIRATO, a Neapolitan poet, 1531-1601.
AMMON, ANDREW, a Latin poet, died 1517.
AMMONIUS, a Syrian general, put to death by Ptolemy Philometor, B.C. 145.
AMMONIUS, a surgeon of Alexandria.
AMMONIUS, an Athenian philosopher, 1st c.
AMMONIUS, a philosopher of the eclectic school, flourished in the 6th century.
AMMONIUS, called SACCAS, or SACK-CARRIER, from his first occupation at the port of Alexandria, is the reputed founder of the New Platonic school. He was born in the second century, and some affirm that he was born of Christian parents, but that in riper years he apostatized. Porphyry affirms it, while Eusebius and Jerome as stoutly deny it. Possessed of a creative genius, and conversant with the prevalent philosophies, he strove hard to form a species of eclecticism, in which Christianity and all systems of philosophy should be harmonized. In his attempt to accomplish this, he, as might be anticipated, robbed Christianity of its prime peculiarities, and did great violence to the current philosophies in accommodating them to the new religion. The works ascribed to him are numerous. Died 243, about eighty years of age. Longinus, Origen, and Plotinus are usually reckoned among his disciples. [J.E.] AMMONIUS, LEVINUS, a Flemish monk of distinguished learning, died 1556.
AMO, a negro from the gold coast, distinguished for his profound learning, 18th century.
AMON, J. A., a German composer, died 1825.
AMONTOUS, W., a Fr. mathemat., 1663-1705.
AMORE, S. D., a Sicilian poet, 17th century.
AMORETTI, CH., an It. mineralo., 1740-1816.
AMORETTI, M. P., a learned Italian, d. 1787.
AMORY, TH., a dissenting divine, 1701-1774.
AMORY, TH., a literary recluse, author of several eccentric works, died 1789.
AMOS, a Jewish prophet, 8th century, B.C.
AMPERE, ANDRE MARIE, one of the greatest discoverers in electro-magnetism, 1775-1836.
AMRU, BEN-EL-AS, a cel. warrior of the Islam faith, conqueror of Egypt, Nubia, and part of Lybia; ruler of Egypt 659, died 662.
AMRU, BEN-LEYTH, sult. of Khoras., 878-902.
AMULIUS, king of Alba, 8th century B.C.
AMURATH I., third Ottoman sul., fndr. of the corps of Janissaries, b. 1319, suc. 1360, d. 1389.
AMURATH II., b. 1404, sultan 1422-1451.
AMURATH III., b. 1544, sultan 1575, died after the conquest of Raab, 1594.
AMURATH IV., born 1609, sultan 1622, took Bagdad 1637, died 1640.
AMYN AHMED, a learned Persian, 17th cent.
AMYOT, JAS., a learned Fr. prelate, d. 1593.
AMYRAUT, MOSES, a Fr. theologian, d. 1664.
AMYNTAS I., king of Macedon, B.C. 510.
AMYNTAS II., king 394, died 370.
AMYRUTZES, a philosopher of Trebisond, who became a Mahomedan, 15th century.
ANACHARSIS, a Scythian philos., 600 B.C.
ANACLETUS, bishop of Rome, 73-91.
ANACLETUS, an anti-pope, elected 1130.
ANACREON, the cel. lyric of ancient Greece, lived in the 6th cent. B.C., chiefly at the court of Polycrates, the tyrant of Samos. He is said to have been choked by a grape stone, in the act of drinking wine, at the age of 85.
ANAFESTUS, first doge of Venice, 697-717
ANANIAS, high priest of the Jews, 47.
ANARIA, G. L., a wr. on demonology, 16th c.
ANASTASIUS I., emperor of the East, born 430, succeeded 491, died 518.
ANASTASIUS II., succeeded 713, deposed by Leo III. 715, put to death 719.
ANASTASIUS I., pope of Rome, 398-402.
ANASTASIUS II., elected 496, died 498.
ANASTASIUS III., elected 911, died 913.
ANASTASIUS IV., elected 1153, died 1154.
ANASTASIUS, an anti-pope, elected 855-6.
ANASTASIUS, patriarch of Antioch, died 599.
ANASTASIUS, the YOUNGER, patrh. 599-608.
ANASTASIUS, a Roman ablot, 9th century.
ANATOLIUS, ST., bishop of Laodicea, 269.
ANATOLIUS, a jurist of the 6th century.
ANATOLIUS, patriarch of C'nple, 449-458.
ANAXAGORAS, the most illustrious philosopher of the Ionian school; celebrated in history as the friend of Pericles, and because of his trial and condemnation at Athens for alleged impiety. He was born at Clazomene, in Ionia, in the seventieth Olympiad: when twenty-four years of age he removed to Athens, then the centre of civilization and of Grecian nationality. Saved from death by the intercession and influence of Pericles, he was banished from the adopted home where he had resided for thirty years; he passed the remainder of his life at Lampsacus, and died there at the age of seventy-two, surrounded by respect and honour. Anaxagoras belongs in philosophy to the Ionic school,—that school whose researches were confined to the nature and laws of physical phenomena. Nevertheless, he differs in important respects from his predecessors; and certainly he was the last Inquirer in Athens who ought to have been subjected to the accusation of impiety. The earlier Ionians, in their imperfect efforts to comprehend the changes of the external universe, generally imagined it possible to reduce all things to varieties of one single element;—for instance, it was a favourite speculation that water is the principle or substance of whatever exists; a dogma founded, perhaps, on a rude observation of the changes of form or ANDREWES, Pet. Miles, a dramatist, d. 1814.

ANDREWS, Launcelot, bishop of Winchester, disting. as a scholar and divine, 1565-1626.
ANDRIEU, B., a medallion engrav., 1761-1822.
ANDRIEUX, Fr. W. J., Stanislaus, a Fr. dramatist, poet, and miscellan. wr., 1759-1833.
ANDRIOLI, M. A., an Ital. writer, 17th cent.
ANDRISCUS, a pretender to the crown of Macedon, put to death 148 B.C.
ANDROCLES, an Athenian demagogue.
ANDROMACHUS, the physician of Nero.
ANDRONICUS, Livius, the oldest Latin dramatist, and Latin translator of Homer, 240 B.C.
ANDRONICUS, a Gr. architect, 4th cent. B.C.
ANDRONICUS of Rhodes, the restorer of the works of Aristotle, B.C. 63.
ANDRONICUS of Thessalonica, one of the Greek refugees from Constantinople, to whom we owe the revival of learning, died 1478.
ANDRONICUS I., emperor of Constantinople, born 1110; shared the crown with Alexis, 1163; caused him to be murd., 1183; dethr. and k., 1185.
ANDRONICUS II., born 1258; emperor, 1282; dethroned, 1328; died, 1332.
ANDRONICUS III., born 1295; rebelled, 1321-5; emperor, 1328; died, 1341.
ANDRONICUS IV., joint sovereign with his father, 1355; disinherited, 1373.
ANDROUET DU CERCEAU, James, an architect, distinguished in Paris, 16th century.
ANDRY, Nich., a medical author, died 1742.
ANEAN, Barth., a French poet, killed 1565.
ANELIER, a troubadour of the 13th century.
ANEURIN, a chief of the ancient Britons, distinguished also as a poet, 6th century.
ANFOSSI, P., an Ital. musician, 1736-1795.
ANGE, Fr., of Pennsylvania, d. 1767, aged 134.
ANGELI, Bonaventura, an hist., d. 1576.
ANGELI, Peter, a Latin poet, 1517-1596.
ANGELICO, John, an Italian painter, d. 1448.
ANGELIO, a Latin poet, 1517-1596.
ANGELIS, Stephen De, a mathemat., 17th c.
ANGELO, Fioriozzola, an Ital. poet, d. 1548.
ANGELO, Policiano, a learned wr., 15th c.
ANGELO, Michel. See Michelangelo.
ANGELONI, Fr., an Italian historian, d. 1652.
ANGELUCCI, Theodore, an Italian poet, translator, and physician, d. 1600.
ANGELUS, Chr., a refugee from Greece, professor of the Greek tongue at Cambridge, d. 1638.
ANGERSTEIN, J. J., a virtuoso, distinguished for his collection of paintings, 1735-1822.
ANGILBERT, St., abbot of Requier, d. 814.
ANGIOLELLO, J. M., a Venetian hist., 15th c.
ANGOT, a celebrated French privateer, d. 1551.
ANGOULEME, Charles De Valois, duke of, a natural son of Charles IX. and Marie Touchet; distinguished for his bravery in the civil wars of France, and in the campaigns of Flanders and Germany, 1575-1650.
ANGUIER, Fr. and Mich., sculptors of Normandy; the former of whom was most celebrated, and died 1669; the latter, 1686.
ANGUILLARA, L., a botanist of the 16th c.
ANGUILLARA, an Italian poet, b. 1517.
ANGUISCIOLA, a female painter, 16th cent.
ANHALT-DESSAU, Leopold, prince of, the creator of the Prussian army, 1676-1747.
ANIANUS, an artist and poet, 15th century.
ANICH, Peter, an astronomer, 1723-1766.
ANICHINI, Lewis, a medaller, 16th century.
ANJOU, the dukes or counts of, descendants of the Carlovingian kings, ruled the province from about 870 to 1204, when the line ended in John, king of England. The dukes of the house of Capet reigned 1246 to 1290. The house of Valois, 1290 to 1480. Since this period the dukedom has been reserved as an appanage for the younger princes of the royal family of France.
ANKASTRÖM. See Anckarstroem.
ANNA COMNENA, daughter of Alexis I., emperor of the East, celebrated for her beauty and acquirements, born 1083: being defeated in a conspiracy for placing the crown on the head of her husband, she devoted her life to letters, and wrote the history of her father's reign; died 1148.
ANNA de Candalles, queen of Ladislaus VI., of Hungary, married 1502.
ANNA of Hungary, b. 1503; married Fred. of Austria, 1521; died 1547
ANNA IVANOWNA, empress of Russia, born 1693; succeeded, 1730; died, 1740.
ANNA PETROWNA, in whose honour the order of St. Anne was instituted, born 1708: married, 1725; died, 1728.
ANNE, queen of England before George I., was the second daughter of James II. and Anne Hyde; b. 1664; mar. to George, brother of the k. of Denmark, 1683; suc. her father, 1702; d. 1714.
ANNE of Austria, queen of Louis XIII., and mother of Louis XIV. of France, b. 1602; m. 1615; regent of the kingdom, 1643-1661; d. 1666.
ANNE of Bretagne, queen-consort of France, b. 1477; married to Charles VIII. 1491, and to Louis XII. 1499; died 1514.
ANNE of Cleves, b. 1515; married to Henry VIII. and divorced, 1540; d. 1557.
ANNE of France, daughter of Louis XI., b. 1462; married to the lord of Beaujeu, 1474; governante of Charles VIII., 1483-1488; afterwards duchess of Bourbon till her death, 1522.
ANNESE, Gennaro, a leader in the Massaniello insurrection, 1647.
ANNESLEY, Arthur, by turns a royalist and republican, created earl of Anglesey for his share in the Restoration, 1614-1686.
ANNESLEY, S., a cel. Eng. divine, 1620-1696.
ANNETT, Peter, a sceptical writer, d. 1778.
ANNICERIS, a Greek philosopher, 3d c. B.C.
ANNIUS of Viterbo, a Dominican monk, author of a literary imposture, d. 1502.
ANNO, archbishop of Cologne, 11th century.
ANOT, P. N., a miscellaneous author, d. 1823.
ANQUETIL, L. P., a French savant, author of a Universal History, 1728-1808.
ANQUETIL DU PERRON, A. H., broth. of the preceding, disting. as an Oriental scho., 1731-1805.
ANSALDI, C. J., an antiquarian, 18th century.
ANSALDI, an Italian painter, d. 1816.
ANSART, A. J., a Fr. historian, 1723-1790.
ANSCARIUS, bishop of Hamburgh, 801-864.
ANSEAUME, N., a Fr. dramatist, d. 1784.
ANSELM, born in Piedmont in 1033, died in April, 1109; the celebrated churchman and metaphysician—one of the greatest of those famous men who have held the see of Canterbury. On the death of Lanfranc in 1089, Anselm, then on a visit to England, and whose wisdom, gentleness, and did much in laying the foundation of that pre-eminence which the navy of Britain has long maintained. In 1747, on occasion of a victory which he gained over the French, he was created baron Anson of Soberton in the county of Hants. In 1748 he married the lady Elizabeth, daughter of the lord chancellor, earl Hardwicke. His ordinary residence was Moore Park, Hertfordshire. He died without issue, 6th June, 1762, having outlived his wife two years. His elder and only brother, Thomas, died also without issue in 1771. The bulk of the property of both was inherited by George Adams, Esq. of Sambrooke, Staffordshire, son of their only sister, who assumed the name and arms of Anson; but the title became extinct. A new creation took place, however, in 1806, and in 1831, the third viscount Anson was created earl of Lichfield. [J. B.]

ANSON, P. H., a French author, 1744-1810.

ANSPACH, ELIZABETH, margravine of, formerly lady Craven, 1750-1828.

ANSTEY, CHR., an English poet, 1724-1805.

ANSTIS, JOHN, an Eng. antiquary, die: 1744.

ANSTRUTHER, SIR A., a lawyer, died 1819.

ANTAR, the hero of an Arabian romance, a chief and poet of the 6th century.

ANTHEMIUS, consul of the East, 405.

ANTHEMIUS, emperor of the East, 467-472.

ANTHEMIUS, an architect of the 6th century.

ANTHING, FREDERIC, an officer in the Russian service, companion of Suwarrow, died 1805.

ANTHONY OF BURGUNDY, distinguished in the military service of France, 1421-1504.

ANTHONY, P. G., a theologian, 17th century.

ANTHONY. See ANTONIUS, ANTONY.

ANTIGNAC, A., a French song-writer, b. 1770.

ANTIGONUS CARYSTIUS, a Greek writer, 3d cent. B.C.

ANTIGONUS, 'the Cyclops,' one of Alexander's companions in arms; afterwards king of Asia; killed 301 B.C.

ANTIGONUS, GONATAS, grandson of the preceding, king of Macedon, 277-241 B.C.

ANTIGONUS, DOSON, regent and king of Macedon, 230 B.C., till his death, 221.

ANTIGONUS, SOCHŒUS, the reputed founder of the sect of Sadducees, 3d century B.C.

ANTIGONUS, associated with Aristobulus I. as king of Judæa, 107-106 B.C.

ANTIGONUS, son of Aristobulus II., king of Judæa, B.C. 40; killed, B.C. 37.

ANTIMACO, MARK ANTONY, an Italian scholar and poet, 1472-1552.

ANTIMACUS, a Greek poet, 5th century B.C.

ANTINE, M. F., a chronologist, 1688-1748.

ANTINOUS, a beautiful youth, cel. as the companion and favourite of Adrian, drowned 132.

ANTIOCHUS, a Platonic phil., 1st cent. B.C.

ANTIOCHUS, a monastic writer, 7th century.

ANTIOCHUS I., k. of Syria, d. B.C. 261. ANT. II., k., B.C. 261; d. 246. ANT. III., called the Great, k., B.C. 223; assassinated 187. ANT. IV. succeeded his father, but was kept a prisoner by the Romans till 174 B.C.; d. 164. ANT. VI., king, B.C. 164; dethroned 162. ANT. VII., king, B.C. 140; dethroned 128. ANT. VIII. reigned B.C. 126-97. ANT. IX. shared the kingdom with the preceding, B.C. 112-95. ANT. X. and XI. reigned 93-92 B.C. ANT. XII. reigned for a short time before 83 B.C. ANT. XIII., king, B.C. 69; dethroned by Pompey, who reduced Syria to a Roman province, B.C. 65.

ANTIOCHUS I., king of Commagena, from about 69-32 B.C. The second of the same name, king till 29 B.C. The third is supposed to have reigned about the commencement of the Christian era. The fourth, from 38-72.

ANTIPATER, a Macedonian general, regent for Alexander, and after his death master of the European provinces: died 318 B.C.

ANTIPATER, k. of Macedon, 298-295 B.C.; a third of the same name reigned a few days, 278 B.C.

ANTIPATER, father of Herod the Great, and minister of Hyrcanus, 63-43 B.C.

ANTIPATER, son of Herod the Great, put to death for conspiracy, 2.

ANTIPATER, L. C., a Rom. historian, 2 B.C.

ANTIPATER OF SIDON, a philos., 2d c. B.C.

ANTIPATER, a Stoic philosopher, 1st c. B.C.

ANTIPHANES, a Gr. poet, time of Alexander.

ANTIPHILUS, a Greek poet, time of Nero.

ANTIPHILUS, a Greek painter, 4th century.

ANTIPHON, a Greek orator, killed 411 B.C.

ANTIQUARIUS, J., an Italian scho., d. 1512.

ANTIQUUS, a painter of the 16th century.

ANTISTHENES, a Gr. command., 4th c. B.C.

ANTISTHENES, fnd. of the Cynics, 5th c. B.C.

ANTOINE. See ANTONY.

ANTOINETTE. See MARIE ANTOINETTE.

ANTON, CH. GOTTLIEB, a German writer of curious history, 1751-1818.

ANTON, C. G., a philologist, died 1814.

ANTONELLI, P. A., a Fr. officer, 1747-1817.

ANTONELLI, a painter, 15th century.

ANTONI, SEB. DEGLI, a tragedian, 17th cent.

ANTONI, an Italian officer, 1714-1786.

ANTONIANO, SYLVIO, a poet, 1540-1603.

ANTONIDES, J., a Dutch poet, 1647-1684.

ANTONIDES, J., an Arabian scholar, 17th c.

ANTONINA, wife of Belisarius, distinguished for her public spirit, 499-565.

ANTONINE DE FORCIGLIONI, a prelate and saint of Rome, 1389-1459.

ANTONINI, ANNIBAL and JOSEPH, two brothers distinguished as historians, 17th and 18th c.

ANTONINUS, LIBERALIS, a Gr. au., 2d c. B.C.

ANTONINUS PIUS, a Roman emperor, b. 86; succeeded Adrian, 138; died 161.

ANTONINUS, MARCUS AURELIUS, successor of Antoninus Pius, 121-180.

ANTONINUS. See COMMODUS, CARACALLA, DIADUMENIANUS.

ANTONINUS, ST., abp. of Florence, d. 1415.

ANTONINUS, bishop of Constantine, 5th ct.

ANTONINUS, a geographer, age unknown.

ANTONIO, or ANTONELLO, a painter, 15th c.

ANTONIO, a Spanish historian, 1617-1684.

ANTONIO, PEDRO, a Spanish painter, d. 1675.

ANTONIUS, GODFREY, a Germ. lawyer, 17th c.

ANTONIUS, ÆLIUS N., a Span. hist., 16th c.

ANTONIUS, L., a Portuguese phys., 16th c.

ANTONIUS, MARCUS, a Rom. orat., proconsul B.C. 103; proscribed by Marius, put to dth. B.C. 67.

ANTONIUS, MARCUS, the cel. triumvir, grandson of the preceding, born B.C. 86; disting. in the Jewish war; and afterwards as the companion in arms and friend of Julius Cæsar. After the assassination of the latter, and the overthrow of the re-he does not appear to have accompanied him as far as Babylon; the date of his death is unknown. He left writings on the arts, which he dedicated to his pupil Perseus; they have not been preserved. He was celebrated for the beauty of the horses in his pictures.—There was another Apelles, of Ephesus, mentioned by Lucian, who lived at the court of Ptolemy Philopator, about B.C. 220.—(Pliny, Hist. Nat. xxxv. 36; Plutarch, Arat. 12, Alexander 4, Fort Alex. Mag. 2, 3; Junius, Catalogus Artificum, &c. &c.—Wornum, Epochs of Painting, vol. i.) [R.N.W.]

APELLICON, a philosopher, 1st century B.C.

APER, MARCUS, an orator, 1st century.

APER, ARIUS, a Roman præfect, killed 284.

APHTHONIUS, a rhetorician, 3d century.

APIAN, PETER, a German astron., 1495-1589.

APICIUS, a noted glutton, time of Augustus.

APIN, J. L., a medical writer, 17th century.

APION, or APPION, a celebrated grammarian, and historian of Egypt, 1st century.

APOLLINARIS, CAIUS S., a grammarian who taught at Rome, 2d century.

APOLLINARIS, bishop of Laodicea, 4th cent.

APOLLINARIS, son of the preceding, and reputed author of a heresy.

APOLLINARIUS, CLAUDIUS, a learned writer, bishop of Hieropolis, 2d century.

APOLLODORUS OF ATHENS. See ZEUXIS.

APOLLODORUS OF DAMASCUS, one of the most celebrated architects of antiquity. He built the forum and column of Trajan at Rome, of which there are still magnificent remains, in the year 113 A.D. and was much employed by Trajan in Rome and elsewhere. His most remarkable work, however, was the great bridge over the Danube in Bulgaria, where the Alt runs into that river; it stood on 20 piers, 150 feet high above the foundations, 60 feet wide, and 170 feet apart. It was built for the emperor Trajan; the bridge was of wood, but the piers were of stone. The woodwork was afterwards destroyed by Hadrian, as it gave the barbarians too great facilities for crossing the Danube. Remains of the piers are still standing. Apollodorus is said to have fallen a victim to the jealousy of Hadrian, who dabbled in architecture as well as other arts.—(Dion Cassius, lxviii. 13, lxix. 4; Procopius de Ædif. Justiniani, iv.; Hirt. Geschichte der Baukunst.) [R.N.W.]

APOLLODORUS, a Greek painter, 5th c. B.C.

APOLLODORUS, a Greek gram., 2d cent. B.C.

APOLLODORUS, a naturalist, 1st century.

APOLLODORUS, an architect, killed 130.

APOLLODRUS, a philosopher, time of Cicero.

APOLLONIA, a female martyr, 248.

APOLLONIUS, a Christian martyr, 2d cent.

APOLLONIUS, bishop of Ephesus, 2d cent.

APOLLONIUS, COLLATIUS, a monastic poet of Navarre, 15th century.

APOLLONIUS, DYSCOLUS, a grammatical writer and historian, 2d century.

APOLLONIUS, MYNDUS, an astronomer and astrologer, time of Alexander the Great.

APOLLONIUS OF PERGA, author of a treatise on conic sections, 3d century B.C.

APOLLONIUS, RHODIUS, a poet, librarian of Alexandria, died B.C. 240.

APOLLONIUS, TYANEUS, a Pythagor. philos., and reputed worker of miracles, 1st century.

APONO, or ABANO, PETER of, a celebrated professor of medicine, noted for his studies in astrology and magic, 1250-1316.

APOSTOLI, G. F., a Latin poet, 16th century.

APOSTOLIUS, MICHEL, a learned Greek refugee from Constantinople, 15th century.

APPERLEY, C. J., a writer on sporting subjects, known as 'Nimrod,' died 1843.

APPIAN, a celebrated historian, lived in the reigns of Trajan, Hadrian, and Antonine.

APPIANI, ANDREA, a painter, 1750-1818.

APPIANO, P. A., a disting. Jesuit, 17th cent.

APREECE, or RHESE, JOHN, an antiq., 16th c.

APRIES, or HOPHRA, king of Egypt, 595 B.C.; dethroned by Amasis, 570 B.C.

APROSIO, A., a monastic writer, 1607-1681.

APTHORP, EAST, a divine, 1732-1816.

APULEIUS, a botanist, 4th century.

APULEIUS, LUCIUS, the cel. author of a philo. romance, entitled the 'Metamorphoses, or Golden Ass,' a Roman Platonist of the 2d century.

AQUARIUS, a scholastic philosopher, 16th c.

AQUAVIVA, ANDR. MATT., duke of, a celerated scholar and soldier, 1456-1528.

AQUAVIVA, CLAUDE, a Jesuit, 1542-1615.

AQUAVIVA, OCTAVIO, abp. of Naples, 1612.

AQUILA, an architect and savant of the 2d cent., who was excom. for practising astrology.

AQUILA, GASPAR, (the Latinized form of his proper name Adler,) a friend and fellow-worker of Luther in the Reformation of Germ., 1488-1560.

AQUILANO, an Italian poet, 1466-1500.

AQUILANUS, a physician of Padua, d. 1543.

AQUINAS, THOMAS, usually called the Angelic Doctor, was a younger son of the count of Aquino, and was born at the castle of Rocca Sicca in 1227. This place was situated on the border line between the states of the church and the territory of Naples. From his earliest years he was smitten with the love of solitary study, and when a very young man he entered the Dominican order. Force was employed to prevent his becoming a monk, but in vain. So much was the youthful scholar wrapt up in his own cogitations, that when he studied at Cologne, under Albertus Magnus, his fellow-pupils gave him the name of Bos Mutus, 'mute ox,' on account of his taciturnity and apparent stupidity. In 1255 the university of Paris gave him the title of Doctor in Theology. He lectured with brilliant success in Paris, in several of the Italian universities, and ultimately at Naples. Being summoned by the pope to attend a general council at Lyons in 1274, he commenced his journey, and had reached Terracina, where he died, at the age of forty-eight. He was canonized by pope John XXII. in 1323. The Parisian edition of his works is in twenty-three folio volumes. But the amazing industry of Thomas during his brief life, is wholly eclipsed by his prodigious mental wealth, as displayed in his 'Summa Theologiæ' and 'Commentary on the Sentences of Peter Lombard.' In concise and earnest simplicity of style, in subtle and daring speculation, in purity and loftiness of aim, in orthodoxy of religious sentiment, in acuteness and vigour, in breadth and depth of view, in intellect and heart, in piety and temper, Thomas Aquinas is the acknowledged prince of the mediæval schoolmen and divines. [J.E.]

AQUINO, PH., a learned rabbin, died 1650.

have destroyed the Roman fleet when at a distance are less incredible. We may well believe that he had so improved the ballistæ of the ancients as to throw stones or missiles to a greater distance, and with a greater force, than had been done before; and we may even admit that, by a number of plane mirrors throwing the reflected image of the sun upon one point, he could burn a ship at a distance; but we cannot believe that the Roman fleet was thus destroyed, unless we had it in evidence that the crew were asleep. We have in the present day better mirrors than Archimedes could command, and better machinery for uniting their reflections upon one point, but we venture to say that a British or a French admiral would laugh at any such attempt to annoy him. Buffon, it is true, has endeavoured to attach a degree of probability to the story of burning a ship optically. He combined 168 plane mirrors so that he could direct the light of the sun which they reflected to one spot, and he found that he could burn wood with them at the distance of 200 or 300 feet. —This curious subject has been more recently discussed by M. Peyrard. Assuming the accuracy of Buffon's experiments that five times the heat of the sun is sufficient to inflame planks smeared with tar, M. Peyrard supposes that eight times the sun's heat will set fire to all kinds of wood; and upon this supposition he found that, at the distance of about a mile and a-half, it would require 2267 mirrors to burn wood, and at the distance of three quarters of a mile 590. This calculation proceeds upon the supposition that their reflections are all coincident, and that the mirrors have their two surfaces perfectly plane and parallel. But it is well known that these conditions are impossible, and that the most perfect mirror that the most skilful optician could grind and polish, would, at the distance of three quarters of a mile, and much less, scatter the light which it reflects over a surface ten times greater than its own, and would have very little power in the combustion of wood. But there are other conditions necessary before these mirrors, even if mathematically perfect, could set fire to ships. The ships must be absolutely at rest before the combined reflectors could inflame the wood upon which they fell, and, as has been already stated, the crew must be asleep in the daytime when the sun is shining. We regard, therefore, the story of the burning of the Roman fleet to belong as much to romance as the fishing for ships with hooks at the end of levers, the sinking of them by long beams, and the whirling of them in the air by ropes and grappling hooks. It is no slight presumption in favour of these opinions that the gigantic mechanism which the Syracusan philosopher is said to have wielded against the Roman power was of little avail in the defence of the capital. The siege was converted into a blockade. During the celebration of the festival of Diana, when the Syracusans had indulged in a fatal security, the Romans attacked and obtained possession of the city. Marcellus had issued an order that Archimedes and his house should be spared; but, either from ignorance of the order on the part of a Roman soldier, or from the obstinacy of Archimedes in refusing submission, he was run through the body while drawing a geometrical diagram on the sand. Marcellus was deeply afflicted when he heard of the event. He took the relatives of the philosopher under his special protection, and in erecting a monument to his memory, he fulfilled the wish that Archimedes had expressed in his lifetime, that a sphere inscribed in a cylinder should be engraven on his tomb. The death of Archimedes took place B.C. 212, and 140 years afterwards, Cicero, while questor in Sicily, went with a party of Syracusan nobles in search of the tomb of the great philosopher, which his countrymen had allowed to go into decay. 'Remembering,' says Cicero, 'some verses, said to have been inscribed on his tomb, which mentioned that on the top of it there was placed a sphere in a cylinder, I looked around me upon every object at the Agrigentine Gate, the common receptacle of the dead. At length I observed a small column rising above the thorns, upon which was placed the representation of a sphere in a cylinder. This, said I to the nobles, must be what I am seeking. Several persons were immediately got to clear away the weeds, and lay open the spot. As soon as a passage was made, we found on the opposite base the inscription, with nearly the latter half of the verses obliterated.'—The reputation of Archimedes did not require to be sustained by the fables with which the vanity of his countrymen has surrounded his name. His discoveries in geometry, mechanics, and hydrodynamics would have immortalized him, had posterity never heard of his magical artillery against the Roman fleet. He discovered that the surface as well as the solidity of any sphere is equal to two-thirds of its circumscribing cylinder; and that the ratio of the diameter of a circle to its circumference is nearly as 7 to 22. It is to him that we owe the demonstration of the fundamental property of the lever, and the method of finding the centre of gravity of plane surfaces. He discovered the quaquaversus pressure of fluids, and pointed out the condition under which a solid body is in equilibrio when floating in a fluid. He invented the screw for raising water which bears his name; and we owe to him the process of detecting the adulteration of the precious metals, which he so successfully applied in proving the impurity of the gold in king Hiero's crown.—A splendid edition of the works of Archimedes was printed at the Clarendon Press at Oxford, in 1792, edited by our countryman, the Rev. Abraham Robertson. [D.B.]

ARCHINTO, the name of a noble family of Milan, many of whom were distinguished as men of letters, ecclesiastics, and statesmen, from the 12th to the 17th cent. CHARLES, founder of a scientific academy, 1669-1732. PHILIP, abp. of Milan, d. 1558. GIUSEPPE, abp. and card., d. 1712. OCTAVIUS, an antiq. and diplomatist, d. 1656.

ARCHON, LOUIS, an antiquarian, 1645-1717.

ARCHENHOLZ, J. W. VON, a German historian, 1695-1777.

ARCHENHOLZ, J., a Swed. hist., 1695-1777.

ARCHYTAS, a mathe. and philo. of the Pythagorean schl., dist. for his prac. abilities, 5th c. B.C.

ARCO, ALPH. DE, a Sp. painter, died 1700.

ARCO, NICH., Count, a Latin poet, died 1546.

ARCON, J. CL. ELEON. LEMICAUD D', a military engineer of France, 1733-1800.

ARCOUS, CÆSAR OF, a Fr. advocate, d. 1681.

century Pulci and Boiardo, borrowing from the romances the fabulous history of Charlemagne and his paladins, and imitating much of that union of the serious and the comic which marked the effusions of the minstrels, worked up these materials into chivalrous poems. Boiardo's 'Orlando Innamorato' takes its name from the love of its hero, the knightly Orlando or Roland, for the Eastern princess Angelica. Of this poem, Ariosto's, (first published incomplete in 1516, and then in its present shape in 1532,) is just a continuation. Orlando's madness, caused by jealousy, furnishes its title, and a considerable part of its incidents. But Charlemagne's war with the Saracens is fully related: isolated adventures of many of his champions are continually introduced; and a prominence, which increases as the work proceeds, is bestowed on the knight Ruggiero and the beautiful amazon Bradamante. The poem closes with events which remove obstacles to the marriage of these personages, who are represented as the ancestors of the family of Este; and their history is regarded as the leading story of the Orlando, by those critics who are unwilling to allow that it is nothing more than a collection of episodes. If unity of design was really attempted by the poet, he has certainly failed in the execution: no one series of adventures is so decisively prominent as to fix the attention of the reader; and the several stories are interwoven, and alternately dropped and resumed, with a caprice and complexity which make it no easy task to follow the windings. The mixture of gaiety with seriousness is continual; yet these dissimilar elements are harmonized with much skill and delicacy: and the airy sportiveness of fancy which is prevalent throughout, and the extraordinary animation with which the chivalrous perils and acts of heroism are depicted, concur in shedding over the poem a charm which is irresistible. In point of poetic adornment, the Orlando is at once rich and original: Ariosto is as much superior to Tasso in native genius, as he is inferior to him in skill of constructive art. [W.S.]

ARIOSTO, GABRIEL, brother of the celebrated poet, also a poetical writer.

ARIOSTO, HORACE, son of the preceding, a poet and comedian, died 1593.

ARISI, FR., an advocate and poet, 1657-1743.

ARISTÆNATUS, an elegant Greek wr., 4th c.

ARISTARCHUS, a grammarian and critic of noted severity, 2d century B.C.

ARISTARCHUS, a Greek philosopher of the 3d century B.C., whose works on astronomy show that he was acquainted with the rotation of the earth upon its own axis.

ARISTEAS, a Jewish chronicler, 1st cent. B.C.

ARISTIDES, a Greek painter, 3d cent. B.C.

ARISTIDES, ÆLIUS, a Gr. orator, 2d ct. B.C.

ARISTIDES, QUINTILLIAN, a didactic writer, author of a work on music, 2d century.

ARISTIDES, a philosopher, 2d century.

ARISTIDES OF THEBES, a painter, contemporary with Apelles, was, according to Pliny, the greatest master of expression among the Greeks. The same writer relates that when Alexander the Great stormed Thebes, he was so struck with a picture by him of a dying mother with a child at her bosom, that he ordered it to be sent to his palace at Pella. The works of Aristides were in great repute even during his lifetime. Mnason, tyrant of Elatea, paid him £3,600 for a single easel picture of a battle of the Persians, containing one hundred figures only. After the siege of Corinth, 146 B.C., Attalus III., king of Pergamus, offered £5,300 for a picture of Bacchus and Ariadne by Aristides, but the Roman general Mummius, thinking the picture had some hidden value in it, sent it to Rome, where it was dedicated in the temple of Ceres. A celebrated picture by this painter, preserved in the temple of Apollo at Rome, was destroyed by a picture restorer, to whom the prætor, M. Junius, had given it to be cleaned before the celebration of the Apollinaria; another of the incidents which show how similar are the stories of ancient and modern art. Aristides painted in encaustic, that is with wax colours, the picture being afterwards burnt in.—(Pliny, Hist. Nat. vii. 39, xxxv. 4 8, 10 36, 11 39, 40.) [R.N.W.]

[The Pnyx at Athens.]

ARISTIDES, surnamed the Just, an Athenian general and statesman, whose intrepidity greatly contributed to the victory of Marathon. Being banished through the intrigues of Themistocles, B.C. 483, he was recalled by his countrymen to oppose Xerxes, and distinguished himself at the battle of Salamis. After serving in the highest offices of the state, he died a poor man, 467 B.C.

ARISTIPPUS, king of Argus, killed 242 B.C.

ARISTIPPUS, a pupil of Socrates, and founder of a school of philosophy at Cyrene, 4th cent. B.C.

ARISTO, an Aristotelian, 3d century B.C.

ARISTO, TITUS, a Stoic. time of Trajan.

ARISTOBULUS I., a Jewish prince, succeeded his father Hyrcanus as high priest, and took the title of king 107 B.C.; died 108.

ARISTOBULUS II., usurped the throne 70 B.C.; deposed by Pompey 63 B.C.

ARISTOBULUS, brother of Mariamne, wife of Herod the Great, killed 35.

ARISTOGITON, an Athenian, executed B.C. 516, for conspiring against the Pisistratides.

ARISTOMENES, a Greek general, representative of the royal house of Messene, 7th cent. B.C.

ARISTOPHANES, a celeb. name in the Greek drama, author of numerous comedies, equally remarkable for the beauty of their composition, and their pungent satire, flourished in the 5th ct. B.C. His life and works have given occasion to a vast amount of learned writing and critical inquiry, but the facts known concerning him are few in number. Out of 44 compositions of his, only 11 are extant.

ARIUS, the noted heretic, was born about the middle of the third century. His entire life was embroiled with disputes, principally with bishop Alexander and with Athanasius on the divinity of Christ. Arius held that God created his Son, that the Son had not existed from all eternity, and was not in dignity and essence equal with the Father. This fatal heresy was solemnly condemned by the great council which met at Nice in 325. After numerous vicissitudes, strifes, and intrigues, Arius was in the act of celebrating a triumph in Constantinople, when he retired from the crowd to satisfy a call of nature, and then and there suddenly died at a very advanced age. His enemies rudely reckoned his manner of death a judgment from heaven. Arius was a man of bustle and ambition, soured by disappointment, and irritated by defiant opposition, and his errors, if not prompted, were at least shaped to some extent by the exciting circumstances in which he was placed. [J.E.]

ARKWRIGHT, SIR RICHARD, an extraordinary man, whose genius has created a permanent influence on the constitution of civilized society. Born in Preston in 1732, of humble parents, the youngest of 13 children, he was brought up as a barber. About 1760 he quitted this precarious business, and dealt in hair, which he collected about the country, and discovered how to dye it and prepare it for wig-makers. From 1767, not till he was 35 years of age, Arkwright gave himself up exclusively to the subject of inventions for spinning cotton. In 1768 he was in Preston constructing his first machine. At this time his poverty was such, that 'being a burgess of Preston he could not appear to vote till the party with whom he voted gave him a decent suit of clothes!' Apprehensive of meeting with the same hostile treatment from the operative weavers of the district as Hargreaves had met with, Arkwright removed to Nottingham, where he became a partner with Mr. Jedediah Strutt, the ingenious improver and patentee of the stocking frame, and who rendered essential assistance in perfecting the invention for which Arkwright obtained his first patent in 1769.—The improvement for which the patent was obtained, consisted mainly in the use of two pairs of rollers, the first pair, between which the carded cotton in the form of a 'spule,' or soft cord, passed, revolving slowly; and the second pair revolving two, three, or ten times as fast, so as to draw out the spule to one-half, one-third, or one-tenth of its thickness when between the first rollers. This invention was followed up by various improvements and combinations of machinery, and mills for spinning cotton by this method were erected in Nottingham first, and then at Cromford in Derbyshire. The system has since been universally adopted, and in all its main features remains unaltered to the present time. Out of this invention have grown up the largest manufacture, the largest trade, some of the largest cities, the largest revenue, and the largest national prosperity in the world. Arkwright did not escape the system of robbery and persecution, the fate of most patentees of successful inventions then as now. By aid of false witnesses a combination of the persons in the spinning trade succeeded in 1781 in depriving Arkwright of his patent right. The evidence upon which the patent was annulled, and upon which it has been much the fashion to depreciate Arkwright's talents, was that of persons in a low station of life, who spoke of circumstances which had occurred 18 years before!—Arkwright's genius was not that of a mechanic alone. Although the details of manufacturing or commercial business were altogether new to him, and although it was five years before the works at Cromford returned any profit, yet by indomitable energy he turned the tide of prosperity and wealth to his own advantage, and for several years regulated the cotton market. He left great wealth to his heirs, who in their generation increased their patrimony to the most colossal fortune, perhaps, that has been realized in Britain. [L.D.B.G.]

ARLAND, J. A., a painter, died 1743.

ARLER, PETER VON, an architect, 14th cent.

ARLOTTO, M., a facetious writer, 15th cent.

ARMELLINI, M., a learned monk, died 1737.

ARMFELDT, CHARLES, baron of, a Swedish general, time of Charles XII.

ARMFELDT, GUSTAVUS MAURICE, count of, a Swedish statesman, died 1814.

ARMINIUS, or HERMANN, a German chief, who maintained his ground for years against Varus and Germanicus, and was at last slain by the treachery of one of his countrymen, 21.

ARMINIUS, (VAN HARMINE,) was born at Oudewater, South Holland, in 1560. After studying at Leyden he went to Geneva, and enjoyed the prelections of Beza. His mind seems to have had an early love of innovation, an early itching to oppose established forms of thought and belief, and he became a romantic supporter of the philosophy of Peter Ramus. At the age of twenty-six he was ordained minister of one of the churches in Amsterdam, and preached with great acceptance. His views soon became unsettled, and he was entangled in controversy. In 1603 he succeeded Junius in the chair of theology at Leyden. Next session he attacked the doctrine of predestination, and based it upon foreknowledge of faith and merit. Gomar became his resolute antagonist. The warfare waxed hotter and hotter, and the States-general interfered, but to no purpose. Arminius died in 1609. The candour and honesty of Arminius are unimpeached, and his ability is undoubted, but the system which now bears his name was elaborated after his death by Episcopius and Limborch, several of its distinctive tenets not being held by its name-father. [J.E.]

ARMSTRONG, JOHN, a cel. phys., an. of many valuable works on medical science, 1784-1829.

ARMSTRONG, JOHN, M.D., a Scotch physician, better known as a poet, was born at Castleton, on the banks of the Liddal, in Roxburghshire, 1709, and graduated at Edinburgh, 1732. He was already distinguished by his love of literature and the arts, but more especially for his classical attainments and taste in poetry. After one or two professional essays, he published, 1735, a poetical brochure, entitled, an 'Essay for Abridging the Study of Medicine,' a pleasant attack on the orthodox faculty, in the dialogue of which he is said to have caught the very spirit of Lucian. This was followed in 1737 by a professional work on a subject requiring great delicacy in its treatment, and two years afterwards by 'The Economy of Love,' a poem which passed through several editions, 'more to the fame as an operatic composer now rests, was composed in 1762, and it met with the most triumphant success. In 1769 the university of Oxford conferred upon Arne the degree of Doctor in Music. After this he composed his opera The Fairies, the music for Mason's Elfrida and Caractacus, additions to Purcell's King Arthur, several of Shakspeare's songs, and the Stratford Jubilee, besides many glees, catches, and canons. For his excellence as a writer of glees the Catch Club awarded him no fewer than seven gold medals. His song and chorus, Rule Britannia, which will live for ever, 'may be said to have wafted his name over the greater half of the habitable world.' Dr. Arne was seized with spasms of the lungs, and died on the 5th of March, 1778. On his deathbed, having been educated a Roman Catholic, he sought consolation from the rites of that church, and his last moments were cheered by a hallelujah sung by himself. Mrs. Arne died about the year 1795. Dr. Arne left an only son, Michael, who evinced a precocious taste for music, but never attained the same eminence as his father. He in conjunction with Mr. Battishill produced the opera of Alcmena at Drury Lane in 1764, and afterwards Cymon at the King's Theatre, from which he derived both honour and fame. He died without issue, but in what year we have been unable to discover. [J.M.]

ARNE, Cecilia, wife of the celebrated Dr. Arne, a distinguished cantatrice, d. 1795.

ARNE, Michael, son of the preceding, also a composer of music, died about 1785.

ARNIGIO, an Italian poet, 1523-1577.

ARNHEIM, or ARNIM, a German baron, distinguished in the thirty years' war.

ARNIM, Ludwig A. Von, a romancist and poet of Germany, 1781-1831.

ARNISÆUS, a metaphysician, 16th century.

ARNOBIUS, Afer, a Christian writer, 3d ct.

ARNOBIUS, a biblical commentator, 5th cent.

ARNOLD, Benedict, an American general who was at first distinguished in the cause of independence, but in 1780 entered into an engagement with the British for the treasonable surrender of West Point, where he commanded, 1740-1801.

ARNOLD, Chr., an astronomer, 1646-1695.

ARNOLD, God., a mystic divine, 1665-1714.

ARNOLD, John, a mechanician, 1744-1799.

ARNOLD, Nich., a polemical dis., died 1680.

ARNOLD, Richard, a chronicler, 15th cent.

ARNOLD, Samuel, Mus. Doc., was born in London, in the year 1740, and received his musical education at the Chapel Royal, St. James's, from Mr. Bernard Gates and Dr. Nares, who discovered in him the most promising talents. In the year 1760 he became composer to the Covent Garden Theatre, and in 1766 he undertook the duties of the same office at the Haymarket. Dr. Arnold produced four oratorios, eight odes, three serenades, forty-seven operas, three burlettas, besides many overtures, concertos, songs, and smaller pieces, the number of which is not on record. The most popular of his works, several of which still keep their place in public estimation, were The Maid of the Mill, The Son-in-law, The Castle of Andalusia, Inkle and Yarico, The Battle of Hexham, The Surrender of Calais, The Children in the Wood, The Mountaineers, The Cure of Saul, Abimelech, The Resurrection, and The Prodigal Son. The university of Oxford conferred upon him their degree of Doctor in Music about the year 1773. In 1783, on the death of Dr. Nares, he was appointed organist at the Chapel Royal and composer to the king; and at the commemoration of Handel, which took place in the year following, Dr. Arnold was nominated one of the directors. He succeeded Dr. Cooke as conductor of the Academy of Ancient Music in 1783, and was appointed organist of Westminister Abbey in 1793. Dr. Arnold, who is described as having possessed those personal manners and social virtues which secure esteem, died on the 2d of October, 1802, and was buried in Westminster Abbey. Dr. Arnold married a lineal descendant of the Baron of Merchiston, and left one son and two daughters. [J.M.]

ARNOLD, Thos., a physician, 1742 1816.

ARNOLD, Thomas, D.D., was born at West Cowes, in the Isle of Wight, on 13th June, 1795. He belonged to a respectable family, his father being collector of the customs in that place, and having been destined for the ministry in the Church of England, was in due time entered a student in the university of Oxford. On completing his college studies in 1819, he obtained deacon's orders, and immediately after took up his residence at Laleham, near Staines, where for the nine following years he kept a private boarding establishment, intended chiefly as a school of preparation for the universities. In the superintendence of this seminary, the character of Arnold rapidly developed itself, and was marked by an indefatigable activity, a manly decision and definiteness of purpose, above all, by a settled religious faith, little to be expected from the indolent and dreamy habits of his youth. He was an eminent Christian, as well as a ripe scholar; and the principles on which he acted with the utmost earnestness himself he infused into the minds of his pupils, by leading them to unite a high standard of intellectual accomplishments with a Christian culture of the heart and affections. The success of this system extended his fame far beyond the obscure and limited locality of Laleham; and in 1827 he became head master of Rugby school, having been nominated to that influential office by a unanimous vote of the trustees, who were told, on high authority, that 'he would change the face of education all through the public schools of England.' That expectation was not long in being realized; for having also obtained the appointment of chaplain to the school at Rugby, in which capacity he preached discourses, which have long been admired as models of sermons for educated youth, he succeeded, while fully sustaining the ancient celebrity of the institution as a classical seminary, in imparting to it a new and Christian tone. The great principle of his educational system was to make his pupils good men as well as good scholars; and accordingly, while labouring to store their minds with useful and elegant literature, he taught them to make religion the daily rule of their life—not to confine it to Sabbath and the church, but to carry it into the school-room, the play-ground, the secular duties and familiar intercourse of every day. The beneficial effects of the method pursued at Rugby led to its general adoption in the other great English schools, and produced a marked improvement on ASCHAM, ANTH., envoy from Cromwell to Spain, where he was assassinated, 1650.

ASCHER, a German rabbi, died 1321.
ASCLEPIADES, a Greek physician, d. B.C. 63.
ASCOLI, LECCO DI, a mathematician of Florence, burned as a heretic 1358.
ASCONIUS, a grammarian, 1st century.
ASDRUBAL, a celeb. general commanding the army of Carthage, killed B.C. 220. Another Carthaginian general of the same name, d. B.C. 489.
ASDRUBAL, BARCA, brother of Hannibal, vanquished and slain 208 B.C.
ASELLI, CASPAR, an anatomist, 17th cent.
ASGILL, Sir CH., a British officer, died 1823.
ASGILL, JOHN, a barrister, died 1783.
ASH, JOHN, LL.D., a lexicographer, d. 1779.
ASHBURTON, ALEXANDER BARING, Lord, b. 1774, commenced his political life as Whig member for Taunton, 1812; president of the Board of Trade under the Peel ministry, 1834; envoy to the United States on the Oregon question, 1842; d. 1848.
ASHIK, a Turkish poet, 16th century.
ASHLEY, JOHN, a musician, last century.
ASHLEY, ROBERT, a miscellan. wr., 16th cent.
ASHMOLE, ELIAS, celebrated as an antiquary and alchymist, 1617-1692.
ASHMUN, JOHN HOOKER, a distinguished scholar of America, 1800-1833.
ASHWELL, GEO., an English div., 1612-1693.
ASHRAF-SHAH, king of Persia, 1722 to 1729.
ASKEW, ANNE, a prot. martyr, reign of Henry VIII.; b. 1521, burnt alive aft. suffer. the rack, 1546.
ASKEW, ANTH., a scholar of the 18th century.
ASMONÆUS, a Levite from whom the illustrious Asmonæan princes derive their name.
ASPASIA, a lady of ancient Greece, whose house at Athens became the resort of the greatest masters in philosophy and art, 5th century B.C.
ASPINWALL, WM., a physician, 1743-1823.
ASSELIN, G. T., a French poet, 17th century.
ASSELYN, J., a Dutch painter, 1610-1650.
ASSEMANI, STEP., a catholic writer, 17th ct.
ASSER, a French historian, died 883.
ASSER, a Talmudist, died 427.
ASSERMO, MENEVENSIS, the instructor and biographer of Alfred the Great, died 909.
AST, G. A. F., a philologist, died 1841.
ASTARIK, F., a composer, died 1803.
ASTEL, MARY, a divine and philos., d. 1731.
ASTLE, THOS., an archæologist, died 1803.
ASTLEY, PH., the cel. equestrian, 1742-1814.
ASTOLPHUS, k. of the Lombards, 749 to 756.
ASTON, Sir ARTHUR, a royalist, killed at Drogheda when taken by Cromwell, 1649.
ASTON, Sir THOS., a royalist of Cheshire, taken prisoner and killed 1645.
ASTOR, JOHN JACOB, a native of Germany, disting. as a merchant of New York, and particularly for his enterprise in the establishment of the American fur trade, 1763-1848.
ASTORGA, MARQUIS OF, a Spanish diplomatist, viceroy of Naples 1672.
ASTORGA, MARQUIS OF, disting. by his opposition to the French usurpation in 1807, declared a traitor by Napoleon 1808, died 1814.
ASTORI, J. A., a Venetian scholar, 17th cent.
ASTORINI, ELIAS, a physiologist, died 1702.
ASTYAGES, last king of the Medes, dethroned by Cyrus, 6th century B.C.
ASTRUC, J., a French physician, 1684-1766.
ATAHUALPA, last Inca of Peru, killed 1553.
ATAIDE, viceroy of India 1569, died 1580.
ATANAGI, DENIS, an Ital. author, 16th cent.
ATAULF, king of the Visigoths after Alaric.
ATHA, HAKIM BEN., the original of Moore's 'Veiled Prophet of Khorassan,' who gave himself out for an incarnation of the Deity, and met with a tragical end, 8th century.
ATHALARIC, king of the Ostrogoths, 526.
ATHANAGILDUS, king of the Visigoths, 554.
ATHANARIC, king of the Visigoths, 4th cent.
ATHANASIUS, the great champion of orthodoxy in the fourth century, was born perhaps about 296. His first appearance was in support of his patron, bishop Alexander, against the Arians, and he was not only present, though simply a deacon, at the council of Nice, but was an active and intrepid member of that assembly. His rising fame led to his elevation to the see of Alexandria when Alexander died. Bishop Athanasius was immediately involved in contests, which ended only with his life. Deposed most unjustly in 335, he was reinstated in 338. Deposed again in 340, he was reinstated in 342. His enemies prepared the most unscrupulous charges against him, all of which he refuted with an overwhelming force of proof and eloquence. Again in 355 was he sentenced to be banished, when he retired to the Egyptian deserts, and again was he welcomed back to the Egyptian capital. Once more Julian the apostate exiled him, and once more he was restored. A fifth time was he banished by the emperor Valens, who, however, soon recalled him, and Athanasius, after holding the primacy for the long space of forty-six years, died at length in 373. He was a man of holy life, a bold and noble defender of the Godhead of the Saviour, an orator of ready and commanding eloquence, and a prelate of heroic and indefatigable activity. The prejudices even of Gibbon were softened toward him, and he has pronounced upon him a splendid eulogy—History, chap. xxi. The monks of St. Maur published the works of this illustrious father in three folios, Paris 1698. [J.E.]
ATHANASIUS, a prince bishop of Naples, ravaged Italy, and died 900.
ATHELSTAN, king of England 925 to 954.
ATHENÆUS, a military engineer, 3d ct. B.C.
ATHENÆUS, a grammarian, 3d century.
ATHENAGORAS, a philosopher of the 2d ct.
ATHENAIS, the empress of Theodosius, distinguished for her learning, died 460.
ATHENADORUS, a Greek physician, 1st cent.
ATHIAS, JOS., a learned Jew, 17th century.
ATHLONE, GODFREY, count of, a Dutch general, time of William III.
ATHOL, JOHN MURRAY, duke of, died 1830.
ATKINS, ROBT., a divine, 17th century.
ATKINSON, HY., a mathematician, died 1831.
ATKINSON, THOS., a miscel. writer, d. 1833.
ATKYNS, Sir ROBT., the patriotic defender of Lord Wm. Russell, born 1621; chief baron of the exchequer, 1688 to 1693; died 1709.
ATKYNS, Sir ROBT., son of the preceding, historian of Gloucestershire, died 1711.
ATKYNS, RICH., a writer on printing, d. 1677.
ATLEE, S. J., a French officer, died 1786.
ATTA, a dramatic poet, 1st century B.C.

ATTIRET, J. Fr., a French Jesuit missionary and painter, 1702-1768.

ATWOOD, Geo., F.R.S., a writer on mechanics and mathematics, 1745-1807.

ATTWOOD, Thomas, an eminent composer, was born in the year 1765, and commenced his musical career as one of the children of the Chapel Royal, St. James's, under Dr. Nares and Dr. Ayrton. Happening on one occasion to perform at Buckingham Palace, he attracted the notice of George IV., then Prince of Wales, who took him under his patronage, and sent him at his own expense to Naples in 1783, where he studied for two years under Filippo Cinque and Gætaus Latilla. He afterwards visited Vienna, where he immediately became a pupil of Mozart, from whom he received instructions till the year 1786, when he returned to England, where he soon became one of the chamber musicians to his royal patron, and musical preceptor to the Duchess of York and the Princess of Wales, afterwards the unfortunate Queen Caroline. In 1795 Attwood succeeded Dr. Jones as organist of St. Paul's Cathedral, and in 1796 he was appointed composer to the king. About this period of his life he turned his attention to the composition of music for the stage, and produced several operas, the literary portion of the most of which may be regarded as dead, though the music of many of them is as much admired as it was when first performed. Amongst the most popular of his operas may be named The Prisoner, The Mariners, The Adopted Child, The Castle of Sorrento, and The Smugglers. The fantastic tricks, and petty vanities of leading performers, disgusted Attwood, and caused him to turn his attention to sacred music, in which he was very successful. For the coronation of George IV. he wrote his anthem The King shall Rejoice, and for that of King William III., O Lord, Grant the King a Long Life, both of which hold the highest place amongst this class of musical compositions. In 1887 the Bishop of London appointed him without solicitation to the office of organist to the Chapel Royal. He died in 1837, and his remains were buried in St. Paul's Cathedral, beneath the great organ, with every honour that the church and his professional brethren could confer. Many of Attwood's works, and they are very numerous in all the classes, are destined to enjoy a lengthened popularity. His style was founded principally upon that of his great teacher, Mozart, who, according to Michael Kelly, once said, 'Attwood partakes more of my style than any pupil I ever had.' [J.M.]

AUBERT, Abbe, a French fabulist, last cent.

AUBIGNE, Theod. Agrippa D', one of the most remarkable men of the 16th cent., an hist., satirist, and poet, persecuted on account of his attachment to the reformed religion, 1550-1630.

AUBIGNE, Constant, son of the preceding, and father of Mad. de Maintenon.

AUBLER, J. B. C. F., a botanist, 1720-1778.

AUBREY, John, an antiquary, died 1700.

AUBRIET, Claude, a French painter, d. 1740.

AUBRIOT, Hugh, mayor of Paris, time of Ch. V., incarcerated in the Bastile, which he had erected as a fortress against the English, on a charge of heresy, and rescued by the insurgent populace 1382, died same year.

AUBRY, Steph., a French painter, died 1781.

AUBRY DE MONTDIDIER, a French knight, whose murder was discovered by the hostility of his dog to Richard de Macaire, 1371.

AUBRY, C. L., a mathematician, last century.

AUBRY, J. B., a French prior, 1735-1809.

AUBRY, J. F., a Fr. physician, last century.

AUBRY, Mdlle., a ballet dancer, worshipped in Paris as the goddess of reason, 1793.

AUBRY DE GANGES, Marie Olympie, a female republican, executed by Robespierre.

AUBRY, Dubonchet N., a French economist, deputy to the Estates General, 1789.

AUBRY, F., a member of the Fr. Conven. and the Committee of Public Safety, died in England 1802.

AUBUSSON, J. D', a troubadour, 13th cent.

AUBUSSON, Peter D', a soldier of the church, distinguished against the Turks, 15th century.

AUCHMUTZ, Sir Sam., an Eng. gen., d. 1822.

AUCKLAND, Wm. Eden, Lord, a diplomatist and ambassador, 1744-1814.

AUDE, Joseph, a dramatist, last century.

AUDEBERT, G., a Latin poet, died 1678.

AUDEBERT, J. B., an engraver, distinguished in subjects of natural history, 1739-1800.

AUDEFROI, a poet of the 12th century.

AUDENAERD, R. Van, an engraver, d. 1743.

AUDIFREDI, an astronomer, last century.

AUDIFFREDY, Therese, disting. in Cayenne for saving Pichegru and other victims of the coup d'etat, 18th Fructidor, from starvation.

AUDIFRET, J. B., a diplomatist, died 1733.

AUDINOT, N. M., a dramatist, died 1801.

AUDLEY, Thos., chancellor of Henry VIII.

AUDONIN, king of the Lombards, 6th cent.

AUDONIN, J. Vict., entomologist, d. 1841.

AUDRA, Joseph, a French philosopher of the revolutionary school, 1710-1770.

AUDRAN, the name of a Lyonese family which has produced many distinguished artists: the most eminent are Charles, 1594-1674; Claude, 1597-1677; Claude, the Younger, 1641-1684; Gerard, 1640-1703; John, 1667-1756; and Claude, a nephew of the first of this name, 1658-1734.

AUDRAN, P. G., a Hebrew scholar, last cent.

AUDRIEN, Yves M., a French ecclesiastic and revolutionist; assassinated 1800.

AUDUBON, John James, a celebrated American ornithologist, was born in Louisiana in 1782. He died in 1851. From his earliest years he was devoted to the study of ornithology, roaming the wild woods of his native country, listening to the song of the singing birds, and picking up from his father all kinds of information about their habits, instincts, and migration. He commenced sketching his favourites while a mere boy; but a few years afterwards, when sent by his father to Paris, he enjoyed the opportunity of having lessons in painting from the celebrated David.—Intended for a commercial life, he entered into partnership with a young Frenchman, and returned to America to carry on their business there. While his partner was keeping the accounts, Audubon was shooting birds in the woods or painting them in the counting-house. At last wearied of the drudgeries of business, he shook the trammels off, and, in spite of the entreaties of his friends, betook himself to a wandering life in the forest. Sleeping by night at the foot of a tree, subsisting on the game which title of Augustus, the name by which he is now best known. Having lost his father at the age of four years, he went to reside with his grandmother, Julia, who watched over his feeble boyhood with the most assiduous care. From his early years he showed a great capacity, and gave evidence of that prudence and foresight which characterized his subsequent career. On the death of his grandmother, in his twelfth year, he pronounced her funeral oration; and returned to the house of his mother, who, along with her husband, L. Marcius Philippus, henceforth superintended his education. At the age of sixteen he assumed the toga virilis, the symbol of legal maturity; and in the same year was made a member of the College of Pontiffs. The dictator, who had always showed great attention to his youthful relative, now took a more active part in training him for public life, and manifested his affection by the honours which he bestowed on himself, and on the family to which he belonged. Augustus seems to have been present in his camp at the battle of Munda, B.C. 45; and it was here that the dictator made him his heir, and adopted him into the family of the Cæsars. Soon after their return to Rome Augustus was sent to Apollonia in Epirus, for the purpose of advancing his military education, previous to accompanying the dictator in the expedition which he meditated against the Parthians; and it was while here that he was called upon to commence a contest the most arduous perhaps that was ever undertaken by a youth of eighteen. On the Ides (15th) of March, B.C. 44., the dictator was assassinated in the senate house; and Augustus, on receiving the news, set out for Italy with a few attendants. As the adopted son of the dictator, he now assumed the name of Cæsar; and, encouraged by the support of the veteran soldiers, proclaimed his resolution to avenge the death of his father; in other words, to assert his claim to the sovereignty. Appearing before the prætor, he formally accepted the dangerous inheritance of the dictator's name and property; and in the complicated struggle which ensued, played his part with an art which baffled the prudence of the oldest statesmen of Rome. The contending parties first met under the walls of Mutina, when Antony was defeated, and forced to take refuge on the other side of the Alps. In B.C. 43 Augustus was raised to the consulship, notwithstanding the strenuous opposition of the aristocracy; and, finding that his position now rendered a reconciliation with Antony desirable, proceeded to Cisalpine Gaul; and here the celebrated interview took place between Antony, Lepidus, and himself, which resulted in the formation of the second triumvirate—a union which was cemented by the blood of many of the noblest citizens of Rome. About the close of B.C. 42 the decisive battle of Philippi was fought, which completely broke up the party of the senate. During the next nine years Augustus relieved himself of all his formidable opponents, with the exception of Antony, with whom he had long foreseen that the final contest lay. The last struggle took place at Actium, on the 2d of September, B.C. 31, when Antony was totally defeated, and Augustus placed in the undoubted supremacy of the Roman empire. After settling affairs in the East he returned to Rome, B.C. 29, and his arrival was celebrated by three triumphs on three successive days. In B.C. 27 he affected to propose to the senate to restore the old republican form of government; but at the request of his friends he consented to retain the administration of affairs for ten years; and soon after was invested with the highest military and civil authority, both in the city and throughout the provinces. The same pretended resignation and resumption of power was repeated at intervals till the end of his life. The great events of the period of Augustus belong to the history of Rome, and cannot even be referred to here. After a reign of almost uninterrupted prosperity, he died at Nola, on the 19th of August, 14, and was succeeded by his stepson, Tiberius Claudius Nero. Augustus was a man of middle stature, but well made; and the expression of his handsome face was that of unvarying tranquillity. Though naturally of a feeble constitution, he attained to a great age by a strict observance of temperance in eating and drinking. His early education had embued him with a taste for literature, which he continued to cultivate throughout his long life; and his liberal patronage of learned men, especially in the persons of Virgil and Horace, has procured the name of the Augustan age for the brilliant period in which he lived. [G.F.]

[Tomb of Augustus.]

AUGUSTUS I., elector of Saxony, 1553-1586.

AUGUSTUS II., born 1670; elector, 1694; king of Poland, 1697; deposed by Charles XII., 1704; reinstated, 1709; died 1733.

AUGUSTUS III., his son and succes., d. 1763.

AUGUSTUS FRED., d. of Sussex, 1773-1843.

AULISIO, DOMINIC, a jurist, 1639-1717.

AULNAGE, F. H. S., a Sp. wr., 1739-1830.

AULUS GELLIUS, a cel. Latin scholar, author of the 'Attic Nights:' lived 2d century.

AUMALE, CLAUDE, count of, created duke of Guise by Francis I., died 1550.

AUNGERVILLE, R., tutor of Edward III., afterwards lord chancellor, &c., died 1345.

AUNOY, COUNTESS OF, a French wr., d. 1705.

AURELIAN, LUCIUS DOMITIUS, b. 212, emp. of Rome 270, conq. of Palmyra 274, assassin. 275.

AURELIO, LOUIS, an historian, died 1637.

as the apostle of which, at the critical period when the power of Napoleon Buonaparte was just rising, he displayed a singular inflexibility of purpose and good faith. Before the appearance of the 'Tribune,' he had published a work entitled the 'Life and Crimes of Carrier,' which is considered the most impartial account of that inhuman monster. In his Journal, Babeuf took the surname of 'Caius Gracchus,' and it is to his denunciations of all terrorism, that we owe the well-known apellation of the system which he denounced. He was arrested in the month of May, 1796, and did not hesitate to make a daring avowal of his ambitious hopes as the chief of a great party. He endeavoured to escape the ignominy of the guillotine by stabbing himself several times with a poignard, secretly conveyed to him by his son, but was dragged bleeding to the scaffold twenty-four hours afterwards, with the instrument of death still rankling in the wound. His object, beyond all doubt, was to overthrow the present constitution of society, and this, perhaps, with the fallacy of his principles, is the worst that can be alleged against him. [E.R.]

BABIN, F., a French casuist, died 1734.

BABINGTON, Anth., a catholic accused of conspiring to place the unfortunate Mary Stuart on the throne of England; executed 1586.

BABINGTON, G., a learned bishop, 17th cent.

BABINGTON, Dr. W., an English physician and mineralogist, 1757-1833.

BABO, J. M., a German dramatist, 1756-1822.

BABOUR, Mahomed, grandson, of Tamerlane, proclaimed sovereign of Tartary 1483; conqueror of Delhi 1525; and founder of the dynasty which reigned in Hindostan till the 19th cent., d. 1530.

BABRIAS, a Greek poet, long known as Gabrias, through an error of the copyist.

BABUER, Theod., a painter, 17th century.

BABYLAS, St., a martyr of the 3d century.

BACAI, Ib. ben Omar, a wr. of biog., 15th c.

BACCAINI, B., a learned writer, died 1721.

BACCALAR Y SANNA, Vincent, a commander and author of memoirs, died 1726.

BACCHANELLI, J., an Italian physic., 16th c.

BACCHIDÆ, a dynasty of Corinth.

BACCHIDES, governor of Mesopotamia, and commissioner of Demetrius, king of Syria, in the time of Judas Maccabæus.

BACCHIUS, a Greek writer on music.

BACCHUS. See Bocchus.

BACCHYLIDES, a Greek lyric, 450 B.C.

BACCIO, And., an Ital. phy. and au., 16th ct.

BACCIO, F. B., an Italian painter, died 1517.

BACCIOCCHI, Maria Anne Eliza Buonaparte, princess of, was the sister of Napoleon, born 1777; married to M. Bacciocchi 1797; crowned with her husband, princess of Lucca and Piombino 1805; fell with Buonaparte 1814, d. 1820.

BACELLAR, A. B., a Port. historian, d. 1663.

BACH, J. A., a jurist, 1721-1759.

BACH, Johann Sebastian, one of the most eminent masters of musical science, was born at Eisenach in Upper Saxony, on the 21st of March, 1685. The ancestor of the remarkable family, from which sprung the subject of the following memoir, was Veit Bach, a native of Presburg in Hungary, which city he was forced to leave during the religious struggles of the 16th century. He ultimately settled at Vechmar in Saxe Gotha, where he resumed his trade of miller and baker, and amused his leisure hours by practising on the guitar. He imparted a taste for music to his sons, and they again to their families, most of whom adopted music as a profession, until they filled all the offices of musicians, organists, and chanters, in their native province. The greatest, however, of the name, and one of the greatest of his age, was John Sebastian, upon whom all writers on music, as well in England as in Germany, have bestowed the most unbounded laudations. Among many others who have left their written opinions of the excellence of this master, it is only necessary to mention the names of Forkel, his biographer, Marpurg, Handel, Matheson, Reichardt, Beethoven, Von Reaumar, Mendelssohn, and Friedeman. In 1695 the father of John Sebastian Bach died, and he was left to the care of an elder brother, who does not seem to have possessed that kindly and affectionate nature which, like music, was hereditary in the family. This brother, instead of assisting him in his early studies, did all he could to hinder him from progressing as rapidly as he otherwise would have done. He even destroyed a collection of studies which the young Sebastian, being denied candles, had copied by moonlight. After the death of this brother, Sebastian at a very early period of his life commenced his professional career as a treble singer in the choir of St. Michael's school at Luneburg. In 1703, for reasons not now known, he quitted Luneburg and went to Weimar, where he was appointed court musician, and in 1708 court organist, and director of the concerts to the duke. It was not long after this that he received an invitation to visit Dresden, where Marchand, a celebrated French organist, then held office. A musical contest between this professor and Bach was arranged to take place, but the Frenchman left Dresden through fear of the German artist, whose fame had preceded him. On his return to Weimar, Prince Leopold of Anhalt-Cothen gave him the situation of chapel master, and in 1723 he accepted the office of director of music at Leipzig, which appointment he held till his death. On one occasion he was invited by Frederick the Great to visit Potsdam, where he was most honourably entertained, and was received with the most marked condescension by that monarch, for whom he composed his world-renowned fugue, under the title of 'The Musical Offering.' This was Bach's last journey. Constant study, frequently for days and nights together, first weakened, then deprived him of his sight. He died of apoplexy on the 30th of July, 1750. Bach composed a great number of works in almost every class of music, and all excellent; but it would occupy too much space to enumerate them here. He was great as a contrapuntist beyond all who went before him, and was no more than equalled by the greatest of his contemporaries. His 'Passionsmusik' and 'Chorales,' or psalm tunes, have always been held in the highest estimation of all his vocal compositions. The first time that any portion of Bach's vocal music was publicly performed in Great Britain was at the London Institution, at the course of lectures delivered by Dr. Gauntlett in the spring of 1837. In the 'German Musical Gazette' for 1823, there one of the leading tasks delegated to humanity, which cannot be completed so long as the condition of humanity remains a progressive one. The 'Instauratio Magna,' has six main parts:—First, Bacon felt it needful to challenge anew for inquiry the respect and dignity that belong to it, to detect the vices of the philosophy prevailing at his time, and to point out the deficiencies requiring to be filled up. Such is the aim of the treatise 'De Augmentis.' Secondly, the Remedy had to be discovered; the only certain cure for the evils signalized. This cure is the use of the true Method, in the adoption of observation and experiment instead of hypothesis, as instruments for the discovery of fact, and in the substitution in such inquiries, of induction for deduction or syllogistic reasoning. The principles and processes of the new method are elaborately exposed in the 'Novum Organum.' The third and fourth parts of the 'Instauratio' were planned as an exemplification or instruction in the use of the new Organon; the former, viz., the 'Historia Naturalis et Experimentalis,' being dedicated to the collecting, by aid of observation and experiment, of the greatest possible mass of facts; and the latter, the Scala Intellectus, to exemplification of discovery by induction, of general laws from these facts, and of the application of these general laws by the inverse process of deduction, to particular cases comprehended within them. To finish this memorable undertaking, it yet remained that the results of the method, or the truths of philosophy be collected and arranged; but rightly seeing that the discovery of these was not a task he had to accomplish, but a legacy he had to bequeath, Bacon was satisfied with drawing up other two books, the first, or the fifth of his plan, named by him 'Anticipations,' and the second or sixth, 'Philosophia Secunda Sive Activa,' having reference to applications—to action, or practice.—Such the grandeur of the intellectual Globe which the mind of this Englishman endeavoured to span!—It is in the second division of his great work that Bacon's more positive achievements are unfolded. And it must not be conceived that he is here satisfied with a set of general precepts, or with general statements concerning the value and superiority of his Organon. The new Method of Inquiry, on the other hand, is examined under every light, and its right practice exposed in detail. In the first place, Bacon passes under review all the procedures of observation and every kind of experiment, showing with what special precaution facts must be sought for, and how we may estimate the value of the various sorts of facts bearing on any inquiry. With corresponding pains, and still greater success, he unfolds in the second book of the Organon in what way Induction enables one to detect from the collected facts, the true cause, or the true law of a phenomenon. Having collected by observation all the facts which precede or follow the phenomenon, it is necessary to exclude those in whose absence the phenomenon can be produced—to notice and separate those others in whose presence it always is produced; and lastly, to select from among the latter class, such facts as vary in intensity when the phenomenon varies, i.e., which increase or diminish in proportion to an increase or decrease of intensity in the phenomenon. In this way, according to Lord Bacon, the true cause is found; and an application to this cause of a similar process, will evolve its cause, until in the end we reach supreme causes and universal laws.—In appreciation of these important and memorable labours, we have room for only three brief remarks. First, it cannot well be denied that in certain respects Lord Bacon too much decried, or perhaps too little understood the syllogism; and that its peculiar meaning and value, as the only legitimate instrument in Deduction, ought to have preserved it and Aristotle, its immortal author, from the unjust disparagement which one regrets to find upheld by the authority of so great a name. Nevertheless, this injustice to the Greeks, arising partly from defect of critical acquaintance with them, but more from his well-grounded revolt against the deplorable methods sustained in physical inquiry under shelter of their authority, in nowise impairs the edifice Bacon himself reared, or attaches to it any incompleteness. Secondly, it is not pretended, with some exclusive and enthusiastic partizans, that previous to the writings of our countryman, no philosopher had sought truths by Induction, or based his inquiries on observation and experiment. It is certainly far from being true that Galileo, for instance, in conducting his immortal researches, pursued an erroneous course, or that although he had studied the 'Novum Organum,' his career of discovery would have been materially different; what is true is this—no one before Bacon had seen the full importance of the experimental and inductive method, had discovered the extent of the sphere of which it is the only legitimate occupant, had explored its principles, and from principles deduced rules for it as an Art. And it is equally true, that every inquiry of value, undertaken since the publication of his inductive code, has been conducted, with or without the consciousness of the Inquirer, according to laws laid down in that code. Lastly, since the publication of the inductive code, its laws have been enlarged and greatly particularized, so that—be it said, with perfect respect to the Organon—it is not to our countryman's writings alone that we would point now for full instruction in his own philosophy. The exigencies of the modern sciences, as well of observation as of experiment, have obliged us to refine his processes and multiply his precautions. The doctrine of probabilities enables us to discern the relative values of different classes of facts, with a precision Bacon never dreamt of; and in the writings of modern authors—let us say of Mr. Mill—the methods of induction are unfolded with a superior comprehensiveness and effect. But although the advance of the physical sciences, caused by the impulse Lord Bacon communicated, has exacted for them processes more complete and perfect than his; when, as to the moral sciences—as to inquiry, political, ethical, and religious—shall the time arrive in which inquirers shall practically recognize the validity even of the most general precepts in the Organon? The ultimate application of these precepts is sure; but humanity has not yet acquired the strength to accomplish it.—II. The length to which our analysis of Bacon's philosophy has extended, prevents our dwelling much on the character of the Man. Nevertheless, one earnest, though lent chemist, and in all probability discovered gunpowder; nevertheless, it is on his clear discernment of true Method that his fame must rest. During his unswerving pursuit of knowledge he encountered the usual oppositions, and a share also of encouragement. Pope Clement IV. aided and cheered him; but after the death of this protector the smothered jealousy and dislike of the Franciscans broke forth,—the mean and the weak are of course ever the readiest and fiercest persecutors. It is at once unjust and unwise to consider errors and crimes of this sort as exclusive attributes of the Romish church; their root, on the contrary, lies deep in the heart of man. The domain of physical inquiry is now wholly safe from the disorders of intolerance; but there are large departments of knowledge within which Reason is still not free, where authority abides on its throne, and popular prejudice stores up its thunderbolts. [J.P.N.]

[Roger Bacon's Study at Oxford.]

BACON, or BACONTHORP, JOHN, a learned monk of the 14th century, died 1346.

BACOUE, LEONARD, a Latin poet, d. 1694.

BACQUERRE, B., a medical writer, 17th ct.

BACQUET, a French lawyer, died 1597.

BACZKO, a Polish chronicler, 13th century.

BADAJOZ, JUAN DE, a Spanish architect, middle of the 16th century.

BADCOCK, S., a polemical wr., 1747-1788.

BADEN, one of the sovereign families of Germany, distinguished by many eminent statesmen and military leaders since the 11th century. CHARLES FREDERICK, born 1728, was defeated several times by Moreau, and concluded a treaty of peace with the French republic 1796; adhered to the Confederation of the Rhine 1805, and received the title of Grand Duke; died 1811.

BADEN, JAMES, a critical writer and lexicographer of Denmark, 1735-1805.

BADEN, RICHARD DE, the original founder of Clare Hall, Cambridge, 1326.

BADENS, FR., a Dutch painter, died 1603.

BADESSA, PAUL, an Italian poet, 16th cent.

BADI-EL-ZEMAM, the last descendant of Tamerlane who reigned in Khorassan; died 1517.

BADIA, DOMINGO, a political agent and traveller of Spain, 1766-1824.

BADIALI, ALEX., an Italian etcher, 17th ct.

BADILE, ANT., an Italian painter, 1480-1560.

BADILY, a naval officer, time of Cromwell.

BADUEL, CL., a protestant theologian, d. 1561.

BAELI, F., a Sicilian historian, 17th century.

BAENGIUS, P., a Swedish historian, 17th ct.

BAERSIUS, H., a mathematician, 16th cent.

BAERSTRAT, a Dutch painter, died 1687.

BAFFIN, WILLIAM, a skilful English navigator of the 17th century, deserving honourable mention as the first who applied observations of the heavenly bodies for the determination of the longitude at sea. Rules for the practice of the method which he employed are given in his account of the fourth voyage of James Hall, whom he accompanied to the coast of Greenland in 1612, probably in the capacity of pilot. Nothing is known of his history prior to this date. In 1613 he commanded a whaling ship in the sea of Spitzbergen. In 1615-1616 he went as mate with Robert Bylot, on two voyages, whose object was the discovery of a N.W. passage. In the second of these, the extensive bay named after him (which should now be termed a sea, since it is known to open northwards), was discovered, and in great part traced. He wrote an account of these voyages also. Many of his statements are important, and highly suggestive. He calculated the horizontal or maximum refraction at 26′; the present estimate is 32′ or 33′. In 1618 we find him mate of a merchant vessel in the Arabian sea. In 1621 he was killed at the siege of Kismis, a fort near Ormuz, while engaged in an English expedition co-operating with the Persians, in endeavouring to drive the Portuguese out of the Persian Gulf. [J.B.]

BAFFO, G., a Venetian poet, died 1768.

BAFFO, a Venetian lady who was taken captive, and becoming his favourite sultana, enjoyed great authority under Amurath III.

BAF-KARKAH, an Arabian mathematician.

BAGDEDIN, MAHOMED, a mathemat., 10th c.

BAGE, ROBERT, a novelist, 1728-1801.

BAGFORD, J., an antiquarian, died 1716.

BAGGER, J., a learned Danish prel., 1646-1693.

BAGGESEN, JENS, a Danish poet, 1764-1806.

BAGLIONE, CAESAR, a fresco painter, 17th ct.

BAGLIONE, G., a fresco painter, died 1644.

BAGLIONI, J. P., usurper of Perugia, put to death by Leo X., 1520.

BAGLIVI, G., a medical writer, 1667-1706.

BAGNATI, an ascetic writer, 1651-1727.

BAGNIOLI, J. C., an Italian poet, died 1660.

BAGOAS, the murderer of Artaxerxes Ochus, king of Persia, put to death B.C. 356.

BAGOPHANES, gov. of Babylon, time of Alex.

BAGOT, LEWIS, bishop of Bristol, &c., author of Sermons on the Prophecies, 1740-1802.

BAGRATION, K. A., a Russian commander, killed at Moscow, 1812.

BAGSHAW, CHR., an English catholic, and ecclesiastical historian, died at Paris 1626.

BAGSHAW, ED., a political writer and partizan of the Royalists, died 1662.

BAGSHAW, ED., son of the preceding, assistant of Dr. Busby, died 1671.

BAGSHAW, H., another son of Edward, author of Sermons, &c., died 1709.

BAGSHAW, WM., a religious writer, d. 1763.

BAHA-ED-DOULAH, son of Adad-el-Doulah, shah of Persia 989, died 1012.

BAHALI, an Arabian grammarian, died 842.

BAHIER, J., a French poet, died 1707.

BAKER, Tho., an antiquarian, 1656-1740.
BAKER, Sir Richard, author of English Chronicles, 1568-1645.
BAKEWELL, Robt., a grazier, died 1795.
BAKHTISHWA, the name of several physicians at the court of Bagdad.
BAKI, an Ottoman lyric, died 1600.
BAKKER, P. H., a Dutch poet, died 1801.
BALAAM, a prophet or diviner, 14th cent. B.C.
BALADAN, a king of ancient Babylon.
BALAKLEI, a Tartar prince, 13th century.
BALAMIO, Ferd., a physician, 16th century.
BALASSI, Mario, a painter, 1604-1667.
BALBI, Adr., a geographer, 1784-1848.
BALBINUS, D. C., a Roman consul, elected emperor, and slain 238.
BALBINUS, A. B., an historian, 1611-1689.
BALBIS, J. B., a botanist, died 1831.
BALBO, Lodovico, a composer, 16th century.
BALBOA, Vasco Nunez De, a Portuguese discoverer, put to death 1517.
BALBUENA, Bernardo De, a poet, d. 1627.
BALBUS, Lucius Cornelius, a Spaniard, made consul of Rome, B.C. 40.
BALBUS, a philologist, 15th century.
BALCANQUAL, Walter, chaplain to James I., afterwards dean of Rochester, and bishop of Durham, died 1642.
BALCHEN, J., an admiral, lost 1744.
BALDERIC, an annalist, 12th century.
BALDI, Bern., an Italian poet, died 1617.
BALDI, Camillo, an Aristotelian, died 1634.
BALDI, Jas., a German poet, died 1668.
BALDI, Laz., an Italian painter, died 1703.
BALDI DE UBALDIS, a jurist, died 1400.
BALDINGER, E. G., a medical writer, d. 1804.
BALDINI, Baccio, a physician, died 1585.
BALDINI, J. F., an Italian savant, died 1765.
BALDINUCCI, Ph., an artist and historian of Florence, 1634-1696.
BALDOCK, Ralph De, bp. of London, d. 1307.
BALDOCK, Robert De, chancellor of England in the reign of Edward II.
BALDWIN, an archbishop of Canterbury, who went to Palestine with Richard I.
BALDWIN, the name of several counts of Flanders. The first of this name, elevated from the office of grand forester, 837; d. 877. The second succeeded 888, d. 918. The third began his reign 958. The fourth succeeded 989, d. 1034. The fifth succeeded 1034, and was regent of France during the minority of Philip I., d. 1067. The sixth succeeded 1067, d. 1070. The seventh reigned for a short time in 1071. The eighth from 1111 to 1119. The ninth succeeded 1191, and d. 1195.
BALDWIN I., first Latin emperor of Constantinople, was a son of the last named; joined the crusaders 1200; elected emperor 1204; taken prisoner by the king of the Bulgarians, and probably died before 1206.
BALDWIN II., last Latin emperor of Constantinople, succeeded 1228; dethroned by Michel Palæologus 1261, died 1273.
BALDWIN I., king of Jerusalem, succeeded his brother Godfrey Bouillon 1100; conquered the most important cities on the sea coast of Palestine from 1101 to 1109, died 1118.
BALDWIN II. succeeded Baldwin I., 1118; taken prisoner 1124; ransomed 1126; died 1131.
BALDWIN III., king 1144; married into the family of Commenus 1158; died 1162.
BALDWIN IV., king 1173; died 1185.
BALDWIN V. succeeded Baldwin IV. 1185; and a few months afterwards died of poison. In 1187, Jerusalem was captured by Saladin.
BALDWIN D' ANESNES, son of Margaret, countess of Flanders and Hainalt, known to literature as the historian of his house, 13th century.
BALDWIN, Abr., an American senator, born 1754, elected 1799, died 1807.
BALDWIN, Ben., an archæologist, 16th cent.
BALDWIN, Fr., a jurist, 16th century.
BALDWIN, J., a French savant, died 1650.
BALDWIN, Theod., a monk, died 1191.
BALDWIN, Sir T., a miscellaneous wr., 17th c.
BALDWIN, Thos., a baptist, died 1828.
BALDWIN, William, a moralist, died 1564.
BALE, John, a zealous reformer and controversialist, 1495-1563.
BALE, Robert, an annalist, died 1503.
BALECHOU, N., an engraver, died 1765.
BALEG, an Egyptian chief, 8th century.
BALEN, Heindrich Van, an historical and landscape painter, 1560-1632.
BALES, Peter, a writing master, died 1600.
BALESDENS, J., an advocate, died 1675.
BALESTRA, Anth., a painter, died 1720.
BALFOUR, Alex., a novelist, died 1829.
BALFOUR, Sir And., a botanist, died 1694.
BALGUY, John, a theologian, died 1748.
BALGUY, Tho., son of John, 1716-1795.
BALIN, J., a priest and poet, 16th century.
BALIOL, Sir Alex., appointed chamberlain of Scotland by Edward I., 1291.
BALIOL, Henry De, a Scotch nobleman who, in 1241, accompanied Henry III. of England to Gascony, died 1246.
BALIOL, Sir John De, founder of a college at Oxford, and guard. of Alex. III. of Scot., d. 1269.
BALIOL, John De, son of the preceding, raised to the throne of Scotland under the protection of Edward I., 1291; in counter-treaty with France 1294; prisoner of Edward 1296-1299; d. 1314.
BALIOL, Edw., son of the preceding, invaded Scotland and was crowned at Scone 1332; after many reverses of fortune he finally resigned his crown to Edward III. 1355; died 1363.
BALL, John, a preacher of reform, disting. in the Kent insurrection, executed 1381.
BALL, John, a puritan theologian, 1585-1640.
BALLABENE, Gr., a composer, died 1803.
BALLANDEN, J., a miscellaneous wr., d. 1550.
BALLANTYNE, James, the cel. printer of the works of Scott, ed. of the Kelso Mail, &c., d. 1833.
BALLANTYNE, John, brother of James, and confidant of Sir W. Scott, died 1821.
BALLARD, Geo., a Saxon scholar, died 1755.
BALLARD, S. G., a naval officer, died 1829.
BALLARD, Volante Vashon, a fellow-voyager with Vancouver, born 1774; captain in the R.N. 1807; rear-admiral 1825; died 1832.
BALLENDEN, J., a Scotch historian, d. 1550.
BALLERINI, Peter and Jerome, two brothers of Verona, distinguished as men of learning, and joint editors of theological and classical works; the first, 1698-1764; the last, 1702-1780.
BALLESTEROS, Fr., a Spanish offic., d. 1833.
BALLET, Fr., a religious writer, 1702-1762.

Engraved by J. Brown.

SIR JOSEPH BANKS.

been indebted to his generous liberality, and ten different collections of objects of natural history made for the Garden of Plants, which had fallen into the hands of our cruisers, and brought to England, were saved by his interference, and in several instances, at his own expense, safely transmitted to Paris. His published memoirs are few in number, and not of any great importance, yet his name remains intimately connected with the history of science. He presided for 41 years over the Royal Society; and at his death he bequeathed his herbarium and splendid library of books of natural history to the British Museum, where they remain monuments of his patriotism, talent, and assiduity. [W.B.]

BANNAKER, Benj., a negro slave, disting. as a mathematician and astronomer, died 1807.

BANNIER, John, field-marshal of Sweden under Gustavus Adolphus, 1601-1641.

BANNISTER, John, the celebrated comedian and vocalist, born 1760; engaged at Drury Lane, 1779; retired 1815; died 1836.

BANQUO, a Scotch Thane, 11th century.

BANTI, Signora, a singer, died 1806.

BAODAN, an Irish king, 6th century.

BAPTIST, a Dutch painter, died 1691.

BAPTISTA, Fr., a curious writer, 17th cent.

BAPTISTE, J., a Flemish painter, 1635-1699.

BAPTISTE, J. G., a painter of Antwerp, employed by Sir Peter Lely, died 1691.

BAPTISTIN, J. B. S., a composer, died 1716.

BAR, N. De, a French painter, 17th century.

BARAGUAY-D' HILLIERS, L., a French general, distinguished in the Italian and peninsular campaigns, 1784-1812.

BARAHONA, Louis, a Spanish poet, 16th ct.

BARANZANO, R., a mathematical philosopher, correspondent of Bacon, 1590-1622.

BARATIER, J. P., dist. for his early knowledge of many languages, also as a critic, 1721-1740.

BARBA, A. A., a mineralogist, 17th century.

BARBADILLO, A. J. De, a dramatist, 17th c.

BARBANEGRE, J., a French general, d. 1830.

BARBARELLI. See Giorgione.

BARBARIGO, Augustin, doge of Venice, 1486 to 1501. Nicholas, ambassador from Venice to Constantinople, died 1579. Gregory, a cardinal and bishop of Padua, 1625-1697. John Francis, twice ambassador to Louis XIV.; afterwards cardinal and bp. of Padua, 1658-1730.

BARBARINO, Francis, a poet, 1264-1348.

BARBARO, Francis, a noble Venetian, distinguished as a commander and scholar, 1398-1454. Ermolao, a classical scholar, d. 1470. Ermolao the younger, an ambassador and classical scholar, 1454-1493. Daniel, a classical scholar and rhetorician, ambassador to England, and patriarch of Aquilea, 1513-1570.

BARBAROSSA, Aroush, a daring corsair, son of a Greek renegade, who dethroned the Arab sheik, and made himself dey of Algiers, 1516; defeated and slain by the troops of Charles V., 1518.

BARBAROSSA, Khair Eddyn, brother and successor of Aroush, the greatest sea captain of his age; died 1546.

BARBAROSSA. See Frederick.

BARBAROUX, C. J. Ma., member of the Fr. convention, and one of the Girondin leaders, born 1767, executed 1794.

BARBATELLI, an Italian painter, died 1612.

BARBAULD, Anne Lætitia, chiefly celebrated for her 'Prose Hymns,' and 'Early Lessons' for children, was the daughter of the Rev. John Aikin, a dissenting minister resident in Leicestershire, where she was born on the 20th of June, 1743. While a child she was remarkable for quickness of intellect, no less than for the natural goodness of her disposition; and in later years for the elegance of her taste, the extent of her acquirements, and her skill in classical literature. For these advantages Miss Aikin was greatly indebted to the affectionate zeal with which her father cultivated her talents, and in some measure to the literary circle into which he was able to introduce her on removing to Warrington, where he took charge of the celebrated school in 1758. After fifteen years of quiet seclusion, passed in these academic shades, Miss Aikin was induced to publish a volume of miscellaneous poems, which appeared therefore in 1773, and met with the most flattering success. In the spring of the following year she became the wife of the Rev. Rochemond Barbauld, with whom she opened a school in the village of Palsgrave, Suffolk; and took an active and influential part in its management as teacher of composition, and the graceful exercises of reading and speaking. Here they continued to reside for the next eleven years, and it is to this period that we are indebted for the works first alluded to, and for some devotional compositions. Mr. and Mrs. Barbauld then visited the continent for a short time, and on their return home, the former became pastor of a small congregation at Hampstead, where the subject of our notice resumed her pen; first in the interest of the dissenters on the repeal of the Test and Corporation Acts, and next in a poetical address to Mr. Wilberforce, suggested by the rejection of the slave bill. These spirited appeals were followed by some religious essays, the most remarkable of which is a singular discourse for the Fast-day of 1793, entitled 'The Sins of the Government the Sins of the Nation.' In 1802 Mr. Barbauld became minister of a congregation at Newington Green, where he died in 1808, and in this neighbourhood his widow resided till her death in 1825, enjoying the company of her brother, and literary friend, Dr. Aikin. The simplicity of Mrs. Barbauld's life and manners, the refinement of her imagination, and the purity of her soul, are well represented in the works which have rendered her name a household word in England, and to which the cause of education is so much indebted. The versatility of her talents is shown in the critical and biographical notices with which she amused herself in the early period of her residence at Stoke Newington, which include a selection of papers from the 'Spectator,' and similar classics, published in 1804, and an edition of the 'British Novelists' in 1810. Her last publication was a remarkable poem, named from the year preceding its appearance, 'Eighteen Hundred and Eleven.' Her collected works were published soon after her death, with a memoir by her niece, Miss Lucy Aikin; and the day is probably far off when her 'Early Lessons' will be superseded by anything superior of the same class. [E.R.]

BARBAULT, J., an architect, last century.

BARBAZAN, Step., a French savant, d. 1770.

BAREBONE, PRAISE GOD, a fanatic from whom the Barebone's Parliament derived its name, 1653.

BARENT, DIETRICH, a Dutch pain., 1534-1582.

BARENTIN, C. L. F. DE, a French politician, noted for his opposition to Necker, 1738-1819.

BARENTZ, WILLIAM, a skilful Dutch pilot, sent out by the United Provinces on three voyages, between the years 1594 and 1597, in search of a N.E. passage to China. He failed in the object, but made some important additions to geography. Bear, or Cherry island, and Spitzbergen were discovered by him; the latter, in 80°, was found to have good herbage and herds of deer, while Nova Zembla, in 70°, was a barren waste. Suddenly enclosed by ice on the coast of Nova Zembla, on 26th August, 1596, Barentz was obliged to remain on this inhospitable shore till the following summer, and was thus the first navigator who wintered in the Arctic regions. He left the island on the 14th June, with a crew of fifteen persons, in two small boats, his ship being disabled. He died from fatigue on the 20th; but the adventurous survivors held on their perilous voyage—the most extraordinary on record—and traversing a stormy ocean filled with floating ice, exposed to the extreme of cold, famine, and sickness, and to frequent attacks from bears borne along upon the ice islands, or pursuing them through the water, they reached in six weeks the port of Kola, in North Lapland, a distance of 1600 miles. Here they found three ships from their own country. [J.B.]

BARERE. See BARRERE.

BARETTI, JO., an Italian author, 1716-1789.

BARGRAVE, ISAAC, chaplain to James I., afterwards dean of Canterbury, died 1642.

BARHAM, REV. RICH. HARRIS, the disting. humourist known as Thomas Ingoldsby, 1789-1845.

BARISON, a nobleman of Pisa, created k. of Sardinia by Frederick Barbarossa, d. in prison 1154.

BARKER, E. H., distinguished as a critic and classical reviewer, 1788-1839.

BARKER, G., F.R.S., distinguished as one of the original promoters of railways, died 1845.

BARKER, G. P., an American politic., d. 1848.

BARKER, J., a medical writer, 17th century.

BARKER, M. H., a fugitive writer, known in magazine literature as the Old Sailor, died 1846.

BARKER, ROBERT, a portrait painter, inventor of the panorama, died 1806.

BARKER, SAM., a philologist, died 1760.

BARKER, THOMAS, a poet, 1721-1808.

BARKHAM. See BARCHAM.

BARKOK, a sultan of Egypt, 14th century.

BARKSDALE, CL., a miscellan. wr., 17th ct.

BARLAAM, a theologian, 14th century.

BARLÆUS, a Latin poet, died 1648.

BARLAUD, A., a Dutch critic, died 1542.

BARLETTA, GABRIEL, a preacher, 11th cent.

BARLOW, FRANCIS, an artist, died 1702.

BARLOW, JOEL, a political writer, deputy from the U. S. to the French convention, and ambassador to Napoleon when he died, 1811.

BARLOW, THOMAS, bishop of Lincoln, a casuist, and controversial writer, 1607-1691.

BARLOWE, W., bp. of Bath and Wells, d. 1658.

BARLOWE, W., son of the bishop, a writer on natural philosophy, died 1625.

BARMEK, the founder of the illustrious family called the Barmecides, whose various talents contributed to the glory of Haroun-al-Raschid and his predecessors, and who were massacred, 802.

BARNABAS, ST., the fellow-labourer of Paul, supposed to have been stoned to death about 60.

BARNARD, J., D.D., a biographer, died 1683.

BARNARD, SIR JOHN, lord mayor, and M.P. for London, the latter for 40 years, 1685-1764.

BARNARD, THEODORE, a Dutch painter.

BARNAUD, NICH., an alchymist, 16th cent.

BARNAVE, A. P. J. MARIE, by profession an advocate, was born 1761, and distinguished in the parliament of Grenoble during the first ominous struggle against the despotic administration of Loménie-Brienne. Deputed to the states-general by the province of Dauphiné in 1789, his eloquence, and his almost wild enthusiasm in the popular cause, marked him out as the rival of Mirabeau, and when the latter favoured the court, as his most dreaded adversary. One of a memorable trio, his characteristic talent is well expressed in the epigram pointed at them: 'Whatsoever these three have in hand, Dupont thinks it, Barnave speaks it, Lameth does it.' His love of justice, in the abstract, was carried to a reckless extreme in his decrees, as a member of the diplomatic committee for the reorganization of the colonies, and their fatal effects led him to abandon the system, though Siéyès and Robespierre denounced his inconsistency as a treason. A member of the famous Jacobin Club, he fought a duel with the royalist Cazalès, who had denounced the patriots as 'sheer brigands,' but neither of them received any serious injury. Like many others, his enthusiasm for the revolution was saddened and cooled down as he reflected upon the disasters which had accompanied it, and his return to moderate counsels was hastened by the situation into which he was momentarily thrown by the flight of the royal family, and their arrest at Varennes. Appointed with Péthion and Latour-Maubourg to secure the king's return, Barnave rode in the carriage with the Queen and Madame Elizabeth, and touched by their distress, his conversion to the principles of a constitutional monarchy was completed. He was now denounced by the Journalists as a deserter of the popular cause, and at the close of the session returned to private life, in his native town of Grenoble, where he married the daughter of an advocate. In August, 1792, he was arrested on a charge of conspiring with the royal family, with whom it was alleged he had held treasonable correspondence ever since the arrest at Varennes, and after a confinement of five months, conducted to Paris, and condemned by the revolutionary tribunal of Tinville. The effect of his eloquence on this occasion was such as to move even his sanguinary judges, and his friend Camille Desmoulins wept on hearing his last words. Arrived at the scaffold, he raised his eyes to heaven: 'Behold, at length,' he exclaimed, 'the reward of all I have done for liberty!' He was executed in 1793, at the early age of thirty-two; and has left behind him a character remarkable indeed for indiscretion, but equally so for its honesty of purpose; and a name, as an orator, scarcely surpassed by any in the revolutionary annals. [E.R.]

BARNES, JOSHUA, a friend of the famous Dr. Richard Bentley, was a native of London, where BARRERE, P., a French naturalist, d. 1755.

BARRERE DE VIEUZAC, BERTRAND, 'The Anacreon of the Guillotine,' as Burke styled him, is one of the most sinister and conspicuous characters of the French revolution, more especially as a member of the Committee of Public Safety during the reign of terror. He was born at Tarbes in Gascony, 1755, and being educated for the bar, met with considerable success as a youthful advocate at Toulouse, besides being admitted a member of the Academy of Sciences for his literary attainments. In 1785 he married a lady of fortune, and it may here be remarked, that his private virtues have been extolled in singular contrast with his perfidious conduct in public life; to which anomaly, perhaps, his moral weakness, and the brilliant talents which made him ashamed of it, and caused him to assume the airs of a bravo without the heart of one, among his more ferocious, or to say the least, less polished colleagues, may be in some measure the key. In 1789 he was sent to Paris, as the representative of his own province in the 'Third Estate' of the 'Etats Généraux,' and took his place with the more moderate reformers. At this period he published a journal entitled 'Le Point du Jour,' and acquired a high degree of popularity by his eloquence both as editor and representative. At first loyal to the king, he was gradually carried away by the rising tide of republicanism, and we find him, on the 17th June, in the ranks of those who provoked the revolution by which the commons of the third estate constituted themselves a national assembly. When this body at length separated, Barrère was appointed a judge in the High Court of Appeal, and in 1792 deputed to the National Convention for the department of the Hautes Pyrénées; acting as president, in fact, when the king was interrogated, whose situation in bygone times had excited his most compassionate feelings. From this time he became the mouthpiece of the Jacobins, and voted for the death of the king with the observation, so often since repeated, 'L'arbre de la liberté ne croît qu' arrosé par le sang des tyrans,' (the tree of liberty only grows when watered by the blood of tyrants.) On the 1st of April, 1793, he was elected on the Committee of Public Safety, and constantly acted as the reporter of its projects to the convention, in which employment his ingenious plausibility, and facile wit, were of essential service to those who had else stood grim and stark in the midst of their atrocious conceptions. It was Barrère who created the revolutionary army by the memorable decree,—'All France, and whatsoever it contains, of men or resources, is put under requisition;' and who gave for the motto on their banners, 'Le peuple Français debout contre les tyrans,' (The French people risen against tyrants!) It was he who denounced Danton on the one hand on a charge of too much moderation, and Hebert on the other for his anarchic doctrines; who stereotyped the scenes of greatest horror in a joke or an epigram, as when he said, —'Il n'y a que les morts qui ne reviennent pas,' (It is only the dead who do not come back again.) His fear of breaking with Robespierre made him the instrument of cruelties which he jested upon, and which he endeavoured to hide under the conceits in which he clothed them, while his heart revolted; and if the absence of all principle is rendered more conspicuous in one circumstance than another of his public career, it is in the haste with which he moved the execution of the fallen dictator without trial on the 9th Thermidor; scarcely four-and-twenty hours after he had fawned upon him. The disgusting facility of his conversion did not prevent the reaction affecting himself, more especially as he proposed the continuation of Fouquier Tinville in his office of public accuser. The result was, his trial and condemnation at the bar of the convention, the fall of which, and the political complications of the period, favoured his escape and concealment until the amnesty which followed the 18th Brumaire enabled him to return to Paris. He now presented himself to the senate as a candidate for admission into the legislative body, but Napoleon mistrusted him, and he disappeared till 1815, when he turned up as a member of the chamber of representatives during the hundred days. At the second restoration of the Bourbons, he was compelled to retire by the royal ordinance which expelled the regicides, and resided at Belgium till the revolution of 1830, when he once more returned to his country, and died 1841. He is the author of numerous political and historical works, besides the 'Point du Jour,' and an anti-British journal, entitled the 'Argus,' published under the imperial government. His own memoirs have been published by MM. Hipp, Carnot, and David, in 4 vols. 8vo. [E.R.]

BARRET, GEO., a landscape paint., 1730-1784.

BARRETT, W., a topographical wr., d 1789.

BARRINGTON, JOHN SHUTE, Viscount, a wr. on protestant theology, 1678-1734. Several of his sons also distinguished—DAINES, as a lawyer, 1727-1800; SAMUEL, as a naval officer, d. 1800; SHUTE, his sixth son, as bp. of Durham, 1734-1826.

BARROS, JOHN DE, a Portugnese his., d. 1570.

BARROW, DR. ISAAC, celebrated both as a mathematician and a divine, was born in London, in 1630. He was sent at an early age to the Charterhouse School, where, however, his quarrelsome temper, pugnacious habits, and proverbial idleness, occasioned great annoyance to his teachers, as well as deep dissatisfaction and pain to his family. On his removal from that institution to Felsted in Essex, he began to show a better disposition; for applying himself to his studies with spirit and indefatigable industry, his progress was so rapid, and his attainments in various departments of learning so high, that his master appointed him tutor to Viscount Fairfax, of Emely in Ireland, who was at this school. His father, who had early destined him to a learned profession, entered him, in 1645, a student of Trinity College, Cambridge. But his fortune having been greatly injured through his attachment to the royal cause, young Barrow would have been destitute of the means to continue the expensive style of living at that university, had it not been for the liberality of the famous Dr. Hammond, who gave him the benefit of his valuable friendship, and through whose influence he, in 1649, obtained a fellowship in the college. Having finished his literary and philosophical course, he directed his studies with a view to the practice of medicine, and made great proficiency in the subsidiary sciences of anatomy, botany, and chemistry. But,

BASILIUS, VALENTINE, a jurist, 15th cent.

BASILIUS I., emperor of the East, 866-886: the second of this name, who reunited Bulgaria to the empire, reigned 976-1025.

BASILIUS, confid. of Constantine VII., d. 961.

BASILIDES, inventor of the Abraxas, 2d ct.

BASILISCUS, emperor of the East, 475-477.

BASILOWITZ, J., first czar of Russia, d. 1584.

BASKERVILLE, JOHN, celebrated for improvements in letter-casting and print., 1706-1775.

BASKERVILLE, SIR SIMON, a phys., d. 1641.

BASNAGE, BENJ., a protestant divine, 1580-1652. ANTHONY, his son, minister at Bayeux, 1610-1691. SAMUEL, son of Anthony, author of politico-ecclesiastical annals, died 1721. HENRY, second son of Benjamin, a writer on jurisprudence, 1615-1695. JACQUES, son of Henry, the historian of the Jews, &c., 1653-1723. HENRY, brother to the last named, a journalist and hist., 1656-1710.

BASNET, EDW., an Irish priest and soldier, died in the reign of Edward VI.

BASS, GEORGE, a surgeon in the English navy, who went out to New S. Wales, seven years after the formation of that colony, along with Governor Hunter, on board a ship in which the celebrated Flinders was midshipman. Soon after reaching Port Jackson, he and Flinders fitted out, at their own expense, a small boat, eight feet long, which they called 'Tom Thumb;' and in this, with one boy for their companion, they made two surveying voyages in 1795 and 1796, along the coast southwards. Their report on the country led to the founding of new settlements. Sent out by the government in 1797, in a whale boat, with a crew of six men, and provisions for six weeks, Bass contrived to make these last eleven weeks, and performed a voyage of 600 miles. He traced a portion of the southern shores of the continent, and found that Van Diemen's Land, instead of being continuous with it, as Cook and others had asserted, was separated by a wide strait. The question was not, however, regarded as quite settled; and in 1798, on Flinders' return from Norfolk island, Bass and he were sent out in a vessel of 25 tons, with instructions to sail round Van Diemen's Land, and examine the capabilities of the coasts. Their successful voyage and favourable report soon led to further colonization. The strait received the name of its discoverer. No danger could check the ardour and daring of Bass. In 1796, he attempted to penetrate through the extraordinary rocky barrier which divides the maritime belt on the east from the interior plains, and during fifteen days encountered the greatest perils, ascending precipices by means of iron hooks fastened to his arms, and descending by ropes into the most frightful abysses. Like many previous attempts, this proved unsuccessful, and it was not till 1813 that a practicable pass was found, due west of Sydney. [J.B.]

BASSANI, G., a composer, 17th century.

BASSANO, an Italian painter, 1510-1592.

BASSANO, H. B. MARET, duke of, a political writer and statesman of France, ordered to quit England along with the ambassador Chauvelin, 1792; afterwards secretary of state and confidant of Buonaparte, as well as editor of his official organ, the Moniteur; fell with the empire, but returned from exile 1820, and was recalled to official employment by Louis Philippe; 1758-1839.

BASSET, PETER, historian of Henry V.

BASSI, LAURA, M. C., an Italian lady, made doctor of philo., and prof. at Bologna, 1711-1778.

BASSOMPIERRE, F., a Fr. marsh., 1575-1646.

BASSUET, PETER, a Fr. surgeon, 1706-1757.

BASTA, GEORGE, a military writer, 16th ct.

BASTIDE, J. F DE LA, a mis. au., 1724-1798.

BASTWICK, JOHN, a controv. wr., 1593-1650.

BATE, GEORGE, a dist. physician and medical writer, historian of the civil wars, 1593-1669.

BATE, H., a poet and journalist, last century.

BATE, JOHN, a writer on logic, 15th century.

BATECUMBE, W., a geometrician, 15th cent.

BATEMAN, W., fndr. of Trinity Hall, d. 1351.

BATES, JOAH, an em. musician, 1740-1799.

BATES, W., a religious biographer, 1625-1699.

BATHE, WM., an. of a curious philological work, master of the Irish school at Salamanca, 1564-1614.

BATHURST, ALLEN, Earl, a distinguished oppon. of Walpole in the House of Lords, 1684-1775.

BATHURST, HENRY, Earl, son of the preceding, some time lord chancellor, 1714-1794.

BATHURST, RT. REV. HENRY, bishop of Norwich, 1744-1837.

BATHURST, DR H., son of the preced., d. 1844.

BATHURST, RALPH, a Latin poet, 1620-1704.

BATHYANI, C. J., a noble Hungarian, field-marshal of Austria, born 1697, in service, 1716-1747, died 1772. See also BATTHYANYI.

BATHYLLUS, a cel. mimic, time of Augustus.

BATOMI, P. G., an Ital. painter, 1708-1787.

BATOU, KHAN, suc. of Zenghis-khan, d. 1276.

BATSCH, A. J. G. C., a naturalist, 1761-1801.

BATTELY, JOHN, an antiquarian, died 1708.

BATTEUX, CH., a French classic, 1713-1780.

BATTHYANYI, LOUIS, a Hungarian nobleman, distinguished for his connection with the Austrian conflicts of 1848, and his unhappy fate. He was born about the year 1809, of one of the most illustrious families of the proud aristocracy of Hungary. He was for many years the leader of the opposition to Austrian domination, in the upper house of Hungary, and by his talents and judgment increased the influence naturally awarded to his rank in that assembly. When the sweep of revolutionary events in 1848 rendered it necessary to form a Hungarian cabinet, Batthyányi was intrusted with the function. It is said that at court he was encouraged to treat Jellachich, the Ban of Croatia, as a traitor, at the very time when that leader was encouraged to invade Hungary and subdue it for Austria. In September, as prime minister of Hungary, he went to Vienna to endeavour to make moderate stipulations for preserving the nationality of Hungary on the one hand, and on the other restraining it from violent outbreak; but he found influences at work which rendered this hopeless, and resigning, retired to his estates. An accident disabled him from joining in the warlike resistance to Jellachich had he desired it, but he took part in the Hungarian parliament. He went with a deputation to Prince Windischgraetz to accommodate terms, but was not received. He was arrested, and after some delay, by order of Marshal Haineau, tried by court-martial and condemned to death. The conviction was for vague offences, among others for resigning office; and it was said that the Austrian government took vengeance on a Hungarian nobleman for the disturb-

BAYLE, PETER, born at Carlat, in the county of Foix, in 1647: the son of a Calvinist minister;—one of the most learned and laborious men of any age;—witness that grand monument he has left, the 'Dictionnaire Historique et Critique.' His own account of the cause of his extraordinary productive power is this,—meriting well a prominent place among the memoranda of the ambitious student,—'Amusements, pleasure-parties, games, collations, trips to the country, visiting, and other recreations, necessary—according to what they say—to many literary men, have no place in my manner of life; I lose no time in them, neither do I spend any on domestic cares, or in interfering with anything, soliciting anything, or meddling at all with business. In this way, a writer may accomplish much.'—The events of Bayle's life are eminently characteristic of his habit of mind: at one time a Calvinist; at the next a catholic; then Calvinist again; finally of no tangible creed or even profession or care about faith of any sort:—if his singular logical acuteness enabled him to cut in pieces the arguments then passing current for reasons, the defective force of his moral and intellectual instincts seemed to render him quite as happy and comfortable without a belief as with one. His writings, accordingly, are essentially critical and sceptical: he delights in showing how those important questions which philosophy would fain resolve are engirt by innumerable difficulties. Take as a specimen his treatment of the position 'There is a God.' The usual proofs —apparently the soundest—on which one rests this position, that one, for instance, which would infer the existence of a perfect Being, from the existence in the human mind of a corresponding idea—are open to manifold objections. Touching the Divine essence, our ignorance seems insurmountable. Though all men might be said to agree as to the being of a God, where is their agreement regarding his nature; who can reconcile his immutability with his liberty, his immateriality and his immensity? His unity is not demonstrated. His prescience cannot easily be accommodated to the free-will of man; nor his goodness with the physical and moral evil prevailing in the world, or with the eternal punishment of the wicked. His decrees are impenetrable; his judgments incomprehensible. We can reach no higher than negative conceptions regarding his divine perfections. . . . Thus Bayle doubts rather than reasons;—nay, he concludes, in the true spirit of the Pyrrhonist, that Reason is not a safe guide. Never was style better adapted to such a thesis; clear, polished, keen, and passionless. No good library should want the Dictionary; and there are few Inquirers who may not derive benefit from its singular pages. Besides this Opus Majus, he wrote several miscellaneous treatises, collected in his 'Œuvres Diverses,' four vols. 8vo. He died 'pen in hand' at the age of fifty-nine, in December, 1706. [J.P.N.]

BAYLEY, ANSELM, a Hebrew schol., d. 1791.

BAYLEY, THE RIGHT HON. SIR JOHN, justice of the King's Bench, mem. of the privy council, and author of a professional work, died 1841.

BAYLEY, LEWIS, bishop of Bangor, died 1632.

BAYLEY, N., writer of a dictionary, 1753.

BAYLEY, RICH., a cel. anatomist, 1745-1801.

BAYLEY, THOMAS HAYNES, a lyrical poet, dramatic writer, and novelist, 1797-1839.

BAYLEY, WM., an astronomer, died 1810.

BAYON, J. DE, a French annalist, 14th cent.

BAZARAD, a Wallachian prince, 14th century.

BAZARD, AMAND, a French carbonaro, afterwards a follower of St. Simon, 1792-1832.

BAZIRE, CL., a m. of the Fr. conven., 1764-94.

BEACON, THOS. an English reformer, d. 1570.

BEARDE DE L'ABBAYE, an econom., d. 1771.

BEATON, CARD., abp. of St. Andrews, distinguished for his persecuting spirit, assass. 1546.

BEATON, JAS., neph. of the card., bp. of Glasgow, and au. of a history of Scotland, 1530-1603.

BEATRICE, a martyr and saint, 3d century.

BEATTIE, JAMES, the well-known Scotch poet and moralist, was the son of a small farmer and shopkeeper, and was born at Laurenceckirk in Kincardineshire, 5th December, 1735. After pursuing his studies with the most brilliant success at Marischal College, Aberdeen, he was appointed usher to the Grammar School of that city 1758, where he enjoyed the society of many distinguished men, especially of Reid, the metaphysician, from whom he acquired the principles afterwards illustrated in his 'Essay on Truth.' In 1761, being then in his twenty-sixth year, Beattie made his début in the literary world as translator of the Eclogues of Virgil, and author of several small poems which had appeared anonymously at various times in the 'Scots Magazine.' In 1765 he published 'The Judgment of Paris,' and in 1766 a selection of his poems, with the addition of some which had not hitherto appeared. Between this period and 1770 he was preparing his famous essay, which he designed to counteract the baneful effects of materialism, by demonstrating the immutability of moral sentiment, which involves, in fact, the principle of a priori instruction and revelation. His personal history during this period acquires some interest from his marriage with Miss Dun, which took place in June 1767, and the friendship of the poet Gray, soon to be terminated by the death of the latter. The 'Essay on Truth' at once established the fame of its author, who received the flattering recognition of a degree as doctor of philosophy from the university of Oxford, and the offer of the professorship of moral philosophy in the university of Edinburgh, which, for personal reasons, he declined to accept, as he did a handsome living in the Church of England proffered by Dr. Porteus. It was in the flush of his success that Beattie resumed his poetical studies, and gratified the English public with his 'Minstrel,' a poem, written in the style and stanza of Spenser, and embodying, in the character of Edwin, a transcript of his own ideas and pursuits in his younger days. The first book of this celebrated poem appeared in 1771, the second in 1774, and a new edition of the whole in 1777, and it brought the author so prominently before the public that his merits were acknowledged in 1773 by an annual pension of £200 from the crown, graced, a little subsequently, by a private interview with the king and queen. In 1776 his essays 'On Poetry and Music,' 'On Laughter and Ludicrous Composition,' and 'On the Utility of Classical Learning,' appeared, forming one volume with a new edition of his 'Essay on Truth.' In 1790 and 1793 respectively, the two volumes of by his undoubted abilities, aided by a handsome person and refined manners; but still more by the jealousy which divided the civil and ecclesiastical powers at that time. On his return from Italy Beckett was appointed archdeacon of Canterbury by his patron, and soon after the accession of Henry II. in 1154, was raised to the dignity of high chancellor; doubtless by the influence of the prelacy favouring his own ambition. At this time, it should be remarked, the power of the popes had risen to an arrogant height, and the dispute about investitures, the subjection of the clergy to lay jurisdiction in criminal matters, and various alleged abuses on either side, were subjects of continual and bitter strife between the church and the crowned heads of Europe. It is not likely that Beckett was ever undecided in his own views on any of these subjects, or on the part he was destined to play in the politics of the period; but it is easy to imagine that each party would see the means of advancing its own pretensions in the splendid abilities, the acknowledged purity of life, and the courtly manners of the young churchman. On the death of Theobald, in 1162, the king and the chief prelates were equally urgent for his elevation to the see of Canterbury; but once consecrated, it devolved upon him whether he would serve the church or the state, and he declared for the former without hesitation. The king and his late minister were equally matched for their inflexibility, quickness of resolution, undaunted courage, and statesmanlike abilities; and both were influenced, further than their own consciousness extended, by the spirit of the age. Three years of strife led to the council of Clarendon, convoked by Henry in 1164, when Beckett yielded to the entreaties or menaces of the barons, and signed the famous 'Constitutions,' by which the differences between the church and state were regulated. These articles not only rendered the state supreme in all that concerned the general government of the nation, but virtually separated the Church of England from Rome. The pope, therefore, refused to ratify them, and Beckett, seeing his opportunity, and really repenting of the compliance that had been wrung from him, refused to perform his office in the church, and endeavoured to leave the kingdom, in which, at last, he succeeded, only to draw down the vengeance of Henry upon his connections. The progress of the quarrel belongs rather to the history of the times than a single life. Beckett remained in exile six years, and matters being in some measure accommodated, returned to England in 1170, shortly after the coronation of the king's son, which had been designed by Henry as a means of securing the succession. Beckett's refusal to remove the censures with which the agents in this transaction had been visited, his haughty contempt of the crown, and the sentences of excommunication which he continued to fulminate from the altar of Canterbury cathedral, provoked anew the indignation of the king. It is idle to judge the actions of men in those iron times by the formulas of the present day. The question stripped of all disguise was simply this—whether Thomas à Beckett or Henry Plantagenet was henceforth to be king in England. The Norman lords resolved the matter in their own rude way, when at length four of them leaving the king's presence in anger, after hearing of some fresh indignity, determined on bringing the controversy to a bloody close. The last scene of this tragedy is well known in all its details. It is sufficient to say, that Beckett was murdered during the celebration of the Vesper service in Canterbury Cathedral, on the 29th of December, 1170. [E.R.]

BECKETT, W., a cel. surgeon, b. at Abingdon, in Berkshire, 1684, d. 1738. Mr. Beckett wrote an 'Inquiry' into touching for the king's evil, and an Essay on curing diseases by charms and amulets.

BECKFORD, WILLIAM, was born in 1760. Ten years afterwards, by the death of his father, whose mayoralty of London was noted in the history of the times, he succeeded to a princely fortune. He was precocious, both in his love of literature and art, in his vigour of thought and expression, and in his retired eccentricity of disposition. After having lived much in France, and visited Italy and other continental countries, he married, in 1783, a daughter of the earl of Aboyne, who died young, leaving two daughters, one of whom became duchess of Hamilton. In 1784 he published in French his Eastern romance of 'Vathek,' which has been admired so warmly by the literary men of our time. Though he sat in more parliaments than one, politics occupied very little of his attention: he soon retired to the continent; and his fondness for architectural construction and embellishment showed itself first in a house he built at Cintra, in Portugal. In the commencement of the present century he began to build on his Wiltshire estate his magnificent mansion of Fonthill Abbey, which became all the more famous for the difficulty of satisfying curiosity in regard to it. The cost exceeded a quarter of a million. The pile had not long been completed and fitted up, when, in 1822, it was abandoned and the estate sold. Mr. Beckford spent his latest years chiefly at Bath, indulging his refined taste and his turn for secluded study. In 1834 he published 'Italy, with Sketches of Spain and Portugal,' containing recollections of his early travels, and abounding alike in eloquence and satire; and afterwards there appeared a similar volume, commemorating two Portuguese monasteries. He died in 1844, in the eighty-fourth year of his age. [W.S.]

[Fonthill Abbey.]

BECKINGHAM, CHAS., a dram. wr., d. 1730.

an annuity of 4,000 florins, that he changed his mind. About this time also he resolved to accept an invitation from the Philharmonic Society to come to England, but his almost total deafness prevented him. In 1810 Beethoven brought out his first mass. In the same year he made the acquaintance of Bettino Brentano of Frankfort, whose correspondence with Goethe has made the reading world acquainted with the private manners of the great composer, though her narrations are sometimes less full of character than of caricature. Through Bettino, Beethoven was introduced to Goethe in the year 1812, a friendship which reflected quite as much honour upon the rich and courtly poet and minister, as it did upon the poor, but independent and high-souled musician. On the 8th, and again on the 12th of December, in the year 1813, the first performances of 'The Battle of Vittoria,' and his symphony in A major, took place in the hall of the university, for the benefit of the Austrian and Bavarian soldiers disabled in the battle of Hanau. In 1815 Beethoven was exclusively employed in writing harmonies to Scotch songs for George Thompson of Edinburgh. From this period till the end of his life, Beethoven was harassed from various causes, chiefly of a domestic nature, and which ought never to have fallen upon him. These, together with his loss of hearing, begat a habit of gloomy thought, and a violent desire for solitude, till, by slow degrees, his frame, which was naturally robust and healthy, yielded to maladies which were induced by the constant and long-continued mental irritation to which he had been subjected. Forgotten by the Viennese, hardly appreciated by the rest of the world, Beethoven was seized with his last sickness; and the unnatural thoughtlessness and greed of his relatives continued till the period of his death, which took place on the 26th day of March, 1827. Beethoven died unmarried. His portraits, of which there are several, are all like him. He did not receive much education in his early youth, but when he became a man he read a great deal, and was well acquainted with the literature of Germany, and particularly admired the writings of Goethe and Schiller. With Shakspeare's works he was well acquainted, and admired them with the relish of a true artist. He was usually reserved, but when he entered into conversation he became animated, and original in the turn of his thoughts and expression. Beethoven left upwards of 120 works in all styles. His melodies are beautiful and new; and his instrumental music bears the unmistakeable evidences of the grandeur and sublimity of his unrivalled genius. In 1845 a grand statue of Beethoven was erected in his native town amid great rejoicings, and in presence of the queen of England. [J.M.]

BEGA, Cor., a Dutch painter, 1620-1664.

BEGEYN, Abra., a Dutch painter, 17th cent.

BEHADER-KHAN, a sul. of Persia, 1317-1335.

BEHADER-SHAH, emp. of Hind., 1707-1712.

BEHMEN. See Boehm.

BEHAIM, or BEHEM, M., a navigator, 15th c.

BEHN, Aphra, a fugitive authoress, d. 1689.

BEHRING, Vitus, by birth a Dane, after having performed several voyages to the E. and W. Indies, entered the service of Russia while still young. Having risen by the usual steps in the service, he became captain-commander in 1722, and was sent by the empress Catharine in charge of an expedition (planned by Peter the Great before his death), whose object was to determine whether Asia and America were united. Crossing Siberia, he sailed from the river of Kamtschatka in July, 1728; and reached lat. 67° 18′ N., having passed through the strait since called after him, without knowing it. Discovering that the land trended greatly westward, he concluded that the continents were not united, and returned; without, however, seeing America. In another voyage, in 1741, he touched upon the American coast, in lat. 58° 28′ N.; and gave name to Mount St. Elias. In returning, his ship was cast upon an island, since named after him, an outlier of the Aleutian group, and here himself and many of his crew perished. On his discoveries is founded the claim of Russia to that part of America lying west of the meridian of Mount St. Elias, 141° W. [J.B.]

BEICH, J. F., a German painter, 1665-1748.

BEINASCHI, J. B., an Ital. painter, 1634-1688.

BEK, or BEAK, Anthony De, bp. of Durham, one of the cel. sold. priests of the mid. ages, d. 1310.

BEK, David, a Dutch painter, 1621-1656.

BEKKER, Eliz., a wr. of fiction, 1738-1804.

BEKKHER, Balthasar, a celebrated protestant preacher, author of the 'World Bewitched,' &c., for which he was suspended, 1634-1698.

BEL, Ch. And., professor of poetry, 1717-1782.

BEL, John James, an au. and compil., d. 1738.

BEL, Mathias, hist. of Hungary, 1684-1749.

BELA, the name of four kings of Hungary. The first reigned 1059-1062; the second 1131-1141; the third 1173-1193; the fourth 1235-1270.

BELESIS, a governor of ancient Babylon.

BELGRANO, Manuel, a commander in the South American war of independence, died 1820.

BELIDOR, Bernard Forest De, a French engineer, author of a dict. of his art, 1695-1761.

BELING, Richard, an Irish rebel, 1613-1677.

BELISARIUS. 'One of those heroic names which are familiar to every age, and to every nation.' Thus does Gibbon justly characterize the emperor Justinian's victorious general. Belisarius first distinguished himself in the wars between the Byzantine empire and the kings of Persia. In 533, he was placed by Justinian at the head of the army by which that emperor sought to recover the old Roman province of North Africa from the Vandals, who had been in possession of it for seventy years. Belisarius was completely successful in his enterprise, and led the last Vandal king, Gelimer, as a captive to Constantinople. He was then sent on a similar expedition to conquer Italy from the Goths, who held dominion there. He thoroughly effected this purpose, capturing Rome, Ravenna, and other cities, inflicting severe defeats on the Goths in the field, and signalizing his own courage and prowess as a soldier, as well as his skill as a commander. The Goths offered to make him their king, but his loyalty was proof against all temptation, and when recalled by Justinian, he promptly returned in submission to the will of a capricious and thankless master. After his departure from Italy, the Goths recovered the greater part of that country, and Belisarius, who in the interval had been defending the south-eastern frontiers of the BELLIEVRE, POMPONIUS DE, a Fr. diplomatist, distinguished in the reigns of Charles IX., Henry III., and Henry IV., 1529-1607.

BELLINI, GENTILE, an Italian painter, of the same school as his brother Giovanni, 1421-1501.

BELLINI, GIOVANNI, a celebrated Italian painter, was born at Venice about 1426. He belongs to the school of painters known as the quattrocento, in Italy, literally the fifteenth century masters, but distinguished as much by their style as their period. This style, lately here designated, very inappropriately, the preraphaelite, is well illustrated in Bellini's portrait of the Doge Loredano, in the National Gallery—hard and dry, but exact in detail, and high and positive in colouring.—Giovanni Bellini was one of the first of the Venetian artists to adopt the new method of oil painting in lieu of the old process with tempera vehicles, that is, with saps and gums. His best works are in oil; they consist chiefly of madonnas and portraits. He died at the advanced age of ninety, November 29, 1516. Titian and Giorgione were two of Bellini's many eminent scholars. (Vasari, Lives of the Painters, &c.; Ridolfi, Maraviglie dell' Arte, &c.; Cadorin, Tiziano Vecellio.) [R.N.W.]

BELLINI, L., a celeb. anatomist, 1643-1702.

BELLINI, VINCENZIO, was born at Catania in Sicily, in the year 1806. Bellini received his musical education from Zingarelli, in the Conservatorio of Naples, and produced, at the theatre San Carlo of the same city, his opera 'Bianco e Ferdinando,' before he was twenty years old. In 1827 he composed 'Il Pirata' for the Scala at Milan, and soon after 'La Straniera' for the same establishment. These operas were succeeded by 'La Sonnambula' (which has perhaps been performed a greater number of times in Great Britain than any other foreign opera,) at Naples, 'I Capuletti ed i Montecchi,' at Venice, 'Norma' at Milan, 'I Puritani,' for the Theatre Italien at Paris, &c. The life of Bellini was unmarked by incidents. He was pure in morals, and his manners, like his compositions, were gentle, mellifluous, and elegant. Subject to pulmonic disease, he was unequal to violent effort of any kind, so he never attempted the lofty or sublime in music. He died of consumption in 1835. A writer (L. W. Tinelli) in the 'Musical World' says of Bellini—'The enthusiasm excited by this astonishing production (Norma) is beyond all description. In a few months the "Norma" became the favourite performance of all the Italian and foreign stages, and crossed the immense distance of the ocean to delight the ears of the transatlantic inhabitants. Soon after this new triumph he was called to Paris, where he wrote, in his greatest style, "I Puritani." It was the last song of the swan! One morning in the month of October, 1835, the inhabitants of Paris hastened to the streets of that immense capital to contemplate the numerous and select crowd which was following a funeral procession. Some of the most celebrated men were amongst the crowd. Sadness and sorrow were in the countenance of every one. A plaintive and moving music added to the melancholy scene. Death had reaped one of the finest flowers of nature. The funeral concourse stopped at the cemetery of Pere la Chaise, where the coffin was deposited, and, one hour after, a modest cross was raised on the ground, with the following inscription: "Pray for the peace of Vincent Bellini." Bellini was only twenty-nine years of age when he died. His disposition was good, though exceedingly passionate. His appearance was noble and expressive. His genius was vast as creation, and his soul innocent and gentle as the first sigh of love.' This is the eulogium of a friend and admirer; let it live in the memory of all musicians. [J.M.]

BELLMAN, CH. M., a Swed. poet, 1741-1795.

BELLONI, JEROME, a commercial wr., d. 1760.

BELLORI, J. P., an Ital. antiquary and connoisseur, au. of 'Lives of Modern Painters,' d. 1696.

BELLOSTE, A., a Fr. army surgeon, 1654-1730.

BELLOTI, PETER, an Ital. paint., 1625-1700.

BELON, PETER, author of travels, 16th cent.

BELOSIELSKY, PRINCE, a Russian nobleman, author of poems in the French tongue, died 1809.

BELSHAM, THOS., a cel. unitarian, 1749-1829.

BELSHAM, WM., brother of Thomas, a miscellaneous and historical writer, 1752-1827.

BELSHAZZAR, a k. of Chaldæa, abt. 560 B.C.

BELSUNCE, HENRY FRANCIS XAVIER DE, a Fr. prelate and hist. of disting. benev., 1671-1755.

BELUS, the supposed first king of Babylon.

BELYN, a Brit. commander under Caractacus.

BELZONI, GIOVANNI, celebrated for his discoveries in Egypt, was a native of Padua. His early studies, which had a view to the monastic life, were prosecuted at Rome, from which his family had originally come. The French invasion of 1798 caused a change in his plans; and in 1800 he left Italy, and visited several parts of Europe. He came to England in 1803, where he soon after married. He was tall and robust in person, of uncommon strength, and commanding mien; qualities which, united to great intelligence and sagacity, perseverance and a love of enterprise, gave him immense influence among the wild people with whom he so long associated. His remittances from home were scanty; and he seems to have turned to profitable account a knowledge of hydraulics which he had acquired at Rome. Often, however, he was obliged to obtain a livelihood by exhibiting feats of strength. Leaving England in 1812, he visited Spain, Portugal, and Malta, and in 1815 went to Egypt, where he was for a short time employed by Mehemet Ali in erecting hydraulic machinery at Cairo. Driven thence by the prejudice of the natives against his improved plans, he visited many parts of Egypt and Nubia, and the shores of the Red Sea, discovering buried cities, rock temples, &c., and displaying the greatest skill in the removal and shipment of such gigantic works as the bust of Memnon, and other remains now in the British Museum. The pecuniary means, besides a personal remuneration, were supplied chiefly by Mr. Salt, the English consul, but partly also by Burckhardt the traveller. In September, 1819, Belzoni left Egypt, and on his way to England visited his native town, where he was received with honour. His 'Narrative of Operations,' &c., was published at London in 1820, in a 4to vol. with atlas. In 1823, accompanied by his wife, he left England for Morocco, with the view of penetrating to Timbuctoo. He had neither commission nor assistance from government, or any society, and except £200 supplied by the Messrs. Briggs of Alexandria, depended BENTINCK, W. H. CAVENDISH, third duke of Portland, born 1738; lord-lieutenant of Ireland, 1782; chancellor of Oxford, 1792; home secretary, 1794-1801; first lord of the treasury, 1807; d. 1808.

BENTINCK, LORD GEORGE, a British parliamentary leader, was born on 27th February, 1802. He was the third son of the fourth duke of Portland, and thus descended from the distinguished Dutchman who enjoyed the friendship of William III. He was by his mother, a daughter of Major Scott of Balcomie, connected with Canning, who married her sister, and he made such early acquaintance with political business as he possessed, in the capacity of private secretary to his uncle-in-law. He entered the army and rose to the rank of major, but that profession in time of peace had not sufficient attraction for his stirring temperament, and he took with laborious ardour to field sports and the turf. Though a younger son, the fortunes of the family enabled him to indulge in horse racing without mercenary views, and yet it is generally said that he realized a large sum of money on the turf. His success and general high character in the sporting world arose from a high-handed integrity, which gave him the position of a bold, earnest, honest enthusiast, in occupations pursued by so many through momentary excitement, dissipation, or a base design to profit by the follies of others. In 1826 he entered parliament as member for Lynn Regis, and continued to represent that constituency till his death. He was a very steady attendant, almost always in his seat awake or asleep. But his attendance was not of a character to give him the knowledge of a statesman, since the benches of the House of Commons were his place of rest between unremitting labours in the hunting field and other congenial arenas. Before 1846 he was generally set down as a moderate Whig, but it is evident that his political partizanship rested more on personal alliances than constitutional views. When Sir Robert Peel dealt his final blow at the corn laws and commercial restrictions, the country gentlemen, who thought it was not the necessary progress of sound political economy, but the want of leadership and combination which threatened what they counted their ruin, looked to Lord George as a leader, on account of the energy and skill he had shown in his favourite pursuits. He accepted of the proposal, and became the leader of the opposition, transferring to the interior of St. Stephen's the methods which gave him success in his more congenial occupations out of doors. He made it his twofold occupation to hunt the enemy, and to manipulate statistics into startling momentary results, as in the calculations of the betting book. He knew to the last little or nothing about politics, but his chivalrous bearing and utter unconsciousness of defeat, gave him popularity even with his opponents. The energetic zeal with which he followed his new pursuits broke his constitution, and, seized with an attack of the heart, he dropped suddenly dead on the 28th September, 1848, and was found lying on the road where he had been walking. [J.H.B.]

BENTIVOGLIO, one of the sovereign families of Italy, among the distinguished members of which are, JOHN, lord of Bologna, killed 1402, whose lineal descendants held the signory till 1508. HERCULES, a poet and statesman, 1506-1573. GUIDO, cardinal legate and historian, 1579-1641. HIPPOLYTE, a dramatist, died 1685. CORNELIO, a cardinal, a poet, and a patron of the fine arts, 1688-1732. MATILDA, a poetess, died 1711.

BENTLEY, RICH., a cel. classic, 1661-1742. His son of the same name, a dramatist, d. 1782.

BENYOWSKY, MAURICE AUGUSTUS, Count, a Siberian exile who effected his escape, and was killed in action against the French when attempting to assume the sovereignty of Madagascar, 1786.

BENZELIUS, the name of several abps. of Upsala, disting. for their great learning. ERIC, 1642-1709. His son of the same name, 1675-1745. JACOB, br. of the last, d. 1747. HENRY, 1689-1758.

BENZEL-STERNAU, a Ger. states., 1738-1784.

BENZEL-STERNAU, C. CH., Count De, a German statesman, and man of letters, 1767-1832.

BERCHTOLD, LEOPOLD, Count, a disting. philanthropist of Austria, 1758-1809.

BERENGER, or BERENGARIUS, was born at Tours, about the beginning of the eleventh century. His earliest education was received under Fulbert at Chartres, a teacher of affectionate wisdom and piety. Berenger showed from the first a liberal spirit of inquiry. For some time he taught in his native city, and gained there the office of Scholasticus, that is, superintendent of the school attached to the cathedral or monastery of St. Martin. Afterwards he was archdeacon at Anger. The name of Berenger is associated principally with the famous mediæval controversy on the doctrine of transubstantiation. He had revived the doctrine of Scotus, that the bread and wine still remain symbols after the consecration, and are not changed in substance; but his doctrine was condemned by several councils, such as that of Rome in 1050. The strife raged for thirty years, and Berenger sometimes wavered, and even formally recanted in 1079, under the terrorism of his ecclesiastical superiors. But he soon retracted, and by Lanfranc and others, under Gregory VII., the controversy was prolonged till his death in 1088. The theological influence of Berenger was lost by his vacillation, but he was one of the revivers of metaphysical study and dialectics, and as has been remarked, 'he continued Scotus Erigena, and prepared the way for Abelard.' His book 'De Sacra Coena,' was published at Berlin in 1834; the manuscript of it having been found by Lessing in 1770 in the ducal library of Brunswick. [J.E.]

BERENGER, JAS., a celeb. anatomist, d. 1550.

BERENGER, L. P., a Fr. poet and rhetorician, author of 'Les Soirées Provençales,' &c., 1749-1822.

BERENGER, P., a disciple of Abelard, 12th c.

BERENGER I., king of Italy 888, elected emperor 916, deposed 922, assassinated 924.

BERENGER II., king 950, deposed 962, d. 966.

BERENICE, the name of several princesses of Syria and Egypt, of whom the most celebrated are the wife of Antiochus, strangled B.C. 248. The daughter of Ptolemy Auletus, and usurper of his throne, who was deposed and killed by the Romans. The daughter of Ptolemy Philadelphus, who consecrated her hair to Venus. And the daughter of Agrippa, king of Judæa, the mistress of Titus.

BERENICIUS, a Dutch adventurer, 17th cent.

BERESFORD, REV. JAMES, a miscellaneous writer and satirist, 1761-1840.

BERETTINI, P., an Ital. architect, 1596-1663.

nitz invented and promulgated the higher calculus. All distinguished by eagerness in the pursuit of Analysis, and the two elder especially, by much vivacity of temper—they mingled earnestly in the keen commerce and conflict of scientific writers, which so enlivens the history of those times, and renders the details of personal history part and parcel of the history of the progress of knowledge. Our limits confine us within a simple enumeration of these distinguished men, and a bare statement of their main achievements.—1. JAMES BERNOUILLI, probably the most original analyst of the group; born at Basle in 1654,—died in 1705. He had great powers of invention, and much taste for simplicity in method and composition. He greatly extended the theory of the quadrature of the parabola, and the geometry of curve lines, spirals, &c. His chief contributions, however, relate to the summation and doctrine of infinite series; and we owe him the first systematic work on the now very important theory of chances. His writings are collected in 3 vols. 4to.—2. JOHN BERNOUILLI, brother of James; born in 1667, died in 1748; also a very great analyst. Besides his essays on the management of ships and the elliptical figure of the planets, John Bernouilli wrote on almost every branch of the existing mathematics; and he touched nothing he did not expand and improve. The great age he attained was worthily bestowed on him; he died full of honours. His collected writings fill four 4to volumes.—3. JOHN BERNOUILLI, son of the preceding; professor of mathematics in St. Petersburg, where he died in 1726; born in 1695.—4. NICOLAS BERNOUILLI, nephew of 1 and 2, born in 1687; died in 1759; professor of mathematics in Padua.—5. DANIEL BERNOUILLI, son of Nicolas, a very eminent philosopher, rivalling the glory of the elder brothers of the family. He was born in 1700, and died in 1782. His two great works are the 'Exercitationes Mathematicæ' and his 'Hydrodynamica:' but besides writing occasional treatises and memoirs, he contested, and gained or divided with the greatest mathematicians in Europe, no fewer than ten prizes offered by the Academy of Sciences. No name of the time stands higher than that of Daniel Bernouilli.—6. JOHN BERNOUILLI, brother of Daniel, professor of mathematics at Basle, born 1720, died 1770.—7. JAMES BERNOUILLI, nephew of the two preceding, born in Basle 1759, died in 1789, too early for science. At this close of the family of the Bernouillis, its former glories seemed about to blaze out again. In the space of about five years, the younger James presented no less than eight memoirs to the Imperial Academy of Sciences, which have been printed in the 'Nova Acta;' and he was a correspondent of other academies besides. Everything he wrote displayed singular acuteness.—It is not often that the historian of Science has to record concerning such a family. [J.P.N.]

BERNSTORFF, JOHN HARTWIG ERNEST, Count, a Danish statesman, disting. also as a patron of science and art, 1712-1772. His nephew, AND. PETER, cel. as a minister of state for the enfranchisem. of the Dan. peasants, &c., 1735-1797.

BEROALDUS, PH., a rhetorician, 1453-1505. His nephew of the same name, a poet, died 1518.

BERODACH, son of Baladan, king of Babylon.

BEROSSUS, a Chaldean priest and hist., fragments of whose works exist in the writings of Eusebius: time of Alexander the Great.

BERRETINI, NICH., an It. paint., 1617-1682.

BERRI, JOHN, of France, Duke De, 1340-1416.

BERRI, CH. FERD. DE BOURBON, Duke De, second son of Ch. X., and father of the duke de Bordeaux, claimant of the Fr. crown, 1778-1820.

BERRIMAN, WM., an. of Sermons, 1688-1758.

BERRUYER, Jos. Is., a religious wr., d. 1758.

BERRUYER, J. F., a Fr. general, 1737-1804.

BERRY, REAR-ADMIRAL SIR EDW., K.C.B., distinguished at the Nile and Trafalgar, d. 1831.

BERRY, SIR JOHN, a naval command., d. 1691.

BERRYAT, F., first edit. of a collect. of observations from the memoirs of learned societies, d. 1754.

BERSMANN, GEO., a Ger. classic, 1538-1611.

BERTHIER. ALEXANDER BERTHIER, prince of Neufchatel and Wagram, was born in Paris in 1753, of higher parentage than that of most of the military chiefs of the French revolution and empire. He saw some service in Rochambeau's auxiliary corps in the American war, and continued in the French army after the fall of the monarchy. It is chiefly as Napoleon's favourite chief of the staff that he acquired distinction. His talents for independent command were slender, but he possessed the power of rapidly comprehending Napoleon's wishes and tactics, and he showed an alacrity and a skill in carrying the imperial orders into effect, that made him most valuable, and procured him high promotion and favour. On the downfall of Napoleon, in 1814, Berthier, like other marshals, professed allegiance to the Bourbons, and he is said to have shown more readiness and zeal in so doing, than became one who had been, like Berthier, the favoured friend, as well as the highly rewarded servant of the ex-emperor. On Napoleon's return in 1815, Berthier quitted France with the Bourbon princes; but he suffered deeply in spirits and in conscience, and at last, after watching a body of Russian troops who were marching through Bamberg against France, Berthier committed suicide. [E.S.C.]

BERTHIER, J. B., an architect, &c., 1721-1804.

BERTHOLLET, F., a Fr. historian, d. 1755.

BERTHOLLET, CLAUDE LOUIS, born at Talloire, near Annecy, in Savoy, 9th December, 1848, died at Paris, 6th November, 1822, aged seventy-four, affords one of the most illustrious examples of a genius for the practical application of science among the savants of the last century. Educated for the profession of medicine, in an obscure corner of the country, he came to Paris destitute of friends and acquaintances; but having learned that M. Tronchin, a distinguished practitioner in the metropolis, was a native of Geneva, he made bold to call upon his countryman, and, fortunately for science, was kindly received and patronised by him; and through his means Berthollet was made physician to the duke of Orleans. It was through this nobleman that he was placed in the position of superintendent of the government dyeworks, where he acquired the information contained in his valuable work on this art, and which led him to apply to practice in bleaching, the important fact, discovered by Scheele, of the decolorizing properties of chlorine gas. It would be difficult to estimate, in its true light, either morally or pecuniarily, the to demonstrate, in 1815, that the mineral world, as had been enunciated by Smithson, is a naturally existing exemplification of the beautiful doctrine of definite proportions. It would be difficult to over-estimate the value of the contributions made to the science by this indefatigable chemist, whose body and mind seem to have been in incessant action for the best part of half a century, whether we view them in his valuable investigations of the constituents of nature, in the various editions of his System of Chemistry, which contained a complete digest of the knowledge possessed by chemists at the time they appeared, of chemical substances, or in the annual reports which he published, in continuation of those of Thomson, of the progress of his favourite science. The part which he took, too, in modifying the system of symbols, introduced into the science by Thomson, so as to suit all nations, is highly deserving of commendation, since without symbols it is difficult to understand how chemical constitution could be rendered intelligible in its present complicated condition. The ingenious generalizations which he sometimes made, although generally ultimately found to be untenable, were productive of vast benefit in encouraging and stimulating inquiry. Among these views may be noticed his ideas of the compound nature of chlorine; his theory of electro-chemistry, of isomerism, of catalytism, &c. It is much to be regretted that the free inquiry and liberty of deduction which he claimed for himself he did not always allow to others, and that the closing years of his busy life should have been occupied in a coarse warfare with his contemporaries and the younger spirits of the age, and in an attempt, which ever must prove fruitless, to bind to the chariot-wheels of a past time the new discoveries which uniformly refuse to be attached to old-fashioned inventions. Much of this asperity of literary manner may undoubtedly be attributed to isolation during his earlier years, from the softening influences of life, and to deteriorating habits, which it is understood were too unsparingly encouraged. Berzelius contributed, in a remarkable degree, in disseminating the study of the science over the continent of Europe, by the able pupils who were educated under his eye, and who did not fail to communicate in their turn to their successors the accurate lessons which they themselves had so bountifully received. To have communicated the elements of the science to such men as Gmelin, Arfwedson, Rose, Mitscherlich, and Wöhler, is no small piece of good fortune. No department of the science has escaped the masterly touch of Berzelius; even organic chemistry, which he was desirous of confining under obsolete rules, was indebted to him for many early elucidations, which paved the way for those who were to follow. In no portion of the science were his labours of more value than in that of analyses, the processes depending on an intimate acquaintance with the properties of the various kinds of matter, by which the chemist is enabled to tell, to the most minute fraction, how much of any element is present in a compound. Berzelius was for many years professor of chemistry in Stockholm. During the latter years of his life he retired to the country, and married, and was elevated to the rank of baron. But to the last he took a deep interest in his science, and even when paralysis had denied to him the power of locomotion, he continued to dictate to his amanuensis his annual report, striving, as it were, to bid against nature, and to lengthen out the space of terrestrial mental existence. [R.D.T.]

BESBORODKO, a Rus. min. of state, d. 1799.

BESCHI, C. J., a cel. Indian missionary, d. 1742.

BESOLDE, Chr., an Austrian hist., 1577-1638.

BESOZZI, Ambr., an Ital. archi., 1648-1706.

BESSARION, John, a cardinal and theol., one of the restorers of learning in the 15th c., 1395-1472.

BESSEL, Dr. F. W., a Prus. astro., 1784-1846.

BESSIERES, John Baptist, duke of Istria, one of Napoleon's generals, marshal of France, born 1784, killed at Rippach 1813.

BETHLEM-GABOR, a native of Transylvania, who usurped the throne of Hungary 1618, d. 1629.

BETHLEN, Wolfgang, Count De, a statesman and historian of Transylvania, massacred by the Tartars, 1679.

BETHUNE, the ancestral name of Sully.

BETTERTON, T., a cel. tragedian, 1635-1700.

BETTINELLI, X., a cel. It. author, 1718-1808.

BETUSSE, Joseph, an Ital. poet, 16th cent.

BEUERNONVILLE, Peter Riel, count of, a statesman, diplomatist, and marshal of France, minister of war under the convention, 1752-1821.

BEVERIDGE, William, bishop of St. Asaph, eminent as an Oriental scholar and theologian, author of 'Private Thoughts on Religion,' 1638-1708.

BEVERLY, John of, the tutor of Bede, d. 721.

BEVERNYNCK, J. Van, a Dutch statesman, disting. also as a contributor to botany, 1614-1690.

BEVERWICK, J. De, a med. auth., 1594-1647.

BEVIN, Elway, a Welsh music., time of Jas. I.

BEVIS, an English astronomer, 1695-1771.

BEWICK, John, an artist and naturalist, celebrated in the history of wood engraving, d. 1795.

BEWICK, Thos., brother of the prec., d. 1828.

BEWLY, Wm., an experi. philosopher, d. 1783.

BEYER, Aug., a Germ. theologian, 1707-1741.

BEYER, Dr. G. A., prof. of Gr. litera., 18th c.

BEZA, or THEODORE DE BEZE, was born of noble parents at Vezelai in 1519. His studies were begun at Orleans under Wolmar, a German, to whom may be traced his pupil's attainments in Greek. Here he studied law, and having at the age of twenty obtained a diploma, he spent the next nine years in Paris; living in the midst of such enjoyments as an ample fortune can at all times secure in the gay capital of France. Here he published his 'Juvenilia,' a collection of poems, many of which are just in character and gallantry, what might have been anticipated in the circumstances. His own conscience, his secret marriage, and a severe illness, combined in solemnizing his mind, so that at length he fled to Geneva, and publicly avowed his attachment to the protestant reformation. In a very short time he became professor of Greek at Lausanne, and after ten years' labour there he returned to Geneva. From the period of his return to Geneva in 1559 to his death there, October 13, 1605, Beza was identified with the Swiss reformation. He was the first rector of the new academy established there, and he succeeded Calvin in the chair of theology in 1564. After the great Reformer's death, Beza occupied the first place of influence and responsibility, not only in the church of Geneva, but in the neighbouring cantons and in France. In 1571

BIEVRE, THE MARQUIS DE, a writer of some fugitive pieces, cel. as an inveterate wit, 1747-1789.
BIEZ, OUDART DU, marshal of France, d. 1551.
BIGLAND, JOHN, a miscel. wr. 1750-1832.
BIGNON, JERO., a learned Fr. wr., 1589-1656.
BIGNON, J. P., grandson of Jerome, a disting. eccles. and member of the Fr. Academy, 1662-1743.
BIGNON, L. P. E., a diplomatist, and an. of a 'History of French Diplomacy,' written by the desire of Napoleon, by whom he was frequently employed, and held in the highest esteem, 1771-1841.
BIGOT, AMERIC, a French classic, 1626-1689.
BIKAM, W., an English engraver, last cent.
BILDERDYK, WM., a Dutch poet, 1756-1831.
BILFINGER, G. B., a Ger. savant, 1693-1750.
BILLAUD-VARENNES, JOHN NICHOLAS, was the son of an advocate, and like Fouché, was educated by the Jesuits, but compelled to leave the congregation of the oratory on account of his licentiousness. He remained in obscurity until the outbreak of the revolution, when the revolt and fearful sacrifice of life at Nanci in the month of August, 1790, gave him an opportunity of attacking the government, especially in a work of 3 vols. 8vo, entitled 'Despotisme des Ministres de France.' Between this period and the autumn of 1792 he published several political brochures, remarkable, it is understood, for their brutal vehemence rather than for any originality or show of argument; and it was only on the 10th of August in that year, when the death-struggle of the Swiss guard, followed by the sack of the Tuileries, and the imprisonment of the royal family took place, that he emerged from the obscurity of the Faubourgs as one of the hundred and forty-four who turned out the old municipals, and declared themselves the magistrates of the people. In the horrible massacres of September he was seen standing in his official scarf, short brown coat, and black wig, with one foot on a corpse and the other in a pool of blood, urging the murderers at the Abbaye to continue the work of slaughter, of which, from mere physical exhaustion they were growing weary. He was remarkable on all occasions for his repugnance to any regular form in the administration of the people's wild vengeance, and had a principal share in the erection of the Revolutionary Tribunal, to which Marie Antoinette and many other victims were sent at his particular instance. On the 9th Thermidor he consulted his own safety by joining in the clamorous accusation of Robespierre, and a few days after his fall, was himself excluded from the committee which his cruel heart, and sometimes declamatory eloquence had so often served. The reaction having set in, he was condemned to transportation, and afterwards to death, by the convention, but the sailing of the ship saved his life, and he remained twenty years in Cayenne before he effected his escape. In 1816 he made his way to St. Domingo, where the mulatto Petion was in power as president of the newly-established republic, by whom he was allowed a small pension. On this pittance the 'resolute unrepentant man' contrived to subsist till the world was finally rid of him in 1819. [E.R.]
BILLARD, CH. M., a Fr. surgeon, 1800-1832.
BILLAUT, AD., a Fr. poet, time of Richelieu.
BILLBERG, J., a Swed. mathemat., d. 1717.
BILLING, SIGIS., a Fr. patriot and soldier of the revol., coadjutor of Lafayette in 1830, d. 1832.
BILLINGSLEY, SIR HY., a mathemat., d. 1616.
BILSON, THOS., bp. of Winchester, 1536-1616.
BINGHAM, JOS., an eccles. wr., 1668-1723.
BINGHAM, SIR GEO. RIDOUT, an officer in the Peninsular war; afterwards accompanied Buonaparte to St. Helena, 1777-1833.
BINGLEY, WM., a wr. on nat. hist., d. 1823.
BIOERN, the name of four kings of Sweden.
BION, a Greek poet, 3d century B.C.
BION, a Greek philosopher, 3d century B.C.
BION, NICH., a Fr. mathematician, d. 1753.
BIONDI, SIR FR., an historian, 17th century.
BIRAGUE, CLEM., a Germ. engraver, 16th ct.
BIRAGUE, RENE DE, an It. cardinal, resident in France, promoted the massacre of St. Bartholomew, and was made chancellor, 1509-1583.
BIRCH, SAM., a disting. citizen of London, mayor in 1814, promoter of the Lit. Fund, 1757-1841.
BIRCH, THOS., a Quaker historian, 1705-1766.
BIRD, EDW., R.A., a painter, 1705-1766.
BIRD, JOHN, a math. inst. maker, d. 1766.
BIRD, or BIRDE, or BYRDE, WILLIAM, the admired musician, and great pupil of the celebrated Tallis, was born about the year 1540, and is supposed to have been the son of Thomas Bird, one of the gentlemen of the chapel of Edward VI., where Bird received his first instructions in music as one of the singing-boys. In 1563, he was made organist of Lincoln cathedral, which office he retained till 1569, when he was appointed gentleman of Queen Elizabeth's chapel, and in 1575 became organist to her majesty. Up to the period of his death, which happened in 1623, he composed a great amount of vocal music, chiefly sacred, and from the circumstance that the words he chose were, for the most part, portions of the Romish ritual, it is supposed that he was secretly a professor of that faith, though from the appointments he held, he must have conformed to the reformed religion. It is impossible now to name the number of his works, if we include his instrumental compositions, of which no fewer than seventy-three are to be found in Queen Elizabeth's celebrated Virginal book. Bird is, however, now chiefly known by his great canon 'Non Nobis Domine.' And though some persons have sought to deprive him of the fame of its authorship, and have attributed it to Palestrina, nevertheless, those best able to judge have never hesitated to regard it as the work of William Bird, and to all time it will be looked upon as a national work and an enduring monument of his greatness as a musician. Bird was highly esteemed, both in his private and public capacity. [J.M.]
BIREN, JOHN ERNEST DE, dk. of Courland, and regent of Russia after the dth. of Anne, 1687-1772.
BIRGER DE BIELBO, COUNT PALATINE, and regent of Sweden at the death of Eric, 1210-1266.
BIRKBECK, GEORGE, M.D., the founder of mechanics' institutions, b. at Settle, 1776, d. 1841.
BIRKBECK, M., an. of travels, &c., d. 1825.
BIRKENHEAD, SIR J., a pol. wr., 1615-1679.
BIRON, ARMAND DE GONTAUT, Baron De, marshal of France, slain at the siege of Epernay, 1524-1592. CH. DE GONTAUT, son of the preceding, b. 1561; admiral of France, 1592; marshal, 1594; duke, 1598; beheaded, 1602. CH. ARMAND, ever valuable the separate parts may be. Blackstone tried to convert the mass into a readable well-arranged book, and succeeded. He has made many people readers of the law, and more or less instructed in it, who otherwise would not have approached the forbidding science. But on the other hand, the deeper practical members of the profession have pronounced his work unsatisfactory and superficial. To make his book consistent and readable, he endeavoured to give a reason for everything, while other writers told it baldly as it stood. The tendency of his commentaries was thus to make whatever existed in the law appear to be exactly what it should be. Now that many of the things which he commended as the perfection of wisdom, have been abolished as tyrannical and absurd, his reasoning in their support sometimes appears sufficiently ludicrous. The disposition to justify things as they were, made his writings acceptable to government, and they were the more so that in accounts of the origin of national institutions, he ever kept out of sight the more violent revolutionary movements by which the constitution was created. Only in his celebrated passage against the game laws does he take a side contrary to what may be called conservative predilections. The 'Commentaries' are still in active use, and ever call for the services of fresh editors. Blackstone disliked political contention, and declined the opening to high promotion offered to him in the office of solicitor-general. He was, in 1770, appointed one of the justices of the King's Bench, and in a few months transferred to the Common Pleas. He died on 14th February, 1780. [J.H.B.]

BLACKWALL, Ant., an Eng. critic, 1674-1730.

BLACKWELL, Alex., a Scotch physician and economist; settled in Stockholm, and beheaded for conspiracy, 1747. His wife, Elizabeth, disting. as the authoress of a 'Herbal,' with 500 plates, drawn, engraved, and coloured by herself.

BLACKWOOD, A., a Scotch au., 1539-1613.

BLACKWOOD, Sir H., a nav. com., 1770-1832.

BLADEN, Martin, a miscel. writer, d. 1746.

BLAEUW, Wm., a Dutch geogr., 1571-1638.

BLAINVILLE, M. De, an anatom., 1778-1850.

BLAIR, Hugh, D.D., a celebrated Scotch divine, and miscellaneous writer, 1718-1800.

BLAIR, J., a chronological author, died 1782.

BLAIR, Robt., au. of 'The Grave,' 1700-1746.

BLAKE, Wm., an artist and poet of singular genius and originality, remarkable also for his extraordinary visions, 1759-1827.

BLAKE. In all the long list of England's naval heroes, there is not a name more glorious than that of Admiral Blake. Perhaps he deserves to be ranked even highest of all, if we look not merely to the number and brilliancy of his victories, but to the originality of his genius, and to the high character of the commanders and the crews whom he encountered and vanquished. Blake tamed the pride of the Dutch navy when it was in the perfection of equipment, discipline, spirit, and skill. He triumphed over Van Tromp and De Ruyter; admirals who, until they coped with Blake, were reputed invincible. Nelson himself never signalized his genius and his bravery against such competitors as these. Robert Blake was the son of a merchant at Bridgewater in Somersetshire, and was born there in August, 1599. He was well educated, first at his native grammar school, and then at Oxford, where he was distinguished for his strictness in religion, and for his liberal politics. At the age of twenty-seven, in consequence of his father's embarrassments and death, Blake was called on, as the eldest son, to take the management of the wreck of the family business, and to maintain his mother and several younger brothers and sisters. He did this duty in private life for many years; but on the outbreak of the civil war between Charles I. and the parliament, Blake came forward on the popular side, and raised a troop of dragoons, which he personally commanded. Blake's military career has been eclipsed by the superior lustre of his naval achievements; but he was one of the ablest commanders and bravest soldiers that fought for the Houses; and some of his exploits in the west of England showed genius of the highest order. It would be difficult to find parallels, either in ancient or modern history, for Blake's defence of Lyme against Prince Maurice; or for his daring occupation of Taunton and successful defence of that place against Goring. When the war was over, Blake was made a commissioner of the navy, and placed in command of the ships that were sent against Rupert's piratical squadron. Blake was at this time fifty years old. He may have had some acquaintance with a seafaring life when he was a Bridgewater merchant, but besides his natural courage, decision, and promptitude, he must have possessed remarkable quickness of apprehension and fertility of genius to enable him to adapt himself to his new command in naval war, and to inspire those whom he led, with his own daring, alacrity, and indomitable resolution. He was equally active and sagacious as a reformer of the numerous abuses which he found prevalent in the admiralty, and in every department of the service; and Blake did for our navy in the middle of the 17th century what Earl St. Vincent did afterwards for it at the close of the 18th. Blake's successes against Rupert and other enemies of the commonwealth, caused him to be raised to the chief command of the English fleet when war broke out between the English and Dutch republics in 1652. A series of naval battles ensued, which are unequalled in history for the skill and for the obstinate valour displayed on both sides. Once, and once only, the Dutch had the advantage, on the 29th of November, 1652, when Blake was obliged with less than 40 ships to fight Van Tromp with 80 in the Downs. But our English admiral more than redeemed his fame in the February following, when he completely defeated Van Tromp in their great three days' sea fight along the channel. At last, when after two years of desperate warfare, Blake had nearly destroyed the Dutch navy, Holland was compelled in 1654 to sue for peace. Cromwell had turned out the parliament and made himself protector of England during this period, but Blake declared that a sailor's duty was to serve his country against the foreigner, and he continued to guide our fleets wherever the honour of England required. Cromwell sent him to the Mediterranean, where he made our flag universally respected. He compelled the Maltese knights and the Tuscan government to pay for the seizure of some English merchant vessels, and made the

he was destined to serve so ably. He was present in some of the battles of the seven years' war; and acquired a high reputation as a daring and resolute soldier, though his coarse and violent temper brought him into frequent difficulties, and impeded the rate of his promotion. He retired from the service in 1770, in anger at a supposed slight, but returned to it again in 1786, and when the wars of the French revolution commenced, Blucher was colonel of a regiment of Black Hussars. He commanded the left wing of the duke of Brunswick's army in 1783, with great credit for skill as well as courage; and in 1806, in the second war between France and Prussia, he was commander of the Prussian cavalry. After the disasters of Jena and Auerstadt, Blucher signalized himself by the ability of his retreat, and by his desperate resistance before he capitulated to his pursuers. From 1806 to 1813 Blucher lived in retirement, watching eagerly for Prussia's opportunity for rising against her French oppressors. This came after Napoleon's Russian campaign of 1812. Blucher was now seventy years old, but his spirit was as fiery as ever, and there was no general in the war of German liberation whom his countrymen followed with more enthusiasm, or who did more for the rescue of the fatherland. He commanded an army formed partly of Prussians and partly of Russians, which was called the army of Silesia. On August 26, 1812, he routed and nearly destroyed the French army under Marshal Macdonald, at the Katzbach, a victory that redeemed the reverses of Lutzen and Bautzen. Blucher was by Napoleon's own confession, the keenest, the most indomitable, and the most formidable of the foes, who now drove the French back across the Rhine. No reverses disheartened him, no difficulties appalled him; and it was only when held back by the more cautious policy of other chiefs of the allies, that the veteran was ever heard to express displeasure or anxiety about the progress of the war. In 1814, when the allies entered France, Blucher was again the first and the fiercest among Napoleon's assailants. He had the advantage over him at Brienne; he was surprised and severely punished by the emperor at Montereau; but he was soon pressing forwards again upon Paris, fought desperately at Craon, was victorious at Laon, and finally joined in the attack upon Paris on the 30th March, 1814, which caused the surrender of the French capital, and the end of the war. When Napoleon returned from Elba in 1815, Blucher commanded the Prussian army in Belgium, which in conjunction with the British army under Wellington, fought the campaign of Waterloo. Blucher's army was the first that the French emperor attacked; on the 16th of June the obstinate battle of Ligny took place, in which, as Blucher himself remarked, the Prussians lost the day, but not their honour. Though forced to retreat in consequence of this defeat, Blucher had his army rallied and ready for action again before twenty-four hours were over; and on the 18th he marched according to promise to aid Wellington at Waterloo. Blucher came on the field in force towards the evening of that ever-memorable day. He led his columns on Napoleon's right flank and rear, with the intention of not only succouring the English, but of utterly crushing the French. His success is well known. Often repulsed, and at last fiercely charged in front by the duke's army, the French were unable to hold back Blucher on their right, and were swept from the field in irretrievable ruin. After that decisive battle Blucher advanced into France in conjunction with the duke, and a second time was present at the surrender of Paris. Blucher's fierce animosity against the French made him wish to storm their capital, and he expressed a purpose of shooting Napoleon himself on the very spot, in the ditch at Vincennes, where the Duke D'Enghien had been murdered. He yielded, however, though sullenly and reluctantly, to the sage advice of his English colleague. Blucher died in extreme old age at Krieblowitz, in Silesia, September 12, 1819. He was almost idolized by the Prussian nation, who justly looked on him as the saviour of the country. Blucher knew little of strategy, but he had the good sense to be aware of his own deficiency, and to follow in military plans and manœuvres the able advices of General Gneisenau, to whom he always frankly expressed his obligation. Old 'Marshal Forwards' (as the soldiers loved to call Blucher) exercised an animating influence over his men, which was invaluable, amid the general prostration of spirit which the successes of the French before 1812 had created; and except our own Wellington, no man did more than Blucher towards the liberation of Europe from Buonaparte's military oppression. [E.S.C.]

BLUM, J. Chr., a German lyric, 1739-1790.

BLUM, Robert, one of those active spirits raised to eminence by the revolutionary events of 1848. He had spent his early life in so much obscurity that little is known of him. He is said to have been born at Cologne in 1807, to have been a working jeweller travelling about after the manner of the young German handicraftsmen, and to have settled in Cologne in 1830, as box opener of the theatre. Afterwards he excited attention among the friends of advancement in Germany by his contributions to the press, and especially by his exposures of the ultramontane religious party in the affair of the holy coat of Treves. When the parliament of Frankfurt was embodied in 1848, he represented Cologne, and became distinguished as the leader of the extreme revolution party. He had a rapid denunciatory eloquence, whence he was called the German O'Connell. He mixed himself up with the revolutionary movements at Vienna, and on their suppression was condemned by a court-martial to be shot on the 9th of November, 1848. The act was significant, as the beginning of the stern measures pursued by Austria against the liberal party in Germany.

BLUMAUER, L., a Ger. sat. poet, 1755-1798.

BLUMBERG, C. G., an Orien. schol., 1664-1735.

BLUMENBACH, Jean Frederic, a celebrated comparative anatomist, physiologist, and naturalist, was born at Gotha in 1752. He died at Gottingen in 1840. Whilst still a child the young Blumenbach exhibited a strong inclination for those pursuits which in after years rendered him so distinguished. He studied first at the university of Jena, then at Gottingen. At this latter place he succeeded in persuading the university to purchase a large collection of objects of natural history, philology, and ethnology, belonging to one aids in the infancy of classical studies, are now curious only as monuments of the past. Some of his smaller Italian compositions likewise are unimportant. His last undertaking was the delivering of public comments on the great poem of Dante, in a lectureship to which he was appointed by the Florentine magistracy. The zeal with which he prepared himself for this task was said to have hastened the decay of his health. He died in Tuscany in 1375. [W.S.]

BOCCAGE, M. A. Le P., a poetess, 1710-1802.
BOCCALINI, T., an Ital. satirist, 1556-1613.
BOCCHERINI, Luigi, a musician, 1740-1805.
BOCCHI, Achilles, a patron of litera., 16th c.
BOCCHORIS, an ancient king of Egypt.
BOCCHUS, k. of Numidia, vanquished 103 B.C.
BOCCOLD, John, commonly called John of Leyden, the chief of a revolt in the 16th cent.
BOCCUCI, Joseph, a Sp. comedian, last cent.
BOCH, John, a Latin poet, 1555-1609.
BOCHART, Samuel, a protestant divine, cel. as a biblical wr. and Oriental scholar, 1599-1667.
BOCK, a German botanist, 1498-1554.
BODARD DE TEZAZ, a French poet, last c.
BODE, Chr. Aug., a Ger. linguist, 1723-1796.
BODE, J. Ehlert, a Germ. astron., 1747-1826.
BODE, J. J. C., a bookseller and trans., d. 1793.
BODENSTEIN, the tutor of Luther, 1480-1541.
BODIN, John, a wr. on jurisprud., 1530-1596.
BODLEY, Sir T., a diplom. and man of letters, founder of the Bodleian library, 1544-1612.
BODMER, J. Jac., a German poet, 1695-1783.
BODSON, Joseph, a French revolutionist who had the care of the royal family at the Temple.
BOECE, an Italian philosopher, 470-525.
BOECE, Hector, a Scotch histor., 1465-1536.
BOECLER, J. H., a Swed. historian, 1611-1692.
BOEHM, And., a disciple of Wolff, 1720-1790.
BOEHM, W. A., a German divine, 1673-1732.

BOEHM, or BŒHMEN, Jacob, surnamed 'Teutonicus,' was born at Old Seidenburgh, a short distance from Gorlitz in Upper Lusatia, 1575. His parents being poor, he was employed in tending cattle from a very early age, and afterwards apprenticed to a shoemaker, a business which he continued to follow after his marriage in 1594. He had the good fortune, for one in his station at that period, to learn reading and writing at the village school, and this was all the education he received, the terms from the dead languages introduced into his writings, and what knowledge he had of alchymy or the other sciences, being acquired in his own rude way subsequently; chiefly, perhaps, from conversation with men of learning, or a little reading in the works of Paracelsus and Fludd. Whilst he was a herd boy, as the legend runs, he once retired to a little stony crag, known as the Land's Crown, and there discovered an opening through which he penetrated into a rocky enclosure, where he saw a great wooden vessel full of money, but was too much alarmed to take any of it, and when he returned with his companions they sought often and with much diligence, but never found the entrance again. This circumstance made a deep impression on Bœhmen, the rather as a stranger arrived there some years later, who was skilled in the finding out such magic treasures, and taking it away, did indeed enrich himself, but perished by an infamous death, the treasure, it is said, having laid there under a curse to him who should ever become possessed of it. Another legend, which relates that a stranger, of a severe but friendly countenance, came to his master's shop while he was yet an apprentice, and warned him of the great work to which God should appoint him, exhibits the singular faith of Bœhmen in the Divine guidance; and the religious habits in which he was thus encouraged soon rendered him as conspicuous among his profane fellow-townsmen, as his humility and love of peace among the arrogant clergy, by whom he was afterwards persecuted. His study of the Sacred Scriptures had been constant and profound, but more especially, if we may judge from the spirit of his theological system, of the Apocalypse and the writings of Paul. His letters manifest the deep earnestness of his convictions, and the sincerity with which he represented himself as the subject of Divine inspiration. 'Art,' he says, 'hath not written here, neither was there any time to consider how to set it punctually down according to the right understanding of the words, but all was ordered according to the direction of the Spirit, which often went in haste; so that in many words letters may be wanting, and in some places a capital letter for a word; for the penman's hand, by reason he was not accustomed to it, did often shake; and though I could have written in a more accurate, fair, and plain manner, yet the reason was this, that the burning fire did often force forward with speed, and the hand and pen must hasten directly after it, for it cometh and goeth as a sudden shower.' 'I, indeed,' he continues, 'can write nothing of myself, but as a child which neither knoweth nor understandeth anything, which neither hath ever been taught, but only that which the Lord vouchsafeth to know in me.' The genuineness of his humility, often expressed in this or similar language by Jacob Bœhmen, and the simplicity of his faith, cannot be doubted by those who have examined his works, any more than the fine religious thoughts, and the depth of mystic wisdom contained in them. The first of these was called the 'Aurora,' or 'Morning Redness,' and was written after he had been for seven days together, as he expresses it, 'environed with the Divine light;' so that he discerned all things in their inward essences, as explained subsequently in his 'Signatura Rerum,' or corresponding forms of things. Experiences of this kind, indeed, were repeated over a period of twelve years, before he was driven to embody his apprehensions in external writing, and when he did so, his MS. was handed about among those who chose to borrow it, until the clergy and the town council interfered, and finally, not only proscribed his writings and prophecies, but poor Bœhmen himself, who was constrained to depart for Dresden; a catastrophe which will be better understood when it is known that many passages in his writings are as red thunderbolts launched against oppression and sham religion. The space to which we are limited renders it impossible to give even an outline of his system, but we may observe generally, that it contains the first principles of Oriental metaphysics, as delivered by the ancient sages, and contained in the fragments of their philosophy, and that its brilliant lights and definite outlines only fade away into vacuity, where they ought to be brought BOHN, JOHN, a German physician, 1640-1719.

BOHUN, EDM., a political wr., 17th century.
BOICHOT, JEAN, a Fr. sculptor, 1738-1814.
BOIELDIEU, ADRIAN, a composer, 1775-1834.
BOIGNE, B. L., Count De, an adventurer in the military service of the Mahrattas, died 1830.

BOILEAU-DESPREAUX, NICOLAS, born in 1636, was the son of an officer of the parliament of Paris, and belonged by descent and connections to a family of lawyers. While his two elder brothers were precocious in youth, Nicolas was slow as well as sickly; and he, the future satirist, was described by his father as a good-natured boy, who would never speak ill of any one. He was a diligent student, but showed little either of invention or of ambition; although, mistaking his vocation as others then mistook it, he wrote a boyish tragedy. At the age of twenty-one he was admitted as an advocate; but his neglect and dislike of professional pursuits scandalized his relations. He was allowed for a time to contemplate the clerical profession, and held for some years a sinecure benefice; which, however, on determining not to take orders, he resigned, refunding also all the profits.—He now betook himself wholly to letters; and, beginning in 1666 his series of Satires in verse, which at length amounted to twelve, he was at once hailed as a valuable contributor to a literature, in which Corneille, though in the full career of his genius, was as yet appreciated but by few, while Molière was only beginning to write. French versification, and French style, alike took a new and finer shape in his hands. The didactic kind of poetry to which he had devoted himself, was cultivated with a success still more brilliant in his series of Epistles. Even now, if his French admirers hesitate in asserting that the Satires come up to the nice perfection of their Horatian models, they extol the Epistles as decidedly superior to those of Horace. Boileau seemed to have determined on furnishing materials for completing the parallel. Besides a few odes and other small pieces, which are confessedly poor, he again measured lances with the Roman poet, by publishing in 1673 his 'Art Poétique,' a poem in four cantos. In the course of that year appeared the first four cantos (increased afterwards by two indifferent ones) of 'Le Lutrin,' a mock-heroic poem. It celebrates a contest as to the placing of a pulpit, which broke out among the canons of the Chapel of Saint Louis, attached to the Palais de Justice. —He was now high in favour at court, and received, with Racine, a joint appointment as historiographer of Louis XIV. He had, long since, been universally acknowledged by the public voice as one of the most distinguished among those men of genius whose writings adorned the Augustan age of France. He lived in cordial intimacy with most of those literary men who belonged to the first rank, such as Racine, Molière, and La Fontaine; and he was really both a prudent and modest man, and a kindly one, and even exhibited frequently an honourable liberality and generosity. But he had been, and was, merciless to the smaller citizens of the republic of letters; and many enemies were necessarily made by a man who often, by one epigrammatic couplet, was able to destroy the reputation and the livelihood of a poor dramatist or romance-writer. Accordingly Boileau was not received into the Academy till 1684; and then only in obedience to a significant hint from the throne. The later years of his life were embittered by much sickness and infirmity; and he died of dropsy in 1711, bequeathing almost all his property to the poor.—The principal works of Boileau have already been named. They place him as one of the members of a literary triumvirate, to which belong, with him, Horace and Pope. While none of the three is a poet of the highest class, the distinctive elements of poetry are very much more scanty in the French critic and versifier than in either of the others. Pope owed much to him, receiving many hints, and not infrequently translating from him literally; and in the art of terse and striking expression, our countryman, successful as he is, can scarcely be pronounced equal to his model. Pope's juvenile 'Essay on Criticism' is by no means so masterly as the 'Art Poétique;' but 'The Rape of the Lock,' if it wants that air of comic verisimilitude, which is so striking in the 'Lutrin,' rises far above it through its supernatural and other imaginative ornaments, to which nothing similar is presented by the French poet, or could have been invented by his timid and sluggish fancy. [W.S.]

BOILEAU, GILES, a classical wr., 1631-1669.
BOILEAU, JAS., an eccles. writer, 1635-1716.
BOILEAU, JOHN J., a Fr. moralist, 1649-1735.
BOINVILLE, A. DE, a Frenchman of noble family, who joined the republican party, and was aid-de-camp to Lafayette, 1770-1812.
BOISFREMONT, C. DE, a Fr. painter, d. 1838.
BOISROBERT, FR. LE METEL DE, a wit and poet, one of the fndrs. of the Fr. Acad., 1592-1662.
BOISSARD, J. J., poet and antiq., 1528-1602.
BOISSAT, P. DE, a miscel. writer, 1603-1662.
BOISSY, L. DE, a dramatic writer, 1694-1658.
BOISSY D'ANGLAS, FR. ANTH., cel. as a member of the French convention, and after the fall of Robespierre of the Comité de Salut Public, and the council of 500; and when the government of Buonaparte was established, of the French senate. He has the reputation of being a sincere lover of liberty, though somewhat of a changeling, and has left behind him a great number of works, chiefly political, which have been published together, under the title of 'D'Etudes d'un Vieillard,' (experiences of an old man,) 1756-1826. [E.R.]
BOL, FERDINAND, a Dutch painter, 1611-1681.
BOLD, SAM., a controversial divine, died 1737.
BOLDONIC, C., an Italian author, last cent.
BOLESLAUS I., king of Poland, 999-1025.
BOLESLAUS II., succeed. 1058, d. about 1083.
BOLESLAUS III., b. 1085, suc. 1102, d. 1139.
BOLESLAUS IV., suc. his br. 1146, d. 1159.
BOLESLAUS V., b. 1219, suc. 1227, d. 1279.
BOLEYN, ANNE, q. of Henry VIII., 1507-1536.

BOLINGBROKE, HENRY ST. JOHN, Lord, an orator, statesman, and philosophical essayist, was born at his father's seat at Battersea, on 1st October, 1678. His family was divided between the two great contending parties of the seventeenth century, and it so happened that the high Tory statesman and sceptical philosopher was educated by a presbyterian grandmother, under the influence of Daniel Burgess, the dissenting divine. Little is known of his early education. In 1700 he married Frances, daughter of Sir Henry Winch-BONARELLI, G. U., an Ital. poet, 1553-1608.

BONASONI, G., an Italian painter, 1498-1564.
BONASIA, B., an Italian carver, died 1527.
BONAVENTURE, J. F., a Rom. eccle., d. 1274.
BONAVENTURE OF PADUA, a cardinal, noted as a friend of Petrarch, assassinated 1386.
BONCERF, P. F., a wr. on civil law, 1745-1794.
BONCHAMP, A. DE, a Vendean chief, k. 1793.
BONCIARIO, M. A., an Ital. au., 1555-1616.
BOND, J., a physician and classic, 1550-1612.
BOND, OLIVER, an Irish rebel, 1720-1798.
BONDT, N., a Dutch historian, 1732-1792.
BONE, HENRY, an enameller, 1755-1834.
BONEFACIO, VEN., an Ital. painter, d. 1630.
BONER, ULRICH, a German fabulist, 13th ct.
BONIFACE, one of the greatest captains of the 5th cent., count of the Roman empire, slain 432.
BONIFACE, ST., a cel. missionary, killed 754.
BONIFACE, the first, pope of Rome, 418-422; the second, 530-532; the third, 606; the fourth, 607-614; the fifth, 617-625; the sixth, 896; the seventh, 974-984; the ninth, 1389-1404.
BONJOUR, WM., a Chinese missionary, d. 1714.
BONNATERE, P. J., a Fr. natural., 1747-1804.
BONNEFONS, JOHN, a Latin poet, 1554-1614.
BONNER, EDM., the notorious bishop, d. 1569.
BONNET, CH., an em. physiologist, 1720-93.
BONNEVAL, CL. ALEX., count of, a deserter from Prince Eugene, master of the Turkish ordnance under the title of Achmet Pacha, died 1747.
BONNEVILLE, N., a journalist and poet of the French revolution, the friend of Lafayette and Kosciusko, au. of 'Esprit des Religions,' 1760-1828.
BONNIER, A. E., a repub. diplom., 1750-1799.
BONNIER D'ARCO, A. S., a Fr. diplo., d. 1797.
BONNINGTON, R. P., an Eng. artist, 1801-28.
BONNYCASTLE, J., an Eng. math., d. 1821.
BONOMI, J. F., legate of Gr. XIII., 1536-1589.
BONOMI, JOSEPH, an Ital. architect, d. 1808.
BONNOR, HONORE, a Fr. historian, 14th cent.
BOOKER, REV. LUKE, LL.D., a Church of Eng. clergyman, and miscellaneous wr., 1762-1835.
BOONE, DAN., an American advent., d. 1822.
BOONEN, A., a Dutch painter, 1669-1729.
BOOS, MARTIN, a Bavarian divine, 1762-1825.
BOOTH, BARTON, an actor and au., 1681-1733.
BOOTH, SIR F., disting. for his gift of £20,000 to the arctic expedition of Sir John Ross, d. 1850.
BOOTH, GEORGE, a royalist, created baron Delamere at the restoration, died 1684.
BOOTH, HENRY, son of the preceding, created earl of Warrington by William III., died 1694.
BOR, P. C., a Dutch historian, 1559-1635.
BORDA, JOHN CH., a Fr. mathema., 1733-99.
BORDE, J. B. DE LA, a miscell. wr., ex. 1794.
BORDELON, LAUR., a misc. wr., 1653-1730.
BORDEU, THEOP. DE, a medical au., d. 1776.
BORELLI, J. A., an Ital. philoso., 1608-1679.
BORGHESE, the name of a family disting. in Ital. history, one of whom married Maria Pauline Buonaparte, sister of Napoleon, and was made governor of the Transalpine provinces. The Princess Borghese, after sep. from her husband, d. 1825.
BORGHESI, DIOMED, an Ital. wr., 1540-98.
BORGHINI, V., an Ital. antiquar., 1515-1580.
BORGIA, CÆSAR, son of Alexander VI., and equally disting. for his wicked ambition, k. 1507.
BORGIA, LUCRECE, daughter of Alexander VI.
BORGIA, STEPH., an It. cardinal, 1731-1804.
BORLASE, W., a county historian, 1696-1772.
BORN, BERTR. DE, a troubadour, 12th cent.
BORN, BARON DE, a mineralogist, 1742-1791.
BORRI, J. F., a religious adventurer, d. 1632.
BORROMEO, CH., an Ital. cardinal, disting. by his virtues and literary talents, 1538-1584.
BORROMEO, F., a bshp. of Milan, 1564-1631.
BORRONIMI, FR., an architect, 1599-1677.
BORY, GABRIEL DE, an astron., 1728-1801.
BOS, LAMBERT, a Greek scholar, 1670-1717.
BOSE, GASPARD, a German botanist, last cent.
BOSC, L. AUG. WM., a naturalist, last cent.
BOSC, PETER DU, a celeb. preacher, d. 1692.
BOSCAWEN, EDW., a naval com., 1711-1761.
BOSCAWEN, W., a classic. schol., 1752-1811.
BOSCH, BERNARD, a Dutch poet, 1746-1830.
BOSCH, JEROME, a Latin poet, 1740-1811.
BOSCH, L. A. G., a French naturalist, last c.
BOSCOVICH, ROGER JOSEPH, a learned and profound Jesuit; born at Ragusa in 1711; died at Milan in 1787. The writings of Boscovich are numerous and important. His dissertations on 'Vires Vivæ,' on 'Light,' and on the 'Solar Spots,' gave their author highest rank amongst the physical philosophers and astronomers of the time. He grasped the great conceptions of Newton, and did much to hasten the general acceptance of the theory of gravitation; but his chief claim on the attention of posterity, rests on the speculations in his 'Theoria Philosophicæ Naturalis'—speculations which touch on one side, the afterwards celebrated hypothesis of monads, and seem to point towards a physical scheme of Idealism. According to Boscovich the ultimate elements of matter are atoms, or points indivisible and without extension. Each atom, or point, being surrounded by numerous concentric rings of influence—alternately of attraction and repulsion, one atom may exist towards any other in various relations, determined by their distance from each other. For instance, the two atoms may be within the sphere of each other's attraction—then is the body solid: or the two atoms may be within the sphere of mutual repulsion,—then is the body gaseous and elastic; or two atoms may be so placed that they neither repel nor attract, being on the line of indifference,—then is the body liquid. Gravitation, or universal attraction, is, according to this view, the relation which atoms bear to each other after they have passed beyond the smaller or molecular distances; while the phenomena of physics and chemistry depend upon and arise out of their various and varying relations while they are within these infinitesimal or molecular distances. This singular and probably far from inaccurate conception, destroys the common notion that matter is brute and inert; and represents the phenomena of Nature as the immediate issue of Active Forces;—a view which the progress of modern science unquestionably favours. [J.P.N.]
BOSQUILLON, E. F. M., a Gr. schol., 1744-1816.
BOSSCHE, P. V. D., a Dut. savant, 1686-1736.
BOSSI, C. A., an Italian poet, 1758-1823.
BOSSU, RENE LE, a philos. critic, 17th cent.
BOSSUET, JAMES BENIGNE, a celebrated French divine, was born in 1627, at Dijon, the capital of Burgundy, now in the department of Cote D'Or. Having commenced his education at the college of Jesuits in his native place, he re-

BOUILLY, J. N., a diplo. and hist., 1763-1840.
BOULAGE, T. P., a Fr. jurisconsult, 1768-1820.
BOULAINVILLIERS, Henry De, comte de St. Saire, a political writer and hist., 1658-1722.
BOULANGER, N. A., a Fr. engin., 1722-1759.
BOULAY DE LA MEURTHE, A. C. J., Comte De, distinguished as a moderate republican, and also as a political writer and orator, was born 1761, appointed to the civil tribunal at Nanci, 1793, and to the council of 500 in the year 1795. He took an active part in the revolution of the 18th Brumaire, and was remarkable for his fidelity to Napoleon, whom he regarded as the representative of national independence, and of the principles of the revolution. He was proscribed by the Bourbons at the second restoration, and passed some years in exile, when he wrote his 'Tableau Politique des règnes de Charles II. et de Jacques II.,' containing his review of the causes which led to the establishment of the English republic in 1649. Buonaparte made honourable mention of him at St. Helena, as a fearless and honest man. The last years of his life were passed tranquilly in the midst of his family. [E.R.]
BOULLIAU, Ishmael, a French astron. and general scholar, au. of several works, 1605-1694.
BOULTER, Hugh, abp. of Armagh, d. 1742.
BOULTON, Matthew, an engineer of disting. fame in connec. with his partner Watt, 1728-1809.

[Soho Works, near Birmingham.]

BOULTON, Rich., an English physician, last c.
BOURBON, the reigning family of France, Spain, and Sicily, the princes of which trace their descent from 'Robert the Strong,' killed 866.
BOURBON, Charles De Montpensier, Duc De, known as constable of France, 1480-1527.
BOURBON, Louis, cardinal and abp. of Toledo, distinguished in the revolution of 1812, 1777-1823.
BOURBON, Louis, Hy. Jos., Duc De, and prince de Condé, father of the ill-fated duc d'Enghein, found hung in his bed-chamber, 1830.
BOURBOTTE, N., one of those remarkable characters raised to an unenviable notoriety by the French revolution, whose intrepid bearing might be mistaken for heroism, if its fire were not darkened by savage cruelty and ambition without principle. Little is known of his early life, but he was about twenty-seven years of age when deputed to the national convention, 1792, as a member of the Jacobin party. He now signalized himself by voting for the death of the king 'sans appel et sans sursis,' (without appeal and without delay), and afterwards of the unhappy Marie Antoinette. Commissioned to La Vendée by the national convention, he gave evident proofs of his military courage and administrative talents, but committed excesses which led to his recall and accusation by the Committee of Public Safety. He had the good fortune to be acquitted, and was subsequently appointed to the army of the Rhine, where he again manifested his soldier-like qualities, tarnished by the same faults. In 1794 he commanded openly in the insurrection which overthrew the power of Robespierre, and was on the high road to the dictatorship when he and his colleagues were crushed by Legendre at the head of the sectional forces. Condemned by the revolutionary tribunal, he stabbed himself with a dagger, but survived to see his fellow-prisoners beheaded, and to undergo the same fate. He retained his courageous self-possession to the last moment, and manifested in his dying words the unconquerable spirit which animated him. [E.R.]
BOURCET, P. J. De, a Fr. milit. au., d. 1780.
BOURCHIER, J., gov. of Calais un. Henry III.
BOURCHIER, T., abp. of Canterbury, d. 1486.
BOURDALOUE, L., a Fr. preacher, 1632-1704.
BOURDELOT, John, a classical com., d. 1638.
BOURDELOT, P. M., a nat. and phys., 1610-85.
BOURDELOT, P. B., an. of Annotations, d. 1709.
BOURDON, Leonard John Joseph, a member of the French convention in 1792, is chiefly memorable for the interest he took in national education, and for his part in the denunciation and arrest of Robespierre, on which occasion he shared the command of the national guard with Barras. He was also charged with the translation of the remains of Marat to the Pantheon, and directed the ceremonies of their entombment. When his party was defeated by Legendre, Bourdon was denounced as an assassin, and met the charge by heading a conspiracy which broke out 1st April, 1795, and led to his imprisonment at Ham. Restored to liberty by the amnesty of October in the same year, he afterwards appeared in the council of 500, only to hear the same accusation repeated, this time by Boissy D'Anglas. The charge was not pressed against him in legal form, and Bourdon was subsequently appointed agent for the directory at Hamburgh. Though a violent Jacobin, it is by no means clear that he was the sanguinary monster sometimes represented. He died a natural death as master of a primary school in Paris, some years after the re-establishment of authority by Buonaparte. [E.R.]
BOURDON, Francis Louis, one of the most sanguinary members of the convention in 1792, obtained his seat by favour of Leonard Bourdon, who had been elected for two departments, and allowed his namesake, though not related to him, to usurp one of them. He was notorious for the atrocity of his imprecations in the convention, always securing his own safety by attaching himself to the strongest side. He was among the fifty-three deputies condemned to transportation on the 19th Fructidor, (5th Sept., 1797), and died soon after his arrival at Cayenne. [E.R.]
BOURDON, Sebastian, a Fr. painter, d. 1671.
BOURDONNAISE, B. F. M. De La, a French naval officer, gov. of the Isle of France, 1699-1755.

BRAHE, P., Comte De, a disting. Swede, tutor of Christina, and fndr. of many universities, d. 1680.

BRAHE, TYCHO, a celebrated astronomer, was born on the 14th December, 1546, at Knudstorp in Scania, and was the eldest son and the second child of a family of five sons and five daughters. Having been adopted by his uncle, George Brahe, and placed under his care, he commenced the study of Latin in his seventh year; and in opposition to the wishes of his father, who had destined him for the military profession, he prosecuted his scholastic studies for five years under private teachers. About three years after his father's death in 1559, he went to the university of Copenhagen, with the view of preparing himself for the profession of the law by the study of rhetoric and philosophy. He had spent little more than a year at college when a great eclipse of the sun, on the 21st August, 1560, excited general interest, and made Tycho an astronomer. Surprised at the close agreement between the calculated and observed phenomena, he resolved to study a science which, in addition to its power of predicting future events, was, in general opinion, connected with the destinies of man. While he was indulging this new passion by the study of Stadius's 'Tabulæ Bergenses,' he was sent from Copenhagen, in February, 1562, under the charge of a tutor, to study jurisprudence at Leipzig. There he devoted all his leisure hours to the study of astronomy, making calculations, constructing instruments, and carrying on astronomical observations.—In May, 1565, he left Leipzig to take possession of the estate of his uncle, to which he had succeeded; but in consequence of the opposition made by his parents to his astronomical studies, he quitted Denmark in order to pay a visit to some of the more interesting cities in Germany. From Wittemberg, which he reached in 1566, he went to Rostock, where in a duel with a countryman of his own, he lost his nose, which he very ingeniously replaced by one of gold and silver. Here he remained till 1569, when he visited Augsburg, where he made the acquaintance of John and Paul Hainzel, two distinguished citizens and ardent lovers of astronomy. Paul Hainzel constructed for him, at his own expense, a magnificent quadrant, which exhibited single minutes on its graduated limb, and with which Tycho made many valuable observations during his stay at Augsburg. On his return to Denmark in 1571, Tycho found that his reputation had preceded him. The king invited him to court, and his maternal uncle, Steno Bille, gave him, at the convent of Herritzvold, where he resided, apartments for an observatory and a laboratory. Tycho, most unfortunately, conceived a passion for alchymy, and indulged in the hope of converting the baser metals into gold. He was roused, however, from this dream by the appearance of the new star in Cassiopeia, which continued visible from November, 1572, till its disappearance in March, 1574.—After marrying a peasant girl in 1573, and delivering, at the king's request, a course of lectures on astronomy, he visited Hesseland, Frankfort, Basle, and Venice, and returned in 1575 to Ratisbon to witness the coronation of the emperor Rudolph. Tycho's reputation in foreign countries had now begun to excite notice in his own. Frederick II. sent messengers to invite him to his capital, and Tycho willingly obeyed the royal summons. The king received him with the most flattering attention, gave him a grant for life of the island of Huen, and offered to erect at his own expense all the buildings and instruments that were necessary for carrying on his astronomical and chemical studies. The celebrated observatory of Uraniburg, or the city of the heavens, was founded in August 1576, and supplied with instruments; and within its walls Tycho carried on those observations with which his name is inseparably connected.—Upon the death of Frederick II., and the accession of Christian III., the prospects of Tycho were greatly changed. Although a temporary glory was thrown around himself and his children by a visit from James VI. of Scotland, and other princes, yet his studies were unwillingly tolerated by the Danish court. The nobles grudged him his pension and the magnificent establishment at Uraniburg. The physicians envied his popularity as a medical practitioner, and with such influential enemies, Walchendorp, the president, had no difficulty in indulging his own personal dislike to Tycho by measures of injustice and persecution.—Resolved to abandon for ever his ungrateful country, Tycho, with all his apparatus of instruments and books, his wife, five sons and four daughters, along with his pupils, assistants, and servants, male and female, embarked at Copenhagen to seek the hospitality of a better country. After landing at Rostock in 1597, he went by invitation to the castle of Wandesberg, near Hamburg, the seat of Count Rantzau, where his family remained till he was munificently established at Prague, the capital of the emperor Rudolph. This distinguished sovereign gave him the castle of Benach as a residence, with a pension of 3,000 crowns. There he was visited in 1600 by Kepler, for whom he obtained the appointment of imperial mathematician to the emperor, on the condition of assisting Tycho in his observations. Tycho did not long enjoy the liberality of Rudolph. The persecutions and sufferings to which he had been exposed, had preyed upon his mind, and disturbed its tranquillity. An exile from his beloved country, and a stranger in a foreign land, his studies lost their power over his mind, and under the influence probably of a painful disease with which he was affected, a temporary delirium overshadowed some of his latest hours. From this painful condition, however, he recovered, and resigned himself with true piety into the hands of his Maker on the 24th October, 1601, in the fifty-fifth year of his age. The instruments of Tycho were purchased from his heirs by the emperor Rudolph for 22,000 crowns They were shut up in the house of Curtius, and were regarded with such veneration, that not even Kepler was allowed to examine or make use of them. They remained in the same place till the death of the emperor in 1619, when they were carried off, or destroyed, during the troubles which agitated Bohemia. —The island of Huen was, in Tycho's lifetime sold to a Danish nobleman. The buildings were all demolished, excepting the farm-house, which belonged to Tycho. His dwelling-house and his observatory are marked by two pits and a mound of earth which enclosed the garden. A very full account of the life and labours of Tycho will be found in Sir David Brewster's 'Martyrs of Science.' [D.B.]

BRILL, M., a landscape painter, 1550-1584.

BRILL, Paul, a landscape painter, 1556-1626.

BRINDLEY, James, the man who first devoted himself to civil engineering as a profession. In Great Britain engineering works were not intrusted to civilians till about the middle of the 18th century, when capitalists began to embark their wealth in speculations that promised a pecuniary return only, without regard to their own neighbourhood being the scene of the projected improvement, or facilities being afforded by it to their peculiar business. The change was the forerunner of increased national means, and by the enlarged field of employment it opened up, gave rise to this new order of professional men,—pioneers of civilization. Brindley was born in 1716, at Thorsett, near Chapel-le-frith in Derbyshire. He followed the usual labours of agriculture until his seventeenth year, without the advantages of even the most ordinary education. But he was a genius—

'Of mother wit, and wise without the schools.'

He was apprenticed to a millwright, who left him often to work out what the master himself should have designed and directed. Thus his inventive faculties were brought into exercise, and he frequently astonished his employer by the ingenious improvements which he effected, and by the results of his zeal for his master's honour. When his apprenticeship ended he engaged in business on his own account. In 1752 he erected machinery for draining coal pits at Clifton, in Lancashire. The water wheel was 30 feet under ground, and the water was supplied from the Irwell, by a tunnel 600 yards long. This was a work of boldness and ingenuity a century ago, though we may smile at it now! In 1756 he erected a steam engine at Newcastle-under-Lyne, which was calculated to effect a great saving in fuel over the ordinary Newcomen engine. About 1757 Brindley was consulted by the duke of Bridgewater as to the practicability of constructing a canal from Worsley to Manchester. Brindley's success in this undertaking was the means of awakening public attention to the advantages of canals. Had a man of inferior genius, or less dauntless courage, undertaken the works, it might probably have turned out a failure, and the development of our inland navigation might have been deferred some years longer. When the canal was completed as far as Barton, where the Irwell is navigable for large vessels, Brindley proposed to carry it over that river by an aqueduct 39 feet above the surface of the river! This project was ridiculed by the practical men of the day. One much respected individual of the time would not discount the duke of Bridgewater's bill for £500, and when the dimensions of the canal aqueduct were communicated to him, he exclaimed:—'I have often heard of castles in the air, but never was before shown where any of them was to be erected.' The duke raised the money, however, and in less than one year Brindley completed the aqueduct! Within forty-two years after the duke of Bridgewater's canal was opened, application had been made to parliament for 165 acts for making canals in Great Britain at an expense of £13,000,000. Brindley engineered the great undertakings which opened an internal water communication between the Thames, the Humber, the Severn, and the Mersey, and united the great ports of London, Liverpool, Bristol, and Hull, by canals which passed through the richest and most industrial districts of England. Brindley died 1772, at the age of fifty-six, the victim of intense application to an arduous and exciting profession. He was interred at New Chapel, in Staffordshire. Brindley is reported to have answered a Committee of the House of Commons, when asked for what object rivers were created:—'To feed navigable canals.' Railway engineers of the present day conceive they are turning rivers to their primitive destinations, for canals are being converted into railways! Brindley could neither read nor write until late in life, and then but poorly. He had great powers of mental calculation, was of unwearying application and industry, and eminently successful. [L.D.B.G.]

[Aqueduct over the Irwell.]

BRINKLEY, Dr. J., an astronom., 1760-1835.

BRINVILLIERS, the notor. poisoner, ex. 1676.

BRISBANE, Admiral Sir Ch., an officer of distinguished gallantry in the late war, the companion in arms of Rodney, Hood, and Nelson, appointed governor of St. Vincent, 1808; died 1829.

BRISSEAU, Pet., a Fr. physician, 1631-1717.

BRISSON, M. J., a Fr. naturalist, 1723-1806.

BRISSOT, Peter, a medical au., 1478-1522.

BRISSOT, Jean Pierre, distinguished in the history of the revolution as leader of the Girondins, was an orator and political writer of the first ability. The commencement of his public career as a journalist was characterized by a singular stroke of vanity, whereby the plebeian appellation of the humble pastry-cook who begot him, was metamorphosed into the name of his birth-place, and shone with aristocratic refulgence as 'De Warville.' In the obscurity of his early life he seems to have acquired all the experience of men and things necessary to a political intriguer. Restless, scheming, and ambitious, he was indefatigable in his zeal for reform, especially for the amelioration of the criminal code and the abolition of slavery. It is difficult to say whether his character was spoiled, or rather made, by the philosophy of Rousseau. Madame Roland, when it became her fate to meet him, was certainly disappointed in his appearance, for she saw no passion in his countenance corresponding to that of his style, and was rather struck by the busy mobility of a novice than the dignity of an apostle in his con-ation of Reid's own fancy. On this historical point we shall remark at length under the article Reid; suffice it to state here, that Brown has completely failed, and shows besides an ignorance of the true merits of the question, quite remarkable in a man of undeniably quick apprehension. The subject of Sensation disposed of, he next attacks the account given by his predecessor of our mental faculties—a word to the use of which he strongly objects; producing instead of the careful description of phenomena occupying the volumes of Reid and Stewart, an artificial classification of specious simplicity, but throwing no real light either on the nature of the more important psychological facts, or their relations. Mental phenomena, he conceives, should be divided into external and internal States of the thinking principle,—the former being our sensations, the latter the contents of the Intelligence. Internal states, he considers, are either the reproduction of ideas of absent objects, by means of what he calls simple suggestion, or the perception of their relations, through relative suggestion. Adding our Emotions, classed into immediate, retrospective, and prospective, Brown conceives he has described and explained all mental phenomena.—It were easy to show that in most of his attempts to simplify, Brown has mistaken and contorted the great facts of psychology; his fatal error, however, is this—an error which may be inferred from the mere phraseology of his system,—he confounds the will with merely passive desire, from which it had been a prime aim of his predecessors clearly to distinguish it. The will, he says, is simply desire, coupled with the belief that the object of the desire will follow as an effect. That great faculty, the coequal of Sensibility and Intelligence, the source and condition of human liberty and dignity, is thus purely and simply suppressed; nor was it possible for Brown to evade consequences which ever belong to that suppression;—his philosophy is on the edge of those two abysses, scepticism and fatalism. It is in nowise a favourable symptom either of the taste or acuteness of the time, that these Lectures have obtained a currency so wide. If their metaphysics are bad, their style, considered as a philosophical one, is certainly the reverse of commendable. Diffuse and inaccurate, it is wearisome and misleading. Ambitiously rhetorical, its metaphors and digressions, often pleasing by themselves, distract the attention of the student from the thought. Brown himself seemed to imagine that a philosophy might be improvised: and it is to be feared that his example and writings have done much, to maintain the youth of our time in the delusion, that acquaintance with the Science of Mind may be promoted, and truth discerned, through glib use of the mere forms of philosophical thought. There is no use in such popular philosophy. If an aspect of dialectic is demanded of public instructors now, the time will come, when, to obtain acceptance, they must exercise reflection also. [J.P.N.]

BROWNE, ANTH., an English lawyer, d. 1567.
BROWNE, GEO., Count, an officer in the Russian service, 30 yrs. gover. of Livonia, 1698-1792.
BROWNE, ISAAC HAWKINS, a poet, 1706-1776.
BROWNE, PAT., M.D., a naturalist, 1720-1790.
BROWNE, SIMON, a controv. divine, 1680-1732.
BROWNE, ULYSSES MAXIM., an Irish exile, field-marshal in the service of Austria, 1705-1757.
BROWNE, SIR W., a wr. on optics, 1692-1774.
BROWNE, WM., a pastoral poet, 17th century.
BROWNE, W. G., a disting. traveller, b. 1814.
BROWNRIGG, W., an exp. philos., 1714-1800.
BRU, MOSES V., a Spanish painter, 1682-1703.

BRUCE, ROBERT, king of Scots, was born in the year 1274. It is unusual to call monarchs by their family name, but Bruce has generally been made an exception, as he rather gained his kingdom by his services than acquired it by hereditary succession. After the death of Margaret of Norway, the daughter of Alexander III., there were several competitors for the Scottish throne, chiefly among those adventurous Norman knights who were collaterally connected with the Scottish royal family. Among these was a Robert of Bruce—supposed to be a corruption of Bruix, his ancestral domain in Normandy—whose claim was that he was the son of Isabel, second daughter of David earl of Huntingdon, the brother of King William the Lion. On hereditary principle, as we now understand it, there was, however, a preferable claimant in John Balliol, who was grandson of the eldest daughter of the earl of Huntingdon, and there were many other claimants. The advantage which the English king took of this confusion, and his attempt to subjugate Scotland, are well-known chapters in British history. Had he been less tyrannical the Scots might have submitted to his sway, but he brought in high Norman notions of prerogative and feudal exactions, to which the Scots were unaccustomed. Exasperated and prepared to free themselves, they offered a good opportunity to any daring and ambitious man who could put forth a title to head them as their king. Robert, the grandson of that Bruce who had been one of the original claimants, after attending the court of Edward, and for some time hesitating, was at length, partly by accident, driven to take up his position as the kingly leader of the Scots. He had been concocting with Cumyn, who had similar claims, a plan for one or other of them starting for the crown, and receiving the assistance of the other, who should be largely rewarded with the private estates of both. Cumyn revealed the project, and Bruce, secretly warned, escaped from the English court to Scotland. Unconscious that his treachery was known, Cumyn met the fugitive in the Church of the Franciscans in Dumfries. Hot words passed, and Bruce in his fury stabbing him, he was despatched by an attendant. The deed of sacrilegious violence, while it occasioned Bruce's excommunication by the pope, drove him in desperation to raise the banner of Scottish nationality. Finding an enemy not only in the English invader, but in the Celtic potentate the lord of Lorn, his cause seemed long hopeless. But oppression increased the number of his followers, and at last he gained such substantial success, that Edward resolved to go again to Scotland to crush him. He died on the way, and when his strong hand was removed the Scots rallied in larger numbers round the liberator, and put him at the head of a considerable army. Edward II., attempting to restore the English power by leading into Scotland a vast army of the flower of the English chivalry, only brought them to destruction at the field of Bannockburn. This conclusive

Kinross, and felt the heart-sickness of a disappointed attachment for the daughter of the people with whom he lodged, and who was a pupil of his. Several of his poems have perpetuated the memory of this circumstance, and the best of them is his 'Alexis, a Pastoral,' in which the refinement of the scholar is elegantly blended with the poetical sense of the muse, and the plaintive eloquence of the lover. In 1766 he removed to a school near Alloa, where he composed his 'Lochleven,' a descriptive poem in blank verse, in which he has gratefully remembered the virtues of his tried friends Arnot and Henderson. All this time his health was gradually sinking, and the fatigues of the village school, no longer relieved and hallowed to his heart by the evening instruction of his 'Eumelia,' were more than he could endure. In the winter of this year he abandoned whatever expectation he may have formed in the great business of life, and returned to his parents, that the loving hearts which had watched him with so much solicitude in the morning of his days might hush him to rest in their early evening. His last words are a celebration of the return of Spring:—

'———— but not to me returns
The vernal joy my better years have known;
Dim in my breast life's dying taper burns,
And all the joys of life with health are flown.'

The pathos and melody of many passages in this elegy with the 'Alexis' already alluded to, and his farewell to Lochleven, in imitation of 'Lochaber nae Mair,' fairly represent the natural talent of Bruce for poetry. In personal character he was remarkable for ingenuousness and modesty, and, as a matter of course in a poet, for a feeling heart and a lively imagination. Living a few short years, consumed by hard study and anxiety, his poems are few in number. They were published in a volume, with some others added to make a miscellany, but without any means of distinguishing the authors, soon after his death, by his friend and fellow-poet the Rev. John Logan, and at a later period, properly discriminated, in the collection of Dr. Anderson. [E.R.]

BRUCE, P. H., a Ger. officer and trav., d. 1757.
BRUCKER, JOHN J., a Ger. critic, 1696-1770.
BRUCKNER, JOHN, a Luther. min., 1726-1804.
BRUEYS, D. A., a Fr. dramatist, 1640-1723.
BRUEYS, F. P. DE, a Fr. admiral, 1760-1798.
BRUGIERE, C. J., a Fr. dramatist, 1670-1754.
BRUGMANS, S. J., a cel. physician, 1763-1819.
BRUGNATELLI, L., an It. chemist, 1726-1818.
BRUGUIER, JOHN, a Fr. protes. divine, d. 1684.
BRUGUIERE, A. A., a French author, d. 1823.

BRUHL, HY., Count, Polish minister of state, 1700-1763. FREDERICK LOUIS, his son, a dramatic writer, 1739-1793. HANS MORITZ, his nephew, an astronomer and political economist, d. 1809.

BRUNCK, R. F. P., a disting. critic, 1729-1803.
BRUNE, W. M. A., marshal of Fr., 1763-1815.

BRUNEAU, MATHURIN, a pretender to the crown of Fr. under the title of Louis XVII., 1818.

BRUNEL, MARC ISAMBARD, a civil engineer of great fame, a consummate mechanical genius, a man of rare singleness of mind and kindly disposition. He was born at Hacqueville in Normandy, in 1769—the year that produced so many notabilities. He began an education for the church at the seminary of St. Nicain, at Rouen. His genius had a different bent, however, and he so distinguished himself in mathematics and physical science, that the superior of the establishment recommended his adopting another profession. He entered the royal navy of France—constructed a quadrant for himself—made several voyages, and returned home in 1792, during the reign of terror. Being a royalist, he emigrated to the United States, where necessity became the mother of his wonderfully fertile invention. He surveyed for canals, planned sawing mills, erected boring mills for the ordnance, was architect of the first theatre in New York (since burned down); and while in America conceived the blockmaking machinery, the success of which should alone give him a conspicuous place in the annals of industrial mechanism. With the block machinery on paper he came to Britain in the year 1800. Lord Spencer, then first lord of the admiralty, became his friend and patron. From this time Brunel continued to reside in England, and refused to entertain propositions made to him to settle abroad, under the auspices of other governments. After much delay, he was employed to make a set of block machinery for Portsmouth Dockyard. With happy discrimination Brunel selected the late Henry Maudslay as the maker of the machines, and thus was laid the foundation of one of the most extensive and perfect engineering establishments in the kingdom. The machines were made exactly after Brunel's models. They have been for forty-seven years at work, and no change or improvement in any of them has since been made or suggested. This is a type of all Brunel's work. His plans and drawings were kept to himself till so elaborated that they really contained the essence of all that could be done in simplifying the means to accomplish the end in view. His circular saw for cutting veneers, the machine for winding cotton balls, as inventions in pure mechanism—and the Chatham Dockyard and the Thames Tunnel, amongst works of civil engineering, may be cited in illustration. The first steam-boat that ran on the Thames, and the first double acting steam engine used for propelling steam vessels, were erected under his instructions in 1816.—The history of the Thames Tunnel is too recent and familiar to require that we should repeat it here. Despite its failure, commercially speaking, Brunel continued to look upon it as his greatest achievement, and devoted the latter years of his valuable life in completing it. It is undoubtedly a great and marvellous triumph of skill, and only those who know the extraordinary variety of engineering resources which it called into play, can sufficiently appreciate the talents of the engineer who planned them and superintended their execution. Brunel died in 1849, in his eighty-first year. His son carries his father's fame in full vitality to another generation. Brunel was knighted in 1842. He was V.P.R.S., and corresponding member of the Institute of France. [L.D.B.G.]

BRUNELLESCHI, FILIPPO, one of the earliest and most celebrated Italian architects of the Revival, was born at Florence, in 1377. He was brought up a goldsmith, but devoted himself equally to sculpture and architecture. He paid, also, early attention to perspective, and instructed Masaccio in this science. Brunelleschi joined the competi-

[Lucius Junius Brutus]

BRUTUS, the surname of a Roman family, several members of which appear in history. 1. LUCIUS JUNIUS BRUTUS, was the son of Marcus Junius, and of Tarquinia, sister of Tarquinius Superbus (Tarquin the Proud,) the last king of Rome. When still young he lost his father and elder brother by the cruelty of Tarquin; and he himself escaped a similar fate by feigning idiocy; which perhaps gave origin to the surname Brutus or Dullard. The violence offered by Sextus, the son of Tarquin, to Lucretia, the wife of Collatinus, called forth the true character of Brutus. Being a witness along with her husband and father to her injured virtue, he drew from her bosom the knife with which she vindicated her innocence, and bound himself by the most solemn oath to visit the crime of Sextus upon Tarquin and all his accursed race, and to suffer no man thereafter to be king in Rome. The populace were easily excited, and these being readily joined by the army, Tarquin and his family were banished from Rome, B.C. 510. In the following year Brutus and Collatinus, the husband of Lucretia, were elected as the first consuls, and headed the army against the attempts which were made to restore the banished family. When leading the cavalry against Porsenna, who had espoused the cause of the Tarquins, Brutus engaged in single combat with Aruns, the son of the exiled king, and both fell, pierced by each other's spears. 2. DECIMUS JUNIUS BRUTUS, served under Cæsar in Gaul; and, on the breaking out of the civil war, B.C. 49, actively exerted himself in promoting his interests. He afterwards obtained the command of Further Gaul, and performed services so important, that Cæsar promised him the government of Cisalpine Gaul, with the prætorship for B.C. 44, and the consulship for B.C. 42. Being thus in possession of the entire confidence of Cæsar, his co-operation was of great value to the other conspirators; and he was accordingly sent by them to conduct their victim to the senate house on the day of the assassination. The motives which induced Brutus to join the conspiracy against his friend and benefactor, are not known. After the death of Cæsar, B.C. 44, he went to his province of Cisalpine Gaul, from which he was expelled in the following year by Antony, to whom the same province had been assigned by the people. He now resolved to cross over into Macedonia to Marcus Brutus, but his soldiers deserted him on the march; and he was betrayed by Camillus, a Gaulish chief, and put to death by order of Antony. 3. MARCUS JUNIUS BRUTUS, son of M. Junius Brutus, by Servilia, sister of Cato of Utica, was born B.C. 85. When the civil war broke out between Cæsar and Pompey, B.C. 49, Brutus, contrary to expectation, joined the party of the latter, and fought under his banners at the battle of Pharsalia, B.C. 48. Having thus incurred the displeasure of the predominant party, he solicited and obtained the pardon of the conqueror, who restored him to his confidence, and generously allowed him to spend his time in his favourite literary pursuits. In B.C. 46 he was made governor of Cisalpine Gaul; and in B.C. 44 obtained the office of city prætor; thus not only acquiescing in the usurpation of Cæsar, but accepting favours and offices from the dictator. The change of mind which at this time took place was effected through the influence of Caius Cassius, by whom he was persuaded to join the assassins on the Ides of March. Failing to enlist the people on the side of the conspirators, he retired to Athens, where receiving a large sum of money, he collected the scattered troops of Pompey, and proceeded to take possession of Macedonia, the province which Cæsar had assigned to him. After making himself master of Greece and Macedonia, he went to Asia and joined Cassius, whose efforts in raising an army had been equally successful. Brutus and Cassius now returned to Macedonia, and met Augustus and Antony on the plains of Philippi, B.C. 42. In the first engagement the army of Augustus gave way before that of Brutus, while Cassius was defeated by Antony. But in a second battle, fought about twenty days later, Brutus was defeated, and fell upon his own sword. [G.F.]

BRUYERE, JEAN DE LA, a native of Normandy, was born in 1644. After having been royal treasurer at Caen, he was appointed, on the recommendation of Bossuet, to give instruction in history to the duke of Burgundy, the grandson of Louis XIV. He remained attached to the court, and died in 1696. In regard to the details of his life very little has been recorded; but a prudent and unobtrusive reserve seems to have accompanied those habits of keen observation, on which mainly his literary fame was built. His 'Characters,' published in 1687, but much augmented in following editions, placed him immediately in the highest rank as a master of French style; and they still entitle him to be named with Rochefoucault and Montaigne, among those writers whom the French regard as most thoroughly acquainted with human nature. The work is unlike the 'Characters' of Theophrastus, (a translation of which was prefixed to it,) in substituting minutely drawn portraits, full of individuality, for outlines of characteristics common to large classes of men; and from those sketches of a similar kind which had been so frequently produced in England during the first half of the 17th century, it differs not only in the variety and particularity of its scenes and figures, but also in the prominence it gives to general maxims, and to reflections prompted by them. It abounds, to an extraordinary degree, both in striking thoughts expressed with epigrammatic force and concise-imbibed, led to his imprisonment for some satirical verses written against the Franciscans. He was fortunate enough to escape from St. Andrew's castle, and finding his way beyond seas, lived some twenty years in exile, undergoing much persecution, even to confinement in the prisons of the Inquisition, yet always recovering himself and living by his professional avocations. About the year 1562 he is known to have been residing in Scotland again, and had the good fortune a few years later to be intrusted with the education of the young prince, (James VI.,) whom he made 'a pedant' because, as he said, 'he could make nothing better of him.' Whether at home or abroad, his literary industry never flagged, and few men have received more uniform praise from the learned, who seem to have vied with each other in celebrating the graces of his style, especially in his beautiful paraphrase of the Psalms, composed in the imprisonment of a monastery, and his Scotch history; at the same time that he is generally blamed as an historian, for writing of things as he was casually informed, and especially for his severe expressions against the unhappy Mary Stuart. The examples of royalty with which he had made acquaintance were hardly calculated to impress him with much reverence for the institution, and his work 'De Jure Regni apud Scotos,' was really a vindication of the democratic control of princes. Sir John Scot, in his short description of Buchanan, quaintly observes: — 'He was in so great disgust with the court before he died, that they caused summon him before them sitting in council, for some passages of his history too plain of the king's mother and grandmother; and he had undoubtedly run a great hazard of his life if the Lord had not freed him of the miseries of this world betwixt the citation and the day of compearance.' His life was thus curiously saved on the 28th September, 1581, and as he left no property, he was buried at the expense of the city of Edinburgh. [E.R.]

BUCHEZ, Arnold, a Dutch hist., 1565-1641.

BUCHOZ, P. J., a naturalist, 1737-1807.

BUCKINGHAM, George Villiers, duke of, minister of Charles I., assassinated 1628. His [House at Portsmouth in which Buckingham was assassinated.]

profligate son, of the same name, the unprincipled minister and favourite of Charles II., 1627-1688.

BUCKINGHAM AND CHANDOS, Anne Eliza, duchess of, a lady of distinguished accomplishments and benevolence, 1779-1836.

BUCKINGHAMSHIRE, John Sheffield, duke of, author of 'Memoirs of the Revolution of 1688,' in which he took a part, 1649-1720.

BUCKINK, Arnold, an engraver, 15th cent.

BUCKLER, B., an antiq. and div., 1716-1780.

BUCKMINSTER, J. S., a lrnd. div., 1784-1812.

BUDDÆUS, John Francis, author of a German 'Historical Dictionary,' 1667-1729.

BUFFON, George Louis Le Clerc, Comte De, an eminent naturalist, was born at Montbard, in Burgundy, in 1707. He died in 1788. Buffon was educated at the college of Dijon. When nineteen years old he travelled through Italy, and it is most probably owing to his having inspected in person the effects of the convulsions of nature, and the proofs of ancient revolutions of the globe in that country, that we are indebted for the works which have immortalized his name. In 1739 he was appointed superintendent of the Garden of Plants; and from that time he devoted his whole life to the study of natural history. He was assiduous in his attention to the duties of his office; and under his excellent management the garden, and museum of natural history attached to it, became the first in Europe. For ten years he devoted himself to his grand work, his Natural History, the first volume of which appeared in 1749, the remaining following at short intervals. The object of this work is to give a general theory of the globe which we inhabit, the disposition, the nature, and origin of the substances which it offers to our view, the grand phenomena which operate at its surface or in its bosom; the history of man, and the laws which preside at his formation, in his development, during his life, and at his death; the nomenclature and the description of quadrupeds and birds, the examination of their faculties, and the delineation of their manners. This work is written with great elegance of style; and his eloquent descriptions, the brilliancy of imagination which pervades them, and the correct taste he exhibited in arranging his subjects, soon made it the most popular book of the kind ever written. An extraordinary impulse was given by Buffon to the study of natural history in his own country; and he has the great merit besides of having spread a love for the study of nature far and wide. The solid anatomical portion contributed to the history of the quadrupeds by Daubenton, added much to its value amongst scientific men; and many of the best works in natural history, that have been written in France since his death, have been published under the name of Suites à Buffon. [W.B.]

BUGEAUD, Marshal, duke of Isly, disting. in the wars of Napoleon, and in Africa, 1784-1849.

BULL, John, a disting. composer, 17th cent.

BULL, George, a theological au., 1634-1709.

BULLANT, Jean, a French architect, 16th c.

BULLER, Rt. Hon. Ch., a polit., 1806-1848.

BULLIALDUS, Ismael, an astron., 1605-1694.

BULLIARD, Peter, a Fr. botanist, 1742-1793.

BULLINGER, Henry, was born at Bremgarten in 1504, studied logic and scholastic philosophy at Cologne, was gradually weaned from 1785. He studied at Basle, Leipzig, and Göttingen, graduating at the latter. Introduced by Blumenbach, in 1806, to Sir Joseph Banks and the African Association, he was engaged to travel under their auspices in central Africa: and having carefully prepared himself by various studies, he received his instructions in January, 1809. These bore that he was to remain two years in Syria, perfecting himself in the Arabic, thence to proceed to Mourzouk, in Fezzan, from which he was to cross the desert to Soudan, and the sources of the Niger. While in Syria, he visited most places of interest. In 1812 he reached Cairo, and being repeatedly disappointed in finding a caravan to convey him to Mourzouk, he performed various journeys in Egypt, Nubia, Abyssinia, on the shores of the Red Sea, and through Arabia, collecting a great amount of most important information. When, at length, in the autumn of 1817, the long expected caravan was ready to depart, Burckhardt was seized with dysentery, and expired at Cairo, October 15, 1817, in the thirty-third year of his age. His last days were cheered by the kind attentions of Mr. Salt, the English consul; and his death caused lively regret in Europe. His Travels occupy 4 vols. 4to, published at different times between 1819 and 1830. [J.B.]

BURCKHARDT, J. C., an astron., 1773-1825.

BURDER, Geo., an evangelical minis., d. 1832.

BURDETT, Sir Francis, an eminent popular and parliamentary leader, was born on 25th January, 1770. The younger son of a younger son, it was only after a series of unexpected and calamitous deaths that he succeeded to the title and estates of his ancient and affluent family. Before that event he had in 1793 married a daughter of Thomas Coutts, the banker. He began his eventful parliamentary career by advocating an exposure of abuses in the Coldbath Fields, and other prisons. It was from the popularity thus achieved that in 1802 he was started for Middlesex. After a hot contest of fifteen days he was returned, but the House found the election void, and imprisoned the sheriffs. The contest was still carried on by him in vain at enormous expense. In 1807, when disabled by a wound in a duel, he was started on the memorable contest for Westminster. His friends were successful, and he sat nearly thirty years for that constituency. The main incident in his subsequent career is that in a quarrel with the House of Commons, he attempted to resist the Speaker's warrant for his arrest, and created a disturbance, in which lives were lost. On this occasion the serjeant at arms found him affected by teaching his child magna charta. It was always suspected that his politics were founded more on love of popularity than conviction, and he proved this by capriciously changing them in 1835, and vehemently adopting the other side. When professing democracy he was a thorough aristocrat in personal feeling. His appearance was handsome and commanding, and with his dress and deportment made him the picture of a high bred English gentleman of the old school. He died on 23d January, 1844. [J.H.B.]

BURDON, Wm., a philosophical wr., d. 1818.

BURGESS, D., a popular preacher, 1645-1713.

BURGESS, Rt. Rev. Thos., bp of Salisbury, dist. for his profes. and literary labours, 1756-1837.

BURGH, James, a Scotch moralist, 1714-75.

BURGH, John De, earl of Comyn, a soldier of the mid. ages, descended from Charlemagne, d. 1324.

BURGKMAIR, Hans, a German painter and wood engraver, was born at Augsburg in 1472. Though a painter of great excellence in his time and style, he is better known for his series of woodcuts, chiefly illustrating the achievements and life of the emperor Maximilian; as 'Der Weiss Kunig,' (the wise king), an account of the acts of the emperor Maximilian I., with 237 large cuts, published with the life by Treitzsauerwein, at Vienna, in 1775; and the triumphal procession of the same emperor in 135 large cuts folio, executed in 1519; 'Le Triomphe de l'Empereur Maximilien I.,' accompanied with the ancient description dictated by the emperor himself to his secretary Marc Treitzsaurwein, Vienna, 1796. There is a third curious book of the 'Saints' of the imperial family, also by Burgkmair.—The above works, especially the 'Weiss Kunig,' are very valuable for the great variety and accuracy in detail of the illustrations of the manners and customs of the commencement of the sixteenth century. The blocks of these cuts, and many others by Burgkmair, are still preserved in the imperial library of Vienna. They are only partly executed by Burgkmair, he was aided by Albrecht Durer, and several other of the principal artists of his time: it is supposed that he actually cut very few of the blocks. The date of his death is uncertain, it is fixed by some authorities as late as 1559. [R.N.W.]

BURGOYNE, John, a general in the first Amer. war, now remembered as a dramatic au., d. 1792.

BURIDAN, John, a philosopher, 14th century.

BURIGNY, J. L. De, a Fr. author, 1691-1785.

BURKE, Edmund, a celebrated orator, statesman, and philosopher, was born at Dublin on 1st January, 1730. It has been much questioned whether he was from the beginning what is termed a political adventurer without means of livelihood to keep him independent, or entered on life with a considerable fortune. His family was said to be high and ancient, but his enemies, who were many and bitter, treated this as a common national boast of all Irishmen, and spoke of Burke as a sort of barbarian, who had come from a wild tribe to fight his way on in civilized life by the fierce unscrupulous habits in which he had been brought up. His early education, however, was derived in the calm seclusion of a Quaker seminary at Ballitore in Kildare, where he probably acquired much of the solemn reflective character which tempered his natural ardour. He studied, but not with any known distinction, at Trinity College, Dublin, where he took his master's degree in 1751. He was destined for the bar, and entered the Middle Temple, but legal studies seem to have had no charm for him. His abilities must have been seen in 1752, for it is known that there was then a proposal to choose him professor of logic in the university of Glasgow, though he does not appear to have been, as David Hume was, an avowed candidate. His first literary work, called 'A Vindication of Natural Society'—a close imitation of Bolingbroke, was published in 1756. Immediately afterwards appeared his well-known essay on the Sublime and Beautiful. Its originality of thought, and luxuriant flow of words and was appointed organist of a church in London, which year he was introduced to Mrs. Cibber, through whom, besides making the personal acquaintance of the literary and scientific men, the artists, actors, and wits of the time, he was induced to compose for Drury Lane Theatre three musical dramas, 'Alfred,' 'Robin Hood,' and 'Queen Mab.' After this period, being in ill health, he went to Lynn Regis in Norfolk, where for nine years he occupied himself in collecting materials for his great 'History of Music,' at the same time filling the situation of organist, with a salary of £100 per annum. In 1760, recovered in health, he returned to London, where he soon procured full employment and gained a high reputation in his profession, and where his eldest daughter, then only eight years old, attracted much attention as a performer on the harpsichord. In 1766 he brought out at Drury Lane a translation of Rousseau's 'Devin du Village.' In 1769 the college of Oxford conferred upon him the honorary degree of Doctor in Music. In the following year he set out on his travels with the object of visiting the great continental libraries, that he might add to the stores of matter he had collected for his 'History of Music.' In 1771 he published his 'Musical Tour,' a work of which his friend Dr. Johnson said when he wrote his account of the Hebrides, 'I had that clever dog Dr. Burney's tour in my eye.' In 1776 the first volume of the 'History of Music' was published, the second appeared in 1782, and the third and fourth in 1789. In this year Edmund Burke procured him the situation of organist at Chelsea College. In 1796 he published his life of Metastasio. He also contributed the principal articles on music to Rees's Encyclopedia. His other literary works were 'An Essay towards a History of Comets,' 'A Plan of a Public Musical School,' 'An Account (written for the Philosophical Transactions) of little Crotch, the Infant Musician,' 'A Memoir of the Musical Festival in Honour of Handel, which was held in Westminster Abbey in 1785.' In the year 1806 Mr. Wyndham procured for him a pension from government of £300, from which period he gave up his intellectual labours. He died on the 15th of April, 1815. Dr. Burney was twice married, and left by his first wife two sons and four daughters, and by his second one daughter. His eldest daughter, already mentioned, was celebrated as a musician. His second daughter, Madame D'Arblay, is known from her novels, 'Cecilia,' 'Evilina,' 'Camilla,' and the 'Wanderer,' which works commenced a new era in light literature. His eldest son, JAMES, sailed round the world with Captain Cook, and afterwards commanded the Bristol, fifty guns, in the East Indies. His second son was the learned CHARLES BURNEY, LL.D. Dr. Burney was on terms of intimacy and friendship with all the eminent men of his day. In all the relations of life, his character is described as exemplary, while his manners were peculiarly easy, spirited, and gentlemanly. [J.M.]

BURNEY, CHARLES, son of the cel. composer, distinguished as a Greek scholar, 1757-1817.

BURNEY, REAR-ADMIRAL JAS., elder brother of the preced., a fellow-voy. of Cook, 1759-1821.

BURNEY, WILLIAM, LL.D., author of 'Lives of the Naval Heroes of Great Britain,' &c., 1762-1832.

BURNS, JOHN, M.D., au. of a work on the Evidences and Principles of Christianity, 1780-1850.

BURNS, ROBERT, the great peasant-poet of Scotland, lived and died within the latter half of the eighteenth century. His father, William Burness, according to the original spelling of the name, was a native of Kincardineshire, whence he migrated, first to Edinburgh, and afterwards to Ayrshire, obtaining employment as he best could as a working gardener. He ultimately took a lease of seven acres of land, about a couple of miles from the town of Ayr, in the district of Kyle, where he built, by the roadside, with his own hands, a clay cottage, which is still standing, an object of interest to strangers. To this humble dwelling, consisting merely of a but and a ben, he brought in due time, a young bride, named Agnes Brown, daughter of a small farmer in the neighbouring district of Carrick, and the first fruit of this union was Robert, born on the 25th of January, 1759. The position of William Burness at that time, and indeed throughout his whole life, was that of a high-minded and noble-hearted man struggling with adversity. Nevertheless, he contrived to give his children a respectable education, Robert, and his next brother, Gilbert, having been placed under an excellent teacher, named Murdoch. In 1766, when the poet was seven years old, his father removed with his family to Mount Oliphant, a farm a couple of miles distant, but for some time afterwards the boys continued to attend Murdoch's school. If the library at Mount Oliphant was small, it yet comprised several good books, including the 'Spectator,' Allan Ramsay's 'Poems,' some plays of Shakspeare, and above all, a Collection of English Songs, which Burns acknowledges to have studied with critical care. In his fifteenth year Robert was the principal labourer on the farm, which was far from prosperous; and to the drudgery and affliction which he endured at this period, his brother Gilbert ascribed that depression of spirits, accompanied at times with an irregular motion of the heart, to which he was afterwards liable. From the miseries of Mount Oliphant, the Burns family fled in 1777 to the farm of Lochlea, in the parish of Tarbolton. In the midst, however, of every hardship, the young men continued to advance not only in learning, but in accomplishments. Robert, with the assistance of his old teacher, Murdoch, had so far mastered the French language as to be able to read it with ease. At Kirkoswald he likewise acquired a smattering of mensuration and land surveying; while at Tarbolton he cultivated his powers of oratory in a debating club. Before this time he had fallen in love with 'a bonnie, sweet, sonsie lass,' with whom he had worked at harvest, and his feelings had vented themselves in verse of no very noticeable merit. Not long, however, after the indifferent song of 'Handsome Nell,' he produced the inimitable lyric of 'My Nannie, O.' In the hope, according to his brother Gilbert, of being able to marry, he became a flax-dresser at Irvine; but at this occupation he continued only six months, during which time he was initiated into the mysteries of freemasonry, and acquired some additional knowledge of the world, together, it must be confessed, with some little laxity of morals. His return to Lochlea was a return to a who remember that 'Tam o' Shanter,' 'Bruce's Address,' and the celebrated parting song of 'Ae Fond Kiss,' were among his later productions; but in his poetry and in his life, which are inseparably associated, he has left a sufficiently splendid impression. The moral failings which he himself acknowledged and deplored, are more easily forgiven than defended. Even, however, if there is something to condemn in his character, there is much more to admire and honour. His poverty never betrayed him into any mean or sordid action, or lowered the manly integrity and sturdy independence of his character. In literature his place is among the great ones of the earth. Much of his prose composition is laboured and inflated; and his letters to Clarinda, in particular, present a strange and incongruous mixture of friendship and folly, religion and wild passion. But his poetry is replete with fire, humour, and pathos, combined with perfect simplicity and naturalness. One main secret of his success was his almost always writing directly from nature. His Jeans, Marys, and Peggies, were creatures of veritable flesh and blood. He even seemed to be continually working himself into fits of love, for the mere purpose of finding subjects for his muse; while his intense admiration of natural scenery, in place of venting itself in cold description, was generally associated with some engrossing human emotion. Hence it is that he rarely fails to find his way to the hearts of his readers, and that he has succeeded in bequeathing to his country and the world, the most admirable body of lyrical composition, whether as regards force of expression or tenderness of sentiment, to be found in the literature of any age or nation. [J.H.]

[Burns's Monument on the Banks of Doon.]

BURROW, Reuben, a mathematician, d. 1791.

BURROWS, Stephen, an Englishman; accompanied Chancelor in his voyage to the N.E. in 1553; and sailed again in 1556 in a small vessel to explore the N. coasts of Europe and Asia. He was the first, at a later date, to observe the gradual change in the declination of the magnetic needle; from his observations, and those of Gunter and Mair, in 1612, the existence of this secular variation was completely established in 1625 by Gellibrand, professor of geometry in Gresham College, London. [J.B.]

BURTON, J., a classic. schol. and theol., d. 1771.

BURTON, Robert, the celebrated author of the 'Anatomy of Melancholy,' 1576-1640.

BURY, Arthur, an English divine, 17th cent.

BURY, Eliz., a distinguished an., 1664-1720.

BUSBY, Dr. Rich., a classical teacher, fifty-five years master of Westminster school, 1606-1695.

BUSCHE, H. Von Der, a Ger. schol., d. 1534.

BUSCHING, A. F., a miscel. wr., 1724-1793.

BUSHE, Rt. Hon. Sir C. Kendal, an able lawyer and orator, privy councillor in 1822, d. 1843.

BUTE, John Stuart, earl of, minister of state soon after the acc. of Geo. III., 1760-1762, d. 1792.

BUTINI, J. A., a physician of Geneva, last ct.

BUTLER, Alban., a catholic biog., d. 1773.

BUTLER, C., a catholic histor., &c., 1750-1832.

BUTLER, Joseph, a learned English bishop, author of the cel. 'Analogy of Religion,' 1692-1752.

BUTLER, Samuel, author of the exquisite poetical satire, 'Hudibras,' known and quoted wherever the English language is spoken, was born in Worcestershire, 1612, and lived a life of drudgery and poverty till 1680. His poem was published after the restoration, the first two parts in 1663 and 1664, the third in 1678, and its popularity from the first was unprecedented. Two collections of the author's posthumous poems have appeared in 1719 and 1759, respectively, but his reputation rests exclusively on the 'Hudibras,' which, for its pungent wit, ludicrous casuistry, and droll humour in the description of life and character, is unparalleled in the language.

BUTLER, Dr. S., a learned prelate, 1774-1840.

BUTTON, Sir Thomas, was employed in 1612 by the merchants of London to prosecute the discoveries of Henry Hudson on the N.E. coast of North America. He was the first who reached the east coast through Hudson's Strait. With his two ships, Resolution and Discovery, he passed the winter at the mouth of Nelson's River, west side of Hudson's Bay, lat. 57° 10′, and showed extraordinary sagacity and tact in keeping up the health and spirits of his crews. In the following summer he made some important discoveries northwards, and returned home in the autumn of 1613, but was not again employed. He was first patronised by Prince Henry, son of James I., and received the honour of knighthood as a reward for his services. [J.B.]

BUXTON, Jedediah, a celebrated calculator, about 1705-1775.

BUXTON, Sir Thos. Fowell, Bart., a distinguished philanthropist and reformer in the same field of labour as Mrs. Fry, (his sister-in-law,) and Wilberforce, 1786-1845.

BUXTORF, John, a cel. Hebraist, 1564-1629. His son, of the same name, also distinguished as a Hebrew and classical scholar, 1599-1630.

BUZOT, Francis Leonard Nicholas, a member of the French convention, and one of the Girondist party proscribed by Robespierre; b. 1760, found dead after his escape to Bourdeaux, 1793.

BYLOT, Robert, a skilful and enterprising seaman, who made many voyages in various capacities with Hudson, Button, Baffin, &c., early in the 17th century. [J.B.]

the strength he was soon to exhibit. This strength was brought to a point by the anger which the young poet felt at the famous criticism on his book in the 'Edinburgh Review.' Studying the satirical poets as models, and collecting every available piece of gossip that could point an ill-natured jest, he at length, in 1809, poured forth his wrath, all the warmer for the nursing he had given it, in his poetical satire 'English Bards and Scotch Reviewers.' Scurrilously personal, and indiscriminatingly contemptuous of all the literary celebrities of the day, this poem showed powers which evidently wanted only maturity and fit guidance to achieve very great things.—In the same year he embarked with Mr. Hobhouse on a two years' journey on the continent, in the course of which he visited the Peninsula, extended his travels to Greece and Turkey, and, with his poetical enthusiasm now fairly awakened, composed in great part the first and second cantos of 'Childe Harold's Pilgrimage.' The publication of these, in the spring of 1812, when he had just completed his twenty-fourth year, made him at once the most popular poet of the time. The few who had already learned to appreciate Wordsworth and Coleridge, found, in the new poet, a freedom both from the affectations of the one and from the obscurities and eccentricity of the other; while there were united with these a poetic elevation and richness not exceeded by either. The popularity, again, which Scott had won, by the 'Lay,' 'Marmion,' and the 'Lady of the Lake,' was already beginning to suffer from the satiety produced by bad imitations; and the Scottish minstrel's favour with the public waned rapidly, when Byron, deserting the meditative poetry of the 'Pilgrimage,' adopted, like Scott, the seductive form of the metrical romance, and gave it the charm of novelty by choosing Turkish and Grecian stories. In 1813 appeared his wildly striking fragment 'The Giaour,' and the more regular 'Bride of Abydos.' 'The Corsair' and its sequel 'Lara,' followed in 1814, and were accompanied by the 'Ode to Napoleon Buonaparte.' In the beginning of 1816, the first and most characteristic series of Lord Byron's works was closed by the appearance of 'The Siege of Corinth' and 'Parisina.'—While he was thus building up his poetical fame, his domestic history underwent several changes, to which he was no way slow in inviting attention. 'Childe Harold,' the sated voluptuary, seeking to refresh his sick heart amidst the magnificence of nature, but contemplating all things through the medium of a cynical and despondent philosophy, had been avowedly presented as an idealized portrait of the young poet himself, bitterly convinced, by a premature experience, of the hollowness of worldly pleasures, yet unable to discover any higher truths, in the contemplation and realization of which happiness might be attained. Till the publication of the earlier cantos of 'Childe Harold,' Byron's proud and sensitive spirit had been tempted to misanthropical discontent by the equivocal position he held in society, partly through accidental circumstances, partly through the reputation of his youthful irregularities. But the stamp thus imprinted on his earlier poetry was too much in accordance with his natural temperament to be easily effaced. The exaggerated and theatrical exhibition of his own character, in the persons of his heroes, was repeated even in those of his tales, which were written while he was the idol of fashionable society, and enjoyed the prospect of domestic happiness; and when misfortune and opprobrium darkened round him, the petulant rashness of ill-trained youth passed into a permanent mood of morbid and haughty defiance, to which his later poems gave utterance with increasing eagerness and constancy. With as little power as any great poet ever possessed, of observing or delineating the character and passions of other men, Byron was not true to nature, unless when he drew his materials from within; but his poetry, thus unreal and fantastic in all its representations of human life, has the singular charm which belongs to the self-drawn image of a nature nobly endowed with the poetic elements of greatness, and vacillating in its moral aspect between the extremes of goodness and of evil.—In the autumn of 1814, after having passed some years in that round of extravagant and unsatisfying dissipation into which he had been initiated even in boyhood, Lord Byron married the daughter of Sir Ralph Milbanke. The marriage proved unhappy for both parties, through causes which have never been clearly explained; pecuniary embarrassments aggravated dissension; and in the beginning of 1816, soon after the birth of a daughter, Lady Byron quitted her husband's house never to return.—Very soon afterwards Lord Byron left England, in which he never again set foot. His first place of residence was in the neighbourhood of Geneva, where the sublime scenery of Switzerland, and the society of the poet Shelley, co-operated in awakening his mind to an elevation and purity of poetic inspiration such as he never reached before or after. Here were written 'The Prisoner of Chillon,' and the third canto of 'Childe Harold.' The influence of Swiss landscapes lingered fondly in his imagination during the next stage of his travels. It gave birth to 'Manfred,' which, with all its faults, ethical and dramatic, is perhaps richer in poetical imagery and sentiment than any of his other works. In the end of 1816 he took up his abode at Venice, where he remained for three years, visiting Rome, and there gathering materials for the fourth canto of 'Childe Harold.' His residence at Venice was disgraced by low and gross debauchery; and if there was greater refinement, there was no real improvement of morality, in a more lasting attachment which he next formed for the Countess Guiccioli, and which is not recommended to our English feelings or notions, even by the countenance vouchsafed to it by the lady's father and brother. In the beginning of 1820 Byron followed the countess and her family to Ravenna; where, with them, he became engaged in political plots, which soon caused his Italian friends to be banished from the papal states. Pisa then became the abode of the party. Here Byron received Mr. and Mrs. Shelley, and afterwards Mr. Leigh Hunt, and with these coadjutors attempted unsuccessfully the periodical called 'The Liberal.' His poetical vein, however, flowed freely during his residence in Italy. Besides 'Manfred' and the last canto of 'Childe Harold,' and several works which are universally admitted to be poor, he then produced 'Mazeppa,' 'The Lament of Tasso,' and his Dramatic Poems, of which, while 'Cain' abounded in everywhere exciting, Sebastian projected an expedition across the N. Atlantic, ostensibly, it is said, with the important practical object of discovering a N.W. passage to Cathay, the 'Land of Spice.' Henry VII. gave his countenance to the scheme; and under government auspices an expedition was fitted out, and intrusted by patent, dated 5th March, 1496, to John Cabot, and his three sons, Louis, Sebastian, and Saucius. They were authorized to occupy and possess all lands in the name of the king, who reserved a fifth of the profits; but the right of traffic was to belong to the patentees exclusively. In May, 1497, the expedition sailed from Bristol under command of Sebastian, his father and brothers most probably accompanying him. On the 24th June he reached the coast of Labrador, about lat. 56°, and was thus the first to discover the continental land of the Western world—Columbus, in his third voyage, not having entered the Orinoco till August, 1498. Nothing else is known of this voyage; but it appears that he returned almost immediately to England, and made two other voyages in 1498 and 1499, the latter being to the Gulf of Mexico, but no records of them have been preserved. About this time, John Cabot seems to have died, Louis and Saucius to have settled in Italy; of Sebastian all trace is lost till 1512, when he arrived in Spain, having been sent for by King Ferdinand, who had formed a higher estimate of his genius and merits than had been entertained in his own country. He enjoyed honour and a handsome emolument till the death of Ferdinand in 1516. The enemies of Columbus then became his, and he was obliged by the annoyances which he suffered to return to England. In 1517 Henry VIII. sent him, with Sir Thomas Perte, on a voyage to the N.W., during which he reached lat. 67½°, and entered Hudson's Bay—but no details are known respecting his discoveries. After this voyage he visited Spain, and was reinstated in honour and income by the emperor Charles V. Having visited the banks of the great river, first named by him the La Plata, in command of an expedition intended for the Moluccas, and performed several other voyages, he came again to England in 1548; and soon after was granted a pension of 250 merks, (£166 13s. 4d.) by Edward VI., and appointed grand pilot of England. By his advice, the expedition of Willoughby and Chancelor was sent out in 1553; which, though failing in its primary object, the discovery of a N.E. passage to Cathay, had a far more important result in the establishment of trade with Russia. Cabot was afterwards made governor of a company of merchant traders to that country. So sanguine were the promoters of this expedition, that they had the ships sheathed with lead to protect them from the worms in the water of the Indian Ocean—a contrivance long practised by the Spaniards, but now for the first time used in England, and therefore most likely suggested by Cabot. He appears also to have been the first who gave steady attention to the variation of the compass. The pension which Cabot enjoyed was continued till 1557, four years after the king's death; it was renewed to him by Mary, jointly with one William Worthington, of whom very little is known. All his maps and documents were given to this person, who either destroyed them, or handed them over to Mary's husband, Philip of Spain;—no trace of them has ever been found. Cabot was now in his eightieth year; he seems to have died soon after, though nothing is certainly known either of the time or place of his death. Of high genius and acquirements, steadily pursuing through a long life one great object, infusing into the marine of England a spirit of enterprise which has animated it ever since, and opening up new sources of trade which gave an impulse to her commerce, Cabot must be regarded by us as one of the most illustrious of navigators. The confusion and misrepresentations which long prevailed regarding him were fully cleared up by the author of a 'Memoir of the Life of Sebastian Cabot, Illustrated by Documents from the Rolls,' London, 1831, who has placed the events of his life in their true light. [J.B.]

CABRAL, F., a Portuguese missionary, author of 'Letters from Japan and China,' 1528-1609.

CABRAL, Pedro Alvarez De, was sent out by the king of Portugal soon after the return of Vasco de Gama, in command of a fleet of thirteen ships, with 1,200 fighting men, and a number of Franciscan monks as missionaries, with the object of making settlements in the East Indies. He was the first who had the boldness to adopt the route now generally followed in order to reach the Cape without incurring the delays and dangers of the coast voyage. His plan was to sail S.W. till he should gain the latitude of the Cape, and thus cross the Atlantic twice. Following this route from the Cape Verde islands, he came in sight of the coast of Brazil, about lat. 10° S., on 3d May, 1500. Coasting S. as far as lat. 17°, he took possession in name of his sovereign, and the cross then erected at Porto Seguro is still preserved. A ship was sent home with the news; and although Yanez Pinzon had visited this coast on the part of Spain three months earlier, the claim thence derived was waived, and the sovereignty of Brazil secured to Portugal. In crossing to the Cape, Cabral lost four ships in a dreadful storm which lasted twenty days. With the rest he reached India, made some settlements, and returned in July, 1501, with rich cargoes. Yet he was coolly received by his master, on account of the great loss of life which had been sustained, though without any fault on the part of Cabral, who was undoubtedly a navigator of high ability. [J.B.]

CACCIA, Ferd., an Ital. sarant, 1689-1778.

CACCIA, Guglielmo, an Ital. paint., 1568-1625.

CACCINI, Guilio, a comp. of music, d. 1615.

CACCINI, Francesca, daughter of the preceding, a poetess and musician of the 17th century.

CADALOUS, P., bishop of Parma, elected anti-pope, under the title of Honorius II., 1061.

CADA MOSTO, Aloisio De, a Venetian gentleman sent out by Don Henry of Portugal, in 1444, with Vicento de Lagos, and again in 1446, to examine the coast region of W. Africa. He afterwards published a very interesting account of Madeira, the Canaries, and the districts which he visited on the mainland as far as the Gulf of Guinea, by which he gained some celebrity. [J.B.]

CADAMOSTO, M. A., an Ital. astron., 16th c.

CADE, John, the notorious rebel of the reign of Henry VI., assumed the name of Mortimer, and with them the coalition which is known in history as the First Triumvirate. By the influence of his new friends he was elected to the consulship for B.C. 59, and, while in office, obtained the provinces of Transalpine Gaul, Cisalpine Gaul, and Illyricum, with six legions, for five years. Having thus obtained the command of an army, and the management of an important war, he proceeded to prepare himself for the struggle which he foresaw was impending at Rome. His field of operation afforded him peculiar advantages; the Gauls were the hereditary enemies of the Romans, and the glory of subduing them could not fail to increase his popularity; while the opportunity of passing the winter in the north of Italy enabled him to watch the proceedings of parties in the capitol. During the next nine years he was occupied in the subjugation of Transalpine Gaul; having also twice (B.C. 55 and 54) landed in Britain, and received the submission of the inhabitants of the southern portion of the island. The interval of Cæsar's absence from Rome had produced a great change in the state of parties. Pompey, jealous of the fame of a man to whose elevation he had mainly contributed, had effected a reconciliation with the aristocratical party; and, aided by their support, resolved to crush the conqueror of Gaul. Accordingly in B.C. 49, a decree of the senate was passed, 'that Cæsar should disband his army by a certain day, and that if he did not do so, he should be regarded as an enemy of the state,' the predominant party relying on the influence of Pompey, to whom the management of the contest had been intrusted. But the feelings of the army were entirely with Cæsar; and he, finding that his men were ready to follow him, crossed the Rubicon, which separated his province from Italy, and thus commenced the civil war, the issue of which invested him with dictatorial power. In three months he made himself master of the whole of Italy. Proceeding next to Spain, the stronghold of Pompey, he reduced it to subjection; and, after passing a short time in Italy, followed his opponent into Greece, and brought the contest to a final issue on the plains of Pharsalia, 4th Aug., B.C. 48. The battle of Pharsalia decided the fate of the Roman empire: Pompey fled to Egypt, but was murdered as he landed on the coast; and Cæsar, who followed him, speedily quashed all opposition in the eastern portion of the empire. After a short residence in Rome in B.C. 47, he proceeded to Africa to prosecute the war against Scipio and Cato, who had there collected a large army, and finally brought it to a close on the 6th of April, B.C. 46, by the battle of Thapsus, in which the Pompeian party were completely defeated. In his absence Cæsar had been elected dictator for ten years; and his return to Rome was signalized by four magnificent triumphs. Devoting himself now to the duties of a legislator, he corrected various abuses which had crept into the state; reformed the calendar, thereby conferring a real benefit on the civilized world; and exercised his unlimited power with a degree of moderation which affected even his enemies with surprise. But his career was destined to be short: a conspiracy against his life was formed at the beginning of B.C. 44; and on the Ides, or 15th of March, he perished by the hands of assassins in the senate house, in the fiftieth year of his age. As a warrior, a statesman, and a man of letters, Cæsar was one of the most remarkable men of any age. [G.F.]

CÆSAR, SIR JULIUS, a dist. lawyer, 1557-1636.

CÆSARIUS, a dist. abbot of the 6th cent.

CÆSARIUS, JOHN, a German physician and professional teacher of philosophy, born at Juliers 1460, died at Cologne 1551. The best known of his writings are his notes on Celsus, and his edition of Pliny's Natural History, but he is the author of treatises on dialectics and rhetoric, now almost forgotten. He suffered much persecution for Lutheranism, but returned again to the catholic church.

CAFFA, MELCHIOR, an Ital. sculp., 1631-1687.

CAFFARELLI DU FALGA, L. M. J. M., a republican general, born 1756, killed at St. Jean D'Acre, 1799. His brother CH. AMBROSE, a philos. wr., 1758-1826

CAFFIAUX, J., a wr. on music, &c., 1712-1777.

CAFFIERI, P., an ornamen. artist, 1634-1716.

CAGLIARI, PAOLO, commonly called PAOLO VERONESE, was born at Verona in 1528. He was the pupil of his uncle Antonio Badile, and having earned considerable reputation in Verona and its vicinity, settled finally in Venice, where he was the rival of Titian and Tintoretto, and where he died in 1588. Paul Veronese may be accounted among the first of the machinist painters, many of his works being little more than ornamental schemes, such as the celebrated 'Marriage at Cana' in the Louvre, containing 120 figures, or portions of figures, of the natural size. The magnificent architectural backgrounds to some of these works are said to have been executed by his brother Benedetto Cagliari. The St. Nicholas in the National Gallery, though small, is a fine example of his style: the chief attraction of his pictures is their gay and rich colouring; they are further distinguished for their great freedom of execution, but are often careless in drawing, and for the most part purely capricious in costume.—(Ridolfi, Maraviglie dell' Arte, &c.; Zanetti, Della Pittura Veneziana, &c.) [R.N.W.]

CAGLIOSTRO, ALEXANDER, Count, the assumed name of Joseph Balsamo, the most notorious charlatan of modern times, 1743-1795.

CAGNOLA, a cel. Ital. architect, 1762-1833.

CAGNOLI, ANTH., an Ital. astron., 1743-1816.

CAGNOLO, JER., an Ital. lawyer, 1492-1551.

CAHER-BILLAH, Abasside caliph, 932-950.

CAILLAU, J. M., a medical and poetical wr., au. of a great number of prof. memoirs, 1765-1820.

CAILLE, NICHOLAS LOUIS DE LA, a French mathematician and astronomer, 1713-1762.

CAILLIE, a young and enterprising Frenchman who penetrated from Senegambia to Timbuctoo, in 1827-28, among the first to visit that part of central Africa. He returned across the great desert to Marocco, but his discoveries were not important. He had not, indeed, properly qualified himself by previous training. His travels have been published. [J.R.]

CAILLEAN, A. C., a French au., 1731-1798.

CAILLOT, a cel. French actor, 1732-1816.

CAILLY, J. DE, a French poet, 1604-1673.

CAIN, the eldest son of Adam and Eve.

CAINAN, the son of Enos, Gen. v. 9; the same name is given as a son of Arphaxad, Luke iii. 36.

CAIAPHAS, high priest of the Jews, 29-37.

CALETTI, GIUSEPPE, an Ital. paint., d. 1660.

CALIDASA, an Ind. dram., supposed 1st c. B.C.

CALIGNON, S. DE, a political writer and historian, chancellor of Navarre, 1550-1606.

CALIGULA, a tyrant of Rome, whose proper name was Caius Cæsar Augustus Germanicus, was the son of Germanicus and Agrippina, and began his reign at the age of 25, A.D. 37. After reigning happily a few months, he suffered from a fever, which is supposed to have affected his mind. Four years of the most revolting excesses followed this misfortune, when a conspiracy was formed against him, and he was assassinated.

CALIPPUS, a Ger. mathematician, 4th ct. B.C.

CALIXTUS, the first pope of Rome, 219-222; the second, 1119-1124; the third, 1455-1458.

CALIXTUS, G., chf. of a prot. sect, 1586-1656.

CALL, J. VAN, a Dutch engraver, 1655-1703.

CALLCOTT, JOHN WALL, the son of Thomas Callcott, bricklayer and builder, was born at Kensington, Gravel-pits, in the county of Middlesex, on the 20th of November, 1766. At a very early age he gave indications of that love of literature, and for the acquisition of knowledge, which distinguished him in his after life. At seven years of age he was sent as a day-boarder to a neighbouring school, where he remained five years, made considerable progress in the Latin language, and commenced the study of Greek. He acquired the first rudiments of music from Henry Whitney, organist of Kensington church, to whom he was introduced in the year 1778. In 1779 he began to practise upon the spinnet, with the view of becoming an organist. In 1780 he learned to play upon the clarionet, and made his first essay in musical composition. In the meantime he continued to improve himself in classical learning, and acquired a knowledge of French, Italian, and German, and made an attempt to master the Hebrew and Syriac languages, while mathematics and algebra also occupied his attention. About the year 1782 he became intimate with Drs. Arnold and Cooke, whom he always regarded as his first patrons. In 1783 he obtained the situation of assistant organist at the church of St. George the Martyr, which he held till 1785. At this time his musical compositions were both numerous and varied; but the connections he had formed induced him to make glee-writing his particular study. His first glee, 'O Sovereign of the Willing Soul,' was written in the year 1784. In 1785 he obtained three medals from the Catch Club, for a catch, a canon, and a glee. In the same year he took his degree of Bachelor in Music, and in 1786 he had two medals awarded him by the Catch Club. In 1787, Dr. Arnold and Callcott established the Glee Club, which has ever since continued to form one of the most attractive musical societies in London. In this year he was admitted among the honorary members of the Catch Club, and received two medals. In 1789, and every year till 1793 inclusive, he obtained all the four medals by the club, and took his place as the most popular glee-writer of the day. In 1789, as colleague with Mr. Evans, he entered upon the office of organist at St. Paul's, Covent Garden, which situation he held until the church was destroyed by fire six years afterwards. In 1790 Haydn arrived in England, and Callcott became one of his earliest pupils; and in the same year he took his degree of Doctor in Music at Oxford. In 1791 Callcott was married, and on that occasion he wrote the words and music of his glee 'Triumphant Love;' and the following year was appointed organist in the chapel of Female Orphans, which place he held till 1802, when he resigned in favour of Mr. Horsley. In 1797 he commenced to collect materials for a musical dictionary, which was never published, but which led to the publication of his musical grammar, which appeared in 1805. Shortly after this he was appointed to succeed Dr. Crotch, as lecturer at the Royal Institution, but his life of arduous and unremitted study weakened his mind, which at length sank under the burdens he had laid too heavily upon it. He died on the 15th of May, 1821. Dr. Callcott was one of the brightest ornaments of the British school of music, and he had the strongest claim to esteem and reverence as a man. His works are well known to all glee clubs, but are much too numerous to be mentioned by name here. A fine selection of his glees, edited by his son-in-law, William Horsley, Mus. Bac., Oxon, was published in 2 volumes in the year 1824. [J.M.]

CALLCOTT, SIR A. W., R.A., eldest br. of the composer, disting. as a landscape paint., 1779-1844.

CALLCOTT, LADY MARIA, wife of the preceding, author of several works of travel, a history of Spain, &c., 1779-1842.

CALLET, J. F., a Fr. mathemat., 1744-1798.

CALLETT, A. F., a Fr. painter, 1741-1823.

CALLIMACHUS, archi. of Corinth, 6th c. B.C.

CALLIMACHUS, a Gr. poet. and hist., 3d c. B.C.

CALLINICHUS, a Gr. rhetorician, 3d cnt. B.C.

CALLINUS, a Gr. orator and poet, 8th c. B.C.

CALLIPUS, a phil. of Athens, assass. 351 B.C.

CALLISTHENES, a Gr. phil., the disciple and grand-nephew of Aristotle, and one of the savants who accompanied Alexander into Asia, 365-328 B.C.

CALLISTRATUS, an Athen. orator, 4th c. B.C.

CALLY, PIENE, a French catholic divine, dist. for his controver. and philosoph. writings, d. 1709.

CALMET, AUGUSTINE, was born in 1672, near Commercy. After studying at Breuil and Port-à-Musson, he entered the order of Benedictines, assuming the vows finally in 1689. Afterwards he was removed to Münster as sub-prior. For a short time he held the priory of St. Lay, and he was abbé of St. Leopold of Nancy when he was removed to Sénones, where he died in 1757. Calmet was a biblical scholar of no mean pretensions and acquirements, as is shown by his Commentaire Litteral, by his Dictionnaire de la Bible, and by many dissertations on biblical subjects. His dictionary is well known in various English translations and abridgments, the most famous of the former being that of C. Taylor, in 5 volumes quarto. [J.E.]

CALMO, ANDREA, a Venet. poet, 1510-1571.

CALO, JOHN, a chief of Bulgaria, 13th cent.

CALOGERA, FATHER, a philolog., 1699-1768.

CALONNE, CHARLES ALEXANDRE DE, controller-general (or finance minister) of the French government from the fall of Necker, 1783 to 1787. His name is chiefly memorable as the last of the plodding, intriguing, accommodating, and unprincipled statesmen by whom the French monarchy was hurried to the declivity of the revolution; and especially for his daring experiment of assembling Montpellier 1753, died at Paris 1824. Though a child of the revolution, and from the first favourable to its progress, the ambition of Cambacérès was rather constructive than otherwise, and added to his education for the law, well qualified him for his great share in the preparation of the civil code, and the judiciary organization of France. He possessed the rare talent of preserving his credit for patriotism, without committing himself to the strife of parties, and in 1799 was associated with Napoleon Buonaparte in the consulate. It does not appear that the first consul had much regard for him, and his conduct must be regarded as equivocal, at the least, when it is considered that he rose to fresh honours under the second restoration. The real product of his political activity is fairly represented by his 'Projet du Code Civil, et Discours Preliminaire,' published 1794, and the practical application of it in following years. The most distinguished of his relations were his brother, STEPHEN HUBERT DE CAMBACERES, archbishop of Rouen, and peer of France, a most esteemed prelate, 1756-1818; BARON CAMBACERES, his nephew, and one of Napoleon's generals, 1778-1826; and his uncle, the ABBE DE CAMBACERES, distinguished as a religious writer and preacher, 1721-1802. [E.R.]

CAMBON, JOSEPH, one of the more violent Jacobins of the French revolution, was born at Montpellier, 1754, and returned to the legislative assembly, 1791. He is chiefly memorable as the reporter of the finance commission, by which some kind of order was eliminated from the confusion left by Calonne and his predecessors, and the basis laid for the subsequent financial prosperity of his country. Whatever share he may have taken in the agitation of the period, the merit belongs to him of pursuing this one aim with steady perseverance. He was disliked by Robespierre, and contributed to his fall on the 9th Thermidor, (27th July, 1794,) but was shortly afterwards compelled to save himself by flight. In 1815 he reappeared on the public stage as a member of the representative assembly, and in 1816 was driven into exile as a regicide. He died at Brussels in 1820. [E.R.]

CAMBRIDGE, ADOLPHUS FREDERICK, duke of, youngest son of George III., born 1774, served as volunteer with the duke of York 1793-1795, viceroy of Hanover 1815-1837, d. 8th July, 1850.

CAMBRIDGE, R. OWEN, a miscel. wr., d. 1802.

CAMBRONNE, PIERRE JACQUES ETIENNE, Baron De, the brave commander of the old guard at the battle of Waterloo, 1770-1842.

CAMBYSES, the first of this name, father of Cyrus, lived about 595 B.C.; the second, son and suc. of Cyrus, began to r. 529 or 530 B.C., d. 522.

CAMDEN, CHARLES PRATT, Earl, a distinguished lawyer and statesman, lord chancellor in 1766, president of the council 1782, 1713-1794.

CAMDEN, JOHN JEFFREYS PRATT, Marquis, K.G., distinguished as a disinterested servant of the state for sixty years, 1759-1840.

CAMDEN, WILLIAM, the celeb. antiquarian, au. of 'The Britannia,' 'Annals,' &c., 1551-1623.

CAMELLI, G. J., a mis. and botanist, 17th ct.

CAMERARIUS, JOACHIM, a learned German, 1500-74. His son of the same name, one of the first physic., botan., and chem. of his age, 1534-1598.

CAMERON, LIEUT.-GEN. SIR ALLAN, distinguished for enrolling the 'Cameron Highlanders,' at his own expense, in 1793, died 1828.

CAMERON, JOHN, a Scotch theologian, professor of divinity at Glasgow, and afterwards at Montauban, in France, died 1625.

CAMILLA, a princess of the Volsci, k. in battle.

CAMILLA, J. A. V., an Ital. actress, 1735-68.

CAMILLUS, MARCUS FURIUS, a Roman general of distinguished patriotism, made dictator B.C. 396, died B.C. 365.

CAMILO, F., a Spanish painter, 1610-1671.

CAMOENS, LUIS DE, is the only Portuguese poet who enjoys a European celebrity. He was of noble family; and his ancestors on the father's side were Spanish. He was probably born at Lisbon; and the date of his birth was 1527, or a few years earlier. After having been educated at Coimbra, he passed some time in courtly society at Lisbon; but an attachment to a lady of distinction brought on him a sentence of banishment to Santarem, where he composed several of his poems, and is said to have planned or begun that which is the greatest of them. He then volunteered into the fleet, distinguished himself against the African Moors, and lost his right eye in an attack on Ceuta. On his return he found himself neglected and poor; and in 1553 he embarked for India, declaring a resolution of never again seeing his native country. Escaping from a storm, in which the other vessels of the fleet foundered, he reached the Portuguese settlement at Goa; and sixteen years passed over him in the East, amidst perilous adventures, and continual disappointments and misfortunes. He failed to obtain employment in the public service, and entered as a volunteer in two expeditions, the one to Cochin, (in which almost all the Europeans were destroyed by the climate,) the other against the pirates of the Red Sea. A versified satire on the abuses of the government, provoked the viceroy to banish the poet to Macao, where he lived for five years, glad to support himself by the fees of a small office. In this period his great poem is believed to have been completed. He saved the manuscript with difficulty on being shipwrecked on the coast of Cambodia, when at length allowed to return to Goa. Here he was twice imprisoned, first on a groundless charge of malversation in office, and again for debts which he was unable to pay. He prosecution of poetical composition.—One of his first printed efforts was 'The Wounded Hussar,' which appeared when he was about twenty years of age. About the same time, living in humble lodgings in Edinburgh, and supporting himself by private teaching of the classics, and by obscure drudgery for booksellers, he was composing poetical fragments, which were gradually incorporated into 'The Pleasures of Hope.' This poem, published in 1799, in its author's twenty-second year, became immediately and deservedly famous; and though, in spite of advice, he sold the copyright absolutely for sixty pounds, the publishers, on its success, were for some time very liberal to him; and the reversion of the copyright became profitable in his declining years. Being now determined on making literature his profession, he spent upwards of a year in Germany. A great poem, 'The Queen of the North,' ardently projected, was soon dropped; but he transmitted from abroad, to the Morning Chronicle, several of his finest lyrics, among which were, 'Ye Mariners of England,' and 'The Exile of Erin.' He had intended settling in Edinburgh, where he had long been intimate with Jeffrey, Brown, Scott, and Stewart, and most of all with Alison; and with this design he set down his parents in that city. To them, indeed, to his mother after her husband's death, and to his sisters always afterwards, he was steadily and honourably affectionate and generous. —In 1803, however, he found it advisable to remove to London; and in the same year, uncertain though his prospects were, he married his cousin Miss Sinclair. Next year he obtained an engagement with the Star newspaper, from which he received about four guineas a-week, chiefly earned by translating foreign gazettes. About the same time appeared 'The Battle of the Baltic.' For seventeen years from this date he inhabited a house at Sydenham, near London. In 1805 his circumstances were improved by a pension of two hundred a-year bestowed by Fox's administration; partly, perhaps, for zealous advocacy of Whig principles, but prompted also by his poetical celebrity, and by the necessities of one who was always thriftless, and disqualified, both by temperament and by feebleness of health, for steady labour as a bookseller's hack. In 1807 was published one of the fruits of his taskwork, 'The Annals of Great Britain,' for which he received three hundred pounds from an Edinburgh bookseller. In 1809 appeared 'Gertrude of Wyoming,' to which, the year after, 'O'Connor's Child' was annexed. The place which Campbell justly holds as one of the classics of English poetry was now securely gained, when he had only reached his thirty-third year; and, though his life was but half spent, it may safely be said that nothing which he afterwards wrote was worthy to be ranked with his earlier achievements. His time, in fact, was thenceforth frittered away in desultory and occasional studies, and in toils which had no higher purpose than the subsistence of his family; and the exquisite delicacy and correctness of taste, which give such a charm to his finest poems, did no more than impede him in his prose writing. The romantic glow of imagery and sentiment, which had inspired, in youth, his ethical meditations, and which had risen into a more manly enthusiasm in his martial lyrics, died away amidst the hurry and coarseness of real life; and the poet certainly wanted the leisure, and probably wanted the native vigour of thought, which might have furnished him with other and severer themes, and prompted a new tone of poetic inspiration.—In 1812 he delivered, with great popularity, six lectures on poetry at the Royal Institution: two years afterwards, a long visit to Paris, while the masterpieces of Grecian sculpture and Italian painting were still unremoved from the Louvre, gratified his classical taste, and suggested much of attractive reflection. Soon afterwards a legacy from a Highland cousin placed at his command the income of a sum, which in the end exceeded four thousand pounds. In 1819 appeared his well-selected 'Specimens of the British Poets,' accompanied with criticisms, which, written with very fine judgment and fair knowledge, are the only prose compositions of Campbell that are likely to be remembered. In 1821 he became editor of 'The New Monthly Magazine,' to which he contributed a good many critical essays and poems; and the editorship, though never carefully attended to, was retained for ten years. During these years several events occurred. The ill success of 'Theodric' disappointed him grievously. His surviving son, (the other having died in infancy,) was now, at the age of fourteen, pronounced to labour under mental aberration, which proved to be hopeless; and in 1828 his domestic calamities were completed by the loss of his wife. In 1825 he was chiefly occupied in organizing the London university, visiting Berlin to obtain information for the purpose. In November, 1826, he was elected rector of the university of Glasgow; and, exerting himself actively in promoting and suggesting reforms, he was re-elected twice afterwards. About and after the close of this period, also, very much of his time was taken up with the affairs of the Polish refugees.—In 1831, having resigned his first editorship, he for a short time edited the Metropolitan. Seven or eight months from September, 1834, were spent by him in Algiers, which he seems to have had no purpose in visiting except that of making a book. He executed this design in his 'Letters from the South.' Among several pieces of drudgery which he now performed was his 'Life of Mrs. Siddons.' 'The Pilgrim of Glencoe,' the last of his considerable poems, published in 1842, was not successful even in his own estimation. His health, long uncertain, was now irretrievably shattered; and fond of society, and often tempted to convivial excesses, he had taken but too little pains to preserve health, especially since domestic distresses had fallen so heavily on him. His affairs too, became much embarrassed; and in July 1843, giving up the last of several houses he had successively occupied in London, he retired with his niece to Boulogne. There, after a winter of suffering, he died in June 1844. [W.S.]

[Grotto of Camoens at Macao.]

CAMPE, J. H., a German author, 1746-1818.

CAMPEGGIO, Lorenzo, cardinal nuncio to the court of Henry VIII., 1474-1539.

CAMPER, Pierre, a celebrated anatomist and naturalist, was born at Leyden in 1722. He died in 1789. He was educated as a medical man, under Albinus, Gaubius, and Musschenbroek. After he had taken his degree, and paid the last duties his mother an impediment to his prospects, he treated her with uniform kindness and public respect. He was educated by his maternal uncle, a merchant in the city, and studied at Christ Church, Oxford. He early showed the versatility of his powers, by not only taking a high academical position, but gaining a host of admirers among his own contemporaries by his conversational powers and efforts in light literature. His early association with Sheridan marked him out as a probable acquisition to the Whigs, and a dramatic anecdote is told of Godwin having been sent to offer him the championship of the friends of the people—an offer on which he is said to have deliberated ere he rejected it. In 1793, however, he entered parliament as a supporter of Pitt. His opinions were naturally liberal, but his fastidious taste, and somewhat scornful temper, revolted against popularity, and thus it was, that, while he joined the Tory party, he carried into it a decided practical leaning to Whig principles. While the aristocracy have charged him with betraying them, he wrote in the 'Antijacobin,' and other quarters, some of the bitterest satires against democracy that have appeared since the days of Theophrastus. He took office, as under-secretary of state, in 1796. In 1800, he married one of the daughters of General Scott of Balcomie, in Fifeshire, whose large fortune rendered him no longer liable to the imputation of being an adventurer. On the return of the Tory party to power in 1807, he was made foreign secretary. In 1809, in consequence of a quarrel with Castlereagh, which produced a duel, he resigned his office. He soon afterwards commenced his pleadings for catholic emancipation, which tended so greatly to the consummation which he did not live to see. He was on the eve of his departure to be governor-general of India when the death of Castlereagh, in 1822, made him yield to the urgent demands that he should strengthen the ministry by taking office as foreign secretary. In 1825, he performed one of his favourite achievements in the acknowledgment of the independence of the Spanish settlements in South America. In February, 1827, he succeeded Lord Liverpool as prime minister. The chancellor, Eldon, and some other members in the government, of high Tory principles, resigned office on the occasion, in a peculiarly emphatic manner: and Canning sought and to a considerable extent obtained the support of the Whigs. But in his short career he was so severely harassed by the opposition of his former colleagues, that he died on 8th August, 1827, exhausted both in body and mind. [J.H.B.]

CANO, Alonso, a celebrated Spanish painter and sculptor, and also architect, was born at Granada in 1601. He studied at Seville, sculpture with J. Montanes, and painting under Pacheco and Juan de Castillo. He was appointed painter to Philip IV., and practised some time at Madrid, but settled finally at Granada, where he established a considerable school; he died there in 1667. The extent and versatility of his powers have procured Cano the title of the 'Michelangelo of Spain;' his pictures are rich in effect, and display great vigour of execution; they are numerous at Seville, Madrid, Toledo, and Granada, where are still preserved some celebrated altar-pieces. — (Can Bermudez, Diccionario Historico de los mas Ilustres profesores de las Bellas Artes en Espagna.) [R.N.W.]

CANO, James, a Portng. navigator, 15th cent.

CANO, J. S., a Spanish navigator, died 1526.

CANOVA, Antonio, one of the most celebrated sculptors of modern times, was born in the village of Possagno, near Trevigi, in 1757. He was sent at an early age by the Venetian government to complete his studies in Rome; for which purpose he was granted a pension of 300 ducats per annum for three years. This judicious liberality of the Venetian government was the indirect cause of Canova's settling in Rome, and similarly in a great measure contributed to the revival of the arts in the nineteenth century. His first work of note was the group of Theseus and the Minotaur; this was succeeded by the great monuments to popes Clement XIII., and XIV., and Pius the VI., which raised the reputation of Canova above that of all his contemporaries; the monument of Clement XIII. is that in St. Peter's of which the celebrated reposing lions form a part.—Canova's works are extremely numerous, and are generally beautiful, combining nature with classic beauty and proportion; his extraordinary ability, and perhaps industry also, are well displayed in the noble collection of casts after his works, preserved together in the academy at Venice, among which Hercules in the tunic of Deianira hurling Lichas into the sea from the rock, is a most imposing group. Some of his best works are preserved in the Vatican, as the Boxers and many others; his celebrated Venus is in the Pitti Palace at Florence; the three Graces are in this country. At Apsley House is a colossal statue of Napoleon. Canova died at Venice, October, 1822, and a magnificent design which he had made for a public monument to Titian, was with slight alterations adapted, and in 1827 executed by some of his pupils in commemoration of his own memory; it is in the church of the Frari.—Canova was in every sense a most successful artist; his reputation is European; he amassed great wealth, and was created marquis of Ischia by the pope; there is a portrait of him by Sir Thomas Lawrence.—(Missirini, Vita di Antonio Canova, 1827; Canova's Works by Moses, &c., &c.) [R.N.W.]

CANÓVAI, Stanislaus, a math., 1740-1811.

CANSTEIN, Ch. Hildebrand, Baron, a German nobleman, discoverer of an art analogous to stereotyping, died 1719.

CANTACUZENUS, John, one of the most famous emperors of the East, succeeded 1341, abdicated 1354; afterwards distinguished as an historian and theologian, died 1410. His descendants have given many princes to Moldavia and Wallachia, and the last of the name distinguished himself in the cause of Greek independence, 1821.

CANTARINI, Simon, an Ital. painter, d. 1648.

CANTEMIR, Constantine, vaivode of Moldavia, 1630-1693. Demetrius, his son, hospodar of Moldavia, distinguished as an historian, 1673-1723. Constantine Demetrius, son of the last named, a diplomatist and man of letters, 1709-1741.

CANTERBURY, Ch. Manners Sutton, Viscount, speaker of the H. of Commons, 1780-1845.

CANTIPRATANUS, Thos., a philos., 13th ct.

CANTON, John M. A., an astron., 1718-72.

CANTON, J. G., a Germ. painter, 1710-1753.

CARAFFA, ANTHONY, a statesman of Naples, 15th cent. A cardinal, and great scholar of the same name, cousin of pope Paul IV., died 1591.

CARAFFA, J. A., put to d. by Pius IV., 1560.

CARAFFA, V., a gen. of the Jesuits, 1583-1649.

CARDAM, a king of Bulgaria, 776-806.

CARAMUEL DE LOBKOWITZ, JOHN, bishop of Messi, disting. as a divine and poet, 1606-1682.

CARASCOSA, BARON, a disting. partizan of the French in the Neapolitan revolution, b. 1769.

CARAUSIUS, MARCUS AURELIUS VALERIUS, proclaimed emp. in Britain 287; assassinated 291.

CARAVAGGIO, MICHELANGELO MERIGI, commonly called MICHELANGELO DA CARAVAGGIO, where he was born in 1569, was originally a mason's labourer, but while still young gained so considerable a position as a portrait painter at Milan, that he was induced to try his fortune in Venice, where he became a student of the works of Giorgione; and he eventually established himself in Rome. His poverty was a serious obstacle to his success in the great capital of the arts, for some time, when he was obliged to work for the Cavaliere d' Arpino; but his celebrated picture of the 'Card Players,' and shortly afterwards a few religious pieces, of which his masterpiece is the 'Deposition of Christ,' now in the Vatican picture gallery, established his reputation as one of the principal painters of his time.—Caravaggio's good fortune was of short duration: being of a violent temper, he killed a companion in consequence of a dispute at a game of tennis. He fled to Naples, thence he went to Malta, and spent some time at Palermo; but finally having obtained the pope's pardon for the act of homicide, he set out in 1609 in a feluca for Rome; he was arrested on his way by mistake, by a Spanish coast guard, and when he gained his liberty he discovered that the crew of the feluca had gone off with all his property; he wandered despondingly along the coast to Porto Ercole, where, what with disappointment and the extreme heat of the weather, he was seized with a fever, and died in a few days, at the early age of forty.—Caravaggio was a great colourist, but his pictures are black and heavy, and so ordinary in their general treatment of form and accuracy, that his style was designated the naturalist, in contradistinction to the prevailing ideal taste of the time. He had many imitators, who are called naturalisti and tenebrosi; the celebrated Spagnuoletto is the most distinguished of his followers. This taste was much spread in Spain, and had its votaries in France and the low countries. Valentine and Honthorst (Gherardo, della notte) were decided imitators of Caravaggio.—(Bellori, Vite de' Pittori, &c., Rome 1672.) [R.N.W.]

CARDAN, JEROME, one of our true 'curiosities of literature,' born in Pavia in 1501, said to have caused his own death in 1576, that he might not, by living longer, falsify his prediction of that event! There are not many characters more difficult to delineate by a few sketches than Cardan's. Of great industry, undoubted originality and power, and extensive acquirements, his fame yet rests for the most part on his pure charlatanerie. As a moral entity, if indeed the term can with decency be applied to him, he was also a mass of contradictions; he loved knowledge, sought apparently for truth, and experienced high aspirations; nevertheless he never shrunk from deceit and falsehood; his practical life full of disorder; his scientific faith worth nothing—he stole from Tartaglia, and published as his own the famous rule for the solution of cubic equations. He wrote on everything—often advancing knowledge; but he pretended to deal with all difficulties under the sun. He said that, like Socrates, he had a demon; like Swedenborg afterwards, he claimed supernatural insight during the extasis;—it is not improbable that he was affected by that singular modification of vitality now known as mesmerism. It were useless to recount seriously the opinions of a man so strange and disorderly; nor can we undertake to reckon up even the topics on which he wrote. His productions fill 10 volumes folio; the oddest of them being the treatise 'De Vita Propria,'—something of the cast of Rousseau's 'Confessions,' as full of vanity, of insincerity, of passion, of eloquence. Cardan's fame, while he lived, resulted from his skill as a physician, and his astrology. He was doubtless helped in his profession by superior acquaintance with chemistry; to which, one may safely give the credit of his celebrated cure of the archbishop of St. Andrews. As might have been expected, his private life and affairs were ever in confusion: one son fell under the axe of the public executioner, because he had poisoned his wife; another was shut up in prison for safety's sake, at the instance of his own father. —These notices may help the imaginative to conceive something of Cardan. [J.P.N.]

CARDI, LOUIS, an Italian painter, d. 1613.

CARDONNE, DENIS DOMINIQUE DE, an Eastschol. and historian, professor at Paris, 1720-1783.

CAREL, JAMES, a French poet, 17th century.

CAREW, GEORGE, made earl of Totness by Charles I. for his military services, historian of the Irish wars, died 1629.

CAREW, SIR GEORGE, a courtier and fugitive historian, knighted by Queen Elizabeth, d. 1614. His brother, RICHARD, a topographical wr., d. 1620.

CAREW, HENRY, earl of Monmouth, eminent as a scholar and translator, d. 1661.

CAREW, THOMAS, a dramatic poet, d. 1639.

CAREY, HENRY, a distinguished ballad-writer and composer, died by his own hand, 1743. GEORGE SAVILLE, his son, also a song-writer and playwright, died 1807.

CAREY, JOSEPH, a French printer, regarded by his country, as the inv. of stereotyping, d. 1801.

CAREY, WILLIAM, was born on 17th August, 1761, in the village of Paulerspury, Northamptonshire. Although his father was clerk of the parish, he early displayed a tendency to dissent, and having announced his adherence to the principles of the baptist persuasion, was in 1783 baptized in the river Nen, and soon after chosen pastor of a small baptist church in the neighbourhood of Northampton. While assiduous in the discharge of his official duties, he prosecuted his studies with intense ardour in private, and was greatly distinguished for the extent and variety of his knowledge, his accomplishments embracing all the modern European languages, and several branches of science, particularly botany and natural history. In 1787 Carey was removed to the pastorate of a more numerous church in Leicester, where his CAROUGE, B. A., a Fr. astronom., 1741-1798.

CARPACEIO, V., an Italian painter, 16th ct.
CARPENTER, Dr. Lant, an industrious theological writer, and unitarian minister, 1780-1840.
CARPENTER, Richard, a theologian, 17th c.
CARPI, Ugo Da, an engraver, 16th century.
CARPINI, J., a Venetian painter, 1611-1674.
CARPOCRATES, founder of a heresy, 2d cent.
CARR, Sir John, au. of several 'Tours,' d. 1822.
CARR, W. H., a clergyman, and patron of the fine arts, distinguished for a bequest of pictures to the National Gallery, died 1830.
CARRA, Jean Louis, a political and historical writer, condemned with the ill-fated Girondists by the revolutionary tribunal, 1793, was one of the earliest in the field at the outbreak of the French revolution, as editor of the 'Annales Patriotiques.' He was born in 1743, and though his parents were in narrow circumstances, received a liberal education. He was a man of adventurous spirit, and astonished Mirabeau by offering to raise all Germany against the emperor with only 'fifty thousand men and twelve printing presses.' He is worthy of remembrance as the chief instrument in exciting a vindictive feeling against the royal family, and this, perhaps, may be considered his real part in the revolutionary drama. His condemnation with the illustrious party of the Gironde, was an honour to which he was scarcely entitled, and is a sign, at least, of his improved taste as he approached the end of his career. Having when a young man spent some time in the Danubian provinces, he published a work on the history of Moldavia and Wallachia, with an essay upon their actual state in 1776. [E.R.]
CARRANZA, B., a Fr. ecclesiastic, 1503-1573.
CARRARA, Francis, lord of Padua, memorable for his wars with the Venetians, died 1393. His son of the same name, after a long struggle with them, strangled in a Venetian prison, 1406.
CARRA-SAINT-CYR, J. F., Comte De, a Fr. officer distinguished in the late wars, died 1834.
CARRE, the name of several Dutch painters, flourished at Amsterdam 17th and 18th centuries.
CARRE, a Fr. East Indian voyager, 1666-1671.
CARRE, Louis, a Fr. geometrician, 1663-1711.
CARRE, Remi, a writer on singing, 1706-1773.
CARRE, W. L. J., a wr. on civil law, 1777-1832.
CARREL, Nicolas Armand, one of the most sincere patriots and noble-minded men of modern times, chief editor of the National, and author of several historical works, was born at Rouen, 1801, and killed in a duel by M. Girardin, 24th July, 1836. He received a military education at St. Cyr, and fought in the auxiliary legions of Spain in the late struggle against absolutism. He took the direction of the National after the revolution of 1830, and distinguished himself by his fine spirit and patriotic sincerity. He was extremely sensitive in points of honour, and had fought several duels before his last fatal rencontre with his more wily opponent. He bears the reputation of a good man, and was much beloved by his friends in private life. His principal work is a 'History of the Counter-Revolution in England.' [E.R.]
CARRERAS, Jose Miguel, a patriotic Spaniard of South America, engaged with his two brothers, Juan and Luis, in the revolution of Chili, and executed in 1822, as the latter had been 1818.
CARRIER, Jean Baptiste, born 1756, was an obscure attorney, brought into note by the progress of the French revolution, and sent to the national convention, 1792. His memory is held in execration for deeds of horror without a parallel, except in the similar scenes of iniquity enacted by his rival in cruelty, Collot D'Herbois. He was sent to Nantes in October, 1793, to assist in repressing the civil war commenced in La Vendée by the priests and royalists. He selected his committee, to give an air of legal sanction to his atrocities, from the very refuse of the canaille, and at length dispensed with all form whatever, and executed his prisoners en masse, no less than 15,000 being disposed of by fusillades or drownings in one month, with whose corpses the waters of the Loire were literally infected and the banks strewn. The refinement of cruelty with which all this was accomplished, and the obscenities with which he seasoned his repast of blood, almost surpass belief. He was at length recalled by the Committee of Public Safety, and on the fall of Robespierre, condemned by the revolutionary tribunal and executed. A memoir upon the life and crimes of Carrier was published by Babœuf in 1798. Care should be taken not to confound this monster with a professor of civil law, and author of various treatises on jurisprudence, born 1770, who must have felt it a misfortune to bear precisely the same names. [E.R.]
CARRIERES, L. De, a biblical com., 1662-1717.
CARRINGTON, N. T., an Eng. poet, 1777-1830.
CARRION, E. R. De, a learned Spaniard, 17th c.
CARS, Laurence, a Fr. engraver, 1703-1771.
CARSTARES, William, a Scotch divine, an adherent of William, prince of Orange, afterwards his chaplain, 1649-1715.
CARTE, S., a wr. on chronology, died 1740. His son Thomas, dist. as an antiquarian and historian, noted in the polit. troubles of the period, 1686-1754.
CARTER, Elizabeth, daughter of a clergyman, disting. for her extraordinary learning, 1717-1806.
CARTER, John, an antiquar. wr., distinguished also for his skill in drawing and engraving, d. 1818.
CARTERET, John, earl of Granville, an adherent of the house of Hanover, born 1690; secretary of state 1721; lord-lieutenant of Ireland 1723-1726, and again 1727-1730; in opposition to Sir R. Walpole 1730-1741; in office again as secretary of state 1742-1744; and as president of the council from 1750 till his death, 1763.
CARTERET, Phi., a naval officer, 18th cent.
CARTIER, Jacques, a native of St. Malo, who, in 1534, under commission from the king of France, took possession of Canada in the name of his sovereign. The next year, he returned, and ascended the St. Lawrence, or Hochelaga, as the Indians called it, as far as a beautiful island containing a picturesque and fertile hill, which he named Montreal, royal or king's mount, close to which was an Indian village, called by him a city, also named Hochelaga. Cartier wintered in the river, and returned home on the breaking up of the ice. He did not effect a settlement; and not having taken home any specimen of gold or silver, he did not receive much favour from his master; so that in the expedition of M. Roberval, sent out as viceroy in 1540, Cartier had no higher appointment than that of pilot. [J.B.] CARTOUCHE, L. D., a Fr. brigand, exec. 1721.

quis of Londonderry, a British statesman, was born on 18th June, 1769. In the Irish parliament, where he first sat, he was reputed to belong to the opposition, but obtaining a seat in the English Commons, he chose the ministerial benches. On his accession to the title of Castlereagh, in 1797, he returned to the Irish parliament. As secretary of state, he made great and successful efforts for the achievement of the Irish Union, and he was one of the statesmen most prominently marked out on that occasion for the wrath of the Irish people. He sat for Down in the united parliament, and in 1805 became the war and colonial secretary, resuming these offices on the restoration of his party in 1807. In 1809, a dispute, in the unfortunate Walcheren expedition, drove him to a duel with Canning, and the resignation of his offices. In 1812, he again became foreign secretary; and in 1814 and 1815 he represented Britain at the settlement of Europe by the congress of Vienna. He was popularly charged with connivance at the aims of the European despots; and yet, arbitrary as were his principles, it is now understood that his liberality and firmness did much to check the tyranny and rapacity of the continental monarchs. In April, 1821, he succeeded his father as marquis of Londonderry in Ireland, but this did not prevent him from retaining his seat in the House of Commons. He was a man of fine person, and commanding manner, and could look a proud defiance when assailed, which often elicited the admiration of his many adversaries. He was a ready but bad speaker, and his contorted and jumbled similes have often been quoted with much ridicule. In the session of 1822, he seemed to be suffering severely from overexertion and excitement, and on the 12th of August he deliberately terminated his days by a slight incision in the carotid artery. [J.H.B.]

CASTOLDI, Giov. Giac., a composer, 16th c.

CASTOR, the first chronological wr., 200 B.C.

CASTOR, St., founder of an abbey, 4th cent.

CASTRACANI, C., an Ital. general, afterwards duke of Lucca, known also as a poet, 1281-1328.

CASTRO, Alvar De, a Sp. general, d. 1239.

CASTRO, Don Ferd. De, favourite of Peter the Cruel, died a refugee in England, 1375.

CASTRO, Gabriel Pereira De, an Epic poet, complimented as the second Camoens, 1571-1632.

CASTRO, Inez De, a beautiful lady of Castile, secretly married to Pedro, son of Alphonso IV., and assassinated by order of the latter, 1357.

CASTRO, John De, a Portuguese commander, afterwards governor of the Portuguese possessions in the East Indies, 1500-1548.

CASTRUCCI, P., a cel. violinist, last century.

CASTRUCCIO, a chf. of the Ghibellines, d. 1328.

CATALANI, Angelica, the cel. cantatrice and opera performer, born at Sinigaglia 1782, d. 1849.

CATEL, C. S., a compos. of music, 1770-1830.

CATESBY, Mark, a naturalist, 1680-1749.

CATHALINEAU, James, general-in-chief of the royalist armies in La Vendée, surnamed by his soldiers the 'saint of Anjou,' where he was born 1759; mortally wounded in the attack on Nantes, 29th June, 1793.

CATHARINE, St., of Bologna, an extatique, of the order of St. Francis, canon. 1724, 1413-63.

CATHARINE, St., a virg. and martyr, 4th ct.

CATHARINE, St., of Genoa, canonized 1737, an. of a dialogue between the soul and body, 1448-1510.

CATHARINE, St., of Sienna, celebrated for the political influence of her revelations in the pontificate of Gregory XI., and for her extatic writings, 1347-1380.

CATHARINE, queen of Bosnia, died 1478.

CATHARINE of Arragon, daughter of Ferdinand and Isabella, b. 1483; married to Prince Arthur 1501, and to her brother-in-law, afterwards Henry VIII., 1514; died 1536.

CATHARINE of Braganza, of Portugal, born 1638; married to Charles II., king of England, 1661; died 1705.

CATHARINE of France, daughter of Charles VI., b. 1401; married to Henry V., k. of England, 1420, and after his death to Owen Tudor; d. 1438.

CATHARINE PARR, queen of Henry VIII. 1543, afterw. wife of Sir Thos. Seymour, d. 1548.

CATHARINE DE MEDICI, the only child of Lorenzino de Medici, duke of Urbino, and Maddelaine de la Tour, a French princess, sister-in-law of the duke of Albany, was born 1519, and married to the duke of Orleans, afterwards Henry II., 1533. During her husband's lifetime, who was mortally wounded at a tournay, 1559, the political history of Catharine possesses little interest for us. He was succeeded by their eldest son, Francis II., who also died the following year, 1560, when Catharine was named regent of France during the minority of her second son, Charles IX. The great events which now succeeded each other, and which belong to the early history of the reformation, were the battle of Dreux, fought between Guise and Condé 1562; the truce concluded between the rival interests represented by these leaders, 1563; the league of Bayonne formed against the protestants, and the recommencement of the religious war, 1566; the battle of St. Denis, and the death of Montmorency, 1567; the battle of Jarnac, and assassination of Condé, 1569; the appearance of the courageous Jeanne D'Albret with her son Henry of Navarre, afterwards Henry IV., in the camp of the protestants, and the battle of Mont-Contour, 1569; the peace of St. Germain, to which Catharine submitted under the dictation of Coligni and the protestants, 1570; and the treacherous massacre of St. Bartholomew, 1572.—In 1574 Charles IX. died of the fruits of his debaucheries, and Catharine's third son, who had been elected king of Poland the previous year, succeeded under the title of Henry III., the virtual government of the kingdom still remaining with the queen-mother, who alone preserved it from total anarchy. In 1575 Henry of Navarre was the recognized leader of the protestants. In 1576 the famous catholic league was formed, and the duke of Guise appointed chief of the crusade. In the next year or two, the war had been renewed from one end of France to the other, and the kingdom was threatened with entire destruction by the rival factions. In 1587 Henry of Navarre gained the battle of Coutras. In 1588 the people of Paris were in insurrection, the states-general were assembled at Blois, and the duke of Guise was assassinated in the palace. In the following year Catharine died. A bare outline of the political complications which produced these events would fill many pages, but they all turn upon the struggle between the catho-tion which prevailed. On the commencement of the civil war in B.C. 49, Cato joined the party of Pompey; and, after the battle of Pharsalia, proceeded to Africa, where the hopes of the republican party were finally extinguished by the battle of Thapsus (6th April, B.C. 46). The town of Utica alone remained in the interest of the followers of Pompey; and Cato, failing to inspire his countrymen who were collected there with courage to endure a siege, resolved not to outlive the downfal of the republic. After providing for the safety of his friends, and instructing them as to the means of effecting a reconciliation with the conqueror, he spent the greater part of the night in perusing Plato's Phædo, and then inflicted on himself the wound of which he died in the forty-ninth year of his age. Cæsar's estimate of Cato's character is shown by the exclamation which he uttered when he heard of his death: 'Cato, I grudge thee thy death, since thou hast grudged me the glory of sparing thy life!' [G.F.]

CATTENBURG, A. VAN, a theolog., 1664-1737.

CATULLUS, CAIUS VALERIUS, an amatory and epigrammatic poet, the rare elegance of whose compositions is most unfortunately disfigured by their licentiousness, died B.C. 40.

CATZ, JAMES VAN, a statesman and poet, surnamed the La Fontaine of Holland, 1577-1660.

CAUDERAS, B., a Portuguese painter, d. 1606.

CAULAINCOURT, A. G., one of the 'suspects' of the revolution, liberated from prison on being drawn for the republican army, attained eminence under Buonaparte as a general and min. of state, and died duke of Vicenza at the age of fifty-four, 1827.

CAUMARTIN, L. DE, a Fr. statesm., 1552-1623.

CAUS, SOLOMON DE, a Fr. architect, d. 1630.

CAUSSIN, NICH., a Fr. rhetorician, d. 1651.

CAVALCANTI, G., a phil. and poet, d. 1300.

CAVALIER, JOHN, chief of the protestants in revolt agt. Louis XIV., after. a royalist, 1679-1740.

CAVALIERI, BONAVENTURA, a very eminent Italian mathematician; the pupil of Galileo and friend of Torricelli. Cavalieri's chief work is on the 'Geometry of Indivisibles,' in which he details an artifice by aid of which curve surfaces, &c., may be quadrated. In one respect this method must be reckoned the logical predecessor and herald of the infinitesimal calculus. Cavalieri wrote also on trigonometry, astronomy, and astrology. He died in 1647.

CAVALLI, F., a Fr. opera composer, d. 1673.

CAVALLINI, P., a sculp. and pain., 1259-1344.

CAVALLO, TIBERIUS, an Italian philosopher, inventor of several physical instruments, 1749-1809.

CAVANILLES, A. J., a Sp. botan., 1745-1804.

CAVE, EDW., the celeb. bookseller of St. John's gate, fndr. of the 'Gentleman's Magazine,' d. 1754.

CAVE, DR. W., a learn. and relig. wr., 1637-1713.

CAVENDISH, THE HON. HENRY, born at Nice 1731, died at London 1810. The father of Mr. Cavendish was Lord Charles Somerset, a cadet of the house of Devonshire. But unlike the class to which his family belonged, the chemist had no sympathies with his fellow-men, either above or below him. He made important discoveries; but when we are acquainted with his history and his self-seclusion, the wonder is that his researches were not more abundant. Compare the millionaire chemist with the poverty-struck, but indefatigable and noble-spirited Priestley, or with the calm and amiable Black, and we have an intellectual machine contrasted with talent accompanied by humane and generous hearts. 'We start, for soul is wanting there.' Mr. Cavendish was a profound mathematician, electrician, and chemist. Dr. Black, who had discovered carbonic acid, laid the foundation of pneumatic chemistry. Cavendish is usually said to have discovered hydrogen (although it was prepared by Mayow, Boyle, and Hales long anteriorly), and placed the second stone on the great superstructure which was afterwards to be raised by Priestley and others. That common air consisted of oxygen and nitrogen was known; but Cavendish demonstrated (1783) that it consisted by a volume of 20·833 oxygen and 79·166 nitrogen—a result which has been thoroughly confirmed by subsequent experiments. He likewise demonstrated the exact constitution of water, although it is confidently affirmed that James Watt at the same time knew its composition, and that his views were known to Cavendish. Cavendish likewise showed that nitric acid is composed of nitrogen and oxygen—Priestley having previously found that electric sparks, when passed through air, turned litmus red, Cavendish added potash to the solution, evaporated, and obtained nitre. While there is scarcely any doubt that there has been a tendency to overrate Cavendish at the expense of others, he must be always ranked as one of the first of English chemists, who has, by the accuracy of his experiments, assisted in laying the sure foundation of the science. [R.D.T.]

CAVENDISH, THOMAS, was the son of a gentleman of fortune in Suffolk. Coming into possession of his father's property in 1585, he applied his ample means to the fitting out of a stout barque of 120 tons, and accompanied Sir Richard Grenville to the West Indies and Virginia. The object is not ascertained; but of a second voyage, on which he sailed in July, 1586, the purpose certainly was to recruit his finances, wasted in personal extravagance, by plundering on the western sea-board of S. America. England and Spain were long at open war, and among men of fortune this practice was not uncommon in the days of Elizabeth, a commission from the queen being previously obtained. He had only 123 men, and three vessels, respectively 120, 60, and 40 tons burden, for the fitting out of which he had to sell or mortgage what remained of his estates; with these he circumnavigated the globe in twenty-five months, making important surveys in Magellan Straits, plundering and burning many towns of the Spanish colonies, and capturing on the coast of California the great annual galleon, 700 tons burden, laden with valuable merchandise, and 122,000 Spanish dollars. He also reduced to its proper length the distance between Java and the Cape, which the Portuguese had made much too great; and reaching home in safety, 'rich enough to purchase a fair earldom,' he was knighted by Queen Elizabeth. His ill-gotten wealth being dissipated in three years, he embarked in a joint-stock expedition of a like kind, but on a larger scale; this proved unsuccessful from disagreement among elements discordant from the first; and while on his return, in 1593, he died at sea of vexation and fatigue, at the age of twenty-nine. He was the first to point out the CERDA, J. L. DE LA, a Spanish critic, classical commen., and grammarian, Toledo, 1560-1643.

CERDA Y RICO, F., a Sp. savant, 1730-1792.
CERDIC, a Saxon king of Wessex, 519-534.
CERDON, a Syrian gnostic, 2d century.
CERE, JOHN NICH., a Fr. botanist, 1737-1810.
CERINTHUS, a Jew, and a noted heretic of the first century, who had been taught literature and philosophy at Alexandria. In the age of the apostle John he propagated many absurdities about the person of Christ and a sensual millennium, based on Jewish dreams and Gnostic speculations. His fantastic reveries need not to be repeated. According to some, the fourth gospel was written specially against his tenets, but there is no solid ground for such an opinion, though it has been plausibly defended. [J.E.]
CERISANTES, MARK DUNCAN DE, a Scotch physician in the polit. service of Richelieu, k. 1618.
CERMENATI, JOHN DE, a Latin hist., 14th c.
CERQUEIRA, a Portug. mission., 1552-1614.
CERRATO, PAUL, an Italian poet, 16th cent.
CERULARIUS, patriarch of Constantin., and an. of the Gr. schism, crnd. Isaac Comnenus 1058.
CERUTI, FRED., a classical schol., 1541-1579.
CERUTTI, J. A. J., a Jesuit and miscel. writer, author of an 'Apology' for his order, 1735-1792.
CERVANTES SAAVEDRA, MIGUEL DE, was born in 1547, at Alcala, in New Castile, of an ancient but poor family. His taste for literature seems to have been early developed, and to have been chiefly directed towards poetry. In his twenty-second year, he quitted Spain for Italy, holding a place in the household of a cardinal; and, volunteering in the papal army, he fought bravely in 1571 against the Turks, in the battle of Lepanto, receiving there a wound which lamed his left hand for life. He continued to be a soldier, serving under several leaders, till, in 1576, sailing for the Low Countries, he was taken prisoner by an Algerine corsair. His sufferings and adventures during his three years of slavery in Algiers, are said to be described in his novel, 'The Captive,' inserted as an episode in 'Don Quixote.' On being ransomed in 1580, he resumed military service. In 1584 appeared his first printed work, 'Galatea,' a pastoral romance, mixing prose and verse after the model of Montemayor's 'Diana.' In it he represented, under feigned names, himself and a lady whom he immediately married. He afterwards wrote a considerable number of plays, which have never become famous. About this time of his life his history becomes particularly obscure. He was for some time, at Seville, a purveyor of stores for the Indian fleet; and he is traditionally asserted to have collected tithes in La Mancha. In 1605 he published the first part of 'Don Quixote.' The appearance of this celebrated work of genius speedily made him famous, without, however, rescuing him from poverty, although it brought him some patronage from the court, which drew him to Madrid for the rest of his life. No other work came from his pen for several years. But in 1613 he published the 'Exemplary Novels,' a collection of twelve stories, some of which are the only minor works of his that are at all worthy of the author of 'Don Quixote.' Next year there was printed his 'Journey to Parnassus,' critical and satirical essay in verse. This piece, and the celebrity of his great romance, provoked attacks on him, of which the most bitter were introduced into a spurious continuation of 'Don Quixote.' This work was at length completed by the appearance of the second part in 1615. It is needless to commend 'Don Quixote;' and this is no place for endeavouring to analyze its character and design. The author did not long survive its completion. He died in his sixty-ninth year, on the 23d day of April, 1616; and Shakspeare died on the very same day. 'Persiles and Sigismunda,' a romance which Cervantes left unpublished, is universally allowed to be unworthy of the liking with which he himself regarded it. [W.S.]
CERVETTO, a music. of Garrick's time, d. 1783.
CESARINI, JUL., a cardinal employed in polit. negotiations, and kd. at the battle of Varna, 1444.
CESARINI, VIRG., a Latin poet, 1595-1624.
CESAROTTI, MELCHIOR, professor of Gr. and Heb., also dist. as a poet and essayist, 1730-1808.
CESPEDES, A. G. DE, a Sp. geog., 1560-1608.
CESPEDES, P. DE, a Sp. painter, 1538-1608.
CESTI, M. A., a composer of music, died 1688.
CESTIUS, GALLUS, Rom. gov. of Syria, 1st c.
CEVELLOS, THE CHEVALIER DE, a Spanish statesman, author of the manifesto on Napoleon's invasion, 1763-1838.
CEZELLI, CONSTANCE, a heroine of the 16th c.
CHABERT, J. B., marquis of, a Fr. command., celeb. as a navigator and astronomer, 1724-1805.
CHABERT, P., a wr. on veter. surg., 1727-1814.
CHABOT, FRANCIS, one of those unquiet malignant spirits raised from the deep by the French revolution, was a Capuchin monk, who abandoned his order when the door had been opened by a decree of the constituent assembly, and was deputed to the legislative assembly, 1791, and to the convention, 1792. His declamatory powers and vehement passions were directed by the most unsparing hatred of royalty, and according to his own declaration, he even offered himself for assassination that his corpse might be carried through the streets, and the inhabitants of the Faubourgs excited to insurrection. He voted for the king's death without appeal to the people and without delay, and proved himself so shameless in the advocacy of violence and murder, that he has been called the type of sansculottism. Chabot foresaw his fate when the national convention succumbed to the dictates of the Committee of Public Safety, and one day remarked to his compatriots,—'There ought to be a Côté Droit, (opposition side.) If none else will form it, I will alone. People say to me, you will all get guillotined in your turn; first, you and Bazire, then Danton, then Robespierre himself.' The event proved that these apprehensions were well founded. Chabot had married into the family of an Austrian banker, and from his connection with the financial speculations of his brothers-in-law, was accused of falsifying a decree of the convention. Whether this was true or false, it served equally well as a pretext for his execution. He was conducted to the scaffold after attempting to poison himself with corrosive sublimate, 3d April, 1794. [E.R.]
CHABOT, G. A., a wr. on civil law, 1758-1819.
CHABRIAS, an Athenian, general, 6th c. B.C.
CHABRY, MARK, a Fr. painter, 1660-1727.
CHACON, ALPH., a Sp. antiquary, 1540-1599.

CHACON, P., a Spanish critic, 1525-1581.
CHAH-AALEM, emp. of Hindos. 1759, d. 1806.
CHAH-DJIHAU, emp. of Hindost., 1622-1656.
CHAH-ROUKH-MYRZA, son of Tamerlane, gov. of Khorassan, conq. of Persia, &c., died 1447.
CHAHYN-GUERAI, last khan of Tarty., 1783.
CHAIS, CHARLES, a protes. theolog., 1701-85.
CHAISE, F. DE LA, conf. of Louis XIV., d. 1709.
CHALCIDIUS, a Platonic philosopher, 3d ct.
CHALCONDYLES, DEMETRIUS, a refugee from Constantinople, au. of a Gr. grammar, d. 1513.
CHALCONDYLES, N., a Greek hist., 15th ct.
CHALES, C. F. DE, a Fr. mathem., died 1678.
CHALLE, C. M., a French painter, died 1778.
CHALMEL, J. L., a French hist., 1760-1828.
CHALMERS, ALEX., an industrious editor and contributor to the press, in most repute for his 'General Biographical Dictionary,' 1759-1834.
CHALMERS, GEO., a statistical wr., 1744-1825.
CHALMERS, THOMAS, D.D., LL.D., the celebrated pulpit orator and divine, was born on 17th March, 1780, at Anstruther, in Fifeshire, of respectable and pious, though humble, parents. After receiving the elements of knowledge at the parish school, he was entered a student in St. Andrews College at the early age of twelve; and soon gave indications of that strong predilection for the physical sciences which he retained through life. He prosecuted the course of study prescribed to students in divinity, and obtained license to preach in connection with the Established Church of Scotland while only nineteen, two years under the legal age, on the express ground that he was 'a lad of pregnant parts.' His views towards the church, however, were at this period of his life entertained, not from any ulterior intention of giving himself to the sacred duties of the ministry, but from the belief that the character of a licentiate would advance him in his path to the summit of his ambition —a university appointment. Accordingly, after having been employed about a year as assistant in the parish of Cavers, he relinquished that situation for the more congenial office of assistant teacher of mathematics in the university of St. Andrews. His eminent success in that department procured him a presentation to the parish of Kilmany, the patronage of which was vested in the college, and accordingly he was ordained to the pastoral charge of that place on 12th May, 1803. How subordinate to scientific pursuits he then considered the functions of the sacred office to be, appears from the fact that he spent two successive winters in St. Andrews in giving public lectures during the week on mathematics and chemistry, while he returned to his parish only on Saturdays, leaving it again early on Monday morning. A great and happy change, superinduced by long personal illness and several domestic bereavements, took place in his views of religion. From being a very secondary concern with him, he was brought to regard it as a subject of paramount importance. He now became as assidnous and earnest in his attention to his sacred functions, as he had been formerly negligent of them; and applying his great powers to the illustration and enforcement of Christian truth with all the enthusiasm of a new convert, his fame as a zealous and eloquent preacher spread far and wide. His services were now eagerly sought for other and more important places, and accordingly, after having resided twelve years in Kilmany, he was translated in the summer of 1815 to the Tron Church and Parish, Glasgow. His reputation as a preacher continued rapidly to advance. His church was besieged every Sabbath by crowds of admiring listeners; and a volume of sermons, entitled 'Astronomical Discourses,' enjoyed a circulation as wide as the 'Tales of My Landlord,' published during the same season. On several public occasions he was engaged to officiate both in Edinburgh and London at this period of his ministry, and the sensation universally produced by his preaching surpassed all that was ever known or heard of in the annals of pulpit eloquence. Chalmers had long devoted his attention to the subject of panperism, on which he entertained some peculiar views as to the superior efficacy of voluntary and Christian efforts in meeting its evils. To enable him to carry his views into operation, the magistrates of Glasgow erected the new parish of St. John's, to which he was presented as first minister, and in which he was allowed the fullest liberty to work his parochial machinery. A number of enlightened Christian laymen aided his efforts; and the scheme in the hands of such an agency met the highest success. But although he wrought it with characteristic ardour, and developed its principles at full length in his 'Christian and Civic Economy of Large Towns,' it never obtained in any other parish, and has long been abandoned as impracticable, even in St. John's. After a most active and successful incumbency for eight years in Glasgow, Dr. Chalmers relinquished the exercise of the ministry for the more retired, but not less useful office of training the rising hopes of the church. In 1823 he became professor of moral philosophy in the university of St. Andrews; and in 1827 he was translated by the unanimous presentation of the Town Council of Edinburgh, to the chair of divinity in the university of that city. The splendour of his fame attracted an unusual number of professional as well as amateur students to his prelections in both of these offices; and the ability as well as learning he brought to bear on the topics of his chair, amply justified his elevation to the highest and most responsible position in the church. Dr. Chalmers now commenced a career of authorship, by which he still further extended his reputation as a divine. The most flattering honours were heaped upon him from various quarters; for not only was he elected moderator of the General Assembly—the highest position in the Church of Scotland—but he was chosen president of the Royal Society of Edinburgh, created Doctor of Laws by the university of Oxford, selected by the trustees of the earl of Bridgewater one of the eminent writers to publish a treatise in proof of the wisdom and goodness of God in Creation, and appointed corresponding member of the Royal Institute of France—a compliment which no clergyman in Britain had ever previously enjoyed. Dr. Chalmers, who had zealously espoused the popular side in church politics, allowed himself to be prevailed upon, contrary to his own better judgment, to propose the enactment of the veto law in 1833, in the fond hope that it would produce the effect of popularizing the Established Church; and there can be no doubt that it was successful to an eminent extent in realizing his fondest wishes. Never was the church stronger than during its prevalence; and it was on this auspicious period he commenced and carried on his gigantic labours in the cause of church extension. Adhering to the veto act, after the civil courts had decided on its illegality, he mingled in all the stormy controversies which followed; and at length finding it hopeless to maintain the position he had assumed, he seceded in May, 1843, with a large body of adherents who joined him in forming the Free Church. He was the first moderator; and indeed there can be little doubt that his name, which was a tower of strength, and his eloquence, which possessed resistless power over the popular mind, contributed more perhaps than any other cause, to give the new secession a local habitation in the land. Dr. Chalmers's health, impaired by his extraordinary labours,—especially in organizing the new church, sank rapidly, and his death, which was sudden, was lamented by Christians of all denominations. His collected works, including sermons, theological lectures, &c., amount to 25 volumes. [R.J.]

[Kilmany Church.]

CHALONER, B., a catholic prelate, 1691-1781.

CHALONER, Sir Thos., a scholar and statesman of the age of Elizabeth, 1515-1565. His son of the same name, distinguished as a chemist, 1559-1603. Edward, son of the last, chaplain to James I., died 1625. James, a second son, an adherent of the parliament, committed suicide at the restoration, 1660. Thomas, brother of the preceding, absconded at the restoration, and died 1661.

CHALOTAIS, G. R. La, the celeb. procureur-général to the parliament of Brussels, whose exposé of the Jesuits provoked their expulsion and his own imprisonment, which produced a great effect in France, 1701-1785.

CHAMBERLAINE, Robert, a poet, d. 1637.

CHAMBERLAYNE, Edw., LL.D., au. of the 'Present State of England,' 1616-1703. John, his son, a celeb. philologist and translator, died 1724.

CHAMBERS, Eph., the cyclopædist, d. 1740.

CHAMBERS, Sir Wm., an archit., 1725-1796.

CHAMBRAY, Roland Fréard, lord of, a Fr. statesman and architect, time of Louis XIII.

CHAMILLARD, M. De, a Fr. states., 1651-1721.

CHAMILLARD, Step., a Fr. antiq., 1656-1730.

CHAMISSO, Adelbert Von, a fertile and interesting wr., especially as a natur., 1781-1838.

CHAMPAGNE, Philip De, a distinguished Flemish painter, instructed by Fouquières, and employed with Lebrun in the Luxembourg palace, and other public buildings of Paris. His works consist of sacred subjects and portraits; born at Brussels, 1602, died 1674. His nephew, Jean Baptiste, also a painter, b. at Brussels, 1643, d. 1688.

CHAMPEAUX, W. De, a celeb. philosoph. and theolog. of the 12th c., understood to be the first public professor of scholastic divinity, and the fndr. of scientific realism. Abelard was one of his schol., and it is by his attacks upon Champeaux that the latter is best known, his works being lost, d. 1121.

CHAMPIER, S., a Fr. physician, soldier, and historical writer, 1472-1539.

CHAMPIONNET, J. S., a Fr. gen., 1762-1800.

CHAMPLAIN, Samuel De, a French naval officer, an able, enterprising, and very devout man, who established the first settlement in Canada, by founding Quebec, in 1608. He fully explored the banks of the St. Lawrence, and discovered the lake which still bears his name. An extraordinary zeal for the conversion of the native tribes was excited by him throughout the whole of France, and many persons of wealth and station devoted themselves voluntarily to the cause;—but the sole direction of the plans for this purpose was soon engrossed by the Jesuits, who proved from that time forward a heavy incubus upon the advancement of the colony. [J.B.]

CHAMPMESLE, Mary Desmares De, a French actress, pupil of Racine, 1644-1698.

CHAMPOLLION, J. F., the celebrated French archæol. and interpret. of hieroglyphics, 1790-1831.

CHANCELOR, Richard, an Englishman, pilot-major of Sir Hugh Willoughby's fleet, sent out by Cabot in 1553, and commander of one of the ships. Landing at Archangel, he proceeded to Moscow, and by his address and judgment in his interviews with the Czar, laid the foundation of the trade to Russia. Returning from a second voyage in 1556, he was drowned, with most of his crew, in Pitsligo Bay, on the E. coast of Scotland. The Russian ambassador, however, who accompanied him escaped, was conducted to London, and received with great distinction. [J.B.]

CHANDLER, E., a wr. on prophecy, 1671-1750.

CHANDLER, M., an Eng. poetess, 1687-1745.

CHANDLER, R., an antiq. writer, 1738-1810.

CHANDLER, Sam., a religious au., 1693-1766.

CHANDOS, John, an English general, lieut. of the French provinces for Edward III., k. 1369.

CHANGEUX, P. N., a Fr. mathe., 1740-1800.

CHANNING, William Ellery, an eminent member of the society of 'Liberal Christians,' was born on 7th April, 1780, at Newport, Rhode Island, in the United States of America. Though descended on both sides of the house from puritan families, who had emigrated from England, he early displayed a spirit of free inquiry into the doctrines of Christianity—and with the ardour of a young man, conscious of intellectual acumen and energy, he keenly discussed, till he learnt to doubt, the leading doctrines of the orthodox faith. Above all, he imbibed a rooted dislike of Calvinism; and gradually extending his scepticism from one portion of the received creed to another, he embraced that system of religion which is distinguished by a rejection of all the peculiarities of Christian doc-

CHAPPLOW, L., an Oriental schlr., 1683-1768.
CHAPPUIS, CLAUDE, a Fr. poet, d. 1572.
CHAPTAL, J. A. C., a Fr. chemist, contractor for the supply of gunpowder to the revolutionary government, afterwards one of Napoleon's ministers, and count of Chanteloupe, author of works on practical chemistry, 1756-1832.
CHAPUZEAU, S., a topographical wr., d. 1701.
CHARDIN, SIR J., an Eastern trav., 1643-1713.
CHARETTE DE LA CONTRIE, FR. ATHANASIUS DE, royalist chief in La Vendée, taken and shot 1796.
CHARILLUS, a king of Sparta, 8th cent. B.C.

CHARLEMAGNE. This illustrious prince, the restorer of order and obedience in a state of society when only the most commanding talents and heroic steadfastness of purpose could have availed him in a struggle against anarchy and ignorance in their worst forms, was the grandson of Charles-Martel, king of the Franks, and lived 742-814, master of an empire which embraced all France, a part of Spain, more than half of Italy, and nearly all Germany. To feel his greatness adequately it must be remembered that all the ancient landmarks of social order had been overthrown with the colossal Roman power, and that the whole civilized world was covered with its ruins and infested with its crimes. The ancient seat of empire was divided among a score of petty tyrants; the Saracens had overrun Spain and threatened the farther west; the northern kingdoms were only known as the cradle of adventurous armies, whose leaders in after years organized the feudal governments of Europe; Russia did not even exist; and England was just emerging from the confusion of the Heptarchy. Some two centuries before, 507-511, Clovis had founded the Frankish monarchy and established himself at Paris, but his power was that of an absolute military chief, and he was succeeded by a line of phantom-kings, whose action is scarcely distinguishable from that of the barbarous fermentation proceeding around them. At length Pepin-Heristal and his son Charles-Martel, slowly paved the way for a new authority, the former by familiarizing men's minds with justice and goodness in the sovereign, and the latter by his heroic resistance of the Saracens, and the promise of an irresistible power in the government. The successes of Charlemagne were the natural issue of these circumstances under the command of his ambition and vast genius, favoured by the compliance of the popes; who were willing to encourage a Christian protectorate in the west as a counterpoise to the eastern empire of Irene, and the dreaded power of Haroun-al-Raschid. A catalogue of the principal events and dates is all that we can give in the space to which we are limited. In 768 Charles succeeded to the government conjointly with his brother Carloman; and on the death of the latter in 771, became sole master of France by wisely refusing to divide the authority with his nephews. In 770 he subdued the revolt of Aquitaine. In 772 he marched against the still idolatrous Saxons, and commenced a conflict which he maintained for upwards of thirty years. In 773 he crossed the Alps, and was shortly crowned king of Lombardy, and acknowledged suzerain of Italy by the pope, with the right of confirming the papal elections. In 778 he carried his arms into Spain, and pursued his victorious career as far as the Ebro, but was surprised on his return in the pass of Roncesvalles, where many of his knights perished, and among the rest Orlando or Roland, his nephew, the hero of Ariosto. In 780 Louis-le-Débonnaire, his youngest son, was crowned by the pope king of Aquitaine, and Pepin, his second son, king of Lombardy, both at Rome. Between 780 and 782 he visited a terrible retribution upon the Saxons, and compelled their chief to accept Christian baptism. Towards 790 we find him establishing seminaries of learning, and doing all in his power to elevate the character of the clergy, the most of whom had hitherto known little but the Lord's prayer; besides engaging in projects for the acceleration of commerce, the general improvement of the people, and the promotion of science. Before the end of the century he had invaded Pannonia, and extended his dominions in this direction to the mountains of Bohemia and the Raab. In 800 he was crowned at Rome emperor of the west; and in 803 was negotiating a union with Irene in order to consolidate the eastern and western empires, when the empress was dethroned and exiled by Nicephorus. From this period to his death, which took place at Aix-la-Chapelle, in the seventy-first year of his age, and the forty-seventh of his reign, he was engaged in fortifying the coasts of France against the Northmen, and various matters relating to the security and the prosperity of the empire, including the settlement of the succession. —In person and manners Charlemagne was the perfection of simplicity, modesty, frugality, and in a word, of true greatness; and though he was too much given to the society of women, he had the reputation of a good father, a tender husband, and a generous friend. He was indefatigable in all the duties of government, and whether in the camp or the court, had fixed hours for study, in which he took care to engage his courtiers by forming them into an academy. 'For shame!' he exclaimed, to one who came before him attired more elegantly than the occasion demanded,—'dress yourself like a man; and if you would be distinguished, let it be by your merits, not by your garments.' His nearest friend and companion was the illustrious

He put himself at the head of his army, invaded Denmark, and besieged Copenhagen. This bold stroke forced the Danish sovereign to beg for peace, and abandon the anti-Swedish confederacy. Charles then turned against his other enemies. On the 30th Nov., 1701, with 8,000 Swedes, he attacked and entirely routed the Russian army of 40,000 men at Narva. He then marched across Livonia and Courland into Poland, gained repeated victories over the enemies of his enemy Augustus, (who was elector of Saxony as well as king of Poland.) took Cracow, Warsaw, Dantzig, and other important cities; and in 1704 compelled the Poles to depose Augustus, and choose Stanislaus Lescinski as their king. Charles then advanced into Saxony, which he occupied with his victorious troops, and forced the elector to beg a peace, the terms of which Charles dictated, (1707.) Charles lingered for some time in Saxony at the head of his army, which amounted to 50,000 veterans. The eyes of all Europe were now fixed on him. His numerous victories, his daring and resolute spirit, the bearing and discipline of his troops, filled sovereigns, generals, and statesmen with admiration and anxiety. Louis XIV. earnestly implored his assistance against the arms of Marlborough and Eugene; and Marlborough himself undertook a special embassy to the Swedish camp in order to baffle the attempts of the French to win over the hero of the North to their alliance. Charles himself cherished the most ambitious projects. He was bent, in the first instance, on deposing his enemy, Peter, from the throne of Russia, as he had deposed his other enemy, Augustus, from the Polish throne. One year, he thought, would suffice for the conquest of Russia. He next designed to attack the pope; and he had despatched officers privately into Asia and Egypt, to survey the towns and military resources of those countries, with the intention of entering on a career of Oriental conquest, so soon as he had subdued his European foes. He marched out of Saxony in the autumn of 1707, and entered the Russian territory in 1708. He crossed the Berisina in June, defeated a Russian army that was entrenched near that river, and advanced as far as Smolensko, where he gained another victory, (28th Sept., 1708.) Instead of marching forward against Moscow, Charles now turned to the Ukraine, trusting to the promises of the old Cossack chief Mazeppa, who boasted that he would bring the whole Cossack nation over to the cause of Charles, but who was only able to persuade 7,000 men to join the invaders. Charles wintered in the Ukraine; but he moved forward upon Moscow in the spring of 1709, and besieged the city of Pultowa, where the Russians had collected large military stores. His army had been fearfully reduced by famine, fatigue, and the fatal frosts of Russia, as well as by the numerous skirmishes and actions in which it had been engaged. He had not more than 25,000 men under him at Pultowa, and at least half of them were Cossack and Wallachian recruits. The Russian czar, Peter the Great, advanced to relieve Pultowa with a well-equipped army, 60,000 strong. The decisive battle of Pultowa, fought July 8, 1709, between the rival sovereigns, ended in the total defeat of the Swedes. Charles made his escape from the field with difficulty, and sought refuge in Turkey, where he was hospitably received and sheltered. He remained there five years, during which time his enemies were conquering the best Swedish possessions in Germany and on the east of the Baltic. At length Charles suddenly left Turkey, and joined the scanty Swedish bands that were struggling against the forces of Russia, Prussia, Saxony, and Denmark. After several chequered, though generally unsuccessful campaigns, Charles met his death before the fortress of Frederickshall, in Norway, in the winter of 1718. He was leaning, at night, on a breastwork, watching the operations of the siege by moonlight, under the fire of one of the enemy's batteries, when a shot struck him on the head, and he died instantly, in the thirty-seventh year of his life, and the twenty-first of his reign. [E.S.C.]

CHARLES XIII., son of Adolph-Frederick, born 1758; regent 1792; king 1809; died 1818.

CHARLES I., duke of Savoy, 1482-1489. CHARL. II., 1489-1497. CHARL. III., 1504-1553.

CHARLES EMANUEL I., duke of Savoy, made count of Provence by the league, 1580-1630.

CHARLES EMANUEL II., duke 1638-1675.

CHARLES EMANUEL III., second king of Sardinia of the house of Savoy, born 1701, succeeded 1730, died 1773.

CHARLES EMANUEL IV., suc. 1796, ablic. in favour of his brother VICTOR, 1802, d. 1819.

CHARLES FELIX, k. of Sardinia, 1821-1831.

CHARLES ALBERT, prince of Carignano, born 1798; succeeded Charles Felix as king of Sardinia 1831; made an attempt to liberate Northern Italy from the Austrians 1848; and died broken-hearted after his ablic., 18th July, 1849.

CHARLES LOUIS, count palat. of the Rhine, mem. of the league formed agt. France, 1617-1685.

CHARLES THEODORE, elect. pal., 1724-1777.

CHARLES OF FRANCE, received the duchy of Lorraine from the emperor Otho II., but was vanquished by Hugh Capet, and died 993.

CHARLES I., duke of Lorraine, 1371-1431. CHARLES II., called the Great, 1543-1608. CHARLES III., was despoiled of his estates by Louis XIII. 1631, and recovered a part by the treaties of 1641 and 1659, died 1675. CHARLES IV., a general in the service of Austria, married to the sister of the emperor Leopold, died 1690. CHARLES LOUIS, of Lorraine, arch-duke of Austria, born 1771; companion in arms of Prince Cobourg from 1793; commander of the imperial armies on the Rhine 1796; defeated by Buonaparte and Massena in Italy; died 1847.

CHARLETON, LEWIS, bp. of Hereford, d. 1639.

CHARLETON, WALTER, an English physician, distinguished as a writer of natural history, theology, and natural philosophy, died 1707.

CHARLEVILLE, CHARLES WM., earl of, com. of cavalry during the Irish rebel., 1763-1835.

CHARLEVOIX, PETER FRANCIS XAVIER DE, a French Jesuit and historian, 1682-1761.

CHARLOTTE, AUGUSTA, commonly called the Princess Charlotte, daughter of George IV. and Queen Caroline, born 1796; married to Prince Leopold, the present king of the Belgians, 1816; died in childbed, 5th November, 1817.

CHARNOCK, JOHN, a naval writ., 1756-1807.

CHARNOCK, STEPHEN, an English Calvinistic divine, distinguished for his learning, d. 1680.

been the real instigator of the French invasion of Spain. Next year he had, as minister of foreign affairs, the satisfaction of directing the ill-advised expedition undertaken in consequence of that resolution of the Congress. He remained in private life during the arbitrary reign of Charles X., excepting that, in 1828, he was appointed ambassador to Rome, but resigned immediately when Polignac was placed at the head of the administration.—On the revolution of 1830, Chateaubriand delivered in the Chamber of Peers an oration, in which he advocated strongly, but by no means on high monarchical grounds, the claim of the Duke of Bourdeaux to the throne. This was his last appearance in public life. On the election of Louis Philippe, he refused to take the oaths, resigned even his pension as a peer, and occupied himself thenceforth in literary labours. These were now necessary for his support, his whole property having been spent. Most of his writings during this period of declining age, such as his 'Sketches of English Literature,' are of small value. His chief employment was the composition or completion of his voluminous 'Memoirs from Beyond the Tomb,' ('Mémoires d' Outre Tombe;') and the right of publishing these after his death was sold by him for a large life annuity. They exhibit an amount of vanity and egotism almost unparalleled; but they are full of interesting details, and have very much of his peculiar kind of eloquence. Chateaubriand died at Paris in the summer of 1848, when he had almost completed his eightieth year. [W.S.]

[Tomb of Chateaubriand, at St Malo.]

CHATEAUBRIANT, J. B. V. De, a dramatic poet, member of the French Academy, 1686-1775.

CHATEAUNEUF-RANDON, Count De, a Fr. deputy, afterw. gen. under the directory, d. 1816.

CHATEAU-REGNAUD, Franç. Louis Rousselet, count of, a French admiral, 1637-1716.

CHATEL, Fr. De, a Flemish painter, 16th ct.

CHATEL, Peter De, a Fr. prelate, ed. as a Greek scholar and controversial writer, d. 1552.

CHATEL, Tanneguy De, a Fr. gen., d. 1449.

CHATELAIN, J. Le, a monk, burnt alive, 1525.

CHATELLARD, J. J., a mathem., 1693-1757.

CHATHAM, William Pitt, earl of, was the second son of Robert Pitt of Boconnoc, in Cornwall, where he was born on 15th November, 1708. His family was extensively connected with the higher English country gentry, and his grandfather, William Pitt, governor of Madras, was the owner of the celebrated Pitt diamond. Young Pitt studied at Trinity College, Oxford, and on leaving the university he obtained a cornetcy in the Blues. Walpole afterwards, following his relentless system of party warfare, deprived him of his commission. Perhaps this act entirely altered his destinies, since he possessed qualities that, had he remained long enough in the army to have felt an interest in his profession, might have developed great powers of military command. He entered parliament for the family borough of Old Sarum, in 1736. He immediately joined the opposition, which placed the name of the Prince of Wales at its head. The most eminent of his early speeches were delivered in that last effective attack on Walpole, which, in 1742, drove him from power. They are said to have been brilliant and astounding efforts of oratory, but the usual versions of them are so steeped in the antithetic mannerism of Johnson, who professed to report them for the 'Gentleman's Magazine,' that it is impossible to know how far they are genuine; while other reports, professing to be verbatim, do not justify the high reputation of these earlier efforts. His opposition to the government did not cease with the fall of Walpole. His bold declamation, so much in contrast with the personal and narrow party discussions which then occupied parliament, drew a substantial token of admiration from a kindred spirit, Sarah, duchess of Marlborough, who bequeathed him £10,000. On the other hand, the king had a thorough dislike to him, as a person whose opposition was not of that usual kind which merely tries to remove a ministry and occupy their place, but which aimed at a political power independent of, if not above, the throne. The Pelhams, however, saw the great importance of adding his strength to their ministry, and in 1746 the king unwillingly submitted to his appointment first to a subordinate place, and immediately after to the lucrative office of paymaster-general. The same haughty self-reliance which he had shown in opposition distinguished him in office, and it served to restrain him from drawing on those many sources of irregular emolument which were then attached to official power. His marriage, in 1754, with the sister of George Grenville, opened to him a new political connection. In 1755, he was dismissed, along with his brother-in-law, but in the ensuing year it was found necessary to bring them both back to a cabinet of which Pitt was virtually the head. In 1757, an attempt was again made to dispense with the services of the 'great commoner,' but after the country was two months and a-half without a government, he returned with greater power than ever. It was then that, backed by national enthusiasm, he conducted the brilliant operations which paralyzed France and drove her fleets from almost every sea. On the accession of George III. he was superseded by the royal favourite, Lord Bute. Various overtures were made to him to join or form a ministry, and in 1766 he undertook the latter function, choosing, to the surprise of the world, a sinecure place for himself, and a seat in the upper house. Repeated attacks of gout, from an early period of life downwards, had injured both his constitution and temper. He resigned office in 1768. Opposed to the taxation his later works are traditionally said to have been composed. In the disturbances which arose after 1377, when the feeble Richard II. succeeded to the throne, Chaucer was implicated; and he is said, on doubtful authority, to have been at one time a fugitive to the continent, and at another a prisoner in the Tower. In 1386, however, he was knight of the shire for Kent. He died in London in 1400, soon after the accession of Henry IV., the son of his early patron. One of his sons became speaker of the House of Commons, and the other married a daughter of the ducal house of De La Pole.—Chaucer deserves commemoration as one of the very earliest of those who wrote prose in a language which can properly be called English. But his compositions of this sort have little value for any but the philologer. His minor poems, also, although they would secure his name from neglect, would cause him to be remembered only as one of those who improved most actively a kind of poetry, borrowed in the main from the allegoric and chivalrous fancies of the French, and cultivated for several generations before his time. Some of his works are free translations, or loose abridgments. Such are the 'Romance of the Rose,' from the French; the 'Troilus and Cressida,' from the Italian of Boccaccio;' and 'The Legend of Good Women,' derived from the epistles of Ovid. Among his original poems, 'The House of Fame,' and 'The Flower and the Leaf,' are very fine in themselves, and have received injury, not improvement, in the modernized paraphrases of Pope and Dryden. — Chaucer's claim to immortality, as one of the greatest of English poets, and as a poet essentially and strikingly original in spite of many borrowings in detail, rests on his 'Canterbury Tales.' These are currently said to have been all written after the poet's sixtieth year. But there is reason for suspecting that many of the pieces may have been composed before; and that we are not entitled to assign peremptorily to his old age anything beyond the collection of the stories into a series, and the writing of that introduction to them which is certainly the best part of the work. This introduction is described as the Prologue. It relates how a band of pilgrims, bound for the shrine of Saint Thomas à Beckett at Canterbury, meet at the inn of the Tabard in Southwark; and how they agree to relieve the weariness of the way by the telling of stories. The portraits of the pilgrims are among the most admirable things in the whole range of poetry: they are equally good for their delineation of character, for their variety and depth of serious sentiment and arch humour, and for a pointed strength and aptness of language which, antiquated though the diction is, may be understood by every well-educated reader with very little study. Similar excellencies belong to the Tales which follow, and which, breaking off abruptly, leave us to suppose that the design was not more than half completed. The humorous tales are coarse and sometimes immoral, yet felicitously humorous: some of the serious ones are in every way beautiful. The 'Knight's Tale,' telling in chivalrous guise the adventures of the Greek knights Palamon and Arcite, has aptly been called the Iliad of Old English literature. [W.S.]

[Tomb of Chaucer.]

CHAUDET, A. D., a Fr. sculptor, 1763-1810.

CHAUDON, L. M., a Fr. ecclesiastic, author of historical and chronological works, 1737-1817.

CHAUFFEPIE, J. G. De, a Calvinist minister, and historical and critical writer, 1702-1786.

CHAUFOURRIER, J., a Fr. paint., 1672-1757.

CHAULIEU, W. A. De, a Fr. poet, 1639-1720.

CHAULNES, Honoré D' Albert, Duke De, marshal of France, and favourite of Louis XIII., died 1649. His son, Louis, an ambassador, 1625-1698. A later inheritor of the title, distinguished as a mathematician and naturalist, 1714-1769; and his son and successor as a chemist, 1741-1793.

CHAUMETTE, Pierre Gaspard, one of the vilest scoundrels by whom the French people were maddened in the period between 1789 and 1794, was the son of a shoemaker, and before his advent as a street orator and journalist, had run through a career which seems to have perfected him for every species of villany, as a cabin-boy, a schoolmaster, a lawyer's clerk, and a novice in a convent. He was born in 1765, and began his public career in one of the low clubs. In 1789 he edited a journal entitled 'Les Révolutions des Paris.' In 1792 he was elected 'procureur-syndic,' or attorney, for the commune of Paris, on which occasion he formally renounced his christian name, and declared that he took that of Anaxagoras, 'a saint who had been hung for his republicanism.' He was the virtual chief of the 'Hébertists,' the inventor of the Feast of Reason, and the high priest who officiated at the worship of the demoiselle Candeille in the cathedral of Notre Dame. His brutal character may be judged from the fact that he presented the prince dauphin with the model of a guillotine for a plaything, and that the revolting questions put by Hebert to the queen originated in his obscene imagination. His features were abject, yet marked by insolence; and his style of address, to judge from the specimens which have been preserved, was characterized by the vulgarest claptrap, and insolent use of apostrophe. There is reason to believe that he plotted for the destruction of the entire body of the convention along with that of the Girondins. It became his boast that 'he knew the suspect in the streets by the very face of them.' The prisons of Paris were filled with his victims, and the violence and immorality of his party were so extreme, that the Committee of Public Safety could not be insen-the course of this reign he distinguished himself in the House of Commons as an exceedingly skilful and effective debater; and he supported his reputation when his father's death transferred him to the House of Lords, shortly before the prince of Wales, to whose party and household he had belonged, succeeded to the throne as George II. From this time till 1748, when deafness and other infirmities compelled him to retire from public life, Lord Chesterfield took an active part in the petty intrigues and party squabbles which make up the parliamentary and court history of the reign. His diplomatic skill was made useful in two foreign embassies; and his lord-lieutenancy in Ireland, beginning in 1745 and lasting only a few months, has always been mentioned with distinguished praise. After a sickly and melancholy period of old age, he died in 1773. The only writings of this accomplished person that are at all remembered, are his 'Letters' to his natural son, remarkable for their ease of style and their knowledge of society, but notoriously reprehensible for the principles of conduct which they inculcate. [W.S.]

CHETARDIE, Marquis De La, a French diplomatist, ambassador to Russia, 1705-1758.

CHETHAM, Humphrey, the cel. fndr. of the college and public library of Manchester, d. 1653.

CHEVALIER, A. R., a Fr. Hebraist, 1507-72.

CHEVALIER, F., a Fr. historian, 1705-1808.

CHEVALIER, J., a Latin poet, 1587-1644.

CHEVILLIER, And., a French antiq., d. 1700.

CHEVREUSE, Madame De Rohan-Montbazon, Duchess De, a court beauty, and political intriguante of the time of Richelieu, 1600-1679.

CHEYNE, George, a Scotch physician, and author of works on disease, diet, &c., 1661-1743.

CHEZY, A., a French engineer, 1718-1798.

CHIABRERA, Gabriel, a lyric poet and dramatist, surnamed the Italian Pindar, 1552-1637.

CHIARAMONTI, S., an Ital. hist., 1565-1652.

CHIARI, Fab., an Italian painter, 1621-1695.

CHIARI, J., a Roman painter, 1654-1727.

CHIARI, Pietro, a comic poet, 1720-1788.

CHICHELEY, Hen., an Eng. schol. and statesman, at length archbp. of Canterbury, 1362-1443.

CHICOYNEAU, F., a French physician and wr. on the plague of Marseilles, 1672-1752.

CHIERICATO, J. M., an It. theol., 1633-1717.

CHIESA, Silv., an Italian painter, 1623-1657.

CHILD, Sir Jos., a merchant of London, known as a wr. on political economy and trade, 1630-1699.

CHILD, Wm., an English composer, 1607-1697.

CHILDEBERT, the first of this name k. of Fr., 511-558; the second 575-596; the third 695-711.

CHILDEBRAND, a brother of Charles Martel, and his comp. in arms against the Saracens, 8th c.

CHILDERIC, the first of this name, k. of France, 457-481; the second 656-673; the third 742-755.

CHILDREY, Josh., a nat. phil., 1623-1670.

CHILLINGWORTH, Wm., an Eng. theologian, disting. for his controversial ability, 1602-1644.

CHILMEAD, E., a wr. on music, 1616-1653.

CHILO, one of the seven Gr. sages, 6th c. B.C.

CHILPERIC I., prince of Soissons and Paris, the youngest of the sons of Clothaire I., 561-584.

CHILPERIC II., conq. by Ch. Martel, 715-720.

CHISHULL, Edm., an Eng. antiq., 1580-1633.

CHI-TSONG, emperor of China, 1507-1566.

CHI-TSOU, otherwise Koublai-Khan, grandson of Gengis-Khan, a celebrated Mogul emperor who reunited China to his dominions, 1214-94.

CHITTY, Jos., an English lawyer, 1776-1841.

CHOISEUL, Stephen Francis, Duke De, minister of state to Louis XV., by whom he was dismis. under the influence of Du Barry, 1719-1785.

CHOISI, Fr., Abbé De, a Fr. hist., 1644-1724.

CHOPART, F., a Fr. wr. on surg., 1750-1795.

CHOPIN, Fred., a Polish composer, d. 1849.

CHOPIN, R., a Flemish priest, 1537-1606.

CHORIS, Louis, a Russian painter, 1795-1828.

CHOSROES, or KHOSROU I., king of Persia, died in prison after ravaging Asia Minor, 531-563.

CHOSROES II., grandson of the prec., 590-628.

CHOUL, Wm. Du, a French antiquarian, 16th c.

CHRETIEN, Florent, a Fr. poet, 1541-1596.

CHRETIEN, G. L., a Fr. wr. on mus., 1783-1811.

CHRIST, J. F., an art-writer, 1700-1756.

CHRISTIAN, C., a gem engraver, 1695-1725.

CHRISTIAN, E., an English lawyer, d. 1828.

CHRISTIERN I., born 1425; succeeded as king of Denmark 1448; king of Norway 1450; king of Sweden 1456; died 1481.

CHRISTIERN II., surnamed the Cruel, born 1480; succeeded as king of Denmark and Norway 1513; king of Sweden 1520; defeated by Gustavus Vasa, and d. after many years' imprisonm., 1559.

CHRISTIERN III., king of Denmark only, born 1503; succeeded his father, Frederic I., but had to fight his way to the crown, 1533; died 1558.

CHRISTIERN IV., king of Denmark, b. 1577; succeeded 1588; chief of the protestant league 1625; peace with Tilly 1645; died 1648.

CHRISTIERN V., king of Denmark and Norway, born 1646, succeeded 1670, died 1699.

CHRISTIERN VI., k. of Denmark, 1699-1746.

CHRISTIERN VII., king of Denmark, born 1749; succeeded and married to Caroline Matilda, sister of George III., 1766, died 1808.

CHRISTINA, queen of Sweden, born 1626; suc. her father Gustavus Adolphus 1632; abdic. in favour of Charles Gustavus 1654, died 1689.

CHRISTINA of France, daugh. of Henry IV. and Marie de Medici, born 1606; married to the duke of Savoy 1619; regent at his death 1637; d. 1663.

CHRISTOPHE, emperor of the East, 920-931.

CHRISTOPHE, the first of this name, king of Denmark, 1252-1259; the second at the beginning of the 14th century; the third, king of Denmark and Sweden, celebrated as a legislator, 1440-1448.

CHRISTOPHE, Henry, a negro leader in the insurrection of St. Domingo, afterwards king under the title of Henry I., 1767-1820.

CHRISTOPHER, d. of Wurtemburg, 1515-1568.

CHRISTOPHERSON, John, bp. of Chichester, celeb. for his learning and literary talents, d. 1558.

CHROCUS, a king of the Vandals, died 260.

CHRYSIPPUS, a Stoic philosopher, 2d c. B.C.

CHRYSOSTOM, John, was born at Antioch about the year 351, and was the son of Secundus, a military officer on the staff of the Roman governor of Syria. While the son was yet an infant, the father died, but the widowed mother devoted herself with intense energy to her son's education. Having studied under Libanius and others, with a view to his being placed at the bar, where he practised for a short time with considerable promise, he, in his twentieth year, embraced a monastic life. Some short time afterwards he was ordained deacon, and was produced on the boards in January, 1695, and in which he acted the character of Sir Novelty. Still Cibber won his way but slowly with the actors; and even up to the end of his career had not secured their full faith in him. His talents were at least of the versatile order, for he not only performed the fops and coxcombs of comedy, but Iago, Wolsey, Syphax, and Richard III. in tragedy. But the performance of vicious characters he seems to have considered injurious to his reputation.—Owing to the censure of dramatic poets, by Jeremy Collier, in his 'Short View of the Stage,' the master of the revels became cautious in granting licenses to new plays. Nevertheless, Cibber contrived to get on pretty well; his muse and his spouse, to use his own words, 'being equally prolific, that the one was seldom the mother of a child, but in the same year the other made him the father of a play.' 'I think,' he adds, 'we had a dozen of each sort between us, of both which kinds some died in their infancy, and near an equal number of each were alive when we quitted the theatre.' 'The Careless Husband' has always been reckoned Cibber's best play. 'The Nonjuror,' however, was the most popular, owing to its political character. It was levelled against the Jacobites, and was the reason, in fact, of Cibber's being made poet-laureate in 1730, when he quitted the stage. He died in 1757. His 'Apology,' from which we have derived the materials for his life, is an exceedingly amusing work. His works fill 5 vols. 12mo, published in 1760. [J.A.H.]

CIBBER, THEOPHILUS, son of the celebrated comedian, and like him an actor and play-writer, was a man of profligate character, and very inferior talents, 1703-1758. His second wife, SUSANNAH MARIA CIBBER, was a sister of Dr. Arne, and often performed with Garrick as a tragedian; 1734-1766.

CICERO, MARCUS TULLIUS, was born at Arpinum, an ancient city of Latium, in B.C. 106; the same year which gave birth to Pompey. The great aptitude for learning which he displayed in boyhood induced his father to remove to Rome, where the future orator and statesman was educated under the best masters of the time. In B.C. 89 he served his first and only campaign under Pompeius Strabo, the father of Pompey, who was then engaged in the Social war. Having thus complied with the custom of his age, Cicero devoted the next six years to the studies which were necessary to raise him to distinction as a lawyer and an orator; practising declamation in Latin and Greek, and storing his mind with those precepts of philosophy, which, throughout his eventful life, cheered him amidst professional toils, and consoled him under disappointment and persecution. At the age of twenty-five he came forward as a pleader, and, even at the risk of incurring the displeasure of Sulla, defended clients who were obnoxious to the dictator. But his health, which was naturally feeble, gave way under incessant application to study; and, for the purpose of invigorating his constitution, as well as correcting certain defects in his style of oratory, he visited Athens (B.C. 79,) made a tour of Asia Minor, and for some time resumed his studies at Rhodes, under Molo, from whom he had received instructions at Rome. After an absence of two years, he returned to Rome with renewed health and enlarged knowledge, and speedily placed himself at the head of the Roman bar. Being qualified by law at the age of thirty to become candidate for the lowest of the great offices of state, he was elected quæstor in B.C. 76, and obtained each of the higher offices as soon as he was permitted by law to hold it, reaching the consulship in B.C. 63. During his consulship he was called upon to grapple with the famous Catilinarian conspiracy; and the courage, prudence, and decision which he manifested in directing the difficult and complicated investigations that led to the detection and punishment of the conspirators called forth the encomiums of all classes of the citizens. The public enthusiasm heaped upon him unwonted honours: in the senate and in the forum he was saluted as parens patriæ (the father of his country); thanksgivings in his name were voted to the gods; and all Italy united in testifying their admiration and gratitude. But his unexampled good fortune had excited the jealousy of many of the leading nobility, and his irrepressible vanity exposed him to the ridicule and assaults of his enemies. He was accordingly destined soon to experience a reverse of fortune as remarkable, and more sudden than his rise. It had been judged necessary to put to death five of the ringleaders in the conspiracy; and though this was done in virtue of the dictatorial authority with which the consuls were invested by the senate, and with the consent and approval of that body, Cicero was indicted for having put a Roman citizen to death untried, and forced to go into banishment in April, B.C. 58. But private malice soon expended itself, and public feeling, reverting to his signal services in rescuing his country from impending ruin, recalled him after an interval of seventeen months. His reception at Rome cheered his dejected spirits; but the circumstances which led to his banishment prevented him from ever after recovering his former position. In B.C. 53 he was admitted a member of the college of Augurs, and towards the end of B.C. 52 he was appointed proconsul of Cilicia. He administered the affairs of his province with the strictest impartiality, corrected the abuses which had been introduced or sanctioned by his predecessors, and realized in practice the precepts which in his writings he had inculcated. He returned to Italy in Euler and D'Alembert. He was born at Paris in 1713, and died in 1765. Clairaut wrote on the figure of the earth, and on curves of double curvature, besides many separate memoirs and elementary works on algebra and geometry. In his time he belonged to the 'great world' of Paris: the thorough student will read his writings still; he had much taste in composition as well as great analytic power.

CLAIRAUT, J. B., a Fr. mathem., 1680-1766.

CLAIRFAIT, COUNT DE, an Aust. gen., d. 1798.

CLAPPERTON, HUGH, was born in 1788, at Annan, in the county of Dumfries, where his father practised as a surgeon. After having entered the merchant service, and made several voyages to America, he was impressed on board a man-of-war. By the influence of an uncle, a captain in the marines, young Clapperton soon attained to the rank of a midshipman; and some time after, while on service in Canada, to that of lieutenant. He gained, in various actions, the reputation of a skilful and brave officer. Being at home on half-pay for five or six years, he became acquainted, at Edinburgh, with Dr. Oudney, then engaged in plans of African discovery; and was soon after associated, under the directions of Earl Bathurst, with this gentleman and Major Denham in an expedition to the sources of the Niger. They crossed the desert from Tripoli to Lake Tchad, which they were the first Europeans to visit, reaching it on 5th February, 1823. Here our travellers separated for a time; and Clapperton explored the country to the S. W. as far as Sokatou, in lat. 13° N., long. 5° 45' E., a distance of 700 miles from Lake Tchad. Dr. Oudney, who accompanied him, died by the way about a month after they started. Meeting in health at Kouka, the capital of Bournou, where they left Mr. Tyrwhit as consul, Denham and Clapperton recrossed the desert to Tripoli, at which they safely arrived on 25th January, 1825. Clapperton was soon after raised to the rank of commander, and equipped for a second expedition, intended to reach the sources of the Niger by ascending the stream from its mouth. This was found impracticable from the unhealthy nature of the delta of this great river. Proceeding by land Clapperton reached Sokatou from the S. W., thus connecting his observations with those of his former journey. Here, however, he was destined to end his active and useful life; weakened by fatigue, with feelings irritated by the obstacles thrown in his way, he was seized with dysentery, and after a lingering illness, he expired on the 13th April, 1827. Richard Lander, his faithful and attached servant, was the only European who remained of the party, Captain Pearce R.N., Dr. Morrison, and others, having died soon after they left the coast. Full accounts were published of the several journeys, which added immensely to our knowledge of central Africa. [J.B.]

CLARE, ST., a follower of St. Francis Assise, and founder of an order of nuns, 1193-1253.

CLARENCE, GEORGE, duke of, brother of Edward IV., drowned in a butt of Malmsey, 1478.

CLARENDON, EDWARD HYDE, earl of, was born in 1608, at Hinton, in Wiltshire, the estate of Henry Hyde, his father. He studied at Oxford with the design of entering the church, but became a lawyer on the death of his elder brother, through which, in 1632, he succeeded to his father's property. Although he practised his profession for a time, it does not seem to have ever engaged so much of his attention as literature did at first and politics afterwards. In 1640 he was elected a member of Charles I.'s Short Parliament, in whose moderate attempts at reform he bore an active part; and when the king contemplated dissolving it, Hyde took advantage of an intimacy he had contracted with Archbishop Laud, to offer earnest remonstrances against that arbitrary and imprudent step. He sat again in the Long Parliament, which the king was forced to summon before the end of the same year. He concurred in some of the earliest of the strong measures now adopted by the house, such as the proceedings against the judges in Hampden's case, and the impeachment of Strafford; but in no long time he became startled by the lengths to which the popular leaders were disposed to carry their opposition to the crown. The king seized the first opportunity of securing to himself so useful a servant. Hyde, Lord Falkland, and Colepepper, were secretly appointed to manage the interests of the crown in parliament; and although the cautious and reasonable counsels of the first two of these advisers were disregarded by their master, Hyde continued to frame the royal messages and other documents till the breach with the parliament took place. In 1643, having now attached himself to the king's person, he was knighted and made chancellor of the exchequer; after which he was actively engaged in the king's affairs till 1646, when, on the irretrievable ruin of the royal cause, he accompanied the prince of Wales in his flight from England.—He now resided for two years in Jersey, occupying himself in study and in the composition of his History; after which he joined the prince at the Hague, and continued in his service when his father's death had made him nominally king. He spent more than a year in Spain, vainly soliciting aid, but extending his own knowledge as well as writing moral and devotional treatises. For several years afterwards he was Charles's chief adviser, and, in 1658, received the place of lord chancellor, then only nominal, but soon real.—He returned with Charles II. to England in May, 1660, and immediately began to act both as speaker of the House of Lords, and as chief judge in the Court of Chancery; being soon also raised to the peerage. At this time his prospects were seriously endangered, by the discovery of the secret marriage of his daughter to the duke of York, through which he became the grandfather of two queens of England. The storm passed away without doing immediate harm. Lord Clarendon was virtually the head of the administration till near the close of 1667; and, as the responsible adviser of Charles II. for more than six years, he cannot but have done many things which would then have been condemned by patriotic men, and many others which would now appear still more censurable. The sale of Dunkirk, and the promotion of the king's marriage, though they were the main causes of the unpopularity which gradually gathered around the chancellor, were certainly not the worst of the steps which were taken, either by his advice or with his sanction and assistance. He had taken of London. In Haydon Hall, an elegant mansion he purchased there, he completed his Commentary, an elaborate work in 8 vols. 4to, which had occupied his attention more or less for forty-eight years, and the publication of which was issued at intervals from 1810 to 1826. Dr. Clarke, though unconnected with any particular charge, had never wholly discontinued the practice of preaching. An engagement of this kind was to have been fulfilled at Bayswater on the morning of the day on which he died. But having been seized with a sudden attack of Asiatic cholera, which was then committing dreadful ravages in London, he was cut off on the 26th August, 1832, maintaining to the last, amid the paroxysms and frightful bodily contortions which that formidable pestilence produced, a mind calm, collected, and firmly reposing on the bosom of his Saviour.—Besides his commentary, Dr. Clarke was the author of several other works, the chief of which are, 'The Succession of Sacred Literature,' 'Memoirs of the Wesley Family,' 'Fleury's Manners of the Ancient Israelites,' 'Shuckford's Sacred and Profane History of the World,' 'Sturm's Reflections, translated from the German,' and 'Harmer's Observations.' In addition to these he was employed several years by the government in collecting materials for a new edition of 'Rymer's Fœdera,' which since his death has been carried on by a commission under government. [R.J.]

CLARKE, Alured, an. of sermons, &c., 18th c.

CLARKE, Edward Daniel, LL.D., celebrated for his travels through many countries of Europe and Asia, was born at Wellingdon, in Sussex, 5th June, 1769. His father was a clergyman of rather limited income, and died before his son's education at Cambridge was completed. After graduating, he obtained, between 1790 and 1798, several situations as resident family tutor; and as travelling tutor and companion to gentlemen of fortune, with whom he visited most parts of England and Scotland. In the latter year he was elected fellow of his college, (Jesus) and came to reside in Cambridge. In the year following he went abroad as travelling companion to Mr. Cripps, and made an extended journey, occupying three years and a-half, a most interesting account of which, originally given in 6 vols. 4to, was his principal work. In 1808, he was appointed first professor of mineralogy at Cambridge, whose museum and library he had greatly enriched by his collections. The British Museum owes to him the celebrated Sarcophagus, incorrectly called that of Alexander, as well as other objects. He took orders in 1805, and enjoyed two livings. His death occurred at London on 9th March, 1822. He was, besides, the auth. of many papers in Thomson's Annals of Philosophy, on physics, and chemistry; and of some dissertations on antiquarian subjects. [J.B.]

CLARKE, H., LL.D., a mathemat., 1745-1818.

CLARKE, Hy. Jas. Wm., Duc De Feltre, descended from a partizan of the Stuarts settled in France, min. of state under Buonaparte, 1765-1818.

CLARKE, Jas. Stanier, LL.D., brother of Edward Daniel Clarke, a naval historian and founder of the 'Naval Chronicle,' died 1834.

CLARKE, John, a Scotch engrav., 1650-1721.

CLARKE, John, brother of Dr. Sam. Clarke, a classical scholar, author of sermons, &c., d. 1759.

CLARKE, Dr. Samuel, the celebrated metaphysical divine, was born at Norwich on 11th of October, 1675. His father, who had held the highest offices in that city, and was in comfortable circumstances, determined to afford him the advantages of the most liberal education, and accordingly sent him in due time to Caius College, Cambridge, where amid the various objects of academic interest, young Clarke evinced a decided preference for theology. Engaging with untiring ardour in the pursuit of knowledge, he acquired an extensive acquaintance with the different branches of physical sciences, especially optics, and made his first essay before the world as an author by the translation of Rohault's physics—a work which long continued to be regarded in this country as the best elementary work for students. While thus, however, improving his mind in general knowledge, his chief attention was directed to theology, and desirous of drawing his information from the fountain head, he gave himself to the earnest study of the Scriptures in the Hebrew and Greek originals. By such devotion to study, Clarke early shone by his theological attainments, and almost immediately after obtaining orders in 1669, he began his career as a theological author by publishing 'Three Practical Essays on Baptism, Confirmation, and Repentance,' and shortly afterwards, his 'Paraphrase on the Four Gospels.' In 1704 he was appointed to a lectureship on the 'Evidences,' and it was in the course of the duty which this situation imposed on him, that he prepared those profound and elaborate works which have raised him to the first rank of philosophical divines, viz., 'A Lecture on the Being and Attributes of God,' and a second on the 'Evidence of Natural and Revealed Religion.' These lectures were afterwards expanded into the form of treatises; and although a diversity of opinion prevails as to the soundness and value of the à priori argument, no difference has ever existed as to the force with which Dr. Clarke has discussed the subject, and the piety which pervades the composition. The publication obtained for him a European renown as a Christian philosopher, and a more substantial reward followed in the preferments which were liberally offered to him in his own church. In 1706 he was appointed rector of St. Bennett's, Paul's Wharf, London, and though he was the reverse of a popular preacher, he showed exemplary diligence in the performance of his parochical duties. Amid his multifarious engagements his active mind found time to gratify his taste by the culture of physical science; and he published a translation of Sir Isaac Newton's Latin treatise on Optics, for which that philosopher gave him a present of £500, with the still more valuable addition of his private friendship. Dr. Clarke published a new theological treatise entitled 'The Scripture Doctrine of the Trinity,' in which he is supposed to lean towards Arianism. He died very suddenly on 7th May, 1729, of an inflammatory attack. [R.J.]

CLARKE, Lieut. William, in conjunction with Captain Lewis, led the first great national expedition sent out by the United States. It was planned by President Jefferson, and had for its object to ascend the Missouri, cross the Rocky Mountains, and reach the Pacific. All this was successfully accomplished between May 1804, and CLAUDIUS, Appius, decemvir of Rome, noted in the story of Virginius, 451-449 B.C.

CLAUDIUS, Appius Cæcus, a Roman censor, the founder of the celeb. Appennine Way, 311 B.C.

CLAUDIUS I., by name Tiberius Drusius Claudius, fourth emp. of Rome, b. B.C. 9; elected aft. the murd. of his uncle Caligula, 41; poison. 54.

CLAUDIUS II., by name Marcus Aurelius Flavius Claudius, proclaimed emp. 268, d. 270.

CLAUDIUS, Felix, Roman governor of Judæa in the time of the apostle Paul, recalled 60.

CLAUDIUS, Lysias, a tribune of the Roman troops at Jerusalem, whose name occurs in the history of Paul.

CLAUDIUS, Matt., a Germ. poet, 1743-1815.

CLAUSBERG, C., a German math., 1689-1751.

CLAUSEL, Bertrand, a count and marshal of France, dist. in the wars of Napoleon, and since the revol. of 1830 gov.-gen. of Algeria, 1772-1842.

CLAVEREAU, N. M., a Fr. archit., 1755-1816.

CLAVIER, Steph., a Fr. hellenist, 1762-1817.

CLAVIERE, Stephen, born at Geneva 1735, was by profession a banker, and one of the first to unite with Brissot under the republican banner in 1789. He shared in the successes and the fall of the Girondins, especially as minister of finance in 1792, and being arrested with the rest of his party, and condemned by the revolutionary tribunal, put an end to his life in prison, 8th December, 1793.

CLAVIGO, Ruy Gonzales De, a distinguished Spaniard sent by Henry III. of Castile, in 1403, as ambassador to the court of the great Tamerlane, at Samarcand. The account which he published on his return contains many important observations on the countries through which he passed. [J.B.]

CLAVIGERO, Francesco Saverio, a distinguished writer on the ancient history of Mexico, its antiquities, and conquest by Spain, was born at Vera Cruz in 1720. He spent thirty-six years among the Indians as Jesuit missionary, but little is known of his private life. He died in Italy about the end of the century. His work was published in Italian in 1780-81, 4 vols. 4to, with maps and plates, and is regarded as a high authority. It was translated into English, London, 1787, 2 vols. 4to. [J.B.]

CLAYTON, Robt., bishop of Clogher, au. of an 'Introduc. to the Hist. of the Jews,' &c., 1695-1758.

CLEANTHES, the pupil and successor of Zeno as chief of the Stoic philosophers, 3d cent. B.C.

CLEEF, John Van, a Fl. painter, 1646-1716.

CLEAVER, Wm., bishop of St. Asaph, disting. as a Greek scholar and religious writer, died 1815.

CLEGHORN, Geo., a Scotch phys., 1716-1787.

CLEIVELAND, J., a royal. and poet, 1613-59.

CLELAND, Jas., LL.D., a statis.wr., 1770-1840.

CLEMENCE of Hungary, queen of France, married to Louis X. 1315, died 1328.

CLEMENT, the first of this name, bishop of Rome, generally allowed to be the same that St. Paul mentions as his fellow-labourer, died about 91. Clement II., pope, 1046-1047. Clement III., promoter of the third crusade, 1187-1191. Clement IV., concluded the pragmatic sanction with St. Louis, 1265-1268. Clement V., the first who wore the triple mitre, and removed to Avignon, under the influence of Philip the Fair, 1305-1314. Clement VI., noted for his political activity, 1342-1352. Clement VII., under whom Rome was besieged by the Constable of France, and by whom Henry VIII. was excommunicated, 1523-1534. Clement VIII., whose pontificate was distinguished by the elevation of Baronius, Bellarmine, Du Perron, and other eminent men to the rank of cardinals, 1592-1605. Clement IX., 1667-1669. Clement X., 1670-1676. Clement XI., by whom the condemnation of Jansenius was confirmed, and the bull 'Unigenitas' promulgated, 1700-1721. Clement XII., 1730-1740. Clement XIII., noted for his political reverses, the loss of Avignon, &c., 1758-1768. Clement XIV., distinguished by his enlightened policy, and for his Brief suppressing the Jesuits, who afterwards poisoned him, 1769-1774.

CLEMENT, Fr., a learned Fr. monk, d. 1793.

CLEMENT, J. M. Ber., a Fr. critic, 1742-1812.

CLEMENT, N., a French librarian, 1647-1712.

CLEMENT, Titus Flavius, was born toward the middle of the second century. In early life he was a pagan, and strongly addicted to philosophical pursuits. After travelling extensively, he became a pupil of Pantaenus, master of a Christian academy at Alexandria. Here he became a Christian and a proselyte, and ultimately rose to be the head of this school of divinity, in which capacity he taught with great renown during the reign of Alexander Severus. About the year 202 he retired at length to avoid persecution, and after various wanderings died about A.D. 220. Clement was an Eclectic in philosophy, but with a very decided bias to Platonism. The besetting sin of his theology is a discursive habit of speculation, without regard to fixed principles, and the fault of his exegesis is his excessive love of allegory, which he indulges without scruple, and on every occasion. His books are valuable for their delineations and samples of contemporary literature and manners. His 'Paedagogus,' in three books, contains good instructions to a young convert, and his 'Exhortatio ad Graecos' has many striking and curious thoughts in it But his best known work is his 'Stromata' (patch-work) or Miscellany, which is a disorderly storehouse filled with useful and interesting information and anecdotes. One of his tracts 'On the Danger of Riches' has been translated into English, London, 1711. The best edition of his works is that of Potter, Oxford, 1715, 2 vols. folio. Some of his treatises have been lost, such as his 'Hypotyposes' or commentaries. [J.E.]

CLEMENTI, Muz., an Ital. pianist, 1752-1832.

CLEMENTI, Prosp., an It. sculptor, d. 1584.

CLEOBULUS, one of the seven Greek sages, and king of Rhodes, 6th century B.C.

CLEOMBROTUS, the first of the name, king of Sparta, 480-479 B.C.; the second, 380-371; the third, dethroned by Leonidas, 259-239.

CLEOMENES, the first of the name, king of Sparta, 519-489 B.C.; the second, 371-309; the third put an end to his existence in prison, 238-219.

CLEOPATRA, the second wife of Philip of Macedon, after his death cruelly murdered, together with her son, by Olympias, the first wife of Philip, and mother of Alexander the Great.

CLEOPATRA, the daugh. of Olympias and sist. of Alex. the Great, q. of Epirus by her marr. with Alexander, her maternal uncle, 337; assass. 308 B.C.

CLEOPATRA, the celebrated queen of Egypt, had fallen into confusion during his absence. Clive on this occasion had no opportunity of earning more military fame; but he honourably distinguished himself by his exertions in the more difficult and invidious duty of reforming the gross abuses that abounded in our Indian administration. This made him many enemies; and on his final return to England, in 1767, he became the object of incessant obloquy and attack in the public press, in the discussions at the India House, and ultimately in the House of Commons. Clive was, in fact, far from a faultless man. Throughout his career in the East, he had, in his negotiations and diplomatic dealings, acted on the maxim, that it was quite allowable to fight the cunning and faithless natives with their own weapons. He said, in his defence, that it was a matter of true policy and justice to deceive such villains. Acts of chicanery, and even of forgery, could thus be truly charged against Clive, which, in the judgment of many of the best of his countrymen, no amount of success could justify. But Clive's fearless defence of himself in parliament was very effective. The magnitude of his services was undeniable; and the House of Commons, after a long debate on 23d May, 1773, refused to vote that Lord Clive had abused his power, and came to the resolution, that 'Lord Clive has rendered great and meritorious services to his country.' But though thus honourably acquitted in parliament, Clive's haughty spirit suffered deeply from the attacks aimed at him; his health also was impaired, and he aggravated fearfully both his mental and physical prostration by the immoderate use of opium. Robert Lord Clive, baron of Plassey, died by his own hand on the 22d November, 1774. [E.S.C.]

CLODIUS, a Roman tribune, killed 51 B.C.

CLODOMIR, king of Orleans, 523, killed 524.

CLOOTS, JEAN BAPTISTE DU VAL DE GRACE, better known as Anacharsis Cloots, the classical prenom being adopted by him from Greek history as a substitute for his baptismal names, which he rejected as having a superstitious origin, was a Prussian baron, notorious for his violence in conjunction with the Chaumettes and Héberts of the French revolution, and for his intense hatred of any natural or revealed religion. He was a political fanatic of the blackest dye, and openly proclaimed himself 'the personal enemy of Jesus Christ.' This sentence, from his book entitled 'De la République Universelle,' expresses at once the character of the man and the tendency of his doctrines:—'The people is the sovereign and God of the world; France is the centre of the People-God; only fools believe in any other God or Supreme Being.' His particular monomania was a universal republic, of which he professed himself the ambassador, with the title of 'Orator of the Human Race,' and in this character he paraded his followers of all nations, or vagabonds attired to represent them, before the bar of the national assembly. He had visited the greater part of Europe, and expended a considerable fortune to propagate his opinions, for which he at last found a platform in the national convention, where he was sent by the department of the Oise, 1792. He is the author of several works published between 1780 and 1793, the last entitled 'Base Constitutionelle de la République du Genre Humain.' He was included in the accusation of St. Just, and executed with Chaumette and others, 1794. [E.R.]

CLOSS, J. B., a Ger. phys. and poet, 1785-87.

CLOSTERMAN, JOHN, a Ger. paint., d. 1713.

CLOTAIRE, the first of this name, king of France, 497-558; the second, 584-628; the third, king of Burgundy, died 670; the fourth, nominal king under Charles Martel, 717-720.

CLOTILDA, the queen of Clovis, 493-543.

CLOUD, ST., a son of Clodomir, devoted to a monastic life after the murder of his brother, 533.

CLOVIS, the first of this name, king of France, celebrated for his conversion to Christianity and his extensive conquests, born 467; succeeded 481; married Clotilda, the princess of Burgundy, 493; acknowledged king of his consolidated dominions by the emperor of the East, and fixed his residence at Paris, 510; died 511.

CLOVIS II., king of Neustria and Burgundy, 638-656; the third of the name, 691-695.

CLOWES, JOHN, a clergyman of the Church of England, more than sixty years rector of St. John's, Manchester, distinguished as a religious writer, and translator of Swedenborg, 1743-1831.

CLUGNY, F. DE, an ascetic writer, 1637-1694.

CLUTTERBUCK, R., an Engl. hist., 1772-1831.

COBB, JAMES, an Engl. dramatist, 1756-1818.

COBB, SAMUEL, an English poet, died 1713.

COBBET, WILLIAM, a self-taught man, who obtained great celebrity and influence during the early part of the nineteenth century, by his genius, energy, and waywardness, is generally said to have been born in the year 1762. His father was a farmer, who kept a small public house in Surrey. William was brought up to that stolid ignorance which has long been the general inheritance of the English peasant; but his was not a temper to endure such bondage, and from an early age he greedily acquired knowledge, stamping all he obtained with that mark of individuality which the self-learner sets on his acquisitions. Fate made him for some time engrossing-clerk to an attorney, a pursuit which his soul abhorred. It appears to have been his loathing towards the drudgery of the desk that drove him to enlist in an infantry regiment destined for American service. He became a testimony to the small amount which the routine duties of a soldier can take from the available services of an active mind, for in his leisure hours he gave himself an education such as few hard-working scholastically-taught men possess, and performed his duty so punctually and effectively that he was immediately raised over the heads of many seniors to the rank of sergeant-major. In his service in America he met the young girl who afterwards became his wife, and his conduct towards her throughout, as well as his domestic virtues generally, should be balanced against his public failings. In the year 1791 he desired his discharge from the army and obtained it on the ground of good conduct. He brought a charge of peculation against four officers under whom he had served, and when a large body of witnesses were in attendance, and other preparations were made for the trial, he abandoned it by suddenly disappearing, leaving it still a question whether he acted under caprice or settled design. From this Common Pleas in 1606, and of the King's Bench in 1613. Here he exerted himself sternly in the investigation of the horrible system of iniquity which Somerset the court favourite concentrated round him, and showed a determination which not only overawed the parasites, but intimidated James himself. In 1616 a systematic attack, in which Bacon had the baseness to aid, was made on the resolute chief justice, and he was dismissed. He was partially restored to favour, but was again subject to attacks, which very naturally disposed him to put his great acquirements at the disposal of the constitutional opposition, which arising in the reign of James, completed its work in that of Charles. He owed much of his success in early life to two marriages—the one bringing fortune, the other connection. After spending his old age in wealthy retirement, he died on 3d September, 1633. His celebrated 'Institute,' which grew out of a commentary on 'Littleton's Treatise on Tenures,' has made him the great oracle of English law. His expressions, however antiquated they may appear, are deemed sacred, and are always embodied where their substance has not been superseded by changes of the law, in the works of subsequent commentators. [J.H.B.]

COLARDEAN, C. P., a Fr. poet, 1732-1776.

COLBATCH, JOHN, an English pharmacopolist, 17th century.

COLBERT, JEAN BAPTISTE, a financial statesman, was born at Rheims in 1619. His immediate origin was somewhat obscure. It is disputed whether his father was a wine merchant or a councillor of state, but he met the prejudices of the noblesse against his rise to power by professing to belong to an ancient Scottish family. The recommendation to employ him was a legacy of Cardinal Mazarin to Louis XIV., and in 1661 he was made comptroller-general of finances. Using the great power either for good or evil belonging to this high office, he redeemed much money to the state by mercilessly scrutinizing the proceedings and liabilities of the farmers-general, and came to an adjustment with the national creditors. He extended the colonial power of France, carried on great public works, created a navy, and fostered into existence several manufactures. In this last operation, as his administration was very prosperous, he seemed to justify the system of government protection and interference with trade, but it was the spending of the resources which his vigorous financial system put at his disposal that created the appearance of prosperity, and subsequent reaction showed that successful trade could not be artificially created. He founded the Academies of Inscriptions, of Sciences, and of Architecture. He died in 1683, neglected by the court and suspected by the people, who charged him with acquiring his great fortune by unworthy means. [J.H.B.]

COLCHESTER, LORD. See ABBOT, CHARLES.

COLCHEN, VICTOR, Count De, a French diplomatist and senator, 1752-1830.

COLDEN, CADWALLADER, a Scotch physician, medical author, and naturalist, 1688-1776.

COLE, SIR CHR., a naval com., 1771-1836.

COLE, SIR G. L., a penins. officer, 1772-1842.

COLE, HENRY, a dist. Rom. Cath. div., d. 1519.

COLE, WILLIAM, an English herbalist, d. 1662.

COLEBROOKE, H. T., an English Orientalist, 1765-1837.

COLEONI, B., an Italian condottiere, d. 1475.

COLERIDGE, HARTLEY, son of Samuel Taylor Coleridge, remarkable for his original talents as a poet and essayist, and for his unhappy habits, 1797-1849.

COLERIDGE, HENRY NELSON, cousin of the preceding, a distinguished lawyer and classical scholar, died 1843.

COLERIDGE, SAMUEL TAYLOR, the youngest son of the vicar of St. Mary Ottery in Devonshire, was born at that place in October 1772. Left an orphan in his ninth year, he was educated for seven years at Christ's Hospital, where Charles Lamb was his fellow-pupil; and in 1791 he became a student of Jesus College, Cambridge. He had already devoured numberless books of all kinds, had especially attached himself in boyhood to metaphysics and theology, and had been inoculated with a love for poetry by the sonnets of Bowles. At the university his reading was great; but it was desultory and irregular, and hardly at all directed to the sciences which led to academical distinction. In 1793, vexed by debts, he went to London, and enlisted in a dragoon regiment, from which he was released after four months, and returned to Cambridge for another term or two. Now, however, his theological creed had become unitarian; and he at once gave up all views towards academical preferment. In 1794 was published the drama called 'The Fall of Robespierre,' of which the first act was Coleridge's, and the other two were Southey's; and the two poets, then entertaining, in common, many of those extreme opinions which they afterwards abandoned so thoroughly, occupied themselves at Bristol in planning a new social community, which they were to found in the United States. At this town and elsewhere Coleridge delivered courses of public lectures (some of which he published), dealing both with politics and with religion; and he also preached in unitarian pulpits. In 1795 he married Miss Fricker, whose sister soon afterwards became Mrs. Southey. In this year also he became acquainted with Wordsworth.—In 1796 he published, without success of any kind, ten numbers of a political miscellany called 'The Watchman;' and in the same year appeared his first volume of 'Juvenile Poems,' to which, in a second edition the year afterwards, other pieces were added. His genius, however, was not exhibited in its strength till the summer of 1798, when Wordsworth's famous volume of 'Lyrical Ballads' appeared. It contained Coleridge's 'Ancient Mariner,' 'Love,' 'The Nightingale,' and 'The Foster-mother's Tale.' The first part of 'Christabel' was written in 1797, the second in 1800; but both parts were for a good many years known only to a few literary men. The tragedy of 'Remorse' also was written in 1797; though being despised by Sheridan, it did not find its way either to the stage or to the press. It is thus a fact, one of the many singular ones in the history of this remarkable man, that almost all the poems on which his celebrity rests, were composed in one short period, not extending much in either direction beyond his twenty-fifth year. We of this generation, whose youth received its poetic lessons from a school in which commander at the battle of Marignano, died 1522. ODET, his son, cardinal archbishop of Toulouse, converted to protestantism, poisoned by his valet, 1515-1571. GASPARD, another son, celebrated as leader of the protestants and opponent of Guise, and one of the first victims of St. Bartholomew, 1517-1572. FRANCOIS DANDELOT, a younger brother, also a protestant leader and general, 1511-1569. GASPARD, son of Francois, marshal of France, 1584-1646. GASPARD, son of the preceding, lieutenant-general in the royal army, whose son was the last of the Colignis, 1605-1689.

COLIGNI, JOHN DE, descended from another branch, a lieut.-gen., author of 'Memoirs,' d. 1686.

COLIGNI, HENRIETTA, a Fr. poetess, d. 1673.

COLLATINUS, LUCIUS TARQUINIUS, nephew of Tarquin, and husb. of Lucretia, consul 509 B.C.

COLLE, C., a French dramatic wr., 1709-1783.

COLLIER, ARTHUR, an original and curious writer, born in 1680, died in 1732. In 1713 he published his singular work 'Clavis Universalis'—a book in remarkable analogy with the writings of Berkeley. It is worthy of attention.

COLLIER, JEREMIAH, one of the English nonjurors of the revolution of 1688, celebrated for his attack on the immorality of the stage, 1650-1726.

COLLIN, HENRY DE, a Ger. dram., 1772-1811.

COLLIN, H. J., a German med. wr., d. 1784.

COLLIN D'HARLEVILLE, J. F., a French comic poet and mem. of the Institute, 1755-1806.

COLLINGWOOD, CUTHBERT, Admiral Lord, distinguished at the blockade of Toulon, the battle of Cape St. Vincent, the blockade of Brest, and especially at Trafalgar, where he succeeded to the command on the fall of Nelson, 1748-1810.

COLLINGWOOD, ED., a naval officer, d. 1835.

COLLINO, IGNATUS, an It. sculp., 1724-1793.

COLLINS, ARTH., a genealog. wr., 1682-1760.

COLLINS, J., an English geometr., 1624-1683.

COLLINS, JOHN ANTHONY, born 1676, died in 1729; a daring freethinker, and a friend of Locke. He attached himself to the most objectionable part of Locke's system, denying human liberty, and of course impugning immortality. His writings do not contain much that can interest the student now.—He was one of the adversaries of Dr. Clarke.

COLLINS, SAMUEL, an English phys., 17th ct.

COLLINS, WM., a disting. artist, 1787-1847.

COLLINS, WILLIAM, the most interesting of all the minor poets of England, was born at Chichester, in 1720, and died there in the care of his sister, 1756. He was the son of a respectable tradesman of that city, and was educated at Winchester and Oxford. Before leaving the university he published the 'Oriental Eclogues,' along with an epistle to Sir Thomas Hanmer on his edition of Shakspeare. In 1744 he came to London as a literary adventurer, and about two years afterwards published his 'Odes,' and made the acquaintance of Dr. Johnson, who held him in high esteem. His life in the metropolis seems to have been irregular, and until the death of an uncle who left him a legacy of £2,000, was one of continual hardship. His conduct to his publishers on the receipt of this little fortune was most honourable, his first use of it being to repay the losses they had sustained by rating his genius more highly than the unappreciating public. Unhappily the seeds of disease and occasional insanity had been too deeply sown in his former abject condition to be eradicated, even by the alteration of climate and the scenes of other lands, and after a short sojourn in France, he passed through the doors of a lunatic asylum to his early home. The tribute paid to his memory by Dr. Johnson is too long to cite here, but some passages of it must not be omitted:—'The appearance of Collins,' he says, 'was decent and manly; his knowledge considerable, his views extensive, his conversation elegant, and his disposition cheerful. He was a man of extensive literature, and of vigorous faculties. He was acquainted not only with the learned tongues, but with the Italian, French, and Spanish languages. . . . . His morals were pure, and his opinions pious. in a long continuance of poverty and long habits of dissipation, it cannot be expected that any character should be exactly uniform. There is a degree of want by which the freedom of agency is almost destroyed; and long association with fortuitous companions will at last relax the strictness of truth, and abase the fervour of sincerity. That this man, wise and virtuous as he was, passed always unentangled through the snares of life, it would be prejudice and temerity to affirm; but it may be said that at least he preserved the source of action unpolluted, that his principles were never shaken, that his distinctions of right and wrong were never confounded, and that his faults had nothing of malignity or design.' With regard to his poetical genius, there can be no hesitation in pronouncing the Odes of William Collins to be unsurpassed by anything of the same species of composition in the English language, and that to the 'Passions' is a perfect masterpiece of poetical description. The Oriental Eclogues are exquisite portraitures of natural feeling, and, to do them full justice, perfect cabinet pictures of Eastern scenery. [E.R.]

COLLINSON, PETER, an English naturalist and antiquarian, 1694-1768.

COLLOT D'HERBOIS, JEAN MARIE, known for some twenty years previous to the French revolution as a dramatic author and actor, and afterwards as a sanguinary Jacobin, was born at Paris 1750, and commenced his political career as a club orator, and author of the famous 'Almanack of Father Gerard,' which raised him into such notoriety that he was sent to the national convention by the department of the Seine 1792. His first act was to propose a decree declaring the abolition of royalty, and ever after his voice was one of the most influential in the Jacobin Club, the Committee of Public Safety, and the convention, and was always raised in favour of the most violent measures. He was a man of drunken debauched habits, but had the advantage of a fine figure and commanding voice. His audacity and hardness of heart pointed him out as a proper agent for the punishment of the Lyonnese, after the insurrection of that city and its conquest by the army of the republic. His colleague in effecting these reprisals was the notorious Fouché. Finding the guillotine somewhat formal and tardy in its vengeance, they collected their prisoners together and disposed of them by fusillade. Collot himself admitted, and defended the act, that on one occasion sixty prisoners were reaching India by a westward course. Judging from the latest and best accounts, he gave by far too great an extension to the east of Asia, and on high authority took the size of a degree considerably below the truth, thus greatly under-estimating the earth's size. It followed that the Atlantic might easily be traversed. The scheme was a magnificent one; but it is difficult for us now, in the advanced state of our knowledge, to look at it in all its grandeur and boldness. He supported his views by the authority of Aristotle and other ancient writers, who had suggested that India might be reached by going west from the Pillars of Hercules; and by traditions and rumours concerning land to the west, and objects seen floating in the Atlantic, or cast ashore by westerly winds. Copious memoranda of all the grounds of his persuasion were found among his papers. To reach India by sea was still the great problem of geography. Columbus offered to John II. of Portugal to solve it by sailing westwards; and would most probably have prevailed upon the king to send out an expedition, had it not been for the secret counterplotting of some of the council, whose duplicity, winked at by the monarch, so disgusted Columbus, that he took his departure for Spain. This was in 1484 or 1485; his only companion was his son Diego, then about eleven years old, his wife having died some time previously. Though entering Spain in great poverty, he soon made friends, and got an introduction to the king and queen. They hesitated to undertake so great an enterprise, and several councils reported unfavourably; still Columbus persevered in new applications, and for seven years was kept in a painful state of suspense. At length, after a last trial, in February, 1492, he left the residence of the court, and set out on his way to France. Two of his friends got an immediate interview with the queen — overcame her scruples—and Columbus was brought back. Isabella had offered to pledge her jewels, but the king was afterwards prevailed upon to furnish the greater part of the funds, Columbus himself undertaking an eighth, and getting the same part of the profits. He was to have one-tenth of all metals, gems, and merchandise, the office of admiral, with descent of title, and to be viceroy and governor-general of the new lands. The articles of agreement were signed on the 17th April, 1492. On Friday, 3d August, 1492, the expedition sailed from Palos, near Moguer on the Tinto; it consisted of three small vessels, two without decks, and 120 men, who had been procured with the utmost difficulty, owing to the general dread of the voyage. The celebrated brothers Pinzon commanded the two smaller vessels, of about fifty tons each, named the Pinta and Nina, the admiral the Santa Maria. The only difficulty encountered was the mutinous tendency of the crews, excited by their terrors. Columbus repressed these with extraordinary tact; he was, besides, a skilful sailor, and had helps which a few years before did not exist. The compass had been receiving more attention, and the astrolabe, an instrument like our sextant, had been lately introduced.—Sitting on the high poop of his vessel, at ten o'clock on the night of the 11th October, 1492, gazing earnestly ahead, Columbus plainly saw moving lights upon some land. Four hours of most exciting suspense followed. At 2 A.M., Rodrigo Triana, a sailor in the Pinta, which was a little in advance, saw the land itself. Dawn revealed a lovely island—Guanahani or San Salvador, one of the Bahamas. He afterwards discovered Cuba and Haiti; and deeming all these portions of Asia—a delusion under which he laboured till his latest hour—he called the inhabitants Indians; a name which became general before the truth was known. The discovery produced an extraordinary sensation in Europe; and Columbus was received by the sovereigns, and in every part of Spain, with the highest honour.—On September 25th, 1493, he sailed from Cadiz with a fleet of seventeen ships and 1,500 men, and discovered the Windward Isles, Jamaica, Porto Rico, &c., and founded a colony in Hispaniola. Disappointed in their hopes of making rapid fortunes, many of the adventurers who went out with him became discontented, and returning home spread calumnies against the admiral. Leaving his brother Bartholomew governor, he returned home, was received with favour, and refuted all the charges preferred by his enemies. His third voyage, entered upon 30th May, 1498, was rewarded by the discovery of Trinidad, the Orinoco, and the coast of Paria. He found the new colony in a disorganized state, and remained some time to restore order. Complaints, however, still reached Spain, and a commissioner named Bobadilla was sent out to institute inquiries. He exceeded his powers, and sent Columbus home in irons, with his two brothers, Bartholomew and Diego. There was a general burst of indignation in Spain; the king disclaimed complicity, and the queen bestowed her usual favour. Bobadilla was recalled, but the admiral was not reinstated. This favour he long sought in vain, and till the day of his death he got no redress, though there was not the semblance of proof against him. Columbus had served the king's purpose, who now repented that he had bestowed such powers and privileges. The admiral was, however, sent upon a fourth voyage, 9th May, 1502, to search for a passage from the Caribbean Sea into what was supposed to be the great Indian Sea, from which Vasco de Gama had recently returned laden with the richest treasure. The voyage was disastrous; and the constitution of Columbus, on which the infirmities of age had already made inroads, never recovered from the shock which it sustained. In coasting central America, he got a hint, which if followed up might have led to the discovery of Mexico and the Pacific, and shed new lustre on his declining years. He returned in the end of the year 1504, and renewed his appeals to the justice and generosity of the king. While urging them in person, or by means of his son, brother, and other friends, he was seized with a violent attack of gout, and expired on the 20th May, 1506, in full possession of his faculties, and in a very pious frame of mind. In his latter days his connection with, and neglect of, Beatrice Enriquez of Seville, mother of his natural son Fernando, 'weighed heavily on his conscience,' and on his deathbed he made provision for her. Fernando was now eighteen years of age; he became the biographer of his father, by whom he had always been treated with the same affectionate regard as his other son. The latter, Don Diego, renewed the application for redress; and at length commenced cumstances, and in what direction, the English philosopher gave an impulse to the inquiry concerning the origin of our ideas. Erroneously we think, it had become, nevertheless, the ambition of metaphysical inquiry to establish, as its starting point, some theory which might account for the generation of human thought; and the doctrine propounded by Locke had obtained extensive acceptance. Condillac at the outset acknowledged the Englishman as his master; maintaining in his earliest publication, that all knowledge is made up of our sensations, and of the action of the mind in reflecting upon these. Sensation and Reflection; no idea exists or can exist in the human intellect which may not be tracked to one or other as its source. As we have shown elsewhere (article LOCKE) this doctrine ignored the existence of all ideas involving the characters of universality, necessity, and infinity,—reducing them to mere negations, or averments that certain things have no known limit; nevertheless, it continued to recognize as much activity on the part of the Mind, as enabled Locke to preserve the conception of human liberty; but this too fell before the subsequent 'simplification' by Condillac. French philosophy—technically so called—reached its culmination in the 'Traité des Sensations;' the agency of Reflection being there dispensed with, and all knowledge traced to Sensation alone. As a specimen of Condillac's reasoning, take his positions — fundamental ones — regarding Attention. If, he asserts, a multitude of sensations of equal vivacity are experienced at the same time by any mind, nothing occurs save the perception of the feeling occasioned—a perception which passes off with the circumstances; but if, amidst the crowd of feelings, some one exists of great comparative vivacity and so predominates, the mind is instantly rivetted by this sensation in proportion to its vivacity;—which rivetting we call Attention. Condillac overlooks, of course, the attribute which chiefly characterizes every act of attention, viz.: its dependence on the WILL; to be impressed keenly depends indeed not on us,—to be attentive to any impression, does depend on us. In a way quite as faulty, Condillac, with great logical parade, seeks to account for acts of memory, of judgment, of reasoning, and for all our sentiments and emotions. Mind with him is a mere bundle of sensations now being experienced, or which have been experienced; there is nothing in it save the consciousness of all the external world is doing to it, or the recollection of all it has done to it. It is easy to see that in such a system, no pretence of a recognition of human Liberty could find a place; nevertheless, Condillac was not a materialist. He held firmly by the averment, that the seat of sensation is the soul, not the organ—leaving it to Cabanis to take the next downward step,—even then not the last, for we have seen how the physiologist saved himself by the fancy of a supermaterial vital principle.—The vices inhering in Locke's method, but veiled so far by effect of the good sense and practical sagacity of the Englishman, stand out as they really are, and are virtually destroyed through exaggeration, in the writings of Condillac. It never seems to have occurred as desirable to this logician, that he should ascertain whether the ideas he is accounting for, be really the ideas which constitute human thought: certainly it would be reckoned strange now in a physical inquirer, were he to ignore facts, or rather—without compunction and without shame —to twist facts, so that his theory be saved! Unhappily it is easy to theorize in metaphysics; it is easy to produce schemes which will account, if not for actual fact, at least for something a little like actual fact: the difficulty lies in the just description and analysis of psychological phenomena. —Condillac's precision and clearness suited the French taste. Not given to introspection, and apparently not capable of it, that accomplished and interesting people have never, notwithstanding their acuteness, succeeded in grappling with mental or moral problems; their metaphysic is like their poetry—purely logical and purely objective. —A student with much leisure may still peruse Condillac with some interest; his writings—especially those on language—contain acute remark; but on the whole they are very wearisome. —In private life Condillac is said to have been estimable. He mingled with the Encyclopædists — those heralds of the revolution; but his habitual reserve kept him apart from politics, and from writing either on morals or religion. He was brother of Abbé Mably. [J.P.N.]

CONDORCET, MARIE JEAN ANTONIE, marquis de Caritat; an eloquent man, a good mathematician, an earnest political writer, and a victim of the reign of terror. Born in Picardy in 1743, he poisoned himself through dislike to the guillotine in 1794. The circumstances connected with his death are even affecting. Proscribed after the fall of the Girondins as an accomplice of Brissot, he found an asylum in the house of Madame Vernet; and there, with no aid from books, he wrote out his 'Sketch of an Historical Picture of the Progress of the Human Mind.' Every evening he gave his protectress the sheets he had written during the day; and it is said he did not even revise them. A new decree of the convention having threatened with death any one who should harbour a proscribed person, Condorcet resolved to leave Madame Vernet's; and in spite of her entreaties he did so. Half naked he wandered for several days through fields; but, hunger prevailing, he entered an auberge at Clamont and was arrested. A dose of stramonium (the gift of Cabanis) concealed in his ring, set him free:—it is probable that he thought the right of the condemned Roman Noble, to choose the manner of death, not extravagant or unreasonable.—Like most literary men of that time in France, Condorcet was a materialist; nevertheless, his higher aspirations could not be silenced; one sees their vigour in the very wildness of his dreams concerning the perfectability of our Race. The 'Esquisse' will amply repay perusal. It is an exaggeration, and often false; but it abounds with penetrating appreciations of history; and the serenity which reigns through it—a serenity undisturbed by word of reproach or repining—deeply interests one in the doomed man. Condorcet's best mathematical work is on the 'Calculus of Probabilities:' his life of 'Turgot'—perhaps that of 'Voltaire'—is likely to last.—A worthy and affectionate eloge on Condorcet we owe to M. Arago. [J.F.N.]

CONEGLIANO, C. DE, an It. painter, 15th c.

alliance with the most talented men of that epoch. In 1796 he brought himself into notice by a work entitled 'De la Force du Gouvernement Actuel de la France et de la Nécessité de s'y Rallier,' being an appeal in support of the directory. The year following he claimed the rights of a French citizen, and procured a decree which restored the descendants of the religious exiles of France to their proper country; increasing his literary fame about the same period by his treatises on political reaction, and on the effects of terror. Though an influential member of the political circle, M. Constant was not called upon to exercise any public function until the ascendancy of Napoleon was established, when he became a member of the tribunate, and aspiring to lead the opposition, was ordered to quit France in 1802. Madame de Stael, with whom he was politically connected, being ordered into exile at the same time, they left the capital together, and travelled over many parts of Europe, at length fixing their abode in Germany, where they cultivated an acquaintance with its rising literature, and enjoyed the intimacy of Schlegel. It was here that Constant wrote his famous work on the religious spirit, and the different modes of worship; his tragedy of 'Walstein,' &c.; and besides courting the muses, contrived to form an alliance with the daughter of the Prussian minister, Prince Hardenberg. On the fall of Buonaparte in 1814 Constant returned to Paris, and not only advocated the alliance of the Bourbons, as he hoped, with the institutions achieved by the people, but denounced in bitter language the conqueror, who was even then returning to reclaim his authority. By whatever arguments he was won over to the cause of Napoleon—and there is reason to believe they leave no stain on his patriotism—this singular politician figured as a counsellor of state during the hundred days, and though he quitted France at the crisis of the second restoration, he appeared again as a deputy under Louis XVIII. Benjamin Constant, Manuel, and Lafayette in the chamber of representatives (1819), boded no good to the royalists, and the murder of the Duc de Berry, followed by the discussion of the electoral laws, was the signal for a new conflict, and for that brilliant opposition which ended in the revolution of 1830. During this interval M. Constant, besides taking a leading part in the discussions of the chambers, contributed many political and other works to the literature of his country; and was also actively engaged as one of the editors of 'The Minerva.' The presumed cause of his death, which happened within six months after the abdication of Charles X., was the fatigue and exposure which he underwent during the tumults of July; and it is singular to add, that he closed his career by accepting favours from Louis Philippe. The problem for the biographer is to reconcile his loyalty to constitutional principles, and his cosmopolitan views with his versatile conduct as a politician. We are inclined to believe that he was trustful beyond what would be esteemed political propriety, and hoped, it may be, too much. Hence he was disposed to accept the fait accompli, and make the best of it, and only when his too generous expectations were disappointed, commenced those chivalrous attacks which appear so extraordinary in contrast with his liaisons in the camp of the enemy. His philosophical refinement, his dramatic tastes, and his high sense of honour when placed on one side, in the scale of royalty, as it was natural they should be, weighed too much against his political sagacity on the other. His romance of 'Adolphe,' also, shows that he thought it dangerous to resist the established opinions of the people; but what rule had he for ascertaining what should really be considered as established in scenes so changeful? [E.R.]

CONSTANTIA, FLAVIA JULIA VALERIA, sister of Constantine the G., and wife of Licinius, d. 329.

CONSTANTINA, el. sister of the preced., d. 354.

CONSTANTINE I., called the Great, born 274, proclaimed Augustus by the army 306, embraced Christianity 311, transferred the seat of government from Rome to Byzantium 329, d. 337.

CONSTANTINE II., reigned over the Roman empire, in conjunction with his brothers CONSTANT and CONSTANTIUS, from 337 to his d. in action, 340.

CONSTANTINE III., elected emp. 407, k. 411.

CONSTANTINE IV., emp. of the East, 668-685.

CONSTANTINE V., suc. as emp. 741, d. 775.

CONSTANTINE VI., suc. Leo II. 780, and was dethroned by his mother Irene, who had been regent of the empire during his minority, 792.

CONSTANTINE VII., b. 905, s. 911, pois. 959.

CONSTANTINE VIII., is a title given to the son of Basil, the Macedonian, elected Augustus, 868, and died before his father, 878. Some historians give the title to one of the sons of Romanus Lecapenus, d. 944 or 945.

CONSTANTINE IX. was associated in the empire with his brother BASIL II., by John Zimisces, 969, and succeeded the latter 976, d. 1028.

CONSTANTINE X., emp. of the East, 1042-54.

CONSTANTINE XI., succeeded 1056, d. 1067.

CONSTANTINE XII., last emp. of the East, suc. 1448, and died gloriously in the defence of Constantinople, then taken by the Turks, 1453.

CONSTANTINE I., k. of Scotland, 458, d. 479.

CONSTANTINE II., suc. 858, k. in battle 874.

CONSTANTINE III., suc. 903, abdicated 943.

CONSTANTINE IV. usurped the throne, and was killed by the brother of Kenneth 1002.

CONSTANTINE, 'the African,' a Benedictine monk, known as a medical author, 11th c.

CONSTANTINE DE MAGNY, C. F., a critic of Savoy, an. of a commen. on Milton, 1692-1764.

CONSTANTINE, PAULOWITCH, grand duke of Russia and viceroy of Poland, elder br. of the emp. Nicholas, to whom he ceded the crown, 1779-1831.

CONSTANTINI, an Italian actor, d. 1729.

CONSTANTINUS, a poet and historian, d. 1614.

CONSTANTIUS, the first of this name, emp. of Rome and father of Constantine the Great, adopted and named Cæsar by Maximinian 292, Augustus 305, d. 306; the second, FLAVIUS JULIUS CONSTANTIUS, second son of Constantine the Great, born 317, made Cæsar 323, emperor 337, d. 361.

CONTADES, L. H. ERASMUS, Marquis De, a marshal of Fr., dis. in the wars of Italy, 1704-1795.

CONTANCIN, CYRIAC, a Fr. mis., 1670-1733.

CONTARINI, an illustrious family of Venice, which gave seven doges to Venice from 1043 to 1676, and boasts of many ambassadors, cardinals, and men of letters. The most celebrated is GASPARD CONTARINI, papal legate to the diet of Ratisbon, and a philosophical writer, 1483-1542.

successfully disputed, but for his own fatal habits of intemperance, was born in Westminster, 17th April, 1756. His father was an Irish officer and captain in the 4th Dragoons, but died while Cooke was yet an infant. His mother, on her widowhood, went to reside at Berwick-upon-Tweed, where her son received his school education. In the Town Hall of this place he saw the first play in his experience acted—it was 'The Provoked Husband'—the time either 1766 or 1767; and the circumstance made so strong an impression on his mind, that he began to study a part for himself, that of Horatio in 'The Fair Penitent.' In 1769 he joined a strolling company of players in a barn in the same town, and attempted Young Meadows, in 'Love in a Village.' From this time his passion for the stage increased, and at the age of fifteen he got to London, notwithstanding he was previously apprenticed to a printer; and afterwards, probably as midshipman on board of a king's ship, visited Holland. He was at all times a sedulous reader of plays, and a diligent playgoer. In 1774, and subsequent years, he witnessed in London the best actors of the time—Foote, Garrick, Macklin—and first appeared (1761) as a professed actor himself at Brentford in the character of Dumont. Next year he visited Berwick and Edinburgh, and in 1778 made his debut in London; but being neglected, retired with chagrin, to return in 1800 with decided triumph. During the interval he acquired those habits in the provinces which were the bane of his future life. Cooke was eight-and-thirty before he made good his position on a metropolitan stage, and this was at Dublin, which place he left, and enlisted as a soldier, from which Messrs. Banks and Ward, the managers of the Manchester theatre, procured his discharge; and after relieving the distress which his follies had brought upon him, sent him to Manchester. In 1796 he married a Miss Daniels of the Chester theatre, which marriage was afterwards declared null and void by Sir W. Scott in Doctors Commons. — Cooke's successful appearance in London was in the character of 'Richard III.' He was at that time in his forty-fifth year. He next performed 'Shylock,' 'Sir Archy MacSarcasm,' and 'Sir Pertinax MacSycophant,' in all of which he was unapproachably great. Cooke was exceedingly fine in sarcasm, and both in town and country became immensely popular, notwithstanding his irregularities and continual disappointment of his audience. In 1803 he became acquainted with Mr. Cooke, an American actor, who ultimately conceived the design of delivering Cooke from his vices, by changing the scene of his associations, and after much difficulty and some stratagem, got him safely across the Atlantic. The voyage, and necessary total abstinence from spirituous liquors, completely renovated the actor's health; and for some time he ran a triumphant career in the United States. Gradually, however, he relapsed into his former habits of fatal indulgence, and died at New York in 1812. Next day his remains were deposited in the burying ground of St. Paul's Church, where many years afterwards his grave was visited by Edmund Kean, whose character and genius closely assimilated, both in faults and merits, those of his predecessor, and who erected a tablet to his memory. [J.A.H.]

COOKE, HENRY, an Engl. painter, 1642-1700.
COOKE, THOMAS, an Engl. poet, 1707-1750.
COOKE, THOMAS, a dist. singer, 1781-1848.
COOKE, W., a wr. on bankrupt law, 1757-1832.
COOKE, W., a misc. wr. and poet, 1766-1824.
COOMBE, WM., a humorous miscellan. writer, au. of 'The Tour of Doctor Syntax,' &c., 1741-1823.

COOPER, ANTHONY ASHLEY, first earl of Shaftesbury, disting. as a statesman and political intriguer in the time of Cromwell and Charles II., born 1621, raised to the peerage 1672, d. 1683. He was a talented but dissolute man, and we are indebted to his administration for the famous habeas corpus act. His grandson and namesake, third earl of Shaftesbury, was the distinguished essayist and moralist. See SHAFTESBURY.

COOPER, SIR ASTLEY PASTON, Bart., 1768–1841, was the son of the Rev. Dr. Cooper, rector of Yelverton and Morley, Norfolk, under whom, and the village schoolmaster of Brooke, he received the elements of his education. In 1784, he became a pupil of his uncle, William Cooper, surgeon to Guy's Hospital, and, as soon as he was qualified, a lecturer at St. Thomas's on anatomy and surgery, and speedily acquired great reputation as an operating surgeon. In order to succeed his uncle at Guy's, he found it necessary to change his politics, which were previously liberal; and, very fortunately, a certain 'disagreeable sensation' about his throat, which he regarded as a prelude to his fate, added physical to his moral reasons for adopting this step. His important literary labours were his great work on Hernia (1807), his books on dislocations and fractures, and on the Anatomy and Diseases of the Breast. Sir Astley was principally distinguished as a bold operator, a decided practitioner, and as a most industrious and popular teacher. Perhaps no man has ever taught any branch of medicine who possessed more of this element of great success. His manners were of the most engaging kind, while his attention, urbanity, and regard for his pupils, were of the most exemplary character. He thus acquired a hold of the rising profession, which insured him the largest consulting practice probably ever enjoyed by any practitioner that ever existed, his annual income having been at one time £21,000. [R.D.T.]

[House of James Fenimore Cooper.]

COOPER, JAMES FENIMORE, a celebrated American novelist, was the son of Judge Cooper, gion would never have been degraded by the persecution of the philosopher, nor science afflicted at the ignominious compromise by which it was averted.' 'It is a singular fact,' says the same writer, 'in the history of Copernicus, that while he himself was zealously engaged in establishing a system in direct opposition to the faith of the catholic church, he should have viewed with indifference, and even with hostility, the great reformation which Luther was accomplishing in Germany. An edict was even issued by Maurice, bishop of Ermeland, in 1526, and signed by Copernicus and the other canons, the first article of which was directed against the exertions of Luther; and it is certainly a remarkable circumstance that the diocese of Ermeland, illuminated by the wisdom of Copernicus, should have preserved the catholic religion while all the surrounding provinces had embraced the doctrines of the reformation.' [D.B.]

COPLESTON, Right Rev. E., bishop of Llandaff, disting. for his polemical wr., 1776–1849.

COPLEY, John Singleton, father of Lord Lyndhurst, dist. as an historical painter, 1738–1815.

COPONIUS, a gov. of Judæa, time of Augustus.

COQUEBERT-MONTBRET, C. S., Baron De, a Fr. natural., phy., and wr. on statistics, 1755–1831.

COQUILLE, William, a Fr. jurist, 1523–1603.

CORAY, Diamant, a Gr. patriot and scholar, dist. in the revival of Gr. independence, 1748–1835.

CORBET, Richard, an Engl. prelate, better known as a wr. of humorous poetry, 1582–1635.

CORBIAN, P. De, a Provençal poet, 13th c.

CORDARA, Julius Cæsar, a learned Ital. Jesuit, known as a literary satirist and his., 1704–1790.

CORDAY, Charlotte, properly Marianne Charlotte Corday D'Armans. Charlotte Corday is one of those rare characters in history which it is impossible to contemplate without a feeling of enthusiastic admiration, and with respect to whom we are willing that the judgment should remain in suspense rather than conclude against the instincts of the heart. She was born at St. Saturnin, near Séez, in Normandy, 1768, and, as her name testifies, was the daughter of a family belonging to the higher classes of society. She was educated in the retirement of a convent, but having a fine understanding and indomitable spirit, she seems to have followed the bent of her own genius, and formed her mind to the classic models of antiquity. In the bosom of her family she pursued these studies with unabated enthusiasm, and as the progress of the revolution, and the dispersion of the Girondins, made her acquainted with a Louvet and a Barbaroux, it is not surprising that her attention was excited by the spectacle of the squalid, blood-thirsty Marat presiding at the sacrifice of all that was noblest and worthiest of her heart's love in her poor country. It has been said that she struck the blow which has rendered her name immortal in revenge of her lover, M. Belsunce, one of the officers in the garrison of Caen, but this supposition is far from well-founded, and we prefer for many reasons her own declaration:—'I killed one man to save a hundred thousand; a villain (un scélérat) to save innocents; a ferocious wild beast to give repose to my country!' How she effected her purpose, and how she paid the sad penalty afterwards, we are under the necessity of relating in few words. Her resolve was formed, as she declared at the bar of Fouquier Tinville, after the proscriptions of the 31st of May, 1793, which is sufficient of itself to prove that she was not moved to it by the murder of M. Belsunce, who was killed in 1790, though it cannot be doubted that the appalling manner of his death must have affected her with a lasting horror of the excesses of sansculottism. She left home secretly, and arrived at Paris on the 9th of July, with an introduction to Duperret, with whom she transacted some business connected with certain family papers in the course of the next day or two. On Saturday the 13th she purchased a large knife, and at seven o'clock in the evening procured admittance to Marat with this weapon concealed under her garments. She had obtained this interview by writing to him that she was from the seat of rebellion, and would 'put it in his power to do France a great service.' Marat was in his bath, with a stool by his side to write upon, and entering into conversation with Charlotte, he penned with ferocious joy the fresh list of victims with which she pretended to supply him. At the instant when he turned aside, muttering of the chastisement they should receive, Charlotte with desperate determination, plunged her knife into his heart. Her aim was so sure that the monster could only exclaim as he choked with blood,—'A moi, ma chere amie je me meurs,' (Help dear, I am killed!) and instantly expired. It would not be easy to exaggerate the sublime attitude of this beautiful young girl, with her long dark hair and flushed cheek for one moment, and how submissively the next she surrendered herself to the gensdarmes. Her self-possession, sincerity, and maidenly modesty at the trial, were marvellous in the midst of the tumult that agitated Paris. The evidence was prepared, and Tinville commenced the proceedings by addressing some questions of form to Charlotte:—'All these details of form are needless,' she said. 'It was I who killed Marat.' 'What instigated you?' 'His crimes.' 'What do you mean by his crimes?' 'The ill that he has done to France since the revolution, and which he would yet do.' 'By whom was this assassination suggested to you?' 'I alone concluded upon it.' 'What are the refugee deputies doing at Caen?' 'They are waiting till the end of anarchy shall enable them to return to their posts.' 'Was it to a sworn or an unsworn priest that you were accustomed to confess at Caen?' 'I neither confessed to the one nor the other.' 'What end did you propose to gain by killing Marat?' 'To put an end to the troubles of the French people.' 'How long since did you form this project?' 'Since the proscription of the deputies of the people on the 31st of May.' 'It is from the journals, then, that you have judged Marat to be an anarchist?' 'Yes; I knew that he had brutalized the French.' And then, raising her voice to prevail over the confusion which arose in the hall:—'J'ai tué un homme pour en sauver cent mille; un scélérat pour sauver des innocents; une bête féroce, pour donner le repos à mon pays. I was a republican before the revolution, I never wanted energy.' 'What do you mean by energy?' 'I mean by energy the feeling of those who are willing to forget their own interests for the sake of their country.' Such answers astonished her judges, and under the circumstances they are the signs of no ordinary understanding. It is not surprising that many took off their hats as she went to the place of execution, clothed as a murderess in a red smock, and that one young man should propose the erection of a monument to her memory, with the inscription, 'Greater than Brutus!' She was guillotined, 17th July, 1793. [E.R.]

CORDERIUS, the Latinized name of MATHURIN CORDIER, author of 'Colloquies,' 1479-1564.

CORDERO, J. M., a Spanish gram., 1520-1584.

CORDINER, CHARLES, a Scot. clergyman, antiquarian, and wr. on the picturesque, &c., 1746-1794.

CORDOVA, ALPH. DE, a Span. astron., 15th c.

CORDOVA, JOSE M., a comp. in arms of Bolivar, from whom he revolted, and was slain 1829.

CORDOVA, P. DE, a Spanish painter, 16th c.

CORDUS, EURIC, a Ger. phys. and poet, d. 1538.

COREAT, F., a Spanish voyager, 1648-1708.

CORELLI, ARCANGELO, called the founder of the Roman school of music, was born at Fusignano in the Bolognese territory in 1653. He is said to have received his instruction in composition from Simoncelli, and on the violin from Bassoni of Bologna. In 1672 he was in Paris for a short time, but made no impression. In 1680 he visited Germany, and was in the service of the duke of Bavaria. He returned to Rome in 1682, and between this year and 1694, when he was principal violinist at Rome, he published his celebrated sonatas for violin and violoncello. From that period up till almost the present time, these sonatas have been amongst the first studies which the great masters of the violin have put into the hands of their pupils. His greatest works, the Twelve Concertos, were long known before they were printed. Corelli died at Rome on the 18th January, 1713, and was buried in the church of Santa Maria della Rotunda (the ancient Pantheon), where a monument, surmounted with a marble bust, was erected to his memory. Corelli was amiable and gentle in his manners, and his feelings were as remarkably sensitive. He received the surname of Il Divino from his Italian compatriots, and was usually called 'Famosissimo professore di violin.' [J.M.]

CORINNÆ, a lyric Gr. poetess, 5th cent. B.C.

CORIO, BERNARD, a Spanish hist., 1459-1519.

CORIOLANUS, CAIUS MARCIUS, a Roman general, so named from Corioli, the capital of the Volscians, captured by him, 5th century B.C.

CORMONTAIGNÉ, a Fr. milit. engin., d. 1752.

CORNARIUS, J., a phys. of Saxony, 1500-58.

CORNARO, the name of a patrician family of Venice, of whom three were doges of the republic, the first, 1365-1368; the second, 1625-1629; the third, 1709-1722. CATHARINE, descended from the first, was queen of Cyprus, d. 1510. LUDOVICO, another member of the family, is celebrated for his great age, and works on regimen, 1467-1566; and LUCRETIA HELENA, as a poetess and learned writer, 1646-1684.

CORNEILLE, a pope of Rome, 251-252.

CORNEILLE, MICHEL, a French painter and engraver, 1601-1664. His son, of the same name and profession, 1642-1708. A second son, JEAN BAPTISTE, also a painter, and writer on the art of painting, 1646-1695.

CORNEILLE, PIERRE, named 'The Great' by his admiring contemporaries, was the first, in the order of time, among those brilliant writers who did honour to France during the reign of Louis XIV. He had not been preceded by any dramatic writer whose genius was powerful enough to preserve his name in general remembrance; and, himself preceding Molière by a good many years, and Racine by a whole generation, he learned but in part, and obeyed with reluctance, those formal rules which French critics were beginning to teach, and to which the French drama was gradually submitting itself. His countrymen are often much at a loss to reconcile their dislike to his irregularities in form, with the pride they feel in his well-won fame, and the impression which they cannot help receiving from his magnificent pictures of heroically idealized nature.—Corneille, born at Rouen in 1606, was the son of a lawyer, and himself attempted the same profession. But as early as his twenty-third year, he entered on an uninterrupted course of devotion to dramatic composition. His first attempts were six rhymed comedies, and the strong but declamatory tragedy of 'Médée.' These pieces were received with applause in a time when there was nothing better, but are now admitted to have been so feeble as to give but poor presage of the strength which worked within him. He was saved from prosecuting this career by being imprudent enough to offend Cardinal Richelieu, who had chosen him as one of the men of genius who were to found his French Academy. Retiring to Rouen, he turned his thoughts to tragedy, and studied the Spanish language to have at his command the dramatic stores which it already possessed: an old courtier, who happened to have sought repose in Normandy, is said to have been his adviser on both points. The fruits appeared in 1636, when he presented his romantic tragedy 'The Cid.' Its success was prodigious, and was at length allowed to be deserved, even by the academicians who wished to flatter the resentments of Richelieu. It is the most famous, and perhaps the greatest, of all Corneille's works. It is alike admirable for its skill of construction, its chivalrous dignity of sentiment, and the dramatic power with which it depicts the conflict of opposing passions. The poet, however, was sneered at for having freely borrowed incidents and ideas from a Spanish play; and he threw himself boldly on his own resources in his next two works, which stand, with the 'Cid,' among his masterpieces. In 'Horace' he dramatized, with a defective plan, but with great force of passion, and several very striking bursts of sentiment, the Roman combat of the Horatii and Curatii; and on 'Cinna,' celebrating Augustus and the Romans of his age, he bestowed an artful dexterity of management which has recommended it, in spite of its artificiality of feeling, to the especial favour of the French critics. These two fine works, appearing in 1639, were immediately followed by a worthy successor, the 'Polyeucte,' a tragedy of Christian martyrdom. Soon afterwards came 'La Mort de Pompée,' which is fine in some parts; and 'Le Menteur,' the only one of its author's comedies that is held worthy of him, and pronounced to have been the earliest comedy of intrigue and character which did credit to French literature. It was imitated from the Spanish, and has itself been imitated in English by Steele and translated by Foote. 'Rodogune' was thought by the poet to be his best work; and its fifth act is declared by Voltaire to be the finest effort of the French drama. More philosophical critics detect, in this imposing tragedy, traces of that over-charged and unnatural turn of thought and sentiment which began to show itself more and more in Corneille's plays, and which, with not unfrequent feebleness, indicated that the rich mine was nearly wrought out. The acknowledged failure of 'Pertharite' in 1653, warned him to pause; and for six years he produced nothing but a versified translation of Thomas à Kempis. Nor did he add to his fame by the few works which he produced after returning to the stage in 1659. These, though not without flashes of the ancient energy, are acknowledged to be on the whole weak; and they abound in those argumentative and declamatory orations, the occasional intrusion of which into his best plays is confessed by his most favourable critics. Among the critics of Corneille, he himself must be numbered with honour. The remarks which he published with several of his earlier pieces, contain some admirable criticism. In private life he was an unassuming and plain man, who was always most at his ease in the bosom of his own family. He died in 1684.—His younger brother, THOMAS, though now forgotten, was in his day a very popular dramatist, and famous for his readiness of versification. The two brothers, whose wives were sisters, lived in the same house; and it is said that, when Pierre wanted a rhyme, he used to lift a trap-door and call on Thomas for assistance. [W.S.]

CORNELIA, a Roman lady, daughter of Scipio Africanus, and mother of the Gracchi, 2d ct. B.C.

CORNELIS, C., a Dutch painter, 1562-1638.

CORNELISON, CORNELIS, a Dutchman, admiral of the fleet sent by the united provinces in 1594, under conduct of William Barentz.

CORNELIUS-NEPOS, a Latin hist., 1st c. B.C.

CORNETTE, CLAUDE MELCHIOR, a French physician and chemist, 1744-1794.

CORNIANI, J. B., an Italian dram., 1742-1813.

CORNUTI, J. P., a French botanist, 1600-1651.

CORNWALLIS, SIR CHARLES, an English ambassador time of James I., d. 1630. His son, WILLIAM, author of essays published 1632.

CORNWALLIS, CHARLES, Marquis Cornwallis, was born 31st Dec., 1738. He entered the army early, and obtained deserved promotion and credit in the last campaign of the seven years' war. He served actively and honourably as major-general under Howe and Clinton in the first year of the American war, and in 1780 he held an independent command. He gained several victories, but was at last shut up and besieged in York Town, where he was obliged to surrender himself and his army, after an obstinate and gallant defence, on October 19, 1781. In 1786 Lord Cornwallis went to India as commander-in-chief and governor-general. He signalized his rule there by the military advantages that he gained over Tippoo Saib, and by his honesty and vigour as an administrative reformer. After his return from India he was, in 1798, made lord-lieutenant in Ireland, where he put down the rebellion that he found raging there. His humanity and his skill in civil government did more even than his military talents towards restoring order in that unhappy country. In 1805 he was a second time made governor of India; but his health was now shattered. He was suffering severely when he landed at Calcutta; but he exerted himself usefully in the introduction of several salutary measures in the civil department of the Indian service; and then endeavoured to put himself at the head of the army, which was actively engaged in the upper provinces. But the old warrior's strength failed him, and he died at Ghazepore, on his way to head-quarters, on 5th October, 1805. [E.S.C.]

CORONA, LEO, a Venetian painter, 1561-1605.

CORONELLI, M. V., a Venet. geog., 1650-1718.

CORRADO, C., a painter of Naples, 1698-1768.

CORRADO, QUINTO M., a Latin au., 1508-1575.

CORRARO, G., a Venet. moralist, 1411-1464.

CORREA, P. P., a Portuguese captain, 13th c.

CORREA, TH., a rhetoric. and poet, 1537-1595.

CORREA-DE-SAA, SALVADOR, a Portuguese admiral, and governor of Brazil, 1594-1680.

CORREA-DA-SERRA, J. F., a distinguished Portuguese botanist, and minister plenipotentiary to the United States, 1750-1823.

CORREGGIO. ANTONIO ALLEGRI, commonly called CORREGGIO from his birth-place, was born about 1493-4, and appears to have first studied painting under Tonino Bartolotto of Correggio; in 1519 he was established as a painter at Parma. The celebrated cupola of Parma was commenced in 1520, and in 1522 Correggio undertook the great works of the dome of the cathedral; in the former representing the ascension of Christ, and in the latter, the assumption of the Virgin, both of which series are now admirably engraved by the Cav. Toschi. The frescoes of the cathedral, left unfinished by Correggio, were completed by his pupil Giorgio Gandini. Correggio died of a fever at his native place in 1534, in his forty-first year only.—Correggio's great reputation rests chiefly upon the above mentioned frescoes, but he had executed many excellent oil pictures before he proceeded to Parma in 1519. All his pictures are conspicuous for a remarkable play of foreshortenings, a powerful and delicate chiaroscuro, or light and shade, and a graceful grouping of forms.—The 'Notte,' or night, of Correggio, in the Gallery of Dresden, is a picture of the nativity of Christ, in which the light proceeds from the body of the infant Saviour.—(Pungileoni, Memorie Istoriche di Antonio Allegri detto il Correggio, Parma, 1827-21. Sketches of the Lives of Correggio and Parmigiano, London, 1823.) [R.N.W.]

CORSINI, EDW., an Ital. savant, 1702-1765.

CORTE, J. DE LA, a Spanish historical painter, 1597-1660. His son, GABRIEL, eminent as a flower painter, 1648-1694.

CORTE, BARTH., an Ital. med. au., 1666-1738.

CORTE, GOTTLIEB, a learned Ger., 1698-1731.

CORTEREAL, G., a Portug. navig., abt. 1500.

CORTEREAL, J., a Portuguese poet, d. 1593.

CORTEREAL, JOHN VAZ COSTA, a gentleman of the household of Alphonso V. of Portugal; he is said to have discovered Newfoundland about the year 1463. His son, GASPAR, sailed from Lisbon in the year 1500, and discovered Labrador and Greenland. In May, 1501, he again left Lisbon, with two ships, in hopes of finding a N.W. passage to India; a storm separated the ships on the coast

1569. CHARLES, his brother, grand falconer, and statesman under Henry IV., d. 1621. J. P. TIMOLEON, marshal, 1698-1784. L. J. TIMOLEON, Duc De Cossé, killed at Robbach, 1757. L. HERCULES TIMOLEON DE COSSE-BRISSAC, gov. of Paris, b. 1734, com.-gen. of the constitutional guard of the king 1791, killed at the massacre of Versailles, 1792

COSTA, F. DE MENDOEN, a Port. lit., d. 1820.

COSTARD, GEORGE, an Engl. astr., 1710-1782.

COSTER, J. L., a Dutch printer, 1370-1439.

COSTER, SAMUEL, a Dutch dramatist, 17th c.

COSWAY, RICHARD, an Engl. art., 1731-1821.

COTES, FRANCIS, an Engl. artist, d. 1770.

COTES, ROG., 1682-1716. Cotes was the friend of Newton, who cherished high admiration for him; and he wrote that excellent preface still attached to the 'Principia.' He discovered the remarkable property of the circle which passes under the name of the Cotesian Theorem; and of which much use has been subsequently made; and he contributed to several other departments of pure and mixed mathematics. Had Cotes lived he would have been one of the most distinguished scientific men that ever adorned England.

COTIN, CHS., a Fr. poet and eccles., 1604-1682.

COTTA, J., a Latin poet, died 1511.

COTTA, J. F., a German theologian, 1701-1779.

COTTA, J. G., Baron De Cottendorf, distin. for his enterprise in newsp. property, 1764-1832.

COTTA, L. A., an Ital. antiquarian, 1645-1719.

COTTA, LUCIUS AURELIUS, Rom. con., 75 B.C.

COTTA, MARCUS AURELIUS, Rom. con., 74 B.C.

COTTIUS, a prince of Cisalpine Gaul in the age of Augustus, from whom the Cottien Alps are named.

COTTON, CHS., a burlesque Engl. poet, 17th c.

COTTON, NATH., a phys. and poet, 1707-1788.

COTTON, P., confessor of Henry IV. and Louis XIII., procured the recall of the Jesuits, 1564-1629.

COTTON, SIR R. B., an em. antiq., col. of the library of that name in the Brit. Mus., 1570-1631.

COTYS, the name of several ancient kings of Thrace, Cappadocia, and the Cimmerian Bosphorus.

COUDRETTE, a Fr. hist. of the Jesuits, d. 1774.

COUPLET, CL. AN., a Fr. mechan., 1642-1722.

COUPLET, PHILIP, a Fr. mission., 1628-1692.

COURAYER, P. F. LE, a Fr. ecclesiastic, persecuted for his opinions, d. in London, 1681-1776.

COURIER, P. L., a French classical scholar and political writer, born 1772, assassinated 1825.

COURNAND, ANT. DE, a Fr. poet, 1747-1814.

COURT-DE-GEBELIN, ANTH., a French minister, author of 'Le Monde Primitif,' 1725-1784.

COURTILZ-DE-SANDRAS, GATIEN DE, a Fr. bio., au. of many scandalous disclosures, 1644-1712.

COURTIVRON, MQS. DE, a math., 1715-1785.

COURTNEY, JOHN, a polit., time of Fox, au. of 'Reflections on French Revolution,' &c., d. 1816.

COURTNEY, WILLIAM, abp. of Canterbury and lord chancellor of England, notorious for his persecution of the Lollards, 1341-1396.

COURTOIS, JAMES, a Fr. painter and engraver, celebrated for his battle-pieces, 1621-1676. His brother WILLIAM, an hist. painter, 1628-1679.

COUSIN, GILBERT, a learned Fr. ecclesiastic, persecuted as a heretic, and d. in prison, 1506-1567.

COUSIN, J., a Fr. painter and sculp., 1520-1590.

COUSIN, LOUIS, a Fr. historian, 1627-1707.

COUSTON, N., a Fr. sculp., 1658-1733. His brother WILLIAM, also a sculp., 1678-1746. The son of William, same name and prof., 1716-1777.

COUTHON, GEORGES, is one of those problematical characters in the French revolution upon whom it is difficult to pass judgment, though nothing is easier than to call them hard names, and to hold them up, in general terms, to the execration of mankind. He was born in 1756, and was president of the tribunal at Clermont when the revolution broke out; and though his lower extremities were paralyzed, so that he was compelled to speak sitting, he had been remarkable for his eloquence as an advocate. His first act as a member of the legislative assembly was to procure the abolition of the forms which distinguished the king as sovereign, declaring at the end of his address that 'He would have no other majesty than the Divine majesty and the majesty of the people.' As a member of the convention he voted for the death of the king without appeal and without delay. He acted with the party of the Mountain, and was mainly instrumental in the overthrow of the Girondins, and on the 2d of June proposed the arrest of the twenty-two deputies, and of the ministers Clavière and Lebrun. His conduct on all these occasions procured his election to the Comité de Salut Public, where he acted with St. Just and Robespierre. It was upon his proposition that the convention declared the English government to be guilty of 'lèse-humanité,' and that Pitt was the 'enemy of the human race.' He was at the taking of Lyons, and devoted many of its fine buildings to destruction, for which purpose he was carried from place to place in a chair, bearing a wooden mallet, with which he struck the unfortunate edifice, repeating the formula, 'La loi te frappe,' (the law strikes thee,) after which the work of destruction might be commenced. The charge of cruelty made against him is founded principally on the decree, of which he was the author, for facilitating arrests, and giving new vigour and facility to the revolutionary tribunal, known as the decree of the 22d Prairial; but it is some answer to this, if Robespierre's opinion of his friend is worth anything, that when Couthon was proposed to him for a new commission among the disaffected, he answered contemptuously,—'Bah! he cried like a woman over the punishment of the rebellious Lyonnese!' It is certain that the words of Couthon may often be cited against him, as the test, for example, which he gave when the Jacobins were to be purged of all but the ultra democrats, 'What hast thou done to be hanged if counter-revolution should arrive?' but the question is, what these words really implied under the circumstances, and with what degree of earnestness were they uttered? Couthon was faithful to Robespierre to the last; and on the 9th Thermidor endeavoured to kill himself with a poignard, but wanted nerve, and was carried bleeding to the guillotine. His features were mild and pleasing, and his expression remarkable for good-nature. [E.R.]

COUTO, DIEGO DE, a Portug. hist., 1542-1616.

COUTTS, THOS., a dist. Lon. banker, d. 1821.

COVELL, J., D.D., an. of a work on the Greek Ch.; chapl. to the Eng. embassy in Turkey, d. 1722.

COVENTRY, A., an Engl. phys., 1766-1831.

COVENTRY, H., a man of letters, d. 1752.

COVENTRY, J., an Engl. mechan., 1735-1812.

COVERDALE, MILES, well kn. as one of the first Eng. reformers, and transl. of the Bible, 1499-1580.

COVERTE, R., an Engl. navigator, 17th cent.

COVILHAM, PEDRO DE, a Port. travel., thirty-three years resident in Abyssinia, 16th century.

COWARD, WM., an English physician and psychologist, commencement of the last century.

COWLEY, ABRAHAM, regarded by Dr. Johnson as the chief of metaph. poets, and equally cel. as a naturalist, b. in London 1618, buried in Westmin. Abbey by the side of Chaucer and Spenser, 1667.

COWLEY, HANNAH, a dram. wr., 1743-1809.

COWLEY, HENRY WELLESLY, Lord, b. 1773, in India with his brother Lord Wellesly 1797, amb. to Vienna 1823-1831, to Paris 1841, died 1847.

COWPER, WM., a Scotch prelate, 1566-1619.

COWPER, WM., an Engl. anatom., 1666-1709.

COWPER, WM., Earl, a disting. lawyer and statesman, reign of Queen Anne, d. 1723.

COWPER, WILLIAM, was the grand-nephew of the Lord Chancellor Cowper, and grandson of a judge in the Court of Common Pleas. His father was rector of Great Berkhamstead in Hertfordshire; and there the poet was born in 1731. After having spent two years of misery in a country school, he was placed at Westminster School, where he remained, comfortable and lively, till he was eighteen years old. He was then articled to a solicitor in London, was called to the bar in 1754, and resided in the Middle Temple for eleven years, neglecting law, contributing a few papers to 'The Connoisseur,' and gradually exhausting his little patrimony. In 1763 one of his powerful kinsmen appointed him to two clerkships in the House of Lords. Doubts of his competency, and the fear of appearance in public assemblies, developed the tendency to insanity which lurked within him. He made several attempts to destroy himself; and was consigned for eighteen months to a lunatic asylum at St. Albans. On his release in 1765, subsisting on the remnant of his property, with assistance from relatives, he took up his residence at Huntingdon, and became a boarder in the house of Mr. Unwin, a clergyman. That gentleman dying two years afterwards, the widow and Cowper removed to Olney in Buckinghamshire. John Newton was curate of the place; and his religious views accorded with those which had been adopted by the poet. In 1776 appeared the 'Olney Hymns,' of which some of the best were furnished by Cowper; but it was only about the time of their publication that the unhappy poet was freed from a second confinement, which had lasted for nearly four years.—Mrs. Unwin, anxious to engage his mind safely, urged him to prosecute verse-making. 'The Progress of Error' was written; 'Truth,' 'Table-Talk,' and 'Expostulation,' followed it; and these with other poems made up a volume, which was published in 1782, receiving the approbation of Johnson and other critics, but meeting little attention from the public. The poet's fame, however, was decisively established by his next volume, which, appearing in 1785, contained 'The Task' and other poems. The publication of 'The Task,' indeed, was an era in the history of English poetry. It was the point of transition from the eighteenth century to the nineteenth. Natural language was substituted for artificial; themes of universal interest were handled, instead of such as told only on a few cultivated minds; even the seriousness and solemnity of the leading tone had a striking attraction, while it was relieved both by strains of pathos and touches of satiric humour. More novel and original than anything else were those minute and faithful delineations of external scenery, to which no parallel had been seen since the 'Seasons.' Perhaps, also, the didactic form of Cowper's poems, giving them an equivocal character which hovers continually between poetry and argumentation, was an additional recommendation to readers who had long been unaccustomed to the finer and higher kinds of poetical invention.—Cowper now spent six years on his translation of Homer, which appeared in 1791. The neglect which it has experienced is certainly undeserved, at least by his 'Odyssey.' His mental alienation, which had repeatedly threatened him with a return, overcame him completely in 1794; and the last six years of his life produced hardly any literary fruits except the pathetic 'Castaway.' The death of his dear friend Mrs. Unwin, in 1796, threw him into a gloom which was hardly ever again dispelled, and he died in 1800. [W.S.]

COX, RICHARD, an Irish historian, 1650-1733.

COX, RICHARD, bishop of Ely in the reign of Elizabeth, a controversial wr., 1499-1531.

COXE, WM., an English historian, 1747-1828.

COXETER, TH., a miscell. writer, 1689-1747.

COYPEL, NOEL, a Fr. hist. painter, 1638-1707. ANTHONY, son and pupil of Noel, 1661-1722. CH. ANTONY, son of the latter, 1694-1752. NOEL NICHOLAS, a younger son of Noel, and br. of Anthony, 1692-1734.

COYSEVOX, ANTH., a Fr. sculp., 1640-1720.

COYTHIER, JAMES, physician to Louis XI.

COZENS, ALEX., a Russian painter, d. 1786.

COZZA, F., a Spanish painter, 1605-1682.

COZZANDO, LEO, an Ital. histor., 1620-1702.

[Birth-place of Crabbe.]

CRABBE, GEORGE, a poet whose truth to nature and strength of homely pathos atone for deficiency in ideal elevation, was born in 1754, at Aldborough in Suffolk, where his father was collector of salt duties. He went through an apprenticeship to a surgeon, and for a short while attempted practice; but, always attached to letters rather than business, he had little success, and came to London in 1780 to seek his fortune. When the failure of his first poem, 'The Candidate,' had reduced him to great distress, and when no attention had been paid to his appeals to distinguished persons locally connected with his birth-place, he boldly laid his case before Edmund Burke. This great man read his manuscripts, received him into his house at Beaconsfield, and introduced him to his friends; and the poem of 'The Library,' published on his recommendation, was received with great applause. His reputation was increased by 'The Village,' which appeared in 1783; and the publication of 'The Newspaper' in 1785, closed the first series of his works. In the meantime, orders having been obtained for him, he became chaplain to the duke of Rutland, married happily, and received in succession several moderate preferments. In 1807 he published 'The Parish Register,' to which were added 'Sir Eustace Grey,' and other small poems; and 'The Borough,' the most various and energetic of his works, made its appearance in 1810. In 1813, soon after the death of his wife, he was presented to the living of Trowbridge in Wiltshire, where he spent the remainder of his quiet and honourable life. His 'Tales of the Hall' were published in 1819. His death took place in 1832. [W.S.]

CRABBE, Geo., A.M., an. of a 'Dict. of Synonyms,' and other works, d. Dec. 4, 1851, aged 72.

CRABETH, F., a Flemish painter, 16th cent.

CRADDOCK, S., a nonconformist divine, author of works on practical religion, b. 1620. His brother Zachary, author of sermons, 1633-1695.

CRADDOCKE, Luke, an Eng. painter, d. 1717.

CRAIG, John, a Scotch mathem., 17th cent.

CRAIG, N., a savant of Denmark, 1549-1602.

CRAIG, Sir Th., a Scotch lawyer, 1548-1608.

CRAIG, Wm., a Scotch barrister and fugitive writer, succ. Lord Hailes as judge, 1745-1813.

CRAMER, C. G., a Ger. novelist, 1758-1817.

CRAMER, Fr., a Ger. musician, 1772-1848.

CRAMER, G., a Swiss geometrician, 1704-1752.

CRAMER, J. A., a Ger. mis. writer, 1723-88.

CRAMER, J. A., a Ger. mineralogist, 1710-77.

CRAMER, J. A., dean of Carlisle, celebrated as an antiquarian writer on classical subjects; born in Switzerland 1793, died 1848.

CRAMOISY, S., a French printer, 17th cent.

CRANACH, Lucas, a Ger. painter, 1472-1553.

CRANMER, Thomas, was born at Aslacton in the county of Nottingham on the 2d July, 1489. He entered Jesus College in 1503, became a fellow in 1510-11, and a doctor of divinity in 1523. His opinions on the first marriage of Henry VIII. with his brother's widow introduced him to the king. The favourite's multifarious efforts were in vain to procure a divorce from the papal authorities, but as a reward for his services, though he had been twice married, he was raised by royal favour to the see of Canterbury. On 23d May, 1533, the archbishop declared the king's marriage to be null and void, and five days afterwards he married Henry to Anne Boleyn. Cranmer now became occupied with more meritorious work, the translation of the Bible, and the great work of the English reformation. At Henry's death, he was one of the council of regency to Edward VI., and a liturgy, homilies, and articles were composed under royal patronage. When the young monarch died, and Mary at length ascended the throne, Cranmer, who had been drawn into the plot on behalf of the Lady Jane, was summoned before the council, then committed to the Tower, and finally sent to the prison of Bocardo at Oxford. He was at length, by Pope Paul IV., declared guilty of heresy, &c. On the 20th of March, the night before his martyrdom, he was entrapped into a written recantation. On the next day, in St. Mary's church, he solemnly declared 'that his hand had offended in writing contrary to his heart.' 'My hand,' said he, 'shall first be punished. For if I may come to the fire, it shall first be burned.' When he was brought to the stake, erected opposite Baliol College, he fulfilled this resolution with a marvellous and unexpected intrepidity, still crying 'this unworthy hand!' But there was a sad infirmity in Cranmer's nature, and his great faults were an apparent vacillation and a want of decision and firmness. Yet he was honoured to do a great work in his time. 'He was at once,' says Macaulay, 'a divine and a courtier,' and the attempted combination of the two characters created those inconsistencies which soiled the purity of his life, and detracted from the merit of his actions. [J.E.]

CRASHAW, Richard, an Engl. poet, d. 1650.

CRASSO, Laurence, a Neap. hist., d. 1683.

CRASSUS, Lucius L., a Ro. orator, 150-87 B.C.

CRASSUS, M. L., a Rom. triumvir, k. 53 B.C.

CRATES, a philos. of Thebes, 4th cent. B.C.

CRATINUS, a Greek poet, 528-431 B.C.

CRATO DE CRAFTHEIM, a physician and literary savant of Germany, 1519-1585.

CRAUFURD, Quentin, a Sco. wr., 1743-1819.

CRAWFORD, Adair, an English physician and naturalist, 1749-1795.

CRAWFORD, David, a Scotch hist., d. 1726.

CRAYER, G. De, a Flem. painter, 1582-1669.

CREBILLON, Prosper Jolyot De, a French tragic poet, held in the highest respect by his countrymen, 1674-1762. His son, Claude Prosper, a novelist, of no great repute, 1707-1777.

CREIGHTON, R., D.D., an English composer, an. of 'I will arise and go to my Father,' d. 1736.

CRELLIUS, J., a Ger. musician, 1590-1633.

CREMILLES, L. H. Boyer De, a French officer, in the army of Flanders, 1700-1768.

CRESCENZI, J. B., an It. artist, 1595-1660.

CRESCENZI, Pietro, a wr. on agric., regarded as the restorer of the science in Europe, b. 1230.

CRESCIMBENI, J. M., an Ital. poet, 1663-1728.

CRESTIN, J., a religious prot. writer, d. 1572.

CRESSEY, H. P., a Rom. Cath. wr., d. 1674.

CRESLIN, the pseudonym of William Du Bois, a French poet and chronicler, d. 1525.

CRETI, Donato, a pain. of Bologna, 1671-1749.

CREUTZ, Gustav. Ph. Count De, a Swed. diplom. and man of letters, chanc. of Upsala 1726-85.

CREUZE-LA-TOUCHE, J. Ant., a Fr. economist, dep. to the assem. and conv., &c., 1749-1800.

CREVIER, J. B. L., a French hist., 1693-1765.

CRICHTON, James, a gentleman of Scotland, surnamed the 'Admirable' on account of his surpassing abilities and acquirements, 1560-1583.

CRIGHTON, R., bp. of Bath and Wells, d. 1672.

CRILLON, the name of sev. illust. Frenchmen of Ital. descent. 1. Louis De Balbe De Berton De Crillon, one of the most hon. and valiant captains of the 16th cent., 1541-1616. 2. Louis De Berton De Balbe De Quiers Duc De ments which subsequent governments were compelled unwillingly to follow. His latter days were spent in anxiety and depression, if not remorse, and he died on 3d September, 1659. [J.H.B.]

CROMWELL, THOS., a statesman and adhrnt. of Wolsey, and afterw. of Henry VIII., beheaded 1540.

CRONSTED, A. F., a Swed. miner., 1722-1765.

CROSS, M., an English painter, time of Ch. I.

CROWE, WM., an English poet, 1756-1829.

CROWNE, JOHN, a dramatic writer and poet, of the reign of Charles II., by birth an American.

CROXALL, S., a Whig wr. and divine, d. 1752.

CRUDELI, TH., a poet of Tuscany, 1703-1745.

CRUDEN, ALEX., au. of the well-kn. 'Concordance,' by profession a classical teacher and bookseller, a native of Aberdeen, 1701-1770.

CRUIKSHANK, W., an Eng. anat., 1746-1800.

CRUSIUS, CHR., a German phil., 1712-1775.

CRUSIUS, M., a German schol., 1526-1607.

CRUSIUS, T. L., a Saxon engrav., 1730-1769.

CRYM-GUERAI, khan of Tartary, 1758-1770.

CUBA, J., a German botanist, 15th century.

CUBERO, P., a Spanish miss., 17th century.

CUDWORTH, RALPH, principal of Christ College, Cambridge; a philosopher of considerable eminence, and prodigious learning. Born in Somerset in 1617, died in 1688. Cudworth's life was an unceasing protest against Hobbes; and the theme he proposed to himself was, very suitably, a defence of Human Liberty. He recognized three kinds of Fatalism—equally destructive of responsibility, and of the foundations of Morals: first, Fatalism purely materialistic, suppressing, with the notion of human Liberty, the idea of God, and the reality of spiritual existences—explaining all phenomena, mental and physical, by concourses of atoms: second, that theological Fatalism, common enough in all ages, which resolves good and evil, justice and injustice, into the simple and arbitrary will of God: third, the fatalism of the Stoics, which confounds Providence with the laws of Necessity,—regarding everything as inflexibly pre-ordained. Cudworth's protest against the first description of Fatalism, or his refutation of materialistic Atheism, occupies his ponderous 'Intellectual System of the Universe;' and his effort to rescue the foundations of Right and Wrong from arbitrariness, constitutes the 'Immutable Morality.' He did not live to complete his task by a similar attack on the Stoical, or ultra-Calvinistic form of hostility to human spontaneity. The 'Intellectual System' especially, is a very storehouse of information concerning cosmogonic speculation; nor will the reader fail to detect throughout, marks of independent, and even original thought. It contains, for instance, the germ of the modifications afterwards proposed by Leibnitz, on the argument of Des Cartes, for the being of a God. (See article DES CARTES.) The fault of all the writings of Cudworth, is their too much learning; his positions are overlaid. His works were at first published in folio: an edition of the 'Intellectual System' in 4 vols. 8vo, has been recently edited by Birch.—Cudworth merits a high place in that class of English divines in which we find the names of Gale, Thomas Burnet, and Henry More. [J.P.N.]

CUFAELER, ABR., a Ger. phil., 17th century.

CUFF, HEN., an Eng. schol., execut. for alleged complicity in the treason of the earl of Essex, 1601.

CULLEN, WILLIAM, M.D., 1712-1790, was one of the most remarkable physicians which our country has produced, and took a principal share in elevating the mere art of the practitioner into a science. He was born at Hamilton, Lanarkshire, where his father was chief magistrate. Serving an apprenticeship with a surgeon in Glasgow, after the manner of Roderick Random, young Cullen made several voyages to the West Indies as surgeon in a London trader; but tiring of the monotony of such employment, he settled as a country practitioner at Shotts, in his native county. There he made the acquaintance, and entered into partnership with Dr. William Hunter, who afterwards became so distinguished in London, and here he likewise drew towards him the attention of the duke of Hamilton, to whom he was indebted for being placed in a position which enabled him to exhibit his natural powers. By the terms of agreement between Cullen and Hunter, it was stipulated that each alternately should be allowed to study during the winter session at some college; Cullen chose Edinburgh, and Hunter London; an arrangement which soon terminated their association, as the latter, having obtained employment from Dr. Douglas, never returned. Cullen, who had graduated, was appointed lecturer on chemistry in the university of Glasgow, in 1746, and was afterwards placed in the chair of medicine. But, if we are not mistaken, he also occasionally lectured on chemistry, as we have seen a letter from him to the faculty of the college offering to lecture on chemistry if £30 were given to pay the expenses of the course, and ill-advised parsimony was not the characteristic of that learned body, and Dr. Cullen, on his removal thither, first occupied the chair of chemistry, and subsequently that of medicine. His views of medicine, his enthusiastic love of his profession, his kindness of heart, and his remarkable talents, soon gave an impetus to the scientific study of medicine, which is still felt at the present day. His students not merely respected him as a man of science, but they loved him as one who saw into their hearts, and who, sympathizing with their defects, smoothed their path of study. The important works of Cullen were his 'Nosology,' and his work on medicine, both of which are characterized by admirable arrangement, careful selection, and well-considered deduction—truly wonderful when we consider the limited field of the medical sciences when Cullen wrote. [R.D.T.]

CULLUM, SIR J., an Engl. antiq., 1733-1785.

CULPEPER, SIR T., a miscel. writer, 17th ct.

CULPEPPER, NICH., an apothecary and astrologer, au. of the well-known 'Herbal,' 1616-1654.

CUMANUS, governor of Judæa, mid. of 1st ct.

CUMBERLAND, the name of an Engl. dukedom, reserved for the younger members of the royal family. The most noted of this title is WILLIAM AUGUSTUS, son of George II., cel. as commander at the victory of Culloden, 1721-1765.

CUMBERLAND, RICHARD, an Engl. prelate of great learning, au. of 'De Legibus Naturæ,' written in opposition to Hobbes, to prove that there is a natural code of morals, 1632-1718.

CUMBERLAND, RICHARD, was the great-grandson of Bishop Cumberland, the author of the treatise 'De Legibus Naturæ.' His mother was a daughter of the celebrated Richard Bentley, and the heroine of Byrom's pretty pastoral, 'My time, O ye Muses.' His father, a respectable English clergyman, was, for some years before his death, an Irish bishop. Richard Cumberland was born in his grandfather's house at Cambridge in 1732. He was educated at that university, took his degree as tenth wrangler, and held for some years one of the two lay fellowships of Trinity College. His family withdrew him from his clerical studies to become private secretary to Lord Halifax, then at the head of the board of trade; and after having spent a long time in official duties, he was appointed secretary to the board, and held that place till the abolition of the board in 1782, when he retired on a pension. In 1780 he was sent on a confidential mission to the court of Madrid, where he spent about a year; but the negotiations having failed, and Cumberland's expenditure having much exceeded the scanty advance made to him by the ministry on his departure, he was left, apparently with much injustice, to bear a loss of four or five thousand pounds, which exhausted almost wholly his slender patrimony.—During his official life he had written many occasional and other pieces, and had given to the stage more than one successful comedy. Soon after his return from Spain he settled at Tunbridge Wells, where he resided for many years afterwards, occupied wholly with literary pursuits, and writing with indefatigable industry. He died in 1811. He was an honourable and amiable man: but his literary vanity was excessive; and his irritable susceptibility to criticism, which made Garrick call him 'the man without a skin,' exposed him to being unmercifully caricatured by Sheridan in the character of Sir Fretful Plagiary.—There is hardly any kind of composition, whether in prose or in verse, that Cumberland did not attempt. But most of his efforts were of little value; and in the best of them he was hardly more than fluent and agreeable. His epic poem of 'Calvary' was an utter failure. His series of periodical essays, called 'The Observer,' has much merit in an easy kind of criticism: the best papers are those on the Greek dramatists, the erudition of which he avowed having gleaned from Bentley's papers, but which he embellished by spirited metrical translations of his own. His dramatic pieces, embracing everything from tragedy to opera and farce, amounted to more than fifty, of which the larger number were printed. Among them were several comedies that are still remembered:—'The Brothers,' 'The West Indian,' 'The Jew,' and 'The Wheel of Fortune.' [W.S.]

CUMBERT, a Lombard king, 687-700.

CUNINGHAM, E. F., a Sc. painter, 1742-93.

CUNINGHAM, W., a phys. and astron., 16th c.

CUNNINGHAM, Alex., a Sc. hist., 1654-1737.

CUNNINGHAM, Allan, a popular novelist and biograph. wr., an. of a well-known memoir of Burns, several lyrical poems and ballads, the novel of 'Paul Jones,' 'The Lives of British Painters, Sculptors, and Architects,' &c., born in Dumfriesshire 1786, died in London two days after completing the biography of his friend Sir D. Wilkie, 1842.

CUNNINGHAM, J., an Irish playwght., d. 1773.

CUNO, J. C., a Ger. poet and bot., 1708-1780.

CUPANI, F., a Sicilian botanist, 1657-1711.

CURIO, Caius, a Rom. tribune, killed 47 B.C.

CURIUS-DENTATUS, Marius, an illustrious Roman general, three times consul, 3d cent. B.C.

CURRAN, John Philpot, an Irish barrister and patriot, celebrated for his eloquence, wit, and sarcasm, was born of humble parents in the neighbourhood of Cork, 1750. He studied at one of the Inns in London and was called to the bar in 1775, and in about ten years afterwards took his seat in the Irish House of Commons as member for Doneraile. In 1794 he acquired immense popularity by his defence of Rowan, and for many years at this epoch displayed his brilliant oratory in parliament. From 1806 to 1814 he held the office of master of the rolls, on resigning which he removed to London, where he died 1817.

CURRIE, Jas., an em. Scotch phys. and med. wr., editor and biog. of Burns in 1800, 1756-1805.

CURTI, Jerome, an Ital. painter, 1603-1693.

CURTIS, W., an English botanist, 1746-1799.

CURTIS, Sir Wm., Bart., a well-kn. alderman and representative of the city of London, d. 1829.

CURTIUS, Marcus, a Rom. patriot, 4th c. B.C.

CURTIUS, M. C., a German hist., 1724-1802.

CURTZ, A., a German astronomer, 1600-71.

CUSA, Nicholas De, properly Nicholas Crebs, a dist. astron. and theologian, cardinal legate to Constantinople, author of a refutation of the Koran, first restorer of the Pythagorean doc. of the earth's motion round the sun, &c., 1401-64.

CUSH, the eldest son of Ham, Gen. x. 8, understood to be the father of the Ethiopians.

CUSPINIEN, J., a Ger. historian, 1473-1529.

CUSSON, Peter, a Fr. botanist, 1727-1783.

CUSTINE, Adam Philippe, Count De, a gen. in the army of the Fr. republic, exec. 1793.

CUSTIS, C. F., a Flem. historian, 1704-1752.

CUTHBERT, St., first bishop of Northumberland, fndr. of the monastery of Lindisfarne, d. 686.

CUTLER, Sir J., a royalist of London, d. 1699.

CUTTS, John, a brave English officer, created Baron Cutts of Gowran by Wm. III., known as a poetical writer and friend of Steele, died 1707.

CUVIER, Georges Leopold Chretien Frederic Dagobert, one of the greatest naturalists the world has produced, was born at Montbéliard in 1769. He died in 1832. After finishing his education at Stuttgard, the young Cuvier accepted the situation of tutor in a protestant family in Normandy. Living for some years in that part of France, part of the time on the sea coast, he was enabled to follow up the love for natural history which he had exhibited from his earliest years. The Abbé Tessier, whom the troubles of the times had driven into exile from the capital, introduced him by letter to MM. Jussieu and Geoffroy. Several memoirs written about that time and transmitted to the latter, established his reputation, and procured his admission to two or three of the learned societies in Paris. In 1799 he was appointed successor to Daubenton as professor of natural history at the college of France, and in 1802 he succeeded Mertrud in the chair of comparative anatomy at the Garden of Plants. From that time he devoted himself steadily to the studies which have immortalized his name. His 'Leçons d'Anatomie Comparée,' and the 'Regne Animal,' in which the whole animal kingdom is arranged according to the organization of the beings of which it consists, have raised him to the pinnacle of scientific fame, and established him as perhaps the first naturalist in the world after Linnæus. His numerous memoirs and works upon these subjects show a master mind in the study of zoology; and extending the principles laid down in his comparative anatomy to the study of paleontology, he has been enabled to render immense service to geology. Starting from the law that there is a correlation of forms in organized beings—that all the parts of each individual have mutual relations with each other, tending to produce one end, that of the existence of the being—that each living being has in its nature its own proper functions, and ought therefore to have forms appropriated for that function; and that consequently the analogous parts of all animals have received modifications of form which enable them to be recognized, he was able to ascertain from the inspection of a single fossil bone, not only the family to which it ought to belong, but the genus to which it must be referred. Even the very species of animal was thus to be made out, and the restoration of its external form as it might have lived and died, became in his hands an object of certainty and precision. His 'Regne Animal' has been frequently translated, and forms the basis of all arrangements followed at the present time. Cuvier filled many offices of great importance in the state, particularly connected with educational institutions. Napoleon treated him with much consideration, Louis XVIII. and Charles X. advanced him to honour, and Louis Philippe raised him to the rank of a peer of the realm. [W.B.]

[Statue of Cuvier.]

CUYP, ALBERT, a Dutch painter, 17th cent.

CUYP, J. G., a Dutch painter, 1578-1649.

CYAXARES, k. of Med. and Persia, 634-594 B.C.

CYBO, AARON, viceroy of Naples, 1377-1457.

CYPRIAN, THASCIUS CÆCILIUS, Saint, one of the principal fathers of the Latin church, born at Carthage commencement of the 3d century, electd bp. of Carthage 248, suffrd. martyrdom 258.

CYRENIUS, Rom. gov. of Syria soon after the birth of our Lord, and prev. censor or procurator.

CYRIAC, ST., patriarch of Constnple., 595-606.

CYRIL. There are three saints of this name—the first, a father of the Greek church, patriarch of Jerusalem, 315-386; the second, patr. of Alexandria, and an. of works agst. the Nestorians and other enemies of the faith, 5th ct.; the third, called the apostle of the Slavi, the converter of the Chasars, 9th ct.

CYRIL-LUCAR, patr. of Constnple., 1572-1638.

CYRUS I., or the ELDER, the founder of the Persian empire, was the grandson of Astyages, the last king of Media. Even in the time of Herodotus the story of Cyrus was so much mixed up with fable that it was impossible to separate truth from fiction. Astyages had a daughter named Mandane; and, in consequence of a dream which portended that her offspring should be the master of Asia, he married her to Cambyses, a Persian of good family, but of a quiet and unambitious temper. On the birth of Cyrus, Astyages ordered the infant to be exposed, and intrusted the execution of his cruel order to Harpagus, one of his most faithful attendants. But the herdsman in whose hands the infant was placed for destruction was induced by the entreaties of his wife to rear it as his own son, under the name of Agradates. As is usual in such fabulous narratives, the royal youth gave evidence of his descent by superior talents and noble bearing; and being brought before his grandfather at the age of ten to answer for his severe treatment of the son of a noble Median at play, was discovered by the king to be the son of his daughter. The circumstances of his preservation were then stated, and the boy was sent to his real parents. Astyages forgave the herdsman, but wreaked his vengeance on Harpagus, by murdering his son, and causing his mangled limbs to be served up to his father at a banquet. Harpagus submitted quietly to his fate; but thenceforward meditating revenge, he succeeded not long after in organizing a conspiracy against Astyages, and easily prevailed upon Cyrus

[Tomb of Cyrus.]

to become the leader. Cyrus induced the Persians to join in the revolt; and, after defeating Astyages, took possession of his throne B.C. 559. Crœsus, the rich king of Lydia, and brother-in-law of Astyages, was the first to endeavour to check the usurper, but Cyrus anticipated his design, and took possession of his capital in B.C. 546. The extensive dominions of Crœsus, along with the whole of Upper Asia, soon came under his sway. The most noted event connected with the acquisition of this vast country was the taking of Babylon, the capital of Assyria, of which Labynetus, the Belshazzar of Daniel, was king. Cyrus entered the city by diverting the course of the Euphrates, and introducing his army along the dry bed of the river B.C. 538. Cyrus next directed his efforts against the Massagetæ, a nation of Northern Asia, and offered to marry Tomyris, their queen, who was then a widow. His suit was rejected; and in a battle which ensued he was defeated and slain in B.C. 529, after a reign of twenty-nine years. Such is the narrative of Herodotus. The Cyropædia of Xenophon is an historical romance. The life of Cyrus is of great importance, as being the epoch which forms the chronological link between sacred and profane history. [G.F.]

CYRUS II., or the YOUNGER, was the second son of Darius Nothus, king of Persia, and was appointed by his father satrap of Lydia, Phrygia, and Cappadocia, in Asia Minor, in B.C. 407. On the death of his father, B.C. 404, and the accession of his elder brother Artaxerxes, Cyrus disputed the right of succession, founding his claim on the fact that he was the first-born after his father ascended the throne. For this act of treason he was condemned to death; but his life was preserved through the intercession of his mother, Parysatis, whose favourite son he was, and who had secretly encouraged him in his attempt on the sovereignty. On returning to his province he continued to cherish his ambitious views, and immediately began to make preparations for the execution of his design. By various means he succeeded in quieting the suspicions of his brother, while he endeavoured to bribe the Persians who passed between himself and the court, and raised a body of 13,000 Greeks, on whose assistance he chiefly rested his hopes of success. In the spring of B.C. 401, Cyrus set out from Sardis, and, marching through Asia Minor and Syria, reached the plain of Cunaxa, 500 stadia from Babylon. Here he found Artaxerxes ready to oppose him with an immense army. In the battle which took place, the Greek troops routed the Asiatics who were opposed to them; and Cyrus, rushing into the centre to attack his brother, was slain. The king caused his head and hands to be cut off, and wished it to be believed that he had fallen by his hand. The retreat of the Greeks, as described by Xenophon, who was himself present, forms one of the most interesting chapters in the history of ancient warfare. [G.F.]

CYRUS, FLAVIUS, præfect of Constantinople under Theodosius II., afterwards a bishop, 5th c.

CZACKI, THADDEUS, a Russian statesman, disting. as a benefactor of Poland, 1765-1813.

CZARNIECKI, STEPHEN, a Polish general, defended Cracow agst. Gustav. Adolph., 1599-1664.

CZERNI-GEORGE, the surname of GEORGE PETROVITZ, a native of Servia, who maintained a long struggle for his country's independence, and was acknowledged by the Porte as prince of Servia in 1806. Being deprived in the year following of a part of his possessions, he took up arms again, and retired to Russia in 1813. In 1817, having returned to Turkey, he was captured and executed.

CZERWIACOWSKI, a Polish anatomist, died 1816.

D

DABELOW, CHR. CHRISTIAN, Baron De, a German jurisconsult, author of a 'Commentary on the Code Napoleon,' &c., 1768-1830.

DABENTONE, JEANNE, a reputed prophetess, burned at Paris in the reign of Charles V., 1372.

DACIA, P. DE, a Danish astronomer, 14th ct.

DACIANO, J., an Italian physician, 1520-1576.

DACIER, ANDREW, a classical com. and trans., 1651-1722. His wife, ANNE LEFEVRE DACIER, cel. for her translations from the Greek, 1651-1720.

DACIER, J. B., a French translator, 1742-1833.

DÆDALUS, a Ger. inven. and arch., 10th c. B.C.

DAEHNERT, J. C., a Swed. savant, 1719-1785.

DAENDELS, H. G., a Dutch gen. in the French republican army, promoter of the revol. in Batavia, and gov.-general of the Dutch Indies, 1762-1818.

DAGOBERT. The Frank kings of this name are—DAGOBERT I., successor of his father CLOTHAIRE, 628, d. 638. DAGOBERT II., successor of CHILDERIC, reigned 674-678. DAGOBERT III., successor of his father CHILDEBERT, 711-715.

DAGOBERT, L. A., a Fr. tactician, 1740-1794.

DAGUERRE, L. J. M., an eminent French painter, celebrated for his discovery of the photographic process called 'daguerreotype,' and also for the improvements he introduced in panoramic painting, 1789-1851.

DAGUES-DE-CLAIRFONTAINE, SIM. AND. CAS., a Fr. agri. author and compiler, 1726-1797.

D'AGUESSEAU, H. F. See AGUESSEAU.

DAHLBERG, ERIC, Count, a Swedish marshal, antiquarian author, and designer, 1625-1703.

DAIGNAN, WM., a Fr. med. wr., 1732-1812.

DAILLE, JEAN, minister of the French Reformed church at Charenton, A.D. 1639, and one of the most eloquent preachers of his age. His published works amply justify the high celebrity he enjoyed. He combined the acute argumentative powers of a logician with the exercise of a lively imagination, that enabled him to draw illustrations of his subject from every field of nature; and to these intellectual qualities he added a fervour and pathos that stirred the depths of the human soul. His discourses are characterized by a heart-stirring eloquence, and it has been remarked of him, that he had all the eloquence of Saurin, without any approach to his turgid and bombastic style. The work by which the name of Daillè has long been honourably known in this country is his treatise 'De usu Patrum,' a work designed to check or moderate the excessive reverence which is felt in many quarters for the writers of ecclesiastical antiquity. It rendered an important service to the protestant cause in his own country and times, and may still be consulted with advantage in exposing the semi-Popery of our own day. It was published in French in 1632, in Latin in 1656, and a translation of it into English in 1651, under the title of 'A Treatise concerning the Right Use of the Fathers in the Decision of Controversies that are at this Day in Religion.' Daillè was also the author of several expository works on books of Scripture—the most esteemed, if not the most valuable, of which have appeared in an English dress. His 'Discourses on the Epistle to the Colossians' were translated in 1672, with a preface by Dr. Owen, and of those on the Philippians an elegant English version was given to the world in 1841, by the Rev. James Sherman, minister of Surrey chapel, London. [R.J.]

DALAYRAC, N., a Fr. opera comp., 1753-1809.

DALBERG, Charles Theodore Anthony Marie, Baron De, prince primate of the Catholic Church of Germany, president of the confederation of the Rhine, and grand duke of Constance under Napoleon, 1745-1817. His brother, Wolfgang Heribert, a dramatic poet, 1750-1806. A third brother, J. F. Hughes, a man of letters, d. 1812. The nephew of these, Emeric J., Duc De Dalberg, a min. of state under Napoleon, 1773-1833.

DALBERG, J. K. De, bp. of Worms, 1445-1503.

DALBERG, Nils, a Swed. physician, 1735-1820

DALBERGO, F., an Italian hist., 1706-1768.

D'ALBRET. See Albret.

DALE, Dav., a Scotch mechanic and philanthropist, cel. in the his. of the cotton manuf., 1739-1806.

DALE, R., an American naval com., 1756-1826.

DALECHAMPS, J., a Fr. botanist, 1513-1586.

D'ALEMBERT, Jean Le Rond, one of the most celebrated mathematicians and astronomers of the last century, was born at Paris on the 17th November, 1717. Having been exposed by his mother near the church of St. Jean Le Rond, from which he derived his name, he was taken care of by a glazier's wife, and afterwards provided for by his father, when he had learned the fate of his child. He was educated at the Jansenist college of the Four Nations, and so premature was his intellect, that at the age of ten he had acquired all the knowledge that his masters could convey to him. He was regarded by the Jansenists as a second Pascal, and in order to make the comparison perfect, he was initiated into the mathematical sciences. With a passionate devotion to science, he left the college and took up his residence in the house of his nurse, where he remained for forty years, concealing from her his fame, and generously adding to the little comforts of her lot.—Having, like all other men of original genius, found himself anticipated in his earliest discoveries, he despaired of doing anything that had not been previously done, and abandoning his mathematical studies in despair, he resolved upon following one of the learned professions.—The income of 1,200 livres a-year which his father, M. Destouches, had left him, being insufficient to maintain him in the position which he now occupied, he pursued in succession the studies of law and medicine, and so ardently did he devote himself to the latter, that he banished his mathematical library to the house of a friend. It was in vain, however, that he tried to overcome the earliest and strongest of his passions. His mathematical works gradually found their way back to his house, the profession of medicine was abandoned, and his affections irrevocably fixed on the study of geometry.—At the early age of twenty-four D'Alembert was admitted a member of the Academy of Sciences, and in 1741 he published his 'Treatise on Dynamics,' founded on a new principle of mechanics, which he applied to the resolution of several beautiful problems. In his 'Reflections on the General Course of Winds,' which was crowned by the Academy of Berlin in 1746, he gave the first details of the calculus of partial differences, of which he was the discoverer. In 1752 he published his 'New Theory of the Action of Fluids,' and also his 'Elements of the Theory and Practice of Music.'—About this time he undertook, in conjunction with Diderot, the 'Encyclopædie,' to which he communicated many articles of great interest, and also the preliminary 'Discourse' which was prefixed to that immortal work. These writings were followed by several literary works which we have not room to enumerate, and by his 'Researches on Different Important Points of the System of the World,' which appeared in 1754 and 1756, and in which he greatly improved the solution of the problem of three bodies, which had occupied the attention both of Euler and Clairaut.—In 1756 D'Alembert, who had previously received a pension from the king, was made a supernumerary pensioner by the Academy of Science; and in 1759 he published his 'Elements of Philosophy,' a work of distinguished merit.—After the peace of 1763 D'Alembert was invited by Frederick the Great to fill the office of president of the Academy of Berlin, and the empress of Russia had also solicited him to superintend the education of her family. Having refused, however, both these appointments, he was in 1772 nominated perpetual secretary to the French Academy, a position in which he wrote no fewer than seventy eloges of its deceased members. Besides the works which we have mentioned, D'Alembert published a treatise 'On the Destruction of the Jesuits,' and a collection of his memoirs under the title of 'Opuscules Mathematiques.' In the latter part of his life he was attacked with a disease in the bladder, and he died of the stone on the 29th October, 1783, in the sixty-sixth year of his age. For a full account of his life, and of the romantic incidents of his attachment to Mademoiselle L'Espinasse, we must refer our readers to the 'Edinburgh Encyclopædia,' vol. i., p. 400, art. Alembert. [D.B.]

DALIBARD, Th. F., a French botanist, d. 1774.

DALIN, Olaus Von, a Swedish poet and historian of considerable eminence, successively chancellor and councillor of state, 1708-1763.

DALLAS, A. J., an English lawyer naturalized in America, and finally secretary to the treasury, and secretary at war, 1759-1817.

DALLAS, C. R., an Engl. miscell. wr., best kn. for his 'Recollections of Lord Byron,' 1754-1824.

DALLAS, Sir G., an Indian employée, author of the first work printed at Calcutta, and subsequently lord chief justice of the Common Pleas, in good repute as a political writer, 1758-1833.

DALLAS, Sir Ro., an eminent lawyer, d. 1823.

DALLAWAY, J., an English hist., 1763-1834.

DALRYMPLE, Alex., hydrographer to the admiralty, author of a 'Collection of Voyages in the South Pacific Ocean,' &c., 1737-1808.

DALRYMPLE, Sir D., a Scotch his., 1726-92.

DALRYMPLE, Sir H. W., a peninsular officer, commander of the army in Portugal, 1750-1830.

DALRYMPLE, James, first Viscount Stair, a Scotch judge, relig. wr., and sec. of state, 1619-1695.

Engraved by J. Brown.

D' ALEMBERT.

DALRYMPLE, Sir J., a Sc. hist., 1726-1810.

DALTON, Jo., an Engl. div. and poet, 1709-63.

DALTON, John, D.C.L., born 1767, at Eaglesfield, Cumberland; died 1844, at Manchester. Dr. Dalton laboured under great disadvantages in reference to his early education, as he had only the benefit of the instructions of the village school till his eleventh year, and with the modicum of knowledge there acquired he himself taught the school in his twelfth and thirteenth years. He was afterwards engaged in husbandry, and in his fifteenth year became assistant in a school at Kendal, to the rectorship of which he succeeded about his nineteenth year. After remaining there for eight years, he went, in 1793, to Manchester, where he ever afterwards resided, and taught mathematics. The unobtrusive manner of life of a scientific member of the Society of Friends can present few incidents of interest, and except the views with which he enriched science, we shall find the life of Dr. Dalton barren—but these are of first-rate value. His first investigations were in 1801, when he sought to determine the amount of increase in the bulk of gases by the application of heat—a subject of great importance, and which led him to the conclusion that their expansion is the same for equal degrees of heat. His theory of mixed gases was his next publication, and soon afterwards followed his meteorological views, all of which have thrown much light on the subjects of which he treated. But his most valuable contribution to chemistry was the discovery of the atomic theory, communicated to Dr. Thomas Thomson in 1804. It is true that indications of this theory are contained in Higgins's and Richter's works, published several years anteriorly, but it is certain that Dalton was ignorant of these chemists' views, and that no one had been able to appreciate the importance of the subject from their publications until after Dalton wrote; and the writer has in his possession a statement from a distinguished foreign chemist, who within the last thirty years had read Richter's work most carefully, but had failed to discover in it the atomic theory. See Atomic Theory in 'Thomson's Cyclopædia of Chemistry.' [R.D.T.]

DALTON, Michael, an Engl. lawyer, d. 1620.

DALYELL, Sir John Graham, Bart., a Scottish antiquarian, died 1851.

DAM, Anth. Van, a Dutch painter, 1682-1750.

DAMASCENUS, Jo., a learned monk, known as an ascetic wr. and theolo., the first who applied the logic of Aristotle to theological teaching, 676-754.

DAMASCENUS, Jo., an Arabian phys., 15th c.

DAMASCENUS, N., a phil. and hist., 1st c. B.C.

DAMASCIUS, an eclectic philos. of the 6th cent.

DAMASUS. The first of this name pope of Rome, distinguished against the Arians, 366-388. The second, pope a few days only, 1048.

DAMER, Anne S., a female sculp., 1748-1808.

DAMIEN, P., cardinal bp. of Ostia, disting. as a biographer, theologian, and politician, 988-1072.

DAMIENS, R. F., the assassin of Louis XV., kn. for his crimes as Robert Le Diable, b. 1715, ex. 1757.

DAMIENS DE GAMICOURT, A. P., a French au., ('L'Observateur Français,') &c., 1723-1790.

DAMINE, P., a Venetian painter, 1592-1631.

DAMOCRITUS, a Greek statuary, 400 B.C.

DAMOCRITUS, an ancient Greek historian.

DAMON, a Greek musician, 5th century B.C.

DAMPIER, William, the son of a farmer near Yeovil, was born in 1652. He went early to sea, and performed many voyages. He then became under-manager of a Jamaica plantation; made an engagement in the coasting trade, and on its expiry joined a party of the freebooting logwood-cutters at Campeachy; and next, the privateers upon the coast, in an eleven months' cruise. Returning to the wood-cutting, he was very successful; and the year following visited England. Here he married and remained six months, when he returned to Jamaica, and took out goods for which he knew there was a market. At this time he purchased a property in Dorsetshire; but wishing to realize a little more money before settling upon it, and meeting a number of the leading buccaneers, who were Englishmen, near Port Royal, he joined their company. Having sacked Portobello, and crossed the isthmus, they waged a merciless war for four years in the Pacific; when disagreeing, a portion of them crossed to the Atlantic again, and finally sailed from Virginia on a buccaneering voyage round the globe, going west, and returning through the Indian seas. At the Nicobar isles Dampier left the ship and came on alone, reaching home in 1691. Soon after, he published his 'New Voyage round the World,' which excited great interest, being well written, and full of new and interesting matter relating to botany and zoology, as well as to geography and ethnology. Thus brought into notice, he was employed (14th January, 1699) by government on a voyage of discovery to New Holland and New Guinea, in which he made many important additions to geographical knowledge. At Ascension, on the homeward voyage, the ship 'foundered through perfect age,' as he expressed it; but though the crew and part of his collections were saved, and he was no way to blame, he was not again employed by government; in 1703 a company of merchants, however, gave him command of one of two ships sent out to the South Seas on a privateering cruise. This proved singularly unfortunate—he took no rich prizes—his commission was stolen by a petty officer, and he was imprisoned in India by the Dutch. We find him again in England in 1708, and employed in the privateer voyage of Woodes Rogers, fitted out by merchants of Bristol; but on this, his third circumnavigation, in the humble capacity of pilot. The expedition was very successful, and returned to the Thames 14th December, 1711—from which time nothing whatever is known of Dampier. His merits as a navigator, an accurate surveyor, and a naturalist, are of the very highest order; and his moral character seems to have been but little contaminated by the lawless company with which he so long associated. [J.B.]

DAMPIERRE, A. H. M. Picot De, a French general, distinguished at Valmy and Jemappes, succeeded to Dumouriez, 1756-1793.

DAMPIERRE, H. Du Val, Count De, a captain of the 16th century, distinguished against the Turks, died before Presburg, 1620.

DAMPIERRE, J., a Latin poet, died 1550.

DAMPIERRE, William De, count of Flanders and father-in-law of Edward I., k. of Eng., d. 1305.

DAMPMARTIN, Anne Henri, Viscount, captain of dragoons at the outbreak of the French revolution, but chiefly memorable for his literary works, was born at Uzès 1750, and died 1823. His early education was intended to qualify him for the church; but he disappointed the expectation of his friends, and, choosing the profession of arms, devoted his leisure to literary studies. He was a friend of constitutional reform, and the subjects of his pen demonstrate the interest that he felt in education and national progress. The principal event in his military career was the assistance he rendered at Avignon, Nov. 1791, in suppressing the brigands and murderers commanded by Jourdan Coupe-tête. In 1792 he abandoned his regiment and retired to Holland. His work, entitled 'Evènements qui se sont passés sous mes yeux pendant la Révolution Française,' is valuable for its authenticity, minuteness of detail, and simple sincerity. It appeared at Berlin 1799, and now forms the first part of a work in 2 vols., entitled 'Mémoires sur les divers évènements de la révolution et de l'émigration,' published at Paris 1825. [E.R.]

DAMPMARTIN, P., a biog. wr., 16th century.

DAN, the fifth son of JACOB. (Gen. xxx., 4, 5, 6.)

DANCER, DANIEL, a notor. miser, 1716-1794.

DANCHET, A., a Fr. dram. author, 1671-1748.

DANCKERT, CORNELIUS, a Dutch art., 16th c.

DANDELOT. See COLIGNI.

DANDINI, CÆSAR, a Florentine painter, 1595-1658. VINCENT, his brother and scholar, 1607-1675. PIETRO, the son of CÆSAR, 1647-1712.

DANDINI, H. F., an Italian priest, 1695-1747.

DANDINI, J., a Jesuit missionary, 1554-1624.

DANDOLO, a patrician family of Venice, the most celebrated members of which are—HENRY, elected doge 1192, leader of the first crusade against Constantinople 1204, d. 1205. JOHN, distinguished by a long war against the patriarch of Aquilea, doge 1280-1289. FRANCIS, surnamed the Dog for basely humbling the republic to Clement V., doge 1328-1339. ANDRE, who sustained a long war with Hungary, and wrote 'Chronicles of Venice,' doge 1342-1354. FAUSTIN, son of Andre, an ambas. and man of letters, d. 1449.

DANDOLO, A., a Ven. jurisconsult, 1431-1472.

DANDOLO, MARK, a Ven. politic., 1458-1535.

DANDOLO, VINCENT, a cel. Ven. chemist, proveditor of Dalmatia, distin. for his share in the overthrow of the Ven. repub. by the Fr., 1758-1819.

DANDRE-BARDON, M. F., a French painter, founder of the Academy of Marseilles, 1700-1783.

DANET, P., a French lexicographer, 1640-1709.

D'ANGHIARA, PIETRO MARTIRE, often cited as PETER MARTYR, a learned ecclesiastic and historian of Italy, 1455-1526.

DANIEL, the Jewish prophet, liv. about 600 B.C.

DANIEL, GABRIEL, a Fr. historian, 1649-1728.

DANIEL, P., a Fr. critic and classic, 1530-1603.

DANIEL, SAMUEL, poet-laureate of Elizabeth, author of a history of England to the reign of Edward III., 1562-1617.

DANIEL, ST., an ascetic who gained his reputation by living on the top of a column, 410-490.

DANIELI, F., an It. savant and his., 1740-1812.

DANIELL, JOHN FREDERICK, born 1790, died 1845. Mr. Daniell was originally intended for business, and for some time devoted himself to the refining of sugar; but afterwards he became engrossed with meteorological, and subsequently with electrical science, to both of which he made some important contributions. His work on meteorology was a standard work during his time; being characterized rather, however, as embodying a clear statement of the views of the author, than as affording a practical work for reference. His constant battery was a valuable invention, which contributed much to the convenience of electrical experimenters, and to the development of the science, especially in the department of electrotype, which may be said to have originated from this invention. Mr. Daniell was a man of amiable disposition, and was universally respected for his social as well as scientific qualifications. [R.D.T.]

DANIELL, the name of several artists, distinguished in African and oriental scenery. SAMUEL, author of drawings illust. the island of Ceylon, d. 1811. THOMAS and his nephew WILLIAM, members of the Royal Academy, cel. for their large work in 6 folio vols., entitled 'Oriental Scenery,' &c., the former 1750-1840, the latter 1769-1837.

DANNECKER, JOHN HENRY, surnamed 'The Mystic Sculptor of Germany,' distin. for his female figures, 1758-1834.

DANNEVILLE, J. E., a French hist., 17th ct.

DANTE, or DURANTE, ALIGHIERI, born at Florence in 1265, holds, in Italian literature, a place corresponding to that which belongs to Chaucer in our own. But his fame is wider, his genius more vigorous and tragic; and his name has been honoured by his countrymen in all subsequent generations, while the father of English poetry was for ages neglected and forgotten. Dante lived in a time when the language of Italy was beginning to be used in prose literature, and had been considerably developed in metrical composition; when the classical models as yet exercised but little influence, the purer Roman poetry being studied very seldom, and Greek literature quite unknown; and when the troubadours of Provençe were still the only poets that had become famous in Christian Europe. His life was spent in the midst of those storms which raged throughout the middle ages, and of which the Italian republics were noted scenes. He was born of a distinguished family, belonging to the party of the Guelfs, which stood opposed to the Ghibellines or Imperialists, and was oftenest ranged on the side of the Popes. A youthful attachment to Beatrice Portinari, who died when the poet was in his twenty-fifth year, was ever afterwards hallowed in his imagination, and was not destroyed either by an unhappy marriage, or by the activity with which the Florentine citizen threw himself into the turmoil of political dissension. He served the republic as a soldier, and at the age of thirty-five was one of the priors or chief magistrates of Florence. A quarrel between two factions into which the Guelfs were split, caused him, in 1302, to be banished; and, during the remaining twenty years of his life, he wandered through Italy, seeking refuge in those Ghibelline states whose principles he had long combated. His party in vain attempted, more than once, to reconquer Florence; petitions for a reversal of the sentence of banishment were equally unsuccessful; the poet's stern and haughty disposition made him unhappy, and probably unacceptable, at the courts of the Italian princes; and, dejected and hopeless, he died at Ravenna in 1321.—He wrote both in prose and in verse, and used both the Latin and the living tongues. In the former, he left a Ghibelline treatise 'De Monarchia,' and an essay 'De Vulgari Eloquentia,' in which he describes the rise of the Italian language and some of the works that had been written in it. His own great poem, also, was begun to be written in Latin hexameters. Among his Italian writings are noble Sonnets and Canzoni, and a work called 'Vita Nuova,' in which he connects, by a prose narrative, verses in honour of the dead Beatrice.—He is immortal in virtue of the celebrated poem, which, although narrative in form, was called, in conformity to a common mediæval usage, the 'Divina Commedia.' The action is described as taking place in the year 1300; so that the whole may be understood to have been produced during his weary years of exile. It has three parts, and a hundred cantos, and describes a Vision of Hell, Purgatory, and Paradise. Dante is conducted through the worlds of the dead by the poet Virgil. The first of the parts, containing the 'Inferno,' is by far the most interesting and vigorous. It is here that we encounter those terrible pictures, which make Dante one of the most sublime among poets; pictures conceived with an irregular force of imagination, which is at once singularly original, and strongly characteristic of the spirit of thinking and action in the times in which he lived; pictures, also, which are conveyed with a pregnant brevity and impressiveness of diction, easily perceptible even to foreigners, and producing an extraordinary effect on the poet's countrymen. The imagery of Dante has peculiarities which defy analysis. It unites, beyond any other, seeming clearness and sensuousness, with great power of calling up shadowy suggestions. The tone of sentiment is oftenest gloomy, despondent, or savagely sarcastic: and the celebrated personages of Italian history are pourtrayed at once with striking verisimilitude, and with malicious ingenuity of invention. Yet there are many brief intervals, and some long stretches, of deep and tender pathos. The harrowing scene in which the condemned spirit of Count Ugolino describes the sufferings of the Tower of Famine, is not more characteristic than the melancholy sweetness that breathes through the story of Francesca of Rimini. From the strange horrors of the 'Inferno,' the poet and his guide pass to the milder objects of the 'Purgatorio,' which are described with much poetic richness, and with a few personal and historical episodes, reminding us of the awfulness with which the first part had made us familiar. At the close of the second part the spirit of Beatrice, descending from a cloud of flowers which angels strew aroundd her, appears to conduct her lover to the bowers described in the 'Paradiso.' In this, the third part, Dante and his sainted conductress pass from planet to planet, beholding the seats of the blessed, and discussing deep questions of theology. [W.S.]

DANTE DI MAJANO, an Ital. poet, 13th cen.

D'ANTINE, Francis, a Fr. scholar, editor of the 'French Historians,' the 'Art of Verifying Dates,' &c., 1688-1746.

DANTON, Georges Jacques. This man, who united in his own person the contradictory characters of a demagogue and a statesman, and who controlled the movement of the French revolution in its most stormy periods till the time of Robespierre's ascendancy, was born at Arcis-sur-Aube, October 28, 1759. His parents were farmers, of an ancient and respectable family, such as usually prepare their children for the liberal professions by a good education; and though he lost his father when young, he found a careful guardian in his step-father, M. Ricordin, who was the owner of a cotton mill on the banks of the Aube. He was at Paris practising, or looking for practice, as an advocate, when the revolution broke out; and, commencing his political career out of doors, he soon acquired that prodigious ascendancy over the population of the Faubourgs for which his commanding figure, his voice of thunder, his passionate temperament, his frankness, his good nature, and his genius, so admirably qualified him. In 1789, after the States-general had been convoked, when blood had already been shed in the streets of Paris, and the city was divided into electoral districts, the young advocate, already noted for his audacious oratory, obtained the presidency of the Cordeliers, which soon afterwards gave its name to the club founded by Danton to unite those who held the same opinions, rather than persons living in the same locality. These clubbists were the avowed enemies of royalty, of aristocratic institutions, and of the clergy, and for five years afterwards acted as the advanced guard in the revolutionary combats, ever giving birth to fresh swarms of Marats and Héberts, until Danton himself grew heart-sick of turbulence, and was willing, as he said, to be guillotined rather than to guillotine any longer.—Danton and his party were the first to perceive the utter impossibility of forming an alliance between monarchy and the new institutions, and at the same time to accept the terrible consequences of their foresight, and march in the straight course of the revolution. His voice sent the people to combat at the Bastile, and directed the attack on Versailles, preceded by the insurrection of women when the king and the royal family were forced to Paris; and he was among the last to yield the 'altar of the country' to the Constituent Assembly when the famous petition was signed in the Champ de Mars, praying for the deposition of the king after his arrest at Varennes. This was the middle of 1791, soon after which the constitution was solemnly accepted (30th September), and the Legislative Assembly, or first Parliament, convened, under the Roland administration. Towards the end of the year the country was threatened with the invasion of the emigrant nobles; and the king's veto, which brought the Assembly to a stand-still, commenced the last struggle between the people and the crown. At this crisis, it is said, Danton accepted presents from the court, but the writers of the Biographie des Contemporains deny the fact, while admitting his want of integrity in after years when he could supply his necessities from funds placed at his disposal without bartering away his country. In June, 1792, the Roland ministry was dismissed by the king, and the Marseilles' band invited to Paris by the patriots. Danton, who had gone to his native fields to snatch a short period of repose, now suddenly returned, reviewed the organization of the people, lodged the Marseillaise, and prepared the struggle of the 10th of August—the day which saw the throne overturned, the patriots recalled to the administration, and Danton associated with them as minister of justice. The duke of Brunswick was known to be marching upon Paris, and the civil war had commenced in La Vendée. The Ministry and the Legislative Assembly were terror-stricken, and proposed to retire beyond the Loire, but Danton arrested them with that thrilling appeal, heard above the sound of the générale, and the report of the alarm-gun, which has often since been quoted:—'Legislators!' he exclaimed, 'It is not the alarm-cannon that you hear, but the pas-de-charge upon our enemies. To conquer them, to hurl them back, what do we require? De l'audace, encore de l'audace, et toujours de l'audace! (To dare, and again to dare, and without end to dare!)' From this time his supremacy in the commune of Paris was complete, but he purchased it at the price of the September massacres, in which he refused to interfere, and for which, in the heat and terror of those perilous days, he iniquitously thanked the assassins, 'not as minister of justice,' for so he expressed himself, 'but as minister of the revolution!' The atrocious casuistry of such a speech is too horrible to contemplate. It must be remembered, however, that Marat, and a crowd of bloodhounds who followed him, were proposing the most frightful resolutions to be accomplished under a dictatorial power, and that the preternatural excitement and suspicion of the people had risen almost to insanity, and that Danton himself on many occasions afterwards both regretted his fearful stoicism, and justified it by his position. Space will not permit us to follow his career from this period to the events which hastened the fall of the Girondins, and were so soon followed by his own rupture with Robespierre; but we may notice briefly that he was anxious to save the followers of Brissot, who repulsed his overtures with scorn, and finally, in the person of Gaudet, declared that they preferred war to any peace that he could make with them. While the struggle with the deputies of the Gironde was pending, Danton was sent on two missions to Belgium, and it is understood to be proved that he supported his extravagances, though he did not grow rich, at the public expense; in addition to which he had refused to account for the money disbursed by him as minister, except in the gross. He returned from his first mission in time to vote for the king's death, laughing to scorn the delicacy of the Convention, which hesitated about deciding the question by a simple majority, though it had decided the fate of an entire nation without scruple. On returning from his second mission at the beginning of March, 1793, he found that his wife had expired two days before, and was even buried, and giving way to a passion as rare as it is affecting, he had the corpse disinterred in the night, and snatched a last embrace from the cold body, which, it is said, he held for a long time locked in his arms. The time was now drawing near when the death of Marat, and the condemnation of many of his scoundrel imitators on the one hand, and the fall of the Girondins on the other, seemed to prepare the field for the last combatants; and Danton and Robespierre were every day thrown into stronger relief against each other, until the former stood forth as the acknowledged head of a party of clemency, and the latter continued the remorseless career in which they had embarked together. Danton prepared his measures by procuring a decree which erected the Committee of Public Safety into a provisional government, and at the same time refused to take any part in it, alleging for reasons, his need of repose and his recent marriage, but really, it is presumable, that he might separate himself from the odium and responsibility of the rigour still necessary in the opinion of Robespierre. It was so the latter understood it. The hatred which divided these men was displayed on the part of Robespierre with a cool, logical propriety, which only provoked the more Danton's impassioned and defiant utterance of what he felt towards him. He was, like Mars, entangled in the meshes of an almost invisible web while in the embrace of the queen of love, and, giant as he was, fell an easy prey into the hands of his rival. He was informed of a secret nocturnal meeting convened by Robespierre to deliberate upon his death, but he refused to fly. 'They will deliberate,' he said, 'a long time before striking a man like me; and it is I who will surprise them.' The manner of his arrest, the crowd of charges heaped upon him, and the scene at the revolutionary tribunal, all betray the dread of his accusers lest his voice should once more reach the ear of the multitude. His address at the bar was a lengthened defiance of his enemies, and when recognized in prison he endeavoured to conceal his bitterness by a burst of laughter. Danton was undeniably a man of pleasure, for his whole life was a changing scene of passion; but we have the most affecting proofs that the spring of the domestic virtues welled up fresh in his heart, even to the last hour of his stormy career. To follow him from the thunders of the tribune, and the flash of the cruel weapons which he wielded in the political strife, to his wife and children, is like looking upon the face of a smiling landscape after the storm-cloud has passed over it. He was a true Frenchman, capable of pouring out his whole soul, and with the same deadly effect, as a lightning flash; capable, too, of melting into tenderness the next

[Club of the Cordeliers.]

Elton, near Newark, in 1731, and after taking his degree at Edinburgh, pursued his professional career at Lichfield, from whence, in 1781, he removed to Derby, having contracted a second marriage, and died in the latter place 1802. Dr. Darwin was an original thinker, a great adept in analogies, and a respectable versifier. The best known of his works is his 'Botanic Garden,' the first part of which is entitled 'The Economy of Vegetation,' and the second 'The Loves of the Plants.' His other works are 'Zoonomia, or the laws of Organic Life,' and 'Physiologia, or the Philosophy of Agriculture and Gardening,' besides which he published a tract on female education, and several papers in the 'Philosophical Transactions.' The personal character of Darwin was amiable, and his conversation generally pleasing. His appearance was athletic, he was much pitted with the small-pox, and had an impediment in his speech. His son, CHARLES DARWIN, after taking a prize medal at Edinburgh, and writing a pathological treatise, died at the early age of twenty, 1778. [E.R.]

DASCHKOWA, KATHARINA ROMANOWNA, Princess, a Russian heroine, who marched with a body of troops to the assistance of Catharine II. when the latter deposed her husband, and as a student of the sciences and Belles Lettres was one of the most extraordinary women of the age, 1744-1810.

DASSIER, JOHN, a French medallist, 1677-1763. His son, JACOB ANTHONY, distinguished in the same line of art, 1715-1759.

DASYPODIUS, P., a Swiss lexico., 16th cent.

DASYPODIUS, W., a Latin poet, 16th cent.

DATAMES, a Persian gen., k. in revolt, 361 B.C.

DATHE, J. A., a Germ. Orientalist, 1731-1791.

DATI, AUGUSTINE, an Ital. savant, author of histor., philosoph., and miscell. works, 1420-1478.

DATI, C. R., an Ital. professor of the Belles Lettres, au. of 'Lives of Ancient Painters,' 1619-1675.

DATI, GEORGE, a translator of 'Tacitus,' 1563.

DATI, GREGORY, an Italian hist., 1363-1486.

D'ATTAIGNANT, G. C., a Fr. poet, 1697-1779.

DAUBASSE, AMAND, a Gasc. poet, 1660-1720.

DAUBENTON, LOUIS-JEAN-MARIE, a celebrated anatomist and naturalist, was born at Montbard, in Burgundy, 1716. He died in 1799. After taking his degree in medicine, he retired to his native town to practise his profession. At that time Buffon, who had been a schoolfellow of Daubenton's, had conceived the plan of his celebrated work, the 'Histoire Naturelle.' He felt, however, that it was necessary to associate with himself some one who was capable of taking the labour of many of the details off his hand, and such a man he found in Daubenton. In 1742 he induced him to come to Paris, and obtained for him the appointment of curator and demonstrator of the cabinet of natural history at the Garden of Plants. Daubenton commenced his labours with zeal and enthusiasm, and soon succeeded in making the collection at the museum the first in Europe. While engaged in this task, he was at the same time collecting materials for assisting Buffon in that part of his 'Histoire Naturelle,' the history of quadrupeds. To Daubenton is due the merit of supplying all the anatomical details and descriptions, both external and internal, which rendered that part of Buffon's work so much esteemed amongst the naturalists of other countries. Daubenton wrote many papers and memoirs on zoological subjects. He has described several animals new to science; and was the first to apply the study of comparative anatomy to the determination of extinct animals from an examination of their fossil remains. In vegetable physiology he has made some valuable additions to our knowledge; and in his enlightened endeavours to improve the breed of sheep, and to bring nearer to perfection the texture of their wool, he has merited the gratitude of his country. He was interred in the Garden of Plants. [W.B.]

DAUBENTON, W., a Fr. Jesuit, 1648-1723.

DAUBENY, CH., an Engl. theolog., 1744-1827.

DAUBERVAL, the pseudonym of J. BERCHET, a French ballet-master and composer, 1741-1806.

D'AUBIGNE. See AUBIGNE.

D'AUBIGNY, JEAN LOUIS MARIE VILLAIN, attorney to the par. of Paris at the revo., 1750-1808.

D'AUBUSSON. See AUBUSSON.

DAUBUZ, CH., a learned Fr. prot., 1670-1740.

DAUDIN, F. M., a Fr. naturalist, 1774-1804.

DAULLE, J., a French engraver, 1703-1768.

DAUMESNIL, P., Baron, a gen. of the empire, especially cel. for his def. of Vincennes, 1777-1832.

DAUN, L. J. M., Count, an Austrian field-marshal under Maria Theresa, distinguished against the Turks, and in the seven years' war, 1705-1766.

DAUNOU, P. C. F., a statesman, historian, and literary savant of the period of the revol., 1761-1840.

DAURAT, JOHN, a French poet, 1507-1588.

DAVAUX, J. B., an opera composer, last cent.

DAVENANT, J., mem. of the Synod of Dort and bp. of Salisbury, em. as a theolo., 1576-1641.

DAVENANT, SIR WM., a celebrated dramatic writer, successor to Ben Jonson in the laureateship, and author of several masques and other plays, moral pieces for recitation, &c., 1606-1668. CHARLES, his eldest son, author of 'Circe,' a tragedy, and a work in 5 vols., entitled 'Essays on Trade,' 1656-1714. WILLIAM, fourth son of the poet, translator of La Mothe Le Vayer, accidentally drowned, 1681.

DAVENPORT, CHR., an Eng. theol., 1598-1680.

DAVENPORTE, RICHARD ALFRED, a miscellaneous English writer and editor, 1780-1852.

DAVESNE, FRANCOIS, a mystic writer, disciple of Simon Morin, author of 'Harmonie de l'Amour et de la Justice de Dieu,' 'Tragedie Sainte,' &c., died about 1652-1653.

DAVID-AB-GWILYON, a Welch poet, 14th c.

DAVID, an Armenian philosopher, 5th century.

DAVID, a king of Armenia, 980-1046.

DAVID, the king of the Jews, 1085-1001 B.C.

DAVID, the first of the name, king of Scotland 1124-1153; the second, son of ROBERT BRUCE, lived 1324-1371.

DAVID, C. and J., two brothers, distinguished at Paris as portrait engravers, &c., 17th century.

DAVID COHEN, a Portuguese rabbin, d. 1674.

DAVID-COMMENUS, the last emp. of Trebizond, surrendered to Mahomet II. 1453, k. 1462.

DAVID-DE-ST.-GEORGE, JOHN JOSEPH ALEXIS, a French translator of Smollet, and philological savant, 1759-1809.

DAVID, F. A., a French engraver, 1741-1824.

DAVID-GEORGE, J., a relig. fanat., 1501-1556.

DAVID, J. P., a French surgeon, 1737-1784.

DAVID, JACQUES LOUIS, the most distinguished painter of France of modern times, was born at Paris, in 1748, and died an exile at Brussels, December 29, 1825. David was the pupil of Vien the regenerator of painting in France, who revived the study at once, both of nature and the antique, in the place of the affected mannerism of Vanloo and Boucher, the painters of Louis XV. He accompanied Vien, in 1775, as pensioner to Rome, when the latter was made director of the French Academy there. David was a diligent student of the antique, perhaps few artists so assiduously so. He returned to Paris in 1780, and in 1783 he was elected a member of the French Academy of Painting; his presentation picture was Andromache deploring the death of Hector. David now revisited Rome, and painted his celebrated picture there, 'The Oath of the Horatii.' He then returned to France, and executed some great works for Louis XVI.; but this did not prevent his voting for the death of the king, as a member of the National Convention, in 1792. His strong republican spirit was further shown in the representation of two exciting political subjects at this time, 'The Death of Lepelletier, the Deputy,' and 'The Death of Marat;' but personal dangers, and other party difficulties, finally induced David to give up politics entirely for the arts, to which, during his short political influence, he had been of considerable service. He became in a few years the favourite painter of the emperor Napoleon, and his principal works have direct reference to Napoleon's eventful career; the picture of his coronation was especially agreeable to Napoleon. At the restoration of the Bourbons, however, in 1815, David was banished, and retired to Brussels, where he survived his exile ten years. David was an excellent draftsman, after the ideal taste of the Greeks, but his imitation amounted to the servile; and the majority of his naked figures are of such rigid uniformity of character that they appear to be painted rather from ancient marbles than from nature. He completed the revolution in taste commenced by Vien, and antique-mannerism was carried to excess by Guerin, and some other of his principal scholars.—(Gabet, Dictionnaire des Artistes, &c., au dixieme siecle.—1.) [R.N.W.]

DAVID, Luke, a Prussian histor., 1503-1583.

DAVID, L. A., an Italian painter, 17th century.

DAVID, T. B. E., a Fr. archæologist, au. of 'Introduc. to the Study of Mythology,' &c., 1755-1839.

DAVIDSON, John, son of a tradesman in Dublin, distinguished as a traveller in North and South America, the countries of the East, and the principal states of Europe, born 1814, murdered in an attempt to reach Timbuctoo, 1836.

DAVIDSON, Lucretia Maria, a Canadian girl of humble circumstances, distinguished by the grace and sensibility of her poetical compositions, died in her seventeenth year, 1825.

DAVIE, W. R., an Amer. officer and diplomat., acting, in the cause of independence, died 1820.

DAVIES, Ed., a Welch archæologist, 1756-1831.

DAVIES, Jno., a Welch div. and scho., au. of a Welch Gram., a Welch and Latin Dic., &c., 17th c.

DAVIES, John, a classical editor, 1679-1732.

DAVIES, Sir J., an Engl. judge, kn. as a poet and polit. wr., au. of an account of Ireland, derived from his official visit to that country, 1570-1626.

DAVIES, Miles, a Welch divine and adherent of George I., known by a work of research, 1715.

DAVIES, Robert, a Welch bard and literary savant, author of a Welch Grammar, &c., 1770-1836.

DAVIES, Sam., an Amer. dissenter, 1724-1761.

DAVIES, Thos., an English performer, dramatic biographer, and bookseller, 1712-1785.

DAVIES, Rev. Walter, a Welch antiquarian and literary savant, distin. by his numerous contributions to the literature of his country, but more particularly for his public spirit and his work on the agriculture and domestic economy of North and South Wales, died 1849.

DAVILA, Arrigo Cat., an Ital. hist., dis. by his work on the Relig. Wars of France, 1576-1631.

DAVILA, D. P. F., a Span. natural., 1713-1785.

DAVIS, Edward, an Engl. painter, 17th cent.

DAVIS, H. E., one of Gibbon's critics, 1756-1784.

DAVIS, John, an Engl. poet, d. about 1618.

DAVIS, John, a distinguished navigator, was a native of Sandridge, near Dartmouth, Devon. Between the years 1585-1605, he performed three voyages in search of a north-west passage, in the service of some London merchants, discovering the strait which bears his name, Hudson's Strait, &c., and penetrating northwards as far as 72°, 12′; and five voyages to the East Indies in the service of the Dutch. He published an account of one of each series. He was killed in the straits of Malacca by some Japanese pirates in 1605. [J.B.]

DAVIS, R. H., a merchant and banker of Bristol, many years M.P. for that city, 1767-1842.

DAVIS, Rowland, an Irish contr. div., 17th c.

DAVISON, Wm., a Scotch diplomatist, secry. of state to Queen Elizabeth, and the instrument of the court in the condemnation of Mary Stuart, for which he afterwards suffered fine and imprisonment; date of his death unknown.

DAVOUST, Louis Nich., duke of Auerstadt, prince of Eikmuhl, and marshal of France, dis. as one of Napoleon's most faithful generals, 1770-1823.

DAVOUST, Louis Alex. Ed. Fr., Baron, bro. of the preceding, and a Fr. officer, 1773-1823.

DAVY, Sir Humphry, Bart., born 1778, at Penzance; died 1829, at Geneva. This distinguished chemical philosopher was brought up at Penzance, principally under the care of his mother, a woman of talent and strong moral sense. He was apprenticed to a surgeon, and at the age of twenty he became assistant at the Clifton institution, which had been established by Dr. Beddoes to determine the influence of different gases in the treatment of diseases. It was here that he discovered the remarkable action of nitrous oxide, or laughing gas, on the system, and thus paved the way to the application of those means now in use for alleviating pain in severe operations.—In 1801 he was appointed assistant lecturer at the Royal Institution, where he speedily acquired great popularity and fame. In 1806 he made the important discovery that the combinations and decompositions by electricity are referable to the law of electrical attractions and repulsions, and thus demonstrated the intimate connection between electricity and chemistry. His most brilliant discovery was, however, that of, in 1807, the composition of the alkalies, which he proved to be combinations of oxygen with metals. In 1810 he found chlorine to be a simple body, in accordance with the view of Scheele announced in the previous century. His other discoveries were that of the Safety Lamp, exhibiting a fine example of inductive reasoning; and his mode of preventing the corrosion of copper sheathing by the protecting influence of zinc. Sir Humphry Davy was distinguished by a poetical imagination, which would undoubtedly have made him a poet if his time had not been absorbed by science; and, as evidence of his descriptive powers, he has left behind him two works, 'Salmonia,' and 'The Last Days of a Philosopher,' which are not surpassed in their peculiar department by any compositions in the English language. [H.D.T.]

DAVY, JOHN, an English composer, d. 1824.

DAVY, WM., an Engl. div., author and printer of a religious work in 26 vols., limited to 14 copies, which he also bound with his own hands, d. 1826.

DAWE, GEO., an English painter and academician, the biographer of George Morland, d. 1829.

DAWES, MANASSEH, a pamphleteer, d. 1829.

DAWES, RICH., a critic and philos., 1708-1766.

DAWES, SIR WM., abp. of York, in his time a popular preacher, au. of poems and ser., 1671-1724.

DAWSON, JOHN, a mathematician, 1734-1820.

DAY, JOHN, an English printer, died 1584. His son, of the same name, a preacher and religious writer, 1566-1627. His son RICHARD, a printer, translator, &c., middle of 16th century.

DAY, THOS., a poet and miscell. wr., au. of the well-kn. story of 'Sandford and Merton,' 1748-1789.

DAZILLE, J. B., a Fr. med. wr., 1732-1812.

DEAGEANT, G., a Fr. pol. intriguer, d. 1626.

DE-ANDRADA, ALFONSO, a Jesuit of Toledo, au of 'Lives of Illustrious Jesuits,' &c., 1590-1672.

DE-ANDRADA, ANTONIO, a Portug. missionary, first discov. of Cathay and Thibet, 1580-1634.

DE-ANDRADA, DIEGO PAYVA, a Portuguese theologian and controversialist, distinguished at the Council of Trent, 1528-1575. FRANCISCO, brother of the preceding, historiographer royal under Philip III. TOMAS, another brother, belonging to the Franciscan order of friars, died in an African prison, where he wrote 'The Sufferings of Jesus,' 1582. DIEGO, son of Francisco, a poet, d. 1660.

DE-ANDRADA, J. F., a Latin wr., 1597-1657.

DEBAST, M. J., a Fr. antiquarian, 1753-1825.

DE-BERNARD, C., a Fr. novelist, 1803-1850.

DEBONNAIRE, L., a Jansenist wr., d. 1752.

DEBORAH, a Hebr. prophetess, about 1285 B.C.

DEBRAUX, P. E., a Fr. song-wr., 1798-1831.

DECATUR, STEPHEN, an American naval commander, born 1779, killed in a duel 1820.

DECEBALUS, king of the Dacians, famous for his long resistance to the Romans, defeated, and died by his own hand 105.

DECEMBRIO, P. C., an Ital. savant, 1399-1447.

DECIO, PHILIP, an Italian jurist, 1453-1535.

DECIUS, emperor of Rome, 249-251.

DECIUS, CONRAD, an Austrian transl., 1592.

DECIUS, J. L., a German hist., 15th century.

DECIUS-MUS, a Roman consul, distinguished by his patriotic conduct and death in a war against the Latins about 340 B.C.

DECKER, J., a Dutch poet, 1610-1666.

DECKER, P., a German architect, 1677-1713.

DECKER, TH., an Engl. dramatic wr., d. 1638.

DECLAUSTRE, A., a Fr. liter. savant, last cent.

DE-COETLOGON, C. E., an Engl. Calvinist, born of Fr. parents, au. of religious works, d. 1829.

DE-COURCY, R., an Irish divine, d. 1808.

DEE, JOHN, LL.D., an English divine and astrologer of great learning, celebrated in the history of necromancy, chancellor of St. Paul's, and warden of Manchester college in the reign of Elizabeth. He is the author of several published works, and some unpublished, which are preserved in the Cottonian library, and elsewhere; born in London 1527, d. 1608. His eldest son, ARTHUR, became physician to Charles I., and is the author of 'a faithful relation' of what passed between his father and some spirits, 1579-1651.

DEERING, C., a physic. and naturalist, author of the 'History of Nottinghamshire,' 1690-1749.

DEERING, J. P., R.A., the architect of Exeter Hall and other metropolitan buildings, 1780-1850.

DEFAUCONPRET, A. J. B. DE, a French translator, 1767-1843.

DE FOE, DANIEL, the son of a butcher in London, was born there in 1661. Four years in a dissenting academy seem to have furnished the only regular education he received. Engaging in trade, first as a wool merchant and afterwards as a brick and tile-maker, he became bankrupt after some years, but afterwards paid his creditors in full. His attention had been diverted from business both by literature and by politics. He enlisted under the duke of Monmouth, and narrowly escaped after the rebellion was crushed; and he published, a little earlier, a pamphlet on the war between the Turks and the Austrians. His literary career, however, did not fairly begin till he was thirty-nine years old, when he abandoned trade, and became an author by profession. The first period of his authorship was devoted entirely to politics, in which he was one of the ablest and most popular among the advocates of Whiggism. He gained the notice of King William by his 'True-born Englishman,' published in 1700; but the influence of Toryism in the ministries of Queen Anne exposed the coarse and energetic adversary of the Stuarts and the Church of England to an almost uninterrupted series of discouragements and persecutions. In the midst of these, however, he wrote with unbroken courage and unwearied industry. Besides publishing innumerable pamphlets, he carried on a periodical paper called the Review, without assistance, during the greater part of the queen's reign. In 1703 an attack on the high church party, in his pamphlet ironically called 'the Shortest Way with the Dissenters,' was punished by the pillory, a heavy fine, and imprisonment for more than a year. In 1706, the ministry of Godolphin employed him as an agent for the union of Scotland with England; and in this character he resided a considerable time in Edinburgh, and found materials for a 'History of the Union.' Under the last administration of the reign he was again committed to prison for vehemently arguing in favour of the Hanoverian succession. After the accession of George I. he seems to have received no countenance from those whose interests he had so keenly espoused; and, abandoning politics altogether, he devoted himself to fictitious composition. This stage of his career, which gave birth to the only works by which he is now remembered, did not begin till he was between fifty and sixty years of age, had fallen into bad health, and had even had a stroke of apoplexy. These were the circumstances in which, in 1719, he published the first part of

'Robinson Crusoe,' one of the best and most popular of all romances. Of a similar kind, though incomparably inferior, were several subsequent tales, such as 'Colonel Jack' and 'Captain Singleton.' In his 'History of the Plague' and 'Memoirs of a Cavalier,' he engrafted historical facts on invented incidents and characters, with a curious force and earnestness of impression. De Foe died in London in 1731. [W.S.]

DEGERANDO. See GERANDO, JOS. M. DE.

DEHEEM, J. D., a Dutch flower p., 1604-1664.

DEJNEF, S. IVAN., a Russ. navig., 17th cent.

DEJOCES, fodr. of the Mede emp., 7th c. B.C.

DEJOTARUS, a king of Galatia, 1st cent. B.C.

DEKEN, AGATHA, a Dutch poetess, 1741-1804.

DELABORDE, J. B., a Fr. composer, last ct.

DELACAPEDE, BER. GER. ST. LA., a French naturalist, during the revolution secry. and presid. of the assem., and sen. under Buonaparte, 1756-1825.

DELACOUR, JAS., an Irish poet, 1709-1781.

DELACROIX, J. V., a Fr. advocate, 1743-1832.

DELALAUDE, P. A., a Fr. natural., 1787-1823.

DELAMARCHE, C. F., a Fr. geog., 1740-1817.

DELAMBRE, M., born 1749, died in 1822, an eminent French cultivator of Astronomy, an excellent observer, and a very voluminous writer. Delambre drew up and published several valuable Astronomical Tables; but his chief labours related to the measure of the Arc of the meridian through Spain, and the History of Astronomy. The latter has the accuracy which Bailey's wants; nevertheless one sometimes misses the spirit of the philosophic historian. He also wrote a valuable treatise on Astronomy.

DELANDINE, A. F., a Fr. mis. wr., 1756-1820.

DELANO, AMASO., an Amer. navig., 1763-1817.

DELANY, PATRICK, an Irish div., 1686-1786.

DELARBRE, ANT., a Fr. botanist, 1724-1807.

DE-LA-RUE, G., a Fr. liter. savant, 1748-1835.

DELATOUR, L. F., a Fr. author, 1727-1807.

DELATOUR, MAURICE QUENTIN, a Fr. painter, distinguished for his portraits, 1705-1788.

DELAUDUN, P., a Fr. poet, 1575-1629.

DELAULUE, S., a French engraver, 1520-1595.

DELAVAL, E. H., an Eng. nat. phil., 1729-1814.

DELAVIGNE, C., a French poet, 1794-1843.

DELEUZE, J. P. F., a Fr. naturalist and librar., au. of a 'Hist. of Animal Magnetism,' 1743-1835.

DELEYRE, A., a French liter. savant, d. 1797.

DELFINO, the name of a patrician family of Venice, the most distin. members of which are—JOHN, a doge, died 1361. JOSEPH, captain-gen. of the naval fleet, 1654. JEROME, proveditor-gen., 1693-93. PETER, general of the Camaldules, 1444-1525. JOHN, a cardinal, 1617-1699.

DELFINO, F., an Ital. astronomer, 1477-1547.

DELILLE, JACQUES, a French didactic poet, in great repute at the end of the last century and under the empire, mem. of the academy, 1738-1813.

DELISLE, WM., a native of Paris, 1675-1726, wrought a complete reform in geography by constructing maps from astronomical observations, to which, though greatly multiplied for many years before, map-makers had paid no attention. He seems to have imbibed the views of Cassini, the celebrated astronomer, on this subject; and his father, and younger brother, Joseph Nicholas, were distinguished in the same walk; the latter especially, who was Astronomer Royal at St. Petersburgh, and the author of a history of astronomy, and of many valuable memoirs read to the Academy. [J.B.]

DELISLE-DE-SALES, the name by which John Baptist Isoard Delisle is known, a Fr. savant, author of 'Philosophie de la Nature,' 1743-1816.

DELIUS, C. T., a Ger. mineralogist, 1730-1779.

DELLA-MARIA, D., an Ital. com., 1778-1806.

DELLON, C., a Fr. phys. and trav., 17th cent.

DELMONT, DEO., a Flem. paint., 1581-1634.

DELMOTTE, H. F., a French author, d. 1836.

DELOEUVRE, S. X., a Fr. comed., 1765-1807.

DELOLME, JOHN LOUIS, an advocate, born at Geneva about 1745, and known as a political writer, published his first work in 1772, being a parallel between the English government and that of Sweden, which had been overthrown by Gustavus. Shortly afterwards he published his celebrated work on 'The Constitution of England,' which was written in the French tongue, but improved and translated into English in 1775. In 1783 he published a 'History of the Flagellants,' or Memorials of Human Superstition.' In 1787, an essay on the 'Union between England and Scotland,' and in the two years following, 'Observations on Taxes and the Regency Question.' He died in Switzerland 1807.

DELONGCHAMPS, a Fr. dramatist, d. 1832.

DELORME, PH., a French architect, d. 1577.

DELORME, J., phys. to Marie de Medici, Henry IV., and Louis XIII., 1547-1637. His son CHARL., physician to Gaston and Louis XIII., 1584-1678.

DELORME, MARION, a Fr. courtezan, 1611-50.

DELPHUS, ÆGIDIUS, a Latin poet, 16th cent.

DELPON, J. A., a Fr. antiquarian, 1778-1833.

DELRIEN, E. J. B., a Fr. dram., 1761-1836.

DELRIO, M. A., a Flemish savant, 1551-1608.

DELUC, JOHN ANDREW, a Genevese physician, natural philosopher, and geologist, 1727-1817.

DELUC, W. A., brother of the preceding, a nat. and fellow-labourer with him in geology, 1729-1812.

DELWARDE, M., a Fr. historian, 1630-1724.

DEMANDE, C. F., a Fr. mechan., 1728-1803.

DEMAINBRAY, S. B., an English experimental philosopher, 1710-1782.

DEMARATUS, king of Sparta, 529-492 B.C.

DEMETRIANUS, a Rom. architect, 2d cent.

DEMETRIUS, a Greek sculptor, 4th cent. B.C.

DEMETRIUS, a Greek architect, 4th cent. B.C.

DEMETRIUS, the first of this name, king of Macedon, having fought his way to the throne, 295-287 B.C., dethroned and exiled by Pyrrhus, and died a simple citizen 283. The second of the name, king of Macedon, 242-232 B.C.

DEMETRIUS I., king of Syria, known as Demetrius Sotor, killed by Alex. Balas, 162-149 B.C.

DEMETRIUS II., surnamed Nicator, or the Conqueror, deth. by Zabinas, and k. 144-125 B.C.

DEMETRIUS III., suc. with his br. 95, d. 87 B.C.

DEMETRIUS I., gr. duke of Rus., 1277-1294.

DEMETRIUS II., gr. duke of Rus., 1359-1362.

DEMETRIUS III., gr. duke of Rus., d. 1389.

DEMETRIUS the False, one of numerous pretenders under this name to the throne of Russia, of which he possessed himself 1604, and was assassinated 1606. Another of these adventurers was massacred after possessing himself of Moscow by the aid of the Poles 1610: the last of them perished on the scaffold 1653.

DEMETRIUS CYNODIUS, a Gr. wr., 14th ct.
DEMETRIUS PEPANUS, a Gr. theo., 17th ct.
DEMETRIUS PHALEREUS, a Greek philosopher and orator, known in history as governor of the Athenian republic, 3d cent. B.C.

DEMIDOFF, the name of a Russian family, the founder of which, DEMIDAS, dist. himself under Peter the Great as a cannon-founder, &c., and his grandson PROCOPIUS in mining operations. The nephew of the last named, NICOLAS DEMIDOFF, distinguished for his philanthropy and public spirit and the high perfection to which he carried the working of mines, 1773-1828.

DEMOCEDES, a Gr. physician time of Darius.

DEMOCRITUS, the sage of Abdera: he lived about four hundred years before Christ, at the period of Socrates; 460 or 470 B.C. is reckoned the date of his birth, and he is said to have survived a full century. Nothing of the writings of Democritus remain save a few fragments; but with two exceptions, there is no great man of antiquity whose renown fills a larger space, or who seems, alike by his genius and his acquirements, to have better deserved a hold on the world's memories. Urged by thirst for knowledge, he travelled during his youth and manhood through India, Ethiopia, Chaldæa, and Persia; he spent several years in Egypt, and seems to have visited the schools of Pythagoras and Zeno. It is said, also, that he heard Socrates, and communed with Anaxagoras concerning the phenomena of Astronomy, and the physical structure of Nature. Cicero tells us that in style Democritus might be the rival of Plato—he wrote so clearly, and so adorned what he wrote. The titles of his works relate to Logic, Ethics, Physics, Mathematics, Astronomy, Medicine, Poetry, Music, Grammar, and even Strategy. The Abderites are recorded to have paid loftiest honours to their sage. They confided to him the care of the state; and there must have been ground for another pleasing tradition. It is said that Democritus had spent all his substance in travelling. But a law of Abdera refused the rights of burial to any one who wasted his patrimony. To escape the penalty, the philosopher read in public his chief treatise, entitled μικρὸς διακοσμος, and charmed by his eloquence the people voted him the sum of five hundred talents, or £125,000 sterling. It is not often that a philosophical treatise reaps such a reward!—The fame of Democritus in modern times, rests on his extraordinary prevision of the Atomic, or modern physical theory of the Universe. Rising above the confined idea of the Ionian school, that all things are modifications of one element or principle, he broached the conception that bodies are made up of ultimate atoms, and that in the character of these atoms must be sought the explanation of the qualities of what we call body. He went off at once from all barren logomachies about the plenum: and, indeed, more than any other thinker of antiquity, achieved the privilege of laying down the ground of just speculation in physics. His doctrines prevailed widely, and were afterwards enshrined in noble verse by Lucretius. Democritus was certainly a materialist: the mind, he thought, like fire, consisted of the finer atoms. He had no notion of life apart from body: and the gods he deemed delusion. He had grand views of the universe: in the milky way, first of all, he saw the light of innumerable worlds; but he had a correspondingly mean opinion of the nature and destiny of Man. Nay, he treated Man, his evanescent works, and feeble struggles, so lightly, that we find his effigies always with a jeer on the lip, and himself with the appellation of the laughing philosopher. Democritus is not the only thinker who, in the intensity of his contemplation of material nature, has overlooked a Force infinitely more enduring and grand. The loss of his writings is that, perhaps, among all calamities to ancient monuments, which we ought the most to deplore. [J.P.N.]

DEMOIVRE, an English mathematician, born in France 1667, died 1754. He contributed greatly to our knowledge of Series; he was the author of important theorems in trigonometry; but his principal labours concerned the doctrine of Chances. He had considerable analytic genius.

DEMONAX, a philos. of Cyprus, 2d cent. B.C.
DEMONAX, a Gr. phil., cotemp. with Adrian.

[Demosthenes—From an Ancient Bust.]

DEMOSTHENES, the greatest of the Greek orators, was the son of an Athenian citizen of the same name who carried on the trades of a cutler and cabinetmaker, and was born about the year B.C. 382. Having lost his father at the age of seven, the care of his youth, as well as the management of his property, amounting to 15 talents, devolved upon three guardians appointed by his father. At the end of his minority of ten years he commenced a prosecution against his guardians to recover his property, which they had squandered, and after a litigation of two years obtained a verdict against one of them, who was condemned to pay a fine of 10 talents. The prosecution was conducted by himself; and the speeches which he delivered in support of his cause excited the admiration and applause of the judges. Encouraged by this successful beginning, he ventured to speak before the people, but his feeble and stammering voice, his interrupted respiration, his ungraceful gestures, and his ill-arranged periods, brought upon him general ridicule. His failure, however, only roused the energies of his unconquerable will; he resolved to correct the deficiencies of his youth, and overcame them with a zeal and perseverance which have passed into a proverb. After a course of the most rigorous discipline, he reappeared in public (B.C. 355), and pronounced two orations against Leptines and Androtion, the former of which is considered as one of his happiest efforts. His fame as an orator 'whose resistless eloquence wielded at will that fierce democratie,' now secured for him the general esteem, and entitled him, as one of the leading statesmen of Athens, to take an active part in all public affairs. In B.C. 354 he opposed, though without success, the projected expedition to Eubœa, and dissuaded his countrymen from undertaking a war against Persia. From this time the history of his life is closely mixed up with that of his country; every measure calculated to promote the public good received his powerful support, and every encroachment on public freedom found in him an uncompromising opponent. Philip, king of Macedonia, had begun in B.C. 358 his encroachments on the Athenian possessions in the northern part of the Ægæan without meeting with any active opposition on the part of the parent country; and it was to rouse his countrymen against the crafty invader that Demosthenes pronounced his Philippics, a series of the most splendid and spirited orations. The first was delivered in B.C. 352. Another series equally celebrated (the Olynthiacs), were designed to prevail upon the Athenians to aid the inhabitants of Olynthus, a maritime town near the isthmus of Palline, which had been besieged by Philip, and which, notwithstanding the exertions of the orator, was taken in the spring of B.C. 347. In the following year Demosthenes, along with nine others, went on an embassy to Philip, and succeeded in concluding a peace which continued till B.C. 339. But he did not the less attentively watch the proceedings of Philip; and when hostilities again broke out, he took part in the disastrous battle of Chæronea, the result of which left Philip master of the destinies of Greece. Though he fled along with many others, his grateful countrymen decreed to him a golden crown. On the accession of Alexander, B.C. 336, Demosthenes still cherished the same feelings towards the Macedonians; but the sudden appearance of the youthful conqueror overawed opposition. (See ALEXANDER.) But even his great services could not protect him against an outburst of popular feeling. Harpalus, one of Alexander's generals whom he had left at Babylon, absconded with the treasure intrusted to his care, and arriving in Athens, purchased the protection of the city by distributing his gold among the popular leaders. Demosthenes was one of the suspected recipients; and being declared guilty, and fined in 50 talents, he retired to Ægina and Troezene, where he remained till the death of Alexander, B.C. 323. Returning to Athens for a short time, he was forced again to withdraw in B.C. 322; and retiring to Calauria, a small island opposite to Troezene, took refuge in the temple of Neptune, where he suddenly died. The orations of Demosthenes, on which his character as a statesman chiefly rests, have been often published both in mass and in detached portions. 'His manner,' as Hume well observes, 'is rapid harmony exactly adjusted to the sense: it is vehement reasoning without any appearance of art: it is disdain, anger, boldness, freedom, involved in a continued stream of argument: and, of all human productions, the orations of Demosthenes present to us the models which approach the nearest to perfection.' [G.F.]

DEMOURS, P., a Fr. phys. and oculist, 1702-1795. His son ANTH., also an oculist, 1762-1836.

DEMOUSHER, C. A., a French poet and mythologist, 1760-1801. His son P. ANTH., an architect, 1735-1803.

DEMPSTER, GEO., a Scotch gentleman, dis. as an M.P. and as a wr. on agriculture, &c., 1736-1818.

DEMPSTER, THOS., a Scotch hist. and antiq. writer, professor of theology at Pisa, 1579-1625.

DENHAM, MAJOR DIXON, born in 1786, in London, accompanied Clapperton and Oudney to Central Africa, 1822-25; and afterwards receiving an appointment at Sierra Leone, was carried off by fever at Accra on that coast in 1828.

DENHAM, SIR J., an English writer of verse, author of 'The Sophy,' &c., 1615-1668.

DENINA, G. C., an Italian hist., 1731-1813.

DENIS, JACQUES, a Fr. comedian, 17th cent.

DENIS, J. B., a curious Fr. wr., 17th century.

DENIS, LOUIS, a Fr. geographer, last century.

DENIS, MICHAEL, a Fr. miscel. wr., 1729-1800.

DENIS, NICOLAS, a topographical wr., 17th ct.

DENIS, ST., pope of Rome, 259-269.

DENMAN, THOS., M.D., a distinguished medical writer, father of the late chief justice of the Court of King's Bench, 1783-1815.

DENNER, B., a Dutch painter, 1685-1747.

DENNIS, JOHN, an English dram., 1657-1733.

DENON, DOMINIQUE-VIVANT, Baron, author of 'Travels in Upper and Lower Egypt during the Campaign of General Buonaparte,' and director-general of the museums, and superintendent of the mint under the empire, distinguished as a promoter of art in France, 1747-1825.

DENYS, P., a cel. French carver, 17th century.

DENYS, JAMES, a Flem. painter, 17th century.

D'EON, or EON DE BEAUMONT, the chevalier, a Fr. adventurer and diplomatist between Louis XV. and the court of London, whose name has been rendered notorious by the curious doubts which prevailed concerning his sex, author of 'Loisirs du Chevalier D'Eon,' a work in 13 vols. 8vo, containing num. historical and polit. treatises, 1728-1810.

DEPARCIEUX, ANTH., a Fr. writer on trigonometry and logarithms, 1703-1768. His nephew of the same name, an economist, &c., 1753-99.

DERBY, JAS. STANLEY, earl of, a royalist, distinguished in the civil wars, beheaded after the battle of Worcester, 1651. His wife CHARLOTTE, cel. for her brave defence of Latham House, d. 1664.

DERHAM, WM., an able div. and phil., canon of Windsor, and rec. of Upminster, Essex, 1657-1735.

DERHODE, N., a painter on glass, 16th cent.

DERJAVINE, G. ROM., a Rus. poet and statesman, dis. as one of the first men of his age, 1743-1816.

DEROSSI, J. G., an Italian poet, 1754-1827.

DERRICK, S., an Irish playwright, 1724-1769.

DERWENTWATER, J., earl of, an adherent of the Pretender, beh. after the bat. of Preston, 1716.

DESAGULIERS, J. T., an exp. phil., 1683-1743.

DESAIX DE VOYGOUX, L. CH. AN., one of the most celebrated generals of the French republic. He was appointed general of division of the army of the Rhine in 1796, and accompanied Napoleon in his expedition to Egypt, where he behaved with so much moderation that the Musulmans named him the 'Just sultan.' On his return to France he joined the army of Italy, and was killed at Marengo, 1768-1800.

[Tomb of Desaix.]

DESAUGIERS, M. A., a composer of music, 1742-1793. His son of the same name, a celebrated ballet composer, &c., 1772-1827.

DESCARTES, RENE, born in La Haye, Touraine, in 1596; died in Stockholm in 1650: in elevation and amplitude, his influence approaches that of Plato and Aristotle; he is the unquestioned compeer of Bacon and Newton. Des Cartes fell on one of those recurring periods when Philosophy is in decrepitude, representing neither knowledge, nor liberty, nor wisdom; and he regenerated it. We can speak but briefly either of what he did or what he was.—1. In an epoch of dogma and ignorance and intolerance, an original Thinker appears, as if inevitably, to strike always into the same course. Turning from the disorder of the received Physical Sciences, Lord Bacon prepared for his 'Instauratio,' by research concerning true METHOD in Physical Inquiry: Des Cartes, repelled by corresponding disgust, from the moral and psychological logomachies of his time, demanded—what is fitting METHOD in Speculative Philosophy; and what the basis and criterion of certainty? The reply was not a new one, but only a reproduction of the method of Socrates, of Plato, of Aristotle, and its adjustment to the condition and culture of his time. The primal and sufficient ground of certainty in Speculative Philosophy, is the content of our human Consciousness. Cogito ergo sum is not a syllogism, but a statement of the manner in which the fact of existence becomes revealed. The phenomena of mind are not proveable; they are FIRST FACTS. The right sifting and analysis of these primary mental phenomena, is the sole work of Reflection—the single legitimate aim of Philosophy. Inquiry evolves their true signification, determines their reach, disengages them from foreign elements, and ascertains their metaphysical import and value; but with this, inquiry ends; it cannot logically affect one of them with doubt. Two great achievements were solicited in modern times, from this reassertion of the power and functions of rational psychology. First, to put down all theoretic scepticisms after the fashion of Bayle's. Doubt may, and ought to affect particular opinions or conclusions, but to erect Doubt into a principle, is, according to Des Cartes, a sheer paralogism. Doubt in this sense is virtually an act of Belief; it is a confidence in one state of mind, or one intellectual process; but why among all states of mind select this one for confidence? Pyrrhonism in every form—whether as scepticism or dogmatism—is irreconcileable with true method. Secondly, Cartesianism refused to estimate the value or reality of our primary intuitions by their accordance or non-accordance with any system. Every logical process rests on some of our intuitions; so that here too is a paralogism. One such paralogism was developed in the Physiological and French Sensational schools: a form of error recently revived by M. Comte. Another is the attempt of powerful Churches to repudiate Philosophy in name of Revelation. The Gallican Church in its Augustan era, did not commit this error; neither has it ever been the position of our English Hierarchy: no church so conducting itself can long endure. A Religion without a Philosophy, must ever evolve in the long run, dogma without creed, and a clergy without a people.—2. Something more definite regarding the method of Des Cartes may be gathered from his treatment of the argument regarding the Being of a GOD: his proof is not an à priori one; it rests on facts, as directly as the argument from external design—the fact, viz.: that our human consciousness reveals Ideas having the attributes of Universality and Necessity. Ideas of this kind, said Des Cartes, cannot be the product or reflection of man's finite and imperfect nature: therefore, a Being exists whose essential character enables him to communicate to us the Ideas of Infinity, Eternity, Self-existence, &c. The special proof given by ANSELM, also occurred to Des Cartes, and was expanded by him. The logic of these arguments—to which, indeed, all à priori proofs may be reduced—is open to only two exceptions. First, it may be denied that Ideas exist having the characters of Universality and Necessity; Secondly, it may be questioned whether it is legitimate to pass from a phenomenon in Psychology to a reality in Ontology;—it does not follow, says the philosopher of Konigsberg, from the existence of an Idea, that there is any externality corresponding to it. As to the former objection see articles CONDILLAC, GASSENDI, LOCKE, PLATO, &c.: the latter is noticed at length in articles KANT and REID.—3. The student must look for no completed Psychology, or even an approach to it, in the writings of Des Cartes. Owing to the absence of every attempt at system, the cursory reader is apt to miss those traces of earnest searching insight which are strewn broad-cast over his pages; and the rapid critic easily makes out a case against one of the hardest and most original thinkers in Europe:—the extravagant misapprehension contained in the first three chapters of Locke's Essay, may be taken as a type of such criticisms. One fatal error of the great Frenchman requires to be explained because of its influence on subsequent speculation. He overlooked the essential activity of the thinking principle, regarding it rather as the subject of certain peculiar changes; and this led him to a profounder misapprehension of the Idea of Substance. LEIBNITZ corrected him by restoring to it, the attribute of CAUSE or FORCE; but not before the error had led to the engulphing fatalism of SPINOZA.—4. The intellectual vigour of Des Cartes left its marks on many various departments of knowledge. He was fond of Physiology. His hypothesis of Vortices prepared for the mechanical theory of planetary Motions. He founded Dioptrics—first impressing on it a geometrical character. But that by which he will longest live in Mathematics, is his most fertile idea of representing the properties of curves by equations. Measured by its influence this discovery takes rank with the infinitesmal calculus; nor has its empire been disputed until in the most recent times by the remarkable scheme of Quaternions.—5. The life of Des Cartes was given mostly to solitude and thought: nevertheless, on occasions, and with characteristic ardour, he took part in active pursuits. A soldier, he spent several years in camps; he travelled much, and carried on an extensive correspondence.—Whenever Philosophy falls off, and the throne of Truth is usurped by Scepticism or Dogmatism, regeneration will invariably come in one way—through restoration of the method and fundamental principle of Des Cartes. [J.P.N.]

[Birth-place of Descartes.]

DESCEMET, J., a French botanist, 1732-1810.
DESCROIZILLE, F. A. H., a Fr. che., d. 1825.
DESERIZ, J. S., a serrant of Hung., 1702-1765.
DESEZE, ROMAIN, one of the three counsel selected by Louis XVI. to defend him before the convention, after the restoration became president of the Court of Repeal, 1750-1828.
DESFONTAINES, THE ABBE P. F. GUYOT, a miscellaneous French writer, at first a Jesuit, noted for his immorality, 1685-1745.
DESFONTAINES, R. L., a Fr. bot., 1751-1833.
DESFORGES, P. J. B. C., a French comedian and dramatic author, 1746-1806.
DESHAYES, L., Baron De Courmenin, a Fr. diplo., beh. for conspiring against Richelieu, 1652.
DESHAYS, J. B., a French painter, 1729-1765.
DESHOULIERES, ANTOINETTE DU LIGIER DE LA GARDE, Dame, a French poetess and dramatic writer, 1634-1694. Her daughter, ANTOINETTE THERESA, also a poetess, 1662-1718.
DESJARDINS, MARTIN VAN DEN BOGAERT, a Fr. sculp. and caster of stat. in bronze, 1640-1694.

DESMAISEAUX, P., a Fr. mis. wr., 1666-1746.
DESMARETS, C., chief of the French police under the empire, auth. of 'Memoirs,' 1763-1823.
DESMARETS, H., a Fr. composer, 1662-1741.
DESMARETS, J., advocate-general of the parliament of Paris, put to death by Charles VI., 1382.
DESMARETS, N., a Fr. min. of finance, nephew of Colbert, cel. for his upright adminis., lived 1721.
DESMARETS, N., a Fr. physician, director of the manuf. of France, mem. of the Acad., 1725-1815.
DESMOULINS, BENEDICT CAMILLE, born at Guise in Picardy, 1762, and educated for the law at the college of Louis-le-Grand, was known as a wild young student of jurisprudence and Belles Lettres at the commencement of the French revolution, and is supposed to have been early acquainted with Robespierre, if, indeed, he was not his college friend. He made the first of those stirring harangues by which the people were excited to the revolutionary combat, from a table on which he mounted in the garden of the Palais Royal, when the Swiss and German troops had been ordered under arms, previous to the dismissal of Necker. It was a moment of intense excitement, for the police were eyeing the young orator, who with a loaded pistol in each hand, swore he would not be taken alive. This was on Sunday the 12th of July, 1789, and two days afterwards Camille fought with the future republicans at the storming of the Bastile. Before the end of the month the 'Rights of Man' had been promulgated by the Constituent Assembly, and was succeeded by that flood of journalism and club-eloquence on which so many obscure men were suddenly borne to the height of popularity. Camille made his first profession of the republican faith in a work which he entitled 'La France Libre,' in which he declared that a democracy was the only form of government suited to a people who were 'worthy of the name of men.' This was followed by his 'Discours de la Lanterne aux Parisiens,' subsequently called 'Les Révolutions de France et de Brabant,' a weekly paper, edited, as he styled himself, by the 'Attorney-General of the Lamp-Iron.' This atrocious style was chosen by Camille rather as his password to the Faubourgs than the echo of his own sentiments, and he abandoned it as a jeu d'esprit, too cruel to be taken in earnest. Towards the end of the year he united with Danton in the establishment of the Cordeliers' Club, the fiery element into which these two cast themselves to work out their own destiny, and to accomplish their part in the revolution. About this time he married the beautiful and accomplished Mademoiselle Duplessis, the devoted wife who afterwards hovered about his prison, and rested not till she arrived at the same cruel term of her existence as him she loved. It is related that the curé refused to marry him because he had written that there was as much evidence for the religion of Mahomet as for that of Christianity, and the dispute between them was referred to Mirabeau, who decided that a man's religion could only be judged by his exterior profession. Camille declared himself a good catholic, promised to amend his ways, and was thereupon married, the priest laughing at the idea of a Mirabeau acting as a father of the church. It is painful to read the words of the bridegroom when on his defence five years later:—'A marked fatality has ordained,' he said, 'that of sixty persons who signed my marriage contract, there should remain to me only two living friends, Robespierre and Danton! All the others have fled or are guillotined!' After the 10th of August, 1792, when Danton acquired the supremacy as minister of justice, Camille Desmoulins acted as his secretary, and though it is a disputed point whether he took any active part in the execrable massacres of September, it cannot be supposed that the 'attorney-general of the Lamp-iron' was the man to shrink from his share of the responsibility. The incident which marked the return of the friends to moderate counsels soon after the fall of the Girondins is related by Lamartine. It was one of the last evenings in the month of January, when Danton, Souberbielle, one of the jury of the revolutionary tribunal, and Camille Desmoulins came away together from the Palais de Justice, and spoke sorrowfully of the bloodshed of that day, when fifteen victims had fallen on the scaffold, and twenty-seven more had been condemned to suffer. The friends separated at Danton's door, and next day Camille Desmoulins had written the first number of the 'Vieux Cordelier,' in which the system of proscription was denounced, and a 'Committee of Clemency' demanded as a preliminary to clearing the prisons of the 'Suspect.' In the daring burst of eloquence and passion which marked the pages of this journal, the system of Robespierre was attacked under cover of an assault on the cruel atheists Hébert and Chaumette. The quarrel broke out in the Convention as a personal squabble, on the 8th of January, 1794; and Danton supported his friend, thinking it high time, as he expressed himself, that they should make work for the guillotine of public opinion by enlightening the people. Two days afterwards the quarrel was resumed, and Robespierre spoke of Camille as a wayward child whose person it was not necessary to injure, but demanded that his writings might be burned. 'To burn them,' exclaimed Camille starting up, 'is not to answer them!' and then, reckless of consequences, he complained that he had first submitted his copy to Robespierre, but that he had since refused to read his journal because he would not compromise himself by espousing either side of the quarrel. Danton acted as peace-maker on this occasion: but the harvest of death was ripening for this new party of mercy as for the Girondins; and Danton himself, together with his friends Camille Desmoulins, Philippeaux, and Lacroix, were arrested on the night of the 30th March, as Hérault de Séchelles had been only a little earlier. His wife, Lucile, addressed an affecting appeal to Robespierre, which, it is believed, never reached him, and Camille found the means of opening a secret correspondence with her. These letters have been preserved, and they are filled with expressions of the most passionate attachment and despair. At the bar of Tinville the prisoners were asked their age, name, and residence, 'My age,' said Camille, 'is that of the sansculotte Jesu—I am thirty-three; an age fatal to revolutionists!' He had prepared a written defence, but was not allowed to read it, and in a fit of indignation tore the paper to fragments, which, however, were afterwards collected by a friend, and their contents handed down to posterity. The commotion of the people was feared by Robespierre, and the wife of Camille was arrested the following night, that her beauty and the eloquence of her grief might not be the means of snatching away a victory which he had only obtained by surprise and subtlety. She was guillotined a few days after her husband. On his way to the scaffold, Camille Desmoulins forgot all his philosophy, and became almost frantic, struggling with his bonds and appealing to the people whom he had called to arms on the 14th of July—to whom, as he reminded them, he had given the national cockade. At the guillotine he recovered his sang froid, and, looking on the axe, said to the populace, 'Behold, then, the recompense reserved for the first apostle of liberty!' The date of his execution is the 5th of April, 1794, that of his wife's the 10th. He was a man of rare genius, light, sparkling, and sarcastic, but of a most undecided temperament, and headlong in his impulses. His dazzling eloquence rained words like fire; his epigrams flew like polished arrows, and, careless of results, he launched them against men of all parties, from Lafayette 'the liberator of two worlds,' and 'constellation of the white horse,' to St. Just who 'carried his head with the air of a saint-sacrament.' His ridicule of the Girondists in a 'History of the Brissotins,' published 1793, contributed to bring contempt upon that body by its very title; yet it must be remembered, to the honour of Camille and the Dantonists, that their attempt to save their enemies from the guillotine was the first step to their own ruin. [E.R.]

DESORGUES, Th., a French poet, 1764-1803.

DESOTEUX, F., a Fr. physician, 1724-1803.

DESPARD, Edward Marcus, an Irish officer, distin. in the West Indies during the Amer. war, and exec. for conspiring against the life of the king 1803.

DESPARD, John, a brave Eng. gen., 1744-1829.

DESPAZE, J., a Fr. satirical poet, 1769-1814.

DESPREAUX, J. S., a Fr. dram., 1747-1820.

DESSAIX, J. M., a general of the French revolution, member of the council of 500 till the 18th Brumaire, 1764-1825.

DESSALINES, J. J., a slave of St. Domingo, first emp. of Hayti under the title of James I., 1760-1806.

DESSOLLE, J. J. P. Augustin, a French general and statesman, distinguished in the campaign of Italy, Spain, and Russia, 1767-1828.

DESTOUCHES, A. C., a Fr. comp., 1672-1749.

DESTOUCHES, P. N., a Fr. dram., 1680-1754.

DESTREM, H., a member of the French convention, one of the most vigorous opponents of the coup d'état, 18th Brumaire, transported after the plot of the infernal machine, 1758-1805.

DEUTSCH, N. E., a Fr. painter, 1484-1530.

DEVAUX, J., a French surgeon, 1649-1729.

DEVAUX, Gabriel, a Fr. botanist, 1742-1802.

DEVEREUX, Robert, earl of Essex, the reputed favourite of Queen Elizabeth, distinguished as a military officer, gov. of Ireland during Tyrone's rebellion, born 1567, executed 1601. His son of the same name, commander for the parliament at the commencement of the civil war, 1592-1645.

DEVILLIERS, C., a Fr. naturalist, 1724-1809.

DEVONSHIRE, Georgiana Cavendish, duchess of, celebrated for her taste in art and the Belles Lettres, and for her personal charms, authoress of poems, 'Passage of St. Gothard,' &c., 1757-1806. ELIZABETH HERVEY, the second duchess, also distinguished for her beauty, her classical taste, and her love of art, 1759-1824.

DEVUEZ, ARNOLD, a Fr. painter, 1642-1724.

D'EWES, SIR S., an English hist., 1602-1650.

DEWEZ, L. D. J., a Fr. historian, 1760-1834.

DE-WINT, PETER, an English artist, d. 1849.

DE-WITT, JNO., a celebrated Dutch statesman, born 1625, grand pensionary of Holland from 1652, sacrificed with his brother CORNELIUS to the ambition of the House of Orange, 1672.

DHAFER, HISMAIL, caliph of Egypt, 1149-55.

DHAHER, ALI, caliph of Egypt, 1021-1036.

DHAHER, MOHAM., the thirty-fifth caliph of the Abasside dynasty, reigned nine months in 1225.

DHAHEZ, a sheik of Palestine, 1693-1775.

DIADUMENIANUS, MARCUS OPELIUS MACRINUS ANTONINUS, emperor of Rome 217, killed by the soldiers of Heliogabalus 218.

DIANA OF POITIERS, mistress of Henry II., cel. for her influence and her brilliant court, 1499-1566.

DIANA OF FRANCE, a natural daughter of Henry II., and wife of Horace Farnese and F. Montmorency, 1538-1619.

DIAS, B., a Portuguese poet, 16th century.

DIAS-DE-LUGO, J. B., a Span. jurist, d. 1556.

DIAS-GOMEZ, F., a Portug. poet, 1745-1795.

DIAS, P., a Portuguese Jesuit mis., 1621-1700.

DIAZ, BARTHOLOMEW, a knight of the royal household, was sent by the king of Portugal in August 1486, in quest of the dominions of the imaginary Christian prince, Prester John, supposed to be in India or Eastern Africa, while Covilhma and Payva went by land through Egypt. Diaz had two caravels of fifty tons each, and a small store-ship. Having touched at the African coast in lat. 26° S., 400 miles farther than any previous navigator had reached, he steered boldly south and lost sight of land. Storms which arose soon after bore him far E. of the Cape of Good Hope, which he was thus the first to double without knowing it. He had advanced to the mouth of the Great Fish River, making frequent inquiry after Prester John, when the crews insisted on his return. He now visited the Cape, determined its position with accuracy, and called it the Stormy Cape, a name which for better augury the king, John II., changed to the present designation. Diaz reached Lisbon in 1487. He perished at sea in 1500, in one of Cabral's ships commanded by him.—MICHAEL DIAZ of Arragon, was one of the companions of Columbus. He became governor of Porto Rico, and died in 1512. [J.B.]

DIAZ, E., a Portug. Jesuit mis., 17th century.

DIAZ, F., a Spanish missionary, died 1646.

DIAZ, G., a Portuguese painter, 16th century.

DIAZ, J., a protestant convert of Spain, murd. by his brother, who afterwards hanged himself, 1546.

DIAZ, M., a Spanish navigator, died 1512.

DIAZ, P., a Spanish Jesuit and mis., 1546-1602.

DIBDIN, CHARLES, was born at Southampton in the year 1745, and was educated at Winchester. His father, who was a silversmith, first meant that his son should enter the church, but his early and devoted attachment to music soon frustrated the paternal intentions. He received some lessons in music from Mr. Kent (whose anthems are well known), and commenced his career as poet and musician at sixteen years of age, and produced at Covent Garden Theatre an opera named 'The Shepherd's Artifice.' About this time he made his debut as an actor, and was well received. In 1768 he was the original Mungo in his own 'Padlock.' In 1772 he produced the music to 'The Deserter;' in 1774 the words and music of 'The Waterman;' and in 1775 'The Quaker.' In 1778 he became composer to the Covent Garden Theatre, with a salary of £10 per annum. About the year 1782 he built the Circus Theatre, afterwards known as the Surrey, and continued to manage it with indifferent success for nearly four years. In 1778 he published his musical tour, and in 1789 he gave the first of his entertainments, under the title of 'The Whim of the Moment,' which soon became very popular. These entertainments, of which he was performer, poet, and musician, furnished his sole means of livelihood until the year 1805, when he retired from public life with a government pension of £200. In 1813 Dibdin was attacked with paralysis, and he died in July, 1814. Besides the operas named, Dibdin wrote two novels, and a few smaller literary works, and wrote and composed the enormous number of nine hundred songs! To him is due whatever merit there is of having originated that kind of musical entertainment which has been followed by so many vocalists, from Incledon to Wilson, Templeton, and John Parry. [J.M.]

DIBDIN, THOS., eldest son of the preceding, a dist. dramatic author and song-writer, 1771-1841.

DIBDIN, THOS. FROGNALL, D.D., a celebrated bibliographer and antiquarian writer, 1775-1847.

DIBIL-AL-KHOSSAI, an Arab. poet, 765-860.

DICEARCHUS, a Greek philosopher, historian, and geographer, disciple of Aristotle, 4th cent. B.C.

DICETO, RAOUL DE, an Engl. hist., 13th cent.

DICK, SIR ALEX., a Sco. physician, remembered for introducing the culture of rhubarb, 1703-1785.

DICK, MAJOR-GEN. SIR ROBERT HENRY, a Scotch peninsular and medical officer, killed at the battle of Sobraon, 1846.

DICKINSON, E., an Eng. archæol. 1624-1707.

DICKSON, A., a Scot. wr. on agricul., d. 1776.

DICKSON, D., a Scotch divine, 1591-1664.

DICKSON, J., a Scotch botanist, died 1822.

DIDEROT, DENYS, was born in 1713, at Langres in Champagne, where his father was a respectable tradesman. Educated for the church, but declining to take orders, he was next placed in the chambers of a legal practitioner in Paris; but, in like manner, he abandoned the law. Literature now became his profession; and, after a few years of obscure drudgery, he became one of the most famous among those literary and scientific men, whose attacks on the established order of things, religious and ecclesiastical as well as political, are alleged to have acted so powerfully in precipitating the French revolution. It was Diderot that projected the huge work which, receiving the contributions of these so-called philosophers in their several departments, gave them their usual title of 'Encyclopedists.' The 'Encyclopédie, ou Dictionnaire Raisonné des Sciences, des Arts, et des Métiers,' was designed, not merely to supersede the imperfect dictionaries of universal knowledge that already existed, but to teach, on every occasion which could admit the teaching, those social doctrines which were held by the writers. Among the contributors were Voltaire, Rousseau, and several very eminent men of science; the work was edited at first by Diderot and D'Alembert, and afterwards by the former alone; and, among its very unequal contents, his articles are distinguished both for good writing and for versatile ability. The publication continued, amidst many obstacles, from 1751 to 1769. In the course of it, and afterwards, Diderot wrote several didactic treatises, indecent and irreligious novels, and two sentimental comedies; and his published correspondence, especially with Voltaire and Grimm, throws much light on the gloomy picture which French society and morals then presented. He died at Paris in 1784. [W.S.]

DIDIER, St., a Christian bp. and martyr, 264.

DIDIER, last king of the Lombards, 757-773.

DIDO, a princess of Tyre, cel. as the founder and queen of Carthage, supposed date about 880 B.C.

DIDOT, the name of a family distin. in the history of French printing, the most celebrated of whom is Firmin, the inventor of stereotyping, and also a classical scholar and author, 1764-1836.

DIDYMUS, a Greek grammarian, 1st cent. B.C.

DIDYMUS, a divine of Alexandria, 308-395.

DIEBITSCH-ZABALKANSKI, a Russian general and favourite of Alexander, and commander in the war against the Poles 1830, died 1831.

DIEFFENBACH, J. F., a German surgeon, celebrated for his skill in supplying artificial noses, curing strabismus or squinting, &c., 1795-1848.

DIELHELM, J. H., a Ger. antiquarian, d. 1764.

DIEMEN, Anthony Van, governor-general of the Dutch establishments in the East Indies, was born at Kuilenberg 1595, and going to India became successively accountant to the government, and member of the supreme council. In 1631, or 1632, he returned to Holland as commander of the India fleet, and the year following was raised to the dignity which he enjoyed till his death, in 1645. While holding this office, namely, in 1642, he sent Tasman on a voyage to the south, when that part of New Holland was discovered which has since been called Van Diemen's Land.

DIEPENBEKE, A. Van, a Fl. pain., 1607-1675.

DIEREVILLE, a French navigator, 17th cent.

DIES, Gaspard, a Portuguese painter, d. 1671.

DIETERICH, J. C., a Ger. savant, 1612-1669.

DIETRICH, C. G. E., a Ger. painter, 1712-1774.

DIETRICH, J. F., a Ger. Latin poet, 1753-1833.

DIETRICH, P. F., Baron De, a mineralogist, first constitutional mayor of Strasburg, guill. 1793.

DIEU, Anthony, a French painter, 1662-1727.

DIEU, Louis De, a Dutch prot. min., cel. as a biblical commentator and Orientalist, 1590-1642.

DIEU, St. Jean De, a relig. founder, 1495-1550.

DIEZ, Juan Martin, a dist. guerilla chieftain of Spain, exec. for alleged conspiracy, 1755-1825.

DIGBY, Sir Everard, an English gentleman, executed for his complicity in the gunpowder plot, 1581-1609. His son, Sir Kenelm, a naval commander under Charles I., and philosophical writer, 1603-1665. John, of the same family, earl of Bristol, a political negotiator and partizan of Charles I., 1580-1653. George, Lord Digby, son of John, a zealous royalist, 1612-1676.

DIGGES, Leonard, an English geometrician, died 1574. His son Thomas, an astronomer and mathematician, died 1595. Sir Dudley, son of Thomas, a diplomatist and ambassador, author of a treatise on right, 1583-1639. Dudley, son of the last named, au. of some political tracts, d. 1643.

DILLENIUS, John James, a German botanist, first professor of botany at Oxford, 1687-1747.

DILLON, the name of an Irish family, the first of whom mentioned by biographers is Wentworth, earl of Roscommon, a hanger-on of the English court, 1633-1684. Others are mentioned in the service of France, as Arthur, lieut.-gen., distin. under Vendome and Villeroi, 1670-1733. His grandson of the same name, governor of St. Kitt's and Tobago, deputy to the estates-general, commander of the army of the north, and afterwards in the army of Dumouriez, ex. 1791. Theobald, the father of the last named, massacred, and honoured with a place in the Pantheon, 1792.

DILWORTH, Thomas, author of a series of useful schoolbooks, died 1670.

DIMSDALE, Th., an Engl. phys., 1712-1800.

DINO, or DINUS, a jurist of the 13th century.

DINTER, G. F., a Germ. theologian, 1760-1831.

DINTERUS, E., a French chronicler, d. 1448.

DIOCLETIAN, a common soldier who became emperor of Rome, 286, cel. for the persecution com. against the Christians 303, abdicated 306, died 313.

DIODATI, Dominic, an It. savant, 1736-1801.

DIODATI, Giovanni, a protestant divine of Geneva, kn. as a biblical annotator, 1576-1649.

DIODORUS of Sicily, a famous Greek historian, au. of a universal hist. in 40 books, of which only 15 and some fragments are extant, 1st c. B.C.

DIODORUS of Tyre, a Gr. philos., 2d c. B.C.

DIOGENES of Apollonia, a Greek philosopher of the Ionic or physical school of Anaximenes, 5th century B.C.

DIOGENES, the Babylonian, a Stoic philosopher, teacher of dialectic in Rome, 200 B.C.

DIOGENES, the celebrated Greek cynic, was a native of Sinope, in Pontus, where he was born 413 B.C. He was banished from his country for coining false money, and repaired to Athens, where he studied philosophy under Antisthenes, and surpassed his master in the rudeness of his manners, and his austere views of human nature. He walked about the streets with a tub on his head, in which it is said he lodged at night. He is the type of cynicism, and for his zeal as a moralist has been called the 'Mad Socrates.' Being on a voyage he was taken by pirates and sold into slavery at Corinth, where he became tutor to the sons of a rich citizen, but died in the greatest misery, B.C. 324. His reputation procured him a visit from Alexander the Great, who asked Diogenes if there was anything in which he could gratify him. 'Only,' he answered, 'do not stand any longer between me and the sun.' Some moral 'sentences' are extant under his name, but they are thought to be apocryphal. The inhabitants of Sinope raised statues to his memory, and the marble figure of a dog was placed on a high column erected on his tomb.

DIOGENES LAERTIUS, a Greek philosopher, supposed to be of the Epicurean school, celebrated as an historian for his very valuable 'Lives of the Philosophers,' 2d century B.C.

DIOMEDES, a Latin grammarian, 5th century.

DION, a disciple of Plato, cel. for deliver. Sicily from the tyranny of Dionysius, assassin. B.C. 354.

DION CASSIUS, a Greek historian, 3d cent.

DION CHRYSOSTOME, a Greek orator, 1st c.

DIONYSIUS, a Greek painter, 5th cent. B.C.

DIONYSIUS, the first of the name, called the Elder, tyrant of Syracuse, 405-368 B.C.

DIONYSIUS, the second, called the Younger, son and successor of the preceding, 368-356 B.C.

DIONYSIUS, a patriarch or bishop of Alexandria, dist. in the condemnation of Sabellius, 248-265.

DIONYSIUS, an ancient geographer, surnamed Periegetes, from his poem containing a description of the world in Greek verse, 4th century.

DIONYSIUS, THE AREOPAGITE, a bishop of Athens, to whom certain writings containing an application of Platonism to Christianity have been dubiously attributed, burned alive about 95.

DIONYSIUS OF HALICARNASSUS, author of an hist. work entitled 'Roman Antiquities,' abt. 30 B.C.

DIOPHANTUS, a mathematician of Alexandria, who flourished about the year 480 A.D. He originated a peculiar department of Algebra, which still bears his name. It relates to questions about whole numbers, squares, cubes, primes, &c. The best edition of his work is by Fermat.

DIOSCORIDES, PEDANIUS, a celebrated Greek physician and botanist, was born at Anazarba in Cilicia. The dates of his birth and death are not known; but it is generally believed that he lived in the reign of the emperor Nero. He is said to have been named Phacas, from his face being marked with spots like lentils. He was a soldier in his youth, and it is surmised he may have been attached to the army as physician. He practised medicine, and he tells us himself that he travelled over Asia Minor, Greece, Italy, and part of ancient Gaul, in quest of plants. His works contain chiefly an account of the medicinal virtues of the plants he describes; and their principal value appears to consist in their having given rise to numerous learned disquisitions, and an immense deal of controversy, in after times, as to the identity of the species he mentions. This, no doubt, contributed much to advance the knowledge of botany amongst the medical men who succeeded him, and who in these times were almost the only persons who studied plants. The first printed edition of his works appeared at Venice, in the original Greek, in 1499; but since then many editions have been printed, and translations made into almost every language of Europe, except English. In late times Tournefort made much use of his works, and still more lately they have given origin to the 'Flora Graeca' of Sibthorp, which has been edited by Sir James Edward Smith. A genus of plants has been named after him by Plumier; the dioscorea, a genus which contains the yam. [W.B.]

DIPPEL, JOHN CONRAD, a German physician and chemist, remarkable for his pretensions in theology and alchymy. He is the disc. of Prussian blue, and of an oil which bears his name, 1672-1734.

DISNEY, JOHN, an English divine, distinguished for his activity and disinterestedness as a magistrate, 1677-1730. A descendant of the same name, chaplain to Bishop Law, and author of religious biographies, 1746-1816.

D'ISRAELI, ISAAC, the son of a Venetian merchant, of Jewish extraction, who had settled in England, was born at Enfield, near London, in 1766. His education was chiefly received at Amsterdam and Leyden, and was completed by a tour in France and Italy. Coming, at an early age, into possession of an independent fortune, he was able to devote the whole of his long life to literary study and composition. In the first stage of his authorship he contributed poems to the 'Gentleman's Magazine,' and other periodicals, and wrote some small novels, of which the satirical piece called 'Flim Flams' is said to have been one. But he soon began to confine himself to his favourite department of Literary History; commencing, when he was twenty-five years old, those miscellaneous collections and remarks, which, though pleasant and gossiping rather than philosophically critical, have preserved and disseminated a very large mass of curious and valuable knowledge. In 1791 appeared the first volume of his 'Curiosities of Literature,' which were extended to three volumes, gradually enlarged, and followed by a second series in 1823. In 1795 he published his 'Essay on the Literary Character,' and, in 1796, his 'Literary Miscellanies.' The most interesting of his works, 'The Calamities of Authors,' and 'Quarrels of Authors,' appeared in 1812, 1813, and 1814; and these were followed, in 1816, by his 'Character of King James I.' A subsequent work, the 'Commentaries on the Life and Reign of Charles I.,' gained for him from Oxford the honorary degree of D.C.L. In 1839 he became blind, but was still able to complete his 'Amenities of Literature,' which had been designed to be a part in a survey of the 'Literary History of England.' Mr. D'Israeli died in the beginning of 1848, at his country-seat, Bradenham house, in Buckinghamshire. The late chancellor of the exchequer is his eldest son. [W.S.]

DITTON, HUMPH., an Eng. geomet., 1675-1715.

DJEMCHID, an ancient king of Persia, regarded as the founder of Persian civilization, abt. 800 B.C.

DLUGLOSS, J. L., a Polish hist., 1415-1480.

DOBROWSKI, J., a savant of Hung., 1753-1829.

DOBSON, M., a physician and natural philosopher, died 1784. His wife, SUSANNAH, a clever miscellaneous writer, close of the century.

DOBSON, WILLIAM, a distinguished English portrait and historical painter, of the reign of Charles I., was born in London in 1610, where he died in 1646, at the early age of thirty-six. Dobson's education consisted chiefly in copying pictures by Titian and Vandyck, which he met with at his master's, Sir Robert Peake's. He was recommended to the king by Vandyck, and succeeded him as Sergeant Painter to Charles I., who had a high opinion of Dobson, whom he called the English Tintoret.—(Walpole, Anecdotes of Painting in England, &c.) [R.N.W.]

DOD, JOHN, a Heb. scholar and divine, called by Fuller 'the last of the Puritans,' 1547-1645.

DODD, C., an English catholic historian, d. 1745.

DODD, RALPH, a civil engineer, author of many works of great public utility, and a great promoter of steam navigation, 1761-1822. His son, GEORGE, dist. in the same prof., the projector and resident engineer of Waterloo Bridge, d. 1827.

DODD, DR. WILLIAM, author of num. religious and other works, b. 1729, executed for forgery 1777.

DODDRIDGE, SIR J., an Eng. jurist, 1555-1628.

DODDRIDGE, PHILIP, D.D., the son of an oilman, was born in London on 26th June, 1702. Both parents being very pious, took extraordinary pains to rear their numerous family in the nurture and admonition of the Lord; and Philip, the youngest, was introduced by his mother to a knowledge of the characters and scenes of the Old and New Testament history through means of some Dutch tiles that lined a corner of their sitting-room. The associations of those primitive pictures, together with the remembrance of the sound and pious reflections his parent founded on them, made indelible impressions on his infant mind. In his childhood he was left an orphan; and the little patrimony bequeathed to him having been lost through the imprudent management of the trustee appointed by his father, young Doddridge was indebted to the kind liberality of Mr. Samuel Clarke, a dissenting minister, and master of a private school at St. Alban's, who took him into his house, and educated him gratuitously. Doddridge repaid the kindness of his disinterested and pious benefactor by not only making uncommon attainments in learning, but by strong and beautiful evidences of personal religion. His early wish was to devote his life to the ministry, but great difficulties lay in the way to the accomplishment of this object; and while he was anxiously pondering the matter in his mind, he received an offer from the duchess of Bedford, who lived in the neighbourhood, and had heard of his character and circumstances, to send him to either of the two universities, on condition of his becoming a clergyman in the Church of England. So tempting an offer it required strong and conscientious principles to resist. But his dissent being the result of enlightened and matured conviction, he respectfully and gratefully declined the proposal of his noble patroness. His old and steady friend, Mr. Samuel Clarke, now undertook to bear the expense of his education; and Doddridge, regarding this offer as indicating the leading of Providence, gladly embraced it, by repairing to the academy of Kilworth, in Leicestershire, where, under the auspices of the learned and pious Dr. Jennings, he pursued the requisite studies with great ardour. On 22d July, 1722, he was licensed to preach, and such was the fame of his pulpit ministrations that he soon found himself settled over the congregation at Kilworth, as successor to Dr. Jennings. At the end of seven years he removed to Harborough, to be assistant to the venerable Mr. Some; but this situation, too, he ere long relinquished, to take the superintendence of a dissenting academy for the training of young ministers, an office to which his high celebrity as a scholar and divine procured his unanimous appointment by the electors. A very pressing invitation from the Independent congregation in Northampton, enforced by the advice of Dr. Watts and other friends to accept it, led him to a new sphere of labour; and from 24th December, 1729, he discharged in that town the double duty of pastor of a large congregation and tutor to the Theological Seminary. Seldom has there been a more laborious—never was there a more conscientious life than that of Doddridge. To serve his Divine Master was the ruling principle of his heart; and to the advancement of the sacred cause he brought all the energies of an active mind, and all the stores of an almost boundless knowledge daily to bear. Many students repaired from all parts of the kingdom to enjoy the benefit of his prelections; and amongst these not a few who afterwards rose to distinction, not among the dissenters only, but in the established churches of England and Scotland, in America, and even in Holland. The university of Aberdeen conferred on him, in 1736, the honorary degree of Doctor in Divinity. He was a voluminous author. Amongst his works, all of which have long been well known and highly valued in the religious world, we may enumerate his 'Sermons on Regeneration,' his 'Sermons to Young People,' his 'Life of Colonel Gardner.' But the principal are the 'Rise and Progress of Religion in the Soul,' and the 'Family Expositor.' Dr. Doddridge's frame, never robust at any time, was enfeebled by his incessant labours, and severe cold having settled on his lungs, and been followed by symptoms of consumption, he was advised to try the effects of a sea voyage. On 30th September, 1751, he sailed from Falmouth in a vessel bound for Lisbon, where he landed on 13th October, and being completely exhausted he sank in a few days, expressing to Mrs. Doddridge, who accompanied him, his firm faith and joyful hope in Christ. [R.J.]

DODINGTON, GEORGE BUBB, or according to his title, Lord Melcombe, an English statesman, best known as author of a 'Diary,' 1691-1762.

DODONÆUS, R., a Dutch botanist, 1517-1585.

DODSLEY, ROBERT, the well-known bookseller and miscellaneous writer, was born of poor parents, and though he commenced life as a footman, rose to considerable eminence as a dramatic author and essayist, and acquired a handsome fortune as a publisher. His literary connections and friendships include the first names of last century. The most celebrated of his theatrical pieces is 'Cleone,' a tragedy, and the most useful of his speculations the 'Annual Register,' commenced 1758, in conjunction with Edmund Burke. 'He bore an excellent private character, was modest in his prosperity, grateful to his early friends and patrons, and disposed to bestow on others the same kind assistance which he himself had experienced.' Born at Mansfield 1703, died 1764.

DODSON, M., an Engl. theol. wr., 1732-1799.

DODSWORTH, R., an Eng. antiq., 1585-1654.

DODWELL, HEN., a famous wr. on controversial, theological, and classical subjects, 1641-1711. His son, of the same name, a lawyer and sceptical writer, 1742. His younger son, WILLIAM, archdeacon of Berks, and an able divine, 1709-1765.

DOEDERLEIN, J. A., a Ger. hist., 1675-1745.

DOEDERLEIN, J. C., a Ger. theol., 1746-1792.

DOERFEL, G. S., a Germ. astronomer, 17th c.

DOES, JACOB VAN DER, a Dutch painter, 1623-1673. His son, of the same name and profession, distinguished as 'the younger,' 1654-1693. SIMON, his eldest son, a pupil of his father, whose style he adopted, 1653-1717.

DOGGET, THOS., an Irish playwright, d. 1721.

DOGHERTY, THOS., a writer on law, d. 1805.

DOGIEL, M., a Polish historian, 17th century.

DOHM, C. W. VON, a Prus. diplom., 1751-1820.

DOLABELLA, PUBLIUS CORNELIUS, the son-in-law of Cicero, successively tribune, consul, and governor of Syria; after the death of Cæsar, he put an end to his life when besieged by Cassius in Laodicea 43 B.C.

DOLCE, CARLO, a Floren. painter, 1616-1686. AGNES, his daughter, also a painter, died 1690.

DOLCE, Louis, a Ven. liter. savant, 1508-1568.

DOLET, Stephen, a French reformer and literary savant, burned as an atheist, 1509-1546.

DOLGORUCKI, John Michalovitsch, a distinguished Russian soldier and poet, 1764-1824.

DOLIVAR, J., a Spanish engraver, 1641-1710.

DOLLOND, J., an English optician, distinguished in conj. with his sons for many improvements in optical and mathem. instru., 1706-1762.

DOLOMIEU, Deodatus, a Fr. geologist and mineralogist, whose name has been conferred on a calc. stone which he was first to describe, 1750-1801.

DOMAING, Mohammed, an Ar. nat., d. 1405.

DOMAT, J., a French jurist, 1625-1765.

DOMBAY, F. De, an Aus. Oriental., 1758-1810.

DOMBEY, Joseph, a Fr. phys., one of the most col. French naturalists of the last ct., 1742-1793.

DOMENICHINO, the name by which Domenico Zampieri is commonly known. He was born at Bologna in 1581, and studied some time under Denis Calvert, but afterwards entered the school of the Caracci. Domenichino painted a long time at Rome, and his picture of the Communion of St. Jerome there, in the Gallery of the Vatican, is considered one of the masterpieces of Italian painting, yet the painter received only ten guineas for it. Able in drawing, expression, and composition, Domenichino had many enemies, by whom he was much persecuted, both at Rome and Naples. He died in the latter city April 15, 1641, and it was supposed that he was poisoned by the agency of the notorious triumvirate Spagnuoletto, Corenzio, and Giambattista Caracciolo, known as the 'Cabal of Naples.' Domenichino is generally considered the ablest of the pupils of the Caracci.—(Bellori, Vite de' Pittori, &c.; Passeri, Vite de' Pittori, &c.) [R.N.W.]

DOMETT, Sir W., an Eng. nav. offi., 1754-1828.

DOMINIC, De Guzman, generally called St. Dominic, founder of the order of friars named after him, and of the inquisition, noted for his cruel persecuting spirit, 1170-1221.

[Dominican Friar.]

DOMINIC LORICATUS, so named from wearing an iron cuirass, an Italian monk, died 1060.

DOMINIS, M. A. De, a Jesuit and phys. of Dalmatia, the first to explain the rainbow, 1566-1624.

DOMITIAN, or, with all his names, Titus Flavius Sabinas Domitianus, one of the most cruel and debauched of the Roman emperors, born 51, succeeded Titus 81, assassinated 96.

DOMITIUS, procl. emp. at Alexandria, 288-290.

DOMITIUS AENOBARBUS, a Roman consul, 122 B.C. A prætor and consul of the same name was the husband of Agrippina and father of Nero.

DON, Sir G., a British officer, 1756-1832.

DONALD I., king of Scotland, the first prince of that country who embraced Christianity, d. 216.

DONALD II., slain by his successor 254.

DONALD III., succeeded 254, slain 260.

DONALD IV., distinguished for his piety and for aiding the children of Ethelred to recover Northumberland, died 647.

DONALD V., conquered by the Picts, d. 828.

DONALD VI., dis. by his victory over the Danes and the friendship of Alfred the Great, 894-904.

DONALD VII., otherwise called Duncan, distinguished for his repulse of the Norwegians, murdered by Macbeth, 1034-1041.

DONALD VIII., called the Bane, or Donald Bane, usurped the throne 1093-1098.

DONALDSON, Jo., an artist and an., 1737-1801.

DONALDSON, Jos., a miscel. writer, d. 1830.

DONALDSON, W., a phil. writer, 17th century.

DONATELLO, an Italian sculptor, 1383-1466.

DONATI, A., an Ital. antiquarian, 1584-1640.

DONATI, V., an Italian naturalist, 1713-1763.

DONATO, F., a doge of Venice, disting. for having preserved the neutrality of the state during the wars between Charles V. and Henry II., and for enriching it with works of art, 1545-1553.

DONATO, L., a doge of Venice, distin. for his successful resistance to pope Paul V., 1606-1612.

DONATUS, an African bishop, the author of the schism named after him, 4th century.

DONN, Abr., an Engl. math., 1718-1746. His brother Benjamin, a math. and arith., 1729-1798.

DONNE, J., an Engl. poet and theol., 1573-1631.

DONNER, Raphael, a Ger. sculp., 1688-1740.

DONNINI, Jerome, an Ital. painter, 1681-1743.

DONNISSU, Marquis De, a Ven. gen., ex. 1793.

DONIZETTI, Gaetano, was born at Bergamo in the year 1798. His father destined him for the law, but for which profession he himself had no liking. His first taste seems to have lain towards painting, but he ultimately devoted himself to the study of music, in which he achieved a very high and prominent position. His first master in music was the celebrated Simon Mayer, and he studied for three years at the conservatory of Bologna under Mattei. He composed in all sixty-three operas, the first of which, 'Enrico di Borgoyna,' was performed at Venice in 1818, in which Madame Catalani sustained the principal character, and in which Signor Fioravanti also took a part. Up to the year 1827 he had composed no fewer than nineteen operas, of which the 'Zoraide' was the most successful. In 1828 he ceased to write in the style of Rossini; and his own great originality first developed itself in 'Esule di Roma,' which was performed at the San Carlo at Naples, and in which Lablache sustained the principal bass part. This was his earliest triumph, and the new style gave ample promise of the future career of 'Il Maestro.' In the same year he composed other three operas. In 1829 he produced 'Il Paria' and 'Il Castello di Kenilworth,' at the San Carlo. In 1830 he wrote four operas for the same establishment, and an Oratorio, 'Il Diluvio Universale.' For the carnival of 1831 he composed his 'Anna Bolena,' which established his reputation, and after which every manager in Europe became desirous to have a work from the great composer. His next opera was 'Fausta.' In 1832 he composed 'Ugo Conte di Parigi,' the 'Elisir d' Amore,' and 'Sancia di Castiglia;' next year he wrote 'Il Furioso,' 'Parisina,' and 'Torquato Tasso.' 1834 gave to the world his other masterpiece, 'Lucrezia Borgia,' and 'Maria Stuärda.' In the same year he composed 'Rosmonda d' Inghilterra.' In 1835 he wrote 'Gemma di Vergi,' 'Marino Faliero,' which was first performed in London, and the world-renowned 'Lucia di Lammermoor,' which was brought out at San Carlo. In 1836 he composed 'Belisario' for the carnival of Venice, and produced 'Il Campanello,' 'Betly,' and 'L'Assidio di Calais.' In 1837 he wrote two operas, namely, 'Pia di Tolomei' and 'Roberto Devereux.' In 1838 he composed 'Maria di Rudenz;' in 1839 'Gianni di Parigi;' and in 1840 'La Fille du Regiment' for the Opera Comique of Paris. This year he also produced 'Les Martyrs' and 'La Favorita.' In 1841 he composed 'Adelia,' in 1842 'Maria Padilla' and 'Linda di Chamouni.' In 1843 he produced his 'Don Pasquale' for Grisi, Mario, Tamburini, and Lablache, which was brought out at the Italian Opera of Paris. In the same year he composed for Venice his lyric tragedy, 'Maria di Rohan,' and for the Academie Royale of Paris his 'Don Sebastian de Portugal.' At the carnival of Naples in 1844, his sixty-third and last opera 'Caterina Cornaro,' was produced, while two unfinished operas were amongst his manuscripts, and he was preparing another comic opera for Grisi, Mario, Ronconi, and Lablache. At this time his mind, which had been so severely tasked, utterly gave way, and he was first taken to a Maison de Santé at Vitry, near Paris: subsequently his nephew, who was then director of music to the sultan at Constantinople, had him removed to a house at the Champs Elysées. He was ultimately conveyed to Bergamo, where it was thought the scenes of his early life might assist his recovery; but all was of no avail. He died on the 8th of April, 1848, after five days' struggle, surrounded by his early friends and admirers. Donizetti was married to Virginia Vasseli, the daughter of an advocate in Rome, who died in Naples in 1835. Donizetti succeeded Zingarelli in the direction of the conservatory at Naples, and held office as chapel-master to the imperial court of Vienna. He composed, besides his operas, various detached vocal pieces, masses and vespers, a Miserere, some quartetts, overtures, variations for the piano-forte, a Monody for the death of Malibran, &c. Donizetti was an excellent poet as well as a musician, and wrote some of his own libretti. In rapidity of composition he rivalled Rossini, and has been known to score an opera in twenty-four hours, a period barely sufficient for the mere manual labour of writing down the notes. [J.M.]

DONUS, the first of the name, pope for about a year, 677; the second, elected 974-975.

DOODY, SAMUEL, an Engl. botanist, d. 1706.

DOPPET, F. A., a man of letters, and gen. of the Fr. rep. army, mem. of the coun. of 500, 1753-1800.

DORAT, C. J., a French dram. wr., 1734-1780.

DORAT, JOHN, or, according to the Latinized form, Auratus, a Fr. scholar and poet, 1507-1588.

DORIA, the name of an illustrious family of Genoa, the chief of whom are—OBERTO, dist. for a naval victory over the Pisans, 1284. ZAMBA, who defeated the Venetian admiral, Dandolo, 1298. PAGANINO, who defeated the Venetian admiral, Pisani, 1352-1354. LUCIEN, killed in a battle with the Venetians, in which his fleet was victorious, 1379. PIERRE, who was compelled to surrender his whole fleet to Victor Pisani, 1380. ANDREA, surnamed the 'Father and Defender of his Country,' dis. as the greatest commander and patriot of which the state can boast, 1468-1560.

DORIA, P. M., a Neapolitan philos., 1675-1743.

DORIGNY, M., a French painter and engraver, 1617-1663. His sons LOUIS and NICHOLAS, distinguished in the same arts, the former 1654-1742, the latter 1657-1746.

DORION, C. A., a French poet, 1770-1829.

DORISLAUS, ISAAC, a Dutch civilian, lecturer on history at Cambridge, and ambassador to Holland, assassinated 1649.

DORLEANS, J., a French historian, 1644-1698.

DORLEANS, L., a French satirist, 1542-1629.

DORPIUS, M., a Dutch savant, 1460-1525.

D'ORSAY, COUNT, a well-known director of fashion, celebrated as a sculptor, died 1852.

DORSET, THOMAS SACKVILLE, earl of, ambassador, chancellor of Oxford, and lord treasurer, distin. both as a statesman and author, 1527-1608. EDWARD, his grandson, bearing the same title, a partizan of Charles I., and regent during his absence in Scotland, 1590-1652. CHARLES, one of the cavaliers and wits of the court of Charles II., 1637-1706. LIONEL, lord-lieut. of Ireland, 1686-1765.

DOSA, G., a peasant of Transylvania, proclaimed k. of Hungary, and met with a horr. death, 1518.

DOSITHÆUS, a Jewish priest, 2d cent. B.C.

DOSITHÆUS, a heretic of Samaria, 1st cent.

DOUCE, FRANCIS, author of 'Illustrations of Shakspeare and of Ancient Manners,' died 1834.

DOUCIN, L., a French Jesuit and historian, an ardent defender of the bull 'Unigenitus,' d. 1726.

DOUGLAS, the name of an ancient and illustrious Scotch family, the earliest of whom are—WILLIAM 'The Hardy,' died 1302. 'The good SIR JAMES,' a companion in arms of Robert Bruce, killed in battle with the Moors, 1331. WILLIAM, a natural son of the preceding, called 'England's scourge and Scotland's bulwark,' killed 1353. ARCHIBALD, brother of Sir James, regent in 1333. WILLIAM, lord of Liddesdale, 'the flower of chivalry' in the 14th century. After these the following are mentioned with the title of earls:—1. WILLIAM, distinguished at the battle of Poictiers, d. 1384.—2. JAMES, his son, k. at the battle of Otterburn, 1388.—3. ARCHIBALD, surnamed 'The Grim,' date unknown.—4. ARCHIBALD, born 1374, celebrated for a victory over the earl of March and Henry Percy 1401, killed at the battle of Verneuil 1425.—5. ARCHIBALD, ambassador to England for the release of James I., 1437.—6. WILLIAM, treacherously murdered at a banquet in the castle at Edinburgh the same year.—7. Unknown.—8. WILLIAM, the most imperious and powerful of the line, stabbed by James II. at Stirling, 1452.—9. JAMES, brother of the preceding, and last earl of Douglas, taken prisoner after vainly attempting to revenge his brother's death, and died in a monastery, 1488. A younger branch of the same family are distinguished as earls of Angus. The best known of these are—GEORGE, married to the daughter of king Robert III., 1397, and ARCHIBALD, called the Great Earl of Angus, distinguished at the battle of Torwood, father of GAWIN, bishop of Dunkeld, and of the two Douglases killed at Flodden, died 1513. The younger branch of the Angus family claims JAMES DOUGLAS, the celebrated earl of Morton, and regent of Scotland, beheaded for the murder of Darnley, 1581.

DOUGLAS, JAMES, earl of Morton and Aberdeen, finder. of the Edin. Philos. Soc., 1707-1768.

DOUGLAS, JAS., a Scotch anato., 1675-1742.

DOUGLAS, JOHN, a learned divine and critic, successively bp. of Carlisle and Salisbury, 1721-1807.

DOUGLAS, SYLVESTER, Lord Glenbervie, a member of parliament, and chief commissioner of woods and forests, 1743-1832. His son, F. S. N. DOUGLAS, member for Banbury, and author of a 'Comparison between the Ancient and Modern Greeks,' died 1819.

DOUGLAS, —, a Scotch botanist, 1799-1833.

DOUJAT, J., a French savant, 1606-1688.

DOUSA, JOHN, or VAN DER DOES, a Dutch general and scholar, author of 'Annals of Holland,' 1545-1604. His eldest son, JOHN, a Latin poet and scholar, distinguished by the friendship of Scaliger, 1571-1596. His fourth son, FRANCIS, a savant, born 1577. His son DIDIER, 1580-1663.

DOVALLE, C., a French poet, 1807-1829.

DOVER, G. J. W. AGAR ELLIS, Lord, a biographical and historical writer, contributor to the reviews, &c., 1797-1833.

DOW, ALEXANDER, a Scotch Orient., d. 1799.

DOW, GERARD, a celebrated Dutch Genre painter, was born at Leyden in 1613; his father, who was a glazier, brought him up a glass-painter, but having placed him with Rembrandt, when in his sixteenth year only, the good use the young painter made of his opportunity enabled him to establish himself in the more independent profession of a painter. Few men have ever attained such wonderful mastery or delicacy of execution as Gerard Dow. He died rich at Leyden in 1680. Schalken, Mieris, and Metzu, were his pupils.—(Houbraken, Groote Schouburg, &c., 1.) [R.N.W.]

DOWLAND, JOHN, a celebrated performer on the lute, was born in Oxford in the year 1562, and took his degree of Bachelor of Music in 1588. He composed a great deal of music, all of which, saving one or two madrigals, is forgotten, and was a great favourite with the public. The 'Passionate Pilgrim' has devoted a sonnet to Dowland, which, even were his beautiful madrigal, 'Awake, sweet Love,' irrecoverably lost, would render his name immortal. He died, it is generally believed, in Denmark in the year 1615. [J.M.]

DOWNES, ANDW., a Greek scholar, 1550-1627.

DOWNHAM, G., an Irish theologian, d. 1634.

DOWNING, C., a puritan divine, 1606-1644.

DOWNMAN, HUGH, an Engl. poet, 1740-1809.

DRABICIUS, N., a Ger. enthusiast, 1587-1652.

DRACO, a legislator of Athens, 7th cent. B.C.

DRAGONETTI, H., an Ital. jurist, 1738-1818.

DRAGUT, an Ottoman corsair, killed 1565.

DRAKE, FRANCIS, an English antiq., d. 1770.

DRAKE. FRANCIS DRAKE, the chief of the English Naval Worthies of the reign of Elizabeth, and the first man who circumnavigated the globe in a single voyage, was born in 1546, near Tavistock in Devonshire. His father was a poor clergyman; and Francis was the eldest of twelve sons, nearly all of whom were bred to the sea. He was apprenticed while a lad to the master of a coasting bark, which sometimes made voyages to Holland and France. In this humble employment Drake grew up to be a thorough seaman; and he also by his steadiness and good conduct so gained the esteem of his master, that when the old man died, he bequeathed his bark to the diligent and skilful young mariner.—Drake continued his old master's trade in her for some time; but his spirit of adventure caused him at last to sell her, and employ the proceeds in a trading voyage to the West Indies in 1565 and 1566, during which he suffered much ill usage and loss from the commander of some Spanish cruizers. On Drake's return he joined Sir John Hawkins in an adventure to the Spanish Main, which proved calamitous at the time, but which must have done much in qualifying Drake for his subsequent achievements. The little squadron which Hawkins and Drake commanded, was treacherously attacked by a Spanish fleet in the port of St. Juan de Ulloa, and four out of the six English ships were destroyed.—Drake returned to England with the loss of all his property; but with the gain of valuable experience, and with an increase to that keen antipathy to the Spaniards, which marked him throughout life, and which is best paralleled by that which Nelson afterwards felt to the French. In 1572 Drake succeeded in fitting out three small vessels, and sailed to the Spanish Main on a voyage of reprisals. He failed in an attack on the city of Nombre de Dios; but he landed on the isthmus of Panama, and captured a large treasure, which was being conveyed on mules to Nombre de Dios for exportation to Spain. It was in the course of this adventure that one of the native guides who led the English across part of the isthmus, showed Drake a lofty tree from whose summit might be discovered the Pacific ocean, along which no European flag, save that of Spain, had hitherto ever floated, and the coasts of which were believed to teem with treasure-cities of boundless magnificence. Drake climbed this 'goodlie and great high tree,' as he himself termed it, and gazing thence on the broad Pacific, he with great solemnity 'besought God to give him health and life once to sail an English ship in those seas.'—This was no barren vow of transient enthusiasm. On his return to England, Drake prepared a squadron for a voyage into the South Pacific through the straits of Magellan. It consisted of five vessels, the largest of which was only of 500 tons. Drake sailed on the 13th December, 1577, and on the 20th May, 1578, he anchored in the port St. Julian of Magellan. There one of the companions of Drake, named Thomas Doughty, was tried by Drake and the other officers of the fleet, and put to death on a charge of mutiny and conspiracy. This execution has long been made a subject of heavy imputation on Drake's character, but Sir John Barrow in his late work, 'The Naval Worthies of the Reign of Elizabeth,' has printed some contemporaneous records of Doughty's trial, which prove his sentence to have been just, and his death necessary. Drake emerged into the Pacific from the perilous straits of Magellan on the 6th of May, but his ship, the Golden Hind, struggled with difficulty through heavy gales; and all her consorts abandoned her or perished. With his one vessel Drake now began his attacks upon the Spanish treasure-ships that were sailing in fancied security along the coast of the Pacific; and the Golden Hind was soon deeply laden with Spanish gold and other valuables. Drake now thought of returning home; but an attempt to repass the straits would have thrown him within the reach of a large force, which the enraged Spaniards had collected to intercept him. He resolved, therefore, to seek a passage home round the north of America; and by unrivalled boldness and skill, worked his ship to a high latitude along the western coast of the Atlantic. Yielding at length to the increased severity of the winter season, and the natural obstacles which his crazy bark and worn-out crew encountered, Drake steered westward across the Pacific for the Philippine islands, and thence for the Cape of Good Hope. He doubled the Cape on the 15th June, 1580; and on the 25th September in that year, the Golden Hind came safely to anchor in Plymouth harbour, having been two years and ten months at sea, during which time she had sailed round the whole world. —Drake's exploits, and the treasure which he had brought home, made all England ring with his renown. Queen Elizabeth knighted him, and dined in state with him on board the Golden Hind. The Spaniards were loud in their protestations, and demanded that Drake should be given up to them as a pirate. There was at this time nominal peace between the two countries; but Spanish troops had often aided the rebels against Elizabeth in Ireland, and England, on the other hand, had sustained by men and money the revolt of the Netherlands against Spain. In the New World the arrogant claims of the Spaniards to exclude all other nations from the seas of Central and Southern America, and the cruelties which their officers practised, had created a system of reprisals; and 'no peace beyond the line,' was the rough and ready maxim of the English mariners. The nation adopted it. Queen Elizabeth refused to give up or to punish Drake; and in the open war which soon broke out between her and Spain, Drake did noble service to his country and his queen. In 1585 he attacked and burnt the collected shipping in Cadiz harbour, and thereby delayed for a year the sailing of the Spanish Armada against England. And when in 1588 Spain sent that huge agglomeration of her fleets and armies against our shores, Sir Francis Drake was the boldest and the sagest among that bright band of our naval heroes who baffled and beat the haughty Spaniards; and who forced the shattered remnants of their so-called Invincible Armada to flee in disaster and disgrace round the north of Britain and Ireland back to the harbours of the peninsula, which they had quitted in such confidence of vindictive success. In 1595 Drake sailed on his last voyage in conjunction with his old comrade Sir John Hawkins, on an expedition against the Spanish West Indies. The English were unsuccessful in this enterprise. They suffered severely by the diseases of the climate, to which the brave Sir Francis fell a victim. Admiral Drake died on board his own ship off Portobello, on the 28th January, 1596. [E.S.C.]

DRAKE, JAMES, a political satirist, 1667-1707.

DRAKE, DR. NATHAN, a physician of Hadleigh in Suffolk, distinguished as an essayist on English literature, and especially on periodical literature from the time of Addison, 1766-1836.

DRAN, H. P. LE, a Fr. surgical wr., 1685-1770.

DRAPARNAUD, J. P. R., a French naturalist, 1772-1805. His brother, VICTOR XAVIER, a dramatist, an. of the 'Prisoner of Newgate,' 1778-1833.

DRAPER, ELIZABETH, the friend of Sterne and Raynal, to whom the former addressed his letters, published under the name of Yorick, 1742-1775.

DRAPER, SIR WILLIAM, a military officer, known as a controversialist from his defence of the marquis of Granby, 1721-1787.

DRAYTON, MICHAEL, one of the most esteemed of the early English poets, most admired for his pastorals and chivalrous subjects, born at Harshull in Warwickshire, 1563, buried in Westminster Abbey, 1631.

DREBBEL, CORNELIUS VAN, a Dutch philos. and chem., inv. of the thermometer, &c., 1572-1634.

DRELINCOURT, CHARLES, a French protestant, author of 'Consolations against the Fears of Death,' &c., 1595-1669. LAURENCE, his son, a learned divine and author, 1631-1681. CHARLES, his third son, a physician, died 1697.

DREW, SAMUEL, a methodist preacher, celeb. as a metaphysician for his 'Essay on the Immateriality and Immortality of the Soul,' 1765-1833.

DROLLINGER, C. F., a Ger. lyric, 1688-1742.

DROUAIS, J. G., a French painter, 1763-1788.

DROUET, JEAN BAPTISTE, master of the post in the village of Sainte-Menehould, and once a soldier of the dragoons, has obtained a remarkable name in the history of the French revolution by his arrest of Louis XVI. when he attempted to fly the kingdom, 20th June, 1791. His curiosity was awakened by the arrival of travellers under very unusual circumstances, curiosity ended in suspicion, and his suspicions were confirmed by a comparison of the king's portrait, engraved on the French assignats at that time, with the pretended Baron Korff in the Berline. With the zeal of a patriot, and the decision and boldness of a soldier, he galloped by a cross road to the town of Varennes, and prepared his measures so effectually, notwithstanding the near neighbourhood of Choiseul and Bouillé, that the carriages were stopped, and the king conducted to Paris. If Lafayette was justifiable in declaring the flight of the king 'infamous,' and the country had reason to tremble for its independence with Louis in the army of the coalition, it is impossible to deny that Drouet's arrest of the king was an act of patriotism; and, viewing it in this light, the National Assembly rewarded him with a gift of 30,000 francs, while the people, in 1792, returned him to the National Convention. In the capacity of deputy he voted for the most violent measures, and had the atrocity to propose that all the English in France should be shot. In 1793 he accompanied the army of the North as commissary, and was shut up in Manbeuge, when that place was reduced to the last extremity by the Austrians, and was taken prisoner in a sortie which he headed. Being confined in the fortress of Spitzberg, situated on a rock some two hundred feet high, he attempted to escape by means of a parachute, but falling heavily to the ground, was captured again. He was subsequently exchanged with some of his comrades against the king's daughter, and sat in the council of 500. He joined the conspiracy of Babeuf against the order established after the 9th Thermidor, but was permitted to escape by the Directory, and, after an adventurous career abroad, became sub-prefect of Sainte-Menehould under the consulate. In 1815 he appeared as deputy of the Marne in the Chamber of Representatives during the hundred days, and the following year was banished from France with the regicides. In 1824, an old man who had been known some years past under the name of Merger, and was esteemed a good Christian, died at Maçon, when people were surprised to discover that he was no other than the 'bold dragoon' who arrested the king at Varennes. [E.R.]

DROUET, S. F., a French savant, 1715-1779.

DROUOT, Gen. Count, artillery offi. under Napoleon, and one of his most faithful fol., 1774-1847.

DROZ, F. N. E., a Fr. jurisconsult, 1735-1805.

DROZ, Peter Jacquet, a Swiss mechanician, 1721-1790. His son, H. L. Jacquet, distinguished like his father for his surprising skill, 1759-1791.

DRUMMOND, George, distinguished for his public spirit as provost of Edinburgh, and in the rebellion of 1745, 1687-1766.

DRUMMOND, James, third earl of Perth, a descend. of Andrew, k. of Hungary, dis. as chan. of Scot., and as a partizan of James II., 1638-1716.

DRUMMOND, Thomas, inventor of the light kn. by his name, and under secry. for Ireland, d. 1840.

DRUMMOND, Wm., a Scotch poet, 1585-1649.

DRUMMOND, Sir Wm., F.R.S., a political negotiator and classical and antiquarian an., d. 1828.

DRUMMOND-DE-MELFORT, L. Hector, Comte De, a general in the French service, distinguished as a tactician, 1726-1788.

DRURY, Joseph, a classical scholar and divine, head master of Harrow, acknowledged by Lord Byron as the 'best and worthiest friend he ever possessed,' 1750-1834.

DRUSILLA, Julia, a daughter of Germanicus and Agrippa, mistress of Caligula, died 38. Another Drusilla was wife of Claudius Felix.

DRUSIUS, John, a German critic, 1550-1616.

DRUSUS, a Roman consul, poisoned 23.

DRUSUS, Claudius Nero, a distin. Roman commander, father of Germanicus, d. 9 B.C.

DRUSUS, M. L., a Rom. tribune 122 B.C., consul 112. His son, of the same name, tribune 90-89 B.C.

DRYANDER, F. E., a Flem. his., 16th century.

DRYANDER, Jonas, a Swed. natur., 1748-1810.

DRYDEN, John, born in 1631, was the grandson of Sir Erasmus Dryden, or Driden, of Canons-Ashby, in Northamptonshire. From his father, the third son of the family, he inherited a small estate, yielding fifty or sixty pounds a-year. He was sent from Westminster School to Trinity College, Cambridge, where he resided till 1657. For the next three years he was engaged in public business in London, under his mother's cousin, Sir Gilbert Pickering, a puritan, and a partizan of Cromwell. His principal kinsmen on the father's side belonged to the same party. Thus trained and thus connected, he began his literary career by verses on the death of the Protector; but his disinclination to the principles in which he had been brought up, and the vacillation of opinions by which he was distinguished through life, showed themselves very speedily.—The Restoration, occurring when he was in his thirtieth year, excluded him for the time from government employment and patronage; and he at once devoted himself to literature as a profession. Having to rely on it for support, he did not long content himself with obscure drudgery in prose, or with verses, though he wrote many, on public events. Yet his 'Annus Mirabilis,' celebrating the eventful year 1666, presaged his eminence as a descriptive and didactic poet. But the stage, now restored, and becoming the fashionable amusement, offered itself as the only means through which his pen could furnish a livelihood; and, in the course of twenty-five years, he wrote twenty-seven dramas. The most remarkable of these were his Heroic Plays, pieces of a kind which, imported from France, was the favourite during the greater part of the reign of Charles II. These have aptly been described by Sir Walter Scott as being just metrical romances of chivalry thrown into the form of dialogues. In this unnatural but seductive class of compositions Dryden was unsurpassed; and, amidst all their exaggeration and unreality, his Tragic Dramas are works of great genius. His Comedies, belonging to the Spanish school which had become so popular, and whose chief merit was sought in complex ingenuity of plot, have little literary value; and they are tainted, as deeply as any plays of their time, by the moral depravity which disgraced the restored English stage till after the close of the seventeenth century. Indeed, the pain which one feels in seeing the intellectual powers of Dryden wasted on his serious dramas, is aggravated when we contemplate the moral degradation displayed by his comic ones.—Hardly less mortifying is it to know, that the great poet was conscious of his own inaptitude for the writing of plays; and that he panted to display, on a field better adapted to his diffusive genius, the pomp of imagery, the strength of passion, and the magnificent skill of versification, which he felt to be but ill bestowed on his heroic and tragic pieces of theatrical declamation. It was the cherished dream of his life to give to the English language a national epic, whose theme would probably have been the exploits of the romantic King Arthur. There are, in fact, two circumstances only that can at all console us for the lamentable misapplication of Dryden's labour. In the first place, the writing of his heroic plays served as his apprenticeship to the art of versification and expression. Out of his rhymed dialogue arose that mastery of the English heroic couplet which he was the first to acquire, and in which no succeeding poet has nearly equalled him. Secondly, the prefaces, dedications, and essays, with which he accompanied his dramas, exhibited him at once as the earliest writer of regular and elegant English prose, and as the first who can be said to have aimed in our language at anything like philosophical criticism. Those prose fragments of his are still instructive to the critic of poetry; and they contain some of the most felicitous specimens of style which our tongue has ever produced.—During the few years next after the Restoration, dramatic composition was almost his only employment. Of his heroic plays of this period, which were written in rhyme, the finest were the two parts of 'The Conquest of Granada.' He was under an engagement to write plays for the king's theatre, which gave him an income of more than three hundred a-year; in 1665 his circumstances were a little improved by his uncomfortable marriage with Lady Elizabeth Howard, daughter of the earl of Berkshire; and in 1670 he received, with a salary (irregularly paid) of two hundred a-year and the famous butt of wine, the joint offices of historiographer-royal and poet-laureate. In the latter part of Charles's reign the fashion in dramatic matters began to change: and this, with jealousies of playwrights and courtiers, gave birth to the celebrated burlesque play called 'The Rehearsal,' of which Dryden, under the nickname of Bayes, was the principal victim. Politics now offered to the laureate a new kind of theme, of which he availed himself by publishing, in 1681, his 'Absalom and Ahithophel,' the best of all poetical satires. 'The Medal' and 'Mac-Flecknoe,' works of the same kind, followed immediately. Now, likewise, he began to write tragedy in blank verse, 'All For Love' being his most successful experiment of the kind. In the 'Religio Laici,' also, he presented to the public, in 1682, his first elaborate attempt at didactic poetry. The tone of hesitation, and the character of the arguments, adopted in this defence of the Church of England, betrayed a state of mind leading by an easy progress to the change of faith which the poet soon avowed. In 1685, soon after the accession of James II., Dryden was received into the Church of Rome. His conversion secured him in court favour, and was rewarded by an addition of a hundred pounds a-year to his pension. But it was probably sincere; and the new creed was unflinchingly adhered to when it had become unprofitable and dangerous. It produced rich poetical fruit in 'The Hind and the Panther,' in which the dryness of dissertation is enlivened by ingenious allegory.—The Revolution, taking place in the poet's fifty-seventh year, deprived him of his pensions, and of his royal and courtly patrons; but it neither lowered the place which he held as the first poet of his time, nor damped the ardour of his literary exertions. The last twelve years of his life, though spent in hard toil and under heavy discouragements, produced some of his best works. In 1690 he gave to the stage his tragedy of 'Don Sebastian,' the best and most interesting of his serious plays. In 1697, amidst many other labours, he threw off at a heat his 'Alexander's Feast,' one of the most animated of all lyrical poems, though not conceived in the highest tone of lyrical inspiration. In the same year appeared his nobly spirited translation of Virgil, for which he had trained himself by previous versions from the classics published in the volumes he called 'Miscellanies.' Lastly, in the spring of 1700, were published his 'Fables,' in which, imitating in verse the prose of Boccaccio, and remodelling (not always for the better) the antique poetical pictures of Chaucer, he not only showed that his warm imagination burned as brightly as ever, but that his metrical skill had been increasing to the close of his life. That life was about to end. Gout and gravel had long disturbed him; and erysipelas in one of his legs, terminating in mortification, destroyed him on May-day, 1700. He was buried in Westminster Abbey, between the grave of Chaucer and that of Cowley. [W.S.]

[Dryden's House in Fetter Lane.]

DUBARRAN, Barreau, a mem. of the French convention and Com. of Public Safety, 1750-1816.

DUBOCAGE, G. B., a Fr. canal eng., 1626-1686.

DUBOIS, Anthony, Baron, a dist. Fr. surgeon appointed accoucheur to the empress, 1756-1837.

DUBOIS, Edward, a periodical writer an journalist, distin. in light literature, 1775-1850.

DUBOIS, G., a French historian, 1628-1696.

DUBOIS, Jr., a French sculptor, 1626-1694.

DUBOIS, J. B., a French essayist, 1753-1809

DUBOIS, P., a French savant, 1636-1703.

DUBOIS, P. G., a French translator, 1626-16

DUBOIS, William, a Fr. cardinal and statesman, justly branded in his, as infamous, 1656-17

DUBOIS-CRANCE, Edmund Louis Alexis Dubois-Crancé performed a part in the French volution which may be related in few words, from which the most important consequences resulted. He was the propounder of that formidable military engine known as the conscription, first idea of which he submitted to the national convention in 1793 as reporter of the military mission. 'In a nation that would be free, surrounded by powerful neighbours and re faction,' he remarks, 'it behoves every citizen a soldier and every soldier to be a citizen, there is no hope of this, France is near the ter annihilation. . . . . If you once exemptions and substitutes, all is lost.' Th of this stern soldier and honest republican sponded to by a decree for the levy of 300,0 with promotion from the ranks, and short wards by Barrere's famous proclamation f en masse. One other memorable service formed for the republic by Dubois-Crancé, duction of Lyons, and such was the esteem military talents were held that he was appointed, 1799, the successor of Bernadotte as minister of r. He was a stout opponent of the revolution which Napoleon attained the supreme power, d ever after remained in the obscurity of private . He is the author of several military and poli- al memoirs publ. between 1789 and 1804, and two pamphlets written against Barrère 1795. rn at Charleville 1747, d. at Rhétel 1814. [E.R.]

DUBOS, J. B., a Fr. literary savant, 1670-1742.

DUBOST, A., a Fr. painter, 1769-1825.

DUBOUCHAGE, F. J. GRATET, Viscount, a r. minis. of marine under the Bourbons, 1749-1821.

DUBOURDIEN, J. a Fr. controv. wr. 1652-1720.

DUBRAW, J. S., an hist. of Bohemia, d. 1553.

DUBUISSON, P. U., a French dramatist, exe- uted as an accomplice of Hebert, 1748-1794.

DUCANGE, VICTOR, a Fr. novelist, 1783-1833.

DUCAREL, A. C., a Fr. antiquar., 1713-1785.

DUCASSE, J. B., a celeb. Fr. admiral, d. 1715.

DUCHAL, JAMES, an Irish divine, 1697-1761.

DUCHANGE, G., a Fr. engraver, 1662-1756.

DUCHAT, J. LE, a French author, 1658-1735.

DUCHATEL, GASPARD, a republican of the French revolution and member of convention, memorable for his vote against the execution of the king, to register which he was carried from his sick bed wrapped up in blankets; born 1766, guillotined with a party of the Girondins 31st October, 1793.

DUCHER, GILBERT, a Latin poet, 16th cent.

DUCHESNE, ANDREW, a Fr. hist. and geogr., celebrated for the number of his works, 1584-1640.

DUCHESNE, A. N., a Fr. naturalist, 1747-1827.

DUCHESNE, C., physician to Henry IV., and thor of 'Memoirs' concerning him, date unknown.

nother physician of Henry IV., named JOSEPH CHESNE, dist. as a chemist and poet, 1544-1609.

UCHESNE, H. G., a Fr. naturalist, 1739-1822.

UCHESNE, L., a French savant, born 1588.

UCHESNOIS, J. R., a Fr. actress, 1777-1835.

CIS, J. F., a French tragic poet, 1733-1816.

CK, ARTHUR, an Engl. jurist, 1580-1649.

CK, STEPHEN, an English poet, died 1736.

CKWORTH, SIR J. T., an Eng. admiral, dist. West Indies during the late war, 1748-1817.

CLERCQ, J., a curious annalist, 15th cent.

CLOS, A. J., a French engraver, last cent.

CLOS, C. P., a French historian, 1704-72.

COS, JEAN FRANÇOIS, one of the clearest ed, and most honest in accepting the con- uences of his convictions, of the party of Giron- was born at Bourdeaux 1765, and was ed as deputy for his native city to the Con- ant Assembly in 1791, and to the National ention in 1792. His name is not identified any particular measures, but his oratory was ant, his advice listened to with respect, and influence felt in the debates, in which he par- with indefatigable zeal. He was more toler- than the other members of the Gironde, and ared to promote a fusion of republicans of ery shade of opinion. He shared the fate of his rty, though somewhat later, through the in- ence of Marat, and was guillotined at the early e of twenty-eight, 1st November, 1794. [E.R.]

DUCOS, ROGER, like many other actors in the French revolution, was an advocate, and embrac- ing extreme opinions at the commencement of that epoch, succeeded in talking his way to the National Convention in 1792. He was then thirty-eight years of age, having been born in 1754. There is nothing to show from the beginning to the end of his career, that he had any other talents than those of a respectable lawyer, or any principles but those which he could adopt with the greatest eclat for the time being. In this spirit he seems to have voted for the death of the king 'without delay,' and afterwards opposed himself to the Girondins. In January, 1794, he served the Jacobin's Club as president, and after a few ups and downs, had settled as a magistrate in a country village, when Barras drew him from his retirement, and he became a member of the directory and the council of elders. On the 18th Brumaire (9th October, 1799), he lent himself to the coup d' état of Napoleon, and was rewarded with the third place in the provisional consulate, as the Abbé Sieyes was with the second. On the 20th, Buonaparte, Sieyes, and Ducos, held their first sitting in the Luxembourg, and on Sieyes's suggesting that one of them should act as president, Ducos promptly replied,—'Vous voyez bien que c'est le general qui près ide,' (the general presides of course!) Ducos seconded whatever Buonaparte proposed, and though Sieyes felt that he was reduced to a mere cypher, they proceeded to frame the new constitution, which was adopted by the votes of the people, and Buonaparte being confirmed in his office of first consul, replaced his former colleagues by Cambaceres and Lebrun. From this period Ducos is known as a member of the senate, and of the upper chamber during the hundred days. He was proscribed by the Bourbons in 1816, and died the same year in consequence of being thrown out of his carriage. His brother, NICOLAS, Baron Ducos, acquired distinction as one of Napoleon's generals, and survived him many years. [E.R.]

DUDLEY, EDMUND, a minister of state under Henry VII., executed with Empson at the commencement of the following reign, 1462-1510. His son JOHN, duke of Northumberland, and father of Lord Guildford Dudley, whom he married to Lady Jane Grey, executed for treason, 1502-1553. AMBROSE, another son of the duke, called the Good Earl of Warwick, 1530-1589. ROBERT, his fifth son, earl of Leicester, celebrated as the favourite of Elizabeth, 1532-1588. SIR ROBERT, son of the last named, and the Lady Douglas, celeb. for his skill in hydraulic engineering, 1573-1630.

DUDLEY, SIR H. B., a noted journalist, politician, and dramatic writer, long known as a man of pleasure in London, and a magistrate, 1745-1824.

DUDLEY, THE RIGHT HON. J. W. WARD, earl of, foreign secretary under Canning, 1781-1833.

DUDLEY, THOMAS, an English engra., 17th c.

DUELLI, R., a German historian, died 1740.

DUFAU, F., a French painter, died 1821.

DUFF, a king of Scotland, 968-973.

DUFFET, G., a Flemish painter, 1594-1660.

DUFOURNY, L., a Fr. architect, 1734-1818.

DUFRENOY, A. G., a Fr. poetess, 1765-1825.

DUFRESNOY, ALPH., a French artist, and author of a poem on painting, pub. 1684, 1611-1665.

DUFRESNOY, A. I. J., a Fr. phys., 1733-1801.

DUFRESNY, C. R., a Fr. dram., 1684-1724.

DUGARD, WM., an English classic, 17th cent.

DUGDALE, SIR WILLIAM, the famous herald, author of the 'Monasticon Anglicanum,' and other historical and antiquarian works of great value, disting. for his adherence to Charles I., 1605-1686.

DUGHET, GASPARD, an Ital. paint., 1613-75.

DUGOMMIER, J. F. COQUILLE, a French general, distinguished as director of the siege of Toulon, &c., born 1736, killed 1794.

DUGUAY-TROUIN, RENE, a Fr. naval commander in the Sp. war of succession, &c., 1673-1736.

DUGUESCELIN, BERTRAND, a French cavalier, constable of France in the time of Charles V., chief agent in expelling the English, 1314-1380.

DUGUET, J. J., a Fr. relig. wr., 1649-1733.

DUHALDE, J. B., a learned French Jesuit, au. of 'Descriptio de la Chine,' &c., 1674-1743.

DUHAMEL, J. B., a Fr. ecclesiastic, disting. as a speculative and practical philos., 1624-1706.

DUHAMEL, J. P. F. GUILLOT, a Fr. mineralo., inv. of new methods for joining metals, 1730-1816.

DUHAMEL-DU-MONCEAU, H. LOUIS, a dis. contrib. to science, esp. to agriculture, 1700-1782.

DUHAUSSET, MADAME, a lady attached to the Marchioness Pompadour, author of 'Memoirs of the Court of Louis XV.,' 1720-1780.

DUJARDIN, B., a French historian, last cent.

DUJARDIN, C., a Dutch painter, 1640-1678.

DUKE, RICH., an Engl. div. and poet, d. 1711.

DUKER, C. A., a German savant, 1670-1752.

DULAURE, J. A., a Fr. hist. and savant, mem. of the convention and council of 500, 1755-1835.

DULON, LOUIS, a Germ. musician, 1769-1826.

DULONG, P. L., a French chemist, 1785-1838.

DUMANIANT, J. A., a Fr. dram., 1754-1828.

DUMARESQ, H., an Eng. officer, dist. in most of the battles of the late war, and at Waterloo, 1792-1838.

DUMAREST, R., a Fr. medallist, 1750-1806.

DUMARSAIS, CÆSAR CHESNEAU, a French philologist, called by D'Alembert 'The La Fontaine of Philosophers,' 1676-1756.

DUMAS, AL. DAVY, a Fr. general, 1762-1806.

DUMAS, C. L., a Fr. medical wr., 1765-1813.

DUMAS, HILARY, a French savant, died 1742.

DUMAS, L., a Fr. writer on music, 1676-1744.

DUMAS, M., a Fr. gen. of division, min. of war under the restoration, au. of memoirs, 1753-1837.

DUMAS, P., a French translator, 1738-1782.

DUMAS, R. F., a French advocate, president of the revol. tribunal, born 1757, guillotined 1794. His brother, J. F. DUMAS, an author, 1754-1795.

DUMESNIL, M. F., a Fr. actress, 1713-1803.

DUMONCEAU, J. B., a Fr. general, 1760-1821.

DUMONT, F., a French sculptor, 1688-1721.

DUMONT, F., a Fr. portrait paint., 1751-1833.

DUMONT, G., a Fr. statistical writer, 1725-88.

DUMONT, G. M., an architect of the last cent.

DUMONT, H., music. to Louis XV., 1610-84.

DUMONT, JOHN, a political and hist. writer, historiographer to the emp. of Germany, 1660-1726.

DUMONT, J., a French painter, 1700-1781.

DUMONT, P. S. L., born at Geneva 1759, a friend and fellow-labourer with Mirabeau, and after. with Jeremy Bentham, whose works he translated into French, author of 'Souvenirs sur Mirabeau,' and 'Lettres sur Bentham;' died at Milan, 1829.

DUMONT D'URVILLE, JULES SEBASTIAN CÆSAR, a celebrated French navigator, was born at Condé-sur-Noineau, 1791. In 1822 he went out with M. Duperrey as second in command, and made the tour of the world in the corvette La Coquille. In 1826 he was appointed captain of the Astrolabe in a second voyage to the South Seas to discover, if possible, some traces of La Perouse. His voyages have enriched science with valuable collections of objects and discoveries, and France owes to him the Venus of Milo, besides the memoirs which illustrate his vast knowledge and intrepid seamanship. He had been named vice-admiral, when he perished with his wife and child by the accident on the Versailles railway, when the carriages were burnt on the 8th of May, 1842.

DUMOULIN, C., a Fr. jurisconsult, 1500-66.

DUMOULIN, E., a Fr. journalist, 1776-1833.

DUMOULIN, P., a Fr. prot. theol., 1568-1658.

DUMOURIEZ, ANNE FRANÇOIS DUPERRIER, a commissary in the French army, author of a translation of 'Ricciardetto,' an It. poem, 1707-69.

DUMOURIEZ, CHARLES FRANÇOIS DUPERRIER, son of the preceding, a distinguished general of the French revolution, disgraced by his abortive attempt to act the part of a Monk, was born at Cambrai in 1739, and died in exile at Turville Park, near Henley-upon-Thames, 1823. He was educated both as a man of letters and a soldier, and at twenty-four years of age, had seen seven campaigns, and received twenty-two wounds in the cavalry service. Disappointed with the rank of captain, though graced with the cross of St. Louis, and a pension of 600 livres, he endeavoured to open a road to fortune by combining the characters of a military adventurer and a political spy; the scene of his intrigues being successively the little island of Corsica, the kingdom of Portugal, Poland, and Sweden, and his reward for the last of these services a short sojourn in the Bastile, which favour was conferred upon him by Louis XV. On the accession of Louis XVI. he had the command of Cherbourg, with the title of colonel, but it was not until the revolution broke out that his ambition, his love of adventure, his dauntless courage, and his diplomatic talents, were brought into full play, or his condition elevated above obscurity. Having attached himself to the Girondins, he became in 1792, minister for foreign affairs, and on their dismissal by the king, resumed his duties in the field, and at length found himself in command of the army opposed to the duke of Brunswick. His determined stand in the wood of Argonne, gave the opportunity for Kellerman with his dragoons, and other divisions of the army, to defeat the Prussians at Valmy (20th September, 1792), after which, it appears, he negotiated with the king of Prussia, allowing him to withdraw the defeated army on condition of being permitted to pursue his ambitious designs for acquiring the sovereignty of Belgium. On the 12th of November he defeated the Austrians at the battle of Jemappes, took Liege, Antwerp, and shortly afterwards Breda in Holland, but was beaten at Nerwinden, 18th March, 1793, by Prince Cobourg, with whom he entered into secret negotiations for restoring the constitutional monarchy; his plan being to march upon Paris with the Austrians, dissolve the Convention, and proclaim the duc de Chartres (Louis Philippe) king. Reports of his treasonable practices, however, had reached the ear of government, and a commission arrived at his quarters with power, if necessary, to order him under arrest. He succeeded, by surprise, in consigning the members of this commission to an Austrian prison; but it was too late to turn the course of events: his troops were already in revolt, and the next morning (3d April, 1793) he barely succeeded in escaping with his life across the border. A reward of 300,000 francs was offered for his head, but he evaded pursuit, and at length found a safe asylum in England, where he enjoyed the friendship of the duke of Kent, Mr. Canning, and many other distinguished persons. His career is illustrated by a great number of works from his own pen, the bare titles of which would almost occupy the space of this notice; his 'Memoirs of the Revolution' may be mentioned as the most interesting. [E.R.]

DUNBAR, GEORGE, a celebrated Greek scholar and professor of Greek in the university of Edinburgh, author of a Greek lexicon, 1774-1851.

DUNBAR, W., a Scottish poet, 1465-1535.

DUNCAN I., k. of Scotland. See DONALD VII.

DUNCAN II., usurped the thr., and assass. 1059.

DUNCAN, ADAM, Lord Viscount, a Scotch admiral, dist. for his victory over De Winter, the Dutch commander at Camperdown, 1731-1804.

DUNCAN, ANDREW, a Scot. phys., 1745-1828.

DUNCAN, D., a French naturalist, 1649-1735.

DUNCAN, MARK, a Scotch phil., 17th century.

DUNCAN, MARTIN, a controv. div., 1505-1590.

DUNCAN, W., a Scotch logician, 1717-1760.

DUNCOMBE, W., an Engl. dram., 1690-1769. His son JOHN, a miscel. wr. and poet, 1730-1786.

DUNDAS, SIR DAVID, a Brit. gen., 1736-1820.

DUNDAS, H., Visc. Melville. See MELVILLE.

DUNDAS, ROBERT, a Scotch judge, father of Lord Melville, 1685-1753. His elder son, of the same name, member for Edinburgh, and president of the Court of Session, 1713-1787.

DUNDAS, THOMAS, a Brit. officer, 1750-1794.

DUNDRENNAN, LORD, THOMAS MAITLAND, a distinguished Scotch judge, 1792-1851.

DUNGAL, an Irish philos. writer, 9th century.

DUNLOP, WM., a Scottish divine, 1692-1720.

DUNN, S., an English mathematician, last cent.

DUNNING, JOHN, Lord Ashburton, the celebrated counsel for Wilkes, attorney-general, chancellor for Lancaster, &c., 1731-1782.

DUNOD, P. J., a French antiquarian, 1657-1725. His nephew, IGNACE DUNOD DE CHARNAGE, an historian and jurisconsult, 1679-1752.

DUNOIS, JOHN, a nat. son of Louis d'Orleans, dist. in the expul. of the Engl. from Fr., 1407-1468.

DUNS SCOTUS, JOHN, 'the subtle doctor,' was born about A.D. 1265. The place of his birth has not been satisfactorily ascertained, Scotland, England, and Ireland laying claim to the honour. Some point to Dunse, in Berwickshire, as the spot of his nativity, and others contend for Dunstance, in Northumberland. The probability is that he was of Scottish extraction. He received his earliest education at a Franciscan monastery in Newcastle, and afterwards studied at Merton College, Oxford, in which he became professor of theology in 1301. His prelections on the 'Sentences' of Peter Lombard are said to have been attended by a crowd of 30,000 students, then resident in Oxford. Though such a statement appears to be a romantic exaggeration, it certainly proves the prodigious fame of the lecturer. In 1307 the philosopher removed to Paris, by command of the general of his order. He had already gained great notoriety in the French capital by a public disputation on behalf of the immaculate conception of the Virgin. Immense applause attended his lectures in Paris, and he was styled Doctor subtilis. In 1308 he was ordered to Cologne to found a new university there, and defend the same theological dogma. On arriving at that city, the inhabitants met him in a body, and he was drawn into the ancient town in a triumphal car. Soon after his arrival, however, he was seized with apoplexy, and died in November, 1308, at the early age of forty-three. Duns Scotus excelled in the knowledge of canon and civil law, in philosophy, mathematics, and theology. His mind was eminently fitted for abstruse discussion, and subtle dialectics, and was sharpened into a morbid acuteness and pertinacity by continued practice. He displayed keenness and versatility in detecting invisible distinctions; in multiplying hypotheses which differed from each other only in some verbal incidents; in untwisting every thought and proposition as by an intellectual prism; in speculating upon themes above the reach of human knowledge, and in the multiplication of ingenious theories without proof to sustain them, or utility to recommend them. Hypothesis supplanted investigation, and the interpretation of nature, or the question, what is? was superseded by previous conceptions of what might or should be. The Franciscans gloried in Duns Scotus, as their rivals the Dominicans extolled Thomas Aquinas. Aquinas was the more orthodox, and Scotus was at least semipelagian. Scotists and Thomists divided the mediæval schools, and the former as being realists, were opposed to the Occamists who were nominalists, or held that universal terms were simply names, and not the signs of actual existences. The 'Opera Positiva' of Duns Scotus are very numerous, and have not been printed; but his 'Opera Speculativa' were published in 12 folio volumes at Lyons in 1639, the editor being an Irishman of the name of Luke Wadding. Six of these tomes are filled with the famed prelections on Peter Lombard, already referred to. The industry that could by its own composition amass such a huge collection of MSS. during so short a life, must certainly have been equal to the genius of the great schoolman. [J.E.]

DUNSTABLE, JOHN, an Eng. musician, 15th c.

DUNSTAN, ST., an English statesman and prelate, abp. of Canterbury, and absolute master of the kingdom under Edward the Martyr, 925-988.

DUNTON, J., a booksel. and mis. wr., 1659-1733.

DUPATY, F. B. MERCIER, pres. of the parl. of Bourdeaux, author of 'Letters on Italy,' &c., 1746-1788. His son CHARLES, a sculptor, 1771-1825.

DUPERIER, C., a Fr. and Latin poet, 1620-92.

DUPERRON, JAMES DAVY, Cardinal, a Swiss recusant from the prot. church, dist. as a controversialist, 1556-1618. JOHN, his brother and suc. in the abprick. of Sens, author of 'An Apology for the Jesuits,' died 1621. JAMES, nephew of the preceding, almoner of Henrietta Maria, died 1649.

DUPIN, BARON, a statistical au., 1767-1828.

DUPIN, C., a writer on public law, 1700-1769.

DUPIN, LOUIS ELLIS, an eccl. his., 1657-1719.

DUPIN, P., a French jurisconsult, 1681-1745.

DUPLEIX, CÆSAR, a Fr. satirist, died 1641.

DUPLEIX, J., Fr. gov. of Pondicherry, d. 1763.
DUPLEIX, SCIPIO, a Fr. historian, 1566-1661.
DUPONT, LEO, a French sculptor, 1795-1828.
DUPONT DE LETANG, COUNT, lieut.-gen. in the French army, minister of war, &c., 1765-1840.
DUPONT DE NEMOURS, P. S., a member of the French assembly of notables, &c., a writer on political economy, 1759-1817.
DUPONT, A., a French advocate, 1759-1798.
DUPORTAIL, N., a Fr. statesman, died 1802.
DUPPA, BRYAN, an Eng. prelate, 1589-1662.
DUPPA, R., a miscellaneous writer, died 1831.
DUPRE, A., Fr. consul at Smyrna, died 1832.
DUPRE, C., a French savant, 16th century.
DUPUIS, CHARLES FRANCIS, a celebrated philosopher of the period of the French revolution, whose great work, 'Origine de tous les Cultes,' originated the scientific exploration of Egypt in the period of its occupation by Buonaparte, 1742-1809.
DUPUIS, T. S., an Eng. musician, 1733-1796.
DUPUYTREN, WILLIAM, Baron, born at Pierre Buffieré, 1777; died at Paris 1835. One of the most distinguished surgeons of modern times, and an eminent example of the beneficial results of the system of public competition established in France. By his industry and talents he became surgeon to the Hotél Dieu at twenty-six, and professor of surgery at thirty-three. He visited the hospital morning and evening at six o'clock, and for twelve years was never once absent; each morning he attended to 300 patients, delivered a clinical lecture, performed several operations, gave advice to some hundreds of out-patients, and then walked home to breakfast at half-past ten. After this he saw his private patients, attended to the examination of medical students, performed his private operations, and at six in the evening again went the rounds of the hospital. His principal work is his memoir on artificial anus, which forms a happy application of the principles developed by John Hunter. Dupuytren possessed a remarkably fine person and strong constitution, so as to enable him to undergo immense bodily fatigue. But he possessed an extremely irritable temper, which made him insupportably capricious and inconsistent, often impelled him to rash and wrong acts that he would fain have recalled in his cooler moments, and ultimately destroyed his nervous system. He was a most successful practitioner, having left £296,000 to his daughter, Madame de Beaumont, besides £8,000 to endow a professorship, and £12,000 for a benevolent institution for medical men. [R.D.T.]
DUQUESNE, A., a Fr. naval offic., 1610-1688.
DUQUESNOY, F., a Flem. sculpt., 1594-1646.
DURAND, D., a Fr. protes. histor., 1681-1763.
DURAND, F. J., a Swiss statistician, 1727-1816.
DURAND, J., a French painter, 1699-1767.
DURAND-DE-MAILLANE, PETER TOUSSAINT, a deputy to the constituent assembly, &c., author of a history of the convention, 1729-1810.
DURANDI, J., an Italian historian, 1739-1817.
DURANTE, FR., a Neapol. comp., 1693-1755.
DURELL, JOHN, a learned divine, 1625-83.
DAVID, a supposed descendant of the preceding, distinguished as a biblical critic, 1728-1775.
DÜRER, ALBRECHT, the most celebrated German painter of the sixteenth century, was born at Nürnberg in 1471, and became the pupil of Michael Wolgemuth, the most eminent painter and engraver at Nürnberg at that time. Albert himself was not only distinguished as painter and engraver, but also as sculptor. The inscription on his tomb claims for him an unrivalled reputation in these matters—'light of the arts—sun of artists—painter, engraver, sculptor, without example.' He died at Nürnberg in 1528, worried to death, according to Pirkheimer, by his wife's temper. The enlarged mind of Albert Dürer is shown in his persevering curiosity to travel into other countries, and personally ascertain what was there doing, as well as in the versatility of his accomplishments as an artist. He visited Italy in the year 1506, more especially Venice and Mantua, and his opinion that Giovanni Bellini was the best painter in Venice is preserved in one of his own letters to his friend Pirkheimer in Nürnberg. He also visited the Netherlands in the year 1521, and some interesting observations are preserved in his diary of this visit. (Reliquien von Albrecht Dürer, Nürnberg, 1828.) He was the author of several works relating to his art, as, 'Instructions in Measuring with the Level and Circle,' &c., 1525; 'Some Directions with regard to the Fortification of Cities, Castles, and Villages,' 1527; and 'Four Books on Human Proportions,' 1528; all of which have been reprinted and translated. Albert Dürer's reputation as a painter is great in Germany, but he is better known as an engraver and designer out of his own country. His execution is exquisite as a copperplate engraver, but it is doubtful whether he actually executed many woodcuts; his most celebrated compositions are some series of woodcuts, but he is supposed to have drawn on the wood only. Of these remarkable series of designs the most valued are the Greater, and Lesser, Passion; the Revelations of John; the Life of the Virgin; the Triumphal Car of the Emperor Maximilian I; and the Triumphal Arch of the same emperor. The Great Passion appeared in twelve cuts in 1511; The Lesser Passion in thirty-seven cuts in quarto, also in 1511; the Revelations in sixteen cuts, folio, in 1498; the Life of the Virgin in twenty cuts, date of first edition uncertain. The two series relating to the emperor Maximilian appeared—the Arch in 1515, in ninety-two pieces, and the Car in 1522, in eight pieces. The works of Albert, paintings and cuts, have all a fine dramatic character of composition, abounding in sentiment and the highest order of expression, and though in form or design gothic in taste, correct and select in general proportions; but his draperies are hard and angular, and his costume is purely fanciful.—(Heller, Das leben und die Werke Albrecht Dürers, 1831; Nagler, Kunstler Lexicon; Kugler, Handbuch der Geschichte der Malerei, 1837.) [R.NW.]

[Albert Durer's House at Nurnberg.]

DURET, C., a French naturalist, died 1611.

DURET, P., a French sculptor, 1730-1816.

DURET, L., a Fr. medical writer, 1527-1586.

D'URFEY, TH., an Engl. song-writer, d. 1723.

DURHAM, JAMES, a Scotch divine, 1622-58.

DURHAM, JOHN GEORGE LAMBTON, earl of, one of the great leaders of the movement for reform, born 1792, member of parliament for his native county 1813, married to the daughter of Earl Grey, 1816, distinguished as a parliamentary reformer, 1821, member of the cabinet under Earl Grey, 1830, mission to Russia, 1833, ambassador to Russia, 1835-37, gov.-gen. of Canada, 1838, d. 1840.

DURHAM, ADMIRAL SIR P. C. CALDERWOOD, memorable for his escape from the Royal George, and his services in the last war, 1777-1845.

DUROC, J. C. M., Duc De Frioul, and marshal of France, a distinguished officer and diplomatist under Buonaparte, whose friend and confidant he remained till his death; born 1772, killed 1813.

DURUPT, C., a French painter, 1804-1839.

DURY, JOHN, a Scotch divine, 17th century.

DUSART, C., a Dutch painter, 1665-1704.

DUSSAULT, J. J., a Fr. misc. wr., 1769-1824.

DUSSAULX, J., a French savant, 1728-1799.

DUSSEK, J. L., a German comp., 1762-1812.

DUTENS, LOUIS, a Fr. miscel. wr., 1729-1812.

DUTILLET, J., a French historian, died 1570.

DUVAL, ALEX. V. P., a Fr. nov., 1767-1842.

DUVAL, ANDREW, a literary savant of France, 1564-1638. His son WILLIAM, a physician, and classical scholar, and historian, 1570-1646.

DUVAL, AMAURY, a French antiq., 1760-1837.

DUVAL-D'ESPREMENIL. See ESPREMENIL.

DUVAL, J. B., a Fr. Orientalist, 17th century.

DUVAL, V. J., a Fr. numismatist, 1695-1775.

DUVANCEL, A., a Fr. naturalist, 1792-1824.

DUVENEDE, M. V., a Flem. paint., 1674-1729.

DUVERNEY, J. G., a Fr. anatomist, 1648-1730.

DUVERNOY, J. G., a German anatomist and botanist, instructor of the illus. Haller, 1691-1759.

DUVIVIER, C. R., a Fr. engineer, 1771-1821.

DUVIVIER, J., a French painter, died 1832.

DUVIVIER, P. S. B., a Fr. medallist, 1730-1819.

DUVOISIN, J. B., a Fr. theolog., 1741-1813.

DWIGHT, TIMOTHY, S.T.D., LL.D., was born 14th May, 1752, at Northampton, Massachusets, tracing his descent to Puritan ancestors, who had emigrated from England. His father, who was a pious and intelligent merchant, maintained a strict profession of religion; and his mother, who was a daughter of Jonathan Edwards, whose intellectual vigour and acumen she inherited, used every endeavour to impress the infant mind of her son with the principles of genuine morality and true religion. Timothy, in his childhood, gave evidences of extraordinary quickness. But the judicious management of his parents averted the sad consequences which the early luxuriance of mental development too often produces in precocious youth. He was withdrawn from school, and, by the prudent direction of his mother, his education was conducted at home in such a manner as to develop the strength, and at the same time exercise the versatility, of her son's opening mind. At the age of thirteen he was considered fit for entering Yale College. During the third year of his attendance he devoted himself with indefatigable ardour to the pursuit of his studies, and his attainments in literature were as diversified as they were extensive. He acquired distinction especially by the well-known beauty of his penmanship, and by his skill in poetry and music. At the age of nineteen he was appointed tutor in Yale College; and the extent of his qualifications for this academic office will appear from the statement of the single circumstance, that he conducted his pupils during the first session through spherics and fluxions into the 'Principia of Newton.' With an ardent pursuit of the exact sciences he combined the rare talent of a passionate love of poetry; and he composed at this early age an epic poem on 'The Conquest of Canaan,' which is said to have contained many descriptive passages of great beauty. His first views were directed towards the law as a profession. But changing his thoughts, he determined to study for the ministry, and after completing the usual curriculum he was in June, 1777, licensed to preach the gospel in his native county of Hampshire, in the state of Massachusets. Having accepted the office of chaplain to General Parson's brigade, he joined the army at West Point in October, and he continued in this situation till his father's death obliged him to quit the army and return home to the assistance of his mother. With filial devotion he exerted himself to ensure the support and comfort of his surviving parent and her young family, by accepting various civil appointments, to which he was prompted more by a sense of duty than by any congeniality of taste or inclination. In the midst of these occupations, however, his literary and theological pursuits were continued with unabated ardour. His talents and acquirements were widely known, and a vacancy having occurred in 1795 in the Presidency of Yale College, all eyes were directed towards Dwight as the best qualified to superintend the interests of that great literary institution. His administration ere long produced a happy revolution on the character of that seminary; by his mild and judicious management disorders were repressed, and the students, who had been deeply tinctured with infidel principles, and were consequently dissolute in their conduct, became distinguished for sober-mindedness, and the observances of Christian piety. Respect for the talents and acquirements of the president, as much perhaps as his discipline and lectures, led to this auspicious change. Dr. Dwight was indeed no ordinary man. He possessed a rare union of intellectual qualities, an independent tone of thinking, great originality of views, a masculine understanding, a playful fancy, and rich and lively powers of illustration. All these mental characteristics are advantageously displayed in his 'Theology,' a work which, although originally composed in the form of sermons, contains a complete system of divinity, expounded on principles of scientific arrangement. Two other works came from his active pen, viz., 'Travels in New England,' in 4 volumes, and 'Posthumous Sermons,' in 2 volumes. In his sixty-third year Dr. Dwight's health began to decline, and after a severe and lingering illness his useful life was closed on 11th January, 1818. [R.J.]

DYER, SIR E., a pastoral poet, born 1540.

DYER, GEO., a famous scholar and miscel. wr., editor of Valpy's edition of the classics, 1755-1841.

DYER, JOHN, an English poet, 1700-1758.

DYER, SIR J., an eminent lawyer, 1512-1582.

DYER, SAM., a learned writer, 1725-1772.

DYER, WILLIAM, a nonconfor. div., 17th cent.

DYKMAN, P. a Swedish antiquar., died 1718.

DZEHEBY, A., a learn. Mahomedan, 1274-1347.

E

EACHARD, J., an English theol., 1636-1697.

EADMER, an ecclesiastical historian, died 1124.

EANDI, J. A. F. J., a wr. on phys., 1735-1799.

EARLE, JABEZ, a dissenting minis., 1676-1768.

EARLE, JOHN, a learn. prelate and royal., au. of 'Microcosmography,' bp. of Salisbury, 1620-1665.

EARLOM, R., an engrav. of London, 1740-1822.

EATON, WM., Amer. con. at Tunis, 1764-1811.

EBALD, a king of Kent, 616-640.

EBBESEN, NIELS, a Danish patriot, d. 1340.

EBED-JESU, an Assyrian poet, 14th century.

EBEL, J. G., a French geologist, 1764-1830.

EBERHARD, duke of Friuli, and father of Berenger, who became king of Italy, 846-868.

EBERHARD, C., a German mathematician in the service of Russia, 1649-1730. His son JOHN, an architect and author, 1723-1795.

EBERHARD, J. A., a Ger. philo., 1739-1809.

EBERHARD, J. H., a Ger. lawyer, 1743-1772.

EBERHARD, J. P., a Ger. natur., 1727-1779.

EBERHARD OF FRANCONIA, father of Conrad I., k. of Ger., slain in the contest with Otho 939.

EBERT, F. A., a German compiler, 1791-1834.

EBERT, J., a Ger. Hebraist and theol., 1549-1614. His son THEODORE, a Heb. scho., d. 1630.

EBERT, J. A., a German translator, 1723-1795.

EBION, supposed founder of a sect, 1st century.

ECHARD, LAURENCE, an English historian and divine, author of a history of England which was in repute until Rapin's appeared, 1671-1730.

ECHINUS. See ERIZZO.

ECKARTSHAUSEN, CHAS., a German mystic, natural son of the Count Charles of Haineblausen, and keeper of the archives of Bavaria, known in all languages by his work entitled 'God is the Purest Love,' which, before the close of the last century, had run through sixty editions in the original German, born 1752, died, after a life passed in the practice of every virtue, 1803.

ECKHARD, G. L., a German painter, 1769-1794.

ECKHARD, J. F., a German savant, 1723-1794.

ECKHARD, J. G., a German hist., 1674-1730.

ECKHARD, TOBIAS, a Ger. philol., 1662-1737.

ECKHEL, J. H., an Aus. numismat., 1737-1798.

ECKHOF, C., a cel. Ger. tragedian, 1722-1778.

ECKIUS, JOHN, a polemical author, celebrated for his oral and written controversies with the reformers, especially with Luther, 1483-1543.

ECKIUS, LEONARD, a German lawyer, d. 1550.

ECLUSE, CHARLES DE L', better known as CLUSIUS, a Flem. phys. and botanist, 1526-1609.

ECLUSE-DES-LOGES, PETER MATHURIN DE L', a doctor of the Sorbonne, editor of an edition of 'Sully's Memoirs,' 1715-1783.

EDDY, J. H., an Amer. geographer, 1784-1817.

EDELINCK, GERARD, a Flem. eng., 1649-1707.

EDELMANN, J. F., a Fr. pianist, 1749-1794.

EDELMANN, J. C., a Ger. philos., 1698-1767.

EDEMA, GERARD, a Dutch paint., 1652-1700.

EDEN, SIR F. M., a statistical writer, d. 1809.

EDEN, SIR M., afterwards Lord Henley, a diplom. and ambass. during the late war, d. 1802.

EDENIUS, JORDAN, a Ger. contro., 1624-1666.

EDER, G., a catholic theologian, 1524-1586.

EDGAR, a Saxon k. of Eng., reigned 959-975.

EDGAR-ATHELING, grandson of Edmund Ironside, and neph. of Ed. the Confessor, the rightful heir to the crown worn by the latter and by Harold.

EDGAR, kg. of Scotl., son of Malcolm III. and Margaret, sister of Edgar Atheling, rgnd. 1097-1107.

EDGEWORTH, MARIA, was born in Berkshire on New-Year's Day 1767. She was a daughter of the first marriage of Richard Lovell Edgeworth, of Edgeworth's-town, in the county of Longford; but she never was in Ireland, unless for a few months in childhood, till 1782. In that year her father, succeeding to the family estate, took up his residence on it: and there his daughter's life was chiefly spent. Indeed, the only exceptions were short visits to England, France, and Scotland, and two years passed at Clifton, on account of the delicate health of members of the family. The history both of Miss Edgeworth's authorship, and of her life, was closely dependent on her affectionate and respectful association with her father. He was a man of much miscellaneous knowledge, sanguine and speculative, who possessed great mechanical ingenuity and originality, and exhibited in other pursuits a singular mixture of benevolence, self-esteem, and eccentricity. He sat in the Irish parliament which was elected in 1798, and advocated the views of the party of which Lord Charlemont was considered as the head. But his favourite occupations, besides mechanical contrivances and experiments, were the improvement of his estate and of the condition of his tenantry, and the education of the many children who gathered round him in the course of four marriages. Mr. Edgeworth's experience, as a landlord and magistrate, placed at the disposal of his daughter that large stock of incidents and characters which she used in her novels with so much shrewdness, humour, and kindly feeling; and though these works were written exclusively by herself, they were always submitted to his revisal. His zeal in the training of his children, and his constant desire for improving the current methods of education, made the father and daughter joint authors in works intended for the use of youth.—The most ambitious of these joint productions is the series of essays entitled 'Practical Education,' first published in 1798, and afterwards reprinted and altered more than once. The series of story-books, however, is really more valuable as well as better known. It had been

EDWARDS, GEORGE, an Engl. nat., 1693-1773.

EDWARDS, JON., an Engl. divine, 1629-1712.

EDWARDS, REV. JONATHAN, President of New Jersey College, was born 5th October, 1703, at Windsor, Connecticut. His extraordinary acuteness of intellect, which developed itself in his early boyhood, was applied in his mature age chiefly to the prosecution of moral and theological researches. He became greatly distinguished as a metaphysical and speculative divine. At the same time he prepared himself with diligence for the active duties of the ministry, in which, after a few temporary engagements elsewhere, he was permanently employed at Northampton, Massachusets, having been ordained colleague and successor to his grandfather, Mr. Stoddart, 15th February, 1727. His ministerial labours in that place were followed by remarkable results. A religious excitement, celebrated in the annals of American revivals, took place in 1735 among his people. Multitudes were deeply impressed, and evinced their cordial reception of the truth by its sanctifying effects on their characters and lives. His church was greatly enlarged, and his stated congregation immense. But it happened in this case, as in all great and sudden movements, whether in the religious or political world, that numbers who had joined him were influenced by momentary feeling, rather than by deep and lasting conviction; and accordingly, while not a few were devotedly attached to him as their spiritual father, and an eminent servant of Christ, others became disgusted with his high-toned purity of principles, and his impartial exercise of discipline. So strongly did the current of discontent set in, that this faithful minister seeing little prospect of doing further good in the place, contemplated resignation; but he was anticipated in this step by a few leaders of intemperate zeal and exasperated passions, who convened the congregation, and having secured the appointment of a council obsequious to their views, determined to vent their revenge on their faithful pastor by giving him a summary dismissal. This disgraceful proceeding was carried into effect 22d June, 1750. Mr. Edwards bore the trial with admirable equanimity, and evinced his Christian temper by agreeing more than once to supply the vacant pulpit before his successor was appointed. This generous conduct, instead of mollifying the popular feeling, was requited by a vote of the inhabitants prohibiting his return. But he was amply compensated for this bitter hostility of a proud and worldly community, by the expressions of Christian sympathy that came from various parts of the church, and the liberal contributions that were sent from Britain, and particularly from Scotland, to relieve his destitution. Mr. Edwards now directed his energies into other channels, and afterwards laboured for six years as missionary to the Housatonic Indians at Stockbridge in Berkshire county, where he employed his summers during the absence of the tribes on their hunting excursions in the composition of theological works, which spread his fame throughout the world. In January 1758 he was reluctantly prevailed on to accept the presidency of the college of New Jersey: but before he had fully commenced his duties he was, owing to the prevalence of the small-pox in that place, advised to undergo inoculation; the experiment, however, at his age, being in his fifty-fourth year, proved too violent for his constitution; the remedy superinduced a most malignant form of the disease, and he was cut off on 22d March, 1758. He was a voluminous writer, his works comprising eight volumes. His essay on the 'Freedom of the Will,' his treatises on 'Original Sin' and on the 'Affections,' and his 'History of Redemption,' are generally known and highly valued. [R.J.]

EDWARDS, R., a British dramatist, 1523-1578.

EDWARDS, THOMAS, a presbyterian divine, author of a fierce attack on the 'sectaries' under the title of 'Gangræna,' died 1647. His son JOHN, a deacon in the Church of England, author of an answer to Locke, 1637-1716.

EDWARDS, THOS., an. of a pungent criticism on Warburton's edition of Shakspeare, 1699-1757.

EDWARDS, WM., a Welch mason, distin. for his remarkable skill in bridge-building, 1719-1789.

EDWARDS, W. F., a nat. of Jamaica, principal fndr. of the ethnological society, &c., 1777-1842.

EDWIN, a k. of Northumberland, reig. 616-653.

EDWIN, JOHN, an Engl. comedian, 1749-1794.

EDWY, a king of England, 955-959.

EGBERT, a Saxon king of Kent, 664-673.

EGBERT, king of Wessex, renowned for uniting the heptarchy into one kingdom 827, died 838.

EGBERT, an Eng. ecclesiastical writer, d. 767.

EGEDE, HANS, founder of the Danish missions in Greenland, and au. of the nat. his. of that country, 1686-1758. PAUL, his son, and fellow-labourer, author of a Greenland dictionary, &c., 1708-1789.

EGERTON, DANIEL, an Eng. actor, 1772-1835.

EGERTON, FRAN., earl of Bridgewater, dis. as a Gr. scho., au. of the life of T. Egerton, 1756-1829.

EGERTON, JOHN, bp. of Durham, 1721-1787.

EGERTON, THOMAS, baron of Ellesmere and Viscount Brackley, chancellor of England before Lord Bacon, dist. as an upright lawyer, 1540-1617.

EGG, JOHN GASPAR, a Swiss agriculturist, founder of several industrial colonies on principles similar to those of Robert Owen, born 1738.

EGGS, the name of several Germans all of Rhinfeld. JOHN IGNATIUS, an Asiatic missionary, 1618-1702. RICHARD, a Jesuit and Latin poet, whose life was written by his father, P. L. Eggs, 1621-1659. LEONCE, a Jesuit, Latin poet, and moralist, 1666-1717. GEORGE JOSEPH, a learned writer, 1670-1750.

EGIL, or EIGIL, a bard of Iceland, 10th cent.

EGINTON, FR., an Eng. pain. on glass, d. 1805.

EGIZA, a k. of the Spanish Visigoths, 687-700.

EGIZIO, M., a Neapol. archæologist, 1674-1745.

EGLANTINE. See FABRE-D'-EGLANTINE.

EGLOFF, LOUISE, a Ger. poetess, 1803-1834.

EGLY, C. P. MONTHENAULT D', a French hist. and mem. of the Acad. of Inscriptions, 1696-1749.

EGMONT, a noble family of the low countries, of whom the most distinguished are—CHARLES, duke of Gueldres, 1467-1538. LAMORAL, count of Egmont and prince of Garre, a dis. soldier and patriot, beheaded by Alva, 1522-1568. His son PHILIP, killed at the battle of Ivry, 1590; and his younger son CHARLES, an adherent of the house of Orange, died 1620.

EGNAZIO, BATTISTA, a lear. Ital., 1478-1553.

EGREMONT, GEORGE O'BRIEN WYNDHAM, earl of, distinguished for his general munificence and patronage of arts and letters, 1751-1837.

EHLERS, M., a Ger. philosopher, 1732-1800.
EHRENHEIM, F. G., a Swed. baron and statesman, au. of works in nat. philosophy, 1753-1828.
EHRENMALIN, ARVID, a Swed. savant, last c.
EHRENPREUS, THE COUNT, a Swed. senator, sec. to Charles XII., and after his death one of the principal organizers of lear. institutions, 1692-1760.
EHRENSCHILD, C. B., a Danish statesman, time of Frederick III. and Christian V., 1629-1698.
EHRENSCHŒLD, N., a Swe. adm., 1674-1728.
EHRENSTEN, E., an ambas., sec. of state, and chancel. of Swed. under Chas. Gustavus, 1620-1686.
EHRENSTRAHLE, D., a Swed. jur., 1693-1769.
EHRENSTRAL, D. C., a Swe. pain., 1629-1698.
EHRENSWŒRD, AUGUSTUS, count of, field-marshal of Sweden, distin. for his part in many great works of defence, died 1773. His son CHAS. FREDERIC, born 1770, implicated in the conspiracy of Anckarstrœm and exiled, died 1826.
EHRET, G. D., a German painter, 1710-1770.
EHRHART, B., a German botanist, died 1756.
EICHHORN, J. G. C., a German entomologist, and evangelical minister, 1718-1790.
EICHHORN, JOHN GODFREY, a Ger. theolog., historian, and Oriental scholar, dis. for his works in biblical criticism, prof. at Gottingen, 1752-1827.
EKEBERG, G., a Swed. navigator, 1716-1784.
EKEBLAD, CLAUDE, count of, a Swed. ambas., minister of foreign affairs, mem. of the Academy of Sciences at Stockholm, and chan. of Abo, 1700-1771.
EKSTRŒM, DANIEL, a Swed. mechan., distin. for his improvement of mathem. inst., 1711-1755.
ELBEE, N. G. D., gen. in La Vendée, 1752-1793.
ELDON, JOHN SCOTT, earl of, a distinguished judge, was born at Newcastle in 1751. He was the eleventh of fifteen children. His father, who was a coal-fitter, and who possessed some of the careful qualities of his distinguished son, gradually amassed a considerable fortune, which enabled him to bring up and educate his large family respectably.

[Grammar School at Newcastle.]

John became a remarkable instance of the high success which may be obtained in England by the honest devotion of talents, though not brilliant, to one absorbing occupation; for though he received an Oxford education, he was totally destitute of literary taste, and never could compose a good English sentence—a peculiarity in which he differed much from his accomplished brother, Lord Stowell. Sir Samuel Romilly mentions how painful he felt it to be obliged to confess to the Lord Chancellor his total inability to understand the meaning of some clauses of a bill drawn by his Lordship, on which his opinion was desired. On the 18th of November, 1772, he committed the sole rash act of his life in eloping with Elizabeth, the daughter of Mr. Aubone Surtees, the banker; and the young lady, contrary to the usual experience of such matches, found in him a constant, kind, and affectionate husband. He was called to the bar on 19th February, 1776. Some years elapsed before he had an opportunity of showing his abilities. It is a frequent anecdote about great barristers that they have owed their success to suddenly undertaking a case in which the originally retained counsel is taken ill or breaks his engagement, and such an incident in 1780 really was the foundation of Scott's business. In June, 1788, he was made solicitor-general, and in February, 1793, attorney-general. He was subject to much unpopularity as the adviser and conductor of the ineffective prosecutions for treason at that exciting juncture. In 1799 he was made chief justice of the Common Pleas, and became all the more admirable a common law judge that he could not give way to the doubting propensity which beset him on the woolsack. In 1801 he became lord chancellor, and with the short interval of the Fox and Grenville administration, in 1806-7, he held that office until the accession of Lord Lyndhurst in 1827. His hesitation and procrastination became proverbial; but it must ever be admitted that it arose from a conscientious desire never to leave the slightest particular of any of the complex cases before him unexamined and unweighed. He was a bigotted admirer of the law, of which he was so consummate a master. Projects of law reform cut him to the soul, and he has been represented as shedding tears on the abolition of the punishment of death for stealing five shillings in a dwelling-house. He died on 13th January, 1838. [J.H.B.]

ELEANOR OF AUSTRIA, sister of Charles V., q. of Portugal 1519, q. of France 1530, d. 1558.
ELEANOR OF CASTILE, queen of Navarre, as wife of Charles III., 1375-1416.
ELEANOR OF GUIENNE, q. of Louis VII., 1137-1154, and afterwards of Henry II. of England, by whom she became the mo. of Richard I., d. 1204.
ELEANOR OF PROVENCE, daughter of RAIMOND BERENGER V., and queen of Henry III. of England, called Saint Eleanor, died 1292.
ELEANOR-TELLEZ, queen of Por., 1371-1405.
ELEAZAR, a German rabbin, 13th century.
ELGIN, THOMAS BRUCE, earl of Elgin and Kincardine, cel. for his collection of Grecian antiquities, born 1771, Turkish ambas. 1789, d. 1840.
ELI, judge and high priest of Israel, 12th c. B.C.
ELIAS, or ELIJAH, the most remarkable of the Jewish prophets, distin. above all the others as the forerunner of the Saviour, 10th to 9th ct. B.C.
ELIAS, ELVITA, a Jewish critic, 1472-1549.
ELIAS, M., a Flemish painter, 1658-1741.
ELIO, FR.-XAVIER, a Spanish general, ex. 1822.
ELIOT, JOHN, an Indian missionary, 1604-1689.
ELIOT, THOMAS, a scholar of Cambridge, author of a Latin and English dictionary, died 1546.
ELIOTT, GEO. AUGUSTUS, Lord Heathfield, distinguished in the late war by his gallant defence of Gibraltar, 1718-1790.

ELISE, an Armenian historian, died 480.

ELISEE, J. F. COPEL, called 'le père Elisée,' or Father Elishah, a cel. Fr. preacher, 1726-1783.

ELISEE, M. V. TALACHAN, generally called Father Elisée, surg. of Louis XVIII., 1753-1817.

ELISHA, successor of Elijah in the prophetic ministry, 9th century B.C.; (2 Kings ii. 13).

ELIZABETH, the first of the name, queen consort of England, daughter of Sir R. Woodville and widow of Sir John Gray, mar. to Edward IV. 1464, died 1488; the second of the name, daughter of the preceding, wife of Henry VII., and mother of Henry VIII., 1466-1502; the third of the name,—

ELIZABETH, queen of England, was born at Greenwich on 7th September, 1533. She was the daughter of Henry VIII. by Anne Boleyn, and her position in reference to the descent of the throne was peculiar, since the accession of her sister, Mary, conveying the inference that Henry's marriage to Catharine of Arragon was valid, rendered the issue of the second marriage illegitimate. An act had, however, been passed in Henry's reign, which, fortunately perhaps, cut the knot by settling the crown on the two princesses successively. During the reign of her brother, King Edward, she spent a very happy life, following her natural disposition for hard study, and not only acquiring many accomplishments, but practically applying them to the acquisition of a profound knowledge of mankind. During the reign of her sister the scene changed, and she underwent five uneasy years of difficulty and danger. Her conduct was marked by extreme sagacity, courage, and caution. She proved that her adherence to the principles of the reformation was not so much in her mind a matter of essential belief as of preference between a good system and a bad system, for she submitted in some measure to the ritual of Rome. On the other hand, when we know the extreme rigidness of Mary's bigotry, it is necessary to believe that nothing but a considerable amount of sisterly affection could have prevented her from sacrificing one who was likely so far to undo all that she had herself done at the sacrifice of so many lives. Queen Elizabeth's accession to the throne dates from 17th November, 1558. Her glorious reign is matter of history. A contrast to that which followed, it was marked alike by prudence and decision. The ecclesiastical revolution, which every one saw must follow her accession, went on so gradually, and at the same time so distinctly, that the Romish hierarchy had abandoned their cause before it was finally decided against them. A main character of her reign is, that from the first she chose wise advisers, and through all her personal caprices kept them to the end. Another eminent feature of her policy was to watch the growth of discontents, and appease them ere they became dangerous. Thus, when such complaints as shook the throne in the next reign, and overturned it in that of Charles, began faintly to appear, she stepped forward and redressed the grievances as from her own princely beneficence to her suppliant people, and hence she preserved her prerogative untarnished, while she appeased discontent. How far sovereigns of such ability are advantageous to a free country may be questioned. England certainly never came so near arbitrary power as in her reign. With all her political capacity, her personal failings were signally preposterous. Her desire to be considered lovely and to be loved approached a monomania. She appears to have had a singularly unpleasing aspect for a woman—harsh features, a rough yellow skin, dim eyes, an irascible indented mouth, and sandy hair—yet no one could too grossly flatter her beauty, and it was impossible to make a portrait with the slightest degree of truth which she could tolerate. Sir Walter Raleigh speaks of 'the pictures of Queen Elizabeth, made by unskilful and common painters, which, by her own commandment, were knocked in pieces and cast into the fire.' On more than one occasion she was allowed, and allowed herself, to exult in the notion that she was the object of the despairing love of her servants—but she never permitted either vanity or affection to disturb the policy of her reign. To the jealousy arising out of her peculiar weakness we may attribute the great blot on her name—her harshness to Mary of Scotland. It has now been proved that she distinctly indicated how good a service she would count it secretly to put the captive out of the way; and it is creditable to the English public men of the day that none of them would take her hint as a warrant 'to break into the bloody house of life.' Elizabeth died on 24th March, 1603. [J.H.B.]

[Tomb of Elizabeth.]

ELIZABETH, CHRISTINA, empress of Germ., and grandmother of Marie Antoinette, born 1691; married to the archduke Charles 1708; died 1750.

ELIZABETH OF HUNGARY, daughter of Andrew II., and wife of Louis IV., landgrave of Thuringia, known as St. Elizabeth, 1207-1231.

ELIZABETH, queen of Hungary, married to Charobert 1319; regent of Poland for her son 1370-1380; died 1381. Another of the name, wife of Louis, and regent after his death, 1382; murdered 1386.

ELIZABETH-PETROWNA, emp. of Russia, daughter of Peter the Great, born 1709, succeeded 1741, died 1761. Another princess of the name, known as ELIZABETH-ALEXIEVNA, of the house of Baden, was the wife of the emperor Alexander, b. 1779, married to the grand duke 1793 d. 1826.

ELIZABETH, Philippine Marie Helene, commonly called Madame Elizabeth, sister of Louis XVI., the faithful friend and companion of the royal family in their flight to Varennes, and during their imprisonment, born 1764; executed, on the pretence of corresponding with her other brothers, afterwards Louis XVIII. and Charles X., by the revolutionists, 10th May, 1794.

ELIZABETH, Princess Palatine, daughter of Frederick V., and pupil of Des Cartes, 1618-1680.

ELIZABETH, queen of Portugal, daughter of Peter III. of Arragon, known as St. Elizabeth, died 1336.

ELIZABETH, queen of Spain: the first, Elizabeth of Valois, daughter of Henry II. and Catherine de Medici, born 1545, married to Philip II. 1559, died 1568. The second, Elizabeth of France, daughter of Henry IV. and Marie de Medici, born 1602, married to Philip IV. 1615, died 1644. The third, Elizabeth Farnese, daughter of Edward II., prince of Parma, born 1692, married to Philip V. 1714, died 1766.

ELLA, a Saxon chief who made a descent upon Britain, and became king of Sussex 491, died 514.

ELLA, a king of Deira, Northumb., 559-588.

ELLENBOROUGH, Edward Law, Lord, an eminent English lawyer and judge, was born at Great Salkeld, in Cumberland, about the year 1748. As the son of the celebrated bishop of Carlisle, he began life with favourable prospects. He had not become conspicuously known to the public until the trial of Warren Hastings, in 1785, opened up for him a very great arena of exertion. His function of leading counsel for the accused in a matter involving so much variety and extent of new and perplexing matter was one which no man could perform in a satisfactory manner without great ability, and Law received for himself the high confidence of the public and his profession. He was made attorney-general in 1801, and lord chief justice of the King's Bench in 1802. He held the office for sixteen years, which covered a very trying period; and though he was a man of hasty temper, and sometimes deemed arbitrary, he obtained a character for fairness and independence. The last important business in which he was engaged was the trial of William Hone, charged with libel. The proceedings assumed an almost controversial character between the accused and the judge, and it was said that the mortification of the latter in being defeated by the verdict of a jury hastened his end. He died in December, 1818. [J.H.B.]

ELLERS, J., a Swedish miscel. wr., died 1790.

ELLEY, Lieutenant-General Sir John, a brave horse soldier and officer, distinguished in the last war, died 1839.

ELLIOT, J., an Eng. phy. and chem., 1747-87.

ELLIOT, W., a designer and engrav., 1717-66.

ELLIOTT, Ebenezer, the celebrated 'Corn Law Rhymer,' was born at Masborough, near Rotherham, 1781, of humble parentage, and died at his residence near Barnsley, 1849. He was possessed of an athletic genius, and of that love of nature which marks the genuine poet. It is well known that his 'Corn Law Rhymes' assisted in exciting that revolt of the manufacturing population against a shameful impost, which produced our recent commercial changes; but the name of Elliott will be remembered as the teacher and friend of the poor long after these circumstances have become matter of dry history. His 'Village Patriarch,' 'Ribbledin,' and other outpourings of his muse must always occupy a distinguished place in the popular poetry of England. Elliott possessed the happy talent of combining business with literature, and realized a competency in the iron trade

ELLIS, Clement, an Engl. divine, 1630-1700.

ELLIS, Geo., a miscellaneous auth., 1745-1815.

ELLIS, G. J. W. Agar, Baron Dover, celeb. for his investigations in histor. subjects, 1797-1833.

ELLIS, H., an English navigator, died 1806.

ELLIS, John, celebrated as a naturalist, was born in London about the year 1710. He died in 1776. Ellis was a merchant in London, but it appears he was not successful in business. The study of natural history, which had been an amusement in his earlier years, became in his distresses a consolation to him, and a serious occupation; while a situation under government rendered him in the latter period of his life comfortable and independent. He is the author of several valuable papers on subjects connected with natural history, both botanical and zoological; but his chief claim to the great reputation he enjoys rests upon his works on corallines. A little previous to his time Peyssonell had made known to the French Academy his discovery of the animal origin of corals and madrepore, while Bernard de Jussieu had demonstrated the animal nature of several corallines. Ellis, perhaps without knowing these discoveries, had his attention directed to the same subject, and succeeded in demonstrating clearly and satisfactorily the animality of an immense number of zoophytes, which, till his time, had been always classed amongst plants. His opinions were disputed, and the controversies arising therefrom gave Ellis further opportunities of more decidedly proving the truth of his discoveries. He is thus justly entitled to the credit of at least substantiating the fact that corallines are animals. His 'Essay Towards a Natural History of Corallines' was translated almost immediately into French and German, and procured for him the friendship and correspondence of Linnæus, who dedicated to him a genus of plants by the name of Ellisia. [W.B.]

ELLIS, John, a fugitive wr. and versifier, an intimate acquaintance of Dr. Johnson, 1698-1791.

ELLIS, W., a writer on agriculture, 17th cent.

ELLISTON, Robert William, one of the most versatile of British actors, was born in London, 1774, and was educated for the church, but disappointed his friends, and appeared on the stage in 1796. In 1803 he was appointed acting manager at the Haymarket, and his popularity was so great, that the performance was removed to the Opera House. His subsequent career as lessee and manager of various theatres, was marked by utter recklessness, not to say insanity on some occasions. His greatest character was that of Duke Aranza in 'The Honeymoon.' Died on the 7th July, 1831.

ELLROD, G. A., a Bohemian philol., 1709-60.

ELLWOOD, Thos., a religious writer and controversialist of the Quaker persuasion, 1639-1713.

ELLYS, Anth., an English divine, 1693-1761.

ELLYS, Sir R., a biblical scholar, died 1742.

ELMAKYN, G., an Arab. historian, 1223-1273.

ELMSLEY, Pet., D.D., a dist. classical schol. and philologist, contrib. to the reviews, 1773-1825.

ELOY, N. F. J., a Fr. medical hist., 1714-88.

ELPHINSTON, a Scotch naval com. in the service of Russia, dist. against the Turks, 1720-1775.

ELPHINSTON, Arthur, Lord Balmerino, a partizan of the Pretender, executed after the defeat of Culloden, 1688-1746.

ELPHINSTON, J., a native of Edinburgh, inventor of a new orthography, 1721-1809.

ELPHINSTON, W., a Scotch prelate, 1431-1514.

ELPHINSTONE, George Keith, Viscount Keith, a naval commander, distinguished in the American war, at the siege of Toulon, and the Cape of Good Hope, 1747-1828.

ELPHINSTONE, Major-Gen. George William Keith, a Waterloo officer, commander-in-chief of the Bengal army during the disasters of Affghanistan, 1782-1842.

ELRINGTON, Th., an Irish mathem., d. 1835.

ELSHOLTZ, J. S., a Pruss. botanist, 1623-1688.

ELSNER, Ch. J. H., a Pruss. phys., 1777-1834.

ELSNER, J., a Prussian theolog., 1692-1750.

ELSNER, J. Th., a Polish theolog., 1717-1782.

ELSTOB, W., an English antiquarian, 1673-1714. His sister, Elizabeth, author of a Saxon grammar, &c., 1683-1756.

ELSYNGE, H., a parliament. hist., 1598-1654.

ELVIUS, P., a Swed. astronomer, 1710-1749.

ELWES, John, a notorious miser, 1714-1789.

ELYOT, Sir Th., an English moralist, d. 1546.

ELZEVIR, a distinguished name in the history of literature, borne by a family of printers, remarkable for the choice and beautiful execution of their works. Louis, the first of the family known to biographers, was a bookseller of Leyden, close of the 16th cent. Matthew, his son, born 1565, was a bookseller at Leyden 1618. Isaac, eldest son of Matthew, and first printer of the family, Leyden, 1617-1628. Bonaventure and Abraham, brothers of the preceding, and the most famous of the family, partners at Leyden, 1626-1652. John, son of Abraham, born 1622, in partnership with his cousin Daniel, 1652-1654, died 1661. Daniel, the last printer of the family, son of Bonaventure, born 1617, after the death of John associated with his cousin Louis, who had long flourished at Amsterdam, died 1680. The Elzevir edition of the classics, and other works, are still held in high esteem for their correctness and beauty.

ELZHEIMER, A., a Ger. painter, 1574-1620.

EMADI, a famous Persian poet, d. 1275.

EMANUEL, a Heb. poet and gram., 13th cent.

EMANUEL, surnamed the 'Great,' king of Portugal, born 1469, succeeded 1495, died 1521.

EMANUEL, duke of Savoy. See Philibert.

EMERIC, or HENRY, k. of Hungary, 1196-1204.

EMERIJON, B. M., a Fr. jurist, 1725-1785.

EMERY, Ja. A., a Fr. theologian, 1732-1811.

EMERY, John, an English actor, 1777-1822.

EMERY, M. Particelli D', a French financier under Mazarin, historian of Mantua, died 1650.

EMILIANUS, procl. emp. of Rome and murd. 253.

EMILIUS. See Æmilius.

EMLYN, Henry, an Eng. architect, 1729-1815.

EMLYN, Thomas, a nonconf. theo., 1663-1743.

EMMERY, J. Z. Cl., Count De Grozyeulx, a Fr. statesman, dep. to the states-gen., 1752-1823.

EMMETT. Robert Emmett, the son of a physician at Cork, was born in 1780. While quite a lad he took an active part in the efforts made by the association called the United Irishmen, to separate Ireland from Great Britain, and establish her as an independent republic in 1798. When these attempts failed, Robert Emmett escaped to France, where he remained till the winter of 1802. He then returned to Dublin, and strove to reorganize the Irish malcontents, and renew the rebellion. On the 23d of July, 1803, a rising in Dublin took place at Emmett's directions; but the insurgent mob of the Irish capital proved as cowardly as they were furious; and Emmett, in disgust at the outrages which they committed, and finding himself utterly unable to rule the storm that he had raised, escaped from the rabble rout and the troops, who, after some strange delay, appeared, and more easily put them down. Emmett remained for a short time concealed among the Wicklow mountains; but, returning to Dublin, was tracked, apprehended, tried, and convicted of high treason. He was executed on the 20th September, 1803. He met his fate with manly courage and Christian resignation; and his whole demeanour, both at his trial and on the scaffold, gained for him the pitying admiration of many, who, while they condemned his erroneous theories, and his mischievously rash enthusiasm, felt compelled to pay homage to the purity of his motives, the fervour of his eloquence, and the excellence of his general character. His fate, and that of Miss Curran, the lady to whom he was engaged, form the subjects of two of the finest and most popular of Moore's Irish melodies. [E.S.C.]

EMMETT, Th. Addis, a barrister, elder brother of the Irish patriot, escaped to Amer. and d. 1827.

EMMIUS, Abbo, a German divine, 1547-1826.

EMO, Angelo, a Venetian statesman, 1731-92.

EMPECINADO, the surname of Don J. M. Diez, a Spanish warrior and patriot, exec. 1825.

EMPEDOCLES, a Greek philosopher of the school of Pythagoras, the first who added to the doctrine of metempsychosis the transmigration of souls into vegetables, the first also to distinguish love and hate as moving forces, and to describe the four elements as fundamental differences of matter. He was a man of distinguished patriotism, and some curious traditions are related of him. Lived about the middle of the 5th ct. B.C.

EMPSON, Wm., F.R.S.L., prof. of law at Haileybury college; an able critic and scholar, d. 1852.

EMSER, Jerome, a German catholic theologian, dist. as an opponent of Luther, 1477-1527.

ENDEL, Manoah, a Polish rabbi, died 1585.

ENFIELD, Dr. William, author of 'The Speaker,' and other works, a dissenting minister, and teacher of the Belles Lettres at Warrington Academy, 1741-1797.

ENGEL, John James, a German philosopher, dramatic writer, and literary savant, professor of morals and liter. at Berlin, 1741-1802. His brother, Ch. Christian, a man of letters, 1752-1801.

ENGEL, Sam., a Swiss geographer, 1702-84.

ENGELBERT, a theologian of Styria, d. 1331.

ENGELBRECHT, John, a German visionary, was born at Brunswick 1599, and died in his native place, after wandering from city to city, in 1642. His father was a tailor, and John was apprenticed to the same business, but his health failed him, his malady being augmented by the severity of his religious practices, and he assumed the character of a prophet as early as 1622. There can be no doubt about the reality of his trances, and also that he possessed the extraordinary faculty of going without food or drink for many days together, and of sleeping for almost incredible periods. The 'Works, and Divine Visions, and Revelations, of John Engelbrecht,' were first published in German in 1625. The 'Visions' were translated into English by the learned Francis Okeley in 1780. The most striking of these is a vision of the three states, the ecclesiastical, the civil, and the economical: besides which he describes a 'Vision of Heaven and Hell,' a 'Vision of the New Heaven and the New Earth,' and 'Of the Mountain of Salvation.' The vision of the 'Three States' is evidently symbolic, and more independent of Engelbrecht's idiosyncracy than the others, which take their colour from his preconceived notions. His appeals to the moral and religious sense of his readers are energetic, and carry along with them the fullest evidence of their sincerity. His grand mistake is that into which makers and enthusiasts of all classes have betrayed themselves—the supposition that their impressions of spiritual things are necessarily an inspiration of the Holy Spirit. Okeley's edition of Engelbrecht contains a notice of John William Petersen, and his wife Joanna Eleanora Merlau, both famous visionaries, and a specification of Engelbrecht's works in the complete edition of 1761. [E.R.]

ENGELBRECHT-ENGELBRECHTSON, a chief of the Dalecarlians, in whose quarrel he rebelled upon Stockholm, defeated Eric XIII., was named administrator of Sweden, together with Canuteson, whom he assassinated, 1436.

ENGELGRAVE, H., a Flem. ascetic, 1610-70.

ENGELHARDT, C. A., a Ger. jurist, 1768-1834.

ENGESTROEM, J., a Swedish Orientalist, 1777. His son EUSTACE, a mineralogist, 1813. LAURENCE, another son, an author and statesman, 1751-1826.

ENGHIEN. See CONDE, LOUIS ANT. HENRY.

ENNIUS, QUINTUS, a Latin poet, 239-169 B.C.

ENNODIUS, MAGNUS FELIX, a divine of the Latin church, by descent a Gaul, 473-521.

ENOCH, in Scripture a son of Cain (Gen. iv. 17) and a son of Jared (Gen. v. 18).

ENT, GEORGE, an English physician, noted as a defence of the discov. of Harvey, 1604-1689.

ENTICK, or ENTINCK, JOHN, a miscellaneous writer, author of a spelling dictionary, a hist. of London, a Latin and Eng. dict., &c., 1713-1773.

ENTINOPUS, the first architect and founder of Naxos, b. in Candia about the end of the 3d ct.

ENTRECASTEAUX, JO. ANT. BRUNE, D', admiral of the French fleets in the East Indies, was born at Aix, in Provence, 1740. In 1791 he was sent out by France in search of La Perouse; and, the nature of the inquiry leading him to keep near shore, he ascertained with great exactness the outlines of many coasts. New Holland, W. and S.W. coasts, Tasmania, New Caledonia, &c., have been accurately delineated by him. He failed in detecting any trace of the celebrated navigator, and died before returning home, in the vicinity of Java, 1793. Rossel, who succeeded him in command, has written an account of the voyage, 2 vols. 4to, 1808. [J.B.]

ENZINA, a poet of Old Castile, 15th century.

ENZINAS, F. DE, an Andalusian Jesuit, and missionary to the Philippine Islands, 1570-1632.

EOBANUS, HELIUS, a German poet and professor of eloquence, born in Hesse 1488, died 1540.

EOGAN, EOGHAINN, EOGHANN, or EOAN, names which figure in the old Irish annals as the half-fabulous stock of the houses of O'Brien, MacCarthy, O'Neil, and O'Donnel, reaching as far back as the 3d century B.C. The chiefs of the last two were created peers of Ireland in the reign of James I., the first with the title of earl of Tyrone, the second as earl of Tyrconnel.

EON, a French visionary of the 12th century, who believed himself to be meant by the accusative in the liturgical phrase Per eum qui venturus est judicare, &c., and professed to have visions and perform miracles in proof of his mission. He gained many proselytes, and gave them new names, such as 'Wisdom,' 'Terror,' 'Judgment,' and others equally striking. Eon died in prison about 1148, and his followers were consigned to the flames.

EON DE BEAUMONT. See D'EON.

EPAMINONDAS, the Theban statesman and general, was of noble descent, but was born and reared in poverty. Of his early life little is known beyond the fact that he was educated in, and adopted the doctrines of Pythagoras; his public life extends from the restoration of democracy by Pelopidas and the other Theban exiles in B.C. 379, to the battle of Mantineia in B.C. 362. In the conspiracy which restored the independence of his native city he took no part, refusing to stain his hands with the blood of his countrymen; but no sooner were the usurpers expelled than he became the prime mover in the Theban state, and claimed for Thebes the right of controlling the other cities of Bœotia. Impressed with these opinions he went to Sparta as ambassador in B.C. 371, to negotiate peace; and his claim being rejected by the Spartans, Cleombrotus was sent to invade Bœotia. The contending parties met at Leuctra, B.C. 371, when the total defeat of the Spartans not only established the supremacy of the Thebans, but put an end to the superiority in arms which had been conceded to their opponents. Having thus succeeded in the first object of his ambition, he next conceived the design of substituting Thebes for Sparta as the ruling democratical state in Greece, and for this purpose marched an army into the Peloponnesus in the winter of B.C. 369, when he inflicted a serious blow on the power of Sparta. A second expedition into the Peloponnesus in B.C. 368 proving unsuccessful, Epaminondas was disgraced; and for some time his name does not appear in connection with any public measure. In a third expedition which he conducted in B.C. 366, he greatly extended the influence of Thebes, gaining over to her interests, without bloodshed, the whole democratic confederation in the Peloponnesus. Our limits prevent us from entering into the reasons which led to the downfall of the Theban influence. Achaia, Elis, and great part of Arcadia, returned to the alliance with Sparta; and it was to check this defection that Epaminondas invaded the Peloponnesus for the fourth and last time in B.C. 362. The Spartans, along with the disaffected states, and aided by the Athenians, were prepared for the contest. The two armies met near Mantineia, a city of Arcadia; and in the battle which ensued, Epaminondas displayed with consummate skill the peculiar tactics to which he owed his celebrity; but when in the full career of victory, he received a mortal wound, and was carried from the field. His army was thereby paralyzed, and no further attempt was made to follow up the victory. His private life was free from reproach; and his public conduct was regulated by a sincere love of his country. Before Epaminondas was born, says Nepos, and after his death, Thebes was always subject to some foreign power; on the contrary, while he presided over her councils, she was at the head of Greece. [G.F.]

EPARCHUS, ANTH., a Greek poet, 16th cent.

EPEE, CHAS. MICHEL DE L', a French abbé, distinguished for his benevolence as a teacher of the deaf and dumb, fndr. of an asylum, 1712-1789.

EPHORUS, a Gr. orator and hist., 363-300 B.C.

EPHRAIM, the second son born to Joseph in Egypt by Asenath, the daughter of Poti-pherah.

EPHRAIM, ST., a Christian writer, 4th cent.

EPHRAIM, an Armenian patriarch, 1734-84.

EPICHARMUS, a Pythagorean philosopher and poet, au. of treatises on philosophy and medicine, and the supposed inventor of comedy, 5th ct. B.C.

EPICTETUS, lived about 90 years after Christ. He is essentially the moralist of Rome—a Stoic; for Stoicism is simply the Roman character and genius represented in theory. The original monuments of his doctrine have mostly perished.

EPICURUS, born at Athens 341 B.C.: he flourished after the decline of Speculative Philosophy, and when the irretrievable disruption of national affairs in Greece had repressed the Heroic in Action. At such a time, he taught with acceptance that pleasure is the sole good, and that other aims are only the disturbances of humanity. The theoretical opinions of Epicurus were identical with those of all modern sensational Schools. We do not refer to his physical or cosmogonic speculations, which in the main he borrowed from Democritus; but to his conception of the origin and ground of human knowledge and thought. Human knowledge, he said, flows from our sensations, which alone do not deceive: beyond the immediate results of sensation, we are conscious of what he termed 'anticipations,' meaning thereby simple generalizations, or classifications of our sensible experience:—to such, add our 'passions,' or desire of pleasure and aversion from pain; and the contents of the human mind are summed up. From a philosophy of this character, no other system of practical morals than that inculcated by Epicurus ever can arise. If the existence of universal and necessary Ideas be ignored, an imperative in morals cannot be conceived of, nor will the name Duty have any meaning. Right denied, as an independent reality or a Law by itself, there is nothing for it as a rule of action, save the estimate of consequences; and the only criterion by which we can value or measure consequences is their tendency to produce pleasure or pain. The fundamental problem in Morals thus corresponds with the speculative problem whether the human mind is capable of apprehending the Absolute and Imperative, or whether knowledge is simply empirical: nevertheless among empirical systems there is also a great variety. Granting that pleasure is the aim of action, it remains to determine wherein man's true pleasure consists? The actual scheme of Epicurus is certainly not the lowest of which we have record; but it would be wrong to pretend that it is a very elevated one. His maxims may be thus rendered:—Accept and aim at any pleasure which will not be followed by any pain. Avoid pain that brings no pleasure. Avoid every pleasure that would deprive you of a greater pleasure, or cause a pain greater than the pleasure. Accept any pain that might free you from a greater pain, or that must be followed by a pleasure more intense than the pain. The 'virtue' par excellence in such a system is prudence; but it admits of others; and Epicurus inculcated temperance, courage, energy to resist superstition and imaginary terrors, and justice—on the ground that honesty is the best policy. He was himself temperate and benevolent; disinterestedness seemed one of his necessities; he lived on water and crust, and in the midst of a fearful famine, he divided with his disciples his mite. He renounced what is ordinarily called pleasure, because its enjoyments could not last; not like Zeno, who repudiated it as evil, and incompatible with the freedom of the sage. We have only a few fragments of the writings of Epicurus; but his system is explained by Cicero, Seneca, Plutarch, and many others: Diogenes Laertius discourses concerning it very copiously. Like Democritus, Epicurus owes much to the immortal song of Lucretius. [J.P.N.]

EPIMENIDES, a philosopher and poet of the 6th century B.C., supposed to be the first who introduced the consecration of temples, the purification of countries, cities, and private houses, into Greece, where he was held for an infallible prophet.

EPINAY, MADAME DE LA LIVE D', or by her maiden name, LOUISE FLORENCE PETRONILLE, a French lady, celebrated for her attachment to Rousseau, and as the authoress of 'Les Conversations d' Emilie,' &c., 1725-1783.

EPIPHANIUS, one of the Greek fathers, d. 403.

EPIPHANIUS, surnamed 'The Scholastic,' Latin translator of Socrates, Sozomen, and Theodoret, 6th century.

EPISCOPIUS, SIMON, whose surname in his own tongue was Bisschop, was born at Amsterdam in 1583. Sent to the university of Leyden in 1600, his inquisitive and ardent mind soon involved him in the raging controversies of the time. Ordained a pastor at Bleswyck in 1610, he was in a very short time chosen to be the advocate of the Arminian party, at a conference which was held at the Hague, and was at length raised to the chair of theology at Leyden, on the deposition of Vorstius. At the synod of Dort he was the accredited champion of the Remonstrants, or Arminians. The victorious Calvinist, or Gomarist party, disgraced their cause by inflicting civil pains and penalties on their opponents. Episcopius was deposed and banished. The exile spent a short time in France, then returning to Holland he became pastor of the church of the Remonstrants at Rotterdam, and removed finally to the rectorship of the Arminian gymnasium at Amsterdam, where he died in 1643. Episcopius was the divine of the Arminian party; reducing to a system the scattered views and unadjusted conceptions of his master Arminius. His writings display no common shrewdness, versatility, and eloquence; the product of an adventurous and active spirit, that had a special relish in questioning ancient dogmas and unsettling common belief. His power lay, however, more in assault than defence; he could sap and mine with fully more dexterity than he could erect a new and symmetrical edifice. His life was written by Limborch, a relative, and his theological works were collected by Curcellaeus and Poellenberg, in two folios, and published at Amsterdam 1650-65, and reprinted at London 1678. [J.E.]

EPO, Boetius, a lawyer of Friesland, 1529-99.

EPONINA, the wife of Julius Sabinus, a nobleman of Gaul, defeated in a revolt against Vespasian, celebrated for her constancy and devotion, and executed with her husband 78.

EPREMESNIL. See Espremenil.

EQUICOLA, Mario, an Ital. hist., 1460-1541.

ERACLIUS, a Rom. artist and art-wr., 11th c.

ERARD, Sebastian, a native of Strasburg, celebrated for his pianos and harps, 1752-1831.

ERASISTRATUS, a Gr. physician, 4th c. B. C.

ERASMUS, an illegitimate son of Gerard, a citizen of Tergou, was born at Rotterdam 28th Oct., 1467. His paternal name he changed into Désiré, 'amâbile,' and afterwards prolonged into Desiderius Erasmus—the first a Latin, and the second a Greek appellation, both with the same meaning as the Dutch Gerard. He usually signed himself Erasmus Roterodamus. He received his first education at Daventer, where the future Pope Adrian VI. was his schoolfellow. But Erasmus was only thirteen years of age when both his parents died, and the three guardians to whose care the orphan was left, squandered his property, and to gain the whole of his patrimony, as well as to conceal their villany, forced him into a monastery at Balduc, in Brabant. Thence he was taken to another religious house near Delft, and he assumed the vows at Stein in 1486, having entered among the regular canons. Luckily for the young scholar he was not buried in a convent, as his Latin scholarship gained him the notice of Henry a Bergues, bishop of Cambray, who kept him for a time as his private secretary, and then sent him to Paris to prosecute his studies. In the French capital the young literary Dutchman was in abject poverty, teaching a few pupils for hire, nay for years he wandered about the continent and in England, subsisting on the precarious bounty of admirers. He visited this country for the first time in 1497, at the invitation of Lord Mountjoy, and won the esteem of its most illustrious men, such as Sir Thomas More, Dean Colet, Linacre, Grocyn, and others, and published his Moriæ Encomium,—Praise of folly. In 1506 he travelled into Italy, took a doctor's degree at Turin, obtained from Pope Julian II. a final release from his monastic vows, and joyfully put on the black cassock of the secularis. He spent some time in Bologna, and resided for a short season at Venice with the renowned printer Aldus Manutius, and published his Adagia. At the invitation of Henry VIII., in 1510, he revisited England, and taught in Cambridge as a lecturer on Greek, and as Lady Margaret professor of theology. But his itinerations were not over, for in 1514 he returned to the continent; and at the archducal request of him who was afterwards Charles V., he repaired as counsellor to Brabant. After several changes he removed to Basel in 1521, the scene of his highest literary labours, in conjunction with the printer Froben. In 1529, when the reformation triumphed in Basel, the timid satirist of monks and popish ceremonies took refuge in Freiburg; but in 1535 he returned. His health was now declining; gout and gravel had for some years severely tormented him; his feeble frame was seized with dysentery, and he died at Basel on the 12th of July, 1536.—The literary toils of Erasmus were incessant. Besides his invaluable labours in connection with the revival of learning, his most popular efforts were his satirical assaults on the monastic orders, in his famous 'Colloquies,' and other productions. But his great work was the publication of the Greek Testament, out of various manuscripts, in 1516, folio, accompanied with a new Latin translation. The Testament was reprinted in 1519, 1522, 1527, and 1535. In the first year mentioned he also published the works of Jerome. He composed likewise a series of paraphrases on the New Testament, many of which display an admirable talent for exegesis. In his various prefaces and dedications, he nobly, eloquently, and repeatedly vindicated the open circulation of the inspired volume in the vernacular languages of Europe. These publications raised up hosts of enemies to him, who called him heresiarch and forger, and he shrunk from suffering on account of protestant truth and freedom. With Luther, whom he at first eulogized, he maintained a bitter and protracted controversy about the 'Freedom of the Will.' That his writings largely contributed to the success of the reformation there is not a doubt, though himself wanted the faith and courage to be a thorough reformer. His scholarship was extensive and elegant, his industry was unceasing, his Latinity is generally pure, his wit was ever sparkling in pleasant variety, his company was a scene of refined enjoyment, his fund of anecdote was inexhaustible, and the love of literature was the passion of his nature. Latin was more familiar to him than his mother tongue. Among his works, not already referred to, are his learned dissertation, De recta Latini Græcique Sermonis pronuntiatione, his 'Letters,' full of interesting information; his treatise, De Copia Verborum et Rerum, in which he insists on diversity of illustration and style; his Ciceronianus, in which he heartily ridicules such pedants as would not use a Latin term unless it had the sanction of the great Roman orator; his Christian Soldier's Manual; and his Ecclesiastes, or the Art of Preaching, published not long before his death. The best edition of his collected works is in 11 volumes folio, Leyden, 1703-6. The first edition, in 9 volumes, Basel, 1540, was condemned to the flames by Pope Paul IV. [J.E.]

ERASTUS, Thomas, a physician of Baden, better known in ecclesiastical history for his opinions in theology and church government, the fundamental principle of which is, that the church should exercise no coercive power except through the arm of the civil magistrate. The Erastians in the Long Parliament were opposed to the presbyterians; and in the Church of England, Bishop Parker may be considered the chief of this school. Erastus was born in 1524, and d. in Basle, 1583.

ERATH, A. U. D., a Ger. jurisconsult, 1709-73.

ERATOSTHENES, an astronomer of Alexandria; died 194 B.C. He is distinguished in history for having first conceived the plan of measuring the earth. The means employed were the shadow of a style at Alexandria, and the distance of Alexandria from Syene, where the sun is vertical at solstice. His result was surprisingly near the truth, making a degree to be about 80 English miles: it is about 69.

ERBACH, CHR., a Ger. composer, 16th cent.

ERCHEMBERT, a Lombard historian, 9th c.

ERCILLA-Y-ZUNIGA, DON ALONSO DE, a gallant soldier in the service of Philip II., distinguished in the wars of Spanish America, where his experience furnished the materials for the earliest epic poem of his native country, entitled 'La Araucana,' by which he is best known in France and England; born 1525, died 1595.

ERDESWICKE, T., an Engl. antiqu., d 1603.

EREMITA, D., a Flemish sarant, 1584-1613.

ERIC. The Swedish kings of this name of whom anything is known are—ERIC EDMUNDSON, Upsala king, died 885. ERIC THE VICTORIOUS, son of the preceding, and joint successor with his brother Olave; celebrated for his victory over Styrbiorn, son of the latter, who claimed the inheritance on his father's death; died 993, or soon after. Two kings, both bearing the name of ERIC, contended for the throne in the civil war which broke out about 1066, and in this war both the kings and all the chief Swedes are said to have fallen. Besides these, four other Erics must have been known traditionally—ST. ERIC, who reigned 1155-1160, being called ERIC IX. After him comes ERIC CANUTESON, or ERIC X., grandson of the preceding, called the good-harvest king, reigned 1210-1216. ERIC ERICSON, or ERIC XI., a grave and righteous prince, in whom the race of St. Eric expired, reigned 1222-1250. ERIC XII., of the house of the Folkungers, who rose to power during the reign of the preceding; king during the lifetime of his father, Magnus Ladislas, and at length poisoned by his mother, Blanche of Namur, 1350-1359. ERIC XIII. of Sweden, and VII. of Denmark, before his election, duke of Pomerania, chosen in Sweden 1396; co-regent with Margaret of Waldemar to his dethronement by Engelbrecht-Engelbrechtson in 1434, and after that, having been again acknowledged, dethroned in all the three kingdoms of Sweden, Norway, and Denmark, at the death of that princess, 1439. ERIC XIV., son of Gustavus Vasa, born 1533, succeeded 1560, compelled to abdicate by his brothers 1569, poisoned in prison 1577.

ERIC. The kings of Denmark of this name are nine in number—two unknown in the 9th century, and then ERIC I., called 'the Good,' reigned 1095-1105. ERIC II., reigned 1131-1137. ERIC III., called 'the Lamb,' succeeded the preceding, and abdicated 1147. ERIC IV., appointed by his brother, Abel, reigned 1242-1250. ERIC V., succeeded 1259, assassinated 1286. ERIC VI., reigned 1286-1319. ERIC VII., same as Eric XIII. of Sweden

ERIC AXELSON, adminis. of Sweden, 1466-7.

ERICEIRA, FERDINAND DE MENEZES, Count De, a soldier, statesman, and historian of Portugal, 1614-1699. His grandson, FRANCIS XAVIER, distinguished by his military talents and his learning, author of 'The Henriqueida,' a poem, 1673-1743. The mother of the preceding, JANE JOSEPHINE DE MENEZES, distinguished for her literary works, died 1709.

ERIGENA, JOHN SCOTUS, who seems from his surname to have been a native of Ireland and not of Scotland, was born about the beginning of the ninth century. He is often confounded with a Saxon monk whom King Alfred invited to England, and placed over his college at Oxford. Erigena spent the most of his time in France, and at the court of Charles the Bold. About the year 850 he wrote against Gottschalk on predestination; and he also published a work on the Lord's Supper, de Corpore et Sanguine Domini, in which he combated the doctrine of transubstantiation. His theological writings were condemned by the council of Valence in 855, and that of Tangres in 859. But the great work of this schoolman is that named de Divisione Naturæ, &c., printed at Oxford by Thomas Gale in 1681. It is divided into five books, and is composed in the form of a dialogue. This vast and amazing essay treats of a great variety of subjects—of God, and the knowledge of God—of being, and its kinds and modes—of the world, of sin and its nature, &c.—in which abstruse and subtle discussions, a species of mystical pantheism, may be easily discovered. Erigena was well versed in Greek, and was deeply imbued with Neo-platonism,—with those ideas and modes of thought which are associated with the names of Plotinus and Proclus. Hebrew and Arabic he had also acquired in his travels. Few, if any of his contemporaries, could match this remarkable man either in genius or acquirements, in dialectics or sentiment, in intellectual acumen or in stores of erudition. His popularity was greater two centuries after his death, than during his life. The pseudo-Dionysian writings were translated by him, and these contributed also to mould the literature of these mediæval times. Various portions of his works have been discovered and published at different times by Ducange, Mabillon, Angelo Mai, and MM. Ravaison and Cousin. The influence which 'this meteor of the 9th century' exercised on his own and succeeding ages by his profound and daring speculations in philosophy and theology was immense. He is supposed to have died in France about the year 875. [J.E.]

ERINNA, a Greek poetess, date unknown.

ERIZZO, SEBASTIANO, a Venetian senator and antiq., author of a work on numismatics, 1525-61.

ERMENGARDE, daughter of Louis II., kg. of Italy, wife of Boson I. 877, regent of Arles from 888.

ERMERIC, or HERMENRIC, k. of the Swedes in Spain in the reign of Honorius, 409, died 440.

ERNEST, duke of Saxe-Gotha, distinguished for his zeal in astronomy, and for his practical knowledge of that science, 1741-1804.

ERNESTI, JOHN AUGUSTUS, a celebrated German critic, professor of literature and theology at Leipzig, author of a great number of philological, critical, and theological writings, editor of Homer and other classics, &c., 1707-1781. AUGUSTUS WILLIAM, his nephew, also a distinguished savant, 1733-1801. JOHN CHRISTOPHER THEOPHILUS, another nephew, brother of the preceding, prof. of philosophy, editor of Greek classics, &c., 1756-1802.

ERNST, H., a German savant, 1603-1665.

ERNSTING, C., a Germ. botanist, 1709-1768.

EROSTRATUS, the celebrated incendiary who fired the temple of Diana at Ephesus, 356 B.C.

ERSCH, JOHN S., a German bibl., 1766-1828.

ERSKINE, DAVID, Lord Dun, an eminent Scottish lawyer, and mem. of parlia., 1670-1755.

ERSKINE, HENRY, a presbyterian divine, suffered imprisonment under the Act of Uniformity, and finally minister of Churnside in Berwick, 1624-1696. EBENEZER, his son, founder of the Secession Church of Scotland, 1680-1754. RALPH, another son, and seceder along with his brother, author of Sermons, &c., 1685-1752.

ERSKINE, JOHN, a Scottish theol., 1721-1803.

ERSKINE, JOHN, baron of Dun, a descendant of the earls of Mar, dist. as a reformer, 1508-91.

ERSKINE, THOMAS, Baron, a lawyer and distinguished orator, the youngest son of David, earl of Buchan, was born about the year 1748. He belonged to a family of which some members were remarkable for their genius, others for their folly, and he seemed in himself to be a union of these qualities. He studied at the High School of Edinburgh, and the University of St. Andrew's, entering successively the navy and army, before, from some influence not explained, he began to study law. In his earlier years he acquired a meteoric reputation as a brilliant and fascinating master of convivial conversation. He was called to the bar in 1778. One of his earliest cases involved an exposure in that fertile field of political abuses, the admiralty, when it was shown that landsmen were rated to seamen's pensions for electioneering purposes. He at once rushed into full practice, and was employed in every case where a brilliant denunciatory oratory—of which he was an unrivalled master—was desired. In 1783 he entered the House of Commons in Fox's interest, but the florid style of his oratory—so captivating to a jury or on the hustings—failed to please that fastidious audience. He was counsel in many historical cases, and performed heroically that duty of the advocate which prompts him to shrink from nothing, which, however much it may compromise his own taste, interest, or safety, appears likely to benefit the cause intrusted to him. His eminence as an advocate made it necessary that he should be appointed Lord Chancellor in the short accession in 1806 of the Fox and Grenville ministry. The prudence of the selection was much doubted; and it was not fortunate for its object, since he had accumulated no wealth to support his position as a peer. The strange eccentricities of his latter years, entering deeply into his domestic affairs, and making them matter of unpleasant notoriety, would have rendered his claims embarrassing had he seen his friends again in power. He died on the 17th of November, 1823. [J.H.B.]

ERXLEBEN, DOROTHY CHRISTINA LEPORIN, Madame, a lady who took a doctor's degree at the university of Halle, author of a work on the cultivation of the sciences by women, 1715-1762. Her son, JOHN CHRISTIAN POLYCARP ERXLEBEN, distg. as a philosopher and naturalist, 1744-77.

ES, J. VAN, a Flemish painter, 16th century.

ESAR-HADDON, or SARGON, a king of Assyria (Isaiah xx).

ESAU, the eldest of Isaac, sup. date 1836 B.C.

ESCHENBACH, A. C., a German philologist, professor and deacon at Nuremburg, 1663-1722.

ESCHENBACH, W. D', a Ger. poet, 13th cent.

ESCHENMAYER, C. A., professor of philosophy at Tubingen, a disciple of Schelling, and afterwards the founder of a mystic doctrine, of which philosophy forms an elementary part. His works are, 'Philosophy in its State of Transition to Nophilosophy,' 1803; 'Psychology,' 1822; 'The Philosophy of Religion,' in three parts; 'Rationalism,' 1818; 'Mysticism,' 1822; and 'Supernaturalism,' 1824. Eschenmayer died in 1822.

ESCOIQUIZ, DON JUAN, a Spanish author and diplomatist, 1762-1820.

ESDRAS, a cel. Jewish doctor, 5th cent. B.C.

ESDRAS, a patriarch of Armenia, died 639.

ESMENARD, J. A., a Fr. miscel. wr., 1770-1811.

ESPER, J. F., a German naturalist and astronomer, 1732-1781. His brother, EUGENE, a naturalist, au. of 'European Butterflies,' &c., 1742-1801.

ESPERIENTE, P. C., an Ital. hist., 1437-96.

ESPERNON, J. L. DE NOGARET DE LA VALETTE, Duc D', originally known as Caumont when he attached himself to Henry of Navarre, was one of the most important persons in the reigns of Henry III., Henry IV., and Louis XIII. His intrigues at court were opposed to those of the Duc de Guise, and afterwards of Richelieu, and he was the chief instrument in investing Marie de Medicis with the regency; born 1554, died 1642.

ESPREMENIL, JEAN JACQUES DUVAL D', councillor of the parliament of Paris, and one of the first movers of the revolution by his opposition to the edicts of Lomenie Brienne; born at Pondicherry, in the East Indies, 1746, guillotined 1794.

ESSEX. See DEVEREUX.

ESSEX, JAS., an English architect, 1723-1784.

ESTAING, CH. HECTOR, Count D', a French officer dist. in India and in the American war agt. the English, exc. as a counter-revolutionist, 1794.

ESTAMPES, ANNE DE PISSELUE, Duchess D', a celebrated court intriguante, mistress of Francis I., 1508-1576.

ESTE, an illustrious house of Italy, from which the house of Brunswick is derived, and which owes its origin to the Carlovingian era, at the beginning of the 9th century. The most celebrated names are—ALBERT AZZO D'ESTE, the first who possessed the city of that name, 1020-1117. OBIZZO, first marquis of Este, lord of Padua in 1182, and afterwards marquis of Milan and Genoa. His son, AZZO V., who by his marriage acquired the sovereignty of Ferrara, and became chief of the Guelfs of Venice, died 1192. AZZO VI., son of the preceding, lord of Ferrara and Verona, died 1264. HERCULES I., lord of Ferrara and Modena, whose court was graced by Ariosto, Boïardo, the Strozzi, &c., 1471-1505. His son, ALPHONSO, married to Lucretia Borgia 1502, a party to the league of Cambrai, reigned 1505-1534. HIPPOLYTUS, brother of Alphonso, and cardinal of Este, a patron of letters, partizan of Louis XII., and historian of the war of the French against the Venetians, 1479-1520. ALPHONSO II., grandson of the first of that name, duke of Ferrara and Modena, distinguished as a patron of arts and letters, 1533-1597. CÆSAR, an illegitimate descendant of Alphonso I., reigned at Modena 1597-1628.

RENAUD, a partizan of Austria in the war of succession, and duke of Modena, 1655-1787. HERCULES III., grandson of Renaud, and, like him, duke of Modena, was the last of this house in Italy, and his estates passed to Austria, by the marriage of his daughter with the archduke Ferdinand, 1727-1797.

ESTERHAZY, a noble family of Hungary, the best known of whom are—PAUL IV., ESTERHAZY DE GALANTHA, a general and literary savant, 1635-1713. His grandson, NICHOLAS JOSEPH, a great patron of arts and music, founder of the school in which Haydn and Pleyel, among others, were formed, 1714-1790. NICHOLAS, PRINCE D'ESTERHAZY DE GALANTHA, dist. as a field-marshal and foreign ambassador, 1765-1833.

ESTHER, queen of Persia, 6th century B.C.

ESTIUS, W., a Dutch theologian, 1542-1613.

ESTREES, an ancient and noble house of France, the best known of which are—JEAN D'ESTREES, an artillery officer distinguished at the taking of Calais, 1480-1571. His son, ANTHONY, the defender of Noyon, and governor of the Isle of France, 1593. GABRIELLE, the daughter of Anthony, duchess of Beaufort, and mistress of Henry IV., supposed to have been poisoned, 1571-1599. Her brother, F. ANNIBAL, duke and marshal, author of the 'Memoirs of the Regency of Marie De Medicis,' 1573-1670. His son, JEAN, vice-admiral and Comte D'Estrees, appointed viceroy of America, 1624-1707. CÆSAR, brother of Jean, a cardinal and negotiator, 1628-1714. JEAN, nephew of the preceding, foreign ambassador, 1666-1718. VICTOR MARIE, Duc D'Estrees, son of the vice-admiral Jean, a distinguished naval commander, 1660-1737. LOUIS CÆSAR LETELLIER, Comte D'Estrees, a commander of the German army, when he defeated Cumberland, and marshal of France, 1695-1771.

ETH, a king of Scotland, deposed 875.

ETHELBALD, a k. of Mercia, reigned 716-55.

ETHELBALD, the third Saxon k. of England, has the character of a profligate prince, 857-860.

ETHELBERT, a k. of Kent, reigned 560-616.

ETHELBERT, the fourth Saxon k. of England, son of Ethelwolf and brother of Ethelbald, 860-866.

ETHELFLEDA, or ELFLEDA, daughter of Alfred the Great, and wife of Ethelred, count of Mercia, died 922.

ETHELFRID, or ADELFRID, king of Northumberland, killed in battle, 593-617.

ETHELRED I., fifth Saxon king of England, predecessor of Alfred the Great, 866-871.

ETHELRED II., son of Edgar and Elfrida, suc. Edward the Martyr as k. of England, 978, d. 1016.

ETHELWOLF, the second Saxon king of England, son of Egbert, whom he succeeded in 838, and father of Ethelbald, died 857.

ETHEREDGE, SIR GEORGE, an English dramatist and song-writer, 17th century.

ETOILE, PIERRE DE L', a French chancery officer, whose journal has supplied much curious matter to the historian, under the reigns of Henry III. and Henry IV., 1540-1611. His son, CLAUDE, a dramatic writer, 1597-1652.

ETTMULLER, MICH., a Ger. phys., 1644-83.

ETTMULLER, M. ERNEST, son of the preceding, author of various memoirs, and editor of his father's writings, 1673-1732.

ETTY, WILLIAM, R.A., was born at York, March 10, 1787. His father was a miller. In 1798 he was apprenticed to a letterpress printer at Hull, but having served his time, forsook the mechanical art of printing for the more exciting profession of a painter. Etty commenced this hazardous enterprise in London, in 1805, when he entered as a student of the Royal Academy, and became also, through the liberality of an uncle, a private pupil of Sir Thomas Lawrence's for twelve months, but received very little attention from him. For long his pictures were rejected both at the Royal Academy and the British Gallery, but after about fifteen years' toil his fortunes changed, he received gradually more of the public attention, and in 1822 was enabled to visit Italy, where he found in Venice the chief attractions; he returned with many studies to London in 1824, and exhibited his picture of Pandora. 1825, for which he was chosen an associate of academy, and he was elected an academician 1827. Etty died at his native place, Novem 13, 1849, in his sixty-third year, leaving a siderable fortune. He was in every respect of the most distinguished painters of the En school, but especially excellent as a colou some of his pictures rival Titian's, or any o great Venetians, as gorgeous displays of c His great powers were well displayed in the prehensive exhibition of his works at the S of Arts, Adelphi, in 1849, the summer only his death. In this exhibition were man mirable pictures, including the nine great the triumph of Etty's life and ambition, mitted by himself in his autobiography, pu in the 'Art Journal' of 1849. He explains pictures as follows:—'My aim in all my great tures has been to paint some great moral o heart.' 'The Combat,' the beauty of mercy; three 'Judith' pictures, patriotism, and devotion to country, people, and God; 'Benai David's chief captain,' valour; 'Ulysses and Syrens,' the importance of resisting sensual delig —or an Homeric paraphrase on 'The Wages Sin is Death;' the three pictures of 'Joan of Arc religion, loyalty, and patriotism, like the mode Judith. In all nine great pictures, 'As it was desire to paint three times three.' [R.N.W

EUBULIDES, a philosopher of Miletus, known for the captious arguments and insol questions with which he endeavoured to embar the empirics, but especially Aristotle; he was disciple and successor of Euclid, and is sa have instructed Demosthenes; born about 36

EUBULUS, a Greek comic poet, 370 B.C.

EUCLID, a mathemat. of Alexandria, who ished 300 B.C. No name of antiquity is better k His digest of geometrical propositions is a scho still. His works have been often edited and lished. Barrow's edition is very valuable; best known in this country is that by Robert

EUCLIDES, the first archon of Athens,

EUCLIDES, a disciple of Socrates, and of the philosophic sect of Megara, by w art of dialectic was carried to high p was living about 390 B.C.

EUDÆMON, J. A., a learned Greek.

EUDES, duke of Aquitaine, reigned

EUDES, duke of Burgundy; the therefore be inferred that prudence dictated his withdrawal from a country where his avowed sentiments exposed him to danger. In Macedonia he continued to write some plays, one of which he inscribed with the name of his patron. Euripides died B.C. 406, at the age of seventy-five, and was buried at Pella. His countrymen in vain entreated Archelaus to send his remains to Athens, where, however, they erected a cenotaph to his memory. In the estimation of the ancients, Euripides held a rank much inferior to Æschylus and Sophocles. With him the dignified simplicity of the ancient tragedy disappears, and its place is supplied by rhetorical declamations, subtle disputations, and appeals to the sympathetic feelings. His works were held in especial favour during the middle ages; and hence his remaining plays more than outnumber the extant dramas of both Æschylus and Sophocles. According to some authorities, Euripides wrote 92 tragedies, according to others 75. Of these 19 are extant, besides numerous fragments of the plays which have been lost. [G.F.]

EUSDEN, LAURENCE, an obscure poetical wr. who in 1718 obtained the laureateship, d. 1730.

EUSEBIUS, a pope, elected and died 310.

EUSEBIUS, bishop of Dorylæum in Phrygia, celebrated for his opposition to the Eutychian heresy, 5th century.

EUSEBIUS OF NICOMEDIA, an Arian prelate, and determined enemy of Athanasius, died 342.

EUSEBIUS, PAMPHILI (that is, the friend of Pamphilus), was born at Cesarea, about the year 270. Pamphilus was his earliest friend in Cesarea, and gave the young student access to the large library which he had collected. Pamphilus was at length imprisoned, and Eusebius remained his attached and inseparable companion. And when the prisoner suffered martyrdom under Galerius, in 309, Eusebius fled first to Tyre, and then to Egypt. On his return, about 314, he was made bishop of his native city, and continued in that diocese till his death. In the year 325 he attended the council of Nice, and delivered a formal address to the emperor. The Nicene creed which condemned Arianism was in its earliest draught composed by him; but he scrupled at length to subscribe it, after several important verbal alterations had been made upon it. His caution and moderation afterwards subjected him to the charge of that very heresy which the Nicene council had been summoned to confute. His views on the Trinity approached those of Origen, and he seems to have held a species of subordination among the persons of the Godhead, which was incompatible with a consistent belief in the supreme deity of the Son. At the council of Tyre, in 335, he joined in deposing Athanasius on a charge of contumacy. Prior to this period, in 330, he was offered the patriarchate of Antioch, but refused it; and he died about the year 340. Eusebius was a divine of great learning, accomplishments, and industry. Not a few of his numerous works have been preserved, which have been of great service to theology, especially to church history. His Præparatio Evangelica, in fifteen books, was, as its title implies, intended to prepare the pagan mind for the reception of Christianity, by showing the vast inferiority of other religions; and his Demonstratio Evangelica, in twenty books, of which ten have been preserved, was a vaunt for the Jewish mind, and as a positive evidence for Christianity, especially in its connection with the oracles prophecies of the Old Testament. His Historia Ecclesiastica, in ten books, reaches from the [illegible] of Christ to the defeat of Licinius in 324, and is an important and valuable record. Besides his Life of Constantine, his Oration in praise of the same emperor, his Onomasticon, his tract against Hierocles, and his Eloge on the martyrs, we have his Chronicon, a Latin version of the second part of which by Jerome, has been long known. [illegible] an Armenian version of the whole work was found some years ago, and published at Venice, in 181[illegible] other discoveries have been made by the famous Angelo Mai. The Theophania, another treatise of Eusebius, was discovered in a Syrian version, by Mr. Tattam in an Egyptian monastery, and has been translated into English, and published by the late learned Professor Lee of Cambridge. [J.E.]

EUSEBIUS OF SAMOSATA, a recusant from the party of Arius, ed. by a woman of the Arians, 379.

EUSEBIUS OF VERCELLI, a partizan of Athanasius, and determined enemy of the Arians, d. 372.

EUSTACHIUS, BARTHOLOMEW, a distinguished Italian anatomist who flourished in the sixteenth century, but of whose personal history very little is known. Neither the date nor the place of his birth have been accurately ascertained, but it is generally believed that he died in 1570, perhaps at Rome. He was the most eminent anatomist of his time, and Haller says of him that he enriched the science with more discoveries than any other person whom he knew. His anatomical plates, thirty-nine in number, were unpublished at his death, and were supposed to be lost, but they were discovered at Urbino in 1712, and were published in 1714, by Lancisi, physician to Pope Clement XI., and are still much esteemed. His name is preserved in that of the Eustachian tube which he discovered, and which runs between the inner ear and the upper part of the throat; and the Eustachian valve of the heart, which separates the right auricle from the inferior vena cava. [J.M'C.]

EUSTATHIUS, a native of Constantinople, distinguished for his commentaries on Homer, archbishop of Thessalonica, 12th century.

EUSTATHIUS, ST., a bishop of Berea, distinguished for his eloquence at the council of Nice, as the enemy of Arius, deposed about 331.

EUTOCIUS, a Greek mathematician, 6th cent.

EUTROPIUS, a Latin historian, 4th century.

EUTYCHES, a celebrated Greek heresiarch of the 5th century, who maintained that only one nature, that of the Incarnate Word, existed in Christ; condemned at the council of Chalcedon, 451.

EUTYCHIUS, the name assumed by Said Ben Battrie, a learned Arabian Christian, on becoming patriarch of Alexandria; distinguished as a physician, theologian, and historian, 876-950.

EUTYCHIUS, a Latin grammarian, 6th cent.

EVAGORAS, a King of Salamis, killed B.C. 374.

EVAGRIUS, an ecclesiastical historian, 6th ct.

EVAGRIUS, a monk and theolog. wr., 4th ct.

EVANGELI, ANTONIO, an Ital. au., 1742-1805.

EVANS, ABEL, an Oxford schol. and wit, last c.

EVANS, C., a baptist minister, 1737-1791.

EVANS, EVAN, a Welch divine, an. of works on the poetry and litera. of his country, 1730-1790.

EVANS, JNO., a noncond. preacher, 1680-17[illegible]

EVANS, JOHN, author of a 'Sketch of Christian Denominations,' &c., a baptist minister and schoolmaster of London, died 1827.

EVANS, O., an American mechan., 1755-1811.

EVANS, RICE or ARISE, a famous astrologer, tutor of Lilly in the occult sciences, 17th century.

EVANS, THOMAS, a liter. bookseller, 1742-84.

EVANSON, EDWARD, a Church of England divine, afterwards a unitarian writer, 1731-1805.

EVILLON, JAS., a French ecclesiastical writer, dist. for his learning and benevolence, 1572-1651.

EVELYN, JOHN, one of the finest examples that our history presents of the accomplished and well-principled English gentleman, was born in 1620, at his father's seat of Wotton in Surrey. After having been educated at Oxford, he served as a volunteer in the Low Countries; and during the period of the civil wars he remained abroad, studying men and manners, statistics and science, the fine arts and polite literature. In 1652 he returned to England, and took up his residence at Sayes Court beside Deptford, which had recently come into his possession by marriage. His royalist opinions kept him in retirement till the restoration; after which he took an honourable but not conspicuous part in public business, returning always to those quiet pursuits and speculations in which his happiness consisted. He died in 1706, a few years after having become owner of his paternal estate by the death of his elder brother. He was one of the original members of the Royal Society, and a frequent contributor to its transactions. He wrote separate treatises on engraving, architecture, and numismatics; but the most valuable work he published was his 'Sylva, or a Discourse on Forest Trees,' in which, and in smaller pieces, there is given, in an agreeable and lively style, much of curious information and of ingenious theory in regard to the writer's favourite pursuits, planting and gardening. His 'Diary,' which was not published till 1818, is both interesting as a literary performance, and exceedingly useful for the knowledge it conveys of the times in which Evelyn lived. [W.S.]

[Wotton Church, the burial place of Evelyn.]

EVERARD, ANGELO, a Flem. painter, 1647-78.

EVERARD, NICOLAS, a Dutch lawyer and magistrate, president of the Supreme Council, 1462-1532. Three of his sons are also celebrated, —NICHOLAS GRUDIUS, a Latin poet, councillor to Charles V. and Philip II, died 1517. ADRIAN MARIUS, a Jesuit and poet, chancellor of Guelderland, died 1568. JOHANNES SECUNDUS, an elegant scholar and poet of licentious principles, Latin secretary to the cardinal archbishop of Toledo, and Charles V., 1511-1536.

EVERDINGEN, ALDEST VAN, a Flem. painter, excelled in romantic landscapes, &c., 1621-1675.

EVERDINGEN, CÆSAR VAN, a Flemish painter and architect, 1606-1679.

EVIL-MERODACH, k. of Babyl., 562-560 B.C.

EVREMOND, S. CHARLES, an amusing French satirical writer, died in England 1703.

EWALD, BENJ., a German med. wr., 1674-19.

EWALD, JOHN, a Danish dramatist, 1743-81.

EWING, GREVILLE, a Scottish dissenting minister, known as a biblical critic, &c., 1767-1841.

EWING, JOHN, a presbyterian divine, mathematician, and nat. philos. of America, 1732-1802.

EXELMANS, HENRY JOSEPH ISIDORE, a celebrated French marshal, born at Bar le Duc, in 1775, was engaged in most of the campaigns of Napoleon, and died in 1852.

EXIMENS, ANTH., a Span. Jesuit, 1729-1808.

EXMOUTH. EDWARD PELLEW, afterwards Lord Exmouth, was born 19th April, 1757, at Dover. His father was captain of the Post Office Packet on that station, and died early, leaving young Edward and five other children almost without friends or support. Edward Pellew entered the royal navy, and soon attracted notice by his extraordinary activity and courage. He served on board the Blonde off the American coast in 1776 and 1777, and in the last mentioned year he was with a party of seamen attached to Burgoyne's expedition from Lake Champlain to Saratoga. Young Pellew distinguished himself amid the disasters of this campaign by his indomitable spirit and alacrity. He was promoted on his return to England; and when the war of the French revolution began, Captain Pellew was appointed to the Nymphe frigate. In command of this vessel he captured the French frigate Cleopatra, after one of the best fought actions of the war. He commanded next the Arethusa, and in her he captured another French frigate, La Pomone, in 1794. He continued to do good service and to rise in rank during the war; and he frequently signalized his remarkable personal strength and activity in saving the lives of others at sea and in shipwreck. In 1816 he was an admiral in command of our Mediterranean squadron, and a peer by the title of Lord Exmouth. In the spring of this year he was ordered to repress the piracies of the Barbary states of the Mediterranean, to obtain the release of the numerous Christian slaves who were sold in captivity at Algiers, Tunis, and Tripoli, and to bind these powers by express treaty to discontinue for the future their practice of carrying off Christians into slavery. The deys of Tunis and Tripoli consented; but the Algerines, confident in the strength of their fortification, and proud of their old piratical renown, refused. Exmouth gave them a speedy repetition of the lesson which Blake had given to their ancestors; and it was this time still more sternly taught. On the 27th of August, 1816, the English fleet of five sail of the line, five frigates, four bomb vessels, and five gun brigs, anchored off Algiers: aided by a Dutch squadron of five frigates and a corvette under Admiral Von Capelbar, which joined Lord Exmouth in the common cause of civilization and humanity against barbarian violence and cruelty. Terms were offered to the Algerines, but haughtily rejected. At half-past two the Christian fleet took its station close to the fortification; the batteries of the Mahometans then commenced their fire, which was promptly answered by the British broadsides. For upwards of six hours a cannonade raged from sea to shore, and from shore to sea, which for obstinacy and destructiveness can hardly be paralleled in naval warfare. Nearly 1,000 officers and men were killed and wounded on board the English and Dutch ships, and at least 7,000 of the Algerines were computed to have fallen. The sea-ward batteries of the town, the mole, and the harbour walls, and the arsenals, were laid in ruins. Great numbers of the houses were destroyed; and nine Algerine frigates, and a whole flotilla of smaller piratical vessels, were burnt or sunk. On the morrow Lord Exmouth prepared to renew the attack, but the dey now accepted the terms which he had previously scoffed at; and peace was granted to Algiers on condition of her abolishing for ever the enslaving of Christians, the instant delivery of the slaves of all Christian nations, and ample reparation and apology for the outrages and insults which the dey had offered to British subjects and the British flag. In pursuance of this treaty Lord Exmouth had the truly noble happiness of receiving on board of his fleet, three days after the battle, 1,083 fellow-Christians who had been groaning in slavery under Algerine masters. They were safely conveyed by the British fleet to their respective homes, and diffused through Christendom the just renown of England and her victorious admiral.—Lord Exmouth died on 23d January, 1832. He was a good as well as a great man; and he gave on a deathbed of painful and lingering illness, even a brighter example of Christian heroism than he had displayed on the quarter-deck in the hour of his brightest earthly glory. [E.S.C.]

EXPILLY, Claude, a Fr. lawyer, 1564-1636.

EXPILLY, J. J., a Fr. statistician, 1719-1793.

EYCK, Hubert and John Van, two celebrated painters of Bruges of great importance in the history of art in Europe, owing to their substitution of varnish painting with oil, in the place of the old ordinary tempera painting with water.—Hubert Van Eyck, so called, it has been supposed, from Eyck (or Alden Eyck) the place of his birth on the Maas, was born in 1366, and appears to have been the real inventor of the new process of painting, which was discovered about 1410, when his brother John Van Eyck may have been about fifteen or twenty years of age only; they were then settled at Bruges, and they formed a great school there.—The masterpiece of the Van Eycks is the altar-piece of the 'Adoration of the Lamb' in the church of St. Bavon, Ghent; this celebrated picture was finished by John in 1432, Hubert, who had executed the large figures of the upper part, had died at Ghent six years before, on 18th September, 1426. On the inscription on the picture the chief merit is properly given to Hubert, 'the greatest in art;' John is merely mentioned as the completer of his brother's work: some portions of the picture are in the gallery at Berlin.—John Van Eyck was born about 1390-5, and died at Bruges in July 1441, as recently ascertained from documents by the Abbé Carton (Les trois Frères Van Eyck, &c., Bruges, 1848). 1420 is the earliest date of any of his known pictures, and all the historic facts seem to show that John, so far from being the founder of the school of Bruges, was the pupil of his brother in common with several other early Flemish masters, though John's services to art were so great in many respects that he may well be considered as the head of the school.—The invention of the Van Eycks is commonly called oil painting, but colours were mixed with oil long before this time, though pictures were not painted in this manner, but Vasari expressly explains that the Van Eyck method was varnish painting-oil with other mixtures, and it arose in the search for a good varnish for tempera pictures.—This method was carried into Italy by Antonello of Messina, who having seen a picture by John Van Eyck in the collection of Alphonso, king of Naples, about the year 1443, set off for Bruges in order to learn the new method; though he arrived some time after the death of Van Eyck, he contrived to acquire the method from some of his pupils, or the third brother, Lambert Van Eyck, and was thus the cause of oil painting gradually superseding fresco painting some years afterwards in Italy, first in Venice, then in Florence.—Margaret Van Eyck, the sister of these three brothers, likewise painted. There are two pictures by John Van Eyck in the National Gallery. [R.N.W.]

EYKENS, Peter, a Flemish painter, 16th cent.

EYNDEN, R. Van, a Dutch art-wr., 1748-1819.

EYRE, Francis, a Roman Cath. wr., d. 1804.

EYSEL, J. P., a Ger. medical wr., 1652-1717.

EZEKIEL, a prophet of the Jews, 6th ct. B.C.

EZEKIEL, a Jewish dramatist, 1st century

EZEKIEL, an Armenian astronomer, 673-727.

EZQUERRA, a Spanish poet, 1568-1641.

EZZ-EDDIN, an Arabian poet, 13th century.

F

FABBRIZI, L. C. De, a Venet. savant, 15th c.

FABELL, Peter, an Engl. alchymist, 15th ct.

FABER, Basil, a Ger. lexicographer, d. 1576.

FABER, F., a Swiss ecclesiastic of the Dominicans, author of 'Travels to Jerusalem,' 1441-1502.

FABER, F. E., a German Hebraist, 1745-1774.

FABER, John, a Roman Catholic divine, surnamed, 'The Hammer of Heretics,' from the title of one of his works, a native of Suabia, died 1541.

FABER, J., a German naturalist, 1570-1640.

FABER, John, a Dutch painter, died 1721.

FABER, Samuel, a German hist., 1657-1716.

FABRE, or LEFEVRE, J., a jurist, died 1340.

FABERT, Abraham, a Fr. marshal, one of the most cel. gen. of the age of Louis XIV., 1599-1662.

FABIAN, Robert, an Engl. annalist, 15th ct.

FABIAN, St., a pope of Rome, martyred 250.

FABIUS, the name of an illustrious Roman family divided into many branches, the common stock of which was—QUINTUS FABIUS VIBULANUS, who escaped alone from the massacre of his family at Cremera, 478 B.C., and made one of the decemvirate. After him are mentioned FABIUS AMBUSTUS, dictator B.C. 350. FABIUS RULLIANUS, to whose name MAXIMUS was added, twice dictator, conqueror of the Samnites and Etruscans, 323-280 B.C. FABIUS GURGES, son of the preceding, consul of Rome. FABIUS PICTOR, the first writer of Roman history, 3d century B.C. FABIUS MAXIMUS VERRUCOSUS, considered the greatest of his family, surnamed 'Cunctator' the temporizer, from his system of warfare, successfully exemplified in the conflict which he sustained with Hannibal, died 205 B.C. FABIUS MAXIMUS QUINTUS, son and next in office to the preceding, afterwards consul. FABIUS MAXIMUS ÆMILIANUS, distinguished in the war of Persia and in Spain, consul 147 B.C. FABIUS MAXIMUS SERVILIANUS, proconsul for Spain, censor 126 B.C. FABIUS MAXIMUS ALLOBROGICUS, consul 122 B.C.

FABIUS, MARCELLINUS, a writer of the 3d ct.

FABIUS, RUSTICUS, a Roman historian, 1st ct.

FABIUS, W., a Flemish Greek scholar, 16th ct.

FABRE, F. XAVIER, a Fr. painter, 1766-1837.

FABRE, J., a Fr. poet and ecclesiastic, 18th ct.

FABRE, JOHN, the son of a French protestant, who in 1756-1762 voluntarily suffered six years' slavery in the galleys in place of his father, who was condemned for preaching, 1729-1797.

FABRE, J. C., a Fr. ecclesiast. his., 1668-1753.

FABRE, L., a French catalogue wr., 1710-1788.

FABRE, M. J. V., a French poet, 1785-1831.

FABRE, P., a French surgeon, 1716-1793.

FABRE D'EGLANTINE, PHILIPPE FRANÇOIS NAZAIRE, the son of a burgess, born at Limoux, 1759, was a dramatic author and pamphleteer, and acquired a celebrated name in the course of the French revolution as a confederate of the Jacobins. With the advantage of fine talents, and a literary education received in the college of the doctrinaires, he united all the vices of a young man upon town, his conversational and musical abilities rendering him a highly agreeable if not a very edifying companion. His short political history is soon written. On the 10th August, 1792, his notoriety as a pamphleteer favoured his nomination as a member of the provisional commune at Paris, and he was afterwards appointed secretary-general in the ministry of justice under Danton. He was one of the members for Paris in the national convention, where he voted for the king's death and other extreme measures, though he had the honour at last of suffering for his moderation under the ascendancy of Robespierre. He was arrested by the decree of St. Just, which included Camille Desmoulins, Herault, Danton, Philippeaux, and Lacroix, on a charge of complicity with D'Orleans and Dumouriez, to restore the monarchy, and was executed with Chabot and Bazire, 5th April, 1794. His real crime, like that of his companions in misfortune, was the desire to return to moderate counsels, for though he was weak, inconstant, and ambitious, he was neither treacherous nor cruel. Fabre D'Eglantine was accomplished in nearly all the fine arts, but only cultivated them for the sake of shining in society. He furnished the poetical nomenclature of the republican calendar, the mathematical portion of which was contrived by Romme. [E.R.]

FABRE DE L'AUDE, JEAN PIERRE, born 1755, and distinguished as an economist, was acting as advocate to the parliament of Toulouse when the French revolution broke out, the principles of which he adopted, so far as to secure his continuance in various government employs, until proscribed by the reign of terror. After the fall of Robespierre he was returned to the council of 500 (1796), and was successively a member of the tribunate (1801), president of the commission of finances (1804), senator (1807), and afterwards a count of the empire. His political alliances were purely circumstantial, for though he voted against the return of Napoleon to power in 1814, he appeared in the chamber of peers during the hundred days of the year following, and at length served the state under the Bourbons. He is the author of some works of temporary interest, upon imposts and political questions. [E.R.]

FABRE DE L'HÉRAULT, DENIS, first an advocate of Montpellier, and afterwards a member of the French national convention, where he was rather useful than eloquent, has acquired a name in the history of the period by his career in the war of the republic against Spain. He was sent to the army of the eastern Pyrenees as commissary after the fall of the Girondins, and displayed great courage, but so little prudential conduct that the French forces were routed in action, and their discipline reduced to anarchy. Fabre de L'Herault was killed in an attempt to rally the troops at Port Vendres, 20th December, 1793, and had a place decreed to him in the pantheon of French worthies, while the generals Daoust and Delâtre, of the same force, were executed on the imputation of treason in the same series of events. [E.R.]

FABRE D'OLIVET, ANT., a Hebrew scholar, au. of 'Langue Hébraique Restituée,' 1768-1825.

FABRETTI, RAPHAEL, an It. antiq., 1620-1700.

FABRI, ALEXANDER, an Ital. author, d. 1768.

FABRI, DOMINICINO, an Italian Jesuit and professor of Belles Lettres, 1710-1761.

FABRI, GAB., an Ital. theologian, 1666-1711.

FABRI, HONORIUS, a Jesuit, distinguished as a naturalist and physiologist, professor of philosophy at Lyons, said to have anticipated the discovery of Harvey, 1607-1688.

FABRI, J., a polit. negotiator and annal., 14th c.

FABRI, J. R., a jurisconsult of Geneva, 17th ct.

FABRICIUS, CAIUS, a Roman general, surnamed Luscinus, disting. for his victories over the Samnites and Lucanians, twice consul, d. 250 B.C.

FABRICIUS, CARRETTO, grand master of the order of St. John of Jerusalem, fortified Rhodes, and made a treaty of alliance with the Persians against the Turks, died 1521.

FABRICIUS, DAVID, a Dutch minister and astronomer, a disciple of Tycho Brahe, died 1617. His son JOHN, the first to discover the sun's spots, on which he wrote a work, 'De-Maculis in Sole Observatis,' published 1611, died about 1625.

FABRICIUS, F., a German savant, 1524-1573.

FABRICIUS, G., a German historian and poet, auth. of 'De Veteris Romæ Situ,' &c., 1516-1571.

FABRICIUS, J., a Ger. philologist, 1644-1729.

FABRICIUS, J. Alb., a Ger. critic, 1668-1738.

FABRICIUS, Jean Chretien, a celebrated entomologist, was born at Tundern, in the duchy of Sleswick, in 1742. He died in 1807. He was sent to the university of Upsal, where he studied under Linnæus, and became one of his most attached and eminent pupils. Under such a teacher he obtained a very considerable knowledge in botany and most of the other branches of natural history. Having one day dissected the organs of the mouth of a cockchafer, he conceived the idea of using the organs of mastication as the means of producing a classification of insects. He was appointed soon after this professor of natural history at the university of Kiel, and from that time he devoted himself almost entirely to the study of entomology. In 1775 he published his 'Systema Entomologiæ,' in which he laid before the world his new mode of arrangement; and for the remainder of his life he continued in successive publications to evolve his system with much ability. His systematic arrangement has been followed by few, but his mode of distinguishing the genera is still retained by entomologists. Fabricius possessed a great knowledge of languages; and he travelled over most of the countries of Europe in search of new insects, and for the purpose of examining the museums of the different towns he visited. He made frequent journeys to England, where he made the acquaintance and friendship of Banks, John Hunter, Francillon, and most of the naturalists of repute living at that time. He was much esteemed for his amiability of disposition; and it is said, when he heard of the bombardment of Copenhagen by the English fleet a profound melancholy seized him, from which he never recovered. [W.B.]

FABRICIUS, Jer., an Ital. phys., 1537-1619.

FABRICIUS, L., a Ger. Hebraist, 1555-1629.

FABRICIUS, Tit., a fol. of Luther, 1501-1559.

FABRICIUS DE HILDEN, W., a German surgeon, auth. of a 'Manual of Medicine,' 1560-1634.

FABRICY, Gab., a Fr. archæologist, 1725-1800.

FABRIS, N., an Ital. mechanician, 1739-1801.

FABRONI, Angiolo, an Italian savant and journalist, distinguished for his biographies of Italian literati, of the Medici, &c., 1732-1803.

FABRONI, Giovanni V. M., a natural philos. and wr. on agriculture, economy, &c., 1752-1822.

FABROT, C. A., a Fr. jurisconsult, 1580-1659.

FABRY, Jean Baptiste Germain, author of numerous works on history, politics, and religion, beginning with the 'Spectateur Francais,' in 1805, and all published anonymously; secretary to Fouché in the interest of Buonaparte, and afterwards a partizan of the restoration, 1780-1821.

FACCIARDI, C., an Italian ascetic, 16th cent.

FACCIOLATI, James, a celebrated Italian lexicographer, author of a great Latin dictionary, reprinted in 4 volumes folio 1839, 1682-1769.

FACINI, Peter, an Ital. painter, 1566-1602.

FACUNDUS, an African bishop, 6th century.

FADLALLA, an Oriental historian, 13th cent.

FAES, P. Van Der, a Flem. paint., 1618-1680.

FAGAN, B. C., a Fr. dramatic wr, 1702-1755.

FAGEL, the name of a Dutch family, dist. as partizans of the Stadtholder system. The principal members are—Gaspar, an active party to the peace of Nimèguen, 1678, and to the policy which placed William III. on the throne of England, 1629-1718; Francis Nicholas, his n dist. general, d. 1718; Henry, a states tinguished by the treaty of peace conclude England and the Netherlands in 1814.

FAGGIUOLA, U., a Ghibelline chief, l

FAGIUOLI, J. B., an Italian poet, 1

FAGIUS, P., a Ger. prot. theologian scholar, dist. at the revival of learning, 1

FAGON, W. C., a French botanist, 1

FAHRENHEIT, Gabriel Daniel, a and philosopher of Dantzic, inv. of the t ter and barometer which bear his name, 1

FAINI, Diamante, an Italian poetess

FAIPOULT, a French statesman, 175

FAIRFAX, Edward, an English translator of Tasso, son of Sir Thomas Denton in Yorkshire, and brother of Lord the subject of the following notice, whom ed in the management of his affairs. B 'Tasso' and his own poems, which consist eclogues, he is the author of a prose t witchcraft, and a history of the Black P the latter perished in MS. at the fire of W He died in 1632, with the reputation of man and a scholar. His son William for his translation of 'The Lives and Op the most Celebrated Philosophers,' from of Diogenes Laertius.

FAIRFAX, Ferdinand, Lord, fath celebrated general by Mary his wife, da the earl of Musgrave, and himself a gene parliamentary army, is memorable for ront by the earl of Newcastle, 30th Ju and his subsequent successes in Yorksh military history is closely connected wit his son, who was for six years his comp arms, and who succeeded to the title an by the death of his father, in 1648. Lo nand Fairfax had received his commissi neral of the parliamentary forces in the the commencement of the civil war in 1 he found himself opposed to a confedera neighbouring counties, united in a leag king by the politic earl of Newcastle. cumstance must account for his early rev though he never acquired the same impo his son, he was a general of great valour.

FAIRFAX, Sir Thomas, afterwar Fairfax, born at Denton, near Leeds, was the son of Ferdinand Lord Fairfax. educated at St. John's College, Cambr served while a very young man under I in the English auxiliary army in the Low C On his return to England he married, for some years in the country, a silent observer of the follies and oppressions Charles's government. The Fairfaxes w ous presbyterians; and, when the troubl nation broke out into civil war, they we in arming their tenantry and maintai cause of the parliament against the ro Yorkshire and the neighbouring countie Ferdinand Fairfax was made general of liamentary armies in the north, and Sir was general of the horse under him. faxes sustained several reverses in the of the war; but Sir Thomas kept the fiel domitable spirit, and gradually raised the and courage, as well as the numbers of h

In 1644 he was one of the commanders on the parliamentary side in the great battle of Marston Moor, which destroyed the royalist force in the north of England. When the parliamentary army was new-modelled, Fairfax was appointed generalissimo, with Cromwell for his lieutenant-general. On the 14th of June, 1645, they fought and won the decisive battle of Naseby. Fairfax then conquered the king's strongholds in the west of England, and by the close of 1646 the war was ended.—In the strange series of intrigues and coup-de-mains which now ensued, and which led to the trial and execution of the king, and the elevation of Cromwell to supreme power, Fairfax was a mere instrument in the hands of more subtle and resolute men. He was only fit for the field; and the firmness and steadiness for which he was pre-eminent as a soldier, utterly deserted him when he was required to act as a statesman. Clarendon truly of him,—'Fairfax wished for nothing Cromwell did, and yet contributed to bring it to pass.' After the king's death Fairfax resigned his commission, and lived in retirement during the whole period of the commonwealth. He had inherited the family property and title on his father's death in 1647, and the management of the estates now became the whole employment of the late renowned generalissimo of the parliament's victorious armies. Cromwell treated him with contempt. After the great protector's death in 1658, it became speedily manifest how unequal Richard Cromwell was to the government which had been bequeathed to him; and men of all parties, except some of the more enthusiastic republicans, and a few of the army chiefs, looked to the recall of the old race of kings as the only means of securing peace and order. Fairfax took important part in bringing about the restoration, while Monk was still in Scotland, Lord Fairfax collected forces in Yorkshire, and declared himself for a free parliament and the restoration of the monarchy. He refused, however, to take the chief command of the enterprise out of Monk's hands, and sought neither rank nor wealth for himself in doing what he believed to be his duty. He was one of the commissioners sent 18th May, 1660, to wait upon Charles II. at Breda, and he accompanied the restored sovereign at the ceremony of his coronation. He then retired again to his Yorkshire estates. Lord Fairfax died on the 2d November, 1671. [E.S.C.]

FAISTENBERGER, A., a painter of Tyrol, famous for his landscapes after Poussin, 1678-1722.

FAITHORNE, W., an Eng. engrav., 1616-1671.

FAKHR-ED-DEEN, a prince of the Druzes, vanquished and strangled by Amurath IV., 1635.

FAKHR-ED-DEEN-RAZZY, a Mussulman theologian, quoted by De Sacy and Reinaud, 13th c.

FALCK, J. P., a Swedish naturalist, 18th cent.

FALCONBERG, the name of an ancient English baronetage, one possessor of which distinguished himself as a Yorkist at the defeat of Clifford, and the succeeding battle of Touton, 1461.

FALCONBERG, Mary, countess of, third daughter of Oliver Cromwell, a woman of remarkable beauty and spirit, and distinguished for her political talents, aided the restoration and d. 1712.

FALCONE, A., a Neapolitan paint., 1600-1665.

FALCONER, T., an Eng. chronolog., 1736-1792.

FALCONER, W., an English physician and chemist, distinguished as the discoverer of the properties of carbonic acid gas, 1743-1824.

FALCONER, William, a popular English poet and naval writer, author of 'The Shipwreck,' born 1730, lost at sea with the Aurora frigate, 1769.

FALCONET, A., a Fr. antiquarian, 1611-1691. His son Camille, a literary savant, 1671-1762.

FALCONET, S. M., a Fr. sculptor, 1716-1791.

FALCONETTO, Giovanni Maria, an Italian architect, born at Verona 1458, died 1534.

FALCONIERI, O., an Ital. antiq., 1646-1676.

FALEDRO, Vital, a Venet. doge, 1102-1117.

FALENS, C. Van, a Flem. painter, 1682-1733.

FALETTI, J., an Italian poet, 16th century.

FALIERI, Marino, successor of Andrea Dandolo as doge of Venice in 1354, attempted to revolutionize the state in 1375, when he was beheaded, and four hundred of his accomplices hanged. He is the hero of Lord Byron.

FALK, J. D., a Ger. satiric poet, 1770-1826.

FALKENSTEIN, J. H., a German antiquary, and compiler of historical documents, 1682-1760.

FALKLAND, Henry Cary, first Viscount, was the son of Sir Edward Cary, and distinguished himself as a statesman in the reign of James I., d. 1633. Lucius Cary, second Viscount Falkland, son of the preceding, well known to readers of history as one of the most perfect characters of his age, was born about 1610, and died of a wound which he received at the battle of Newbery, where he fought in the interest of the king, 1643. He was not only a gentleman, a scholar, and a soldier, but a sincere patriot. Henry Lucius Cary, third Viscount Falkland, son of the preceding, died young, 1663.

FALKNER, Thomas, an English Jesuit and missionary, au. of a 'Descrip. of Patagonia,' d. 1780.

FALLÉ, Philip, a divine of Jersey, 1655-1742.

FALLETTI, Jerome, an Italian poet, ambassador for the princes of Este into the chief states of Europe, au. of 'The Germ. War,' &c., 1518-1564.

FALLOPIUS, Gabriel, a famous Italian anatomist, the first to give exact descriptions of the organ of hearing, of the organization of the fœtus, and of the tubes of the uterus, since called by his name, professor at Pisa and Modena, 1523-1562.

FALLOWS, F., an Engl. astrono., 1789-1831.

FALSTAFT, J., an English captain, died 1469.

FANCOURT, Samuel, a dissenting minister and author, first projector of circulating libraries, which he began about 1740, died 1768.

FANSHAWE, Sir Richard, an English poet and diplomatist in the interest of the crown at the period of the civil wars. He was a remarkable linguist, and was distinguished for his sincerity, both as a man and statesman; he negotiated the peace between Spain and Portugal in 1665, and is the au. of 'Letters' during his embassy, 1607-1666.

FANTIN-DESODOARTS, Antoine Etienne Nicolas, a voluminous author of history and jurisprudence, born in Dauphiné 1738, died in Paris 1820. M. Desodoarts made his debut as a Jesuit, and bore the title of Vicar-General of Embrun, but appears not to have exercised its functions. He became known at the dawn of the revolution as an advocate of the Jacobins, and has given his principles to the world, more especially, in his work entitled 'Histoire Philosophique de la Révolution de France depuis la Convocation des Notables jusque' à la Séparation de la Convention.' The critical account of his works in the 'Biographie des Contemporains,' would lead to the conclusion that he was an ardent imaginative writer, clear and elegant in the style of his narrative, but wanting in virtuous principle, and not reliable as an authority for the facts of contemporary history. He is one of numerous examples supplied by the period, demonstrating that the education of the church and the bar at that time, was sufficient to pervert the noblest talents, and prepare men to accept the vilest expedients in politics and morals in place of principle. [E.R.]

FANTONI, an Italian historian of the last cent.

FANTONI, J., an Ital. anatomist, 1675-1758.

FANTONI, J., an Italian lyric, 1755-1807.

FANUCCI, J. B., an Ital. historian, 1756-1834.

FARDELLA, M. A., a Sicil. philos., 1650-1718.

FAREL, WILLIAM, a native of the French Alps, and one of the earliest converts of the reformed doctrines in Paris, is known as the pioneer of the reformation in Dauphiné and Switzerland. He was one of the most intrepid assailants of the Roman Catholic Church, and distinguished as a preacher rather than a writer. When addressing the agitated multitudes who listened to him, neither the clash of arms, the ringing of bells, nor the threats of his enemies, could stem the torrent of his eloquence. He was subject to much persecution, and escaped many dangers, dying in the seventy-sixth year of his age, in 1565.

FARIA, ANTH. DE, a Portuguese adventurer, dis. himself against the Indian corsairs, 1505-1550.

FARIA, M. DE, a Portug. antiq., 1581-1655.

FARIA-Y-SOUSA, MANUEL DE, a Portuguese historian, poet, and literary critic, secretary to the Roman ambassador, died 1647.

FARIN, N., a Fr. miscellaneous writer, d. 1675.

FARINACCI, P., an Italian jurist, 1554-1618.

FARINATO, P., an Italian painter, 1525-1606.

FARINELLI, named CARLO BROSCHI, one of the most extraordinary singers that ever lived, was born at Naples in 1705. In 1722 he was engaged at the Alberto Theatre of Rome, and while there contended with and overcame a famous performer on the trumpet. From Rome he went to Bologna, thence to Venice and Vienna, at which latter place he was received with especial honour by the emperor Charles VI. He came to England in 1734, and the effect of his singing is described as being something like enchantment. In 1737 he went to Spain, where he remained for twenty years, enjoying the friendship and confidence of two monarchs, Philip V. and Ferdinand VI., and having power almost equal to a prime minister. During his residence in Spain he had a pension for life settled upon him amounting to upwards of £2,000. There are many beautiful stories told of the goodness of heart and disinterestedness of Farinelli which it is impossible to introduce into this brief memoir. In 1759 Farinelli returned to Italy, and took up his final residence at Bologna. One of his biographers says, 'this extraordinary musician and blameless man died in the eightieth year of his age.' [J.M.]

FARISSOL, ABRAHAM, a rabbin, 15th cent.

FARMER, HUGH, an English dissenting minister and theologian, author of tracts on the miracles, on demoniacs, on the worship of human spirits by the heathen, &c., 1714-1787.

FARMER, RICHARD, a distinguished scholar and critic, author of an 'Essay on the Learning of Shakspeare,' 1735-1797.

FARNABY, T., a wr. of school classics, d. 1647.

FARNESE. The Italian house of this name has furnished history with many illustrious names, the principal of which are—PETER, general of the Florentines, d. 1363. PETER LOUIS, son of Paul III., invested with the duchies of Parma and Placentia, killed in a revolt, 1547. OCTAVIUS, son of the preceding, and son-in-law of Charles V., d. 1585. ALEXANDER, the elder brother of Octavius, a distinguished negotiator and ecclesiastic, 1520-1589. ALEXANDER, son of Octavius and Margaret of Austria, known in history as duke of Parma, and distinguished as a general in the interest of Philip of Spain, d. 1592. The last of the Farnese, except Elizabeth, wife of Philip V. of Spain, died in 1731, when the duchy reverted to her son Don Filippo, in whose possession it was confirmed by the peace of Aix-la-Chapelle.

FARNEWORTH, ELLIS, rector of Carsington, in Derbyshire, known as a translator, died 1763.

FAROALD, the first of the name duke of Spoleto 570-601; the second, afterw. a monk, 703-724.

FARQUHAR, G., an Irish comedian and dramatic writer, author of 'The Constant Couple,' 'The Beaux's Stratagem,' &c., 1678-1707.

FARRANT, RICH., an Eng. composer, d. 1585.

FARREN, ELIZA, a celebrated actress, afterwards countess of Derby, born in Cork, 1759, married to the earl of Derby 1797, died 1829.

FARRILL, DON GONZALO, a Spanish general and statesman, minister of war in 1808, under Ferd. VII., whose abdica. he opposed, 1757-1831.

FASOLO, J. A., an Italian painter, 1528-1572.

FASSINO, THE CHEV. N. H. J. DE, a French painter, director of the Acad. at Liege, 1728-1811.

FASSOLA-DA-PAVIA, BERNARD, an Italian painter of the Milanese school, 16th century.

FASTOLFF, SIR JOHN, a brave English general, distinguished in the French wars of the 15th century, absurdly supposed to be the original of Shakspeare's Sir John Falstaff, died 1469.

FATAH, ABOU-NASR, an Arab. wr., 6th cent.

FATIO DE DUILLER, N., a French mathematician and mechanical artist, residing in London, inventor of the jewelling of watches, and a great contributor to astrono. science, 1664-1753.

FAU, J. N., a Latin poet of Naples, died 1665.

FAUCCI, C., a Florentine engraver, last cent.

FAUCHE-BOREL, L., a Swiss adventurer, employed as a spy by the Bourbons, 1762-1829.

FAUCHER, CÆSAR and CONSTANTINE, twin brothers and soldiers, distinguished in the wars of the French revolution, born 1760, both shot 1815.

FAUCHET, CL., a French hist., 1529-1621.

FAUCHET, CLAUDE, a French priest, alike remarkable for his physical courage, and moral and intellectual intrepidity, was born at Dorne, in the department of the Nièvre, 1744, and was successively grand vicar of the archbishop of Bourges, preacher to the king, and 'abbé commandataire' of Montfort, before the revolution, and afterwards constitutional bishop of Calvados. He began his political career as a chief of the Illuminati, and a reformer of the church, on the principles of philosophy and national independence advocated in his work 'De la Religion Nationale,' published 1789. Rendered famous by his eloquence and his writings, he headed the deputation to De Launay, when the Bastile was besieged, and advanced sword in hand in front of the combatants, whom, it is said, he rallied three times to the assault. It was Fauchet also who gave the sanction of a religious blessing to the national tricolor when first used, and advised the consolidation of the national guard under the command of Lafayette. As the revolution proceeded, he established a kind of political reunion in the vicinity of the Palais Royal, and had Condorcet for one of his coadjutors, and a board of correspondence devoted to the propagation of the natural rights and duties of French citizens. As a member of the first parliament he opened the debate on religion by a bitter speech against the priesthood, and publicly stripped off the insignia of his order. Notwithstanding his share in scenes that were worthier of the Parisian demagogue than the minister of religion, he bitterly lamented the king's death; and as an ally, both on the score of humanity, and on philosophical principles, with the Girondins, he shared their fate, being guillotined with the twenty-two on the 31st of October, 1793. The particular accusation against the Abbé Fauchet was his complicity with Charlotte Corday, he having introduced her to the sitting of the convention, on the day of her arrival in Paris, but this was only a pretence to disguise the hatred of the terrorists. He is the author of numerous orations published between 1774 and 1792, the most remarkable of which is his 'Sermon sur l'accord de la Religion et de la Liberté,' 1791. [E.R.]

FAUJAS DE ST. FOND, Bartholomew, a French naturalist, regarded as one of the founders of geological science, 1750-1819.

FAUST, John, a German theologian, known as Dr. Faustus, and regarded as a magician from his being addicted to chemistry and astrology, &c. The legend of his compact with the devil, is the subject of Goethe's magnificent drama, and of a poem by Lessing, and other compositions of genius in the German language. Dr. Faustus lived at the beginning of the 15th century.

FAUST, or FUST, John, a goldsmith of Mayence, to whom the invention of printing has been ascribed, now allowed to Guttemberg, died 1466.

FAUSTINA, the name of two Roman ladies, mother and daughter, both remarkable for their profligacy. The elder was married to Antoninus Pius, and died in the third year of his reign, 141; the younger was the wife of Marcus Aurelius.

FAUSTUS, an Arminian prelate and hist., 4th c.

FAVART, C. S., a Fr. comic au., 1710-1792.

FAVIER, ——, secretary-general of the states of Languedoc, author of 'Politique de tous les Cabinets de l' Europe pendant les Régnes de Louis XV., et de Louis XVI.,' 1720-1784.

FAVIER, N., councillor of the parliament of Paris, au. of histor. memoirs, published 1572, 1579.

FAVILA, king of Asturias and Leon, 737-739.

FAVORINUS, a Platonic philosopher and rhetorician, a native of Arles in Gaul. He was the author of some historical and philosophical works, only fragments of which have been handed down in the citations of Diogenes Laertius, died 135.

FAVORINUS, V., an Ital. scholar, died 1527.

FAVORITI, one of seven illustrious Latin poets who flourished in Italy in the 17th cent., 1624-82.

FAVRAT, F. A., a Russian general, author of historical memoirs of the Polish war in 1794-96.

FAVRAY, Anthony, a Fr. painter, last cent.

FAVRE, A., a French jurisconsult, 1557-1624.

FAVRE, P., a disciple of Loyola, 1506-1546.

FAWCETT, Benj., a dissenting minister, last c.

FAWCETT, John, an English actor, 1769-1837.

FAWCETT, Sir W., an English officer, distin. in Germany, au. of some milit. treatises, 1728-1804.

FAWKES, F., a poet and miscel. wr., 1721-1777.

FAWKES, Guido, or Guy, a native of York, a soldier in the Spanish army serving in Flanders, executed with seven others in January 1606, for the gunpowder plot of the preceding 5th of Nov.

FAYE, Ch., Fr. ambass. to Holland, 1577-1638.

FAYETTE. See La Fayette.

FAYEZ-BEN-NASRILLAH, tenth Fatimite caliph of Damascus, reigned 1155-1160

FEARNE, C., an Eng. metaphysic., 1749-1794.

FEATLEY, Dan., a controv. divine, 1582-1644.

FECHT, John, a German divine, 1636-1716.

FECKENHAM, John De, properly John Howman, of Feckenham, the last mitred abbot who sat in the House of Lords, disting. for his activity, and for his writings against the reformation; last abbot of Westminster, which appointment he received on the accession of Queen Mary, d. 1585.

FEDER, J. G. H., a Germ. philos., 1740-1821.

FEDOR-IVANOVITCH, czar of Rus., 1557-98.

FEDOR-ALEXIEVITCH, or Fedor II., czar of Russia, reigned 1657-1676.

FEITAMA, Sibrand, a Dutch poet, 1694-1758.

FEITH, Everhard, a Dutch archæol., 16th c.

FEITH, R., a Dutch dramatic wr., 1753-1824.

FELIBIEN, Andrew, a French art-writer, friend of Nicholas Poussin, 1619-1695. His son J. Francois, author of 'The Lives and Works of Celebrated Architects,' 1657-1733. Another son, Dominique Michel, an ecclesiastical historian, 1666-1719. His third son James, a Roman Catholic divine, 1636-1716.

FELICE, F. B. De, an Ital. critic, 1723-1789.

FELICIANI, Por., an Ital. prelate, 1562-1632.

FELICIANO, G. B., a Venetian schol., 16th c.

FELIX. There are two saints of this name—Felix, bishop of Dunwich, a founder of churches, monasteries, and schools, died 646; and Felix De Valois, a French ecclesiastic, founder of the order of the Redemption, 1127-1212.

FELIX, the first of the name pope of Rome, 269-274; the second, an anti-pope elected under the patronage of the emperor Constance, 355-358; the third, 483-487; the fourth, elected under the patronage of Theodoric, king of the Goths, 526-530; the fifth, formerly Amadeus VIII., duke of Savoy, reigned as pope 1439-1449, abdicated in the last named year, and died at Genoa, 1451.

FELIX DE BEAUJOUR, L., a Fr. economist, au. of 'Theorie des Gouvernements,' &c., 1765-1836.

FELIX DE TASSY, C. F., a Fr. surg., d. 1703.

FELL, John, a dissenting minister, disting. as a religious and miscellaneous writer, 1735-1797.

FELL, Dr. John, bishop of Oxford, and son of Samuel Fell, distinguished for his learning and munificence to the university, author of some translations from the Latin, 1625-1686.

FELL, SAMUEL, dean of Christchurch, and vice-chancellor of the university of Oxford, distinguished, like his son Dr. John Fell, as a royalist. He is said to have died of a broken heart on hearing of the execution of Charles, 1594-1649.

FELLENBERG, PHILIPPE EMANUEL DE, a descendant, on his mother's side, from the famous Dutch admiral Van Tromp, was born at Berne, in Switzerland, 1771, and is celebrated as an agriculturist, and founder of an institute at Hoffwill for the theory and practice of agriculture, including manufactories of the instruments and machines, and a school of industry for the poor, on the general principles of Pestalozzi. M. de Fellenberg, like every other practical benefactor of his fellow-creatures, had much envious and ignorant opposition to overcome before he was allowed to pursue his benevolent plans without molestation: a government commission was named to inquire into the working of his institute, the result of which was his recognition as a man of the highest talents and public virtue. He is the author of several works on agriculture, and of memoirs on the institution at Hoffwill, published at the beginning of the present century. [E.R.]

FELLER, FRANCIS XAVIER, a Flemish Jesuit, auth. of an 'Historical Dictionary,' &c., 1735-1802.

FELLER, JOACHIM, a German poet, professor at Leipzig, killed by falling from a window in a state of somnambulism, 1628-1691. His son, JOACHIM FREDERIC, secretary to the duke of Weimar, au. of 'Monumenta Inedita,' 1673-1726.

FELLON, T. B., a Fr. Latin poet, 1672-1759.

FELLOWES, R., LL.D., a misc. wr., 1770-1847.

FELTHAM, OWEN, an Engl. moralist, 17th ct.

FELTON, H., a learned Engl. div., 1679-1740.

FELTON, NICHOLAS, bp. of Bristol, d. 1626.

FELTON, T. B., a French Jesuit, 1672-1759.

FENELON, FRANCIS DE SALIGNAC DE LA MOTTE, an eminent and pious Frenchman, was born in 1651 at the castle of Fenelon in Perigord. His studies were pursued successively at the universities of Cahors and Paris, and having directed his views steadily toward the church, he became qualified to obtain orders at the age of twenty-four. His first appointment was Superior of the newly converted female catholics, and the extraordinary success with which he discharged the duties of this station brought him under the notice of Louis XIV., who employed him on a special mission to convert the protestants of Poitou. Fenelon stipulated that no means of conversion were to be used but those of persuasion, and having obtained the royal sanction to this express condition, he accepted the embassy. In 1689 he was intrusted with a still more delicate and responsible office, that of undertaking the education of the duke of Burgundy and his younger brothers. It was for the benefit of his royal pupils that he wrote his Telemachus, and to reward the assiduity and faithfulness with which he discharged his duties as preceptor to the royal children, he was elevated to the archbishoprick of Cambray. He had not been long, however, installed in that see, when espousing the cause of Madame Guyon, the famous pietist, whose principles were embodied in her book, the 'Maxims of the Saints,' he was rancorously attacked by Bossuet, his defence placed by the pope in the list of prohibited books, and he himself summoned on pain of excommunication to renounce the heresy. He read his recantation in the pulpit of his own cathedral. But this was not the end of his trials. Bossuet, who had become his bitter enemy, incensed the mind of Louis XIV. against him, by alleging that 'Telemachus,' which had been published through the perfidy of a secretary who had been employed in transcribing it, was a covert attack on the character of his government, his personal ambition, his love of glory, and his passionate pursuit of war. Fenelon was in consequence banished from the court. But a high tribute was paid to his talents and worth by the foreign invaders, who by the express commands of the duke of Marlborough, exempted his lands from pillage, while that general himself, and his allies, showed him every mark of courtesy. Fenelon, though he continued within the pale of the popish church, saw through its corruptions and gross superstitions. He was a very pious man, and his grand habitual aim was to form his own character in conformity with the mind of Jesus Christ. He was temperate almost to abstemiousness, ate little, slept little, took no recreation except a few hours daily in the exercises of walking or riding, while all the rest of his time was devoted to the discharge of his duties in social intercourse with his friends, in visiting the poor, in admonishing, reproving, or comforting his flock as circumstances demanded. The most of his revenues were devoted to benevolent purposes, to help in the education of poor clergymen, to assist indigent old gentlemen, and to extend the means of usefulness to the public hospitals. His death, which took place in the thirty-third year of his age, showed, by the universal regret it produced, how strong a hold he had taken of the hearts of his countrymen, while his literary works have erected a monument which will transmit his name with honour to a distant posterity. [R.J.]

FENN, JOHN, an Engl. catholic div., d. 1615.

FENN, SIR J., an English antiq., 1739-1794.

FENNER, W., a puritan divine, 1560-1640.

FENTON, EDW., an Engl. navigator, d. 1603.

FENTON, ELIJAH, a poet and dramatic writer, chiefly celebrated for his share in Pope's translation of the Odyssey, 1683-1730.

FENTON, SIR G., an English transl., d. 1608.

FER, N. DE, a French geographer, 1646-1720.

FERAND, J. F., a Fr. grammarian, 1725-1807.

FERBER, JOHN JAS., a Swedish mineralogist, auth. of 'Mineralogy of Bohemia,' &c., 1743-1790.

FERDINAND, CH., a French poet, died 1494.

FERDINAND, JOHN, a Sp. Jesuit, died 1595.

FERDINAND I., emperor of Germany, brother and successor of Charles V., born 1503, king of Hungary and Bohemia 1527, king of the Romans 1531, emperor 1558 to his death 1564; in his reign the empire was separated from all dependence on the papacy. FERDINAND II., grandson of the preceding, born 1578, king of Bohemia 1617, king of Hungary 1618, emperor 1619 to his death 1637. The principal events of his reign were the revolt of Bohemia, subdued by the battle of Prague, and the progress of the thirty years' war. FERDINAND III., son and successor of the preceding, born 1608, king of Hungary 1625, king of Bohemia 1627, king of the Romans 1636, emperor 1637 to his death in 1657. The great event of his reign was the peace of Westphalia.

FERDINAND, king of Bohemia, the first three same as the preceding; the fourth of the name, son of Ferdinand III., born 1634, crowned king of Bohemia 1646, king of Hungary 1647, died 1654.

FERDINAND, king of Portugal, born 1340, succeeded his father Peter I., 1367, died 1383.

FERDINANDS, THE, of Spain, are—FERDINAND I., king of Castile and Leon, reigned 1037-1065. FERDINAND II., king of Leon, and regent of Castile during the minority of Alfonso IX., reigned 1157-1187. FERDINAND III., born 1200, king of Castile 1217, king of Leon 1230, died 1252. FERDINAND IV., born 1279, king of Castile 1285, died 1312. FERDINAND V., born 1452, married Isabella of Castile 1469, became king of Castile 1474, succeeded his father as king of Arragon 1479, died, after a glorious reign, signalized by the union of the Spanish kingdoms, the subjugation of the Moors, and the discovery of America, &c., 1516. FERDINAND VI., born 1713, succeeded 1746, died 1759. FERDINAND VII., born 1784, named king by his father, who abdicated 1808, detained at Valençay by Napoleon, who placed his brother Joseph on the throne till 1813, after which his states revolutionized, 1819-20, and he died 1833.

FERDINANDS, THE, of Arragon, are—FERDINAND I., called 'The Just,' succeeded 1412, died 1416; and FERDINAND II., the latter being the same as Ferdinand V. of Spain

FERDINANDS, THE, of Naples and Sicily, are—FERDINAND I., notorious for his debaucheries and cruelties, reigned 1458-1494. FERDINAND II., reigned 1495-1496. FERDINAND III., same as Ferdinand V. of Spain, who conquered a part of the kingdom, and obtained its investiture from the pope in 1510. FERDINAND IV., commonly called FERDINAND I., king of the two Sicilies, third son of Charles III., king of Spain, born 1751, succeeded under the regency of Tanucci 1759, died after a troubled reign, interrupted by the usurpations of the Napoleon kings, and the insurrections of his people, 1825.

FERDINANDS, THE, grand dukes of Tuscany, are—FERDINAND I., born 1549, cardinal (de Medici) 1563, duke 1574, died 1609. FERDINAND II., born 1610, succeeded 1621, died 1670. FERDINAND III., born 1769, succeeded 1790, war with France 1798, acceded to the confederation of the Rhine, and created prince of Würtsbourg by Napoleon 1806, rest. to his duchy 1814, d. 1824.

FERDOUCY, FERDOUSI, or FERDUSI, ABOUL-CASSIM-MANSOUR, a celebrated Persian poet, author of a history in verse, 916-1020.

FERG, P. F., an Austrian painter, 1689-1740.

FERGOLA, N., a geomet. of Naples, 1753-1824.

FERGUS, the first of the name, founder of the Scottish monarchy, 4th century; the second, reigned 411-429; the third, died 767.

FERGUSON, ADAM, a Scotch philosopher, predecessor of Dugald Stewart in the chair of moral philosophy at Edinburgh, author of 'Institutes of Moral Philosophy,' 'Principles of Moral and Political Science,' &c. The former of these has been often reprinted, and translated, and adopted as a text-book in some foreign universities: its principle is the admission of a moral sense, 1710-1776.

FERGUSON, JAMES, a self-taught experimental philosopher, mechanician, and astronomer of Scotland, 1724-1816.

FERGUSON, ROBT., an Engl. divine, d. 1714.

FERGUSON, WM., a Scotch painter, d. 1690.

FERGUSON, ROBERT, a Scotch poet, whose compositions in the lowland Scotch dialect entitle him to rank with Burns in descriptive power, though nothing that he has written can be compared with the lyrics of the bard of Ayr for tenderness, and intense love of nature, was born at Edinburgh, where his father was accountant to the British Linen Company, 17th October, 1750. His parents intended him for the ministry, but he wanted the power of steady application to the necessary studies, and his father dying when he was seventeen years of age, he went to reside with an uncle near Aberdeen, who was at length tired of his poor relative, and allowed him to take the situation of copying-clerk at the office of the commissary-clerk, and afterwards in that of the sheriff's clerk, in his native city. His love of poetry, and his conversational powers, not only unfitted him for this drudgery, but the latter, by a natural reaction against his daily toils, involved him in habits of dissipation, which predisposed him to disease; and it is melancholy to relate that the last penalty which the violated laws of nature exacted from him was nothing less than his mental derangement. In 1774, when in the twenty-fourth year of his age, he was sent to a poor asylum for lunatics, where he was subject to rules which in all human probability hastened his death, which took place in about two months afterwards, on the 16th of October. Burns always acknowledged with affecting tenderness his obligations to Ferguson, whom he styles his 'elder brother in misfortune,' and to whose memory, in the year 1789, he erected a handsome monument in the Canongate churchyard, the place of his interment. It is impossible to read the Scottish poems of Ferguson without acknowledging how closely Burns has followed his model in some of his most admired descriptive pieces. We may instance in particular, 'The Daft Days,' 'The Rising of the Session,' 'Leith Races,' 'Elegy on John Hogg,' and 'Cauler Oysters,' in which the most striking parallels may be traced. Ferguson could sing his native melodies with effect, and was a little too fond perhaps of practical jests. It is said that he never made an enemy, but it is only too likely that he lost a friend in his rich uncle for lack of that ordinary 'prudence' which men of genius too often pride themselves in holding cheap. [E.R.]

FERHAD-PACHA, grand vizier and minister of war to Amurath III., died in disgrace, 1594.

FERISHTAH, MOH.-CASSIM, a Pers. hist., au. of a 'Hist. of India under the Mussulmans,' 17th c.

FERMAT, PIERRE, an eminent French mathematician, born at Toulouse in 1595, died in 1667. Fermat was famed in his time as one of the most remarkable analysts in Europe; neither will any historian deny his genius, or his success; he is the author of much ingenious speculation; he discovered curious and recondite theorems regarding numbers; and invented a remarkable method for the solution of problems in maxima and minima. But a factitious interest has recently attached to him because of the singular claim instituted by La Place that Fermat be considered the true author of the Differential Calculus. It is not easy to conceive a stronger illustration of the sway of national vainglory over the judgments even of great Frenchmen. The Differential Calculus, like most other new principles, especially demanded by the necessities of Science, was heralded by many partial and imperfect anticipations: anticipations always marked by one characteristic, — they effected the solution of particular problems by methods akin to those of the Differential Calculus; but of the generality, the true method of that remarkable branch of Analysis, they partook nothing. Fermat merely hit upon one such anticipation in his treatment of maxima and minima. The claim urged by La Place has led to a narrow scrutiny of the powers of this Geometrician, and they have not risen thereby in estimation. Many of his theorems regarding numbers seem lucky guesses on curious points, sought for systematically as such, rather than deductions by scientific procedures. [J.P.N.]

FERMIN, PH., a French naturalist, 1720-1790.
FERMOR, COUNT VON, a Rus. gen., 1704-1771.
FERNANDEZ, ALP., a Sp. monk, 1572-1640.
FERNANDEZ, ALV., a Portug. navig., 16th c.
FERNANDEZ, ANT., a Port. Jesuit, 1558-1628.
FERNANDEZ, B., a Portug. Jesuit, died 1630.
FERNANDEZ, DEN., a Portug. navig., 15th c.
FERNANDEZ, DIEGO, a Sp. historian, 16th c.
FERNANDEZ, JOHN, a Portuguese navigator, 15th century.
FERNANDEZ, JUAN, a Sp. navigat., d. 1576.
FERNANDEZ, L., a Spanish paint., 1594-1654.
FERNANDEZ, L., a Spanish paint., 1605-1646.
FERNE, H., an Engl. controv. divine, 1602-61.
FERNEL, J., a Fr. medical writer, 1497-1558.
FERRACINO, B., an Ital. mechanic., 1692-1777.
FERRAJUOLI, N., a Neapolit. painter, 17th c.
FERRAND, ANTH., a French poet, died 1719.
FERRAND, ANTH. F. CL., Count, a French statesman, histor., and literary savant, 1751-1825.
FERRAND, J. P., a French paint., 1653-1732.
FERRAND, L., a French Hebraist, 1645-1699.
FERRAND, M. L., a Fr. general, 1753-1808.
FERRANDO, G., a Spanish navigator, 15th c.
FERRANTINI, G., an Italian painter, 16th c.
FERRAR, NICH., a pious enthusiast, founder of a religious house in Huntingdonshire, 1592-1637.
FERRAR, ROB., bp. of St. David's, burnt 1555.
FERRARA, HIPPOLYTUS OF ESTE, cardinal of, governor of the duchy of Parma for France for the two years 1552-1554, lived 1509-1572.
FERRARA, ANNE OF, daughter of Hercules II., and wife of the duc de Guise, known as a political intriguante at the Fr. court, 1531-1607.
FERRARI, a Provençal troubadour, 13th cent.
FERRARI, AND., a Genoese paint., 1599-1669.
FERRARI, ANT., a Neapol. geogr., 1444-1517.
FERRARI, B., founder of a religious order, Milan, 1497-1544.
FERRARI, GAUDENZIO, an Italian painter, assistant of Raffaelle in the Vatican, 1484-1550.
FERRARI, GIOV. AND., an Italian painter, pupil of Bernard Strozzi, 1599-1669.
FERRARI, GREG., an Ital. painter, 1644-1726. His son LORENZO, also a painter, died 1744.
FERRARI, J. B., an Italian Jesuit, 1580-1665.
FERRARI, L., an Italian mathematician, inventor of a method for solving equations to the fourth degree, 1522-1566.
FERRARI, OCTAVIAN, an Italian philosopher, professor of politics and morals, 1518-1586
CISCO BERNARDINO, of the same famil clesiastical wr. of vast erudition, 1576-16
TAVIO, nephew of the last named, a literar
antiquar., and historiographer of Milan, 16
FERRARI, P., an Italian architect, 17
FERRARI, W., an Italian historian, 17
FERRARINI, M. F., an Italian antiq., FERRARIS, JOSEPH, Count De, an
gen. of artillery, dist. as a geographer, 17
FERRARS, EDW., an Eng. playwright FERRARS, GEORGE, an English la poet, whose arrest for debt when memb House of Commons, his release on their and the punishment of the prosecutors, e
the privilege of mem. at that early period,
FERRARS, H., an English herald, 15
FERRATA, HERCULES, an Ital. sculpt
FERRAUD, NICHOLAS, born 1764, from the department of the Hautes-Py
the national convention of France, 1792, n by the populace, 20th May, 1795, wh resisting the invasion of the hall, and p the president Boissy D'Anglas from their
FERREIRA, AL., a Portug. jurist, 16
FERREIRA, ANT., a Portug. poet, 15
FERREIRA, A. F., a Portug. navig.,
FERRELO, B., a Spanish navigator, 1
FERRERAS, JOHN DE, an ecclesiasti theologian, and literary savant of Spain, 16
FERRERI, Z., an Italian poet, 1479-1
FERRET, EMILE, a French jurist, 148
FERRI, the first of the name, duke of 1205-1207; the second, died 1213; t reigned 1251-1303; the fourth, born 12
ceeded 1312, killed at the battle of Cassel
FERRI, ALPH., an Ital. surgical writer.
FERRI, CIRO, an Italian architect, 16
FERRI-DE-ST.-CONSTANT, J. L., a writer, au. of 'London and the English,' 17 FERRIER, ARN. DU, a Fr. lawyer an matist, chancellor of the kg. of Navarre, FERRIER, ST. VINCENT, an Ital. prea theol., opponent of pope Benedict XIII., 13
FERRIERE, CL. DE, a Fr. jurist, 163
FERRIERES, C. ELIE, Marquis De, m historian of the Fr. constit. assembly, 174
FERRON, ARNOUL DU, a Fr. hist., 15
FERSEN, AXEL, Count De, a field-m
Sweden, president of the diet of nobles, by his share in the condemnation of Coun 1756. His son, AXEL, chancellor of the u of Upsala, born 1750, killed in an emeute, FESCH, JOSEPH, cardinal archbishop o and brother of Letitia Ramolini, mothe poleon, disgraced in 1810 for his oppo
the emperor in favour of the pope, 1763-1
FESCH, SEB., a French antiquarian, 16
FESTUS, PORTIUS, Rom. gov. of Judæ
FESTUS, SEX. POMPEIUS, a Latin gra
FETH-ALI-SHAH, king of Persia, 17
FETI, DOMINICO, an Ital. painter, 158 FEUERBACH, P. J. ANSELME DE, a philosopher, distinguished for his adaptati code of Napoleon to his native country, 17
FEUILLEE, LOUIS, a Fr. naturalist, d
FEVRE, ANTHONY LE, DE LA BOD man of letters, ambassador from Henry Brussels and London, 1555-1615. His

Guy Lefevre Sieur De La Boderie, an Oriental scholar and poet, 1541-1598.
Fevre, Cl. Le, a French painter, 1633-1675.
Fevre, Jas. Le, a Fr. catholic divine, d. 1716.
Fevre, James Le, a Fr. ecclesiastic of great learning, distinguished by the friendship of Margaret of Navarre, and the celebrated Erasmus, author of 'Commentaries,' &c., 1440-1537.
Fevre, J. B. Le, a French scholar, 1732-1809.
Fevre, N. Le, a French savant, 1544-1611.
Fevre, Tannegui Le, or Tanaquil Faber, a scholar, professor of the classics, 1615-1672.
Fevre, V. Le, a Flemish engraver, 17th cent.
Fiennes, H. De, a French traveller, 17th ct.
Fichte, Johann Gottlieb, born in Upper Lusatia, 19th May, 1762; died on 21st January, 1814. One of the most remarkable names in Philosophy since the death of Kant. The characteristic of his speculations are nearly the following. Maintaining that Kant had given a full critique of the Faculty of the Mind, on the substance of its Powers, Fichte demanded a critique of the act of Consciousness itself. What, he asked, is the content of the act of consciousness? It reveals something that is Me, and something which I call Not Me. How are these related,—what is this thing called Me, this thing which I call Not Me? It is a feeling, which can be nothing but a feeling: there is nothing of which we can be conscious except the Me,—the conscious principle and its modifications. What, then, is the Not Me? Why is it thrown by us into the form of an external or independent existence? The mind alone, indeed, is the sphere of the mind's operations; but to its activity there are limitations; it proceeds in the work of self-development by steps, for we are finite, and struggle towards the infinite by steps or degrees. Now the consciousness of effort, the feeling of limitation, seems like the presence of an external obstacle; at least we objectify it, and term it the Not Me.—Adequate criticism is not here allowed for criticism on this theory; nevertheless, two characteristics of it must be marked. (See articles Hamilton, Hegel, Schelling.) First, as a scheme of pure idealism it resembles Berkeley's; but the architecture of it is different. Berkeley supposed that the ideas we have for the external world, are visions of the Thing Not Us—glimpses of the Divine Intelligence: Fichte, that they are nothing save the mind's own efforts. Hence he spoke of our conceptions as creations; he deduced everything from the mind's activity. Secondly, the assertion of the supremacy of Freedom and independent Energy, is the key-stone of Fichte's whole system. However faulty his speculative philosophy, the tenacity with which he clung to this prime element of Humanity, produced the best results in morals and politics. No philosopher ever wrote whose pages burn more with whatever can stir up the highest in all of us. He was a true apostle of the Heroic: his morals are the pure Stoicism modified according to the acquisitions, the culture, and necessities of this Age. And he lived what he preached. His theoretic philosophy has already been rejected; but the Man Fichte, will ever be cherished as one of the noblest of his race. [J.P.N.]
Fichtel, J. E., a Hungarian natur., 1732-95.
Ficin, M., an Italian Platonist, 1433-1491.
Fiddes, R., an English divine, 1671-1725.
Fidelis, C., a learned Ital. lady, 1465-1558.

Field, R., an English divine, 1561-1616.

[Birth-place of Fielding.]

Fielding, Henry, born in 1707, was the third son of General Fielding, and great-grandson of an earl of Denbigh. His classical education was received at Eton; and he afterwards studied law at Leyden, which, however, he was obliged to leave in his twentieth year, on failing to receive supplies from home. His father had a large family, and appears to have been neither rich nor frugal. The son was fairly left to shift for himself; and, seeking his fortune in London, he found, as he says himself, that his choice lay between being a hackney writer and a hackney coachman. Composition for the stage was his first pursuit, by which he contrived to lead the life of a gay young man for about nine years, from 1727 to 1736. During this time he wrote eighteen plays of one sort or another, which, though admitted to be dramatic failures, show, in passages innumerable, the same vigorous sense and shrewdness, the same keenness of wit, and the same acuteness of critical discernment, which afterwards characterized his novels. His translated farce of 'The Miser,' and his 'Mock Doctor,' are now oftenest remembered; but neither these, nor his other comedies and farces, possess nearly so much originality or spirit as his burlesque parodies on the tragic drama, among which 'Tom Thumb' may be noted as being still by far the best thing of the kind in the English language. The audacity with which in his farces he satirized public characters, is said to have been the main provocation which led the government to establish a censorship of acted plays. In 1736 he married an amiable young lady, with whom he received about £1,500, succeeding, about the same time, to an estate of £200 a-year, in Derbyshire. He now retired to the country, where he lived with hospitable and careless extravagance, and found himself penniless in the course of three years.—He returned to London, resumed his law studies, and was called to the bar. But he had no success in the practice of his profession, for which, besides other causes, he was now disqualified by frequent attacks of gout. To the anxieties and distresses of a precarious and scanty livelihood, was soon added the deep grief caused by the death of his wife, to whom, and to his children, the good-hearted and improvident man of pleasure was warmly attached. For ten years he subsisted by miscellaneous literary drudgery. He made new attempts at dramatic writing; he published many fugitive essays and tracts, engaged in political controversy as an active Whig partizan, and was the conductor and chief writer of three successive periodical papers aimed at the Jacobites and their principles. About 1742 he wrote 'Joseph Andrews,' the first of those novels on which his fame depends. Notwithstanding its frequent seriousness, this piece was intended to be, and in many points really is, a parody on the sentimentalism of Richardson's 'Pamela.' It was followed by 'Jonathan Wild,' a singular specimen of very vigorous but overdrawn irony.—In 1749 he received from the government a small pension, and an appointment as a justice of peace for Middlesex and Westminster. The office, as then regarded and administered, was decidedly one which a gentleman would not have accepted unless through necessity; and it undoubtedly helped to degrade both Fielding's character and his feelings. Its duties, however, were discharged not only zealously, but with an honourable integrity and disinterestedness altogether new in the occupants of such places. He published an 'Inquiry into the Increase of Thieves and Robbers,' besides other treatises bearing on law; he was a remarkably efficient police magistrate; and one of his last achievements was the extirpating of several gangs of ruffians by whom London was infested.—'The History of Tom Jones, a Foundling,' was written very soon after Fielding had been forced to embark in these ungenial and harassing employments; when his health was already quite broken; and when, by his own public acknowledgment, the honesty with which he filled his office left him so poor that the benevolence of wealthy friends had been required for enabling him to subsist. It is not easy to understand the grounds on which 'Tom Jones' has been defended against the charge of immorality; but in point both of genius, and of skill in art, it is the best novel ever written. It was followed in 1751 by 'Amelia,' which is very much inferior. The heroine is said to have been designed as a portrait of the author's second wife. In 1752 he attempted a new periodical, which drew him into quarrels with Smollett and other men of letters. His life was fast ebbing away: dropsy had been followed by jaundice and asthma. Ordered by physicians to a southern climate, he sailed for Lisbon, and died there in October, 1754, in the forty-eighth year of his age. He left behind him, besides other works, a spiritedly written account of his 'Journey to Lisbon.' [W.S.]

FIENNES, WILLIAM, Lord Say and Sele, 'a grand rebel for twenty years' under Cromwell, afterwards lord privy seal and lord chancellor to Charles II., 1582-1662. His son, NATHANIEL, one of Cromwell's privy council, 1608-1669.

FIENNES, J. B. DE, a French Orientalist and negotiator, 1669-1744. His son, J. B. HELIN, an Orient. schol. and interpreter to the king, 1710-67.

FIESCHI, JOS. MARIE, the contriver of the infernal machine, exec. with his accomplices, 1836.

FIESCO, J. L., count of Lavagna, cel. for heading the conspiracy against Andrew Doria in 1547.

FIESOLE, FRA GIOVANNI DA, commonly called FRA ANGELICO, his family name was Guido, was born at Mugello in 1387; his surname of Fiesole he acquired from the order of] at that place, whom he joined in 1409. in 1455.—Fra Angelico was distinguish pious life, and the same sentiment perva works: he was remarkably methodic in l he commenced every picture with prayc variably carried out the first impressio upon it as a species of inspiration. His works are some frescoes in the convei Marco at Florence, and others in the San Lorenzo in the Vatican. Some ac gravings from these works are in course cation by the Arundel Society; their c is their refined sentiment and high or pression, in which qualities Fra Giovann were, the type of his successors, the mc quattrocento school of painters; a schoc respects supposed to be revived in the r called preraphaelite innovation in our o but minute finish was an extremely rare istic of the genuine quattrocento master —(Vasari, Vite de' Pittori, &c.)

FIGUEIRA, L., a Portuguese Jesuit sionary to Brazil in 1606, murdered 164

FIGUEIRA, WM., a French troubado

FILMER, SIR R., a wr. on governm.,

FINCH, ANNE, an English poetess, d

FINCH, HENEAGE, first earl of No solicitor-general in the time of Charles 1682. His son, DANIEL, second earl of ham, distinguished as a statesman, 1

EDWARD FINCH, brother of the first e clergyman, and died 1642.

FINCH, R., an English antiquarian, 1

FINCK, JASPER, a German Lutheran

FINDEN, WM., a cel. Eng. engrav., 1

FINGAL, a chief of Morven, celebrat poem of Ossian, disting. against the Ron FINIQUERRA, TOMMASO, a gol Florence, where he was born 1426, w accident became the inventor of metal pl ing. He was a niello engraver, and w habit of, says Vasari, taking sulphur ir from his engravings, and printing with damp paper to see the effect of the des he discovered that though engraved he the same impressions from the metal its is in the library at Paris a print repres coronation of the Virgin, with the date 1450 according to Gaye, from a silve Maso Finiquerra, still preserved in the of the grand duke of Tuscany. This is to be the oldest metal plate print extant: wood block prints much older. Finiq already dead in 1464.—(Lanzi, Storia &c.; Bartsch, Peintre Graveur; Gaye, Inedito d' Artisti.)

FINKE, THOS., a Danish mathemat., 1

FINLAY, JOHN, a Scotch poet, 1782

FIORAVANTI, LEO, an Ital. alchemis

FIRENZUOLA, ANG., an Ital. poet, 1

FIRMIAN, CHARLES, Count De, adn of the Austrian govern. of Lombardy, 17

FIRMICUS, MATERNUS, a Christian

FIRMILIAN, bishop of Cæsarea, 3d c

FIRMIN, G., a nonconformist div., 16

FIRMIN, ST., bp. of Amiens, martyr

FIRMIN, TH., an Eng. philanthropist,

FIRMUS, lord of Mauritania, killed 3

FIRMUS, MARCUS, a Roman general, proclaimed emperor in Egypt, and killed 273.
FISCHER, C. A., a German savant, 1771-1829.
FISCHER, G. A., a Germ. mathem., 1763-1832.
FISCHER, J. A., a Germ. physic., 1667-1729.
FISCHER, J. B., a Germ. natural., 1730-1793.
FISCHER, J. B., a Germ. architect, 1650-1724.
FISCHER, J. C., a Germ. mathem., 1760-1833.
FISCHER, J. C., a Germ. philologist, 1712-93.
FISCHER, J. F., a Germ. historian, 1697-1771.
FISCHER, J. F., a Germ. philologist, 1726-99.
FISHER, EDW., an English Calvinist, 17th c.
FISHER, JOHN, bishop of Rochester, disgraced for his opposition to the reformation Henry VIII., and beheaded 1535.
FISHER, JOHN, bishop of Salisbury, tutor of Duke of Kent and Princess Charlotte, 1748-1825.
FISHER, PAYNE, an English poet and herald, persecute under Cromwell, died 1693.
FISHER, TH., a periodical writer, 1772-1836.
FITZ-GEFFREY, C., a div. and poet, 1575-1636.
FITZGERALD, EDW., Lord, son of the duke Leinster, a political partizan and rebel of Ireland, born 1763, shot in the struggle for his arrest.
His wife, LADY EDWARD FITZGERALD, formerly called PAMELA, was supposed to be the daughter of Madame de Genlis, by Philip Egalite, Duke of the late king of the French, with whom she was educated at the Palais Royal. She died in indigent circumstances at Paris, 1831.
FITZGIBBON, JOHN, a disting. lawyer, earl of Clare, and lord chancellor of Ireland, 1749-1802.
FITZHERBERT, SIR A., a learned judge and writer on law, author of a 'Collection of Law Cases,' &c., died 1538. His grandson, NICHOLAS, supposed author of the 'Antiquity and Duration of the Roman Catholic Religion in England,' accidentally drowned 1612. SIR W. FITZHERBERT, a descendant of the same family, appointed gentleman-usher to the king, 1748-1791.
FITZHERBERT, MARIA ANNE, formerly Miss Smythe, married to George IV. 1787, died 1837.
FITZJAMES, JAMES, duke of Berwick, son of James II. and Arabella Churchill, sister to the Duke of Marlborough, a distinguished commander in the French army, born 1670, killed at the siege of Philipsburgh 1734. His second son, grand almoner of Louis XV., and bishop of Soissons, 1709-1764. His son, CHARLES, a peer and marshal of France, 1712-1787. His great grandson, EDWARD, duke of Fitzjames, an adherent of the French court, died 1839.
FITZSIMONS, H., an Irish Jesuit, 1569-1644.
FITZSTEPHEN, W., an Eng. historian, 12th c.
FITZWILLIAM, WM., earl of Southampton, a naval commander, dist. against France, d. 1542.
FITZWILLIAM, THE RIGHT HON. WM. WENTWORTH FITZWILLIAM, fourth earl, a Whig statesman of the period of the French revolution, afterw. associated with the duke of Portland and Pitt, and after the death of the latter in 1806 president of the council in the Grenville ministry, 1748-1833.
FIXMILNER, P., an Aust. astron., 1721-1791.
FLACCILLA, ÆLIA, wife of Theod. the Great, and mother of Arcadius and Honorius, died 385.
FLACCUS, CAIUS V., a Roman poet, 1st cent.
FLACIUS, M., a Ger. protes. theol., 1520-1575.
FLAHERTY, R. O', an Irish histor., 1630-1718.
FLAMINIO, GIOV. ANT., an Italian teacher of the Belles Lettres, 1464-1536. His son, MARC ANTONIO, a Latin poet, 1498-1550.
FLAMINIUS, NEPOS, Roman consul, 222 B.C.
FLAMINIUS, TITUS, Roman consul, 197 B.C.
FLAMSTEED, JOHN, born at Denby, near Derby, August 19, 1646, died in 1719. A most laborious and admirable observer, the founder of practical Astronomy in England: he was the first Astronomer Royal. Previous to his public appointments, Flamsteed had shown great zeal and talent; but his repute rests on the work he achieved after the establishment of the Observatory. Like his great predecessor Tycho Brahe, the instruments as well as the work were mainly his own; drawn however, out of the scanty funds of a poor clergyman instead of the coffers of a noble: nor was the illustrious Dane ever more conscientious, or more laborious; few have excelled him in sagacity, or that theoretic faculty which is one pillar of strength to every first-class observer—the power to know what to observe—to make all work available for some permanent and important purpose. The Historia Celestis Britannica contains our first trustworthy catalogue of the fixed stars—the first at least which is available for modern objects; and the mass of lunar observations made by Flamsteed, furnished Newton the means of carrying out and verifying his immortal discovery of Gravitation. The life of Flamsteed contains only one thing, which in one who contemplates it can give rise to pain. The revelations lately made by Mr. Baily, place beyond doubt the fact of the very unworthy treatment of this excellent observer by Newton and Halley. They outraged his feelings and sported with his rights; nor can the nature of the aim before them be at all accepted as their apology. [J.P.N.]
FLATMAN, TH., an English poet, 1633-1688.
FLAVEL, J., an Eng. Calvinist. divine, d. 1691.
FLAVIEN, patriarch of Antioch, 381-404.
FLAVIEN, patriarch of Constanple., 447-449.
FLAVIUS, CAIUS, a Roman ædile, 305 B.C.
FLAXMAN, JOHN. This celebrated English sculptor was born at York, 6th July, 1755, but he settled early in London with his father, who sold plaster casts, &c. The occupation of the father gave Flaxman many opportunities which he might otherwise not have had, and as early as his twelfth year he gained the silver pallet of the Society of Arts for a model. Among his earlier efforts were the various designs which he made for Wedgwood, which had a great share in elevating the general taste of the country, and which now promise a second time to exercise a beneficial influence upon it. In 1782 Flaxman married, and in 1787 took his wife with him to Italy, where he remained at Rome for seven years. During this time he executed his admirable designs in outline from Homer, Æschylus, and Dante, and his great group in marble, for Lord Bristol, of 'The Fury of Athamas;' and 'Cephalus and Aurora' for Mr. Hope.—He returned to London in 1794, where his first work was the monument to Lord Mansfield in Westminster Abbey; this was followed by several others there and in St. Paul's, as that to Lord Nelson, the figure of Sir Joshua Reynolds, and others. He executed also many private monuments, of which that to the family of Sir Francis Baring in Micheldever church is one of the most celebrated.

He produced also some works of a more purely poetic character, as the colossal group of Satan and the archangel Michael for Lord Egremont, the original model of which, with a great number of others, is now placed in a permanent gallery beneath the dome of University College, London, the munificent gift of Miss Denman, the sculptor's sister-in-law. The 'Shield of Achilles,' modelled for Messrs. Rundell and Bridge, is a remarkable work of another class, and completing the whole category of art to which sculpture is applicable:—showing Flaxman working for the social refinement of the potter and the silversmith, for national glory, and domestic piety and affection, for the classic taste of the scholar, and the exquisite sentiment of the poet; in all skilful and great.—He was elected an academician in 1800, and professor of sculpture in 1810: he died 7th December, 1826, in his seventy-second year. His 'Lectures on Sculpture' are published in one volume, octavo, with fifty-two plates, second edition, Bohn, 1838; they are—1. English Sculpture; 2. Egyptian Sculpture; 3. Grecian Sculpture; 4. Science; 5. Beauty; 6. Composition; 7. Style; 8. Drapery; 9. Ancient Art; and 10. Modern Art. These lectures, though his remarks on ancient art want the exactness and precision of modern scholarship, are compositions of great interest, and much practical instruction. [R.N.W.]

FLECHIER, Esprit, one of the most celebrated orators of the French church, born 1632, d. shortly after his promotion to the see of Nismes, 1710; auth. of a 'History of Theodosius the Great.'

FLECK, J. F. F., a Prussian actor, 1757-1801.

FLECKNOE, R., an English poet, died 1678.

FLEETWOOD, Ch., a general in the interest of the parliament during the civil wars, dates unknown.

FLEETWOOD, Wm., a writer on law, d. 1593.

FLEETWOOD, Wm., bishop of St. Asaph, au. of 'A Plain Method of Christ. Devotion,' 1656-1723.

FLEISCHMANN, J. M., a German agriculturist, gardener to the court of Dresden, 1747-1831.

FLEMING, Abr., a miscellaneous wr., 16th ct.

FLEMING, Cal., a Socinian minis., 1698-1779.

FLEMING, Cl., constable of Sweden, d. 1597.

FLEMING, Pat., a Roman Cath. div., b. 1599.

FLEMING, Robert, son of a Scottish divine of the same name, who lived 1630-1694, is the author of a remarkable 'Discourse on the Rise and Fall of the Papacy,' the predictions of which have received a singular fulfilment. In this sermon, published 1701, Fleming ventures his opinion that the French monarchy would be humbled in 1794, that the period of the fifth vial extended from 1794 to 1848, and that in the last mentioned year the papacy would receive its most signal blow, and that it would be followed by the destruction of the Turk.—'An Attempt to Prove the Calculations of Fleming Incorrect,' was published soon after the recent flight of the pope, the writer arguing that the papacy had then irretrievably fallen, while Fleming had expressly stated that it would continue longer! The date of Fleming's birth is unknown, but he died in 1716. [E.R.]

FLEMMING, Heino H., Count De, a Prussian field-marshal and gov. of Berlin, 1632-1706.

FLEMMING, or FLEMMYNGE, Richard, an Engl. prelate, fndr. of Lincoln college, d. 1430.

FLETCHER, A., a Scotch political of Sir R. Fletcher, of Saltoun, 1658-171

FLETCHER, James, an hist. wr., 1

FLETCHER, John, and Francis B formed one of those partnerships whi rare in all sections of literature except have in it been very common, both i and elsewhere.—Beaumont, the younge judge, was born at his father's seat of in Leicestershire, about the year 1585.
poetry seems to have been prosecut own sake. Fletcher, whose father di of London, had been born in 157 where his father was then clergyn left an orphan and penniless when mere youth, he had to fight his wa self, and earned his bread by writi of the poets were academically educa mont at Oxford, Fletcher at Cambr John Beaumont, author of the poem of Field,' was the elder brother of the one gious poets, Giles and Phineas Fletcher, sins of the other.—About the beginn seventeenth century, the drama was most flourishing department in the litera then adorned England. All the poetic the nation turned to play-writing; not of genius, who are now remembered on works of other kinds, Drayton and D instances, owed their contemporary fam degree to their plays; and several, suc whom we know only as dramatists, bably have gained higher success had vated other walks of poetry.—The nam mont and Fletcher appear together f time in 1607, when the latter was in eighth year, and the former in his twe Beaumont had already published some mi poems: Fletcher's previous training in cannot be traced. The English dra soon after 1590 had risen to its gre under Shakspeare, was now not far fro of its brightest period. The labours o illustrious master were about to close;
of those which were afterwards perfor
Jonson were fallings off from the vig prime. The two new poets stood, both in spirit, between the era which was ma by Shakspeare, and that which termina middle of the century, the history of the lish Drama.—The two are said to have same house in London till 1613, when married. They continued to write, separately but oftener together, till 1
Beaumont died, in his thirty-first year
Fletcher survived him for nine years, tively the whole time; and he died in the plague, in 1625. Fifty-three pla cluded in the collection of works whic sess as the fruits of those nineteen y beautiful pastoral of 'The Faithful Shep known to have been Fletcher's; and other plays of the series were written a mont's death; other writers, however Massinger and Middleton, having perha Fletcher in some of them. As to no other thirty-five plays can we assert tively, that it was written by Beaumont
Fletcher alone, or by both together.

authentic information in regard to the circumces in which any of these were produced; nor we trace anywhere internal dissimilarities, ficient to prove even plausible conjectures as to several shares of the two dramatists. We dis-, it is true, in the later works of Fletcher, evi-e both of careless taste and of increasing al depravation; but the ethical faults had be-to show themselves in the very earliest pieces the joint series.—In virtue of the works thus rtainly apportioned, Beaumont and Fletcher acknowledged, all but universally, to stand, g our old dramatists, second to none but espeare. If their title to this honour is at all ted, it can be in favour of Ben Jonson only. dramas are more truly and finely poetical any others which their brilliant age produced, t only the noblest masterpieces of the great r; in the pathetic and romantic they often th almost everything that even he imagined; ey abound in scattered passages of the most iful and touching poetry. They wanted, er, not only Shakspeare's unrivalled success ceiving a drama as a whole, but also such and care in construction as that which is so able in Jonson.—Those who would easily hend both the strength and the weakness of exquisite poets, may learn both from a very f the dramas which belong to the earliest of their career. Such are Fletcher's pas-already named; the romantically beautiful of 'Philaster;' the harrowing but deeply g 'Maid's Tragedy;' the spirited though re-e 'King and No King;' and the lively bur-, 'The Knight of the Burning Pestle,' which es at once the chivalrous romances, and the r plays founded on them by Heywood and . More poetical, perhaps, than any of these, e Two Noble Kinsmen,' the authorship of is the most desperate of the unsolved riddles out of these works: Fletcher is allowed to written part of it, and many are convinced Shakspeare wrote the rest. Among the later belonging to Fletcher alone, were several ies of Intrigue, which, partly by reason of heatrical liveliness, partly, no doubt, because r moral grossness, were the greatest favour-n the corrupt stage after the Restoration. f these, 'Rule a Wife, and Have a Wife,' ps its place with a few necessary mutila-

[W.S.]

ETCHER, Richard, bishop of London, ather of the celebrated dramatic writer, 596. Giles, brother of bishop Fletcher, a ad ambassador to Russia, died 1610. His f the same name, author of a fine religious 1588-1623. Phineas, brother of the last d, author of an allegorical poem, &c., d. 1650.

FLEURANGES, R. De Lamark, Lord of, a marshal, dist. in the Italian wars, 1490-1557.

FLEUREAU, Basil, a French hist., 1620-80.

FLEURIEU, C. P., Claret, Count De, a ch officer and hydrographer, minister of ne under Louis XVI., and distinguished as nventor of the sea chronometer, 1738-1810.

FLEURY, A. H. De, a Fr. cardnl., 1653-1743.

FLEURY, Cl., a French historian, author of 'Ecclesiastical History,' in 20 volumes 4to, tters of the Israelites,' &c., 1640-1723.

FLEURY, W. F., Joly De, attorney-general to the parliament of Paris, distinguished for his collections of the parliament registers, &c., 1675-1756.

FLINDERS, Matthew, was born at Donington in Lincolnshire, about the year 1760. He was early sent to sea in the merchant service, but joined the royal navy afterwards; and in 1795 went to New Holland as midshipman in the same vessel in which George Bass was surgeon. His adventurous voyages with Bass have been noticed already. On returning to England he was promoted; and in 1801, as captain of the Investigator, 334 tons, sailed from England with a crew of 88 men, circumnavigated New Holland, and made accurate surveys in almost every part, contributing more than any other discoverer to our knowledge of this and the adjoining islands. He was accompanied by Mr. Robert Brown, one of the most distinguished naturalists of modern times, an astronomer, two painters, and a miner. His own ship being condemned, he left for England as passenger in a store ship, the Porpoise, and was wrecked on the N.E. coast, August 17, 1803. The Bridgewater, Capt. Palmer, and Cato of London, were in company; the latter also struck on the reef; but the former got over safely, and her captain pursued his course without rendering any assistance to the other ships' companies. Flinders, by his admirable arrangements, got the men landed upon a sandbank, a little raised above high tide. On the 26th, he left for Port Jackson, a distance of 750 miles, in a small open boat; reached in safety September 6th; and returned October 7th to the rescue of the crews, with a schooner of 29 tons, which was in very bad condition, but the only vessel he could procure. Two other vessels came with him, one for China, the other to return to Port Jackson. A part of the men sailed for England with Flinders in the small vessel, which reached Mauritius in safety, but was so ill conditioned as to be able to proceed no farther. Here the French authorities seized him, and detained him for six years, treating him with cruel severity. His health was so much undermined when he reached England in 1810, that he only survived four years; having succeeded, however, in completing an account of his voyages, in 2 vols. with maps. He died July, 1814, on the same day on which his work made its appearance. During his captivity, a French expedition, under Baudin, with whom he had before fallen in, had been sent out to survey the coast of New Holland, and it was generally believed that Flinders was kept a prisoner in order to enable Baudin to publish before him. This at least he did, and re-named all the points before named by Flinders and others—preceding observers were ignored, and the whole put forth as of Baudin's finding, though he discovered only about 50 leagues instead of nearly 1,000;—an instance of dishonest meanness happily of rare occurrence in any nation. [J.B.]

FLIPART, J. J., a French engraver, 1723-1782.

FLODOARD, a French annalist, 894-966.

FLOGEL, C. Fred., a German au., 1729-88.

FLOOD, Hy., an Irish orator, died 1791.

FLOREZ, H., a Spanish historian, 1701-1773.

FLORIAN, J. P. Claris De, a French fabulist and miscell. wr. of considerable note, 1755-1794.

FLORIDA-BLANCA, Fr. Ant. Monina, Count De, a Spanish statesman, 1730-1808.

FLORIO, J., an Italian grammarian, died 1625.
FLORIS, F., a Flemish painter, 1520-1590.
FLORUS, Roman governor of Judæa, 64-67.
FLORUS, D., a Latin poet and theol., 9th cent.
FLORUS, Lucius, a Latin historian, 1st cent.
FLOTWELL, C. Chr., a Germ. theol., d. 1759.
FLOWER, Benj., an Engl. politician, d. 1829.
FLOYER, Sir J., an English medical writer, an. of 'The Touchstone of Medicines,' 1649-1734.

FLUDD, Robert, an English physician and Rosicrucian philosopher, was the son of Sir Thomas Fludd, treasurer of war to Queen Elizabeth in France and the Low Countries, and lived 1574-1637. It is usual with biographers to style his works a farrago of nonsense, without considering that natural philosophy, as cultivated at the present day, had no existence in his time. Kepler and Gassendi, however, thought it worth while to write against him, and, what is curious, the former condemns the 'chemists, Hermetics, and Paracelsites,' in one breath, complaining that they speak in enigmas, and receive for philosophy the fables of poets, while it is the endeavour of the mathematicians to bring things to light. It is amusing to read in Fludd's 'Monochordium Mundi Symphoniacum,' or reply to Kepler, how he turns the tables by proving that mathematics themselves come from the soul, and are concealed under fables with all the wisdom of antiquity. Fludd was a genuine brother of the Rosy Cross, and a man of enthusiastic piety. The principle of his system is the recognition of two worlds in the universe, and the comprehension of all things in a grand harmony like that of the soul in the body. His works indeed are not likely to be read with patience by the scientific inquirers of the present day, but they will always be interesting as a study in the history of speculative philosophy. It is to be noted also that the Theosophists kept alive the spirit of free inquiry when the church and the metaphysical schools were alike intolerant of it. [E.R.]

FLURY, L. Noel, a Fr. economist, 1771-1836.
FOGGINI, P. F., an Italian scholar, 1713-83.
FOGLIETTI, U., an Ital. historian, 1518-1581.
FO-HI, the first emperor of China, date unkn.
FOINARD, Fr. M., a Fr. biblical wr., d. 1743.

FOIX. The counts of Foix date from the beginning of the 11th century; the most celebrated are—Raimond Roger, distinguished in the wars of Simon Montfort, died 1223. Gaston III., one of the heroes of Froissart, distinguished in the English wars, died 1391. Gaston IV., b. 1423, and declared successor to the kingdom of Arragon in 1455, died 1472. After him the counts of Foix are confounded with the kings of Navarre.

FOIX, F. De, a French prelate, 1504-1594.
FOIX, Gaston De, nephew of Louis XII., by his sister Marie, and commander of the French armies in Italy, b. 1489, killed at Ravenna 1512.
FOIX, Louis De, a French architect, 16th ct.
FOIX, M. A. De, a French Jesuit, 1627-1687.
FOIX, Odel De, a French general, died 1528
FOIX, P. De, archbishop of Toulouse, ambass. to Scotl., Venice, England, and Rome, 1528-1584.
FOIX, P. De, cardinal abp. of Arles, 1386-1464.
FOLARD, J. C., a Fr. mil. tactician, 1669-1752.
FOLCZ, John, a German poet, 15th century.
FOLENGO, G. B., an Italian commentator, and reformer of church discipline, 1499-1559.

FOLENGO, Theofilo, a burlesque Italy, born 1491, d. in a monastery of Pa

FOLEY, Sir Thomas, an English vice distinguished at Cape St. Vincent, the the Nile (where he led the British fleet tion), at Copenhagen, and late comm chief at Portsmouth, 1757-1833.

FOLIGNO, F. Frezzi Du, an It. poet

FOLKES, Martin, an English antiq philosopher, born 1690, successor of Sloane as president of the Royal Soci vice-president of the Society of Antiqua contributor to the Philosophical Transac author of numismatic tables, died 1754.

FOLLETT, Sir William Webb, a lawyer, was born at Thopsam, near Exet December, 1798. He exhibited an early of constitution so extreme, that it is said could hardly anticipate the feasibility of h ing eminence in any pursuit. As he however, he showed how vigorously the in capacities may rise and flourish in a with physical weakness. He studied College, Cambridge, where he took the M.A. in 1821. In the same year he co practice as a special pleader, and he was the bar in 1824, attaching himself to th circuit. Severe attacks of illness rende sary a careful economy of his strength, adjustment of the sedentary and active ments of the profession. His innate however, and careful husbanding of his led him by gradual and sure steps to pr leadership. He attached himself to the tive party, as represented by Sir Robert entered parliament as member for Exete He seldom spoke except in matters in was carefully prepared; and it has been practising lawyer so readily to obtain the house. When Sir Robert Peel took offic he became solicitor-general, and in 184 ceeded Sir Frederick Pollock as attorne The consumptive symptoms, to which he been liable, alarmingly increasing, he die June, 1845.

FONBLANQUE, John, an eminent l advocate of the Whigs, author of a 'T Equity,' originally published in 1793, 17

FONSECA, Ant. De, a Port. theol.,

FONSECA, Eleanora, Marchione lady of Naples, distinguished for her b rare mental endowments, born 1768, ex having espoused the republican cause, 17

FONSECA, J. R. De, a Sp. prelate, 1

FONSECA, Peter De, a Portugu professor of philosophy at Coimbra, a wards professor of theology at Evora, au. upon the Metaphysic of Aristotle,' &c., 1

FONTAINE, C., a French poet, 1515

FONTAINE, Jean De La, one of t of French literature, was born in 162 teau-Thierry in Champagne, where his superintendent of the royal forests. H teristic indolence showed itself from and his education was very imperfect. about twenty-two years old when his lit bition was awakened by the odes of from whose seriousness and dignity, he was soon diverted by the more congenia of such men as Rabelais. Succeeding to his father's office, he married, neglected his wife and child, and allowed his property to waste away before his eyes. One of Cardinal Mazarin's nieces, being banished to Chateau-Thierry, admired his verses, and carried him to Paris; and there, speedily welcomed into the best literary and aristocratic circles, he spent the last thirty-five years of his life. The first volume of his 'Contes' appeared in 1664; a second was added in 1671. These tales, though full of the fine touches of his genius, are grossly and unpardonably indecent. The twelve books of his 'Fables' were published in equal halves in 1668 and 1678. It is through them that La Fontaine is universally known.—With no originality of invention, very little depth of reflection, and a total incapacity of consecutive thinking, he is yet one of the most interesting and attractive of writers. He is an inimitable teller of small stories. His short flights of fancy, his minute strokes of observation, his transitions from brief moods of pathetic seriousness to flashes of the gayest wit, are all set off by a diction the most accurately and delicately refined, and breaking out occasionally into felicitous turns of novel expression. La Fontaine's personal character made him at once the pet and the laughing-stock of his friends and patrons. To him might be applied, with little injustice, the epithet wrongly thrown on Adam Smith, of 'an inspired idiot.' He was not indolent in mind, indolent to excess, and ignorant alike of the world and of the most ordinary affairs: he displayed a want of interest in important things, and a dreamy absorption in trifles, which are hardly to be understood or excused, unless they are accepted as tokens of strange intellectual weakness. Even from literature, the only thing with which he had any knowledge, he caught no spirit but such as lay within his own narrow sphere. Reading Plato in translations, and hearing passages of the philosopher read by Racine, he admired him enthusiastically as the most amusing of all writers; and once, while dozing in the midst of an animated theological discussion, he awoke to ask the company whether they thought that Augustine had as much wit as Rabelais. Later it had become clear that he was unfit to take charge of himself or his affairs, he was received as an inmate, and treated like an indulged child, in the house of Madame De La Sablière, a lady of rank. His patroness spoke of her three animals, the dog, the cat, and La Fontaine. After this lady's death another friend cared for him in a similar fashion. In 1692, during a dangerous illness, his confessor prevailed on him to make a public declaration of repentance for having published the 'Contes;' and he was also induced, though not till after long resistance, to burn a comedy which he had written, and as to which we do not know whether it was or was not morally bad. After this his chief literary employment was the versifying of the Latin hymns of the church. He died in 1695. [W.S.]

FONTAINE, N., a French historian, 1625-1709.

FONTANA, A., an Ital. gem engraver, d. 1587.

FONTANA, Aug., an Italian jurist, 17th cent.

FONTANA, C., an Italian architect, 1634-1714.

FONTANA, Dominico, an Italian architect and engineer, 1543-1607. His two sons, Julius and John, also dist. as architects, the latter more particularly for hydraulic engineering, 1540-1614.

FONTANA, Felix, an Italian naturalist and experimental philosopher, celebrated for his anatomical figures executed in wax, &c., 1730-1805. His brother, Gregory, a mathem. wr., 1735-1803.

FONTANA, Fr., a Neapol. astrono., d. 1656.

FONTANA, F. L., an It. cardinal, 1750-1822.

FONTANA, G., an Ital. astrono., 1645-1719.

FONTANA, M., an Ital. mathema., 1746-1808.

FONTANELLA, F., a Ven. Hebraist, 1768-1827.

FONTANELLE, J. G. D., a Fr. an., 1737-1812.

FONTANELLI, A. V. De, an Italian statesman and man of letters, member of the Junta of Modena, and distinguished for his practical abilities in the administration, 1706-1777.

FONTANES, L. M. De, a French orator, poet, and political writer, senator under Buonaparte, and privy council. under Louis XVIII., 1761-1821.

FONTANEY, J. De, a French miss., last cent.

FONTENAI, P. Cl., a French Jesuit, au. of the 9th, 10th, and 11th volumes of the 'History of the Gallican Church,' begun by Longueval, 1683-1742.

FONTENAY, J. B., a Fr. painter, 1654-1715.

FONTENAY, L. A., De Bonafons, a French Jesuit, auth. of a Dict. of Artists, &c., 1737-1806.

FONTENELLE, Bernard Le Boivier De, a distinguished literary savant and mathematician, called by Voltaire the most universal genius of the age of Louis XIV., was born at Rouen 1657, and died in 1757, on the eve of completing his centenary. He is best known in this country by his 'Conversations on a Plurality of Worlds,' and his 'Dialogues of the Dead;' while in France, his 'History of the Academy of Sciences' is regarded as a masterpiece. His works form 5 vols. in 8vo, published 1825. The mother of Fontenelle was sister of the celebrated Corneille.

FONTENU, L. F. De, a French archæologist, auth. of memoirs on numismatics, &c., 1667-1759.

FONTI, B., an Italian philologist, 1445-1513.

FOOT, Jesse, an English surgeon, author of the 'Life of John Hunter,' &c., 1744-1827.

FOOTE, Sir E. J., a naval officer, 1767-1833.

FOOTE, Samuel, born about 1721 at Truro in Cornwall of an ancient family, was educated at Worcester College, Oxford. His father was member for Tiverton, Devonshire; his mother heiress of the Dinely and Goodere families. Young Foote was designed for the law, and had chambers in the Temple, but soon relinquished the study; married, entered fashionable life, and lost his fortune by gambling. Driven by necessity to the stage, he ventured upon the characters of 'Othello' and 'Fondlewife,' in the latter gaining some reputation. In 1747 he became manager of the Haymarket theatre, performing there the joint part of actor and author. The first piece he produced was called 'Diversions of the Morning,' and exhibited well-known characters in real life, of whose peculiarities he proved himself to be an admirable mimic. Notwithstanding legal objections to this kind of stage caricature, Foote contrived to continue his performances for many years, and even obtained, through the duke of York, a patent of the theatre for life, running from the 15th May to the 15th September in every year. On a party of pleasure with the duke and his friends he had previously the misfortune to break his leg, an accident which necessitated its amputation. On the decline of his health, he disposed of his patent to Mr. Colman, on the understanding that he was to receive £1,600 per annum, and a stipulated sum whenever he chose to perform. A paralytic stroke prevented him from availing himself of this privilege more than two or three times. He afterwards resided at Brighton, and died at Dover, with an attack of palsy, 21st October, 1777. He wrote, besides his various mimetic entertainments, twenty dramas of small literary merit, but full of vivid sketches of character. His style he seems to have borrowed from Molière; but his humour was undoubtedly original, and indeed peculiar. [J.A.H.]

FOPPA, W., an Italian painter, died 1492.

FOPPENS, J. F., a Flemish critic, 1689-1761.

FORBES, ALEXANDER, Lord Forbes of Pitsligo, the supposed prototype of Scott's baron of Bradwardine in Waverley, commander of a troop of horse in the rebellion of 1745, and author of 'Moral and Philosophical Essays,' died 1762.

FORBES, SIR C., a Scottish Indian merchant and M.P., distinguished for his advocacy of 'Justice to India,' and for his private benevolence, 1773-1849.

FORBES, DUNCAN, a Scottish judge, distinguished at the time of the rebellion, 1685-1747.

FORBES, JAMES, an. of 'Oriental Memoirs,' and fellow of the Royal and Antiq. Societies, 1749-1813.

FORBES, PATRICK, bishop of Aberdeen, author of a 'Commentary on the Apocalypse,' 1564-1613. JOHN, his son, professor of divinity and ecclesiastical history in King's College, 1593-1648.

FORBES, R., a burlesque poet, d. about 1783.

FORBES, WM., first bp. of Edinb., 1585-1634.

FORBES, SIR W., author of 'The Life and Writings of Dr. Beattie,' founder, in conjunction with Sir J. H. Blair, of the first bank in Edinburgh, and a member of the literary club attended by Johnson, Reynolds, Burke, and Garrick, born at Pitsligo, 1739, died 1806.

FORCELLINI, ÆGIDIO, an Italian lexicographer, the pupil and fellow-labourer of Facciolati in the great Latin dictionary, 1688-1768.

FORD, JOHN, one of the best of our old English dramatists, was a contemporary of Beaumont and Fletcher, having been born in 1586. He was the second son of a country gentleman in Devonshire, and became nominally a barrister. In regard to the details of his life hardly anything certain has been discovered; and as to the date of his death it is only conjectured that it did not happen before 1640. Ford is an exquisite master of rhythmic melody, and abounds in touches of sweet description. While, likewise, he has an insatiable fondness for representing incidents profoundly terrible, his success in the filling up lies, not in the strength which was required for fitly embodying such scenes, but in a melancholy and wailing pathos, in which he is more effective than any other play-writer of his age. His genius, truly poetical, is lyric rather than dramatic. His earliest piece, acted in 1629, was the romantic play 'The Lover's Melancholy,' which contains his famous description of the nightingale. His manner, both of feeling and of expression, may be well gathered from that work and his 'Broken Heart;' and some of the most touching passages in our poetry may be read in his revolting play, ''Tis Pity She's a Whore.' [W.S.]

FORD, SIR J., an hydraulic engineer, 1605-70.

FORD, SIMON, a divine and poet, 1619-1699.

FORDUN, J. DE, a Scotch historian, 14th cent.

FORDYCE, DAVID, a Scotch writer on education and morals, 1711-1751. His brother, JAMES, a minister, and author of poems and sermons, &c., 1720-1796. His second brother, WILLIAM, a physician, 1724-1792. GEORGE, son of the latter, also a physician, and writer on physiology and medicine, 1736-1802.

FOREST, JOHN, a French painter, 1636-1712.

FOREST, P. DE LA, archbp. of Rouen, 1314-61.

FOREST, P. VAN, a Dutch med. wr., 1522-97.

FORESTI, J. P., an Ital. annalist, 1434-1520.

FORESTI, ANT., an Ital. historian, died 1699.

FORESTIER, ANT., a French poet, 15th cent.

FORESTIER, H., gen. of La Vendée, 1775-1809.

FORGEOT, N. J., a French dram., 1758-1798.

FORKEL, J. N., a German writer on the History and Theory of Music, 1749-1818.

FORMAGE, J. C. CÆSAR, a French fabulist, and Latin poet, 1749-1808.

FORNARIS, FABRICIUS DE, a Neapolitan dramatic writer and actor, 1560-1637.

FORREST, TH., an English navigator, d. 1803.

FORSKAL, PETER, a Swed. natural., 1736-63.

FORSTER, F., a German savant, 1709-1796.

FORSTER, GEORGE, an Eastern traveller in the service of the East India Company, died 1792.

FORSTER, JOHN, a Germ. comment., d. 1613.

FORSTER, JOHN, a Germ. divine, 1495-1566.

FORSTER, JOHN REINHOLD, an eminent naturalist, geographer, and philologist, born at Dirschau in Polish Prussia, accompanied Captain Cook as naturalist in his second voyage, author of a 'History of Voyages and Discoveries in the North,' &c.; he was a distinguished linguist and literary savant, 1729-1798. His son, JOHN GEORGE ADAM, of a similar genius, and author of 'A Voyage Round the World,' &c., 1754-1794.

FORSTER, N., an English divine, author of 'Reflections on the Antiquity, Government, Arts, and Sciences in Egypt,' &c., 1717-1757.

FORSTER, V., a German law-writer, 16th ct.

FORSTNER, CHR., a Bav. jurist, 1598-1667.

FORSYTH, ALEXANDER JOHN, A.M., LL.D., a Scottish clergyman and experimenter in chemistry, especially in fulminating powders, which led to his discovery of the percussion lock, 1769-1843.

FORSYTH, WM., a Scot. horticul., 1757-1804.

FORT, FRANCIS LE, a native of Geneva, who rose to be prime minister of Peter the Great, and commander of the Russian forces, died 1699.

FORTESCUE, SIR JOHN. See ALAND.

FORTESQUE, WILLIAM, master of the rolls in 1741, an intimate friend of Pope, and the other writers of that day.

FORTUNATUS, a French prelate, died 609.

FOSBROOKE, REV. TH. DUDLEY, F.S.A., a distinguished antiquarian writer and Saxon scholar, author of 'The Economy of Monastic Life,' a poem, 1796, 'British Monachism,' 2 vols. 8vo, 1799, 'History of Gloucestershire,' 'History of the City of Gloucester,' 'the Wye Tour,' 'Encyclopædia of Antiquities,' &c., 1770-1842.

FOSCARI, FRANCIS, doge of Venice, accused of treason and deposed 1423. A Venetian senator and statesman of the same name and family, distinguished for his patronage of the arts, 1704-90.

FOSCARINI, M., a Ven. historian, 1632-1692.
FOSCARINI, MARK, of the same family as the preceding, a savant and doge of Venice, 1695-1762.
FOSCARINI, P. A., a Venetian mathematician, author of a 'Letter upon the System of Copernicus,' the publication of which gave the signal for the persecution of Galilei, 1580-1616.
FOSCOLO, UGO, an Italian poet, dramatic writer, and literary savant, in the latter years of his life resident in England as a political exile, where he became a contributor to the Reviews, 1776-1827.
FOSSATI, DAV. ANT., an Italian painter, born 1708. His brother, GEORGE, an architect, and writer on professional subjects, born 1710.
FOSSATI, J. F., an Italian historian, d. 1653.
FOSSE, CHARLES DE LA, a French painter, 1640-1716. His nephew, ANTHONY, a tragic writer, 1653-1708.
FOSSE, P. TH. DU, a French histor., 1634-98.
FOSTER, H., an English navigator, 1797-1831.
FOSTER, JAMES, D.D., a minister of the independents, celebrated for his eloquence and popularity as a preacher, and for his theological and religious writings, especially his 'Defence of Revelation' in answer to Tindal, 1697-1753.
FOSTER, JOHN, a distinguished classical scholar and churchman, author of an 'Essay on the Nature of Accents and Quantity,' 1731-1773.
FOSTER, JOHN, was born 17th September, 1770, in the parish of Halifax, England. His father, who rented a small farm, endeavoured to add to his scanty means by employing the intervals of agricultural labour in weaving. John was early trained to the same employment, and till the age of fourteen he was occupied in spinning wool to a thread by the hand wheel. At that period he entered into the regular service of a master manufacturer, but he always entertained a strong distaste to manual labour. An inveterate habit of mental abstraction led him constantly to live in an ideal world of his own; and as his weaving, in consequence of his mind being engrossed with a different train of thoughts, was too often executed in a slovenly and unworkman-like style, his employer was dissatisfied, and discharged him from the service. His friends, who knew the piety, the great intellectual endowments, and literary taste of the youth, urged him to direct his views towards the ministry. His parents, who were a very religious couple, and connected with a small baptist church at Wainsgate, had instructed him carefully in the fundamental principles of the gospel as well as in the denominational peculiarities of their own sect, and he had, in accordance with his own ardent wish, been admitted a member of the baptist church at the age of seventeen. In resolving now to devote his life to ministerial work, he of course contemplated exercising his gifts within the pale of the baptist communion, and accordingly finished his course of preparatory study at the Baptist College, Bristol. During the whole of his college curriculum he exhibited the same mental qualities by which he was so much distinguished in after life—an irrepressible curiosity to examine everything, great decision of character, an ambition of intellectual superiority, and a morbid desire to impart an air of novelty and freshness to old and familiar subjects, by striking out into original paths of illustration, or clothing them in the garb of an unwonted phraseology. He commenced his career as a preacher at Newcastle-upon-Tyne on 5th August, 1792, whence, after a brief engagement of three months, he went on invitation to undertake the pastorate of a baptist meeting in Swift's Alley, Dublin. In that place he continued to minister for three years, and at the expiry of that term he returned to England, being elected minister of the general baptist church of Chichester. But, unfortunately, his style of preaching, though powerful, and to an intellectual audience a great treat, was little fitted to make an impression on the popular mind. The congregation, small at the first, gradually diminished under his superintendence, and at length became extinct. Through the kindly offices of his friend Mr. Hughes, secretary to the British and Foreign Bible Society, Foster was employed for a while on a local mission, and at length was intrusted with the board and education of twenty Africans who had been brought to this country to be trained as future missionaries in preaching the gospel in their own benighted country. This engagement having terminated, Mr. Foster resumed his pastoral duties by settling in 1800 at Downend, a country village in the neighbourhood of Bristol, where there was a small baptist community, and where he was introduced to Miss Maria Snooke, the 'friend' to whom he addressed his 'Essays,' and who at a subsequent period became his wife. At the end of five years he accepted an invitation from a congregation in Frome, Somersetshire, the members of which, though few, were for the most part educated persons, and prepared to appreciate the talented and philosophical discourses of Foster, although many of them through the influence of their former pastor, had become unfortunately tinged with Arian principles. It was during his ministry in this place that Foster published his celebrated 'Essays,' and became the principal contributor to the Eclectic Review, the articles for which formed his staple or rather exclusive composition for thirteen years. A glandular affection of the neck, which increased to an enormous size, obliged him to discontinue his public labours in the pulpit. He thenceforth employed himself chiefly in preparing works for the press, the chief of which were his 'Discourse on Missions,' and his 'Essay on the Evils of Popular Ignorance.' Mr. Foster, having greatly improved in his health, acceded in 1822 to the pressing invitation of some friends to deliver a fortnightly lecture at Broadmeadow chapel, Bristol, and this office he performed till Mr. Hall's settlement in town led to its cessation. Mr. Foster was a man of rather extreme views both in civil and religious politics. But he was eminently a man of God, and died on the 14th October, 1839, in the peace and joy of believing. [R.J.]
FOSTER, SIR M., an Engl. judge, 1689-1763.
FOSTER, MARK, a wr. on trigonometry, 17th c.
FOSTER, SAM., an English mathem., d. 1652.
FOSTER, WM., a writer on proportion, 17th ct.
FOTHERBY, M., an Engl. divine, 1559-1619.
FOTHERGILL, GEO., an. of sermons, 1705-60.
FOTHERGILL, JOHN, a med. au., 1712-1780.
FO-THOU-TCHING, a celeb. Buddhist, d. 349.
FOUCHE, JOSEPH. See OTRANTO.
FOUCHER, P., a French archæologist, auth. of 'Researches in the Persian Religion,' 1704-1778.
FOUCHIER, BERT., a Dutch paint., 1609-74.

FOUGEROUX DE BONDAROY, A. D., a French archæologist and naturalist, 1782-1798.

FOULIS, R. and A., Scotch printers, celeb. for the beauty of their classics, died 1774 and 1776.

FOULON, J. F., one of the first victims of the French revolution; he was named minister of finance in place of Necker, 12th July, 1789, and having fled on the taking of the Bastile, he was captured and hung by the people a few days after.

FOUNTAINE, A., an Eng. numismat., d. 1753.

FOUQUET, H., a French physician, 1727-1806.

FOUQUET, J. F., a Fr. missionary, 1690-1720.

FOUQUET, N., finance minister to Louis XIV., died after nineteen years' captivity, 1615-1680.

FOUQUIER-TINVILLE, ANT. QUENTIN, the public accuser of the revolutionary tribunal of Paris, remarkable for the atrocious cruelty with which he exercised the terrible power confided to him against all parties, born in Picardy 1747, executed after the fall of Robespierre, 1794.

FOUQUIERES, J., a Flem. painter, 1580-1659.

FOURCROY, ANTOINE FRANCOIS DE, born at Paris 1755, died 1809. The descendant of a once wealthy family, Fourcroy was the son of a poor apothecary, and after many vicissitudes was enabled to engage in the study of the medical profession under the auspices of the distinguished anatomist Vic. d'Azyr. Under Bucquet he studied chemistry, and ultimately succeeded Macquer in the chair of chemistry at the Jardin du Roi, which he held for twenty-five years with increasing popularity. During the heat of the French revolution, Fourcroy possessed considerable power, which he exercised in promoting improvements in the systems of scientific education. He took an active part in the institution of the polytechnic and normal schools, the museum of natural history, the central schools, and in the re-establishment of the universities and colleges, which had been destroyed by the convention. His most celebrated work was his System of Chemistry, which at one time had a great reputation, and was translated into English. In most of his experiments he had associated with him his pupil Vauquelin, whom he had the merit of training and patronising. He was twice married, and left a son and daughter; but he left no fortune, and his two sisters were afterwards supported by the faithful Vauquelin. [R.D.T.]

FOURCROY-DE-RAMECOURT, CHARLES RENE DE, a Fr. officer and engineer, 1718-1791.

FOURIER, CHARLES, born at Besançon in 1772, died in Paris 1837. In recent times a new order of political speculations has obtained a hearing, and been confessed important,—speculations affecting the fundamental principles on which modern societies are constructed. Struck by the evil inherent in the fact that the multitudes are mere 'hewers of wood and drawers of water,' ST. SIMON, ROBERT OWEN, and others, have sought for new organizations, and declared war against the principle of competition, or 'selfishness,' as the basis of a right social fabric. Of these remarkable inquirers, Charles Fourier is the most original and profound: practical by nature, and eminently sagacious, he took a more complete view of our human springs of action; and proposed a scheme that might be tried and corrected by experiments on a scale of sufficient moderation to carry no menace of revolution. describe here either the arrange philosophy of the Phalange; but ju the avowal that Fourier's theoretic in conflict with our highest concept ing the order of the Moral Univers lanx has been put partially to p in America. The experiment has n in the fullest sense; nevertheless, have read the lesson involved in th resolved to try again. The Fourieris the schools in France, because of wl the cry of Socialism was recently ra aim to overthrow the Republic: very u in so far as they were concerned, fo desired nor threatened confusion.

FOURIER, J. B. G., a French n and physician, distinguished for his moirs and historical preface, contri famous 'Description of Egypt,' whe panied the expedition of Napoleon, 1

FOURIER, P., a religious reform

FOURNEL, J. F., a French jurist

FOWLER, CHR., an Engl. purita

FOWLER, EDW., bp. of Glouceste

FOWLER, JOHN, an English prir

FOWLER, TH., a medical author,

FOX, CHARLES, an English artis

FOX, CHARLES JAMES, was bo Conduit-Street, London, on 24th J He was the third son of the Right Fox, created Lord Holland in 1763. a frank, lively, popular child, beca oracle in his infancy, and was s dulged. He obtained the rudiment cation at a preparatory school at kept by a Frenchman, which he ent passing to Eton two years afterwar when he was but fourteen years o indulged him with a gay tour o nent, which not only interrupted l but is said to have fostered the dis which stained his early career. On studied at Hertford College, Oxfor travelled abroad; and on his return, not twenty years old, he found himse parliament for Medhurst. In 1770 junior lord of the admiralty, under He remained, with an interval of connection with the North ministr when he was removed somewhat co and the ground of his dismissal has b to rash and presumptuous minister mitting his colleagues to a policy t what he himself afterwards held. O a political necessity that he should jo tion, and in the prosecution of the n ing to the American war, he found hostility congenial to the sentiments in his mind. Following out these joined the Rockingham administra signed when the death of its leader Lord Shelburne. Lord North and h other side by side in opposition, might work together in office, and coalition was made which has given for so much censure; not because i tion, but because instead of uniting t who were near each other in sent bond of a common harmony of purpose, it was an attempt to unite those who were opposite by the tie of common hostility to the defeated party. Fox's connection with the ministry, nominally under the duke of Portland, and the defeat of his India bill, suggested by the growing jealousy of the prerogative of the crown, with the triumph of Fox's rival, young Pitt, are conspicuous and well-known historical events, which can only receive a passing reference. In the regency question he was evidently led by personal predilections to maintain that the office belonged to the heir apparent, and was not at the disposal of parliament. Since the commencement of the French revolution, we must date a great change in Fox's nature, arising from the serious reflections produced by events so momentous. He had been leading such a life of thoughtless dissipation as generally deadens the moral qualities as well as the intellectual perceptions. But he was one among the few who could preserve through such orgies 'the whiteness of his soul.' His mind was justly characterized by Grattan's reference to its 'careless grandeur,' and there never lived a statesman whose character is so free of sordid motives, narrow views, or paltry objects. His hearty rebuff of Napoleon's insinuation that his rival had countenanced assassinative plots, was characteristic of his candid, honest nature. It is strange that of one who was so much revered by his party and his personal friends, there should be no good biography, for the collection lately edited by Lord John Russell, though it passed through competent hands both of Lord Holland and Allen, professes only to afford materials for a of the great leader. The reason may, perhaps, because while we know Fox to have foreseen the general good of the community, and not sonal aggrandizement, or the triumph of a ty, should be the object of a minister, yet own place in history is that of the champion party rather than of a policy. In 1797 formally seceded from parliamentary action, lived a life of literary retirement, in which he te his historical fragment on the reign of James He returned to public life in 1801. In 1806 formed the real leader of that Whig ministry minally headed by Lord Grenville; but the nisterial career, of which so many high hopes re formed, was doomed to be brief, and he died the 13th of September, 1806. [J.H.B.]

FOX, Edward, a diplomatist in the service of Cardinal Wolsey, made bp. of Hereford, d. 1536.

FOX, Francis, an English divine, died 1738.

FOX, George, founder of the Society of friends, first saw the light at Drayton, Leicestershire, in the year 1624. His father was a weaver, who bestowed the greatest pains to instruct his son in the principles of revealed truth, and to impress his youthful mind with impressions of piety. Having entered the service of a grazier, young Fox was for several years employed in tending sheep, an occupation which both gratified his natural love of solitude and nursed his contemplative enthusiastic turn of mind. When sixteen years of age he conceived that he was honoured with a special commission from heaven; and accordingly, in preparing for the work to which he was thus miraculously called, he abandoned business for five years, lived entirely in the woods on such wild plants and vegetables as he found there, but practising long and frequent fastings, with many other austerities; his days devoted to religious meditation and his nights passed in sleepless excitement. In 1648 Fox emerged from this wild and solitary life to enter on the active discharge of his mission. His first appearances were made in Manchester, where taking his station in the public streets, he attracted vast crowds of the people around him, and was several times imprisoned as a disturber of the public peace. Most of the large towns of England he visited to propagate his doctrines. Great patience, self-denial, and at the same time confidence in the truth of his principles, distinguished him,—for everywhere he was exposed to the rude and boisterous assaults of the populace; and in London he was arrested and carried into the presence of Cromwell, who, however, on due examination dismissed him, being fully satisfied of the harmless tendency of his principles and conduct. Nay, the Protector frequently interposed to rescue him from the county magistrates. In the course of his itinerant ministry through England, he was successful in gaining numbers of proselytes, particularly at Derby, where his followers first received the name of Quakers, from the tremulous tones in which they loved to speak, and from their calling on all to 'tremble at the name of the Lord.' After marrying the widow of Judge Fell, who had hospitably entertained him during his journey through Wales, Fox meditated a voyage of proselytizing in America and the West Indies. After two years' absence he returned to England, where he was subjected to renewed trials, was imprisoned, tried by jury, and condemned for refusing the oaths of supremacy and abjuration. His sentence was indefinite imprisonment. But after a year's confinement he was released by the unanimous decision of the King's Bench. On recovering his liberty he travelled through Holland and various parts of Europe, diffusing his principles, and at length worn out by a life of incessant toil and austerities, he returned to England to spend the remainder of his days in retirement. With all his peculiarities he was a pious man, well versed in the Scriptures, and had an extraordinary gift in prayer. He died in 1690. [R.J.]

FOX, Hen., the first Lord Holland, and father of the celebrated statesman, born 1705; member of parliament for Hendon, 1735; secretary at war, 1746-1756; raised to the peerage 1763, d. 1774.

FOX, John, author of the 'Martyrology,' was a native of Boston, Lincolnshire, where he was born 1517. Early distinguished by his classical acquirements, he was elected fellow of Magdalene College, and directed his studies for entering the church. But having evinced a predilection for the reformed opinions, he was on a charge of heresy being preferred against him, expelled from the university, and deprived of his fellowship. His character for learning, however, procured him the patronage of several noble families, and amongst others the duchess of Richmond engaged him as tutor to the children of her brother, the earl of Surrey, then a state prisoner in the Tower. Edward VI. also befriended him, and restored him to his fellowship. On the accession of Mary, Fox, like a number of other reformers, sought an asylum on the continent, and after many wanderings he settled at Basle, as corrector of the press in an extensive printing office in that city. When Elizabeth ascended the throne, Fox hastened to return to his own country, and through the powerful influence of Cecil, who was his friend, he was appointed to a prebend in the cathedral of Salisbury, and might have obtained preferment, but for his conscientious scruples about some matters of ceremony. His celebrated 'Book of Martyrs' attests his hatred of popery, and his intense admiration of the principles of the reformation. He died in 1587, at the age of sixty-nine, leaving behind him a high reputation for piety and learning. [R.J.]

FOX, LUKE, an English navigator, 17th cent.

FOX, MURILLO, a Spanish savant, 16th cent.

FOX, RICHARD, a statesman and favourite of Henry VII., successively bishop of Exeter, Bath and Wells, Durham and Winchester, distinguished in the latter years of his life as a patron of learning, born about 1466, died 1528.

FOX, STEPHEN, a minister of state after the restoration, first projector of Chelsea Hospital as a home for retired soldiers, 1627-1716.

FOY, L. S. DE, a learned Fr. ecclesias., d. 1788.

FOY, MAXIMILIAN SEBASTIAN, a French statesman and soldier, one of the most celebrated orators of the opposition under the restoration; author of MSS. from which a 'History of the Peninsular War' has been compiled, 1775-1825.

FRA-BARTOLOMEO, an It. paint., 1469-1517.

FRACASTOR, J., an Ital. astronom., 1483-1553.

FRA-DIAVOLO, the pseudonym of Michael Pozzo, a leader of outlaws in Calabria, exec. 1806.

FRA-GIOVANNI, an Ital. painter, 1387-1455.

FRAMERY, NICH. STEPH., a French comp. of the operas-comiques, and dram. wr., 1746-1810.

FRANC, M. L., a French poet, died 1460.

FRANCES, ST., fndr. of the Collatines, d. 1440.

FRANCESCA, P. DELLA, an Italian painter, the supposed teacher of Bramante, 1397-1484.

FRANCHI, J., an Italian sculptor, 1730-1806.

FRANCIA. FRANCESCO RAIBOLINI, commonly called FRANCIA, from the name of his master, was born at Bologna, about 1450. He was brought up a goldsmith, and did not take up painting until he was nearly forty years of age, but at this time he executed some important works. He carried on both professions, and made a species of parade of his accomplishments by signing himself Aurifex, jeweller, on his pictures, and Pictor, painter, on his jewellery.—Francia was a great painter, indeed a consummate master in the style of art prevailing in his own day; in that exact and rigid manner in which nature is scrupulously copied without any license of generalization: he is perhaps the highest representative in a technical view of the quattrocento school, that properly signified by the modern misnomer preraphaelite. Francia's large picture in the National Gallery is a capital example of this early style, the second or Florentine manner of Raphael himself, which Francia had some share in forming. He died at Bologna, 6th January, 1518.—(Vasari, Vite dei Pittori, &c.; Calvi, Memorie della Vita de di Francescoa Raibolini, &c. Bologna, 1812.) [R.N.W.]

FRANCIA, DON GASPAR RODRIGUEZ DE, commonly called DR. FRANCIA, and known as the dictator of Paraguay, was born at Assomçion, in that province, 1757, and began his career as a barrister.—In 1810, when the Spanish provinces of the River Plate rebelled against the authority of the viceroy, Francia was already known for his inflexible honesty and rare talents, in a country where the judges themselves were openly corrupt, and the policy of the Spanish government had kept the people in the grossest barbarism and political ignorance. The Buenos Ayreans having erected a new central government (which only declared its independence of the Spanish crown in 1816), made an attack on Paraguay, and the latter, repelling its invaders, proceeded to debate the question of allegiance to Spain in any form whatever. The influence of Francia prevailing, the province declared its absolute independence, and appointed him secretary of a triumvirate; from which post, by the year 1815, he had risen to the sole dictatorship, which he retained till his death in 1840. His marked policy in refusing all intercourse with his neighbours during this period, and the complication of circumstances in the River Plate, has given his name as much notoriety in Europe, as the heartless tyranny which he is accused of having exercised in domestic affairs. In regard to the former, it would be easy to show that his views were dictated by sound statesmanship; for by all evidence, down to the fall of Rosas, a more fickle and profligate class of people does not exist than those ambitious of dominion in the province of Buenos Ayres; and the dream of Francia's life, a political and commercial treaty with England, as the preliminary of any intercourse with the neighbouring states, was the only means of saving his people from the same anarchy. As to the latter of these charges, Sir Woodbine Parish, who accuses Francia of 'systematic selfishness,' and declares his belief that 'a more bloody and unscrupulous tyrant never existed,' himself writes: —'It had been supposed that when Francia died, Paraguay would have again joined the confederation of the provinces of the Rio de la Plata, but as yet (1852), that is not the case; and it would appear that there is a party there not only ambitious of maintaining their independence, but, what is still more extraordinary, disposed to continue a system of isolation and tyranny little short of that established by Francia.' The fact is, with all their ignorance, the Paraguayans understand results, and there are circumstances in which mercy itself must seem cruel. Francia with his own head and hands preserved order in Paraguay for twenty-five years, in which period the neighbouring state of Buenos Ayres had changed its government, amid scenes of turbulence and bloodshed, nearly forty times! [E.R.]

FRANCIS I., emperor of Germany, born 1708, exchanged his own duchy of Lorraine against that of Tuscany 1735; married Maria Theresa 1736; emperor of Germany, after a struggle of five years with the elector of Bavaria, 1747; died 1765. He had six children: among these were Joseph, who succeeded him as Joseph II., and Marie Antoinette. FRANCIS II., born 1768; succeeded his father, Leopold II., 1792; signed the treaty of Campo Formio in the war of the French revolution 1797; recommenced hostilities 1799; treaty of Luneville 1802; coalition against France and battle of Austerlitz 1805; compelled by Napoleon to abandon the imperial dignity of Germany, and took the title of Francis I., emp. of Austria, 1806; d. 1835.

FRANCIS I., king of France, born 1494, succeeded Louis XII. after having married his daughter 1515; won the battle of Marignano 1515, signed a treaty of peace in regard to Italy 1516; advanced his pretensions to the empire at the death of Maximilian 1519; met Henry the VIII. at the Field of the Cloth of Gold 1520; commencement of hostilities with Charles V. 1521, and with Henry VIII. 1522; lost the battle of Pavia, and taken prisoner 1525; restored to liberty by the treaty of Madrid 1526; alliance with Henry VIII., and their joint declaration of war against the emperor 1527-28; signed the peace of Cambrai 1529; persecution of the Vaudois commenced 1544; died 1547. FRANCIS II., born 1544, succeeded his father Henry II. 1559, died 1560.

FRANCIS I., duke of Lorraine, b. 1517, suc. 1544, d. 1545. For FRANCIS II., see Francis II. of Ger.

FRANCIS, k. of the two Sicilies, rgnd. 1825-30.

FRANCIS, duke of Brittany, the first of the name reigned 1442-1450; the second, 1458-1488.

FRANCIS, duke of Modena, the first 1610-1658; the second 1660-1694; the third 1698-1749.

FRANCIS, ANNE, a learned Eng. lady, d. 1800.

FRANCIS, C. J., a Fr. engraver, 1717-1769.

FRANCIS, J., a French savant, 1722-1791.

FRANCIS, PHILIP, a classical translator, tragedian, and political writer; rector of Barrow, and chaplain of Chelsea College, died 1773. His son SIR PHILIP FRANCIS, a political writer, distinguished by his opposition to Warren Hastings, and his Whig principles, also as one of the reputed authors of the Letters of Junius, 1740-1818.

FRANCIS, PHŒBUS, kg. of Navarre, 1479-83.

FRANCIS, ROMAIN, a Flem. architect, d. 1735.

FRANCIS, SAINT. The Roman Calendar contains five saints of this name.—1. JEAN BERNARDON, commonly called FRANCIS OF ASSISE, founder of the order of mendicant friars named after him, was born 1182, and relinquishing the commercial pursuits to which he was brought up, devoted himself to poverty and self-mortification, and to the preaching of the gospel. His reputation for sanctity drew a great number of disciples around him, to whom he gave the first rules of their order in 1209, engaging them to vows of poverty and submission. Between this period and his death, which took place at Assise, in 1226, he founded many monasteries on the continent, and even travelled into Egypt to convert the Sultan Meleddin. In consequence of his habits of abstraction, he had several visions of spiritual symbols. He was canonized by Gregory IX. in 1230.—2. The next in order of time is an illiterate ascetic named FRANCIS OF PAULO, founder of the Minims, or lowest religious order, born in Calabria, 1416, died at the convent of Plessis-du-Parc, 1507. Little is related of him except his solitary life and abstinence, and if he rivalled Francis of Assise in austerity, he was certainly far below him in usefulness.—3. FRANCIS OF BORGIA, a Spanish nobleman and courtier of the reign of Charles V., turned to a religious life by the solemn circumstances attending the funeral of the Empress Isabella, after which he became a disciple of Ignatius Loyola, and was appointed by him to preach the gospel in Spain and Portugal, and finally succeeded him as chief of the Order. He is the author of many ascetic writings, and contributed much to the perfection of the organization of the Jesuits. Francis of Borgia died at Rome in 1572, and was canonized by Clement IX. in 1671.—4. FRANCIS OF SALES, born of a noble family in the neighbourhood of Geneva, 1567, and first distinguished by the reclamation of the protestants in the neighbouring valleys. On the death of the bishop of Geneva, Francis of Sales succeeded him, and redoubled his zeal for the reform of the diocese and the monasteries. To further his benevolent designs, he instituted, in connection with Madam de Chantal, the Order of the Visitation at Annecy, in 1610. He died in 1622, after a life devoted to works of charity, and was canonized 1665. His religious works are highly esteemed, especially his 'Treatise on the Love of God,' and 'Introduction to a Devout Life.'—5. FRANCIS XAVIER, surnamed the 'Apostle of the Indies,' born at the castle of Xavier, in Navarre, 1506, began his mission at Goa, 1542, and died in one of the Chinese islands, 1552. He was the intimate friend and disciple of Loyola, and was for some time professor of philosophy at the college of Beauvais. He was canonized 1622, and his 'Letters' published at Paris in 1631.—Each of these 'Saints' exhibits the spirit of enthusiasm in a different form, and the most pleasing to contemplate is that of Francis of Sales. In Francis of Assise it affected a species of insanity, and aimed at dominion. The friars of his order were at last a voluptuous and lazy body. In the disciples of Loyola there was more of the spirit of worldly wisdom, and the greatest of them, St. Francis Xavier, was characterized by extreme subtlety. [E.R.]

[FRANCISCAN FRIAR.]

FRANCK, J. M., a German writer, 1717-1775.

FRANCK, SIMON, a Latin poet, 1741-1772.

FRANCK, SOL., a German numismatist, 17th c.

FRANCKE, J. C., a German jurist, 17th cent.

FRANCKE, J. V., a Danish philos., d. 1830.

FRANCKLIN, DR. THOMAS, a classical translator and divine, author of the 'Earl of Warwick,' and other dramas, a 'Dissertation on Ancient Tragedy,' and some miscel. writings, 1721-1784.

FRANCŒUR, F., a Fr. composer, 1698-1787.

FRANCOIS DE NEUFCHÂTEAU, N. L., a French statesman and man of letters, member of the directory in 1797, and for two years president of the senate under Napoleon, 1750-1828.

FRANCOLIN, J. De, a French herald, 16th c.

FRANK, G., a German physician, 1643-1704. His son, G. F. Frank, a physician and au., d. 1732.

FRANK, J. P., a German physician, author of 'Système de Police Medicale,' 1745-1821.

FRANKE, A. H., a Ger. philanth., 1663-1727.

FRANKLAND, Th., an Eng. hist., 1633-1690.

FRANKLIN, Benjamin, born in Boston, Massachusets, 6th January, 1706; died on 17th April, 1790. The name of Dr. Franklin has long been an household word in America,—he was her moralist, statesman, and philosopher: his discoveries in Electricity have given him a permanent place in scientific history: and he deserves highest honour from all mankind, because of his services to the cause of rational Liberty and the independence of Nations.—We must omit all details concerning Franklin's early life: however, if any one would sustain hope amid unpromising labour—discern the inestimable value of small portions of time economized and put scrupulously to uses—or learn how cheerfulness, patience, and fortitude, guided by good sense and integrity, must ever command success,—he will find nowhere better instruction than in that graphic narrative of the events and struggles of his opening manhood, by which Franklin has let us into the innermost being of the journeyman printer of Philadelphia. Distinguished no less by practical benevolence, than by an almost intuitive appreciation of the wants and character of early American society, Franklin could not fail to rise into authority among his countrymen: accordingly we find him their favourite counsellor in most of the grave difficulties belonging to that epoch of American history. Commencing public life in the struggle between the assembly of Pennsylvania and the old proprietary Governors,—we again meet him proposing to the different States a project of union, which afterwards became the basis of the confederacy: then, on a mission to England regarding the American Stamp Act: afterwards—driven from his loyalty—Ambassador to France on the part of his countrymen; the observed of all observers in Paris, soliciting aid in arms from the court of Versailles: finally Minister to England, signing the treaty by which the mother country, in due humiliation, bowed her head before the independence of her former Colonies.—It has been said that Franklin represented the practical genius, the moral and political spirit of the eighteenth century, as Voltaire represented its metaphysical and religious scepticism: this, at least, is certain,—no man saw more clearly, or felt more profoundly in his own person, the political and moral ideas which necessarily bear sway in a strictly industrial community like the one emerging from infancy in the New World. Unconnected with England by birth or close association, he looked only with astonishment on those pretensions to prerogative, which certainly could find no natural soil, where all men were socially equal: and his system of morals included every sanction and precept, likely to recommend themselves to a people, who could never reach prosperity unless through patient industry, and the exercise of the prudential virtues. His code was 'The Way to Wealth:' and the wisdom of 'Poor Richard,' instructed every man, how by the strength of his arm, and dominion over his passions, wealth might be attained and made secure. Since Franklin's time a new element has arisen in America; powerful tendencies are developing with higher aims than mere wealth, and which demand a larger code than the utilitarian. Franklin did not recognize, or rather had not foreseen, the necessary advent of that speculative habit now very rapidly becoming dominant over American thought: but in his treatment of the equally powerful tendency of which he saw the influence, and whereof he himself so largely partook, his 'Poor Richard' is complete:—he threw off all prerogative and tradition, and looked at things as they are. Temperance, Silence, Order, Resolution, Frugality, Activity, Sincerity, Justice, Moderation, Cleanliness, Tranquillity, Chastity, Humility,—these are his virtues; and Franklin teaches how to acquire them, by precepts, which in earlier times, would have ranked as golden verses; they are as valuable as anything that has descended from Pythagoras.—It is rare that a single mind establishes claims so various as those of Franklin:—he ranks also among the foremost as a Physical Inquirer and Discoverer. Attracted by the opening subject of Electricity, he was the first who reduced it to order: and that grand step is owing to him which identified the attraction and repulsion of rubbed glass and amber, with the energy that produces lightning, and causes the most imposing of meteorological phenomena. His memoirs on Electricity and other physical subjects, still astonish one by their clearness and chastity, and the precision and elegance of their method; their style and manner are as worthy of admiration as their doctrines. They gained for the author immediate admission to the highest scientific societies in Europe.—In his personal bearing Franklin was sedate and weighty. He had no striking eloquence; he spoke sententiously; but men instinctively felt his worth, and submitted themselves to his wisdom. Except Washington, whom in many qualities he much resembled, the New World yet ranks among her dead, nowhere so great a Man. An edition of his works in ten volumes has recently been published by Jared Sparks, the excellent Editor of the writings of Washington. [J.P.N.]

FRANKLIN, Eleanor Anne, an English poetess, best known by her maiden name of Porden, wife of Captain Franklin, the well-known Arctic adventurer, 1795-1825.

FRANTZ, a French painter, 16th century.

FRANTZ, Wolfgang, a Ger. divine, 1564-1628.

FRANTZKE, G., a German jurist, 1594-1659.

FRANZ, J. G. F., a German savant, 1787-89.

FRANZ, J. M., a German geographer, 1700-61.

FRA-PAOLO. See Sarpi.

FRASSEN, C., a learned Frchman., 1620-1711.

FRAUENHOFER, Jos. Von, a dist. opticiun and natural philosopher of Bavaria, 1787-1826.

FRAUNCE, Abr., an English poet, 16th cent.

FREDEGARIUS, a French annalist, died 660.

FREDEGISUS, an English poet, 9th century.

FREDEGONDA, queen of France, 543-597.

FREDERICK I., emperor of Germany, surnamed Barbarossa, born in the duchy of Suabia, 1121; accompanied his uncle, Conrad III., to the Holy Land 1147; succeeded him as emperor 1152; crowned at Rome 1155; crowned king of Arles 1178; undertook a new crusade 1188; drowned in Syria 1190. FREDERICK II., born 1194, master of the empire after a long struggle 1208; engaged in a crusade 1227-1229; excommunicated by Pope Gregory IX. 1239; died 1250. FREDERICK III., born 1415, crowned emperor 1452; erected his duchy of Austria into an arch-duchy 1453; suffered many reverses, lost his throne, and was restored, between 1482 and 1490; died 1495.

FREDERICK I., king of Denmark and Norway, born 1471; succeeded 1523; d. 1533. FREDERICK II., born 1524; succeeded 1558; died 1588. FREDERICK III., born 1609; succeeded his father 1648; war with Sweden 1658-1660; died, after the crown had been made hereditary in his family, 1670. FREDERICK IV., born 1671; succeeded 1699; war with Sweden 1699-1720; died 1730. FREDERICK V., born 1723; succeeded 1746; died 1766. FREDERICK VI., born 1768; succeeded his father after governing as regent 1808; war of alliance with France against Russia and Prussia 1813; lost Norway 1814; died 1839.

FREDERICK I., king of Sweden, born 1676, associated with his wife, Ulrica Eleonora, sister of Charles XII., as king 1720, died 1745.

FREDERICK I., king of Prussia, called, as elector of Brandenburg, Frederick III., born 1657, succeeded to the electorate 1688, crowned king 1701, died 1713. FREDERICK WILLIAM I., born 1668, succeeded 1713, died 1740. FREDERICK II., his son, called 'The Great,' (see next article). FREDERICK WILLIAM II., nephew of Frederick the Great, born 1744, succeeded 1786, united with Austria and Russia in the division of Poland, and died the same year, 1797. FREDERICK WILLIAM III., son of the preceding, born 1770; succeeded 1797; died, and succeeded by his son FREDERICK WILLIAM IV., 1840.

FREDERICK II., king of Prussia, commonly called Frederick the Great, was born 24th January, 1712, and began to reign in 1740. He found himself in possession of a full treasury and a powerful army, which he soon employed in attacking Austria, and conquering from her the province of Silesia (1740-1742). In 1744 he engaged in a second war with Austria, which was terminated in 1745, and left him in possession of Silesia, but with no augmentation of power, though his military renown was raised through Europe. The great struggle of the seven years' war began in 1756. Prussia was now attacked by the Austrians, the Russians, the French, the Saxons, and the Swedes, and her destruction and dismemberment seemed inevitable. England was her only ally. Prussia went through the struggle, and came out triumphant. When the peace of Hubertsburg was concluded in 1763, Prussia did not cede an inch of land, or pay a dollar of money; and from that time forth she was recognized as one of the five great powers of Europe. For this glorious result she was indebted to her king. It is not merely the military genius of Frederick, as displayed during the sanguinary campaigns of the seven years' war, that demands our attention, but we cannot help admiring also his moral courage and his indomitable energy under reverses which would have crushed almost any other spirit. Though victorious at Prague, at Rossbach, and Lissa (1757), at Zorndorf (1758), at Leignitz and Torgau (1760), he suffered heavy defeats at Collin (1757), at Hochkirk (1758), at Kunersdorff (1759); and his lieutenants, with the exception of Prince Ferdinand of Brunswick, were generally unsuccessful. But Frederick's firmness never failed him, even when all hope seemed lost. In a period of extreme danger, he wrote to Voltaire (who had advised him to beg mercy from his enemies), 'I am a man, and therefore born to suffer. To the rigour of destiny I oppose my own constancy. Menaced with shipwreck, I will bear the storm; I will be a king in spirit; and I will die, as I have lived, a king.'—After the conclusion of the war, Frederick exerted himself earnestly in relieving the sufferings which so many years of carnage and devastation had brought upon Prussia. In 1772 he deeply disgraced himself, and permanently injured the cause of Order as well as the cause of Freedom throughout the world, by promoting and participating in the first dismemberment of Poland. Frederick died 17th August, 1786. He was fond of the society of literary men, and was himself an author of many works of considerable merit. During his struggles against Austria and France, Frederick was regarded in England and America as the champion of protestantism, and he was called a second Gustavus Adolphus. He ill deserved the title. He had no religious faith whatever; and there are few princes of whom so many mean and selfish traits in private life are recorded as of the celebrated king of Prussia. [E.S.C.]

FREDERICK I., king of Sicily, was the same who became Frederick II., emperor of Germany. FREDERICK II. of Sicily reigned 1296-1337. FREDERICK III., reigned 1355-1377. FREDERICK IV., 1496-1504. The last three were of the house of Arragon, and Frederick IV. was before count of Altomaia, and d. in France after losing his crown.

FREDERICK I., elector of Saxony, reigned 1423-1428. FREDERICK II., 1428-1464. FREDERICK III., 1486-1525. FREDERICK AUGUSTUS, the first of the name as king, 1768-1827.

FREDERICK I., as king of Wurtemburg, or FREDERICK II. as duke, reigned 1797-1816.

FREDERICK, son of Theodore, king of Corsica, colonel in the army of the king of Wurtemburg, and his polit. agent in England, au. of 'Historical Memoirs concerning Corsica,' committed suicide 1796.

FREE, J., an English divine and miscellaneous writer, au. of 'History of Eng. Poetry,' 1711-1791.

FREEKE, WM., an English Socinian, b. 1663.

FREELING, SIR FRANCIS, secretary of the General Post Office for nearly fifty years, 1764-1836.

FREEMAN, WM. PEERE WILLIAMS, an Engl. admiral disting. in the American war, 1742-1832.

FREEMANTLE, SIR THOMAS, a celebrated English admiral, 1765-1820.

FREGOSO, the name of a Genoese family, of whom the following were doges of Genoa:—DOMINIQUE, reigned 1370-1378. JOSEPH, his son, elected 1390, and deposed the year following. THOMAS, son of Joseph, reigned 1415-1421, re-elected 1436, and deposed 1443. JAMES, brother of Thomas, reigned about a year, 1447-1448. PIERRE, elected 1450, yielded his seigniory to France 1458, and was killed in an endeavour to reconquer it, 1459. An archbishop, P FREGOSO, was many times doge between 1462 and 1488, and died in retirement 1498. BATTISTA, his nephew, born 1440, elected 1479, deposed 1483. OCTAVIAN, elected 1513, yielded the sovereignty of Genoa to Francis I., king of France, 1515, and was continued in command as governor till 1522.

FREIND, JOHN, an Engl. physician and wr. on med. science, au. of a 'Hist. of Physic,' 1675-1728.

FREINSHEM, JOHN, a German scholar, librarian to Queen Christina of Sweden, and professor of rhetoric at the university of Upsala, 1608-1660.

FREMIN, R., a French sculptor, 1678-1743.

FREMINET, M., a French painter, 1567-1619.

FRERE, G., a French officer, 1764-1826.

FRERE, RIGHT HON. JOHN HOOKHAM, a scholar and fugitive wr., successor of his friend Canning as under secretary of state for foreign affairs, and distinguished in several diplomatic missions, 1769-1846.

FRERES, THEOD., a Dutch paint., 1648-1698.

FRERET, NICH., a French savant, 1688-1749.

FRERON, ELIE CATHERINE, a distinguished French critic and original writer, 1719-1776. His son, LOUIS STANISLAUS, a member of the French convention, and founder of a violent journal entitled 'L'Orateur du Peuple,' 1757-1802.

FRESCOBALDI, G., an Ital. composer, 17th c.

FRESNEL, AUGUSTIN JOHN, an experimental philosopher, and member of the Academy of Sciences of France, distinguished as the discoverer of the polarization of light, &c., 1788-1827.

FREYBERG, C. A., a German hist., 1684-1743.

FREYE, CH., a German miscel. wr., 1759-1800.

FREYLINGHAWSEN, J. A., a Lutheran theologian and mystic of the Pietists, 1670-1788.

FRICK, JEAN, a German theologian and philosopher, 1670-1739. ELIE, his brother, a theologian, 1678-1711. GEORGES, son of Jean, author of a 'Dissertation upon the Salic Law,' &c., 1703-1789. ALBERT, younger brother of Georges, distinguished as a savant, 1711-1776.

FRIES, J., a Swiss savant, 1505-1565. MICHEL, his nephew, a wr. on natural history, d. 1611.

FRIES, J. C., a Swiss painter, 1623-1693.

FRIESE, CHR. THEO., a Polish hist., 1717-95.

FRIESE, MARTIN, a Luther. theol., 1688-1750.

FRIESS, J. DE, an Aust. financier, 1722-1793.

FRISCH, JOHN LEONARD, a German minister, author of works on natural history, ethnology, and language, 1666-1743. His son, JOSEPH LEONARD, a minister and naturalist, 1714-1787.

FRISCHE, J. DU, a French classic, 1640-1693.

FRISCHLIN, N., a German savant, 1547-90.

FRISI, PAOLO, an Italian philosopher, 1728-84.

FRISIUS, JOHN, a Swiss divine and Orientalist, died 1565. His son, JOHN JAMES, author of many works on theology, philosophy, and philology, dates unknown. Another son, JOHN, successor of his father, as professor at Zurich, died 1611. HENRY FRISIUS, a descendant of the preceding, a theological and philosophical wr., d. 1718.

FRISIUS, SIMON, a Dutch engraver, 14th cent.

FRITH, JOHN, an Engl. reformer, burnt 1533.

FRITSCH, A., a German savant, 1629-1701.

FRITZ, SAMUEL, a Ger. missionary, 1653-1728.

FRITZE, J. T., a German med. au., 1740-1793.

FROBENIUS, JOHN, a Ger. pri

FROBISHER, SIR MARTIN, was parents at Doncaster, but the prec certain. He became early convince bility of a north-west passage to the hope of gaining undying fame b continued for fifteen years urging ir ters the equipment of an expedit earl of Warwick, at length patr 1576. He left 8th June with three and returned 2d October, having rea than Labrador and the coast of Gre cations of gold were discovered, wl despatch of a larger squadron the f and the quality of the ore brougl more favourably reported upon, an in dition, with miners, soldiers, &c., wa May, 1578; but the fleet was scatt on the coast of Greenland, and obl home early in winter without effect ment. Frobisher afterwards went Indies with Drake, and on the defe ish Armada received the honour of acknowledgment of his services in t died in the end of the year 1594, f of a carelessly dressed wound receiv upon Brest.

FROILA, the name of three S the first, king of Oviedo, reigned second, king of Oviedo, and count short time in 875; the third, k. of FROISSART, JOHN, a celebrate and historian, whose Chronicles of land, Scotland, Spain, and Britt one of the most precious monument ages. He was attached to the cour Hainault, queen of Edward III., and Black Prince, and after her death t tinental sovereigns. He is suppose from 1326 to 1400. The best Chronicles is that of M. Buchoz, 15 There have been several English tra

FRONTEAN, JOHN, a Fr. contr

FRONTIN, CLAUDE, a French p

FRONTINUS, SEXTUS JULI statesman and soldier, commander o Britain, author of a work on tactics

FRONTO, MARCUS CORNELIU Roman orator and teacher of elocu of Marcus Aurelius and Lucius Ver

FROWDE, PHILIP, an English p

FRUGONI, C. J., an Italian poe

FRUITIERS, PH., a Flemish pa

FRUMENTIUS, ST., the apost consecrated a bishop by Athanasius

FRY, MRS. ELIZABETH, whose was GURNEY, was born in 1780 at folk, an extensive estate which ha possession of her paternal ancestry turies. The benevolence of her dispo itself by her habit, while yet a girl, poor on her father's property, and f for the education of their children. W benevolence, however, she united an for the gaieties and frivolities of fa till through the powerful ministrati Savery, an American Friend, she the knowledge and love of the tr Jesus. Her character from that d

...d, and she became a genuine and consistent ...ian. In 1800 she was married to Joseph ..., Esq., of London, and consequently settled in ... metropolis. There she resumed her early ...it of visiting the poor; and although she be... the mother of a large family, who were most ...dly loved and assiduously trained, she yet ...d leisure, by a rigid economy of time, and ar...ment of domestic duties, to render her bene... offices to her poor and suffering fellow-crea... Every day was she found visiting charity ...ols, in the houses and lanes of the poor, and in ...ards of sick hospitals, till at length by a provi...al train of circumstances, she was led to ex... her benevolent attentions to the inmates of a ... and a lunatic asylum. The accents of ...tian love found entrance into the hearts of ... wretched outcasts, and she became the hon... instrument of remodelling the discipline ... improving the state of our national prisons. ...e commencement of her career there was no ...ification of any sort, no separation between ... and female prisoners; all criminals, parents ... children, men and women, those who were ...ratively innocent with the inveterately de..., were indiscriminately huddled together, and ... circumstances many left the prison far more ... with crime than when they entered it. ...uired no small resolution and faith to enter ... a den of iniquity as a British jail at that ... was; but Mrs. Fry attempted it and was ...ful. Her dignity, and at the same time ...minine gentleness, subdued their ferocity ...on their attention; she told them that vice ...the cause of all their misery, that if they ... return to virtuous habits, they might again ...py, and she proposed rules for their obser..., of which they unanimously expressed their ...val. Repeating her visit after a brief inter... finding them equally tractable and sub..., she proceeded with her contemplated ... She appointed a teacher to those chil... who had been committed for petty offences, ... many of whom were under seven years of age. ... their profligate mothers took an interest in ... infant school. Mrs. Fry next devised some ...loyment for the women, by teaching them to ... and supplying them with work. For the ac...plishment of this arduous undertaking she ...ed a ladies' committee, some of whom made ... sacred duty to attend in the prison daily, so ... there was not a moment when the females ... not under the superintendence of some proper ... efficient guide. A matron was at length ...ated to live in the prison, and take the over... of the female prisoners. But the ladies' com... still continued their attendance, one giving ...ction in needlework, another in knitting, ... a third read some good religious book, and ... to them about the guilt and the wages of ... the duty and superior happiness of a sober, ..., and religious life. In a few weeks the most ...ishing moral revolution was effected within ... walls of the prison: not only the language of ...phemy, obscenity, and fiendish discord entirely ...ppeared, but women of the most abandoned ... were reclaimed to established habits of ..., industry, and piety. The public interest ... greatly excited by the intelligence. Visitors of the highest official station and noble rank visited the schools, and the most undoubted testimonies were borne to the excellent principles and efficient working of these benevolent schemes. Mrs. Fry, while she continued her inspection of the prisons, extended her benevolent regards to other classes, such as making provision for female convicts, both during their voyage out, and at their allotted stations. She also visited all the principal jails in Scotland and Ireland, France, Holland, Denmark, and Prussia, and her last scheme of philanthropy was begun with a view to benefit British seamen, particularly to alleviate the miserable state of the coast guard; forming libraries and adopting means for circulating books and tracts in men-of-war ships. These anxious and multifarious labours made serious inroads on the health of this excellent lady. After trying the waters of Bath in the spring of 1844, she returned home no way improved, and gradually sank till she expired at Ramsgate, 11th October. Her death was lamented throughout Europe as a loss to humanity. She was, as she has often been called, 'the female Howard,' and like her prototype, her benevolent exertions were the fruit of a lively and established faith in the gospel of Christ. [R.J.]

FRYE, THOMAS, an Irish artist, 1710-1762.

FUCA, JUAN DE, a Germ. navigator, d. 1632.

FUCHS, G. F., a German composer, died 1821.

FUCHS, J. C., a German author, 1726-1795.

FUCHS, THEOPHILUS, a Ger. poet, 1720-1810.

FUCHS, or FUCHSIUS, LEONARD, a Bavarian physician and botanist, author of 'Historia Plantarum,' 1501-1566.

FUCHS, or FUSCH, R., a Fr. natural., d. 1587.

FUENTE, J. L., a Spanish painter, 1600-1654.

FUENTES, COUNT DE, a Sp. gen., 1560-1643.

FUENTES, or FONTE, BARTHOLEMEW DE, a Spanish or Portuguese navigator, 17th century.

FUESSLI, HANS H., a Swiss hist., 1752-1832.

FUESSLI, J., a Swiss annalist, born 1477. His son, PETER, historian of the Swiss wars, d. 1548.

FUESSLI, J. C., a German historian, 1704-75.

FUESSLI, J. M., a Swiss engraver, 1677-1736.

FUESSLI, M., a Swiss painter and engraver, 1598-1664. JOHN GASPARD FUESSLI, his descendant, a distinguished artist and correspondent of the German savants, 1706-1782. His son, of the same name, distinguished as a naturalist, and for his drawings of insects, 1745-1786. His son, J. RODOLPH, a designer, engraver, and painter, 1737-1806. His son, HENRY, the distinguished painter known by the name of FUSELI, which see.

FUGA, FERD., an Italian architect, 1699-1788.

FUGER, FRED. HENRY, a Flemish painter of portraits, miniatures, and hist. pieces, 1751-1818.

FUGERES, A. C., a French savant, 1731-1758.

FUGGER, the name of a rich family of Augsburgh, ennobled by the emperor Maximilian, the most remarkable of whom are—ULRICH, a great benefactor of literature, 1528-1584. ANTHONY and RAYMOND, founders of two hospitals, a public garden, a picture gallery, a museum of antiquities, &c., in the 16th century. And OTHO HENRY, count of Kirschberg and Weissenhorn, 1592-1644.

FULBECK, WM., an English law wr., b. 1560.

FULBERT, an Ital. ecclesiastic, 10th century.

FULKE, WM., an English divine, 16th century.

FULLER, And., a baptist theolog., 1754-1815.
FULLER, Isaac, an English painter, d. 1672.
FULLER, Margaret. See Ossoli.
FULLER, Nich., a learned divine, 1557-1622.
FULLER, Dr. Thomas, an English historian and divine, author of the 'Worthies of England,' a 'History of the Holy War,' and many other popular and learned works, 1608-1660.
FULMAN, Wm., an English antiq., 1632-1688.
FULTON, Robert, an American engineer, of Irish parentage. His highest distinction is that of having been the earliest to establish practically the propelling of vessels by steam. Millar's experiments, which proved the practicability of the principle, were made in 1787 in Scotland, but Fulton's boat, which began to navigate the Hudson in 1807, was certainly the first practical demonstration of this application of steam, being five years prior to the success of Henry Bell on the Clyde, and nearly ten years prior to the first attempts on the Thames under Brunel's direction. Fulton was born 1765 in Pennsylvania. He commenced life as a portrait painter in Philadelphia in 1783, but in 1786 he embarked for England, where he worked under his distinguished countryman West, the historical painter, for several years. The fine arts were destined, however, with Fulton to give place to the mechanical, for in 1794 he had been engaged by the duke of Bridgewater in canal projects, had adopted and patented the system of inclined planes as a substitute for locks, had written a treatise on canals, and styled himself civil engineer. He also invented a mill for sawing marble, and patented methods of spinning flax and making ropes.—He had little success as a civil engineer in Britain. In 1796 he went to Paris at the invitation of Mr. Barlow, United States minister, in whose house he resided during seven years. His attention was here chiefly turned to submarine boats as warlike instruments of destruction. The experiments, made first at the expense of the French government, and afterwards for the English government, proved failures. In the course of these experiments, in the year 1803, an experimental steam-boat was built and tried on the Seine. The success was indifferent. But perseverance overcomes all difficulties. Mr. Livingston, the American ambassador in Paris in 1806, supplied Fulton with funds, who returned to America, and in New York launched a steam-boat, which began to navigate the Hudson in 1807. He afterwards built other steam-boats, one of them a frigate, which bore his name. His reputation became established, and his fortune was rapidly increasing, when his patent for steam vessels was disputed, and his opponents were in a considerable degree successful. Though an amiable, social, and liberal man, the anxiety and fretfulness occasioned by the lawsuits about his patent rights, together with his enthusiasm, which led him to expose himself too much while directing his workmen, impaired his constitution, and he died at the early age of forty-nine in 1815. His death occasioned extraordinary demonstrations of national mourning in the United States. [L.D.B.G.]
FULVIUS, Marcus, a famous Roman, ædile 197 B.C., disting. in Spanish warfare as prætor 194, consul 190, censor with Æmilius Lepidus 180.
FULVIUS, And., an Ital. antiquarian, 15th ct.

FUNCK, C. G. Ferdinand De, a lieu general and historian of Brunswick, 1761-1
FUNCK, Chr. L., a Ger. theolog., 1751
FUNCK, J., a German chronologist, 1
FUNCK, J. G., a German theolog., 168
FUNCK, J. H., a German savant, 1693-
FURETIÈRES, A., a French lawyer, 16
FURGOLE, G. R., a Fr. wr. on law, 169
FURIETTI, J. A., an It. cardinal, 1685
FURIUS, a Latin poet and annalist, 1st
FURIUS, Frederic, a learned Span.,
FURLONG, Th., an Irish poet, 1797-18
FURNEAUX, Ph., a nonconf. div., 172
FURST, Walter, a Swiss patriot, c of William Tell and Arnold, 14th century.
FURSTENAU, J. H., a German physic medical author, 1688-1756. His son, J.
eric, same profession, 1724-1751.
FUSELI, Henry, R.A., was born at 7th February, 1741, and was originally up for the church, and entered into holy but for some municipal interference his thought it necessary for him to leave Züri time, and he visited this country in compa
Sir Andrew Mitchel in 1763. He here mai himself by literature, and finally, by the a Sir Joshua Reynolds, adopted the professi painter, and in 1770 set out for Italy: he r to London in 1779, after an absence of eigh
He first attracted the public attention by ture of the 'Night-mare,' painted in 1781 was a fair indication of the unusual
Fuseli's fancy, thoroughly developed in hi Milton gallery. He was elected an asso the Academy in 1788, and an academician
In 1799 he finished his great Milton ga forty-seven large pictures, which had o him only nine years; of these remarkable c tions, the Lazar House; Satan Starting f
Touch of Ithuriel's Spear; Satan Calling
Legions; the Lubbar Fiend; the Vision
Deluge; Eve Newly Created, Led to Ada Sin Pursued by Death; were striking and works, of great power of conception and tre though deficient in all minor technicalities cution. Fuseli was chosen professor of in 1801, but resigned on being appointed keepership in 1805; he was, however, re in 1810, and held that office, together w keepership, until his death, 16th April,
He delivered in all twelve lectures in the Ac which are among the most valuable contri to English art literature.—(Knowles, L
Writings of Fuseli, 3 vols. 8vo, 1831; W
Lectures by the Royal Academicians, &c.
1848.) [R
FUSS, Nicholas Von, a mathematici natural philoso., pupil of Bernouilli, 1755-1
FUST, Sir H. S., a disting. lawyer, 177
FUZELIER, Louis, a Fr. drama., 1672-FYAZ-ALI, a Mahommedan savant, d.
FYOT-DE-LA-MARCHE, Claude, C
Bosjam, a Fr. ecclesiastic and histor., 1630
FYROUZ, the first of the name king of 83-107; the second, from about 457 to 488
FYROUZ-SHAH, the first of the Mus rulers of India bearing this name reigned time in 1236; the second 1289-1296; th
suc. 1351, abdic. in favour of his son 1387,

G

GAAL, Bernaert, a Dutch paint., died 1671.
GABBIANI, A. D., an Ital. paint., 1652-1726.
GABELCHÖVER, Oswald, a German physician and historian, Tubingen, 1538-1616.
GABIA, J. B., an Ital. Orientalist, 16th cent.
GABINIUS, Aulus, a partizan of Pompey, [illegible] 69 B.C., consul 58, afterw. gov. of Syria.
GABINIUS, Quintus, tribune, 140 B.C.
GABRIEL, Severus, a Greek bishop, 16th ct.
GABRIEL of Sion, a Irnd. Maronite, d. 1648.
GABRIELLI, Julio, an Ital. card., 1748-1822.
GABRINI, Th. M., an It. mathem., 1726-1807.
GACON, Fr., a French satiric. poet, 1667-1725.
GADBURY, John, an Engl. astrologer, 17th ct.
GADDESDEN, John of, an English ecclesiastic and medical author, 14th century.
GADEBUSCH, F. C., a Ger. savant, 1719-88.
GAELEN, Alex. Van, a Dutch painter, pupil of John Van Huchtenberg, 1670-1728.
GÆRTNER, C. Chr., a Ger. transl., 1712-91.
GAERTNER, Joseph, an eminent botanist, was born at Calu in the duchy of Wirtemberg in 1732. He died in 1791.—Gaertner studied medicine at the university of Gottingen, and attended the lectures of the celebrated Haller. He was [illegible] devoted to the pursuit of natural history, [illegible] the lessons of his illustrious teacher there, and afterwards of the able botanist Adrian Van Rogen of Leyden, confirmed him in his choice. After taking his degree, he travelled into Italy, France, Holland, and England, and published several memoirs upon various subjects connected with marine zoology and botany. In 1768 he was instituted professor of botany and natural history at the university of St. Petersburg, where he formed the plan of his great work, upon which his eminent reputation depends. His health obliged him to resign his professorship at the end of two years, and return to his native land. There for eight years he steadily pursued his arduous undertaking. He then revisited England and Holland, where Sir Joseph Banks, and the equally celebrated Linnæus of Upsala opened to him the collections which they had made, the one in the South Seas, the other in Japan. At length his excellent work was given to the world, and it will remain a monument to his fame as long as the science of botany continues to be studied. Its object is to illustrate the fruits and seeds of plants, and contains the essential generic characters and particular descriptions of the fruits of 1,000 genera, illustrated by excellent figures drawn by himself. In the definition and anatomical elucidation of the parts of seeds, Gaertner excels, and his work has rendered the most essential service to the science of botany. Schreber has named a genus of plants after him, Gaertnera. [W.B.]
GAFFAREL, James, a French Orientalist, distinguished for his rabbinical learning, 1601-1681.
GAFFARELLI, an Italian singer, 1703-1783.
GAFURIO, F., an Italian composer, 1451-1520.
GAGE, Thomas, an Irish missionary, d. 1655.
GAGE, Thomas, com. of the British troops in North America, and gov. of Massachusets, d 1787.
GAGE, Thomas, an English divine, 17th cent.
GAGER, Wm., an English dramatist, 16th ct.
GAGINI, Ant., a Sicilian sculptor, 1480-1571.
GAGLIARDI, P., an Ital. savant, 1695-1742.
GAGNIER, J., a French Orientalist, d. 1740.
GAGUIN, R., a French historian, died 1501.
GAILLARD, Ant., a French poet, 17th cent.
GAILLARD, Augier, a burlesque poet, 16th c.
GAILLARD-DE-LONJUMEAU, J., a Provençal bishop, first projector of a Universal Historical Dictionary, for which he collected materials afterwards used by Moreri, 1634-1695.
GAILLARD, G. H., a French hist., 1726-1806.
GAILLARD, John Ernest, the son of a peruke maker, was born at Zell about the year 1666, and was instructed in the science and practice of music by Marichal, by Farinelli, and by Steffani. At the termination of his studies he was taken into the service of George, prince of Denmark, and after the marriage of that prince Gaillard came to England, where he remained till his death, which occurred in the beginning of the year 1749. He was generally esteemed as an elegant and tasteful composer. His principal employment for several years of his life in London, was composing for the stage. [J.M.]
GAINAS, a Gothic general, killed 400.
GAINSBOROUGH, Thos., R.A., was born at Sudbury in Suffolk in 1727. He was the pupil of Hayman, but settled in 1758 in Bath, where he practised both portrait painting and landscape with such success, that he was induced to try his fortune in London, whither he removed in 1774; and he was soon accounted both the rival of Sir Joshua Reynolds and Wilson: Sir Joshua himself said of him in his 'Character of Gainsborough,'—'Whether he most excelled in portraits, landscapes, or fancy pictures, it is difficult to determine.' He was one of the original members of the Royal Academy, founded in 1768: he died in London, 2d August, 1788, and was buried in Kew churchyard. —(Edwards, Anecdotes of Painters, &c.) [R.N.W.]
GAIUS, or CAIUS, a Roman lawyer, 2d cent.
GALAS, Matthew, a Ger. general, 1589-1647.
GALATEO, Ant., an It. geograp., 1444-1516.
GALBA, Servius Sulpicius, a Roman emperor, proclaimed in Spain 68, assassinated 69.
GALBA, Sergius, a Roman consul, 144 B.C.
GALE, John, a baptist divine, 1680-1721.
GALE, Theophilus, a popular dissenting minister, and theological author, 1628-1678.
GALE, Thomas, a divine of the Church of England, celebrated as a scholar and antiquary, 1636-1702. His son, Roger, a numismatist, 1672-1744. His son, Samuel, an archæological writer, histor. of Winchester cathedral, 1682-1754.
GALEANO, Joseph, an It. savant, 1605-1675.
GALEN, Chr. Bernard Van, prince-bishop of Munster, born about 1607, died after a reign of twenty-eight years occupied in warfare, 1678.
GALEN, J. Van, a Dutch mariner, died 1653.
GALENUS, Claudius, usually called Galen, a celebrated Greek physician, who flourished in the second century of our era, and whose authority in the schools of medicine long continued to be equal to that of Aristotle in the schools of philosophy. He was the son of Nicon, an architect and geometrician, who had also cultivated with success various branches of knowledge, including astronomy, arithmetic, and grammar, and was born at Pergamus, a city of Mysia in Asia Minor, in, as is generally believed, A.D. 130, the fifteenth year of the reign of the Roman emperor Adrian. His mother's name is unknown, but she is described as a woman of violent passions and of an ungovernable temper, who, according to the testimony of her son, tormented her husband 'more than Xantippe did Socrates.' He received his medical education in his native city, but upon the death of his father, which happened in the twenty-second year of his age, he visited the medical schools of Smyrna, Corinth, and Alexandria, the latter of which enjoyed at that time a high reputation; and subsequently repaired to Cilicia, Phœnicia, Palestine, Scyros, and Crete. Having spent nine years in these travels, he returned to Pergamus, where he began the practice of his art; and having been appointed by the high priest medical superintendent of the gladiators, it is supposed that in this melancholy occupation he acquired some knowledge of the nature and cure of wounds. His subsequent history is very imperfectly known, but it seems tolerably certain that he visited Rome twice in the course of his life, where he acquired a high character for skill, and where, though bitterly opposed, and, as some think, even persecuted by the Roman physicians, he formed intimate friendships with many of the leading men of the state, including the emperor Marcus Aurelius, who intrusted to his care his son Commodus, then a child of nine years of age, and in a tender state of health. The place and the time of his death are equally unknown. Some respectable authorities, following Suidas, a Byzantine lexicographer, say that he remained at Rome after his second visit, and died there, A.D. 200, in the seventieth year of his age, and in the reign of the emperor Severus; but one of his Arabian commentators has preserved a tradition that he died in the island of Sicily, at the age of eighty-eight, which, as he was born in 130, would give the year 218 as the year of his death.—Galen was a man of great talents and extensive erudition, and a very voluminous writer. His native tongue was Greek, and in that language he wrote, but he understood the Latin, the Ethiopic, and the Persic languages. His works are written for the most part in the Attic dialect, but his style, though eloquent, is diffuse and prolix. Suidas, who is our chief authority on this subject, says that he wrote no less than five hundred books on medicine, and two hundred and fifty on other subjects. Of these the greater part are lost. Of the former not above a half remain, and of the latter only a few fragments; while of his medical treatises forty-five are deemed spurious, and many are considered of doubtful authenticity; yet notwithstanding of these defections, the received works of Galen, with the Latin translations, fill thirteen folio volumes. The best, or at least the most commodious, edition is that of Kühn, in twenty 8vo volumes, begun in 1818, and finished in 1833. [J.M'C.]

GALERIUS, a Roman emp., reigned 305-311.

GALGACUS, chief of the Caledon

GALHEGOS, M. De, a poet and d ter of Portugal, 1597-1665.

GALILEO, Galilei, a distinguis mer, was born at Pisa on the 15th o His father, who was himself a philos family of three sons and three daught Galileo was the eldest. He was dist a child by his skill in constructing to of machinery. To these mechanical acco he added a taste for music, drawing, and so great was his passion for pictures, desirous of following painting as a pro father, however, having observed indications of early genius, resolved to the university to study medicine. ingly went to Pisa, on the 9th Nov and was placed under the celebrat Cæsalpinus, who then filled the chair In studying music and drawing, he fo sary to acquire some knowledge of g no sooner had he entered upon Euc conceived a violent passion for math devoted himself wholly to its study. dering over the treatise of Archimedes tibus in fluido, he wrote an essay on tatic balance, which was the means, th Ubaldi, of obtaining for him the app lecturer on mathematics in the univer with a salary of only sixty crowns. even in his eighteenth year exhibi antipathy to the philosophy of Ari in the discharge of his new functi he did not scruple to denounce his doctrines, and expose their errors guage even of asperity and triumph. ject of falling bodies he disproved by actual experiments made from tower of Pisa, and so great was t which was then roused against him, th Pisa in 1592, and accepted of the pro mathematics in the university of Pad was converted to the doctrines of Co the lectures of Christian Vurstisius, b his conversion he taught the Ptolema compliance with popular feeling.—Th of Galileo was now widely extended. C duke of Tuscany, invited him, in 1609, original situation at Pisa. Galileo ac invitation on condition that he should title of Philosopher to his Highness, that of mathematician; and while this was going on he went to pay a visit t Venice. There he learned, by comm that a Dutchman had given Prince Ma tical instrument which made distant ob near the observer. Anxious to know instrument was, he discovered the pr on his return to Padua, and having p ends of a leaden tube two spectacle- one a plano-convex, and the other a pla the latter being nearest the eye, he telescope exactly the same as a mo glass. This little instrument, which nifying power of only three times, he Venice to crowds of the principal citiz presented one of them to the senate, w gave him his professorship at Padua raised his salary from 520 to 1000 flo having made other two telescopes, one magnifying eight, and the other thirty times, Galileo applied them to the heavens. With them he discovered the mountains and cavities in the moon, the round ses of the planets, and the four satellites of upiter. He counted forty stars in the Pleiades, d found that many of the nebulæ were clusters small stars. The satellites of Jupiter were covered on the 7th January, 1610, and they e afterwards found by our celebrated country- n, Thomas Harriot, on the 17th October of the e year. In directing his telescope towards urn, Galileo observed it to be like three o's, ely, oOo, the middle one being the largest, approximating to the discovery of Saturn's afterwards made by Huygens. About the e time he discovered the crescent of Venus, the spots on the sun, which were seen about months later by Harriot in England.—In the part of 1611, Galileo went to Rome, and with him his best telescope. Here, princes, nals, and prelates, hastened to do him honour, had the gratification of seeing the spots on un in the Quirinal gardens.—The discoveries of leo were ill received by the followers of Aris- Prejudice and ignorance were thus combined st him, and in the controversies into which as led, he treated his opponents and their ons with undue ridicule and sarcasm. The sophers and freethinkers of the day, many of n had been Galileo's pupils, marshalled them- s on his side, while the Aristotelian sages supported with all the influence of the ch. While these parties were resting on the sive, Galileo, in 1613, addressed a letter to friend, the Abbé Castelli, to prove that the ptures were not intended to teach us science Philosophy, and that it was equally difficult reconcile the Ptolemaic and the Copernican m with expressions in the Bible. In replying is letter, Caccini, a Dominican monk, made a onal attack upon Galileo from the pulpit, ridi- g the astronomer and his followers. Roused by attack, Galileo published a long letter defending former views, which he dedicated to the grand ess of Tuscany. Its reasoning was conclusive, its influence powerful. It was felt to be hopeless eet his arguments by any other weapons than e of the civil power, and with the resolution rush the dangerous innovation, his enemies rmined upon appealing to the inquisition. A minican monk had paved the way for such a ss by denouncing to that body Galileo's letter Castelli, and Caccini was induced to settle at e, in order to embody the evidence against his ment.—In the year 1617, Galileo went to e, cited probably by the inquisition, and was ed in the palace of the grand duke's ambas- r. When summoned before that body for his retical doctrine, he was charged with maintain- the stability of the sun, and the motion of the h, and of trying to reconcile this doctrine to pture; and after inquiring into the truth of e charges on the 25th February, 1615, it was ered that Galileo should be enjoined by Cardinal Bellarmine to renounce the obnoxious tenets, nd to pledge himself, under the pain of imprison- ent, neither to teach nor publish them in future. He accordingly appeared before the cardinal, and having renounced his opinions, and declared that he would neither teach nor defend them, he was dismissed from the bar of the inquisition. Thus successful in their first attempt to put down the truths of science, they conceived the bold plan of condemning the whole system of Copernicus as heretical. In order to frustrate this plan, Galileo remained at Rome, and there is reason to believe that he thus injured his cause. His letter to Castelli, Copernicus's work 'On the Revolutions of the Heavenly Bodies,' and 'Kepler's Epitome of the Copernican System,' were all inserted among the prohibited books. Notwithstanding these acts of hostility, Galileo was graciously received by Pope Paul V., in March, 1616, and even assured that while he occupied the pope's chair, he would protect him against the calumnies of his enemies.—About this time Galileo proposed a method of finding the longitude at sea by the eclipse of Jupiter's satellites, and expected that Philip III. of Spain would employ him to devote his time to the perfection of a method so useful to commerce. He failed, however, in this attempt. But the mortification which it gave him was compensated by the elevation of his friend Urban VIII. to the pontificate. In October, 1623, Galileo went to Rome to offer his congratulations to his holiness. The pope loaded him with presents, promised him a pension for his son, and on the death of Cosmo, recommended him in a special letter to the new grand duke of Tuscany. The cardinals even were propitiated, and in the same spirit his friend Castelli was made mathematician to the pope. Notwithstanding these acts of kindness, however, Galileo cherished the deepest hostility against the church, and his resolution to propagate his opinions seems to have been coeval with the vow by which he renounced them. He resolved to write a work in which the Copernican system should be demonstrated. This work, entitled 'The System of the World, by Galileo Galilei,' was published in 1662, and consists of four dialogues, in which he discusses the Ptolemaic and the Copernican systems. The work is dedicated to Ferdinand, grand duke of Tuscany, and contains an ironical and insulting attack upon the decree of the inquisition. The doctrines which it defended were so widely disseminated, and so eagerly received, that the Church of Rome felt the blow which was thus given to its intellectual supremacy. Under these circumstances the pope did not hesitate in his resolution to punish its author. Galileo was accordingly summoned before the inquisition. Worn out with age and infirmities, he arrived in Rome on the 14th February, 1633, and on the advice of his friends he remained in strict seclusion in the house of the Tuscan ambassador. Early in April, when his examination in person took place, he was removed to the holy office, and lodged in the house of the fiscal of the inquisition, his table being provided by the Tuscan ambassador. It is stated by M. Libri, and generally believed, that in his examination he was put to the torture, and after this had taken place, he was allowed a reasonable time for his defence. Having duly considered his confession and excuses, he was again summoned to the holy office. On the 22d of June he was conducted in a penitential dress to the convent of Minerva, sentence of imprisonment during the pleasure of the inquisition was pronounced upon him, and he was ordered to abjure and curse the heresies he had cherished.—'The account of the trial and sentence of Galileo,' says Sir David Brewster, 'is pregnant with the deepest interest and instruction. Human nature is here drawn in its darkest colouring; and in surveying the melancholy picture, it is difficult to decide whether religion or philosophy has been most degraded. While we witness the presumptuous priest pronouncing infallible the decrees of his own erring judgment, we see the high-minded philosopher abjuring the eternal and immutable truths which he had himself the glory of establishing. In the ignorance and prejudices of the age; in a too literal interpretation of the language of Scripture; in a mistaken respect for errors that have been venerable from their antiquity, and in the peculiar position which Galileo had taken among the avowed enemies of the church, we may find a shadow of an apology, evanescent though it be, for the conduct of the inquisition. But what excuse can we devise for the humiliating abjuration of Galileo? Why did this master spirit of the age—this high priest of the stars—this representative of science—this hoary sage, whose career of glory was near its consummation—why did he reject the crown of martyrdom which he had himself created, and which, plaited with immortal laurels, was about to descend upon his head? If instead of disavowing the laws of nature, and surrendering in his own person the intellectual dignity of his species, he had boldly asserted the truth of his opinions, and confided his character to posterity, and his cause to an all-ruling Providence, he would have strung up the hair-suspended sabre, and disarmed for ever the hostility which threatened to overwhelm him. The philosopher, however, was supported only by philosophy, and in the love of truth he found a miserable substitute for the hopes of the martyr. Galileo cowered under the fear of man, and his submission was the salvation of the church. The sword of the inquisition descended on his prostrate neck, and though its stroke was not physical, yet it fell with a moral influence, fatal to the character of its victim, and to the dignity of science.'—From the prison of the inquisition, where he remained only four days, Galileo was allowed to go to the house of the Tuscan ambassador, and after six months' residence there, to pass his term of imprisonment in his own house at Arcetri. The happiness of rejoining his family, however, was of short duration. His favourite daughter was seized with an illness of which she died; and having himself fallen into a state of ill health, he was permitted to go to Florence for its recovery in 1638. Here he was debarred from all intercourse with society, and it was only in the presence of an officer of the inquisition that his friend Castelli was permitted to visit him. During his five years' confinement he composed his 'Dialogues on Local Motion,' and in 1636 he discovered the interesting phenomena of the moon's libration. About this time he lost the use of both his eyes, when he was negotiating with the Dutch government respecting his method of finding the longitude. . what later period almost total deafness s and having been attacked with fever a tion of the heart, he died on the 8t 1642, in the seventy-eighth year of hi was buried in the church of Sta Croce i and a splendid monument erected to h in 1737. For further information resp lileo see an admirable life of him in th of Useful Knowledge' by the late Mr. I Bethune, and another of a more popu Sir David Brewster's 'Martyrs of Sc complete edition of his works was p Milan in 1811, in 11 volumes, under 'Opere di Galileo Galilei Nobile Fiorensi

GALILEO, VINCENT, an Ital. mathe

GALITZIN, a Russian statesman, 1

GALL, FRANCIS JOSEPH, the found celebrated intellectual or cerebral physiol as Phrenology: born at Tiefenbrun duchy of Baden, 9th March, 1758; di in 1828. The incidents of Gall's life numerous, and resemble those of many pounders of new moral and intellectua in Germany; silenced by one governm boured for a time by another, he becan compulsion a peripatetic. His longes was in Paris, where, in conjunction wit ciple Spurzheim, he published his chie Gall's fundamental maxims are as fo Moral qualities and intellectual faculti nate. 2. The exercise or manifestatio faculties and qualities depends on our or 3. The brain is the organ of all our app timents, and faculties. 4. The brain i of as many special organs as there are o independent appetites, sentiments, and human nature. 5. The form of the he which in the main corresponds with th the brain, suggests the means of disc observation what are any one's prima and qualities.—Of these maxims the las are peculiar to Gall: they contain the his new philosophy, and suggested his me servation. The philosophy, as distingu all previous physiologies, represents the as an organ, but an apparatus; to each or independent part of which, a distin function belongs: and the task of allo various functions is reduced to that of by aid of multitudes of instances, that nial organ, which always coexists and vari special intellectual power or tendency. ing Observation Gall rightly resorted thod of extreme instances,—seeking th of an organ from the mental accompa its great excess or signal defect. It is in this place to criticise phrenology: its of the skull however, into a region of th and sentiments, a region of the em moral powers, and a region of the faculties—these last subdivided into observation and powers of combinati striking consistency with all the dyna mena of the human mind as manifested th tory. Gall had and still has, many fol expositors: in Scotland the place of ho questionably occupied by Mr. Combe burgh.

GALL, St., bishop of Clermont, died 554.
GALLA, a doge of Venice, killed 755.
GALLACCINI, T., an Ital. savant, 1564-1641.
GALLAIS, J. P., a Fr. journalist, 1756-1820.
GALLAND, A., a Fr. Orientalist, 1646-1715.
GALLAND, A., a French historian, 16th cent.
GALLAND, And., a Venetian savant, d. 1779.
GALLETTI, J. G. A., a Ger. hist., 1750-1828.
GALLETTI, P. L., an Ital. savant, 1724-1790.
GALLI, J. A., an Ital. philosopher, 1708-1784.
GALLIANI, Ferdinand, an Italian ecclesiastic, economist, and political writer, 1728-1787.
GALLIENUS, emperor of Rome, 260-268.
GALLIMARD, J. E., a Fr. mathem., d. 1771.
GALLO, A., an Ital. agriculturist, 1499-1570.
GALLO, And., an Ital. mathem., 1732-1814.
GALLOIS, John, a French savant, 1632-1707.
GALLOIS, Julian J. C. Le, a Fr. physiologist, b. of 'Exper. on the Principle of Life,' d. 1818.
GALLONIO, Ant., an It. ecclesiastic, d. 1605.
GALLUS, Ælius, a Roman general, 1st c. B.C.
GALLUS, Ælius, a Roman jurisconsult, 1st c.
GALLUS, Caius, a Roman astronomer, said to predicted or explained an eclipse, 2d c. B.C.
GALLUS, Caius Vibius Trebonianus, em- of Rome, proclaimed 251, assassinated 253.
GALLUS, Cneus, or PUBLIUS CORNE- a Roman poet and general, governor of killed himself, when disgraced 69-26 B.C.
GALLUS, Flavius Constantinus, nephew ntine and brother of Julian, intrusted as ith the gov. of the East 315, beheaded 354.
GALLUZZI, R., an Italian historian, d. 1801.
GALT, John, a Scotch miscel. wr., 1779-1839.
GALUPPI, B., an Ital. composer, 1703-1785.
GALVANI, Luigi, born at Bologna 1737, died A distinguished physician and physiologist. e of Galvani has become a household word. t discovery of galvanism appears to have ds about 1790 The story as told is as —The physician had been preparing some p for his sick wife, and some of these ani- were lying stripped of their skins. An assis- accidentally touched the crural nerves of the animals with the point of a scalpel in eighbourhood of the conductor of an electrical ine, which stood on the table, when the limbs immediately thrown into convulsions. Gal- soon satisfied himself that this same pheno- occurred with all animals' muscles, and thus the basis of the great science which has been erected. Galvani fell into a melancholy from death of his wife, and the loss of his offices the occupation of Italy by the French, preyed his mind, although he was ultimately restored to position a short period before his death in 1798. account of his discovery of galvanism is con- ined in his treatise 'De Viribus Electricitatis in Motu Musculari Commentarius, 1791.' [R.D.T.]
GALVER, L., a Spanish poet, 1549-1610.
GAMA, Anthony De Leon Y., a Mexican geographer and astronomer, end of 18th century.
GAMA, J. De, a Portugnese mariner, 17th ct.
GAMA, Jeanne, a Portug. poetess, 1515-86.
GAMA, Pil. J., a Portuguese poet, 1713-1742.
GAMA, Vasco De, a Portuguese gentleman belonging to the household of Emanuel, king of Portugal, was a native of the small seaport town of Sines in that country; the date of his birth is uncertain, and little is known of the events of his life till he was sent out on a voyage to India, in 1497, ten years after the practicability of the passage by this noted promontory had been established by Diaz. He sailed July 8, with three small vessels, carrying sixty men; and, after encountering tremendous gales in the neighbourhood of the Cape, which so discouraged his men, that he had the utmost difficulty in prevailing on them to persevere, he succeeded in doubling this dreaded headland Nov. 19th, and steered E. and then N.E. along the African coast till he reached Melinda, in lat. 2½° S. Here he found Christian merchants from India; guided by one of whom he crossed the Indian ocean to Calicut between May 5th and 28th, 1498, being the first European who navigated these seas. Returning to Lisbon, September, 1499, he was received with distinguished honour by his sovereign, who conferred upon him the title of admiral of the Indian, Persian, and Arabian seas. The expedition of Cabral followed; and in 1502 De Gama was again sent out with a powerful fleet. He returned in the end of the following year laden with rich treasures, and was created count of Videqueyra. For twenty years discovery and conquest in the east had been prosecuted by others, when De Gama, appointed governor of Portuguese India, sailed for Cochin. He died, however, soon after his arrival, December, 1525. 'Married to immortal verse,' the exploits of De Gama have gained a greater celebrity than sober history warrants. Diaz had already robbed the formidable Cape of its terrors—had determined its place with accuracy; and led the way into seas before unknown. Beyond lay the richest countries of the world; their treasures were unfolded by De Gama after a voyage exhibiting great skill and noble daring; and the results of which are only second in importance to the grand discovery of Columbus. [J.B.]
GAMBA, J. F., a French voyager, 1763-1833.
GAMBARA, L., an Italian painter, 1541-1574.
GAMBARA, V., an Italian poetess, 1485-1550.
GAMBIER, Lord J., an English admiral, commander at the siege of Copenhagen, 1756-1833.
GAMBOLD, John, a scholar and religious writer of the sect of Moravian Brethren, d. 1771.
GAMELIN, J., a French painter, 1739-1803.
GAMURRINI, E., an Ital. historian, 17th cent.
GANDON, Jas., an Engl. architect, 1760-1824.
GANDY, James, an English painter, 1619-89.
GANILLE, C., a Germ. economist, 1758-1836.
GARAMOND, Claude, a French engraver and letter-founder, cel. for his Greek type, d. 1561.
GARAMPI, J., an Italian antiquary, 1725-92.
GARASSE, Francis, a Fr. Jesuit, 1585-1631.
GARAT, Dominic Joseph, a French statesman and metaphysician, ennobled by Buonaparte, 1749-1833. His nephew, Peter John Garat, a celebrated professor of music, 1764-1823.
GARAY, John De, a Spanish officer and traveller in South America, born 1541, killed 1592.
GARAY, Martin De, a Sp. statesm., d. 1822.
GARCIA, Manuel, a Sp. comp., 1779-1832.
GARCIA-DE-MASCARENHAS, Blaise, an epic poet and general of Portugal, 1596-1656.
GARCIA-DE-PAREDES, Don Diego, a famous Sp. commander in Italy, &c., 1466-1530.
GARCIA-SUELTO, a Sp. savant, 1778-1816.

GARCILASO-DE-LA-VEGA. See GARCIAS.

GARCIAS, G., a Span. missionary, 1554-1627.

GARCIAS-LASSO, or GARCILASO-DE-LA-VEGA, a Spanish general and poet, distinguished in the wars of Charles V., 1503-1536. The same name was borne by a descendant of the sovereigns of Peru, called, on that account, 'The Inca,' and distinguished as a writer on the history and antiquities of his country, 1530-1616.

GARCIAS-Y-MATAMOROS, ALPHONSO, a Spanish savant and biographical writer, 16th cent.

GARDEN, ALEX., a Scotch botanist, 1730-91.

GARDEN, FRANCIS, Lord Gardenstone, a Scotch lawyer and miscellaneous wr., 1721-1793.

GARDIÉ, THE COUNTS DE LA, distinguished in Swedish history, trace their origin to Pontus de la Gardie, a French adventurer, who entered the service of the king of Sweden, and married his natural daughter, and was accidentally drowned, 1585. The most distinguished is MAGNUS GABRIEL, Count de la Gardie, grand chancellor and seneschal of Sweden, and a great patron of arts and letters, 1622-1686.

GARDINER, JAMES, a British officer, remarkable for the incidents of his conversion to a religious life, as related by Dr. Doddridge, born 1688, killed at the battle of Prestonpans, 1745.

GARDINER, R., an English divine, 1591-1670.

GARDINER, STEPHEN, bishop of Winchester, distinguished for his learning, his craft as a statesman, and his cruelty to the protestants, but especially as the tool of Henry VIII. in the proceedings against Queen Catherine, 1483-1555.

GARDINER, W., an Irish engraver, 1766-1814.

GARDNER, ALAN, Lord, a British admiral, distinguished at the close of the last cent., d. 1809.

GARIBALDI, a Lombard king, reigned 671.

GARISSOLES, A., a Fr. protes. wr., 1587-1650.

GARNERIN, A. J., a Fr. aeronaut, 1770-1823.

GARNET, HENRY, an English Jesuit, born 1555, author of a work on 'Christian Renovation,' hanged for his part in the gunpowder plot, 1606.

GARNETT, TH., an English physician, au. of works on medicine and natural history, 1766-1802.

GARNIER, COUNT GERMAIN, a French economist, translator of 'Smith's Wealth of Nations,' author of 'Histoire de la Monnaie,' 1754-1821.

GARNIER, J., a French theolog., 1612-1681.

GARNIER, J. J., a Fr. historian, 1729-1805.

GARNIER, JULIUS, a French savant, d. 1725.

GARNIER, R., a Fr. dramatist, 1545-1601.

GARNIER, SEBASTIAN, a French poet, 16th c.

GARNIER-DESCHENES, E. H., a French agriculturist, geographer, and mathe., 1727-1812.

GAROFALO, B., an Ital. artist, 1481-1559.

GAROFALO, B., an Ital. antiqu., 1677-1762.

GARRICK, DAVID, the most respected actor that ever trod the English boards, was born at Hereford, and was baptized in the church of All-Saints, in that city, 28th February, 1716. His father, Captain Peter Garrick, generally resided at Lichfield, but was about that time on a recruiting party; his mother's maiden name was Clough, daughter to one of the vicars in Lichfield cathedral. David at ten years of age was entered of the grammar school at Lichfield. At eleven he formed the project of getting a play acted by young gentlemen and ladies. The trial was made with 'The Recruiting Officer.' One of his sisters played the part of the chambermaid; he himself undertook Serjeant Kite. The after celebrated Doctor, Samuel Johnson, his boy-friend, was applied to for the prologue, which, however, he neglected to write. Not long after Garrick went to Lisbon, at the request of an uncle, a wine merchant there, and was acquainted with the unfortunate Duke d' Aveixo. On his return to England he, in 1736, became one of Johnson's scholars at Lichfield; but the latter growing tired of teaching the classics to two or three pupils, resolved on trying his fortune in London, and thither Garrick accompanied him. Here the latter lost no time in getting introduced to theatrical managers, and in 1741 obtaining an engagement at Ipswich, met with much success, under the assumed name of Lyddal. His first effort was in the pathetic character of Aboan, in 'Oroonoko;' but he matriculated in all kinds of stage business, condescending even to harlequin. In the winter of the same year Garrick ventured on the London stage. On the 19th October, 1741, he made his début in Richard the Third at the playhouse in Goodman's Fields, and with his novel and natural style, startled the critics and the reigning actors. Quin, in particular, was much annoyed, saying—'If the young fellow was right, he and the rest of the players had been all wrong.' Being told that Goodman's Fields theatre was crowded every night to see the new actor, he said—'That Garrick was a new religion; Whitfield was followed for a time; but they would all come to church again.' Whereupon Garrick wrote this epigram:—

'Pope Quin, who damns all churches but his own, Complains that heresy infects the town,
That Whitfield-Garrick has misled the age,
And taints the sound religion of the stage:
Schism, he cries, has turn'd the nation's brain;
But eyes will open, and to church again!
Thou great infallible, forbear to roar,
Thy bulls and errors are revered no more;
When doctrines meet with gen'ral approbation,
It is not heresy, but reformation.'

After a visit to Dublin, Garrick returned to London, and acted at Drury, having entered into an engagement with Fleetwood, the manager, for five hundred pounds a-year. At this theatre he proved equally great in Abel Drugger and Hamlet. He was also wonderful in Lear. But in consequence of Fleetwood's farming the theatre to his treasurer, he soon seceded from the establishment. On his return to the stage he was involved in a controversy with Macklin; and soon after was engaged for Covent Garden. Ultimately he was solicited to purchase the moiety of Drury Lane patent, which he did for eight thousand pounds. When Garrick retired from the stage in 1776, this same patent he sold for thirty-five thousand pounds; a fact which of itself is sufficient warrant of his excellent management. One merit claimed for him is the restoration of 'Macbeth,' and other Shaksperian dramas, with a closer adherence to the text than was then usual. The chief complaint against him was his conduct towards living authors; and it must be confessed, that in him was confirmed that usurpation of the poet's rights by the actor from which the stage is hardly yet emerging. Davies, his biographer, observes on this point that,—'The time bestowed in rehearsing the piece, and the expense of new scenes, dresses, music, and other decorations, make it often very ineligible to a director of a theatre to accept a new play; especially when it is considered that the revival of a good old play will answer his end of profit, and reputation too, perhaps as well.' The actor-manager, as the representative and inheritor of the wealth of all dead poets, proves too powerful a competitor for the living dramatist. In this way tragic actors find Shakspeare a tower of strength, and are by his means enabled to suppress the proofs of living genius. Garrick had strong reasons for the Stratford jubilee in 1769, by which he gained increased celebrity and power. This pageant he afterwards transferred to the stage, where it ran for one hundred nights. Mr. Garrick was also the founder of the Drury Lane Fund for decayed performers. A thoroughly successful man in life, he was equally prudent and benevolent. He lived generously, kept the best society, made lavish gifts to his friends and neighbours, and basked, till his death, in the sun of popular favour. He died 20th January, 1779, and was magnificently interred in Westminster Abbey, being attended to his grave by persons illustrious for their genius and rank. In the opinion of his admirers he was the greatest actor that ever graced the stage. He was certainly the most exemplary as a man and moralist; and preserved, if he did not originate, the dignity of his profession. He was also the author of several dramatic pieces, some of which display considerable humour, and of many brief poems, prologues, and epilogues, abounding in wit, and in allusions to the manners of his time. [J.A.H.]

GARRICK, Eva Maria, wife of the celebrated actor, originally an opera dancer, 1725-1822.

GARROS, P. De, a Saxon poet, 15th century.

GARROS, P. A., a French mechanic, d. 1823.

GARTH, Sir Samuel, an English physician and poet, author of 'The Dispensary,' a burlesque poem, 'Claremont,' an edition of 'Ovid's Metamorphoses,' and some fugitive pieces, 1671-1718.

GARTH, Thomas, an Engl. general, 1744-1829.

GARTHSHORE, M., an English physician, fellow of the Royal and Antiq. Societies, 1732-1812.

GARVE, Chr., a Ger. metaphysician, 1742-98.

GARZI, Louis, an Italian painter, 1638-1721.

GARZONI, J., an Italian savant, 1419-1506.

GARZONI, P., a Venetian hist., d. abt. 1719.

GARZONI, Th., an Italian author, 1549-1589.

GASCOIGNE, G., an English poet, died 1577.

GASCOIGNE, W., a nat. philosopher, 1621-44.

GASCOIGNE, Sir Wm., chief justice of England in the reign of Henry IV., celebrated for the firmness, independence, and dignity with which he maintained his office, lived 1350-1413. He was ancestor of the earl of Strafford, who was executed in the reign of Charles I.

GASMANN, F. L., a Germ. composer, 1729-74.

GASPARIN, T. A., a French republican, mem. of the convention and Com. of Pub. Safety, d. 1793.

GASPARINI, F., an Ital. composer, 1650-1724.

GASPARINO, B., an Ital. scholar, 1370-1459.

GASSENDI, Pierre, born 22d January, 1592, near Digne; died in Paris 24th October, 1655: in the words of Tennemann, the most learned among the philosophers, and the ablest philosopher among the learned, of the seventeenth century. In speculative thinking, Gassendi represented the Sensational School, of which he may be considered the Founder in modern times: as such, he made stand against the Meditations of Des Cartes. In the eager polemic between these remarkable men, the critical question of Sensationalism, almost in the form in which it still presents itself, was fairly raised: it must be conceded that the temper and moderation lay with Gassendi, although, in the estimation of the writer of this notice, the weight of argument belonged to his illustrious opponent. During the disputation, Gassendi had the merit of insisting that every mental conception of Principle, is necessarily preceded by the fact of an Experience; an assertion by no means sufficient to establish his philosophy, but remarkable as having first given expression to a maxim now held alike by Sensationalists and Idealists,—that in Sensation is the beginning or the occasion of all knowledge; a maxim of which Des Cartes himself, perhaps, saw enough to render unjustifiable Locke's subsequent singular misrepresentation of the doctrine of innate ideas. This proposition granted, however, it in nowise follows, as Gassendi contended, that the content of sensation is the measure of human knowledge; or that an Absolute and Necessary Truth is a mere generalization. Rational Psychology, according to Des Cartes, contradicts this: the attributes of universality and necessity cannot attach to simple generalizations; and these attributes belong to many of our ideas. It is hardly requisite to say that the dispute thus raised, exists still: nay, the student desirous to master it, will scarcely find better instructors than Des Cartes and Gassendi.—Gassendi was one of our most distinguished reformers, at a period when many great minds pushed forward the work of reform, —claiming independence for thought. It may be forgiven, perhaps, that in his early work against the authority of Aristotle, he was not careful to separate the true doctrines of the immortal Stagyrite, from wretched and sapless formulæ deduced from him by the Schoolmen; or that in his youthful zeal, he failed to approach with rightful respect, that great Shade to which so many ages have done willing reverence. His attack on Aristotle is the weakest of his writings, and cannot be acquitted of rashness: nevertheless, he was not wanting in respect for antiquity,—witness his treatment of Epicurus. His life of this philosopher is one of the best and most appreciatory memoirs, among the many that have been given of him: he wrote con amore. The Atomic Philosophy suited Gassendi's predilections; and one respects the just ardour with which he vindicates the character of his master, and clears his doctrines from vulgar misapprehension. Gassendi's attachment to physical inquiries was strong: although not an original discoverer, the labours of no man of that day contributed more to diffuse right principles regarding the method of physical inquiry. In this department, his superiority to the Cartesians cannot be questioned: Des Cartes himself knew too little of that sphere of pure Induction, within which what we term Law or general Truths, can be nothing other than generalizations. As might have been expected he adopted the Copernican system of the Universe, cautiously but intelligently; and greatly contributed to bring about a right understanding of its significance. His life of Copernicus is a composition of much interest; although probably inferior to his life of Tycho. He was a friend and correspondent of Galileo; he avowed himself the disciple of Bacon; and unquestionably his writings prepared the way for those of Locke.—Gassendi's personal character was of the highest order; gentle, serene, and dignified; modest, notwithstanding his wide repute; impartial and forbearing. As a pious and faithful ecclesiastic he achieved a place in the hearts of the mountaineers amidst whom he lived, which long after years did not efface: they raised a statue to his memory.—The works of this industrious thinker and voluminous writer have appeared in various forms. The Sieur de Montmort, to whom he bequeathed the duty, published a complete edition of them at Lyons, in 6 vols. folio, in 1658: another edition appeared at Florence in 1727, edited by Averanius. [J.P.N.]

GASSICOURT, Ch. Louis Cadet De, a French writer on natural philosophy, &c., d. 1823.

GASSIES, J., a French painter, 1786-1832.

GASSION, J. De, a Fr. marshal, 1609-1647.

GAST, John, an Irish historian, 1715-1788.

GASTON DE FOIX. See Foix.

GASTRELL, Fr., bishop of Chester time of Queen Anne, a wr. on the Trinity, &c., 1662-1725.

GASULL, A., a Spanish painter, 17th century.

GATAKER, Thomas, an English theologian and biblical critic, 1574-1654. His son, Charles, was distinguished as a controversial divine.

GATTEAUX, N. M., a Fr. medal., 1751-1832.

GATTERER, J. C., a Ger. savant, 1727-1789.

GATTI, Bernard, an Ital. painter, 16th cent.

GATTI, Oliver, an Italian painter, 16th cent.

GAUBIL, Anth., a Sp. Jesuit and philosopher, celeb. as a missionary to the Chinese, 1689-1759.

GAUBIUS, J. D., a Ger. medical wr., 1705-80.

GAUCHER, C. S., a Fr. engraver, 1740-1804.

GAUDEN, John, an English divine, 1605-62.

GAUDENTIO, an Italian painter, 15th cent.

GAUDENTIUS, St., bishop of Brescia, au. of a life of his predecessor Philaster, died about 427.

GAUDENZI, P., an Italian poet, 1749-1784.

GAUDENZIO, P., an Ital. savant, 1596-1648.

GAUDIN, L. P., a Span. painter, 1556-1621.

GAUFFIER, L., a French painter, 1761-1801.

GAUFRIDI, J. Fr. De, a Fr. hist., 1622-89.

GAUGAIN, Th., a Fr. engraver, last century.

GAUGHER, N., a Fr. natur. philos., 1680-1730.

GAULLI, G. B., an Italian painter, 1639-1709.

GAULMIN, G., a Fr. miscel. au., 1585-1665.

GAULT, Eustace, a French hist., 1591-1640.

GAULTHIER, W., a French jurist, died 892.

GAULTIER, Aloisius Edward Camille, a French ecclesiastic of distinguished benevolence, founder of schools for the poor, &c., 1745-1818.

GAULTIER OF COUTANCES, archbishop of Rouen, disting. as a political negotiator, died 1207.

GAULTIER OF TEROUANE, a Fr. hist., 12th c.

GAUPP, John, a German mathema., d. 1738.

GAURI, a Mameluke sultan, died 1517.

GAUSSIN, J. C., a French actress, 1711-1767.

GAUTHEROT, Ch., a Fr. painter, 1769-1825.

GAUTHEROT, N., a French natural philosopher, au. of 'Researches in Electricity,' 1753-1803.

GAUTHEY, E. M., a Fr. engineer, 1732-1806.

GAVARD, H., a French anatomist, 1753-1802.

GAVEAUX, P., a Fr. composer, 1761-1825.

GAVESTON, Piers, a Gascon gentleman, cel. as the favourite of Edward II., beheaded 1312.

GAVIROL, Soliman Ben, a Spanish rabbi, grammarian, philosopher, astronom., &c., d. 1070.

GAY, John, who was born in 1688, and died in 1732, was first a silk-weaver's shopman, but became an author, and the easy dependent of gay and great people. He had much note in his own day as a pastoral and mock-heroic poet; and his name is still preserved by his notorious 'Beggars' Opera,' and his fluent and agreeable 'Fables.' Perhaps he deserves remembrance better for his ballads, 'Black-Eyed Susan,' and 'Twas when the Seas were Roaring.' [W.S.]

GAY, J. J. Pascal, a Fr. architect, 1775-1832.

GAY LUSSAC, N. F., one of the most disting. chemists of modern times, is described by all his associates as equally characterized by the amiability of his disposition, his kindness to the student, and his disinterested and generous nature. Brought up in the laboratory of Berthollet, he subsequently showed that he had eminently benefitted by the instructions of such a master in the science. His first important discovery was that in 1808 of the union of gases by volume, forming an additional argument in favour of the atomic theory of Dalton in 1804, of the union of bodies by definite weights in the formation of chemical compounds. He took an active part in the investigation of iodine in 1813, and in 1815 he made the important discovery of cyanogen, which although a compound gas performs all the functions of a simple body. Gay Lussac was possessed of great powers of practical application; it is only necessary to refer to his alcolometer, to his process of chlorimetry, and to his very convenient method of assay of silver by the wet way, which has been familiar for above twenty years to those who were fortunate enough to visit the Parisian mint, so ably conducted under the auspices of the subject of our notice. His long and useful life terminated on the 9th May, 1850, after several months' illness, having been a member of the Academy from 1806. [R.D.T.]

GAY VERNON, J., a French marshal, distinguished for his gallantry as an officer, and for his talents as a mathematical writer, 1760-1822.

GAY VERNON, Leonard, a French republican and ecclesiastic, constitutional bishop of Vienne, 1748-1822. His brother, Joseph, an officer and wr. on the art of fortifica., 1760-1822.

GAYOT-DE-PITAVAL, Fr., a French writer, author of 'Causes Célèbres,' &c., 1673-1743.

GAYTON, E., an Engl. humourist, 1609-1666.

GAYWOOD, R., an Engl. engraver, 17th cent.

GAZA, or GAZIS, Theodore, a Greek scholar and grammarian, celebrated as one of the chief revivers of Grk. learn. in Europe, 1398-1478.

GAZALI, a Mahommedan savant, 1058-1112.

GAZÆUS, an ecclesiastical hist., 1554-1612.

GAZI-HASSAN, a Turkish statesman, d. 1790.

GAZZANIZA, J., an It. composer, 1748-1810.

GEBELIN. See Court-De-Gebelin.

GEBER, John, an Arabian alchemist and philosopher of the 9th century.

GEBHARD, J., a Grk. philologist, 1692-1782.

GEBHARDI, J. L. Levin, a German historian, au of 'Hist. and Genealogical Memoirs,' 1699-1764.

GEBHARDI, L. A., a Ger. historian, d. 1802.
GEBLER, T. P., Baron De, a German diplomatist, statesman, and savant, 1726-1786.
GED, William, a Scotch goldsmith, inventor of the art of stereotyping, died 1749.
GEDDES, Dr. Alex., a Scottish Roman Catholic divine, dist. as a learned wr., 1737-1802.
GEDDES, James, a Scotch advocate, 1710-49.
GEDDES, Michael, an ecclesiastical historian, chaplain at Lisbon, died 1714.
GEDIKE, F., a Prussian writer on education, translator of the classics, &c., 1754-1803.
GEDOYN, N., a French savant, 1667-1744.
GEDYMIN, duke of Lithuania, reigned 1315-41.
GEER, L., a Dutch statesman, settled in Sweden by Gustavus Adolphus. Charles De Geer, his descendant, a dist. Swedish naturalist, 1720-1778.
GEHEMA, J. A., a Polish medical wr., 17th c.
GEHLEN, A. F., a German chemist, d. 1815.
GEHLER, J. C., a German naturalist, 1732-96.
GEHLER, J. S. Traugott, a German jurist, chemist, physician, and mathematician, 1751-1795.
GEHLER, W., a German savant, 1696-1765.
GEHREN, C. Chr., a Ger. theol., 1763-1832.
GEIER, Martin, a Germ. Lutheran, 1614-81.
GEILER, John, a Swiss divine, 1445-1510.
GEILHOVEN, A., a Dutch theologian, 15th ct.
GEINOZ, F., a French antiquarian, died 1752.
GEISA, the first of the name, king of Hungary, reigned 1075-1077; the second, 1141-1161.
GELADAS, a Greek sculptor, 5th century B.C.
GELASIUS, the name of two bishops of Cæsarea, the earliest of whom, called 'The Elder,' author of some theological fragments, died 394; the second, called Gelasius of Cyzicus, au. of a history of the Council of Nice, lived about 476.
GELASIUS, bishop of Rome, 492-496; Gelasius, pope of Rome, 1118-1119.
GELDENHAUR, G., a German savant, commonly called 'Gerard of Nimeguen,' 1482-1542.
GELDER, A. De, a Dutch painter, 1645-1727.
GELEE. See Claude.
GELENIUS, S., a German savant, 1498-1555.
GELL, Sir William, a celebrated English antiquarian and classical scholar, 1777-1836.
GELLERT, Christian Furchtegott, a popular German poet and moralist, 1715-1769.
GELLERT, Christlieb Ehregott, elder br. of the preced., celeb. as a metallurgist, 1713-1795.
GELLI, J. B., an Italian author, 1498-1563.
GELLIBRAND, H., an English astronomer, author of many practical works, 1597-1636.
GELLIUS, Aulus, a Roman lawyer and literary savant, flourished at the beginning of the 2d century, author of the 'Attic Nights,' one of the most curious and valuable works of antiquity.
GELON, a.k. of Syracuse, reigned 491-478 B.C.
GEMBICIUS, J., a Polish theolog., 1569-1633.
GEMIGNANO, an Italian painter, 1490-1530.
GEMINIANI, Francesco, one of the greatest violinists of his age, was born at Lucca about the year 1666. He received his first lessons on the instrument from Carlo Ambrogio Lonati of Milan, and the foundation of his musical knowledge was laid by Alessandro Scarlatti. His last master on the violin was Corelli. Geminiani composed three sets of concertos, a work on Harmony, two treatises on the Art of Playing the Violin, and several pieces for the harpsichord. In the year 1714 he came to London, and soon established his reputation as a great artist. Geminiani seldom played in public, and the money he received for his compositions, the fees from pupils, and the presents he received from the noble and the wealthy when he could be prevailed upon to play at their houses, were the chief means from which he derived his living. Even with such sources of emoluments he might have made a fortune, but he was improvident. Geminiani died at Dublin in 1762. [J.M.]
GEMINUS, Th., an English painter, 16th ct.
GEMISTUS, George, surnamed 'Pletho,' a Greek philosopher, and writer on the wisdom of antiquity, 1390-1491.
GEMMA, R., a Dutch physician, 1508-1577.
GENEBRAND, G., a Fr. Hebraist, died 1597.
GENEST, Ch. Cl., a French poet, 1639-1719.
GENET, Francis, a Fr. casuist, 1640-1702.
GENEVIEVE, the patron saint of Paris, believed to have contributed to the conversion of Clovis, born at Nanterre about 423, d. about 512.
GENGHIS KHAN, the founder of the great Mogul empire, and of the dynasty now tottering on the throne of China, was the son of a simple chief, and was born in Tartary in 1164. He succeeded to his father's authority when only fourteen years of age, and soon afterwards, being compelled to take up arms in self-defence, struck terror into his opponents by his military talents and ferocious disposition. In 1205 he was crowned grand khan of all the Moguls and Tartars in a ceremony of great state, in the course of which he was hailed lord of the four quarters of the world, in a manner well calculated to excite the enthusiasm of his followers. In 1213 he was master of Pekin and all Northern China, and a few years subsequently had subjugated Persia and the most fertile regions of Asia, dying in the heat of his conquests 1227. His grandson, in 1255, seized on Bagdad, and completed the extirpation of Mohammedanism began by his ancestor. [E.R.]
GENLIS, Stephanie, Countess De, was a native of Burgundy, and born in 1746. Becoming well known in society after her marriage had given her aristocratic rank, she was chosen as gouvernante to the children of the notorious Duke of Orleans; and by him she had a daughter, who was married, in 1792, to the unfortunate Lord Edward Fitzgerald. She died, after a wandering life, in 1830, when her pupil, Louis Philippe, had just become king of the French. Her writings were numerous and miscellaneous; the principal of them being novels, which possess little merit either of style or of matter, while they teach, with an affectation of fine sentiment, a morality very slippery and accommodating. Her best and least exceptionable works are her stories and dramas for youth; such as 'Adèle and Theodore,' 'The Tales of the Castle,' and 'The Theatre of Education.' [W.S.] GENNADIUS, the name of two patriarchs of Constantinople, the first of whom ruled the church, 458-471, and the second after the capture of the city by the Turks, 1453-1460. The latter is author of several theological works.
GENNADIUS, presb. of Marseilles, 5th cent.
GENNARI, Benedetto, an Italian painter, one of the masters of Guercino, flourished 1633-1715. His son, Barthelemi, a painter, born 1594. His second son, Hercules, pupil of Guer-cino, 1597-1658. The eldest son of Hercules, called BENEDETTO THE YOUNGER, a pupil of Guercino, and painter to Charles II. and James II. of England, 1633-1715. CÆSAR, the son of the latter, continued the school of Guercino at Bologna, and died there 1688.

GENNARO, JOSEPH AURELIUS DE, a Neapolitan magistrate and jurisconsult, 1701-1762.

GENGELS, A., a Flemish painter, born 1640.

GENOVESI, ANTONIO, an Italian metaphysician and political economist, 1712-1769.

GENSERIC, king of the Vandals in Spain, b. at Seville 406, succeeded his broth. 428, d. 477.

GENSONNE, ARMAND, a distinguished member of the Girondist party of the Fr. revolution, guillotined after the events of the 31st Oct., 1793.

GENSSANE, a French naturalist, died 1780.

GENT, THOMAS, an English antiq., 1691-1778.

GENTIEN, B., a French historian, 15th cent.

GENTILE, L. G., a Flem. painter, 1606-1670.

GENTILIS, ALBERICO, an Italian jurist, 1551-1611. His son, ROBERT, a doctor of the civil law, translator, &c., born 1590. His brother, SCIPIO, also a writer on public law, 1563-1616.

GENTILIS, J. V., a Socinian of Naples, beheaded in Switzerland for heresy, 1566.

GENTIUS, G., a German Orientalist, 1618-87.

GENTLEMAN, F., an Irish dramatist, 1728-84.

GENTZ, FRED. VON, a Prussian statesman and antagonist of the French revolution, author of 'The State of Europe at the End of the 18th Century,' &c., 1760-1832.

GEOFFREY OF MONMOUTH, author of a famous chronicle or history of the first British kings, often quoted by men of letters, and remarkable for its curious legends. Geoffrey was successively archdeacon of Monmouth, bishop of St. Asaph, and abbot of Abingdon, where he died 1154.

GEOFFREY I., duke of Brittany, succeeded his father 992, slain on returning from a pilgrimage to Rome 1008. GEOFFREY II., third son of Henry II., king of England, succeeded to the dukedom by marriage 1175, died 1186.

GEOFFREY I., count of Anjou, reigned 958-988. GEOFFREY II., reigned 1039-1060. GEOFFREY III., reigned conjointly with his brother until the latter despoiled him of the government 1060-1067. Another GEOFFREY, called 'Plantagenet,' was duke of Normandy, and count of Anjou and Maine towards the middle of the 12th ct.

GEOFFROI OF AUXERRE, a disciple of Abelard, author of several theological works, d. after 1180.

GEOFFROI OF PRUILLY, a French knight, distinguished as the stock of the counts of Vendome, and the legislator of tournaments, d. 1068.

GEOFFROY, LOUIS JULIAN, a French critic, celeb. for his censures on the drama, 1743-1814.

GEOFFROY, STEPHEN FRANCIS, a celebrated French physician and chemist, member of the Academy of Sciences, professor of chemistry to the Garden of Plants, and of medicine and pharmacy to the College of France, 1672-1731. His brother, CLAUDE JOSEPH, a naturalist and physiological author, 1685-1752. STEPHEN LOUIS, son of Stephen Francis, a dist. naturalist, 1725-1810.

GEOFFROY ST. HILAIRE, ETIENNE, a celebrated zoologist, was born at Etampes in 1772. He died in 1844.—He was a pupil of the great mineralogist Haüy, and was appointed through his recommendation assistant-keeper and strator of the museum of natural history Garden of Plants. A few months afterw became professor of zoology there, and fro time forwards he devoted himself with great that particular branch of natural histor 1798 he was appointed one of the scientifi mission which accompanied the French a Egypt, and it is to his firmness France o possession of the papers and drawings that country by himself and colleagues. U return from Egypt he resumed his situation Garden of Plants; but in 1810 he was ag spatched by government on a mission to P
Here he collected a vast quantity of miner animals from the museums of that count succeeded in transporting them to Paris.
froy is the author of many important memo valuable works upon zoology. The most tant, perhaps, of all is his 'Philosophie tomique,' the chief object of which is to strate throughout the animal kingdom a plan of organization, recognizable by the ex not of the same organs, but of the materials same organs in all. In connection with Geoffroy has contributed much to the prog zoology in Europe. They created a sc which the study assumed a truly scientific ter, and one which will long continue to e a salutary influence over the labours of succ generations.

(Tomb of Geoffroy St. Hilaire.)

GEORGE. The kings of England of thi are—GEORGE (LEWIS) I., son of Ernest Au elector of Hanover, by Sophia, daughter o eric, elector palatine, and grand-daughter of I., born at Osnabruck 1660; created duke o bridge 1706; succeeded Queen Anne, an commenced the house of Hanover 1714; d
GEORGE (AUGUSTUS) II., only son of th ceding and the Princess Sophia, daughter duke of Zell, born 1683; married to the P
Caroline of Brandenburgh-Anspach 1705;
1716; succeeded 1727; died after a vi career in the Spanish and German wars, a total subjugation of the Stuarts, 1760. G

(William Frederic) III., grandson of the preceding, and son of Frederic Louis, prince of Wales, born 1738; duke of Gloucester and prince of Wales on the death of his father 1751; succeeded to the throne 25th October, 1760; married to the Princess Charlotte Sophia, of Mecklenburgh Strelitz 1761; died, after nine years of mental aberration, 1820. George (Augustus Frederic) IV., eldest son of George III. and Queen Charlotte, born 1762; created prince of Wales and earl of Chester the same month; married to Mrs. Fitzherbert 1784; married to his cousin, Caroline Amelia Elizabeth, second daughter of the duke of Brunswick, 1795; separated from his wife, Caroline, shortly after the birth of the Princess Charlotte 1796; appointed regent in consequence of his father's mental incapacity 1811; crowned king 1820; died 26th June, 1830.

GEORGE I., king of Georgia, reigned 1015-1027. George II., 1072-1089. George III., 1156-1180. George IV., surnamed 'Lascha,' from about 1198-1223. George V., 1304-1306. George VI., 1306-1336. George VII., 1394-1407. George VIII., 1524-1534. George IX., 1600-1603. George X., 1676-1709. George XI., who was the last king of Georgia, his son, David, having ceded his hereditary states to Alexander, emperor of Russia, succeeded his father Demetrius II. 1798, died 1800.

GEORGE, or JOURI I., grand duke of Russia, and founder of Moscow, reigned 1149-1156. George II., succeeded 1212, dethroned by his brother Constantine 1217, killed in battle 1257. George III., succeeded 1302, killed 1320.

GEORGE, prince of Denmark, son of Frederic III., and brother of Christian V., born 1653, married to the Princess Anne, daughter of James II., and subsequently queen of England, 1683, appointed grand admiral of England on her accession 1702, died 1708.

GEORGE, patriarch of Alexandria, 620-630.

GEORGE II., patriarch of Armenia, 876-897.

GEORGE III., patriarch of Armenia, 1071-73.

GEORGE, surnamed 'Amira,' an Oriental scholar, and patriarch of the Maronites, d. 1641.

GEORGE CADOUDAL. See Cadoudal.

GEORGE-LE-FOULON, 'The Cappadocian,' bp. of Alexandria 356, deposed by the Arians 362.

GEORGE, Pisides, a Greek poet, 7th cent.

GEORGE, Saint, the patron of England and Genoa, a supposed prince of Cappadocia, martyred in the persecution under Diocletian, 3d century.

GEORGE of Trebizond, a Greek grammarian, professor of rhetoric and philosophy at Vienna, and secretary to Nicholas V., died 1484.

GEORGEL, J. F., a French Jesuit, 1731-1813.

GEORGES, Chevalier De St., a French violinist, musical comp., and swordsman, d. 1801.

GEORGET, James, a French artist, celebrated as a painter on Sevres porcelain, 1760-1823.

GEORGI, C. S., a German philologist, 1702-71.

GEORGI, J. G., a German naturalist and wr. on the geography and ethnology of Russia, d. 1802.

GEORGIADÈS, a Greek author, last century.

GEORGIEWITZ, B., a Hungarian gentleman, long time captive among the Turks, and author of a work on Turkish manners, died 1560.

GEORGII, E. F. De, a Ger. jurist, 1757-1830.

GERALDINI, A., an Ital. prelate, 1455-1525.

GERAMB, Baron Ferd., a military adven., descended from a noble Hung. family, and employed in the military service of Austria and Spain, author of 'Letters to Earl Moira,' born 1770.

GERANDO, Marie Joseph De, born 1772, died in 1842: a French metaphysician of considerable note. He possessed a mind of much lucidity, and his industry was great. He improved on the system of Condillac—rather returning to that of Locke. He may be called a logical preacher of the Scotch school. His chief work is the 'Histoire Comparée des Systèmes de Philosophie;' but he wrote much besides on education and philanthropic institutions. His other important work is entitled 'De la Bienfaisan Publique.'

GERARD, an Arabian scholar, 1114-1187.

GERARD, count of Auvergne, 839-841.

GERARD, duke of Lorraine, 1047-1070.

GERARD, a Hungarian missionary, killed 1047.

GERARD, Alexander, an eminent divine of the Church of Scotland, professor of moral philosophy and logic at Marischal College, author of 'An Essay on Taste,' 'An Essay on Genius,' 'Dissertations on the Genius and Evidences of Christianity,' &c., 1728-1795. His son, Gilbert, a theologian and biblical critic, died 1815.

GERARD, Balthasar, a Roman Catholic fanatic, assassin of William I., prince of Orange, 1584.

GERARD, Francois, a Fr. paint., 1770-1837.

GERARD, G. J., a Flemish antiqu., 1734-1814.

GERARD, James, an English surgeon and traveller in the Himalaya mountains, died 1835.

GERARD, Louis, a Fr. botanist, 1733-1819.

GERARD, L. P., a French moralist, 1737-1813.

GERARD, Maurice Stephen, Count, a distinguished French marshal, 1773-1851.

GERARD of Vercel, a Fr. philol., 1480-1544.

GERARD-DE-RAYNEVAL, J. M., a French diploma., and writer on public affairs, 1736-1812.

GERARD-GROOT, or The Great, a Dutch theologian, and founder of a community of savants, kn. as the canons regular of Windeshem, 1340-84.

GERARD-THOM, or TENQUE, the founder and first grand master of the Knights Hospitallers of St. John of Jerusalem, 1040-1121.

GERARDE, J., an Engl. herbalist, 1545-1607.

GERARDIN, S., a French natural., 1751-1816.

GERARDS, Mark, a Flem. paint., 1561-1635.

GERBAIN, J., a French savant, 1629-1699.

GERBER, Sir Balthasar, a Flemish painter, knighted by Charles I., 1592-1667.

GERBERON, G., a French ecclesiastic, author of a 'History of Jansenism,' 1628-1711.

GERBERT, M., a German savant, 1720-1793.

GERBIER, P. J. B., a French lawyer, 1725-88.

GERBILLON, J. F., a Fr. mission., 1654-1707.

GERCKER, P. G., a Prussian writer on the ancient diplomacy of Brandenbourg, &c., 1722-91.

GERDÈS, D., a German theologian, 1698-1765.

GERDIL, Hyacinth Sigismond, an Italian cardinal, theologian, and philosopher, 1718-1802.

GERHARD, E., a Germ. philoso., 1682-1718.

GERHARD, John, a German Lutheran theologian, 1582-1637. His son, J. E. Gerhard, a theologian and Oriental scholar, 1623-1668.

GERICAULT, Jean Louis Theodore Andre, was born at Rouen in 1790. He was the pupil of Guerin, and became a great historical painter, and not less so for treating his subjects in a familiar manner; he was also a genre painter of high class. His peculiar powers are well illustrated in the great and magnificent picture of the 'Shipwreck of the Medusa,' painted in 1819, and now in the Louvre at Paris: there is a very beautiful mezzotint of this picture by S. W. Reynolds. Gericault died almost at the threshold of his promised great career in 1824.—(Gabet, Dictionnaire des Artistes, &c.) [R.N.W.]

GERING, Ulric, a Swiss painter, died 1510.

GERLAC, P., a Dutch ascetic, 1378-1411.

GERLACH, B. T., a Germ. savant, 1698-1756.

GERLACH, Stephen, a German theologian, preacher and traveller, 1546-1612.

GERMAIN, M., a Fr. antiquarian, 1645-1694.

GERMAIN, Peter, a French artist in gold and silver, 1647-1682. His son, Thomas, dist. as a goldsmith, sculptor, and architect, 1673-1748.

GERMAIN, Saint, bp. of Auxerre, died 448.

GERMAIN, Saint, bishop of Paris, died 576.

GERMAIN of Silesia, a German monk, author of an Arabain and Italian dictionary, 17th ct.

GERMAIN, Sophia, a French lady, cel. as a wr. on natural philosophy and mathematics, 1776-1821.

GERMANICUS, Tiberius Drusus Cæsar, son of Claudius Drusus Nero and the younger Antonia, a niece of Augustus, was commander of the Roman legions in Germany when Augustus died in the year 14, and refused at the hands of his soldiers the offer of the Roman empire. He was a great and successful general, and was recalled to Rome by Tiberius, of whom he was the nephew and adopted heir, to enjoy the honours of a triumph, from which he was sent to a command in the East. He d. at Antioch, at the age of thirty-four, A.D. 19.

GERMANUS, the first of the name, patriarch of Constantinople, 715-740; the second, from 1222 to 1240, and again during the last year of his life, 1254-1255; the third, a few months in 1267.

GERMON, B., a French Jesuit, author of 'De Veteribus Regium Fr. Diplomatibus,' 1663-1718.

GERRARD of Haerlem, a Dutch painter, one of the first to practise in oil, 1460-1488.

GERRARDS, G. P. Van, a Dutch painter, the friend and imitator of Vandyck, 1607-1667.

GERSON, Chr., a German Talmudist, d. 1627.

GERSON, G. C. De, a Fr. divine, 1363-1421.

GERSTEN, C. L., a Germ. mathem., 1701-62.

GERSTENBERG, H. W. De, a German philosopher, dram. author, poet, and critic, 1737-1823.

GERTRUDE, the name of three Roman Catholic saints, the first, abbess of Nivelle, 626-659; the second, an abbess of the order of St. Benedict, and author of 'Revelations,' died 1034; the third, a daughter of Saint Elizabeth of Hungary, d. 1297.

GERVAIS, an English ecclesiastic of the middle ages, author of 'Letters,' died 1228.

GERVAISE, Nicholas, a French missionary, author of descriptions of Siam and Macassar, killed by the Caribs, 1662-1729. Armand Francis, his brother, a biographical writer, died 1751.

GERVAISE of Tilbury, an English poet and historian, both in the Latin tongue, died 1218.

GESENIUS, Frederic Henry William, an eminent German philologist and Oriental scholar, professor of Hebrew at the university of Halle, au. of a well-known Hebrew Lexicon, &c., 1786-1842.

GESENIUS, W., a German phys., 1760-1801.

GESNER, Conrad, a native of Zurich, distinguished as an indefatigable scholar, philosopher, and naturalist, 1516-1561.

GESNER, J. J., a missionary of Zurich, author of 'Numismata Antiqua Populorum et Urbium,' &c., 1707-1787. His brother, John, a physician and naturalist, 1709-1787.

GESNER, J. M., a philologist and classical scholar, born near Anspach, 1691-1761. His brother, Andrew Samuel, a distinguished savant, 1690-1778. J. Albert, his younger brother, distinguished as a naturalist, 1694-1760.

GESNER, Sol., a German divine 1559-1605.

[Tomb of Gesner.]

GESNER, or GESSNER, Solomon, a painter of Zurich, better known as a poet, 1730-1788. His son, Conrad, distinguished as a painter of horses and battle-pieces, died 1826.

GESTRIN, J., a Swedish mathema., 17th cent.

GETA, Publius Septimius, second son of the emperor Severus, brother and associate of Caracalla, by whose orders he was murdered 210.

GETHIN, Lady Grace, an English lady, distinguished for her literary abilities, 1676-1697.

GEULINX, A., a Flem. philosopher, 1625-69.

GEYSER, C. T., a Germ. engraver, 1742-1803.

GEYSER, S. W., a German author, 1740-1803.

GEZELIUS, J., a Swedish theologian and Gr. scholar, bishop of Abo, au. of a Greek grammar, a Hebrew grammar, &c., 1615-1690. His son, John, a theologian, part author of a commentary on the Bible, commenced by his father, 1647-1718.

GEZELIUS, George, a Swedish divine, auth. of a biog. dict. of illustrious Swedes, 1732-1789.

GHAZAN-KHAN, sultan of Persia, died 1304.

GHEDINI, F. A., an Italian poet, 1684-1767.

GHERARDESCA, Ugolina, a Tuscan nobleman of the Guelph party, who was vanquished and starved in prison, together with three of his sons and one of his grandsons, 1288.

GHERARDI, A., an Ital. painter, 1664-1702.

GHEYN, or GHEIN, James De, called 'The Elder,' a Flemish painter and engraver, 1565-1615. 'The Younger,' of the same name, a designer and engraver, born about 1610.

GHEYN, Guido, a Flemish engraver, 17th ct.

GHEZZI, N., an Italian naturalist, 1685-1766.

GHEZZI, Sebastiano, a scholar of Guercino, distinguished as an architect, painter, and sculp-ter, died about 1650. His son, JOSEPH, a painter, 1634-1720. The son of the latter, PETER LEO, a painter and engraver, 1674-1755.

GHIBERTI, LORENZO, a celebrated Florentine sculptor and goldsmith, was born in 1381. In 1400 he left Florence for fear of the plague, but returned shortly afterwards, when he received notice of the great competition that was to take place on the occasion of completing the bronze gates of the Baptistery of St. John. The centre gates opposite to the west end of the cathedral had been already put up by Andrea Pisano, the new gates were for the two sides.—The commission for these two new gates was obtained by Lorenzo Ghiberti, then a young man only twenty-two years of age: the contract was given to Ghiberti and his father, and other assistants, on the 23d November, 1403, and the first gates, representing the life of Christ, were put up in the place of those by Andrea Pisano, in April, 1424; and the third gates, commenced on 2d January, 1425, with the histories from the Old Testament, were not completed until 16th June, 1452, when they were gilded and put up in the place of Ghiberti's first gates, which were removed to the other side, opposite to those of Andrea Pisano. These great works, of the last of which entire casts may be seen at Marlborough House, caused a new epoch in ornamental art, being remarkable for their bold and accurate imitation in the detail, for their skilful modelling of the figure, and masterly symmetrical grouping of the whole; on a scale of magnificence, and technical completeness, altogether unprecedented in modern art. During the nine and forty years that Ghiberti and his assistants, of whom his own son Vittorio was one of the principal, were occupied on these complicated works, he executed also many others, monumental and ecclesiastical, which must explain the apparently long delay in the completion of the gates. Ghiberti died at Florence in 1455.—(Vasari, Vite de' Pittori, &c., Florence 1848; Patch, La Porta Principale del Battistero di San Giovanni, &c., Florence, 1773.) [R.N.W.]

GHILINI, G., an Italian historian, 1589-1670.

GHINI, LUKE, an Italian botanist, 1500-1556.

GHIRLANDAJO, DOMENICO, an Italian painter and goldsmith, teacher of Michelangelo, 1449-1493. His son, RIDOLFO, also a painter, scholar of his uncle David Curadi, 1485-1560.

GIACOBI, J., an Italian composer, 1575-1650.

GIAFAR, a Mahommedan savant, died 764.

GIAHEDH, a Mahommedan savant, died 840.

GIAMBERTI, F., an Ital. architect, 15th cent.

GIANNONE, P., a Neapolitan hist., 1676-1748.

GIANNOTTI, D., a Venetian au., 1494-1563.

GIARDINI, FELICE, who has been called the reformer, if not the founder, of the violin school in England, was born at Turin in 1716, and was entered a chorister at the Duomo in Milan, where he studied singing, the harpsichord, and composition, under Paladini. He afterwards adopted the violin, and studied under Lorenzo Somis, one of Corelli's most famous followers. After having visited the principal cities of Italy, he travelled over Germany, and at length reached London in the year 1750, where he soon reached the top of his profession, and where he filled the highest professional posts then open to the musical artist. It is said that when he first appeared at the Haymarket theatre, and played a solo on the violin, 'the applause was long, loud, and furious, and such as nothing but that which Garrick called forth had ever equalled.' In the year 1756, he in company with Mignotti, became the manager of the Italian Opera, and though he composed several operas, and acquired much fame, his undertaking was very unsuccessful. Giardini in the year 1763 retired from the management, after having lost a large sum of money. In 1784 Giardini went to Italy, where he remained five years. In 1789 he came back to England, but was not so successful as during his first residence. In 1793 he went to Russia. His public performances at Moscow and St. Petersburg failed to produce the effect of his earlier efforts. He died in the latter city in poverty in the year 1796. [J.M.]

GIATTINI, J. B., an Italian poet, 1600-1672.

GIB, ADAM, a Scotch divine, 1713-1788.

GIBBES, J. A., a French physician, 1616-77.

GIBBON, EDWARD, was born at Putney in Surrey, in 1737. He was the only child who survived infancy, of a gentleman well connected and tolerably wealthy. Feeble health made his school days to be profitable in nothing but the acquisition of miscellaneous and undigested knowledge; and, being sent to Oxford too young and quite unprepared, he spent fourteen months there in alternations of irregular study and extreme idleness. At the end of this time, being a little more than sixteen years old, he embraced the Roman Catholic faith, and formally announced his conversion to his father. He was immediately placed under the care of a Calvinist minister at Lausanne, whose instructions led him in a few months back to protestantism. The five years he spent at Lausanne, closing in 1758, when he was just of age, formed the real commencement of his education; and, at their close, he was not only a ripe scholar in French and Latin, but possessed of an extraordinary amount of historical and other information. He found leisure, however, for falling in love, unsuccessfully, with a young lady, who afterwards became the wife of M. Necker and the mother of Madame De Staël.—For several years after Gibbon's return to England, he lived chiefly at his father's house in Hampshire; and, failing in attempts to obtain diplomatic employment, he accepted a militia commission, attended zealously to his duties, and rose to be lieutenant-colonel. But the studious habits and literary ambition which he had acquired, never flagged. In 1761, he published, in French, a short essay 'On the Study of Literature.' He extended his acquaintance with English authors, and, beginning to learn Greek thoroughly, pursued the study zealously, when, in 1763, he was allowed again to visit the continent. In Rome, next year, he conceived the design of his great historical work. Returning home in 1765, he passed some years unsatisfactorily to himself, but not without much improvement both in knowledge and in skill of writing. In 1774, he entered the House of Commons, in which he sat for eight sessions; and he was rewarded for his silent votes in favour of Lord North's administration, by holding for three years a seat at the board of trade. In 1770, he published, in answer to Warburton, his spirited Dissertation on the Sixth Book of the Æneid. In the same year, the death of his father placed him in possession of a fortune, which, though embarrassed, he was able to extricate so far that it afforded a handsome competence, and enabled him to devote himself exclusively to study and composition.—In 1776, he published the first volume of 'The History of the Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire,' the first edition of which was sold in a few days, and was rapidly followed by others. The second and third volumes, appearing in 1781, brought down the narrative to the Fall of the Western Empire; and for a while the author hesitated whether he should not here allow the work to drop. He resumed the design, however, in 1783, when he fixed his abode at Lausanne. He has recorded, in an eloquent passage of his Memoirs, the mixed emotions with which, in a moonlight night of June, 1787, in a summer-house in his garden, he completed his great undertaking. Its last three volumes were published next year, the author visiting London to superintend the press, but returning in a few months to Lausanne. There he remained till, in 1793, he was called to England to console his friend Lord Sheffield on the death of his wife. His health was now very infirm; and he laboured under dropsy. He died in London in January, 1794.—The volumes called his 'Miscellaneous Works,' contain, besides reprints of his minor writings, and several essays not previously printed, an interesting collection of his letters, and an instructive autobiography. Some of these pieces show all that various erudition, and that command of apt and powerful language, of which his chief work is so remarkable a monument. His exotic diction, and the pompous structure of his style, are open to strong exceptions; yet he is one of the most strikingly eloquent writers in our language. The historical value of his 'Decline and Fall' is very great; and the extraordinary union of excellencies, of vast variety with general correctness of learning, of good judgment with vigour of narrative and description, deepens the regret with which we contemplate the sceptical taint that is diffused so steadily through the whole. [W.S.]

GIBBON, JOHN, an ancestor of the celebrated historian, known as a writer on heraldry, born 1629, died about 1700.

GIBBONS, GRINLING, a celebrated carver in wood, was born at Rotterdam, 4th April, 1648, and appears to have visited this country in 1667, the year after the great fire. Evelyn, who calls him the incomparable Gibbons, introduced him to King Charles II., and also to Sir Christopher Wren, who employed him extensively in the decorations of St. Paul's. Gibbons received a place in the Board of Works, and was much employed at Windsor. In 1714 he was appointed master carver in wood to George I., with a salary of eighteenpence a-day. He died in London, 3d August, 1721.—There are many fine specimens of Gibbons's carvings at Hampton Court, and at Petworth, the state room there being considered by some his masterpiece: also at Houghton; and there are some specimens still in St. James's Church, London. His works are in very high relief, and the details, fruit, flowers, game, &c., generally grouped in great clusters or festoons, and though from the proper distance they appear to be of extreme delicacy, are of a solid character, and very judiciously disposed. He made a taste for carvings of this class fashionable, and had several skilful scholars and imitators, as Selden, Watson, Dievot, and Laurens; much work attributed to Gibbons was doubtless executed by some one of these men.—(Walpole, Anecdotes of Painters, &c., ed. Wornum. Bohn, 1849.) [R.N.W.]

GIBBONS, ORLANDO, Mus. Doc., who is regarded as one of the greatest English musicians, was born at Cambridge, in 1583. He was only twenty-one years of age when he was appointed organist to the chapel royal, and in 1622, on the recommendation of the learned antiquary Camden, who was his personal friend, the University of Oxford conferred upon him their degree of Doctor of Music. Some years afterwards, while he was at Canterbury for the purpose of conducting the musical performances at the marriage of Charles I., he fell ill of small-pox and died. He was buried in the cathedral of Canterbury, where his wife caused a simple and elegant marble monument to be erected to his memory. His first publications were madrigals in four parts for voices and viols, but the best of his works are his church services and anthems, many of which are still extant. 'The compositions of Gibbons are for the most part,' says one of his biographers, 'truly excellent, and the study of them cannot be too strongly recommended. The characteristics of his music are fine harmony, unaffected simplicity, and an almost unexampled grandeur.' Another writer says, 'after a lapse of upwards of two hundred years, his compositions seem to have lost none of their freshness, and are still, and likely to continue, the admiration of all real judges of what is excellent in music.' He left a son, CHRISTOPHER, who was also a musician, but who inherited only a very meagre share of his father's genius. Orlando Gibbons was survived by two brothers, EDWARD, who was organist of Bristol, and master of the celebrated Matthew Locke, and ELLIS, organist of Salisbury. [J.M.]

GIBBONS, RICHARD, an English Jesuit, professor of philosophy and divinity, 1549-1632.

GIBBONS, THOS., an Engl. Calvinist, 1720-85.

GIBBS, JAMES, a Scotch architect, designer of the Radcliffe Library at Oxford, the church of St. Martin's-in-the-Fields, &c., 1680-1754.

GIBBS, SIR V., an English judge, 1752-1820.

GIBERT, J. P., one of the most learned of French authors on the canon law, 1660-1736. BALTHASAR GIBERT, of the same family, a writer on rhetoric, 1662-1741. JOHN BALTHASAR, a learned historian and chronological wr., 1711-1770.

GIBSON, EDMUND, successively bishop of Lincoln and London, distinguished as a writer on ecclesiastical antiquities, and as a classical editor and translator, 1669-1748.

GIBSON, RICHARD, a celebrated dwarf, and portrait painter, time of Cromwell, 1615-1690.

GIBSON, TH., a wr. of the reformation, d. 1562.

GIBSON, WM., a mathemat. teacher, 1720-91.

GIFFEN, H., a Dutch critic, 1534-1604.

GIFFORD, ANDREW, a Calvinistic and antiquarian wr., especially on numismatics, 1700-84.

GIFFORD, JOHN, a political and historical writer, whose real name was J. R. Green, 1758-1818.

GIFFORD, R., an English divine, 1725-1807.

GIFFORD, WILLIAM, the son of a poor and dissipated tradesman, was born in Devonshire in 1756. Becoming in childhood a destitute orphan, he was successively a cabin-boy and a shoemaker's apprentice: but a benevolent patron put him to school; and, finding his way to Oxford, he there gained aristocratic patronage, and, attaching himself to the Tory party, proved one of its most effective literary advocates. In 1798, he became editor of the Antijacobin; and for about sixteen years from 1809, he edited the Quarterly Review. He was eminently qualified for such offices, both by his acuteness and force of writing, his variety of information, and his readiness and unhesitating vehemence of satire. Not far from the close of the century appeared his two satirical poems, 'The Baviad' and 'The Maviad;' and his vigorous and spirited translation of Juvenal was published in 1802. His best services to letters were his editions of Old English Dramatists. His 'Massinger' appeared in 1808; his 'Ben Jonson,' the most valuable of the series, in 1816: and his editions of Ford and Shirley, completed by other hands, were published in 1827 and 1833. He died in the end of 1826, bequeathing the bulk of his property to the son of his early benefactor. [W.S.]

GIL, FATHER, a Spanish patriot, dist. in 1808.

GILBERT, DAVIES, born at St. Erth in Cornwall 1767, known as an antiquarian, and successor of Sir Humphry Davy as president of the Royal Society, author of 'A Plain Statement of the Bullion Question,' and many scientific papers. Gilbert was M.P. for Bodmin from 1806-32, d. 1840.

GILBERT, F. H., a Fr. veterinarian, 1755-1800.

GILBERT, GAB., a French poet, died 1680.

GILBERT, SIR HUMPHREY, half-brother of Sir Walter Raleigh, was a man of ardent temperament and chivalrous character, who engaged in geographical discovery from the love of fame and adventure. Under patent from Queen Elizabeth, he sailed, in 1583, with five vessels and 260 men, to take possession of the northern parts of America. In Newfoundland, whose fisheries were already much frequented by French, Spanish, and Portuguese ships, he succeeded in establishing a colony, and thus secured the influence of England in those parts, the title being founded upon the first discovery by Sebastian Cabot. He ventured across the Atlantic, on his homeward voyage, in a vessel of only ten tons; but after passing the Azores he perished during the night in a storm, with all on board his little barque. He was seen on the evening before, struggling with the waves, by those in the Golden Hind (see DRAKE), which had accompanied him from the coast of Virginia, and in which he had been urged to take his passage home. He has been called 'the father of western colonization.' [J.B.]

GILBERT, J., an English author, 1674-1726.

GILBERT, L. T., a Fr. author, 1780-1827.

GILBERT, L. W., a Fr. med. au., 1769-1824.

GILBERT, N. A., a French theolo., 1762-1821.

GILBERT, N. J. L., a French poet, 1751-1780.

GILBERT, N. P., a Fr. med. au., 1751-1814.

GILBERT, SAINT, a French monk, died 1162.

GILBERT, WM., an English divine, 1613-34.

GILBERT, or GILBERD, WILLIAM, an English physician, distinguished as an experimental philosopher, and especially for his researches into the properties of the loadstone, and for his attempt to found a philosophical theory of the earth's magnetism upon experiment. His work, entitled 'De Magnete,' published 1600, is understood to be the foundation of all modern improvement in that branch of philosophy; born at Colchester, where his father was recorder, 1540, died 1603.

GILBERT-DE-LA-POREE, a celebrated Fr. theologian and philoso. of the Realists, 1070-1154.

GILBERT DE SEMPRINGHAM, an English priest, founder of a religious order, died 1180.

GILBERT DES VOISINS, a French magistrate and writer on protestant liberty, 1684-1769.

GILCHRIST, E., a Scotch med. au., 1707-74.

GILCHRIST, J. B., a Sc. Oriental., 1759-1841.

GILCHRIST, OCT., a dram. critic, 1779-1823.

GILDAS, SAINT, a British ecclesiastic, 6th ct.

GILDAS, SAINT, a celebrated English historian and theologian, of royal extraction, died 512.

GILDAS, THE WISE, a British monk, the most ancient author of this country, 511-570.

GILDON, Roman governor of Africa, k. 398.

GILDON, CH., an Engl. dramatist, 1665-1723.

GILIANEZ, a Portuguese admiral who contributed to the African discoveries, 1443-1446.

GILII, P. L., an Ital. astronomer, 1756-1821.

GILL, ALEX., an English theologian, master of St. Paul's school, and teacher of Milton, 1564-1635. His son and successor, of the same name, distinguished also as a Latin poet, 1597-1642.

GILL, JOHN, a baptist divine, 1697-1771.

GILLES, JOHN, a French musician, died 1705.

GILLES, PETER, a classical trans., 1490-1555.

GILLES, PETER, a Swiss protest. div., 17th ct.

GILLESPIE, GEO., a Scotch divine, died 1648.

GILLIES, JOHN, an eminent Greek scholar and historian of Scotland, author of a 'History of Ancient Greece,' &c., 1747-1836.

GILON, an Italian card. and author, died 1142.

GILPIN, BERNARD, a celebrated English reformer, called, on account of his pious and unwearied exertions in Durham, the Apostle of the North and the Father of the Poor; he was born in 1517, escaped the stake by the opportune death of Queen Mary, and died 1583. His life has been written by Bishop Carleton, and by his descendant WILLIAM GILPIN. The latter, who is the well known writer on forest scenery, on the picturesque, &c., was a minister of the Church of England, and brother of Sawrey Gilpin the painter, 1724-1804.

GILPIN, RICHARD, a nonconf. divine, d. 1657.

GILPIN, SAWREY, an Engl. paint., 1733-1807.

GIL-POLO, G., a Spanish poet, 1516-1572.

GILRAY, JAS., an Engl. caricaturist, d. 1815.

GIL-VICENTE, a celebrated dramatic author, called the Plautus of Portugal, 1485-1557.

GIMMA, H., an Italian naturalist, 1668-1735.

GIN, P. L. C., a Fr. miscel. wr., 1726-1807.

GINANI, G., an Italian poet, died after 1634.

GINANI, JOSEPH, Count, an Italian naturalist, 1692-1753. FRANCIS, his nephew, a naturalist and agriculturist, 1716-1766. PAUL, of the same family, a learned ecclesiastic, 1698-1774.

GINGUENE, P. L., a Fr. historian, 1748-1815.

GIOBERT, J. A., an Ital. chemist, 1761-1834.

GIOCONDO, FRA. GIOVANNI, in Latin JUCUNDUS, an Italian antiquarian and architect, editor of several classics, about 1435-1514.

GIOFFREDO, P., an Italian hist., 1629-1692.

GIOIA, FLAVIO, an Italian navigator, 14th ct.

GIOJA, M., an Italian economist, 1767-1829.

GIORDANI, GUISEPPE, sometimes called GIORDANELLO, whose songs at one time enjoyed the highest popularity in Britain, was born in Italy about the year 1750. He came to England very young, and soon had all his time filled up in giving lessons in music. In 1779 he entered into partnership with Leoni the singer, and they jointly became lessees of a theatre in Dublin, Giordani as composer, and his partner as singer. This speculation proved a complete failure, and in four years they were bankrupt. Giordani after this continued to reside in Dublin, where he had several pupils of distinction, and where he married the daughter of Tate Wilkinson. He composed two operas, 'Antigone' and 'Artaserse,' for the Italian Opera in England, and one for the English stage. He died in Dublin in 1789. [J.M.]

GIORDANI, V., an Italian mathe., 1633-1711.

GIORDANO, L., a Neapol. paint., 1632-1705.

GIORDANO, S., an Ital. painter, 1779-1829.

GIORGAKI, a Grk. naval commander, d. 1821.

GIORGI, A., a Venetian Jesuit, 1747-1779.

GIORGI, ANT. A., an Italian theolo., 1711-97.

GIORGI, D., an Ital. antiquarian, 1690-1747.

GIORGI, MARIA, an Italian painter, 1780-1810.

GIORGI, MARINO, a Venetian doge, succeeded and died 1311.

GIORGIONE, the name by which GIORGIO BARBARELLI is commonly known. He was born near Castelfranco in 1477, and was the fellow-pupil of Titian with Giovanni Bellini at Venice. He became a great colourist, and his pictures are further distinguished for objective truth of representation and effective light and shade. His pictures are very scarce: they consist chiefly of portraits. He died at Venice in 1511, at the early age of thirty-three.—(Vasari, Vite de' Pittori, &c.; Ridolfi, Maraviglie dell' Arte, &c.) [R.N.W.]

GIOSEPPINO, an Italian painter, died 1640.

GIOTTINO, TH., an Ital. painter, 1324-1356.

GIOTTO DI BONDONE was born at Vespignano in 1276; he was the pupil of Cimabue, and appears to have owed the development of his extraordinary faculties almost wholly to that painter, who in one of his walks near Florence, saw Giotto, then a shepherd boy, sketching one of his flock on the ground, and perceived so much native talent in the attempt, that he persuaded the boy's parents to let him take him with him to Florence, and make a painter of him. Florence dates its preponderance in the history of Tuscan painting from the time of Giotto; his works mark the era of the first great epoch of the art in modern times: the rigid traditional forms of the Byzantine school were finally laid aside for nature; the beautiful now supplanting the hideous as the fundamental element of the canons of art.—Giotto was painter, sculptor, architect, and mossic worker; he enriched many cities in Italy with his works, (chiefly in fresco,) especially Florence, Rome, Naples, Padua, and Assisi; and by his introduction of individuality of treatment through the careful study of nature, established legitimate portrait. The frescoes of the Arena chapel, Padua, are in course of publication by the Arundel Society. Giotto was in Rome in 1298, he was at Avignon for some years afterwards, between 1305 and 1314; in 1316 he returned to Florence, in 1327 he visited Naples, and he died at Florence in 1336.—(Vasari, Vite de' Pittori, &c., ed. Florence, 1846.) [R.N.W.]

GIOVANETTI, F., an Italian jurist, died 1586.

GIOVENAZZI, V. M., an It. savant, 1727-1805.

GIOVENE, J. M., an Italian natu., 1753-1837.

GIOVINAZZO, V., an Italian poet, died 1805.

GIOVIO, B., an Italian savant and Latin poet, 1471-1544. PAUL, his brother, bishop of Nocera, a celebrated historian, 1483-1552. PAUL, the Younger, also a literary savant, 1530-1585.

GIOVIO, J. B., Count, a poet, 1738-1814.

GIRALDI, LILIO GREGORIO, better known as GYRALDUS, a learned Italian poet, author of a history of the heathen deities, &c., 1479-1552. GIOVANNI BATTISTE GIRALDI CINTIO, of the same family, author of the 'Gli Hecatomiti,' or 'Hundred Novels,' &c., 1504-1573.

GIRALDUS CAMBRENSIS. See BARRY.

GIRARD, A., a Dutch wr. on algebra, d. 1634.

GIRARD, G., a Fr. gramma. wr., 1677-1748.

GIRARD, J., a French theologian, 1570-1634.

GIRARD, J., a French jurisconsult, died 1583.

GIRARD, P. S., a Fr. engineer, 1765-1835.

GIRARD, W., a French writer, died 1663.

GIRARDET, A., a Swiss engraver, 1764-1823.

GIRARDET, P. A., a French mythol., 1733-89.

GIRARDON, F., a French sculpt., 1630-1715.

GIRDLESTONE, TH., a physician and medical writer, author of 'Essays on the Hepatitics and Spasmodic Affections in India,' &c., 1758-1822.

GIREY-DUPRE, J. M., a French republican, kn. as a journalist and poet, b. 1769, exec. 1793.

GIRODET-TRIOSON, ANNE LOUIS, a French painter, considered one of the greatest of the modern school, instructed by David, 1735-1824.

GIROUST, F., a French composer, 1730-1799.

GIROUST, J., a French preacher, 1624-1689.

GIRTIN, TH., an English painter, 1773-1802.

GISBERT, BLAISE, a French Jesuit and rhetorician, author of various religious, critical, and philosophical writings, 1657-1731.

GISBERT, J., a Fr. theologian, 1639-1711.

GISBORNE, REV. THOMAS, a divine of the Church of England, eminent as a moralist and miscellaneous writer, author of 'Principles of Moral Philosophy Investigated,' 'An Inquiry into the Duties of the Female Sex,' &c., 1758-1846.

GISMONDI, C. J., an Italian mineralogist and mathematician, 1762-1824.

GIULIO-ROMANO. See ROMANO.

GIUNTINI, F., an Ital. theologian, 1522-1590.

GIUSTINIANI. See JUSTINIAN.

GJOERANSON, JOHN, a Swedish divine, known as a writer on the antiquity of the North, middle of last century.

GJOERWEL, CH. C., a Swed. wr., 1731-1811.

GLABER, P., a French chronicler, 11th cent.

GLADBACH, C. J., a Ger. naturalist, 1786-96.

GLANVIL, B., a philosophical writer, 14th ct.

GLANVIL, SIR JOHN, a learned English lawyer and royalist, speaker of the House of Commons in the reign of Charles I., died 1661. His grandson, of the same name, a lawyer and poet, trans. of 'Fontenelle's Plurality of Worlds,' d. 1735.

GLANVIL, GLANVILL, or GLANVILLE, RANULPH DE, an English judge and crusader, accomp. Richard I., and fell at siege of Acre, 1190.

GLANVILL, JOSEPH, an English divine, author of many philosophical and learned writings, amongst the more famous of which are his 'Vanity of Dogmatizing,' 'Some Philosophical Considerations Touching the Being of Witches and Witchcraft,' 'An Inquiry into the Opinion of the Eastern Sages Concerning the Pre-existence of Souls,' 'Scepsis Scientifica, or Confessed Ignorance the Way to Science,' and 'Plus Ultra, or the Progress and Advancement of Science since the Days of Aristotle.' He was one of the new school of philosophical divines of which Cudworth may be regarded as the most illustrious example; born at Plymouth 1636, d. in his rectory at Bath 1680.

GLASER, J. F., a German chemist, 1707-1781.

GLASS, JOHN, a Scottish divine, founder of the Glassites, since called Sandemanians, 1698-1773. His son, of the same name, a marine surgeon, au. of a 'Description of Teneriffe,' 1725-1765.

GLASSE, G. H., an English scholar, died 1809.

GLASSIUS, S., a Dutch critic, 1593-1656.

GLAUBER, JOHN, a Dutch painter, 1646-1726.

GLAUBER, JOHN RODOLPH, a German chemist, and experimenter in alchymy, the discov. of the sulphate of soda kn. by his name, 16th c.

GLEDITSCH, J. T., a Ger. natural., 1714-86.

GLEICHEN, C. H., a Ger. metaph., 1733-1807.

GLEICHEN, F. W., a nat. philos., 1717-1783.

GLEICHMANU, J. Z., a Ger. savant, d. 1758.

GLEIM, J. W. L., a German poet, 1719-1803.

GLEN, JOHN DE, a French engraver, 16th cent.

GLENDOWER, or GLENDWR, OWEN, a Welch chief, descended from Llewellyn, the last prince of Wales, and distinguished for the long contest which he maintained with Henry IV., born 1349, crowned by his adherents 1402, died 1415.

GLENIE, J., an Irish mathema., 1750-1817.

GLEY, G., a French lexicographer, 1761-1830.

GLIEMANN, J. G. T., a Danish geographer, au. of maps of the Northern Countries, 1793-1828.

GLISCENTI, F., an Italian moralist, died 1620.

GLISSON, FRANCIS, a learned English physician, a native of Dorsetshire, was born 1597, and died in 1677. He was for forty years professor of medicine in the university of Cambridge, and became a member of the College of Physicians of London in 1634. On the breaking out of the civil war he retired to Colchester, but subsequently settled in London, and was one of the original members of the Royal Society. He enjoyed a considerable reputation in his lifetime, and wrote several treatises on anatomical and medical subjects, which are respectfully spoken of by Haller, but which are now neglected. [J.M'C.]

GLOSKOUSKI, M., a Polish poet, 17th cent.

GLOUCESTER, ROBERT OF, an old English rhyme chronicler, about the time of King John.

GLOUCESTER, WILLIAM FREDERIC, duke of, son of Prince William Henry, third son of Frederic prince of Wales, and brother of George III., born at Rome 1776, married to his first cousin, the Princess Mary, fourth daughter of George III., 1816, died 1834.

GLOVER, MRS., an English actress, 1780-1850.

GLOVER, RICHARD, a distinguished Greek scholar and poet, popularly known as the author of 'Leonidas,' 'Hosier's Ghost,' &c., 1712-1785.

GLOVER, THOS., a wr. on heraldry, 1543-88.

GLUCK, CHRISTOPH, was born in Weidenwagen in the upper Palatinate, in the year 1714, where his father held the situation of forester to the Prince Lobkowitz. Early in childhood he went with his family to Bohemia, where his father died and left him without education, and in circumstances little removed from absolute penury. Gluck was, however, gifted with a mind of no ordinary power, and he soon made his proficiency in music the means of placing himself above want. He went from town to town as an itinerant musician until he arrived at Vienna, where he met with a nobleman who became his patron, and in whose suite the young Gluck went to Italy, and became the pupil of the renowned Padre Martini. Here he was put upon the establishment of Prince Melzi as composer, and before he returned to Germany he produced several successful operas. His fame had now spread so far beyond the city of Milan, that in 1745 he was invited by the directors of the king's theatre to come to London, where he was to hold the situation of composer to that establishment. His success in London was not very decided. While in this situation he produced his 'La Caduta dei Giganti,' and 'Artamene' operas, and 'Piramo e Tisbe' a pasticchio consisting of selections from all his previous works. After this Gluck went for a short time to Copenhagen, from whence he was invited to return to Italy, where he produced his 'Clemenza di Tito,' 'Antigonus,' 'Clelia,' 'Baucis e Philemon,' and 'Aristideo,' with varied success. He then went to Vienna, where in connection with Signor Calzabigi, an ingenious poet, he projected a new style of operatic composition, and in 1764 produced his 'Orfeo' with the most complete success, 'Helen of Paris,' and 'Alcesti,' speedily following. Gluck now visited the principal cities of Italy, and when at Naples was engaged to compose two operas. On his return to Vienna he composed and produced his 'Iphigenia in Aulide,' the libretto of which was an adaptation of the text of Racine's Iphigenia. The fame of this piece reached Paris, whither Gluck was invited by the Academie Royale. On his arrival at Paris, Marie Antoinette immediately became his pupil and patron, and at her bidding the Iphigenia was produced on the 19th of April, 1776, under his own direction, and with the most triumphant success, notwithstanding the prejudice which had been fostered against it before its performance. Immediately after this Paris was divided into two bodies, Gluckistes and Piccinistes, the latter party being the devoted admirers of Piccini the Italian composer, who was then rising into eminence; but though the musical war raged for a long time, nevertheless, when the termination of hostilities arrived the triumph of Gluck was complete. Having composed two more operas, Gluck returned to Vienna in 1779, and never after quitted that city. In 1784 he was attacked by paralysis, under which he suffered until 1787, when he died, leaving a fortune of £30,000, the fruits of his talents and industry. The writer of the sketch of his life in the Musical Library says—'The Chevalier Gluck—for he had received an order of knighthood—was a man of powerful mind, by means of which he supplied the deficiencies of early education. He read much, associated with literary and scientific persons, and reflected deeply; hence, all his works display an intellectuality not often found in the productions of the lyric stage, which have preserved them, and will continue to preserve them, while nearly all the compositions of his contemporaries and rivals have sunk into oblivion.' [J.M.]

GLYCAS, MICHAEL, a Greek historian, 12th or 13th century, author of a universal history.

GLYNN, ROBERT, an English poet, died 1800.

GMELIN, J. F., a German chemist, 1748-1804.

GMELIN, J. G., a German botanist, 1709-55.

GMELIN, S. T., nephew of the preceding, author of 'Travels through Russia,' &c., 1745-1774.

GMELIN, W. F., a Ger. engraver, 1745-1831.

GNEDITSCH, N., a Russian poet, 1784-1833.

GNEISENAU, AUGUSTUS, Count Neidhard De, a Prussian officer, dist. at Waterloo, 1760-1832.

GOAD, JOHN, a classical author, 1615-1689.

GOADBY, R., a miscellaneous writer, d. 1778.

GOAR, JAMES, a learned Fr. monk, 1601-53.

GOBBO, ANDREA, an Ital. painter, died 1527.

GOBBO, PIETRO PAOLO BONZI, called IL-GOBBO, or GOBBO DE CARACCI, an Italian painter, famous for his repres. of fruits, 1580-1640.

GOBEL, JEAN BAPTISTE JOSEPH, a French ecclesiastic, born 1727, deputy to the estates general 1789, constitutional bishop of Paris, 1793, executed with Anacharsis Cloots, Hebert, and others, for his shameful endeavours to found the social order of the republic upon atheism, 1794.

GOBELIN, GILES, an ingenious Frenchman, famous as a dyer of scarlet in the reign of Francis I., founder of the works where the admired Gobelin tapestry has been produced, 17th century.

GOBERT, NAPOL., a French general, 1807-33.

GOBET, N., a Fr. historian, died about 1781.

GOCLENIUS, C., a German philol., 1485-1539.

GOCLENIUS, RODOLPH, a German logician and literary savant, 1547-1628. His son, of the same name, a naturalist and writer on animal magnetism, 1572-1621.

GODARD, J., a French poet, 1564-1625.

GODARD, J. B., a Fr. naturalist, 1775-1825.

GODDARD, JON., an Eng. chemist, 1617-1674.

GODDARD, REV. W. S., formerly master of Winchester school, of which he became a benefactor, and late prebend. of St. Paul's and Salisb., 1757-1845.

GODEAU, A., a Fr. ecclesias. hist., 1605-1672.

GODEAU, M., a French religious au., d. 1736.

GODEBERT, a king of the Lombards, 661-662.

GODESCHALCUS, or GOTTESCHALCUS, was by birth a Saxon, and was educated in a monastery at Fulda. On arriving at manhood, he struggled hard against a monastic life, but Rabanus Maurus his future persecutor interfered, the influence of Louis the emperor was invoked against him, and his early and unconscious consecration as a monk by his father, was held to be an inviolable bond. On his subsequent removal to Orbais in the diocese of Soissons he was ordained a presbyter, and we find him soon after travelling in Italy and Dalmatia. He had already in retirement drunk deep into the spirit of Augustine, and he reproduced in a prominent form his views on grace and predestination, especially in a discussion before Notting, bishop of Verona. But violent opposition was stirred up against him, and his tenets were condemned by the Synod of Mentz in A.D. 847. His fierce antagonist Rabanus Maurus then sent him to Hincmar archbishop of Rheims, to whose see the so-called heretic belonged. Hincmar immediately arraigned him before the Synod of Chiersey in 849, degraded him, scourged him severely, and incarcerated him in the monast Hautevilliers in the diocese of Rheims, where twenty-one years of confinement the noble c sor died. In his last illness the communio refused him, and his corpse was denied Chr burial. The controversy raised by Gottesch agitated the Romish Church for many Prior to his polemical appearances, Gottesch for the brilliancy of his scholarship, had named Fulgentius. That his enemies carica his opinions is plain, but it is no less true th naked and extreme statements were liable to conception, and unnecessarily stirred up prej His long and shameful imprisonment never in the least his sincere attachment to the A tinian theology. [

[Armour of Godfrey of Bouillon.]

GODFREY OF BOUILLON, duke of Lorrai first Christian king of Jerusalem, was b Bézy, near Nivelle. He served while youn high distinction in the armies of the emperor the IV.; and, when near the close of the el century all western Europe was roused rescue of the Holy Land from the infidels, th of Godfrey was high throughout Christend piety and moral excellence, as well as for kn prowess. He entered fervently into the movement of his age, and was confessedly th in rank and worth among the chiefs of th crusade. He not only signalized himself by among the valorous, and by enthusiasm amo enthusiastic, but he showed also disintereste probity, skill, and prudence, which were of a and rarer order. He maintained the most plete discipline among his division of the Cr army, which he brought safely to the app muster-place beneath the walls of Constanti in the winter of 1096. By his sagacity and ness, he prevented hostilities breaking out be the host of the crusaders and the Greek em Alexius Comnenus; and, in the spring of Godfrey led the Frankish nations into Asia M to the siege of the capital of the Turkish sul Nice. This city was captured after a sie which the personal valour of Godfrey, as w his generalship, was frequently displayed.

was tall, well-proportioned, and of such remarkable strength and dexterity in the use of his weapons, that he is said in more than one encounter to have cloven his foe by a single sword-stroke from skull to centre. After Nice was captured, the crusaders marched forward, and defeated a Turkish army in the great battle of Dorylæum. They reached Antioch, in Syria, late in the winter of 1097. The city was captured after an obstinate resistance; and the weakened army of the victors was in turn besieged in its walls by an innumerable host of the Mahommedans. After enduring much suffering and loss, Godfrey led the crusaders in a sudden sortie upon their enemies, which was completely victorious. The enthusiasm caused among the Christian army by the supposed discovery of the relic of the Holy Lance, was one great cause of this success. It was not till 1099 that the crusaders reached Jerusalem; and their numbers were then reduced by the sword and by disease to only 1,500 horse and 20,000 foot fit for service. The Mahommedan garrison was far more numerous, and the city was formidably strong. But the zeal of the crusaders was indomitable. After a siege of forty days, a successful assault was made, and 'on a Friday, at three in the afternoon, the day and hour of the Passion, Godfrey of Bouillon stood victorious on the walls of Jerusalem' (Gibbon).—When the crusaders were sated with carnage and pillage, they deliberated on the important subject of choosing a ruler of their conquest; and, with the universal consent of the assembly, Godfrey was hailed king of the Christian kingdom of Jerusalem. He showed his humility and piety by refusing to wear a golden diadem in the city where his Saviour had been crowned with thorns, and he desired to be called only Defender and Baron of the Holy Sepulchre. During his short reign he gained several military advantages in the field against the Mahommedans, especially at Ascalon, where he completely routed a large army which the sultan of Egypt had sent to reconquer Jerusalem. Godfrey deserved still higher honour for his exertions in establishing order and justice in his dominions, and in compiling a code of laws for his subjects. Unhappily for the infant kingdom, he died within a year from his accession. [E.S.C.]

GODFREY, Sir Edmundbury, an English magistrate who exerted himself in the discovery of the Popish Plot, and is supposed to have been murdered, being found dead 17th October, 1768.

GODFREY, Thomas, an American mathematician, died 1749. His son, of the same name, the earliest dramatic poet of America, 1736-1763.

GODFREY OF VITERBO, an Italian ecclesiastic, author of annals entitled 'Pantheon,' 12th c.

GODIN, Louis, a Fr. astronomer, 1704-1760.

GODINOT, J., a French theologian, 1661-1749.

GODIVA, an English lady, wife of Leofric, earl of Leicester, in the reign of Edward the Confessor, who, in the legends of Coventry for riding naked through the streets to deliver the citizens from a tax.

GODOLPHIN, J., an English civilian, 17th ct.

GODOLPHIN, Sidney, earl of, lord high treasurer of England under Queen Anne, d. 1712.

GODOLPHIN, Sydney, an Eng. poet, 1610-43.

GODONIN, J., a French Hebraist, died 1700.

GODOONOFF, Boris, czar of Moscow after the murder of Demetrius, 1599, died 1605.

GODOY, Don Manuel, the celebrated 'Prince of Peace,' originally a private soldier, rose to be prime minister of Spain, 1764-1851.

GODWIN, earl of Kent, a powerful English baron in the Saxon period, celebrated for his turbulence and political intrigues, died 1053.

GODWIN, Mrs. See Wolstonecroft.

GODWIN, Thomas, an English prelate, successively dean of Christ Church, dean of Canterbury, and bishop of Bath and Wells in the reign of Elizabeth, 1517-1590. His son, Francis, successively bishop of Llandaff and Hereford, and au. of historical and antiquarian works, 1561-1633. Morgan, son of the latter, also a churchman, deprived as a royalist during the civil war, d. 1645.

GODWIN, Th., an English divine, 1587-1643.

GODWIN, William, was born in 1756, at Wisbeach in Cambridgeshire. His father was a dissenting minister; and he himself, after having completed his education in the college at Hoxton, embraced the same profession, and preached for some years to a congregation near London. About 1782 he abandoned the pulpit, his opinions having undergone serious changes; and thenceforth he strove to make a livelihood by authorship. In 1793 he became famous, or notorious, by the publication of his 'Inquiry concerning Political Justice.' This celebrated work, founded on the dream of human perfectibility, is remarkable for that combination of vigour with want of comprehensiveness and real profundity, which marked all its author's writings. His crusade against the existing system of things in all its parts was next prosecuted in a more popular shape, and with singular force of passionate and descriptive eloquence, in his novel of 'Caleb Williams.' Strongly democratic in political opinions, but gentle as well as brave, he always protested against the bringing about of social changes by force; but, though he kept sedulously aloof from the plots which, in 1794, exposed Horne Tooke and others of his friends to prosecution for treason, he did them good service by his pen. In 1797, he published essays, moral and literary, under the title of 'The Inquirer.' The same year he married Mary Wolstonecroft, in deference to the opinion of the world, after having lived with her for some time in obedience to the opinion which he himself held in regard to marriage, and which she had advocated in her 'Vindication of the Rights of Women.' His wife died in giving birth to a daughter, who became Mrs. Shelley. By a subsequent marriage he had a son, a young man of great promise, who died of cholera in 1833. In 1799, Godwin published the picturesque novel of 'Saint Leon,' his last work of this kind that was worthy of his genius. 'Fleetwood,' published in 1804, and 'Mandeville,' in 1816, are much inferior; and 'Cloudesley,' which appeared in 1830, showed that the vein of self-scrutiny on which his strength depended, had been quite worked out. But, in 1803, he had entered a new path in his 'Life of Chaucer,' which, though wanting in unity and consecutive interest, is very instructive. For some time after this he attempted business as a bookseller, and wrote a good many school-books under the name of Baldwin. In 1815, he published his 'Lives of John and Edward Phillips,' the nephews of Milton; in 1820, he attacked Malthus in his 'Treatise on Population;' in 1828, he published the last of the four volumes of his heavy but valuable 'History of the Commonwealth;' in 1830, appeared his essays called 'Thoughts on Man;' and in 1834, his 'Lives of the Necromancers.' The poverty of his old age was alleviated by an appointment from the ministry of Earl Grey. He died in 1836. [W.S.]

GOEBEL, G. W., a German jurist, 1683-1745.

GOEBEL, H. D., a Bavarian historian, 1717-71.

GOEBEL, J. H. E., a Prussian savant, 1732-95.

GOEBLER, J., a German historian, died 1567.

GOECKINGK, Leop. Fred. Gunther Von, a Prus. poet of the school of Wieland, 1745-1828.

GOELIKE, A. O., a Ger. med. hist., 1671-1744.

GOEREE, H. G., a Dutch theologian and physician, died about 1643. His son, William, author of a 'History of the Jewish Church,' an 'Introduction to the Art of Painting,' &c., 1635-1711. John, the son of the latter, a distinguished painter, engraver, and poet, 1670-1711.

GOERTZ, George Henry, Baron, a German statesman, minister of finance to Charles XII., executed immediately after the king's death, 1719.

GOERTZ, John Eustace, Count De, a Prussian diplomatist and political writer, 1737-1821.

GOES, H. Van Der, a Flemish painter, 15th c.

GOES, W. Van Der, a Dutch savant, 1611-86.

GOESCKEN, H., a Ger. philosopher, 1612-81.

GOETHE, Johann Wolfgang Von, is one of the most celebrated names in European literature. It is the name of a poet who united, in an extraordinary degree, power of imagination and power of expression; and who, not less remarkable for versatility than for vigour, produced, by the exertions of sixty years, works which exemplify, in one shape or another, every possible form and kind of poetry. Göthe holds, likewise, in the intellectual history of Germany, the position of a founder and inventor. His poems were almost the earliest in the language that deserved wide celebrity; they were, without exception, the first that were fortunate enough to attain it. Nor have they been more admired than imitated. To say nothing of the influence they have exerted among ourselves and elsewhere, nine-tenths of the poetry that has been heard in Germany during the last seventy or eighty years, have been little more than echoes thrown back from that of Göthe. The fact is a decisive testimony to the strength of his genius; yet it could not have occurred but for that closeness of sympathy with the spirit of his time, which the poet felt in every stage of his progress. Each of the most powerful impulses by which, in turn, the social and intellectual life of Germany was governed, found in him its earliest and also its most striking representative; and, while he interpreted the tendencies of the age with felicitous intuition, and prefigured their results with wonderful richness of imagination, he gained a firm hold on popular feeling through that very coldness and practicality of moral sentiment, which always kept him, in an ethical point of view, on a level with the world around him. He aimed sedulously at purifying and elevating poetical art; he never aimed at making poetry the teacher of goodness. If the noble-minded and impassioned Schiller often embodied his lofty aspirations after truth and virtue in a form too anxiously and openly didactic, and if, even when he did not thus err, he imprinted on his pictures a character of austere melancholy which repels the worldly and the ca the other hand, Göthe assuredly v laws of his art, when he studiously indirect and suggestive teaching of g is the most sublime prerogative o when he intrenched himself in a seer which is really little else than sceptici —Göthe's father, a man in easy was a citizen of Frankfort-on-the-Ma the poet was born, on the 28th of His boyhood and youth thus fell in when Germany was excited by the war; and when, in literature, the cl getic Lessing was laying the founda sophical criticism, inculcating intel and affection for the arts of design, against that slavish subservience to which had long prevailed among Ge letters. Sickness in childhood cher native precocity; and his mind w with remarkable rapidity. Besides branches of education, he busied drawing, music, and natural history; poem on the scriptural history of Jos at once his poetical inclinations, an direction which his thoughts then the breaking off of a youthful love gave a name to the heroine of 'Fau features to 'Wilhelm Meister,' he wa university of Leipzig to prepare hi legal profession. Law, however, was to; and for speculative philosophy th contracted a disgust, which he did overcome in mature life, when Kant the guide of almost all the finer minc
try. To classical studies, under th the correct and tasteful Ernesti, he tention. To his early French read added some acquaintance with Engli
The discrepancies, however, between poetical schools, which he was unabl by any critical theory that had yet b to him, almost gave him a distaste ev
His inquisitive and doubting temper food in the contemplation of the rel ciety, presented to him in no clear that which he derived from the Fre pedists; and his mind had already t liest steps in that course of thought which, breaking out at first in rebelli existing systems, led him by degrees as to the truth or falsehood of an were made at play-writing; and the of mind, which he thus endeavoured giving vent to it, was allayed more the diversion of his thoughts to the fine arts, in the works of Winckelm philosophical antiquaries. In 1768, h and resided for a while in the coun studied alchymy and chemistry, P Boerhaave, and sketched for himsel gion, resting on a basis of mysticism tonism. In Strasburg he nominally professional studies, taking his deg in laws in 1771. The intimacy wh formed with Herder, worked benefic his literary opinions and taste, and o life.—In 1773, he published 'Göta gen with the Iron Hand,' a romantic

…rvst, and cast in the flexible and irregular …d of Shakspeare's dramatic histories. The …lty of the undertaking was as attractive as the … of imagination with which it was performed; …while every one was moved by the character …ate of the true-hearted Götz, there was for …tive minds a deep significance in the picture …s was presented, (under the symbolic forms …adalism,) of the destruction of the reign of …, and the rise of a new world ruled by reason …established order. Here, too, the poet, in the …ituous excitement of youth, poured forth his …ions with an unrepressed and infectious en…sm. Still more unreserved was the expres…of despondent and rebellious feelings, in his …d work, 'The Sufferings of the Young Wer…which appeared in 1774. In its design …ng more than a sentimental novel, and thus …ng for a popularity much wider than 'Götz,' …er' displayed domestic scenes so interesting, …described these with a pathos so profound and …quence so flowing, that the hollowness of the …lity was overlooked, and the real insignificance …e events forgotten. The German language …ssed as yet nothing comparable to either of …two works; their author himself never sur…ed the 'Götz;' and, after the appearance of …rter,' Göthe was not only the most popular …r of his day, but also the writer from whom …petent judges most confidently expected great …rmance in his maturity. His fame imme…ely gained for him a position which enabled … to devote his energies, without interruption or …ety, to literary study and invention. The …rtunities were used with zealous industry …ughout the whole remainder of his long life; … his skill of art was developed with a success …ing in some degree for that narrowing of his …pathies, which was caused by the artificial …sphere of a petty court.—The duchess of …-Weimar, left a widow in the infancy of her … the duke Karl-August, not only administered …ly the civil affairs of her little sovereignty, but …ived the idea of making her miniature capital … intellectual centre of Germany. In 1774, in …ourse of his travels, the young duke made the …uaintance of Göthe; and, on his assuming …overnment in 1775, the poet accepted the in…tion he received to attach himself to the court …Weimar. Wieland, whose mental history was …me points not unlike that of Göthe, was al…dy there, having been the prince's tutor; Herder … added to the band in 1776; Schiller was after…ds one of its members for a few years; and …r poets, and critics, and novelists, were …ered round these chiefs. Göthe was the …ling spirit of the group, even during the last …rter of the eighteenth century, when these men … others were constructing and guiding the …ature of all Germany; and his supremacy be…e yet more absolute afterwards, when, for …ther generation, he stood alone, the last survivor …a race greater than the greatest of their suc…ors.—He was ennobled, received honorary …ncellorships and other appointments, and had …n some share in the real business of the small …te. But, in the most active period of his life, … most important office was that of theatrical …ctor. Journeying to Italy in 1786, he spent two years in that country, which had much effect on his opinions and sentiments. In 1792 he accompanied the duke on the campaign in France. In 1806 he married. Not long afterwards he retired from all active business; but in 1815 he was obliged to take office as prime minister, which he held till the death of his friend and patron the grand duke in 1828. He died at Weimar on the 22d of March, 1833, energetic to the last, both in body and in mind.—For a dozen years after his settlement at Weimar, he seemed to be reposing on his quickly-won laurels. But he was very far from being idle; nor, in that later period in which his most distinguished works successively appeared, were these by any means the only fruits of his labour. He wrote accounts of his travels in Switzerland and Italy, and many critical and other essays; and, amidst an unceasing stream of small poems—few of them possessing much merit—were some exquisite ballads and other pieces of a lyrical or reflective cast. For the stage of Weimar, likewise, he furnished many plays; among which, as having importance literary as well as theatrical, may be named his prose tragedies of 'Egmont' and 'Clavigo.'—There still remain to be briefly noticed the works on which his celebrity mainly rests. The earliest of these were two dramas, which appeared in 1787, and flowed from the twofold inspiration of his residence in Italy. The 'Iphigenia in Tauris' is a modern echo, finely and originally modulated, of the classical antique; the 'Tasso' is a realization of the fluttering spirit of romance which lingered in the courts and society of Italy when the realities of the middle ages had passed away. None of Göthe's works are so admirable as these two for skill of art; none are more exquisite in ideal beauty of imagery; none are so characteristically illustrative of the desire he always felt to attain, though it were by the sacrifice of sternly solemn truths, a placid and meditative harmony of feeling. In 1795 appeared the first part ('The Apprentice-Years') of his novel 'Wilhelm Meister.' It is one of the most poetical, and the Germans hold it to be also the most philosophical, of all prose romances. Its philosophy, like its slippery morality, must here be left untouched. Its introduction of criticisms on literature and art was eagerly emulated, giving birth to those 'Art Novels,' the breed of which has been propagated to our own day. The poet's fame rose to its zenith in 1798, on the publication of his world-renowned 'Faust.' It is easy to feel, or rather it is impossible not to feel, the singular poetic beauty of this wonderful poem, its unsurpassed felicities of imagery and diction, and the impressiveness of the despondent melancholy which is the ruling temper of the whole. Philosophically considered, the 'Faust' is a propounding of the enigma of human life, with a refusal to accept, from religion, its only possible solution. In the same year, in 'Hermann and Dorothea,' Göthe attempted, as others had before him, at once to naturalize the classical hexameter in his native tongue, and to give epic form to a narrative of familiar life.—At this point the series of the poet's great works may be said to close. There next occurred a long interval, marked by nothing of distinguished note. The appearance, in 1810, of the notorious novel of the 'Wahlverwandschaften' (Elective Affinities), while as-

OLIVER GOLDSMITH

GOLIUS, JAMES, a Dutch Orientalist, author of an Arabic lexicon, a Persian dictionary, a history of the Saracens, &c., 1596-1667. His brother, PETER, an Oriental scholar and missionary, d. 1673.

GOLIUS, THEOPHILUS, a Gr. scholar, d. 1600.

GOLTZ, HENRY, a German painter, 1558-1617.

GOLTZIUS, HUB., a Dutch antiq., 1526-1583.

GOMAR, FRANCIS, a protestant divine of Holland, chief of the sect of Gomarites, or anti-remonstrants, who were opposed to Arminius, 1563-1609.

GOMARA, F. L. DE, a Sp. eccles. hist., 16th c.

GOMERSALL, R., an English dram., 1600-46.

GONDEBAND, king of Burgundy, 491-516.

GONDEBAND, king of Austrasia, 584.

GONDEMAR, king of Burgundy, 528-532.

GONDEMAR, king of the Visigoths, 610-612.

GONDERIC, king of the Vandals, 411-428.

GONET, J. B., a French theologian, 1616-1681.

GONGORA-Y-ARGOTE, LUIS, a Spanish ecclesiastic and poet, whose works were imitated in the earliest German romances, 1561-1627.

GONSALVO, FERNANDO, hereditary count of Castile, and a disting. warrior, flourished 924-960.

GONSALVO, M., a Span. heretic, burnt 1374.

GONSALVO OF CORDOVA, or GONZALO-HERNANDEZ-Y-AGUILAR, a Spanish warrior, disting. against the Moors in Spain and the Fr. in Naples, and called the great captain, 1443-1515.

GONTHAN, a king of Burgundy, 561-593.

GONTHIER, a German poet, 13th century.

GONTHIER, J., a Ger. anatomist, 1487-1574.

GOOCH, B., an English wr. on surgery, last ct.

GOOD, JOHN MASON, an English physician and author, distinguished for his skill in the ancient, Oriental, and European languages, for his translations and original works, and his numerous contributions to magazine literature, 1764-1827.

GOODAL, W., a Scotch antiquary, 1706-1766.

GOODMAN, CHRISTOPHER, a Scottish reformer and coadjutor of John Knox, abt. 1520-1602.

GOODMAN, G., an English prelate and theol., noted as a convert to the Romish Church, 1583-1655.

GOODRICH, THOMAS, bishop of Ely, distinguished as a statesman and zealous promoter of the reformation, died 1554.

GOODWIN, FR., an English architect, d. 1835.

GOODWIN, JOHN, an English republican and preacher, au. of 'Redemption Redeemed,' 1633-65.

GOODWIN, TH., a Calvinist divine, 1600-1679.

GOOGE, B., an Eng. poet and translator, 16th c.

GOOL, JOHN VAN, a Dutch paint., 1685-1757.

GORAN, a king of Scotland, reigned 501-535.

GORDIAN, or GORDIANUS, the name of three Roman emperors, the first, or elder, MARCUS ANTONIUS AFRICANUS, descended from Trajan, proclaimed while proconsul in Africa, along with his son, who, being of the same name, is known as Gordian the Younger. The latter was killed in action, upon hearing of which Gordianus the Elder strangled himself. The third of the name, MARCUS ANTONINUS PIUS GORDIANUS, was a grandson of the preceding, and was procl. emp. after their death, and murdered after a reign of six years, in the twentieth year of his age, 244.

GORDON, ALEX., a Scotch antiquarian, d. 1750.

GORDON, AND., a Scottish exper. philosopher, known for his discoveries in electricity, 1712-1751.

GORDON, BENJ., a Fr. medical author, 13th c.

GORDON, LORD GEORGE, son of Cosmo George, duke of Gordon, distinguished as a political character towards the close of the last century, and noted for his arrest on a charge of high treason, in consequence of the riots provoked by his assemblies of the people to oppose the catholic relief bill, born 1750, died in prison, 1793.

GORDON, JAMES, a Scotch Jesuit and theologian, distinguished for his zeal in making converts, 1543-1620. Another of the same name, au. of biblical commentaries and hist. works, 1553-1641.

GORDON, R., a Scotch geographer, died 1650.

GORDON, TH., a Scotch pamphleteer, d. 1750.

GORDON, W., an independent minister settled in America, and a promoter of its independence, of which he became the historian, 1729-1807.

GORDON, W., an English physician and philanthropist, distinguished as an advocate of free trade, and other popular movements, 1801-1849.

GORE, CHRISTOPH., an American diplomatist, governor of the state of Massachusets, 1758-1827.

GORE, SIR J., a naval officer, died 1836.

GORE, TH., a writer on heraldry, 1631-1684.

GORGIAS, a Greek sophist, 5th century B.C.

GORI, G. A., an Ital. antiquarian, 1691-1757.

GORLÆUS, A., a Flem. numismatist, 1549-1609.

GORSAS, A. J., a Fr. political wr. and member of the convention, exec. with the Girondins, 1793.

GOSELINI, J., an Italian historian, 1525-1587.

GOSSEC, FR., a French composer, 1734-1829.

GOSSELIN, ANTH., a Fr. historian, 1580-1645.

GOSSELIN, J., a French astronomer, d. 1604.

GOSSELIN, P., a French mathematician, 16th c.

GOSSELIN, PASCAL FR. JOSEPH, a French geographer, archæologist, and statesm., 1751-1830.

GOSSELIN, W., a French arithmetician, d. 1590.

GOSSIN, P. F., a French republican, exec. 1794.

GOSSON, STEPHEN, a minister of the Church of England, author of several dramas, 1554-1623.

GOSTLING, W., an Eng. antiquarian, 1705-77.

GOTH, STEPHEN, archbishop of Upsala, author of a new liturgy designed to Romanize the Lutheran church of Sweden, published 1576.

GOTHOFRED, DENIS, a French Huguenot and jurisconsult, author of 'Corpus Juris Civilis,' 1549-1622. His son, THEODORE, historiographer royal, author of an 'Account of the Ceremonial of the Kings of France,' 1580-1649. DENIS, son of the latter, and his successor in office, author of 'Memoirs of Philip de Commines,' &c.,' 1615-81.

GOTTSCHED, J., a Ger. philosoph., 1668-1704.

GOTTSCHED, JOHN CHRISTOPHER, a German dramatist and literary savant, professor of logic, philosophy, and metaphysics, at Leipzig, 1700-1766. His wife, LOUISA MARIA, distinguished by her splendid literary talents, d. 1762.

GOTTWALD, CH., a Ger. naturalist, 1636-1713.

GOUAN, ANT., a French botanist, 1733-1821.

GOUFFIER, L., a Fr. naval com., 1648-1734.

GOUFFIER, MARIE GABRIEL AUGUSTE LAURENT, Count De Choiseul, a French ambassador, and author of Travels in Greece, distinguished for his cultivation of the fine arts, 1752-1817.

GOUGE, F. S., a French poet, born 1724.

GOUGE, J., an adventurer, who was proclaimed king of France by the armed bands which he commanded on the banks of the Rhone, 1361.

GOUGE, WILLIAM, an Eng. puritan, and au. of biblical commentaries, 1575-1653. His son, THOMAS, also a clergyman and religious wr., 1605-81.

GOUGES, MARIE OLYMPE DE, a French lady, authoress of some dramatic pieces, executed for her attacks on Marat and Robespierre 1794.

GOUGH, RICHARD, an eminent antiquarian, au. of 'The Sepulchral Monuments of Great Britain,' 'Hist. of the Soc. of Antiquaries,' &c., 1735-1809.

GOUJET, CL. P., a French savant, 1697-1767.

GOUJON, J., a French sculptor and architect, killed at the massacre of St. Bartholomew, 1572.

GOUJON, J. M. C. A., a Fr. repub., 1766-1795.

GOULART, S., a French historian, 1543-1628.

GOULSTON, GOULSON, or GULSON, TH., an Eng. physic. and au. of learned works, d. 1632.

GOURGAND, GASPARD, a cel. French general, disting. for his devotion to Napoleon, 1783-1852.

GOUSSET, J., a French Hebraist, 1635-1704.

GOUVEA, A. DE, a learned Portuguese, 14th c.

GOUVION-ST.-CYR, LAURENCE, a general and marshal of France, distinguished in the campaign on the Rhine 1795; and under Moreau and Joubert, in the campaign of Italy. After the fall of Napoleon he was made a peer of France, and served as minister of war. The latter years of his life were occupied in the composition of his several memoirs; died 1830.

GOW, NEIL, was born in Strathband, Perthshire, of humble but honest parents, in the year 1727. His taste for music was early decided. At the age of nine he began to play, and was, it is said, self-taught, till about his thirteenth year, when he received some instruction from John Cameron, an attendant on Sir George Stewart of Grandtully. A trial of skill having been proposed, Neil was persuaded to enter the lists, and one of the minstrels, who was blind, being made the umpire, the prize was adjudged to Neil Gow, by a sentence in the justice of which the other competitors cheerfully acquiesced. Having now attained the summit of his profession at home, the distinguished patronage, first of the Athole family, and afterwards of the duchess of Gordon, soon introduced him to the notice and admiration of the fashionable world. From this period, Gow was unrivalled in his department of Scotch national music. The different publications which have appeared under the name of Neil Gow, and which contain not only his sets of the older tunes, but various occasional airs of his own composition, are striking specimens of feeling and power of embellishment. These were set and prepared for publication by his son NATHANIEL, whose respectable character and propriety of conduct secured for him the esteem and favour of the public. In private life, Neil Gow was distinguished by a sound vigorous understanding, by a singularly acute penetration into the character of those, both in the higher and lower spheres of society, with whom he had intercourse, and by the conciliating and appropriate accommodation of his remarks and replies, to the peculiarities of their station and temper. Though he had raised himself to independent and affluent circumstances in his old age, he continued free from every appearance of vanity and ostentation. He maintained to the last the same plain unassuming simplicity in his carriage, his dress, and his manners which he had observed in his early and more obscure years. He died at Inver, near Dunkeld, in 1807. Besides his son Nathaniel, he left another (JOHN), who long resided in London, and who inherited much of his father's musical taste and power of execution. Two other sons of equal eminent musical talent (WILLIAM and ANDREW) died a few years before their father, but not till they had established their reputation as true descendants of famous Neil. [J.M.]

GOWER, JOHN, an English poet, died 1402.

GOWER, R. H., a cel. ship-builder, died 1833.

GOYEN, J. VAN, a Dutch painter, 1596-1656.

GOZZI, GASPAR, an Italian poet, 1713-1786. His brother, CHARLES, a dramatic wr., 1702-1806.

GRABE, J. E., a Germ. theologian, 1666-1711.

GRABERG, OLAVE, a protestant theologian of Sweden, au. of 'Thoughts on the Bible,' 1716-69.

GRACCHI. The Gracchi, so often mentioned in Roman history, were the two sons of Tib. Sempronius Gracchus and Cornelia, the daughter of Scipio Africanus, the elder. Gracchus, who had been twice consul, and had obtained two triumphs, died while his sons were yet young, and Cornelia devoted herself exclusively to the charge and education of her children. Under her maternal guidance, aided by the best Greek masters, they soon surpassed in accomplishments all the Roman youths of the time.—1. TIB. SEMPRONIUS GRACCHUS, the elder of the two, was born B.C. 164. Scipio Africanus the younger had married his only sister; and when he entered upon the command of the army against Carthage, Tiberius accompanied him, and was present at the destruction of that renowned city. Nine years after he accompanied the consul Mancinus as quæstor to Spain, where, by his integrity and disinterestedness, he gained the esteem of the enemy as well as the affections of the Roman soldiers. When the Roman army under Mancinus was defeated by the Numantines (B.C. 137), Tiberius succeeded in effecting a treaty on reasonable terms, which, however, the senate refused to ratify. Tiberius, notwithstanding, reaped the glory of having saved 20,000 men from destruction, and the people rewarded his services with affection and gratitude. During the long wars in which the Romans had been engaged, many encroachments had been made on the public domains; the nobles had obtained possession of extensive tracts, which were cultivated by foreign slaves; and the poorer classes of Roman citizens, being thus thrown out of employment, were reduced to a state of pauperism. Tiberius, sympathizing with the privations of the poor, resolved to revive the Licinian law, which defined the extent of public land tenable by any citizen. With this view he was elected tribune of the people in B.C. 133, and, in the face of unscrupulous opposition on the part of the nobility, carried a law similar to that of Licinius. Tiberius himself, his brother Caius, and his father-in-law, Appius Claudius, were appointed commissioners for measuring and distributing the land. At this crisis of affairs, Attalus, king of Pergamus, died, bequeathing his kingdom and treasure to the Roman people, and Tiberius proposed to divide the treasure among the recipients of the land under the new law, to enable them to stock their farms. This proposal raised the indignation of the nobles to a still higher pitch. To prevent his law from being abolished, and also to secure his person against imminent danger, he resolved to offer himself a candidate for the tribuneship of the following year. On the day of election, his opponents demurred to his eligibility, and night intervened before the question was decided. Next morning both parties presented themselves at the capitol in readiness for acts of violence; the senators were resolved to kill Tiberius, and his own partizans were prepared to defend him. Hereupon Scipio Nasica, after in vain calling upon the consul to defend the state, rushed from the temple of Faith, where the senate had assembled, followed by the nobility, overawed the mob, seized their weapons, and killed about three hundred, of whom Tiberius Gracchus was one, B.C. 133. Thus perished one of the truest Roman patriots, whose memory has only in recent times been freed from the odium which centuries of misrepresentation had heaped upon it.—2. CAIUS SEMPRONIUS GRACCHUS was nine years younger than Tiberius; and at the time of his brother's death was in the army of Scipio Africanus in Spain. The fate of his brother seems to have deterred him from acting as a commissioner under the agrarian law, or from taking any prominent part in public affairs, till B.C. 123. Returning then from Sardinia, where he had served two years as quæstor, he was elected tribune of the people, and commenced a career which speedily led to a fatal conclusion. The measures which he proposed were partly vindictive and partly intended to establish his own popularity; of the latter class was a poor-law authorizing a monthly distribution of corn to the people at a merely nominal price; the effect of which was to make the population of Rome paupers, and to attract the poor and indolent from all parts of Italy. Caius next directed his efforts against the power of the senate, deprived them of the right of electing the judges from their own number, transferring it to the equites, and passed a law enacting that the provinces of the consuls and prætors should be fixed before the election of these magistrates. Being re-elected to the tribuneship of the following year, he was chiefly employed in passing laws respecting the colonies, and himself established a colony on the ruins of Carthage. After the expiry of his period of office, he united with the tribune Fulvius in inciting the populace to acts of violence, which led the senate to arm the consul Opimius with absolute power. The consul summoned Gracchus and Fulvius before him to answer for their conduct; and, after some attempts at negotiation, attacked and dispersed the popular party. Gracchus, who had taken no part in the struggle, fled across the Tiber, and entering a grove sacred to the Furies, ordered his slave to kill him. He thus perished, B.C. 121, at the age of thirty-three. [G.F.]

GRACIAN, B., a Spanish author, 1584-1658.

GRACIAN, J., a Flemish theolog., 1545-1614.

GRADENIJO, the first of the name doge of Venice 1289-1311; the second, 1339-43; the third, who terminated the war with Genoa, 1355-1356.

GRADENIJO, J. A., a Venet. prelate, 1744-74.

GRANDENIJO, J. J., a Ven. prelate, 1708-86.

GRADI, J., a learned writer, 16th century.

GRADI, STEPHEN, an Ital. philologist, d. 1683.

GRÆME, JOHN, a Scotch poet, 1748-1772.

GRÆTER, F. D., a Prus. savant, 1768-1830.

GRÆVIUS, J. G., a German critic, 1632-1703.

GRAFTON, R., an English annalist, 16th cent.

GRAFTON, AUGUSTUS HENRY FITZROY, duke of, prime minister from 1765-1770, disting. also as a theolog. wr. on Socinian principles, 1736-1811.

GRAFUNDER, D., a Pruss. Oriental., d. 1680.

GRAHAM, GEORGE, an ingenious watchmaker. and mechanician, celebrated for the accuracy of his astronomical instruments, 1675-1751.

GRAHAM, JOHN, of Claverhouse, was born in 1650. In early life he served as a soldier of fortune in France and Holland, but returning to Scotland in 1677, he was appointed commander of the cavalry acting against the Covenanters, in that disturbed country; and the energetic manner in which he executed the duty has caused his name to be all but execrated by the Scottish people; yet Sir Walter Scott has pourtrayed him as a thorough soldier and gentleman. He was created Viscount Dundee. Killed at Killiecrankie 1689.

GRAHAM, SIR JOHN, the comp.-in-arms of Sir William Wallace, k. at the battle of Falkirk 1298.

GRAHAM, SIR RICH., Lord Viscount Preston, ambass. from Charles II. to Louis XIV., 1648-95.

GRAHAME, JAMES, a religious poet of Scotland, author of 'The Sabbath,' &c., 1765-1811.

GRAINGER, JAMES, a Scotch physician settled in London, known as a poet, 1723-1767.

GRAMAYE, J. B., a Flem. historian, d. 1635.

GRAMBERG, A., a German poet, 1772-1816.

GRAMBERG, C. P. W., a German Oriental scholar and literary savant, 1797-1822.

GRAMM, JOHN, a Danish antiqu., 1685-1748.

GRAMMONT, A. P. DE, a French officer, distinguished at the battle of Malplaquet 1709, and after that archbishop of Besançon, 1685-1754.

GRAMMONT, F.J. DE, abp. of Besançon, d.1715.

GRAMMONT, N. DE, a Fr. gen., exec. 1794.

GRAMMONT, or GRAMOND, GABRIEL DE BARTHELEMY, Seigneur De, a Fr. hist., d. 1654.

GRAMONT, the name of an illustrious French family, the best known of whom are—GABRIEL, a cardinal and diplomatist, time of Louis XII. and Francis I., died 1534. ANTHONY, duke of Gramont, marshal of France and viceroy of Navarre, author of 'Memoirs,' died 1678. ARMAND, son of the latter, and Count de Guiche, whose 'Memoirs' also exist, 1638-1674. PHILIBERT, count de Gramont, son of Anthony, known by his memoirs, written by his brother-in-law, Anthony, Count Hamilton, died 1720. ANTHONY, duke de Gramont, a French marshal and ambassador, known as count de Guiche, 1671-1725. LOUIS, duke de Gramont, lost the battle of Dettingen, and was killed at Fontenoi 1745. The last duke of Gramont, father of the duke of Guiche and the countesses of Tankerville and Sebastiani, died 1836.

GRAMONT, S. DE, a Provençal poet, d. 1638.

GRAN, OLAVE S., a Swed. missionary, 17th c.

GRANBY, JOHN MANNERS, marquis of, an English general, eldest son of the duke of Rutland, distinguished in the seven years' war, 1720-1770.

GRANCOLAS, J., a French savant, author of many works on eccl. rites, ceremonies, and general history, and a controversial wr. on Quietism, d. 1732.

GRANDET, J., a Fr. biographer, 1646-1724.

GRANDI, G., an Ital. mathemat., 1671-1742.

GRANDIDIER, P. A., a Fr. historian, 1732-87.

GRANET, FR., a French critic, 1692-1741.

GRANGE, JOSEPH DE CHANCEL DE LA, a French dramatic wr. and miscel. poet, 1675-1758.

GRANGENEUVE, J. A., a French republican of the Girondin party, born 1750, executed 1793.

GRANGER, J., an Engl. biographi. wr., 1776.

GRANGIER, B., a French poet, 16th century.

GRANGIER, J., a French savant, died 1643.

GRANT, ANNE, formerly Miss M'Vicar, and commonly called Mrs. Grant of Laggan, from a farm she cultivated in that neighbourhood, distinguished as a miscellaneous writer, authoress of 'Memoirs of an American Lady,' 'Essays on the Superstitions of the Highlands,' &c., 1755-1838.

GRANT, CHARLES, a proprietor and director of the East India Company, author of 'Observations on the State of Society among the Asiatic Subjects of Great Britain,' 1746-1822.

GRANT, SIR C., a British officer, died 1835.

GRANT, EDWARD, an English writer, d. 1601.

GRANT, FRANCIS, Lord Cullen, an eminent Scottish lawyer and judge, 1660-1726.

GRANT, J., a Scot. barrister, au. of 'Thoughts on the Origin of the Gael,' &c., 1743-1835.

GRANT, PATRICK, a Scot. judge, 1698-1764.

GRANT, SIR WM., an eminent equity judge, master of the rolls from 1801 to 1817, 1754-1832.

GRANUELLE, ANTHONY PERRENOT, Cardinal De, a distinguished French statesman, and viceroy of Naples, 1517-1586.

GRANVILLE, GREENVILE, or GRENVILLE, SIR RICHARD, a military and naval adventurer, killed in action under Sir Thomas Howard, 1591. SIR BEVIL, his grandson, a royalist, and commander of a troop of horse raised at his own expense, killed at the battle of Lansdowne, 1596-1643. GEORGE, Lord Lansdowne, grandson of the latter, a poet and courtier, 1667-1735. See CARTERET, GRENVILLE.

GRAPALDI, F. M., an Italian poet, 15th cent.

GRATIAN, a canonist of the 12th century.

GRATIANUS, an emperor of Rome, born 359, associated in the empire with his younger brother, Valentinian II., 375, assassinated 383. A private soldier of this name was proclaimed emperor in Britain, and put to death four months aftwd., in 407.

GRATIUS, a Roman poet, 1st century B.C.

GRATIUS, O., a controversial writer, 16th ct.

GRATTAN, HENRY, an Irish statesman and lawyer, was born in Dublin about the year 1750. He was called to the Irish bar in 1772; and having attached himself to Lord Charlemont, he obtained, by the powerful influence of that aristocratic national leader, a seat in the Irish parliament in 1775. His fiery eloquence, essentially Irish in its impetuosity, which yet was guided by good taste and strong judgment, gave him an immediate influence both with parliament and the public, and his bold spirit speedily grasped at projects far beyond the more hesitating policy of his leader. His great object was to have a recorded declaration of the legislative independence of Ireland, and by obtaining it as he did, there is no doubt that he prepared his country to receive juster terms and a higher position in a legislative union with Britain than she might have otherwise obtained. Besides the old assertion of the supremacy of the English crown in Poyning's Act, there stood, in the British statute book, so lately as the reign of George I., an offensive declaration of the legislative authority of the British parliament over Ireland. On the 16th of March, 1782, the Irish Commons, as the result of Grattan's exertions, carried a declaration of rights condemning this legislative assumption, and by the cordial aid of Fox, then fortunately in power, the offensive act was repealed by the British parliament. The Irish legislature resolved to show their gratitude by a vote of money to Grattan, which, at his own desire, was reduced from the £100,000 originally suggested to £50,000. His popularity was subsequently occasionally shaken by the hostility of his great rival Flood. Unlike many of his coadjutors in the struggle for Irish nationality, he was a warm friend of catholic emancipation. He strongly opposed the union, and was for some time a member, but not a remarkable one, of the united parliament. He died on 14th May, 1820. [J.H.B.]

GRATUS, Roman gov. of Judæa, about 16-27.

GRAUMANN, J. P., a Prussian financier, reformer of the monetary system of Germ., 1710-62.

GRAUN, CARL HEINRICH, a German musical composer, chapel-master to Fr. the Gr., 1701-1759.

GRAUNT, EDW., an English clergyman, au. of 'Græcum Linguæ Spicilogium,' &c., died 1601.

GRAUNT, JOHN, a London draper, author of 'Observations on the Bills of Mortality,' 1670-74.

GRAVANDER, L. F., a Swed. poet, 1778-1815.

GRAVELOT, H., a Fr. engraver, 1699-1778.

GRAVES, RICH., an Engl. clergyman and misc. wr., auth. of 'The Spiritual Quixote,' 1715-1804.

GRAVESANDE, WILLIAM JAMES, an eminent Dutch mathematician and astronomer, 1648-1742.

GRAVINA, CARLO DUKE DE, a Sp. admiral, died of a wound received at Trafalgar, 1747-1806.

GRAVINA, DOMINICO DA, an Italian historian, author of a history of Naples, &c., 14th century.

GRAVINA, GIAN VINCENZO, a celebrated Neapolitan jurist and man of letters, 1664-1718.

GRAVINA, PIETRO, a Neapolitan poet, 15th c.

GRAVIUS, an annalist of Friesland, 16th cent.

GRAY, E. W., an eminent naturalist, d. 1807.

GRAY, STEPHEN, an English gentleman, distinguished as an experimt. philosopher, d. 1736.

GRAY, ROBERT, bishop of Bristol, author of a 'Theory of Dreams,' 'Connection between the Sacred Writings and the Literature of Jewish and Heathen Authors,' &c., 1762-1834.

GRAY, THOMAS, the son of a scrivener in London, was born there in 1716. From Eton school he passed to Cambridge, where he busied himself with languages and poetry, and neglected mathematics and philosophy, as indeed he did ever afterwards. Leaving the university in 1738, without taking a degree in arts, he intended to study law, but in the meantime entered on a continental tour with Horace Walpole. The two indifferently assorted companions travelled through France and Italy; but a misunderstanding taking place, Gray returned to England in 1741.—His father being now dead, he seems to have been in possession of means enabling a person of moderate wishes and indolent habits to dispense with the labour of a profession. He settled himself at Cambridge for the remainder of his days, hardly ever leaving the place, unless when he made tours to Wales, Scotland, and the lakes of Westmoreland, and when he passed three years in London, for access to the library of the British Museum. His life thenceforth was purely that of a scholar; and it was spent in reading and desultory thinking, rather than in authorship. His knowledge was multifarious and exact.—That he was intellectually active, in his own lazy and miscellaneous fashion, is shown by his 'Letters,' published after his death. These are admirable specimens of English style; they contain some of the most picturesque pieces of descriptive writing in the language; they are full of acute, though fastidious criticism; and they have innumerable touches of quiet humour. He planned editions of classical authors, and made collections for the purpose. But he completed nothing except those little poems, which, flowing from an intense though not fertile imagination, inspired by the most delicate poetic feeling, and elaborated into exquisite terseness of diction, are among the most splendid ornaments of English literature.—His 'Ode to Eton College,' published in 1747, attracted little notice; the 'Elegy in a Country Churchyard,' appearing in 1749, became at once, as it has always continued to be, one of the most popular of all poems. Most of his other odes were written in the course of the three years following 1753; and the publication of the collection in 1757 established his poetical reputation with all who were competent to appreciate the most refined beauties of poetry. In 1768, after having been disappointed of the place when it was last vacant, he became professor of modern history at Cambridge. He had long been distressed by attacks of gout; and one of these killed him in 1771. [W.S.]

[Gray's House at Stoke.]

GRAZIANI, A. M., an Ital. writer, dist. for his learning and the eloquence of his style, 1537-1611.

GRAZIANI, G., an Italian poet, 1604-1675.

GRAZIANI, J., an Ital. hist., abt. 1670-1730.

GRAZIANI, J. B., a Florentine sculptor, whose real name was Ballanti, 1762-1835.

GRAZZINI, A. F., an Italian poet, 1503-1583.

GREATOREX, Thomas, an eminent musical performer and composer, dist. also for his studies in mathematics, chemistry, and botany, 1758-1831.

GREATRAKES, Valentine, an Irish gentleman who became famous about the period of the reformation for the cure of all kinds of diseases merely by the touch. He was born in Waterford 1628, and having come to England, served in the parliamentary army from 1649 to 1656, and was afterwards a magistrate in the county of Cork. The date of his death is not known.

GREAVES, James Pierrepoint, a writer of much original value on education, 1777-1842.

GREAVES, Richard, an Oriental scholar, antiquarian writer, and mathematician, 1602-1652. His brother, Thomas, an Arabian scholar, author of annotations on the Bible, &c., died 1676. His br., Edward, a physic. and medical wr., d. 1680.

GREBAN, S., a French poet, 15th century.

GREBNER, P., a German visionary, 16th cent.

GRECOURT, Jean Baptiste Joseph Willart De, a French poet, born of a Scotch family, author of 'Philotanus,' a satirical history of the famous bull Unigenitus, 1684-1743.

GREDING, J. E., a Germ. physician, 1718-75.

GREEN, Edward Burnaby, a poet and classical translator, died 1788.

GREEN, John, an English prelate, 1706-1779.

GREEN, Matthew, author of 'The Spleen,' a poem in considerable repute when first published for its originality and wit, b. about 1677, d. 1737.

GREEN, Th., a miscellaneous wr., 1770-1825.

GREEN, Val., an Engl. engraver, 1739-1813.

GREEN, W., an English divine, died 1794.

GREENE, Maurice, a musical composer and organist, author of some much esteemed anthems, &c., named Doctor of Music by the university of Cambridge in 1730, and afterw. professor, d. 1755.

GREENE, Robert, an English dramatist, miscel. wr., and poet, time of Elizabeth, d. 1592.

GREENE, Thomas, successively bishop of Norwich and Ely, and vice-chancellor of Cambridge, author of discourses on Death, Judgment, Heaven, and Hell, &c., 1658-1738.

GREENFIELD, William, an Oriental scholar, editor of the 'Comprehensive Bible,' &c., d. 1832.

GREENHAM, R., a puritan divine, died 1591.

GREENHILL, J., an English painter, 1649-76.

GREENVILLE. See Granville.

GREEVE, E. J., a Dutch Hebraist, author of a 'Dissertation on the Hebrew Rhythm,' 1754-1811.

GREGOIRE, Henry Count, a member of the French constitutent assembly and the convention, and constitutional bishop of Blois, distinguished as an advocate of popular rights, for his faithfulness to the Christian religion, and for his writings in fav. of the abolition of slavery, &c., 1750-1831.

GREGORAS, a Byzantine hist., abt. 1295-1360.

GREGORII, J. G., a Germ. geographer, last ct.

GREGORIO, C., an Italian designer and engraver, 1719-1759. His son, Ferdinand, an engraver, born about 1740.

GREGORIO, Maurice De, a learned theologian of Sicily, author of 'Anatomia Totius Bibliæ,' published 1614, died 1651.

GREGORIO, R., an Ital. antiquar., 1753-1809.

GREGORIUS, J. F., a Ger. savant, 1697-1761.

GREGORIUS, Publius, a native of Tiphernum, distinguished at Venice as professor of ancient literature, died about 1469. Emmanuel Frederic, his son, a theologian and philologist, author of numerous works in German and in Latin, 1730-1800.

GREGORY. The saints of this name are—Gregory Thuamaturgus, a convert of Origen, distinguished by his writings and marvellous power in the conversion of the heathen, died about 270. Gregory Nazianzen, for whose history see farther on. Gregory of Nyssa, another of the Greek fathers, the biographer of Gregory Thuamaturgus, and himself a philosophical divine of the highest talents, born about 330, died 400. GREGORY OF TOURS, author of a 'History of France,' and 'The Miracles of the Saints,' &c., 559-595. GREGORY LOUSAVORISCH, 'The Illuminator,' the apostle and first patriarch of Armenia, died about 336. GREGORY, bishop of Agrigentum, author of Greek commentaries, died early in the 7th century. And the first two popes of the name.

GREGORY. The popes of this name are—GREGORY I., surnamed 'The Great,' and a saint in the Romish calendar, author of works which have often been reprinted, born about 544, raised to the pontificate 590, died 604. GREGORY II., also a saint of Rome, succeeded 715, died 731. GREGORY III., reigned about ten years, and died 741. GREGORY IV., 827-844. GREGORY V., born 972, died, after a pontificate of two years and nine months, 999. GREGORY VI., elected pope 1045, deposed 1046. GREGORY VII., elected 1073, died 1085. GREGORY VIII., pope two months only, elected and died 1187. GREGORY IX., reigned 1227-1241. GREGORY X., 1271-1276. GREGORY XI., b. 1331, reigned 1370-1378. GREGORY XII., born 1325, reigned 1406-1417. GREGORY XIII., distinguished by the reformation of the calendar, and one of the ablest civilians of his age, born 1502, reigned 1572-1585. GREGORY XIV., born 1534, succeeded 1590, died 1591. GREGORY XV., born 1554, succeeded 1621, distinguished as the founder of the College of the Propaganda, died 1623. GREGORY XVI., born 1765, succeeded Pius VIII. 1831, died 1846.

GREGORY. The patriarchs of Constantinople of this name are—GREGORIUS, or GREGORIUS CYPRIUS, died 1290; GREGORY OF RIMINI, a celebrated scholar, died 1357; and a third of the name who played an important part in the divisions which agitated the Turkish empire, and was hung by the populace of Constantinople 1821.

GREGORY. The princes and patriarchs of Armenia of this name, besides G. Lousavoritch in the list of saints, are—GREGORY, the last prince of the race of the Mamigoneans, acknowledged by the caliph under the title of patriarch 659, killed in battle with the Chazars 683. GREGORY MAGISTROS, a prince of the royal race of the Arsacides of Persia, distinguished as a poet and man of letters, author of an Armenian grammar, &c., commenced his political career in the time of John, king of Armenia 1030, and died 1058. GREGORY II., the son and successor of the preceding, governed the patriarchate 1058-1105. GREGORY III., nephew of Gregory II., succeeded Basil 1113, died 1166. GREGORY IV., nephew of the preceding, reigned 1173-1193. GREGORY V., nephew and successor of Gregory IV., imprisoned by the lords and clergy of Armenia on account of his debaucheries, and perished in attempting to escape, 1193-1194. GREGORY VI., father of Gregory V., and his successor in 1193, died 1198. GREGORY VII., successor of Constantine I., 1294, died 1306. GREGORY VIII., maintained a long struggle for the royal authority, and was at length killed, 1411-1418. GREGORY IX., elected by certain of the clergy 1440, and not being recognized by the Eastern Armenians, submitted to Vartabied, chosen by them in 1441, and confined his own authority to Cilicia, died 1447. GREGORY X., reigned 1443-1461. GREGORY XI., 1535-1541. GREGORY XII., 1569-1573. GREGORY XIII., known at first under the name of Serapion, elected after the flight of David V. and Melchisedech 1603, fell into the hands of the dispossessed patriarchs, aided by the Persians, and was cruelly tortured 1605, died, probably in consequence, 1606.

GREGORY: an illustrious Scottish family name, recalling the continuous splendours of the Bernouillis or Cassinis: we shall give the names and little more of its most remarkable scions.—1. Earliest and perhaps loftiest, stands JAMES GREGORY, born in 1639; son of the progenitor of the family, the minister of Drumoack in Aberdeenshire. At the age of twenty-nine he became professor of mathematics in St. Andrews; from which he was transferred to the same chair in Edinburgh, 1674. He died at the early age of thirty-six, having given the most brilliant promise as well as great performance. We owe him one form of the reflecting telescope; and in analytic power he sometimes rivalled Newton. His memoirs are very numerous, all bespeaking talents and originality of the first order. —2. DAVID GREGORY, nephew of James, born at Aberdeen in 1661; at the age of twenty-three he succeeded his uncle in the metropolitan chair. David was an elegant mathematician and a good astronomer. He became Savilian professor at Oxford; and was one of the first who comprehended and taught the philosophy of Newton. He died in 1708.—3. JAMES and CHARLES, brothers of the preceding, were also able mathematicians: James succeeded David in Edinburgh, and Charles held the chair in St. Andrews, which he transmitted to another mathematician, his son, DAVID.—4. Next the Medical branch of this singular family. It originated in JAMES, son of the great James Gregory, and professor of medicine in King's College, Aberdeen. He bequeathed his abilities and chair to his son, Dr. JAMES GREGORY, a man of repute: but his celebrated son was,—6. JOHN GREGORY, M.D., born at Aberdeen in 1724. Few men have more deserved a high fame, than this eminent and excellent person. Thoroughly educated as a physician, he united to that culture, great sagacity and moral excellence, as well as refined tastes that led him into intimacy with all the eminent men of the brightest era of Scottish literature. From the year 1766 he held the chair of Practice of Physic in the university of Edinburgh; and continued until his death in 1792 an acknowledged ornament of the metropolis. John Gregory is the author of the 'Father's Legacy to his Daughters,' and he will long be remembered professionally by his 'Elements of the Practice of Physic.' There is a life of him by the naturalist Smellie.—7. Dr. JAMES GREGORY, son of the preceding, succeeded to his chair, and sustained his place as a leading member of the Edinburgh Medical School. The kind of genius which most distinguished this great family was not extinct; its mathematical powers again broke forth. Son of Dr. James, was—8. The late D. F. GREGORY, of Trinity College, Cambridge, an analyst reft from Science at the earliest age: he would have rivalled his greatest predecessor.—It is stated that of this family no less than sixteen members have held British professorships. [J.P.N.]

GREGORY, archbishop of Corinth, 12th cent

GREGORY, a king of Scotland, reign. 875-892.

GREGORY, GEORGE, D.D., an Irish divine, and historical and miscellaneous wr., 1754-1808.

GREGORY OF NAZIANZUS, commonly called ST. GREGORY NAZIANZEN, was born at Arianzus, a village at no great distance from the town which has given to Gregory his distinctive cognomen. His pious mother Nonna, devoted him when an infant to the service of Christ and the church. His education, which commenced at Cæsarea in Cappadocia, was prosecuted next at Cæsarea Philippi, and at Alexandria, and was finished at Athens, where he began a life-long intimacy with Basil the Great. His father, of the same name, had been bishop of Nazianzus for many years, and in the course of time he was joined with his father in the administration of the church. He had previously refused from Basil the diocese of Sasima. At his father's death he retired to Selencia the capital of Isauria, and spent three years in solitude and meditation. In 379 he went by urgent request to Constantinople to preach to the remnant of the orthodox party who survived the Arian persecutions. His private chapel he named Anastasia, but his eloquence and popularity became so immense, that with the concurrence of the emperor Theodosius, the general council exalted him to the patriarchate or archiepiscopal chair. But objections were soon started to the regularity and validity of his election, and he gladly resigned the see, delivering a magnificent farewell oration in the great church St. Sophia in June, 381. On his journey homeward he visited Cæsarea, and pronounced his glowing funeral discourse on his friend Basil. He discharged the duties of a bishop for a brief period at Nazianzus till his cousin Eulalius was installed, and at once he retired to the country, where on his paternal estate at Arianzus he spent the remainder of his life in the cultivation of his garden, and the composition of religious poetry. Gregory died about the year 389. Among his literary remains have been preserved about 50 sermons, 250 epistles, and nearly 400 poems. The life of this theologian was a species of combat between the active and the contemplative propensity within him. Ever seeking quiet he was ever forced into agitation and strife. Seclusion was earnestly coveted by him, but peculiar crises in the church summoned him into the arena, in which he no sooner found himself, than he sighed again for his calm retreat. His style, which seems based on the model of Isocrates, is often highly eloquent, but is frequently disfigured by exaggeration and overlaid with rhetorical embellishment. His poems are often distinguished by peculiar beauties, though marred by their artificial structure and allusions. Several editions of his works have been published, but a good edition is still a desideratum. The editio princeps was published at Basle in 1550, and of the Benedictine edition only one volume has appeared, and that at Paris, 1778. [J.E.]

GREGORY, OLINTHUS GILBERT, LL.D., an able and industrious English mathematician and author, born in 1774, died 1841. He wrote valuable elementary books of science, but is best known by his 'Evidences of Christianity.'

GREGORY, ST. VINCENT, a Flemish mathematician, born at Bruges in 1584, died in 1667.

GREIFF, F., a German chemist, 1601-1668.

GREIG, SAM. CARLOWITZ, a naval officer b. in Scotland, and dist. in the Russian service, d. 1788.

GRENADE, L. DE, a Spanish ascetic, 1505-88.

GRENVILLE. Several members of this family are known as statesmen, the principal of whom are — RICHARD GRENVILLE, afterwards Earl Temple, and his brother GEORGE, commonly called Mr. Grenville, the reputed author of the American Stamp Act. Lord Temple was born 1711, commenced his public life as a member of parliament in 1734, and died in retirement 1779. Mr. George Grenville was born in 1712, and served in parliament as member for Buckingham from the year 1741, till his death in 1770. The names of the brothers are mixed up with the party politics of the whole of this period, sometimes as warmly attached friends, and at others as political enemies. Mr. Grenville was connected with the administration in several subordinate offices from 1744 to 1762; the last five years of this interval, as a colleague of his brother, Lord Temple. In the last mentioned year he became secretary of state in the ministry of Lord Bute, and from that time to 1765 his brother was associated with Mr. Pitt in the opposition. In 1765 Mr. Grenville, who had risen to the premiership two years previously, was dismissed by the king, and a breach occurring at the same period between Mr. Pitt and Lord Temple the brothers were reconciled. Their characters were very different, but they were both agreed on the principle of taxing America as a legislative right, and Mr. Grenville had the manliness to carry out his convictions irrespective of the consequences. He was always regarded as the ablest man of business then in the House of Commons, and seems to have resembled the late Sir Robert Peel in many points. Lord Temple, on the other hand, was a man of factious and turbulent disposition, and if his name was not before the public in connection with any useful measure, it was sure to be extant in some pasquinade, perhaps as 'Lord Gawkey,' or 'Tiddy-doll.' He was a partizan of Wilkes, and thus united the opposite extremes in his political conduct. The late librarian of Stowe has recently edited the correspondence of the brothers, which throws much light upon the political transactions of the period. In the third volume of these interesting papers he has collected a mass of evidence tending to prove that Lord Temple is the original of 'Junius.' [E.R.]

GRENVILLE, RIGHT HON. WILLIAM WYNDHAM, Lord Grenville, third son of Mr. George Grenville, born 1759, distinguished as a member of the House of Commons and a statesman from 1789 to 1806, when he succeeded Pitt as prime minister, died 1834.

GREPPI, CARLO, an Ital. dramat., 1751-1811.

GRESHAM, SIR THOMAS, founder of the Royal Exchange of London, and the Gresham Lectures, was the son of Sir Richard Gresham, merchant and lord mayor of that city, and acquired universal fame as a merchant for his knowledge, sound judgment, and integrity. Besides his munificent endowments in the interest of commerce and the arts, he served the state as ambassador, and contributed greatly to placing the financial affairs of England upon a sound basis, being in constant intercourse and correspondence with Sir W Cecil. He was greatly honoured by Queen Elizabeth.

He was born in London 1519, and died suddenly at his house in Bishopgate-Street 1579.

GRESLON, A., a French missionary, 1618-97.

GRESSET, F., a French philologist, 1795-1831.

GRESSET, J. B. L., a Fr. dramatist, 1709-77.

GRETRY, ANDRE ERNEST MODESTE, a celeb. compos. of Fr. operas, and wr. on music, 1741-1813.

GRETSER, J., a Ger. controv. wr., 1561-1625.

GREUZE, J. B., a French painter, 1726-1805.

GREVILLE, FULKE or FOULQUE, Lord Brook, a dist. patron of letters, au. of the 'Life of Sir Ph. Sydney,' and mem. of the privy council, 1554-1628.

GREVIN, J., a French dramatist, 1540-1570.

GREW, OBADIAH, an English divine settled at Coventry, 1607-1698. His son—

GREW, NEHEMIAH, a physician and botanist, was born at Coventry about the year 1628. He died in 1711.—Grew was educated at a foreign university, and after taking his degree, he settled in his native town as a physician. Here he commenced making observations upon the physiology of plants, and in 1760 he communicated to the Royal Society his first thoughts upon the subject in a paper entitled 'Idea of a Philosophical History of Plants.' His essay was so well received that he was invited to come to London, which he did in 1672. Upon the recommendation of Bishop Wilkins he was elected a fellow, and in 1677 he was appointed secretary to the Royal Society. His celebrated work, 'The Anatomy of Plants,' with an 'Idea of a Philosophical History of Plants,' was published in 1682, illustrated by many plates, and forms a perfect storehouse of facts upon vegetable anatomy, which has been freely made use of by succeeding botanists. His remarks upon vegetable secretions and their properties are very ingenious—his comparative examination of the various kinds of fruits and seeds abounds in originality—and he appears, from several passages in his works, to have discovered the doctrine of the sexes in plants, and the fecundating properties possessed by the dust of the anthers. Linnæus has named a genus of plants after him, Grewia. [W.B.]

GREY, CHARLES EARL, was born on 13th March, 1764. His father, Sir Charles, was ennobled for his military services in 1802, but the family was one of ancient renown, connected with early peerages, and there is no doubt that the rank and antiquity of his house exercised considerable influence in mitigating prejudices against a career so boldly and steadily directed in favour of popular influence and democratic institutions as that of Earl Grey. He studied at Eton and Cambridge, and made the usual continental tour. He entered parliament as member for Northumberland, in 1786, and two years afterwards was distinguished by being named one of the managers of the Hastings' impeachment. He became one of those whom personal attachment and political sympathy united under the standard of Fox; but as the French revolution went through its stages, the bold and ardent young man was inclined to follow it with a far closer sympathy than the leader, now a veteran in parliamentary tactics, was disposed to sanction. He was an active member of the dreaded Society of the Friends of the People; and in 1793 he brought forward a motion in favour of parliamentary reform, founded on a petition from the society, boldly exposing th the existing system. But the policy o tary reform had not only been deser and his friends, but was rather disc than aided by the veteran members party, and he was left in a minority o He continued to be the bold and unhe nouncer, from time to time, of every act savouring of corruption, extravi stretching of the arbitrary elements o tution; and in the extremely critic which he acted, there is no doubt n the zeal and firmness of the young well tried, but that any man of less co and capacity would have fallen a sac zealous temerity. Holding the cour Lord Howick, he became first lord of th in the short Whig ministry of 1806. ber, 1807, his father's death sent House of Lords, where he pursued hi unaltered, save by adaptation to the n exertion. He was the main object c less negotiations for a mixed minist His history as the leader of the Whig 1830, which carried the reform bill, h and important a place in the history o afford materials for a satisfactory It is well known that Earl Grey's coura ness, undiminished by the years whi larged his sagacity and matured h capacity, were greatly instrumental at epoch in saving the country from a civ resigned office in July, 1834, and spen ing years in respected retirement. He of remarkably fine appearance and dig ners; and though a friend of popular his habits were reserved, and were of terized as haughty. He was married Elizabeth, the only daughter of Lord He died at Howick on 17th July, 184

GREY, LADY JANE, whose tragical known to readers of English histor granddaughter of Mary Tudor, siste VIII., and of Charles Brandon, duke This alliance was brought about by s cumstances. The Princess Mary had ried to Louis XII., king of France, in a treaty of peace and confederacy, 1514, and about three months afterwa husband, who was succeeded by his co I. As the queen dowager had been of disposition, there were more reasons tha the birth of a posthumous child. Fr fore, connived at a private marriage bashful widow and the duke of Suffol then at the French court, and probabl his good offices to reconcile Henry to The issue of this union was a daugh Frances, who was married to Henry Gr of Dorset, and as a consequence ga Lady Jane Grey, at the family seat in shire, 1537. Being educated as a pro possessing talents which rendered her prodigies of her sex, the duke of Nort easily prevailed on Edward VI. to na successor, thereby excluding his sister Elizabeth; the one of doubtful religi other most certainly a bigotted catholi of an immediate competitor for the Fr refore, the amorous embraces of Mary Tudor, ded by a little management at the French court, ed up one for the English in the person of innocent, talented, and beautiful grandchild. ring secured his purposes with the king, Nor- mberland married his son, Lord Guildford Dud- to Lady Jane Grey, and they were both exe- d after a phantom royalty of nine days, on the of February, 1554. Lady Jane was only in seventeenth year, and was remarkable for her in the classical, Oriental, and modern languages, for the sweetness of her disposition. [E.R.]

EY, DR. RICHARD, a learned ecclesiastical religious writer, au. of the 'State of Religion gland,' 'Engl. Eccles. Law,' &c., 1693-1771.

EY, ZACHARY, LL.D., a divine and miscel. ditor of 'Hudibras,' au. of an 'Examination of History of the Puritans,' &c., 1687-1766.

EZIN, JAMES, a French poet, 16th century.

IBALDI, M., an Italian jurist, died 1564.

ERSON, CONSTANTIA, an Irish lady, dis- hed for her self-acquired classical and philo- al attainments, and as a poetess, 1706-1733.

ESBACH, JOHN JAMES, an eminent Ger- critic, distinguished for his attainments in gical, biblical, and ecclesiastical literature, ally for his edition of the Greek gospels, critical history of the printed text, and ex- tion of various readings, born in Hesse stadt 1745, died professor of divinity at the sity of Jena, 1812.

FFET, H., a French historian, 1698-1771.

FFIER, JOHN, known as 'Old Griffier,' a h painter, 1658-1718. His son, ROBERT, the Younger,' a landscape pain., b. abt. 1688.

FFIN, the last king of Wales, died 1050.

FFITH, ELIZ., a Welch novelist, d. 1793.

FFITH, M., an ecclesiast. au., 1587-1652.

FFITHS, R., a Welch reviewer, 1749-1803.

FFONI, M., an Ital. historian, 1351-1426.

GNAN, FRANCES MARGARET DE SEVIG- countess De, an accomplished Fr. lady, daugh- the celeb. Madame de Sevigne, and au. of a ' ' of the system of Fenelon, 1648-1705.

LL, C., a Swedish economist, 1705-1767.

MALDI, the name of an illustrious family , distinguished as partizans of the Guelphs, rincipal members of which are—RANIERI ALDI, a naval commander, served as admiral ace in 1314. ANTONIO GRIMALDI, also a commander and admiral, at length defeated combined fleets of Catalonia and Venice, Pisani, in 1353. GIOVANNI GRIMALDI, ed for a great victory over the Venetian l, Nicolo Trevisani, in May, 1431. DO- GRIMALDI, cardinal-archbishop and vice- of Avignon, distinguished at the battle of 1571, d. 1592 GERONIMO GRIMALDI, nuncio to Germany and France, and a ished philanthropist, 1597-1685.

MALDI, F., a Neap. architect, 16th cent.

MALDI, F. M., an Italian math., 1613-63.

MALDI, G. F., an Ital. painter, 1606-80.

MALDI, J., an Italian savant, died 1623.

MALDI, JOS., a celeb. clown, 1779-1837.

MALDI, MARQUIS, auth. of a 'Project for ing the Pub. Economy of Nap.,' 1735-1805.

MALDI, WM., Marquis Grimaldi of Genoa, employé of the East India Co., 1785-1828.

GRIMAIN, ANTH., doge of Venice, 1521-1523.

GRIMAIN, DOMENICO, son of the preceding, a learned cardinal and patron of letters, 1460-1523.

GRIMAIN, H., a Dutch painter, 1599-1629.

GRIMAIN, MARI., doge of Venice, 1595-1605.

GRIMAUD, J. C. W. DE, a French physiologist and medical writer, 1750-1789.

GRIMBALD, ST., a Flemish ecclesiast., 9th ct.

GRIMBOLD, GRIMBALD, or GRIMVALD, NICHOLAS, an Engl. poet and translator, 16th ct.

GRIMM, FREDERIC MELCHIOR, Baron De, joint author with Diderot of a posthumous work in 16 volumes, entitled 'Correspondance Littéraire Philosophique et Critique,' containing the history of French literature from 1753 to 1790. Baron Grimm is also the author of some smaller works published in his lifetime, and was in several political employs as minister and secretary. Born at Ratisbon 1723, died 1807.

GRIMM, J. F. C., a Ger. physician, 1737-1821.

GRIMOARD, COUNT PHILIP DE, a French general, diplomatist, and man of letters, died 1815.

GRIMOUD, ALEXIS, a Fr. painter, 1688-1740.

GRIMSTON, SIR H., an Engl. lawyer, d. 1683.

GRINDAL, EDMUND, abp. of Canterbury, contributor to Fox's 'Acts and Monuments,' 1519-83.

GRIOLET, J. M. A., a Fr. natural., 1763-1806.

GRISAUNT, WM., an English physician and astronomer, and a supposed magician, 14th cent.

GRISCHOW, A., a German savant, 1683-1749.

GRISEL, JOSEPH, a Fr. ecclesiastic and mystic wr., auth. of 'Chemin de l'Amour Divin,' 1703-87.

GRITTI, ANDREA, doge of Venice, 1523-1538.

GROCYN, W., a learned Englishm., 1442-1519.

GROENING, a German historian, 17th century.

GROGNIER, L. F., a Fr. natural., 1775-1837.

GROHMANN, JOHN GODFREY, a laborious translator and compiler, professor of philosophy at Leipzig, au. of a 'Dict. of the Arts,' 1763-1805.

GRONOV, or GRONOVIUS, the name of a celebrated Dutch family of savants, the principal of whom are—JOHN FREDERIC, professor of the Belles Lettres, and editor of many classics, 1611-1671. JAMES, his son, a critical and philological writer, 1645-1716. LAURENCE THEOPHILUS, brother of James, an antiquarian and philologist, dates unknown. ABRAHAM, eldest son of James, a physician and geographical author, dates unknown. JOHN FREDERIC, and LAURENCE THEODORE, brothers of Abraham, distinguished as naturalists, the former d. 1760, the latter 1778.

GROPP, IGNATIUS, a Ger. histor., 1695-1758.

GROPPER, J., a German polemic, died 1559.

GROS, ANTOINE JEAN, Baron, a celebrated French painter, a pupil of David, 1771-1835.

GROS, NICH. LE, a Fr. theologian, 1675-1751.

GROS, PETER DES, a French moralist, 15th c.

GROS, PETER LE, a Fr. sculptor, 1666-1719.

GROSE, FRANCIS, an eminent English antiquary and heraldist, au. of 'Antiquities of England and Wales,' 'A Treatise on Ancient Armour and Weapons,' 'Military Antiquities,' 'A Collection of Proverbs,' 'A Classical Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue,' 'A Provincial Glossary,' 1731-91.

GROSLEY, P. J., a French essayist, 1718-85.

GROSS, J. G., a Germ. naturalist, 1581-1630.

GROSS, J. G., a Bavarian author, 1703-1768.

GROSS, DAVID GABRIEL ALBERT DE, a German writer on military tactics, 1756-1809.

GROSSER, S., a German philologist, 1664-1736.

GROSSETESTE, GROSTETE, or GROSTHEAD, Robt., a lrnd. bp. of Lincoln, 1175-1253.

GROSSMANN, Gustav. Fred. Wm., a celeb. German actor and dramatic writer, 1746-1796.

GROSSON, J. B. B., a Fr. archæol., 1733-1800.

GROSVENOR, B., an Eng. dissent., 1675-1758.

GROTIUS, or GROOT, Hugo, a jurist, divine, historian, and general scholar, was born at Delft, in Holland, on 10th April, 1583. When eleven years old, he was sent to the newly-established protestant university at Leyden, where he had the fortune to study under Joseph Scaliger. He was so precocious, not only in the acquisition of knowledge, but in the capacity of imparting his acquirements by literature, that at the age of fifteen he might be said to have a European reputation, and he was then received with distinction at the court of Henry the Great. Nor did his boyish attainments indicate a premature exhaustion of his powers; on the contrary, his mind seems to have grown with every year added to his age, and he was ever accumulating new intellectual riches and enlarging his capacities. In 1613 he obtained the important office of pensionary of Rotterdam. But it was unfortunate that one whose conquests in important studies were so valuable, should have had his time occupied, and his mind distracted by the wretched polemical conflict which then shook the Netherlands. He became one of the illustrious victims whose sufferings are a scandal to the otherwise magnanimous history of the Dutch during that period. He involved himself with his friend, the great pensionary Barneveldt, in the Arminian controversy, and in 1619 was condemned to perpetual imprisonment by the triumphant party. He was one of those whose prison hours have enriched the world, and the quantity of books which he kept passing to and fro in the end furnished the means of his escape. It was accomplished by his wife, Mary Reygensberg, a daughter of one of the great Dutch aristocratic families, who managed to have him removed from the prison in one of the book trunks. The works which he had hitherto published, scientific, critical, and poetical, are now comparatively obscure, but in prison he prepared his little treatise, De Veritate Religionis Christianae, which has been perhaps the most popular 'Evidences of Christianity' ever published, and has been translated into every civilized tongue. But it was when subsequently living in retirement in France that he published his De Jure Belli et Pacis, the foundation of the international law and European diplomacy of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. Though it consisted properly of speculations derived from the principles of Roman jurisprudence, it was accepted as if it were the authoritative enunciation of the law of nations. After having, in his advanced years, visited various countries, he died on the 28th of August, 1645. [J.H.B.]

GROTTO, Luigi, an Italian poet, 1541-1583.

GROUCHY, Emanuel, Count, a marshal of the French empire, born at Paris 1766, and known as a brave and successful soldier in the wars of Napoleon, is chiefly memorable for the fatuity which seemed to rule his conduct at the battle of Waterloo. With thirty-five thousand men, and eight hundred pieces of cannon under his orders, he remained immoveable, either by the prayers or threats of the other generals, in a position which could only be justified by the strict letter of his instructions. It is not certain that he intended to betray the cause of Napoleon, but his culpable indecision certainly contributed to the disaster which befell the French arms. He was twice afterwards summoned before a council of war, but each time escaped judgment in consequence of the court's declaring itself incompetent. Grouchy was included in the special amnesty of 1819, and restored to his military rank on the accession of Louis Philippe. He died in 1847. [E.R.]

GROUCHY, N. De, a French savant, d. 1572.

GROUCHY, Sophia, sister of Marshal Grouchy, and widow of Condorcet, known as the translat. of Adam Smith's 'Theory of the Moral Sentiments,' and auth. of 'Letters upon Sympathy,' died 1822.

GROULART, Cl., a French jurist, 1551-1607.

GROVE, Hen., a dissent. minister, au. of 'An Essay on the Soul's Immortality,' &c., 1683-1738.

GROVE, Joseph, an English writer, d. 1764.

GRUBER, G. M., a German savant, 1739-99.

GRUBER, G. W., a Germ. composer, 1729-1796. His son, J. Sigismund, a savant, 1759-1805.

GRUBER, J. D., a Flemish historian, 1709-48.

GRUEBER, J., an Italian missionary, 1630-65.

GRUNÆUS, S., a Germ. historian, 1564-1628.

GRUNET, T. S., a Swiss naturalist, died 1778.

GRUPERS, Ch. U., a Greek hist., 1692-1767.

GRUTER, or GRYTERE, John, a dist. philol. and antiquarian of the Netherlands, 1560-1627.

GRYNÆUS, Simon, a German philosopher, classical scholar, and theologian, 1493-1541. John James, his grandnephew, also a theologian and biblical commentator, 1540-1618.

GRYPHIUS, And., a German dramatist, 1616-1664. His son Christian, a lrnd. wr., 1649-1706.

GRYPHIUS, S., a German printer, 1493-1556.

GUA-DE-MALVES, Jean Paul, a French geometrician and economist, disting. in France as the planner of the Encyclopédie, 1712-1786.

GUADET, M. E., a French republican of the Girondist party, executed at Bourdeaux, 1794.

GUALANDI, J. B., an Italian transl., d. 1570.

GUALDO-PRIORATO, Galeazzo, an Italian hist., au. of 'A Hist. of the Wars of Ferdinand II. and Ferdinand III.,' 'Hist. of Leopold,' 1606-78.

GUALTERUS, or GWALTHER, Rodolph, a Swiss reformer, son-in-law of Zuinglius, 1519-86.

GUALTIERI, N., an Ital. naturalist, d. 1747.

GUARIN, P., a French Orientalist, 1678-1729.

GUARINI, C. G., an Ital. architect, 1624-83.

GUARINI, G., an Italian poet, 1537-1612.

GUARINI, or GUARINO, a Latin and Greek scholar, dist. at the revival of learning, died 1460

GUATIMOZIN, or QUAUTEMOTZIN, the last king of Mexico, murdered by Cortez 1522.

GUAY-TROUIN. See Duguay-Trouin.

GUAZZESI, L., an Italian savant, 1708-1764.

GUAZZO, Mark, an Italian historian, d. 1556.

GUAZZO, S., an Italian author, 1530-1593.

GUELDRE, Edward, first duke of the name, son of Renaud II., count of Nassau, 1336-1371.

GUELF, or GUELPH, the name of a great historical party or faction of the middle ages, derived from the name of a family connected with the Saxon princes, and from which the house of Brunswick is descended. The first of the name, duke of Bavaria, reigned 1071-1108. The second, who was his son and successor, died 1120. The parties which divided Europe for so many ages took the name of Guelphs and Ghibellines, after the battle of Weinberg in 1140, when the Saxon army was commanded by Welfon, or Guelph, brother of duke Henry. The Guelphs may be regarded in history as the party of freedom and progress.

GUENCE, ANTH., a French author, 1717-1803.

GUER, J. A., a miscel. French wr., 1713-1764.

GUERCHOIS, MAD., a relig. wr., 1679-1840.

GUERCINO. GIOVANNI FRANCESCO BARBIERI, commonly called GUERCINO from a cast in his eye, was born at Cento, near Bologna, in 1590: he was self-taught. He spent some time at Rome, but lived chiefly at Cento, until the death of Guido in 1642, when he settled in Bologna, where he died rich in 1666. Guercino was an imitator of Caravaggio, and is one of the principal so-called Tenebrosi masters, from the great depth and blackness of their shadows, but upon his settlement in Bologna he modified his manner, endeavouring to bring it nearer to that of Guido.—(Passeri, Vite de' Pittori, &c.; Malvasia, Felsina Pittrice.) [R.N.W.]

GUERICKE, OTTO VON, a German experi. philos., inventor of the air pump, &c., 1602-1686.

GUERRA, J., an Italian architect, 1544-1618.

GUERRERO, VICENTE, one of the insurgent chiefs of Spanish America, president of the Mexican republic in 1829, vanquished and shot by Bustamenti in February, 1831.

GUERRINO, T., an Italian mathemat., 17th c.

GUETTARD, J. S., a Fr. naturalist, 1715-86.

GUEVARA, ANTH., a Spanish prelate, celebrated as an eloquent preacher, died 1544. His nephew, of the same name, a biblical commentator.

GUEVARA, J. N. DE, a Sp. painter, 1631-98.

GUEVARA, LOUIS VELEZ DE LAS DUENAS Y, a Sp. novelist and dramatic author, 1574-1646.

GUEVARA, DON PHILIP, a Spanish painter and writer on art, died 1563. His son DIEGO, a distinguished mathematician, died 1566.

GUEVARA, S., a Spanish poet, 1558-1610.

GUIBERT, a French historian, 1053-1124.

GUIBERT, an anti-pope, elected 1080, d. 1110.

GUIBERT, C. B., Count De, a French military officer, 1715-1786. His son, JAMES ANTHONY HIPPOLYTUS, a writer on tactics, 1743-1789.

GUICCIARDINI, FRANCESCO, an eminent Italian historian and diplomatist, 1482-1540.

GUICCIARDINI, LUIGI, a nephew of the illustrious historian, au. of political works, 1521-1589.

GUICHE, ARMAND, Count. See GRAMONT.

GUICHE, CL. DE LA, a Fr. prelate, d. 1555.

GUICHE, J. F. DE LA, honourably known in Fr. hist. as the marshal de St. Geran, 1569-1632.

GUICHE, P. DE LA, a diplomatist, 1464-1544.

GUICHE, PHILIBERT DE LA, a distinguished French soldier, commander of the artillery at the battle of Ivry, 1540-1598.

GUIDI, C. A., an Italian lyric poet, 1650-1712.

GUIDI, L., a French theologian, 1710-1780.

GUIDO, D'AREZZO, an Ital. musician, 10th ct.

GUIDO RENI, was born at Bologna in 1575, and became one of the most distinguished pupils of the Carracci: he lived long in Rome, but settled finally, and died in his native place, 18th August, 1642. He painted in various styles, his earlier was somewhat in the forcible manner of Caravaggio, he afterwards cultivated the ideal, and adopted a rather silvery tone of colour. Guido, though in the receipt of a princely income, from the enormous and constant demand for his pictures, died in debt: he was so embarrassed by his extravagant habits that he used to sell his time at so much per hour to the dealers, who on some occasions, it seems, were so exacting as to stand by him, watch in hand, to see that he performed the stipulated amount of labour. There are eight pictures by Guido in the National Gallery. He formed a considerable school; the most celebrated of his scholars was Simone Cantarini, called il Pesarese, by whom there is a remarkable portrait of Guido in the Gallery of Bologna.—(Passeri, Vite de' Pittori, &c.; Malvasia, Felsina Pittrice, &c.) [R.N.W.]

GUIDOTTI, PAOLO, an Ital. paint., 1569-1629.

GUIENNE, CHARLES OF FRANCE, duke of, br. of Louis XI., and formerly duc de Berri, 1446-72.

GUIENNE, WILLIAM, count of Poitiers, and duke of, one of the earliest troubadours, 1071-1126.

GUIGNES, JOSEPH DE, a Fr. Oriental scholar, and historian of the Huns, Turks, &c., 1721-1800.

GUILD, WILLIAM, a Scotch divine, 1586-1657.

GUILLAIN, S., a French sculptor, 1581-1658.

GUILLARD, N. F., a Fr. dramat., 1752-1814.

GUILLAMET, CH. AXEL, an archit. and man of lett., b. at Stockholm of Fr. parents, 1730-1807.

GUILLAUMET, F., a surgical writer, 17th ct.

GUILLEMAIN, C. J., a Fr. dramat., 1750-99.

GUILLEMEAN, JAMES, a celebrated French writer on surgery, a pupil of Riolan, 1550-1613. His son, CHARLES, a physician, 1588-1656.

GUILLEMINE, GUILLEMETTE, or GUILLELMA, a female visionary, fndr. of a sect, 13th c.

GUILLEMINOT, ANNE CHARLES, Count, a native of Belgium, employed by Napoleon as ambassador, and by the duc d'Angouleme, 1774-1840.

GUILLIAND, C., a French divine, 16th cent.

GUILLIM, JOHN, an English writer on heraldry, whose great work, 'The Display of Heraldry,' was really founded on a MS. presented to him by Dr. Barcham, the author. Guillim was born about 1565, was appointed rouge-croix pursuivant of arms 1617, and died 1621.

GUILLIMARM, F., a German historian and savant, au. of 'De Rebus Helvetiorum,' &c., 16th c.

GUILLORE, G., a Fr. religious writer, d. 1684.

GUILLOTIN, JOSEPH IGNATIUS, a French physician and deputy to the states-general, whose name has been given to the instrument of death which he caused to be brought into use from humane motives in the course of the French revolution, born at Saintes 1738, died 1814.

GUINET, F., a French jurisconsult, 1604-81.

GUIRAND, CL., a French philosopher, d. 1657.

GUIRAND, G., a French antiquarian, 1600-80.

GUISARD, P., a Fr. surgical writer, 1700-46.

GUISCARD, ROBERT, first Norman duke of Apulia and Calabria, died in Cephalonia 1085.

GUISCHARD, CH. GOTTLIEB, a German preacher, afterwards aid-de-camp to Frederick the Great, and au. of works on milit. tactics, 1724-75.

GUISE, the name of an illustrious French family, the founder of which was CLAUDE, son of Rene II., duke of Lorraine, who obtained letters of naturalization from Louis XII., in 1506, distinguished himself at the battle of Marignano 1515, was created duke of Guise in Picardy by Francis I. in 1527, and died in 1550. The duke of Guise having married into the royal family, one of his daughters espoused James V. of Scotland, and became the mother of Mary Stuart. His eldest son, FRANCIS, who succeeded to the dukedom, was one of the most remarkable men of the age, and was king of France in all but the name. He was the chief of the catholic 'League,' opposed to Condé and the Huguenots, and was assassinated 1563. The son and successor of the latter, HENRY DUKE OF GUISE, born 1550, inherited the power and ambition of his father, and was one of the chief actors in the massacre of St. Bartholomew. He was assassinated by order of the king 1588. The brother of Francis, and uncle of Henry duke of Guise, generally known as the CARDINAL OF LORRAINE, was the minister of Francis II. and Charles IX., and like the other members of his family, a cruel bigot and persecutor of the protestants, flourished 1525-1574. CHARLES, the fourth duke of Guise, eldest son of Henry the third duke, and Catherine of Cleves, became one of the chiefs of the League three years after the death of his father, and was gov. of Provençe, 1571-1640. HENRY OF LORRAINE, the fifth duke, who became generalissimo of the Neapolitan insurgents in the revolt against Spain, and afterwards grand chamberlain of France, was born 1614, and died 1664. The sixth duke of Guise, known also as LOUIS JOSEPH OF LORRAINE, and prince de Joinville, a military officer under Louis XIV., flourished 1650-1671. The last of this house was a posthumous son of the latter, who d. abt. four years aftw.

GUISE, CLAUDE, a violent partizan of the league, nat. son of Claude the first duke, d. 1612.

GUISE, WILLIAM, an English divine, 1653-84.

GUITON, JOHN, a patriot of Rochelle, 1626.

GUITTONE, an Italian poet, 13th century.

GUIZOT, ELIZABETH CHARLOTTE PAULINE DE MEULAN, Madame, wife of the distinguished statesman, author of novels and works for youth, 1778-1827. MARGARET ELIZA DILSON, niece of the preceding, and second wife of M. Guizot, also an authoress, 1804-1833.

GULDENSTAEDT, JOHN ANTHONY, a famous Russian traveller and naturalist, 1745-1781.

GULDINUS, P., a Germ. mathema., 1577-1643.

GUMILLA, P. J., a Span. missionary, last ct.

GUNDLING, J. P., a Ger. statesm., 1673-1731.

GUNDLING, N. J., a Ger. philoso., 1671-1729.

GUNDULF, a Norman ecclesiastic and architect, time of William the Conqueror, builder of the Tower of London and Rochester castle, died 1108.

GUNNER, JOHN ERNEST, bishop of Drontheim in Norway, disting. as a botanist, 1718-73.

GUNNING, P., an English prelate, 1613-1684.

GUNST, P. VAN, a Dutch engraver, last cent.

GUNTER, EDMUND, an English mathematician and astronomer, inventor of a famous rule of proportion known as Gunter's scale, 1581-1626.

GUNTHER, J. C., a German poet, 1695-1723.

GUNTHER, J. C., a Ger. natural., 1769-1833.

GUNZ, J. G., a German anatomist, 1714-1754.

GURTLER, N., a Swiss protest. wr., 1654-1711.

GURWOOD, COLONEL JOHN, sec. to the duke of Wellington, and editor of his despatches, d. 1845.

GUSMAN, LEWIS, a Span. missionary, d. 1605.

GUSTAVUS. The kings of Sweden of this name are—GUSTAVUS (VASA) elected king by the states after tian of Denmark 1523, abolish Catholic religion 1529, demanded succession in his family after sub of the Dalecarlians 1555, died 15 (ADOLPHUS) II. See next artic III., born 1746, succeeded 1771, troem while preparing to march ag republic 1792. GUSTAVUS (ADO and successor of the latter, and li able for his chivalrous spirit and c against the French; deposed a country 1809, died in Switzerlan ing through the greater part of Eu ous names, and in the most st stances, 1837.

GUSTAVUS ADOLPHUS, b 1594, succeeded his father, Cha throne of Sweden, October 30, 16 part of his reign, the Poles and R Sweden; but the young king, pu the head of the Swedish army resistance, and ultimately forced accede to a peace (1629), by whic important extension of her territo the emperor Ferdinand II. was e of persecution against the protest states of Germany. Sweden w protestant country, and could not difference the rapid strides whi Catholic despot of Austria, aided the king of Spain, was making to pation of European civil and r Austria had given special provoca by aiding his enemies against him c war, and he resolved to come forw pion of the protestant cause against Adolphus landed in Pomerania on with only 8,000 men. He was r English and Scottish regiments, u Hamilton; and, at the head of th essayed to rescue the German p the powerful and long-victorious and the other imperialist generals vanced, and was splendidly succe met death in less than three yea planting his foot on German gro has well said of him, that 'notw shortness of his career, it is one c tions, in consequence of the boldn of his movements, and the discip dity of his troops. Gustavus Ad mated by the principles of Alexa and Cæsar.' Such is his praise, n tary point of view—his moral glory Gustavus, in 1630, conquered Rug nia. In the following year he fo with the Saxons, and completely d Austrian army under Tilly at Lei them a second overthrow near the riv Tilly was slain; and all Germany to the Swedish arms. The Austri recalled his celebrated general Wa the Roman Catholic troops; and t fought his third great battle again ists under Wallenstein's comman November, 1632. Gustavus ga hymn to his army before engagi himself; and then he led his cavalry into dical part of the fight. He was shot dead n the battle, but his army gained a complete .—Gustavus Adolphus was simple in his , pure and just in all his dealings, and un- dly earnest in his religion. He was inade- y praised when he was named 'one of the best at ever wore a crown.' [E.S.C.]

BIEN, GILES, a German Orient., 1617-67.
CH, JOHN, an Engl. antiquar., 1745-1831.
HRIE, W., a Scotch miscel. wr., 1708-70.
LER, N., a German savant, 1654-1711.
TEMBERG, C., a Ger. engrav., 1741-90.

[Statue of Guttenberg at Mayence.]

TENBERG, or GUTENBERG, JOHN, a f Sulgeloch, near Mentz in Germany, was 1400, and died on the 24th of February He is supposed to have made his first ex- ts in the art of printing with moveable tween 1434 and 1439, but it was in 1443 rned his invention to account, and brought mself the persecution of the priests and There are some points not cleared up in ry of this invention, but it is now gener- ed that the honour belongs to John Gut- and a society named after him meets his native city, where, also, a beautiful y Thorwalsden has been erected to his IKOW, a Russian musician, 1806-1837.

THOMAS, the founder of the hospital of me, which he built and endowed at an ex- nearly a quarter of a million sterling, was d, and accumulated his immense fortune, y twice that amount, by stock-jobbing and ease of seamen's tickets. He was also the of alms-houses and a library at Tamworth, great benefactor of Christ's Hospital, and am of £80,000 to be divided amongst his s. He died in 1724.
ARD, ADELAIDE, a Fr. pain., 1749-1803.
ARD, ASTH., a French monk, 1692-1770.
ARD, B., a French theologian, 1601-1674.
ARD, J., a Fr. historian, died about 1600
ARD, L., a French sculptor, 1723-1788.
ET, CH., a learned Jesuit, 1601-1664.

GUYET, FR., a French critic, 1575-1655.

GUYETANT, J. F., a French surgeon, known as a topographical and medical writer, 1742-1816.

GUYON, CLAUDE MARIE, a French historian, author of a 'History of Empires and Republics,' &c., 1699-1771.

GUYON. MADAME JEANNE MARIE ROUVIERS DE LA MOTHE GUION, or GUYON, was a French lady of good family, born at Montargis 1642, where also she was married at the age of fifteen, and in thirteen years afterwards left a widow with three children. Her marriage was not a happy one, in consequence of the tyranny of her husband and mother-in-law, who, acting under the advice of her confessors, endeavoured to withdraw her from the inward prayer and retirement to which, at the age of twenty, she began to addict herself. On the death of her husband she sequestered the greater part of her fortune as a provision for the education of her children, and completely abandoned herself to the life of mystic piety, or 'perfect contemplation,' generally known as Quietism, and of which we shall give an account in the article MOLINOS. Her experiences are related with extraordinary candour and graphic simplicity in her 'Autobiography,' and are further illustrated in the 'Torrents,' written at Annecy, and contained in the 2 volumes of her 'Opuscules.' She was at Grenoble, on her way to Paris, when she found herself 'suddenly invested,' as she expresses herself, 'with the apostolic state,' and able to discern the condition of those that spake with her, so that, one sending another, she was occupied from six in the morning till eight at night speaking of divine things. 'There came,' she says, 'great numbers from all parts, far and near, friars, priests, men of all sorts, young women, married women, and widows; they all came one after the other, and God gave me that which satisfied them in a wonderful manner, without my thinking or caring at all about it. Nothing was hidden from me of their inward state and condition. . . . . I perceived and felt that what I spake came from the fountain-head, and that I was only the instrument of Him who made me speak.' On reaching Paris she was thrown into prison, loaded with the vilest calumnies, by the connivance of her friends the priests, and endured altogether not less than twenty years of persecution, confinement, and exile. The great enemy of Madame Guyon and the system of Quietism was Bossuet, while for her champion she had the noble-hearted, eloquent, and illustrious Fenelon. She was liberated from her last confinement, in the Bastile, in 1702, and passed the remainder of her life at Blois, where she died 1717. Her complete works were published by Poiret in 39 vols. 8vo, and they comprise, besides those mentioned above, 'The Song of Songs, Interpreted According to its Mystical Sense,' and several volumes of hymns remarkable for their graceful composition, and exquisite sensibility. Some of these were translated by Cowper.—The life of Madame Guyon is not only a religious study, but a psychological one of very considerable interest. It is the history of a soul, humbled and polluted in its own sight, journeying through the gates of the mystic death, hating its own freedom and its own intelligence, struggling through the unclean places through which it is forced to pass, and at last arriving in the presence of its Divine lover—stripped of all, even its virtues—as serene, as motionless as the eye of eternity. Though the system of Quietism is a protest against visions, revelations, ecstacies, and transports of all kinds, whether sensual or spiritual, yet the experiences of Madame Guyon are really a love story, and one which she pursues in her writings with a fearlessness as remarkable in such a woman as the purity of her imagination. [E.R.]

GUYON, L., a Fr. medical writer, died 1630.

GUYON, S., an ecclesiastical hist., 1595-1657.

GUYS, J. B., a French antiquarian, 1611-1693.

GUYS, PETER AUGUSTINE, a French merchant, author of a 'Literary Journey into Greece,' &c., 1721-1799. His son, PETER ALPHONSO, a diplomatist and political writer, 1755-1812.

GUYSE, JAMES DE, a French annalist and antiquarian writer, died 1399.

GUYSE, JOHN, an English Calvin., 1680-1761.

GUYTON DE MORVEAU, LOUIS BERNARD, a learned French chemist, and republican deputy to the legislative assembly and the convention, member of the Committee of Public Safety and the council of 500, and in the time of Napoleon one of the administrators-general of the mint, and director of the Polytechnic School. He is the discov. of the means of destroying infection by acid vapours, and auth. of various chemical writings, 1736-1816.

GUZMAN, ALFONSO PEREZ DE, a celebrated Spanish captain, ancestor of the house of Medina Sidona, 1258-1320. Others of the same house are distinguished in Spanish history, the chief of whom are—HENRY, known in the war of Grenada, 1494. His son, of the same name, distinguished in Africa 1497, lost Gibraltar, rebelled and died in disgrace 1508. And the son of the latter, also of the same name, and successor of his command in the revolt, reconciled to Ferdinand II., king of Arragon, after ravaging Andalusia, 1514.

GUZMAN, LOUISE DE, regent of Portugal after the death of her husband, King John, 1656-1666.

GWILYM, DAVID AP, a W. bard, 1340-1400.

GWINNE, MATTHEW, author of 'Letters on Chemical and Magical Secrets,' died 1627.

GYGES, a king of Lydia, 718-680 B.C.

GYLIPPUS, a Greek commander, 414 B.C.

GYLLENBORG, CHARLES, Count, a Swedish senator and man of letters, ambassador in London when Charles XII. projected the invasion of Scotland, high chancellor of Sweden in 1719, and foreign minister in 1739, died 1746. His brothers, JOHN, OTHO, and FREDERIC, are also celebrated, the first as a military officer under Charles XII, the second as a literary savant and poet, and the third for his zealous promotion of useful knowledge. It was in the house of Frederic Gyllenborg that the first sittings of the Academy of Sciences, founded in Stockholm in 1740, were held.

GYLLENHIELM, CHARLES, Baron De, a natural son of Charles IX., and grand admiral of Sweden, 1574-1650.

GYZEN, PETER, a Flemish painter, born 1636.

H

HAAFNER, M., a Dutch writer, author of travels in India and the Island of Ceylon, died 1809.

HAAK, THEODORE, a Germ. savant, 1605-90.

HAAREN, W. VAN., a Dutch poet and diplomatist, 1700-1763. A member of the same family, named ONNO ZWIER VAN HAAREN, also a poet, and author of 'Christianity in Japan,' 1713-1779.

HAAS, J. M., a Ger. geographi. wr., 1684-1742.

HAAS, WILLIAM, a letter-founder and printer of Basle, disting. for his improvements, 1741-1800.

HABAKKUK, a Jewish prophet, 600 B.C.

HABERKORN, P., a Ger. divine, 1604-1676.

HABERLIN, F. D., a German historian, 1720-1787. His son, CH. FREDERIC, a jurist, d. 1808.

HABERT, FRANCIS, a French poet, 16th cent.

HABERT, ISAAC, a Fr. controver., died 1668.

HABERT, LOUIS, a Jansenist wr., 1635-1718.

HABERT, PHILIP, a French artillery officer and man of letters, 1605-1637. His brother, GERMAIN, an ecclesiastic and poet, 1610-1655.

HABICOT, NICH., a Fr. anatomist, 1550-1624.

HABINGTON, THOMAS, a political character, implicated in the conspiracy of Babington, known in literature as the collector of materials for Nash's history of Worcestershire, died 1647.

HABINGTON, W., an English poet, 1605-45.

HACAN, fifth caliph of Bagdad, 660-669.

HACAN, a prince of Mauritania, regn., 954-985.

HACAN-BEN-AL-HACAN. See ALHAZAN.

HACAN-BEN-SABBAH, the founder of a political and relig. sect of Persia, whose successors are kn. as the 'Old Men of the Mountain,' 1050-1124.

HACAN-BURZUK, caliph of Bagdad, d. 1356.

HACHETTE, JANE, a French heroine of 1472.

HACHETTE, J. N. P., a French mathematician, au. of 'Descriptive Geometry,' 1769-1834.

HACKAERT, J., a Dutch painter, died 1699.

HACKERT, J. P., a German painter, 1734-94.

HACKET, JOHN, bishop of Lichfield, author of 'A Century of Sermons,' 'Loyola,' &c., 1592-1670.

HACQUET, B., a French natural., 1740-1815.

HADDOCK, SIR R., a British admiral, d. 1714.

HADDON, WALTER, an English lawyer, author of several Latin poems, &c., 1516-1572.

HADJI-KHALFA, a Turkish savant, 1600-58.

HADLEY, JOHN, inv. of the quadrant, d. 1744.

HADORPH, J., a Swed. antiquary, 1630-1698.

HAEBERLIN, F. D., a Germ. histor., 1720-87.

HAEN, ANTH. VAN, a Dutch physic., 1704-76.

HAENDEL, G. F., a Ger. composer, 1684-1759.

HAFFNER, H., an Italian painter, 1640-1702. His son, ANTHONY, a painter, 1654-1732.

HAFIZ, MOHAMMED SHEMS-ED-DEEN, a celebrated Persian poet, born at Shiras at the beginning of the 14th century. His odes and lyrical compositions have been translated by Sir W. Jones, Richardson, and others, and are universally admired. He is supposed to have died about 1389.

HAGEDORN, FREDERIC VON, a celebrated German poet, author of songs, fables, tales, and moral poems, 1708-1754. His brother, CHRISTIAN LOUIS, a writer on art, 1712-1780.

HAGEN, JOHN VAN, a Dutch painter, 17th c.

HAGEN, J. G., a German savant, 1710-1777.

HAGENBACH, J. G., a Swiss antiq., 1700-68.

HAGER, J. VON, an Ital. Oriental., 1750-1819.

HAGUE, DR. CHARLES, an eminent English composer, and professor at Cambridge, 1769-1821.

HAHN, L. P., a German tragedian, 1746-1787.
HAHN, P. M., a Ger. mechanician, 1739-1790.
HAHN, S. F., a German historian, 1692-1729.

HAHNEMANN, SAMUEL, the founder of homœopathy, was born of poor parents at Meissen, in Saxony, 1755, and received his diploma as doctor in physic at Heidelberg, in 1781. The same year he was appointed district physician at Gomehn, near Magdeburg, and continued his studies in chemistry and mineralogy with all the ardour of an enthusiast. In 1784, he removed to Dresden, and soon afterwards abandoned the practice of physic in disgust, and confined himself to his private researches in chemistry and literature. These studies began to acquire a fixed direction in 1790, and in 1796 he commenced the record of their results in the journal of his friend Hufeland, in an article entitled 'Essay on a New Principle, &c.' In 1805 he published his 'Medicine of Experience,' and in 1810 his 'Organon of Rational Medicine,' in which the new doctrine was reduced to a system, and methodically illustrated. In a second edition, published 1819, the title of this work was abbreviated, and became the 'Organon of Medicine.' A third edition appeared in 1824, and was translated into English nine years afterwards. It was followed by a fourth edition in 1829, and a fifth in 1833 (translated by Dr. Dudgeon), each of which embodied fresh results, and enlarged the field which this indefatigable experimentalist had undertaken to cultivate. While this and the other works of the author mentioned below were making their way silently over Europe, Hahnemann himself was experiencing the usual fate of the world's benefactor. In 1813 he had removed from Dresden to Leipzig, where he was persecuted by the apothecaries as an empiric, and this had risen to such a height by 1820, that he was glad to avail himself of the protection offered to him by the duke of Anhalt Cothen. In the same year he published his 'Pure Medicine' in 6 vols. 8vo, and in 1829 his 'Theory of Chronic Maladies, and the Proper Medicines for them,' in 4 vols., which were enlarged to 6 vols. in a second edition, 1840. In the meantime, his domestic circumstances were changed for the better by his marriage in 1835 with a French lady, in whose company he removed from Cothen to Paris, at the age of eighty. Hahnemann remained in Paris till his death in 1843, and had the satisfaction to hear that homœopathy was about to have a chair at the university of Vienna, and that hospitals were proposed in London, in Berlin, and in many cities of Austria. The principles of his therapeutic reform—for such it undoubtedly is—may be described as a recognition of derangements in the vital or spiritual force of the body, whether occasioned or not by material influences, as the primary causes of disease; the cure of which is by the reaction of the vital force against the remedy. The application of this theory consists—1st, in the discovery; and 2d, in the preparation of specific remedies corresponding to every species of abnormal action, and such remedies are found both in theory and practice to be the assimulates of the disease—or medicines by which precisely the same symptoms would be produced. The reason of the cure is difficult to express in few words, and illustrations far below the refined philosophy on which it depends have been used by professional writers. According to the terms of the theory, the medicines may be considered as diffusing themselves with a gentle but irresistible force, like that of light, between the mortal corruption and the vital spirit in combat with it, and being more subtle than the disease, and yet like it, they engage the vital force in a quicker and more decisive conflict, and then gradually yielding before it, as their own virtue expires, the vital force is liberated, and, as a matter of course, resumes its normal action. This explanation, however, is only half the truth, for it is well known that fluids in effervescence are reduced to rest by the satisfaction of what may be called the hunger of one body for another, and something of this kind may take place when the assimulate is introduced to the disease. Be the explanation what it may, the discovery of the facts by years of patient and often painful experience, is the title of Hahnemann to the gratitude of society. He proved the virtue of an immense number of assimulates by testing their effects on himself and friends, and displayed equal art in the method of their refinement. His 'Organon of Medicine' not only raises the art of healing to the rank of an exact science, but renders it an elegant and philosophical study; while the facilities of its practical application have been carried to such perfection, especially by his followers in this country, that many mothers of families have become expert homœopathic physicians, and rarely require the aid of a practitioner. Besides the works mentioned, Hahnemann is the author of some two hundred treatises on medical and physical science. [E.R.]

HAI-GAOU, an Egyptian rabbin, died 1038.
HAILLAN, BERNARD DE GIRARD, Seigneur Du, a Fr. histor., time of Charles IX., 1535-1610.
HAINES, J., an English comedian, last cent.
HAKEM-BAMRILLAH, a Fatimite caliph of Egypt, noted for his despotism, reigned 996-1021.
HAKEWILL, G., a learned divine, 1579-1649.
HAKEWILL, H. J., an Engl. sculpt., 1813-33.
HAKLUYT, R., an Eng. naval hist., 1553-1616.

HALDANE, ROBERT, ESQ., was the eldest son of James Haldane Esq., of Airthrey in Stirling, and Catherine Duncan, sister of the hero of Camperdown. He was born in London, 28th February, 1764. Both of his parents having died at an early period, he and his brother were placed under the guardianship of their maternal uncles at Lundie. Thence they were removed to the High School, and subsequently studied for a few sessions at the university of Edinburgh. Although heir to a large property, Robert's active and enterprising mind pointed to the naval profession, and so passionate a desire had he conceived for a seafaring life, that his friends at length gave their consent, and he entered the Monarch as a midshipman under the command of his uncle. Subsequently he was connected with Sir John Jervis as an officer on board the Foudroyant, and both from his energy of character, and his familiar knowledge of the French language, was intrusted with many difficult and delicate commissions during the war. On the re-establishment of peace in 1783, Mr. Haldane transferred his services for a time to a commercial company, for whom he performed a voyage to Newfoundland, and a second to Lisbon; returning to Scotland, he relinquished the naval profession, and established himself at Airthrey, where for a period of ten years, he followed the pursuits of a country gentleman, his whole time being occupied in the improvement of his estate, or in the management of county and parochial affairs. Like many persons of an ardent temperament, he welcomed with enthusiasm the outbreak of the great French revolution, and in the excitement produced throughout this country by that political convulsion, roused against himself, by the too open avowal of his opinions, the jealousy and suspicion of the ruling party. A subject of infinitely higher moment than politics, however, now began to engross his attention. Led to the serious study of religion, he conducted his inquiries with characteristic ardour and perseverance, till having at length attained to enlightened and mature views of Scriptural truth, he appeared before the world an evangelical Christian. His pursuits as well as his character were entirely changed, and he resolved on dedicating his future life to diffuse, as a missionary in foreign lands, the gospel which had imparted so much peace and joy to himself. India was the chosen field of labour, and having secured the promised co-operation of Messrs. Innes, Ewing, and Bogue of Gosport, to whom he guaranteed adequate stipends while abroad, and the sum of £3,500 if compelled by bad health or other causes to return, he applied to the Indian government to sanction his enterprise. Missions being at that time scarcely known in the country, it was suspected that some sinister object was concealed under the name, and the court of the East India Company Directors, after much deliberation, resolved that the superstitions of Hindostan should not be disturbed. Disappointed in this bold and original scheme of Christian benevolence, Mr. Haldane determined to employ his resources in spreading the gospel at home, and in conjunction with Rowland Hill, Mr. Simeon of Cambridge, and others, he produced an extraordinary revival of religion throughout Scotland. Mr. Haldane now seceded from the Established Church, and at his own expense, erected places of worship under the name of Tabernacles in all the large towns, and educated 300 young men under Dr. Bogue and Mr. Ewing, as preachers to officiate in these meeting-houses. Another scheme which originated with him had for its object the evangelization of Africa. To commence this undertaking, he procured thirty young children to be brought from Sierra Leone to receive a Christian education at his expense, and gave a bond for £7,000 for their board and education, which, however, the friends of emancipation in London undertook to defray. Many other plans of Christian usefulness both at home and on the continent are traceable to the untiring zeal of this pious gentleman. His personal labours in awakening a religious spirit in the south of France, were successful beyond his own most sanguine expectations; and both at Geneva and Montauban, he sowed the seeds of truth which are bearing good fruit to this day in the protestant churches of France. Mr. Haldane took a prominent part in the management of the Continental Society and the Bible Society of Edinburgh; and in the painful controversy relative to the circulation of the Apocrypha by the British and Foreign Bible Society, which led to the establishment of the latter. He was the author of 'The Evidences of Christianit Exposition of the Epistle to the Roman various other religious works of minor impo His character was highly esteemed duri and his name will be transmitted to post connection with the revival of evangelical in Scotland at the beginning of the prese tury. He died 12th December, 1842.

HALDANE, James Alexander, Es brother of the preceding. He was born a dee, 14th July, 1768. Having imbibed the passion for the sea, he was entered in his teenth year a midshipman in the Duke o trose, bound on a voyage to Bombay and He had made three other voyages to th countries, when having proved his po of the requisite qualifications, he was ap captain of the Melville Castle. The vess ever, did not sail for four months; and duri interval, a great change took place in Haldane's character. He became serio thoughtful on the subject of religion; and determined to follow the example of his who had already relinquished the seafaring disposed of his command for £9,000, and h in the property of the ship and stores for more. With this fortune of £15,000 he with his wife to Scotland in 1794, and gav self up to those religious inquiries which grossed his chief concern. Several years before his views were established. But at he attained to a knowledge of the truth as peace in believing; and the cases of b brothers Haldane, whose minds retained impression of their mother's piety and must be added to the long list of testimon might be adduced to show the advantage early religious education. Mr. James H having plenty of time at command, occupie self with many plans of Christian usef amongst which, the opening of Sabbath and itinerant preaching, at first in the around Edinburgh, and afterwards in th large towns of Scotland, were the chie principal coadjutor in these labours of l John Campbell, the African traveller. pany with that zealous Christian, Mr. made successive tours throughout all Scot far as Orkney; and those who were awak their preaching, were, through the liberalit Robert Haldane, accommodated with places of worship. Mr. James eventually the office of stated pastor in the Tabernacl Walk, Edinburgh; and in that capacity cised, without any emolument, all the pu private duties of a minister with unbroken and zeal for a period of fifty years. Alth vacillated on some points of church gove he and his brother remained steadfast in herence to the general principles of the baptists. He was the author of various pieces on the religious controversies of th But the memory of his name in the world, preserved chiefly by the 'living epistles, were the fruits of his evangelical labou died in Edinburgh, 8th February, 1851.

HALDE, John Baptist Du. See Du

HALE, Sir Matthew, a judge and tional lawyer, was born in Gloucestershire

November, 1609. Brought up among the puritans, while receiving an Oxford education, his early life seems to have vibrated between rigidity and ex- cess. It was through the auspices of Serjeant Glyn that his attention was turned to the bar, and he entered at Lincoln's Inn in 1629. In the stormy times which followed, he held a more con- spicuous place than one of his neutral and studi- ous character generally obtains amid political con- vulsions. He was a hard student, and a thorough lawyer, both in the constitutional department and that of private rights and obligations. In 1653 he was made one of the judges of the Common Bench, as it was termed under the Commonwealth. His ground excuse for accepting this appointment, that the administration of justice is an honourable and useful occupation, whether the ruling power for the time be valid or not, has been often cited. His friends said less for his candour and honesty when they defended him, on the ground that he had evaded any formal announcement of allegiance to the Protectorate. He seemed to have misgiv- ings of his own, for he at one time refused to act as criminal judge while performing his civil functions, and he would not hold office under Richard Cromwell. Indeed, with all his capacity and his incorruptible honesty, a rare quality on the bench in his day, it is shown by his superstiti- ous cruelty on a celebrated witchcraft trial, and by other incidents, that his mind was subject to way- ward caprices. He was made chief baron of the Exchequer at the Restoration, and chief justice of the King's Bench in 1671. He d. in 1676. [J.H.B.]

HALEM, G. A., a Germ. publicist, 1752-1819.

HALES, Alexander, an English friar, dist. as a scholastic divine and philosopher, 13th cent.

HALES, John, an able scholar and divine of the Church of England, remarkable for the free- dom of his opinions, and for that reason classed among the latitudinarians. He was born at Bath in 1584, and educated at Oxford, where he became professor of Greek, and assisted Sir Henry Savile in editing his edition of the works of Chrysostom. After a life of considerable hardship, partly occa- sioned by the civil wars, and partly by his inde- pendence of thought, he died at Eton, in poor cir- cumstances, 1656. The writings by which he is known were published after his decease, and en- titled 'Golden Remains of the Ever Memorable Mr. John Hales of Eton College.' Among these papers is an interesting account of the Synod of Dort, at which Mr. Hales was present as an ob- server. At this synod the representatives of the English Church advocated the universality of the Redemption, and their arguments had the effect of turning Hales from his previously rigid Calvinism. There is a quaintness and vigour in his style of writing which gives a somewhat flavourish quality to his 'Golden Remains,' and though he has been called a trimmer, he is often severe enough upon the formalists of his day. [E.R.]

HALES, or HAYLES, John, a classical scho- lar, translator, and government employé, d. 1572.

HALES, Steph., an Eng. nat. phil., 1677-1761.

HALFORD, Sir Hen., Baronet, an eminent phy- sician, whose paternal name was Vaughan, au. of numerous professional works and essays, 1766-1844.

HALHED, Nathaniel Brassey, an Oriental scholar, au. of a 'Bengalee Grammar,' 1751-1830.

HALI-BEIGH, a Polish captain, educated in Turkey, and distinguished as a linguist, died 1675.

HALIFAX, George Saville, marquis of, a celebrated English statesman, promoter of the restoration, president of the council in the time of James II., and lord privy seal under William and Mary. He is the author of various small works, 'The Character of a Trimmer,' 'Advice to a Daughter,' 'The Anatomy of an Equivalent,' &c. Lord Halifax was also the author of 'Memoirs,' which were destroyed in MS., 1630-1695.

HALKET, Lady Anne, an English lady, re- markable for her studies in theology and medicine, author of 'The Mother's Will,' &c., 1622-1699.

HALL, Anthony, a learned divine, 1679-1723.

HALL, Captain Basil, a well-known writer of voyages and travels, descriptive of his adven- tures and the places visited, chiefly in the Indian seas, and the southern coasts of America. Born at Edinburgh 1788, died in confinement on account of insanity, 1844.

HALL, Edward, an English annalist, d. 1547.

HALL, George, son of Joseph Hall, and bishop of Chester, author of sermons, &c., 1612-1668.

HALL, Henry, a learned divine, 1716-1763.

HALL, Sir James, baronet of Dunglass, au. of an 'Essay on Gothic Architecture,' &c., 1760-1832.

HALL, John, an English poet, 1627-1656.

HALL, Joseph, D.D., the pious bishop of Norwich, was born at Ashby-de-la-Zouch, in the county of Leicester. Directing his views towards the Church of England, he was entered a student of Emmanuel College, Cambridge, and in the course of time obtained a fellowship. It was during his residence in that seat of learning, he published his satires and many other poetical pieces, which spread his fame far and wide. But he abandoned the muses, having resolved to devote his chief attention to divinity, and in due time, being licensed to preach, was appointed rector of Halsted in Suffolk. In that rural retreat he com- posed his 'Contemplations,' which procured him the patronage of Prince Henry, and the rectory of Waltham. He was ere long called to mourn over the untimely death of that excellent prince and to preach his funeral sermon, which has been pre- served in the collection of his published writings, and abounds with passages of touching pathos and fervent piety. Mr. Hall was a man of very devo- tional habits, to fortify which he made a most rigid distribution of his time, having set hours for prayer, for reading divinity, for general literature and composition; and so intense was his ardour in the pursuit of intellectual and spiritual improve- ment, that for a time he observed the strictest abstemiousness, taking for a while only one meal a-day.—In 1616, he went to Paris as chaplain to the English ambassador. On his return he was appointed by King James to the deanery of Wor- cester, and in the following year he accompanied his royal master into Scotland, when that monarch made a progress into the northern part of his king- dom to prosecute his imprudent scheme of erecting episcopacy on the ruins of presbyterianism. None of the unpopularity, however, of that measure fell upon Hall, whose pious character and temperate principles secured him the esteem and respect of the most eminent Scotchmen of the day. From leaving Scotland, he was commanded to go over into Holland to attend the Synod of Dort, which was held in 1618. But the protracted meetings of that famous convocation made a sad inroad on his health, and after an assiduous attendance of two months, he returned with an impaired constitution to England. The prominent part he had taken in the councils of that body, may be judged of by the fact that a medal commemorative of the assembly, was by the unanimous vote of the members, awarded and sent to him. He had no small share in achieving by his arguments and eloquence the signal discomfiture of the Arminians, and the condemnation of their doctrines in that Synod.—Dr. Hall, for he had obtained the degree of D.D., being now a leading man in the Church of England, was marked out for promotion, and accordingly he was raised first to the see of Exeter, and afterwards, without any solicitation, to that of Norwich. Amid all the ecclesiastical tyranny of Laud, Bishop Hall preserved his moderation, and the clergy of his diocese were kept from the odium as well as the penalties of the Book of Sports. The bishop, however, had his season of trial. When the popular outcry 'No Bishops' was raised, and an armed mob marched against the House of Lords, Hall with eleven of the lords spiritual joined in protesting against the measures which were passed in their absence; and this document having been made a ground of impeachment, he with his protesting brethren were consigned to the Tower. On his liberation, he continued for a year to exercise his episcopal functions in Norwich; but the popular tide again set in strongly against his order, his house was attacked, his property sequestrated, himself insulted, and in meek resignation he retired into a small lonely place in Norfolk, where he spent the remainder of his days in acts of piety and charity, and at length died 1656, in the eighty-second year of his age. [R.J.]

HALL, RICHARD, a Roman Cath. wr., d. 1604.

HALL, ROBERT, a medical author, 1763-1824.

HALL, REV. ROBERT, the most eloquent preacher of modern times, was born at Arnsby, a village in the neighbourhood of Leicester, in 1764. His father was a baptist clergyman, and both his parents were distinguished for talents, prudence, and piety. Robert, the youngest of fourteen children, was of so feeble a constitution, that he could neither speak nor walk till near three years old. He learned to read by the inscriptions on the grave-stones; and he showed at a very early age a passionate fondness for reading, and used to recline for hours with a book on the grass; a habit which is thought to have produced that excruciating pain in the back to which he was subject during life. Even while yet a boy, Edwards on the Will and Butler's Analogy were his favourite books; and he would analyze as well as discuss them with great intelligence at the age of nine. His classical master dismissed him from school at eleven as already beyond the range of his own acquirements. He was in fact a young prodigy of genius and knowledge, and these precocious talents were combined with such genuine piety, that he was placed under the care of the Rev. John Ryland, tutor of the Baptist Academy, and at the age of sixteen, he was 'set apart' to the office of the ministry by his father in presence of the congregation at Arnsby. In pursuance of his ministerial views, he went to study at the univer deen, where he enjoyed the prelection Campbell, and Gerard, and where h private friendship of Mr. afterwards Mackintosh. He was noted among students as much for his habitual pie pre-eminent talents. On the compl college studies, Mr. Hall engaged hims cal tutor in the Baptist Academy at at the same time acted as assistant t in Broadmeadow chapel. At the end he removed to Cambridge, where he b tant, and afterwards successor to th Robinson in the baptist church in that c by his eloquent and elaborate discourses the meridian of that seat of learning the foremost rank of British preachers lic and occasional sermons were attende of the professors and young men, ma sought and valued his friendship, disse he was, amongst whom was the cel Parr. In Cambridge some of his gr were composed and published. His ' Consistent with the Love of Freedom' 'Apology for the Freedom of the Pre his far-famed sermon on 'Modern I 1799, his 'Reflections on War' in 18 'Sentiments Suitable to the Present C year following. These were politico-r courses, occasioned by the critical circu the country at the beginning of this c they touched a chord in every patriotic while they evince the great powers c and eloquence that so greatly distin Hall, they must not be considered san food with which he fed his people. H discourses, though always replete with eloquence, were evangelical, calculated people both by enlarging their Script ledge, and stimulating their faith and 1804, when he was at the very height tation, the mind of this extraordinary m a sad eclipse, and yet at intervals duri gress of his distressing malady, his g forth by sparks of surpassing power an His congregation showed their strong and sympathy by raising an amount o another of equal amount to be given t in the event of his death. Although h yet partial symptoms of the disorder themselves, his connection with the c in Cambridge was dissolved, and he w his friends in the private establishm Arnold of Leicester, by whose skilful a treatment, his health was soon re-esta he resumed his preaching by itinerati the villages around Leicester. He bec pastor of a church in Leicester, the san which the celebrated Dr. Carey had on and there by the splendour of his publ tions, his fame as a public orator w more widely than ever.—But Mr. H. allowed to continue in that comparati sphere. On the death of Dr. Rylan urged to undertake the pastorate of th flourishing baptist congregation in Bri that city he accordingly removed, all c ing his arrival with enthusiastic joy. A ing five years in that important spha alled success, his health gave way. A spasmodic ction in the chest, added to his old constitutional plaint in the back, rendered him unfit for pub- duty. The unfavourable symptoms continued crease in spite of all the medical skill that enlisted in his behalf, and after a brief illness en days, this splendid orator and eminent ser- of Christ, died in February, 1831, in the y-seventh year of his age. [R.J.]

ALL, THOMAS, a learned nonef., 1610-1665.

ALLE, CLAUDE GUY, a French painter and tor of the Academy, 1652-1736. His son, , a painter and superintendent of the Gobe- 1711-1781. The son of the latter, JOHN , a physician and medical writer, 1754-1822.

ALLE, PETER, a French savant, 1611-1689.

ALLENBERG, JONAS, a Swedish historian turalist, an. of a hist. of Swed., 1748-1834.

ALLER, ALBERT, M.D., a learned and eminent omist and physiologist of last century, was at Berne, in Switzerland on the 18th October, . He was the son of Nicholas de Haller, vocate, and chancellor of the county of Baden, exhibited in early life very precocious powers, ticularly in the acquisition of languages; hav- at the age of nine composed for his own use a laic Grammar, a Hebrew and Greek Lexicon, an Historical Dictionary containing upwards 0,000 articles. He was originally destined for church, but subsequently turned his attention edicine, which he studied under Camerarius Duverney at Tubingen, and afterwards at den under Boerhaave, where he was the asso- of Albinus and Ruysch, and where also he ained as a doctor. After visiting England France, he returned to Berne in 1730, and in was appointed teacher of anatomy in that ; but his reputation having greatly extended, was nominated Professor of Anatomy, Surgery, Botany, in the university of Göttingen by ge II. of England in 1736. Here he remained seventeen years, and here his great work, putationes Anatomicæ Selectæ,' by which is chiefly known, was composed. He refused chair of botany in Oxford, and he declined itations from the king of Prussia, the states of land, and the empress of Russia. George II., consideration of his great merits, obtained for a brevet as a noble of the empire, and he is n spoken of as Baron Haller; but he never d this title in his native country. He left ttingen for Berne in the year 1753, and spent rest of his life in honourable but active re- ment in Switzerland. He died at Berne on 12th of December, 1777, in his seventieth r. [J.M'C.]

HALLET, JOS., a learned dissenting minister, r. of 'Discourses on the Miracles,' 1692-1744.

HALLEY, EDMUND, a celebrated astronomer, born in London on the 8th November, 1656. father, who was a soap-boiler, sent him to St. 's school, where he acquired such a taste for ronomy that before he left school he made servations on the variation of the needle. In he entered Queen's College, Oxford, while there devoted himself almost ex- ively to mathematics and astronomy. In he published his first paper in the Philoso- ical Transactions on the orbits of the primary planets, and such was the reputation it acquired him, that he was soon after sent by Charles II. to St. Helena to make a catalogue of the stars of the southern hemisphere. In the course of two years he completed this arduous task, and in 1679 he published his 'Catalogue of the Southern Stars.' In 1678 Halley was elected a fellow of the Royal Society, and in the following year he went to Dantzic to settle the controversy between Hooke and Hevelius respecting the use of telescopic sights in astronomical observations. After performing the tour of Europe in 1686 with his friend Mr. Nelson, the author of 'Fasts and Festivals,' during which he made observations on the great comet in the observatory of Paris with Cassini, he returned to England, and married the daughter of Mr. Tooke, auditor of the exchequer, with whom he lived happily for fifty-five years. In the Philosophical Transactions for 1683 he published his 'Theory of the Variation of the Magnetical Compass,' in which he considers our terrestrial globe as one great magnet, with four magnetic poles near the north and south poles of the earth, the needle being always governed by the nearest of these poles.—In consequence of the bankruptcy of his father, our author's pursuits were for some time interrupted; but he soon returned to his studies, and was led in 1684 to examine Kepler's laws of the planetary motions, from which he drew the inference that the centripetal force must vary inversely as the square of the distance. Being unable to prove this geometrically, he applied to Dr. Hooke and Sir Christopher Wren for assistance; but having failed to obtain it, he set out for Cambridge in August, 1683, to consult Mr. Newton, who had by this time made great progress in establishing the doctrines of the Principia. Halley was delighted with his reception, and the good news that Newton had brought the demonstration of the laws of the celestial motions to perfection. Newton, however, could not lay his hands upon the papers, but wrought them over again, and sent them in November to Halley by Mr. Paget, in the form of four theorems and seven problems. Upon receiving them Halley took another journey to Cambridge in order to confer with their author on the subject, and we find him on the 10th December giving an account to the Royal Society of the curious treatise 'De Motu,' which Newton had shown him, to be entered upon their register. At a later period Halley prevailed upon Newton to complete his 'Principia,' the first book of which was exhibited to the Royal Society on the 20th April, 1686. It was put into the hands of Halley, then clerk to the Society, to report upon it; and at a subsequent meeting on the 2d of June, Halley undertook the task of correcting the press, and of printing it at his own expense.—In 1686 our author published an account of the trade winds and monsoons on the seas near and between the tropics, which was followed by several other chemico-meteorological papers, in one of which, 'On the Circulation of the Watery Vapours of the Sea, and the Origin of Springs,' published in 1691, he first pointed out that beautiful provision, in consequence of which, a constant circulation of water is kept up between the atmosphere and the ocean.—In 1691 he published a paper on the conjunction of the superior planets, in which he showed, as James Gregory had done long before, the utility of observing these conjunctions in order to determine the sun's parallax and distance from the earth.—In the year 1691 Halley became a candidate for the Savilian chair of astronomy at Oxford, and was opposed by David Gregory, who was the successful competitor. His failure on this occasion arose, according to Whiston, from his maintaining infidel opinions, and being generally regarded as a sceptic and a 'banterer of religion.' The same charge was preferred against him by Flamsteed, and Newton is said to have often reproved him for his infidelity. There is reason, however, to believe that the charge of infidelity was founded on his having persisted in maintaining, as every philosopher and intelligent divine does now, that there was a pre-adamite earth, out of the ruins of which the present earth was made; and that he only laboured under imputations which have been often made since his day upon every distinguished individual who maintains great truths that appear to be inconsistent with the literal interpretation of Scripture.—In 1692 Halley published his Hypothesis Relative to the Change in the Variation of the Needle, in which he supposes an interior globe with magnetic poles to move within our earth, and to produce the variation by the change in the relative position of the external and internal poles.—In order to put this theory to the test of observation, he conceived the design of obtaining measures of the variation of the needle in different parts of the world. For this purpose King William appointed him captain of the Paramour Pink, in which he set sail on the 20th October, 1698, but after sailing along the coasts of Africa and America, a spirit of mutiny arose among his officers, and he returned to England in July, 1699. Having resumed his voyage, and finished his experiments, he returned on the 7th September, 1700, and was rewarded with the title of captain of the navy, and with half-pay during life.—On the recommendation of Queen Anne, the emperor of Germany consulted him on the formation of a harbour on the coast of Dalmatia, and he went twice to the Adriatic on that errand. The emperor when he saw him at Vienna presented him with a rich diamond ring, taken from his finger, and wrote a letter in his own hand recommending him to Queen Anne.—On the death of Dr. Wallis in 1703, Halley was appointed Savilian professor of geometry at Oxford, and forgetting, or rather perhaps having discovered the falsehood of the charge of infidelity which had formerly been made against him, the university conferred upon him the honorary title of Doctor of Laws. In furtherance of the plan recommended by Sir Henry Saville, he began, in conjunction with Dr. Gregory, to publish the works of the ancient geometers, and several of the writings of Apollonius and Serenus, translated and edited by them, appeared in 1706 and 1710.—Upon the death of Sir Hans Sloane in 1713, he was elected secretary of the Royal Society, and while he held this office he made a number of interesting experiments on the diving bell at great depths in the sea, which were described in the Phil. Trans. for 1716, under the quaint title of 'The Art of Living under Water.' When the important office of astronomer royal became vacant in 1719, by the death of Flamsteed, Halley was appointed his successor, and though he had now reached the sixty-fourth year of his age he continued for twenty years without the aid of an assistant to carry on the operations of the observatory with the most unremitting assiduity. In 1731 he published his 'Proposal for Finding the Longitude at Sea within a Degree,' a method which he had suggested so early as 1683, in an appendix to the second edition of Street's 'Caroline Tables.' In 1725 he drew up his tables for computing the places of the planets, but he delayed their publication till he was enabled by new observations to make them more perfect. They did not, however, appear till 1749, after his death; but they were long regarded as the most complete and accurate till they were superseded by others founded on newer and more accurate observations. In 1729 Halley was elected a foreign member of the Academy of Science in Paris. In 1737, when he was eighty-one years of age, he was struck with paralysis in his right hand, but he still continued to attend the Royal Society Club at its weekly meetings. The disease now gained ground upon him, and he gradually lost his strength. He was sustained chiefly by the cordials given him by Dr. Meed, and one day being tired of taking them, he asked for a glass of wine, and as soon as he had drank it he expired in his chair without a groan, on the 14th January, 1742, in the eighty-sixth year of his age. He was buried in the churchyard of Lee, and as he had himself requested, in the same spot with his wife, whom he had lost a few years before. His eldest daughter was buried in the same place in 1743. Besides this daughter he had other two, and several children who died in infancy. One of his sons, who lived to manhood, died long before his father. His two surviving daughters erected over his remains a handsome tomb of Portland stone. M. Mairan, who wrote the eloge upon Halley, which was read to the Academy of Sciences in 1742, concluded with the following just appreciation of the universality of his acquirements:—'While we thought the eulogium of an astronomer, a naturalist, a scholar, and a philosopher, comprehended our whole subject, we have been insensibly surprised with the history of an excellent mariner, an illustrious traveller, an able engineer, and almost a statesman.' Notwithstanding the copious details regarding the life of Halley given in the 'Biographia Britannica,' a good life of that distinguished individual is greatly to be desired, and we trust that the Rev. M. Rigaud of Ipswich will find leisure to fulfil the intentions which his distinguished father had so much at heart. [D.B.]

HALLIDAY, Sir Andrew, a physician and traveller, celeb. as a miscellaneous writer, d. 1840.

HALLIER, F., a Fr. controver. wr., 1595-1659.

HALLIFAX, S., a learned prelate, 1733-1790.

HALLOIX, P., a French savant, 1572-1656.

HALLORAN, Sylvester O', an Irish antiquarian, au. of a 'Hist. of Ireland,' &c., 1728-1807.

HALMA, F., a Flemish lexicographer, last cent.

HALMA, N., a Fr. archæologist, 1755-1828.

HALTAUS, C. T., a German hist., 1702-1758.

HALYBURTON, Thomas, a Scotch divine, author of 'Natural Religion Insufficient,' 1674-1712.

HAMAD, fndr. of a dynasty in Algeria, d. 1021.

HAMADANI, an Arabian savant, 968-1007.

HAMAKER, H. A., a Dutch Orient., 1789-1835.

HAMANN, J. G., a German philoso., 1730-88.

HAMAZASB, an Armenian prince, died 658.

HAMEL, JOHN BAPTIST DU. See DUHAMEL.

HAMILCAR, a general of Carthage, k. B.C. 229.

HAMILTON, a distinguished Scotch family, the principal members of which are—JAMES, first earl of Arran, d. 1519. JAMES, the second earl of Arran, duke of Chatelherault and regent of Scotland, died 1576. PATRICK, the first reformer, burnt alive by the bishop of St. Andrews, 1503-1527. JAMES, first duke of Hamilton, beheaded as a royalist after the battle of Preston 1649. WILLIAM, duke of Hamilton, died after the battle of Worcester 1652. ANTHONY, Count Hamilton, author of poetry and fairy tales, &c., 1646-1720.

HAMILTON, ALEX., succes. of Washington in the chief command, b. 1757, killed in a duel 1804.

HAMILTON, CHARLES, an East Indian officer and writer on Oriental subjects, died 1792.

HAMILTON, ELIZABETH, an Irish lady of considerable note as an essayist, 1758-1816.

HAMILTON, GAVIN, a Scotch painter, d. 1796.

HAMILTON, GEO., earl of Orkney, dist. at the battle of the Boyne, and in subsequent actions under William III. and the duke of Marlborough, d. 1737.

HAMILTON, HUGH, an Irish prelate, mathematical writer, and prof. of nat. phil., 1729-1805.

HAMILTON, SIR JOHN, a British officer, dist. in the East Indies and the peninsula, 1755-1835.

HAMILTON, R., a medical writer, 1729-1793.

HAMILTON, R., a Scotch mathematician and writer on public questions, 1742-1829.

HAMILTON, CAPT. THOMAS, a miscellaneous writer, author of 'Cyril Thornton,' &c., d. 1842.

HAMILTON, W., of Bangour, a Sc. poet, 1704-54.

HAMILTON, W., a Scotch artist, 1751-1801.

HAMILTON, SIR WILLIAM, Bart., of Preston, county of Haddington, one of the many talented Scotchmen distinguished by labours in Mental Science. The family of Hamilton, which he represented, sprang from Sir Gilbert de Hameldon, founder of the House of Hamilton in Scotland, a staunch cavalier who obtained his patent of creation in 1673. Sir William was third Baronet in possession and eighth de jure. He was born in Glasgow in 1791, and educated at Oxford, where he obtained first-class honours. He was admitted a member of the Scotch bar in 1813, became a contributor to the Edinburgh Review, and for the last twenty years of his life filled with great success the chair of Logic and Metaphysics in the University of Edinburgh. He died on the 6th May, 1856.—The following sketch was written during his lifetime:—It is now long years since Sir William Hamilton had achieved a name for Encyclopædiacal Learning in everything related, however remotely, to the history and condition of Mental Science; and certainly no other, in modern times, could readily be specified, with attainments of this description at all equivalent to his: nevertheless—at least until recently—it was known only by the few, that to acquisitions so various and vast, our countryman adds the power to marshal and command them all; and that his learning, however immense, is used by him simply as an instrument whereby to rear and consolidate a great and symmetrical body of Thought. Rarely indeed has the thirst unquenchable for what in common speech is termed à posteriori knowledge, been combined with so signal a development of à priori power: it seems the pre-eminent characteristic of our philosopher's mind, that these two factors of all Science, exist in it together—in full and symmetric integrity. No problem is resolved in his view, or even rightly laid for explication, until, in the first place, a complete scheme has been constructed of all its possible solutions, and the contributions of every former thinker arranged under due heads, and made to bring out their partial light: a step, preliminary indeed, but which can never be accomplished until the problem has passed through the mind, under the chief forms in which History presents it, and its fundamental conditions in all their purity and breadth been discerned. Few exercises are more pleasing than to follow Hamilton, as with eager and scrupulous conscientiousness he gathers together the scattered hints of his predecessors, assigns them their place, and marks them with their value: his intense Love of Truth rises into the form of Justice: great popular names never pass with him as badges of desert; nor is any one so obscure—to whom a fragment of truth has in any form ever appeared—that he may not be surrounded with his regard. A character so thorough, and, in the highest sense, veracious, must have at its root—assuredly as its concomitant—a clear and energetic moral nature; nevertheless, the source of its strength, in this instance, is manifestly what we have stated—an earnest and unfaltering love of truth, and faculties harmonized to discern it. Regarding Philosophy as man's highest intellectual attainment, must not all true workers appear as one brotherhood? Believing the conquest of august problems concerning Knowledge and Being, to be the Olympic prize of our Human Reason, shall the Runner not welcome every aid to his strength, or shall he expect that anything but strength can help towards the goal? Fortunate, if at a time when languor and dissolution threaten Philosophy once more, and reputations are sought and won through picking up and vending its mere flotsam and jetsam—our Youth might haply attain skill in Method, increase in Sincerity, and learn the dignity of intellectual toil, through the example of Hamilton!—Let us briefly glance at the leading provinces occupied by our Philosopher. 1. It is not unknown how important a share of modern speculation has been devoted to the subject of Perception, since the times of Reid. Not in this country alone—not even especially in this country; for some critique of the Act of Knowing, is at the basis of all recent German Systems. As customary with him, not confining his regard to modern times, but surveying philosophical history from Plato downwards, Sir William, in his remarkable papers on Presentation and Representation, appears for the first time to have laid or constructed the full problem, and to have resolved it. The solution was, amongst ourselves, peculiarly opportune, arriving to discredit and destroy the confusion threatened by the rash but imposing ignorance of Brown; nor was it less opportune abroad, inasmuch as it once more restored 'Natural Dualism' to its sovereignty in Thought, and revealed the form of the gratuitous hypothesis that from earliest times had impelled men in vain search of schemes of Unity and the Absolute. Despotically, as the maxim of the im-mobility of the earth ruled in Astronomy until the time of Copernicus, and equally unquestioned—the maxim that 'like only can know like,' seems to have governed all theories of perception; exerting more extensive influence than any other principle in the History of Philosophy. Under its sway the problem of perception became this—how do Mind and Matter seem to meet? Meet they cannot, being unlike: is then Mind an illusion, or Matter an illusion; or is there a certain medium partaking of both, through which they come together? The maxim repudiated, and replaced by the simple assertion of consciousness, this immense fabric of speculation fell prone and helpless: and Hamilton's will ever be recognized as the hand that dealt the irrecoverable blow. Vindicating it, in name of Consciousness, as an undeniable fact, that the Ego and Non-Ego, as two distinct objects, are at the same moment, and with equal verity, present to the mind, he protested against all Unitarian Schemes, as insurrections, defying a primal Law; and it is not too much to say that the energy and directness of his protest, upheld by his searching dissection of all untrue or partially true opposing systems, ancient and modern, marks the beginning of a sounder period in Mental Science.—2. It is needless to recall to a British, or indeed to any reader, the amount of attention given by our distinguished countryman to the subject of LOGIC, or the fame that has hence accrued to him. The grounds of Knowledge ascertained, and the veracity of Perception vindicated, next in order stands the Inquiry, what are the primary laws of thinking, or according to what forms does the mind operate on the matter of its thoughts? A large, although purely notional Science; its foundation laid by Aristotle, and its domain surveyed; portions of it minutely explored by Lord Bacon; but in imminence of being all lost sight of, as a Science, in this country, or absorbed by its lowest and empirical part. Thoroughly has Hamilton revived the Stagyrite, and interpreted him to our compeers. Acknowledging to the full the merits of Lord Bacon, he has passed beyond him to the higher position of the Greek; and presented logic again, as it appeared to that penetrating and all-grasping intellect. Few will miss remarking that the fulness of his sympathy with Aristotle has its root in a corresponding universality of character: no form or mode of speculation is foreign to Hamilton, as none were so to his predecessor. Of special contributions to the doctrine of the syllogism we can say nothing here.—8. Logic we have termed a notional science, as it exclusively is. But it is conversant with laws obeyed by the Mind in thinking, and with primary notions that control, and are involved in these. What are these primary notions? Our notion of Causality, for instance, is it a mere notion, or does it belong to Existence also? Space and Time are forms, apart from which we can perceive nothing,—are they likewise external realities, or things from external realities? Questions these peopling the vast and difficult heights of Metaphysics; occupying intensely the greatest Inquirers of former times, and all Teutonic thinkers in our own; but, until Hamilton spoke, wholly neglected in this country, where we rested content amid the low levels of elementary Psychology. No more startling proof could be given of our inertness as to metaphysical research properly so called, than the criticisms on Kant, &c., one finds in Mr. Stewart's dissertations — dissertations, notwithstanding that Hamilton has written, still presented as an adequate account of Philosophy! With corresponding knowledge and power, our distinguished Thinker has passed into this field: and his speculations concerning the 'Law of the Conditioned'—concerning the principle of Causality—his adventures into the still more rugged sphere of Ontology, establish before every one who can think or judge—whatever the fate of his special conclusions—that an Inquirer is amongst us, who need bow his head before no Greek or Teuton of them all.—May health empower him to carry out his announced and cherished designs! Events indeed, are not in the hands of man; but the 'Edition of Reid,' and the 'Discussions of Philosophy,' are possessions; and with gratitude the long Future will receive them.—What, then, is the probable issue of a life and labours like these? Shall Hamilton succeed in reviving a taste for Metaphysics? Is it likely that many who profess to admire him will imitate his independence? Shall he be the founder of a new and purified, a profound and fearless Scottish School? If such a result were possible, Hamilton's achievements and example would secure it: but for two reasons, its advent seems, to the writer of this notice, more than doubtful. First, There are abroad many indications, that when a new School in Philosophy shall be formed, its Methods must take greater account than has yet been done, of the issues of physiological research, and of the position of Humanity in the great Hierarchy of Organization. It is most true, as laid down by Des Cartes, that the reality of mental phenomena needs no attestation beyond consciousness; but although physiology must not absorb psychology, the two ought not, and ultimately will not stand apart: the methods and science of the latter will assuredly be found to repose upon the former. But another cause adverse to the immediate reconstruction of any worthy and upright Mental Science, has sprung out of circumstances whose unravelling is probably still more remote. Changes in the social and political relations of the different classes in this country—however fertile otherwise of good fruits—have recently elevated into preponderance and power, those unsystematic views on mind and speculative subjects, which alone can be expected among busy multitudes; a condition not favourable, now nor at any period, to the existence of an independent philosophic class. In a country like ours, so practical, and where men are so fond of political station, the tendency natural to such an epoch will unquestionably be, rather to desire and furnish support—logical merely in form—to systems in vogue and popular, than daringly, and with single eye, to follow out Truth. For a season, therefore, Philosophy may descend into subservience. It remains to be ascertained by what instrumentality, in the course of Providence, sufficient esteem and freedom shall become assured to the Truth-Seeker; the Multitudes discerning, that in Truth alone, the prize of sternest quest, and not in heaps of Opinion, rudis indigestaque moles —abide Safety and Honour.

HAMILTON, Sir William, the friend of Nelson, known as a diplomatist and connoisseur in the arts, and in natural history, 1730-1803. His second wife, Emma, Lady Hamilton, married to him, after a long course of licentiousness, in 1791, was a woman of extraordinary beauty, and still more remarkable for her powers of fascination. She became the mistress of Nelson, and his political agent at the court of Naples, and died at Calais in the most abject distress 1816.

HAMILTON, William Gerard, a Scotch lawyer and statesman, remarkable for the eloquence of the only two speeches he was known to make in the House of Commons, 1729-1796.

HAMMOND, A., a miscel. writer, 1668-1738.

HAMMOND, H., a learned divine, 1605-1660.

HAMMOND, J., au. of 'Love Elegies,' 1710-41.

HAMON, John, a French Jansenist, 1618-87.

HAMPDEN, John, was born at London in 1594. There is little to be commemorated of his life save what belongs to the history of the period, and all his connection with it is on the surface, for his acts were open and public, and whatever his machinations may have been, he was ever free of secret machinations to serve private ends. He belonged, like nearly all the leaders of the parliamentary party, to one of the worshipful and ancient country families. His was widely ramified among the English gentry, and he counted Cromwell, with other opponents of the court, among his connections. In 1619 becoming married to Elizabeth Symeon, to whom he was tenderly attached, he led the life of a country squire, amid a numerous offspring. He represented Grampound, and afterwards Wendover, in the earlier parliaments of Charles I.'s reign, but he took little concern in public business until the long parliament, when he had gradually prepared himself to suffer or to strike, as occasion might require, in support of what he deemed the fundamental principles of the constitution. He was imprisoned in the gate-house for refusing to participate in one of the exacted loans, but this effort at coercion was abandoned. His resistance to the imposition of a tax without authority of parliament, under the obsolete name of ship-money, came to its conclusion in 1637, when the question was solemnly tried in the Exchequer Chamber. The decision was against him, and satisfied him that armed resistance to the prerogative was necessary. He threw himself with entire devotion into the business of the Long Parliament, and much of the successful dexterity with which it was conducted was due to his skill and courage. He commanded a troop in the parliamentary army. He was mortally wounded in an affair with Prince Rupert on 18th June, 1643, and thus left the struggle while yet it seemed on the side of the parliament one of fair defence and self-protection, and before long-sustained animosity or projects of aggrandizement had mixed themselves with the views and conduct of the parliamentary leaders. [J.H.B.]

[Great Hampden Church, the burial place of Hampden.]

HAMPER, W., a miscellaneous writer, d. 1831.

HAMPTON, J., a classical translator, d. 1778.

HAMZA, the first prophet or high priest of the Druses, author of 'The Book of Testimonies to the Mysteries of the Unity,' 11th century.

HAMZEH, a shah of Persia, killed 1585.

HANBAL, a Mussulman sectarian, 786-855.

HANCKINS, M., a Ger. philologist, 1633-1709.

HANDEL, George Frederick, the son of an eminent surgeon and physician, was born at Halle in Saxony, on the 24th of February, 1684. His father had designed that he should follow the profession of the civil law, but his love for, and early progress in music, soon proved, as in many other instances, that the parental plans had to be given up. He was then placed under the tuition of Frederick Zachau, organist of the cathedral of Halle, where he made such rapid progress, that at nine years old he was able to officiate on the organ for his master, and had begun the study of composition. When only nineteen he went to Hamburgh, where he became director of the operas, and such was his ability and talent, that it excited the jealousy of a rival musician, John Matheson. These professors had been on terms of the closest intimacy and friendship for nearly six years, when a quarrel arose upon a point of professional etiquette which ended in a duel. They fought with swords, but luckily the point of Matheson's sword broke against a metal button on Handel's coat, which put an end to the combat. This encounter took place on the 5th of December, 1704. Matheson and Handel soon again became good friends, for we are informed by Matheson, that on the 30th of the same month he accompanied the young composer Handel to the rehearsal of his first opera 'Almeria,' and at the theatre performed the principal character in it. Next year Handel brought out his 'Florinda,' and in the year following 'Nerone,' both of which were favourably received. In 1708, he composed his 'Dafne,' up to which time he had written harpsichord pieces, songs, and cantatas innumerable. Having become possessed of some wealth, he went to Italy, and he composed in Florence the opera 'Rodrigo.' From Florence he went to Venice, where in 1709 he produced his 'Agrippina' which was received with acclamation, and in which horns and other wind instruments were first used to accompany the voice in Italy. Here Handel met with Dominico, Scarlatti, Gasparini, Lotti, and other great masters of musical art. He next went to Rome, where he met Alessandro Scarlatti, and had an opportunity of hearing music of the highest class. Here he composed 'Il Trionpho del Tempo' and gained the friendship of Cardinals Ottobeni and Pamfili, the latter of whom wrote the libretto, for a sacred work named 'La Resurrezione.' After visiting Naples he returned to Germany in 1710, where he received the situation of Maestro di Capella to the elector of Hanover, afterwards George I. of England. Having obtained permission, he came to England in the latter end of the year 1710, between which year and 1720, he composed his opera of 'Rinaldi,' his 'Te Deum,' and 'Jubilate;' the 'Water Music,' his operas 'Amadis,' 'Fesco,' and 'Il Pastor Fido,' his 'Acis and Galatea,' 'Esther,' and other minor works. While he was in England, Queen Anne awarded him a pension of £200 per annum, and when the elector became king of England this allowance was doubled. Not many years after this, Handel having been appointed to teach the princess royal, an additional pension of £200 was added to the former grants by Queen Caroline. The busiest, but not the most fortunate period of Handel's life had now arrived, and that which forms the most splendid era in the musical annals of Britain. It was resolved that the king's theatre should be converted into an academy of music, and Handel was engaged as manager. During his management he produced fifteen new operas, but his troubles were so great that in 1726 he retired from his managerial duties with a loss of £10,000, and a constitution much damaged by incessant labour and turmoil. He then made an attempt to give operas at Covent Garden Theatre, but was equally unsuccessful. He next commenced giving oratorios, which he continued to nearly the last day of his life, and deriving considerable pecuniary advantage from them. It is an historical fact that the 'Messiah' was, during a long period, annually performed at the Foundling Hospital, and alone added £10,300 to the funds of that institution. Late in life, Handel lost his eyesight, but this affliction could not burthen or obscure his fine intellect, for he continued to play concertos and voluntaries between the parts of his oratorios, in the same masterly style which had distinguished his touch in the prime of his life. He died on the 13th of April, 1759, and was buried in Westminster Abbey, where a monument by Roubillac is erected to his memory. In 1784, a grand musical festival, the Commemoration of Handel (being the centenary of his birth), was held in Westminster Abbey, when nearly £13,000 was received for five days' performances.—In the Queen's Library are the original MSS. of nearly all Handel's works, filling 82 large folio volumes. These include 32 Italian operas, 23 oratorios, 8 volumes of anthems, 4 of cantatas, 3 of Te Deums and a Jubilate, together with concertos, sonatas, &c. Not in the royal collection are, 11 volumes consisting of operas, harpsichord lessons, fugues, organ concertos, water-music, &c. Of the oratorios, 'Esther' was first performed in 1732; 'Deborah and Athalia' in 1733; 'Acis and Galatea' in 1735; 'Ode, St. Cecilia's Day' in 1736; 'Israel in Egypt' in 1738; 'L'Allegro ed il Penseroso,' 1739; 'Saul,' 1740; 'Messiah,' 1741; 'Samson,' 1742; 'Semele,' 'Belshazzar,' and 'Susanna' 1743; 'Hercules,' 1744; 'Choice of Hercules,' and 'Occasional Oratorio' in 1745; 'Joseph' and 'Judas Maccabæus' in 1746; 'Alexander Balus and Joshua' in 1747; 'Solomon' in 1749; 'Theodora' in 1750; 'Jephthah,' and 'Time and Truth' in 1551.—Handel was great in every style of music. In sacred music; especially of the choral kind, he not only throws at an immeasurable distance all who preceded and followed him, but reached that sublimity to which the art is so capable of attaining. In manners, Handel was impetuous yet dignified and benevolent. In person he was large and bulky, but with pleasing and regular features. [J.M.]

HANMER, J., a nonconform. divine, died 1687.

HANMER, MEREDITH, an English clergyman and ecclesiastical author, committed suicide 1604.

HANMER, SIR THOS., a member of parliament, and editor of an edition of Shakspeare, 1676-1746.

HANNEMAN, A., a Dutch painter, 1611-80.

HANNIBAL, one of the most illustrious generals of antiquity, was born B.C. 247, the same year in which his father Hamilcar was appointed to the command of the Carthaginian army in Spain. At the age of nine he accompanied his father to the scene of war, having, before leaving Carthage, taken a solemn oath at the altar, in presence of his father, pledging himself to eternal hostility to Rome—a pledge to the fulfilment of which his whole future life was devoted. He was present in the battle in which his father perished, B.C. 229; and though only eighteen years old, his bravery and genius for war were already so conspicuous, that Hasdrubal, his father's successor, intrusted to him the chief command of nearly all the military enterprises which he planned. On the assassination of Hasdrubal, B.C. 221, the soldiers unanimously proclaimed him commander-in-chief, a choice which was speedily ratified by the government at Carthage. Being now invested with the entire conduct of the war, he quickly reduced to subjection the Spanish tribes which had not been conquered by Hasdrubal. In the spring of B.C. 219, he laid siege to Saguntum, a city in alliance with the Romans, though warned that an attack upon it would be held as a declaration of war, and took it after a blockade of eight months, thus setting at defiance the mighty power of Rome. Such was the commencement of the second Punic war. After passing the winter in making the necessary preparations for the invasion of Italy, he crossed the Ebro in the following spring, passed the Pyrenees with an army of 50,000 foot and 9,000 horse, and, marching through Gaul, reached the Rhone without interruption. Crossing the Rhone he ascended the left bank of that river till its confluence with the Isère, then struck off to the right, and surmounting the many and most formidable difficulties which obstructed his passage, reached the summit of the Alps, on the ninth day after leaving the plains of Dauphiné. When he reached the plains of northern Italy, his army was reduced to 20,000 infantry and 6,000 cavalry, so that his march must have cost him 33,000 men. After recruiting the strength of his troops, he entered upon a career of unexampled success. He attacked and defeated the consul P. Scipio on the banks of the Ticinus, B.C. 218, and Tib. Sempronius at the Trebia, B.C. 218, thus making himself master of the whole of northern Italy; and, proceeding still southward, gained a signal victory over the consul Flaminius at the Trasimene lake, B.C. 217. The Romans now collected a fresh army, which was placed under the command of Fabius Maximus as dictator; and a defensive system of warfare was adopted till the end of the year. In the spring of B.C. 216, the Romans raised an army of nearly 90,000 men, which, led by the consuls L. Æmilius Paulus and C. Terentius Varro, advanced to Cannæ, in Apulia, where the Carthaginian army was encamped. In the battle which ensued, the Roman army was annihilated, and the consul Æmilius Paulus slain. The whole of lower Italy was thereby placed in the power of Hannibal, and the fidelity of some of the Roman allies, who had hitherto been steadfast, began to give way. But the dauntless spirit of the Romans remained unshaken, although Hannibal was not the only enemy with whom they had to contend. They now adopted strictly the defensive system, counteracted the enemy's movements in every direction, and rendered it impossible for him to prosecute extensively a system of active aggression. Hannibal, notwithstanding, maintained his army in Italy for the next twelve years, having, in B.C. 207, sustained an irreparable loss by the destruction of the army under his brother Hasdrubal, who was marching to his assistance. In B.C. 204, P. Cornelius Scipio, who had completed the conquest of Spain, passed over into Africa, and, with the assistance of Masinissa, a Numidian prince, gained two victories over the Carthaginians. The war being thus carried into the enemy's country, Hannibal was recalled from Italy, and, landing at Leptis, advanced to Zama, a city five days' journey west from Carthage. Here he was entirely defeated by Scipio, B.C. 202, and the Carthaginians were obliged to sue for peace. Here ended the second Punic war, B.C. 201. After the conclusion of the war, Hannibal applied himself to the correction of the abuses which existed in the Carthaginian government; but was interrupted in his course by an embassy sent from Rome to demand his punishment as a disturber of the public peace. Making his escape from Carthage, he fled to the court of Antiochus at Ephesus, and assisted in fixing his determination to make war against the Romans. When peace was concluded between Antiochus and the Romans, Hannibal took refuge with Prusias, king of Bithynia, with whom he remained about five years. But the Romans could not rest so long as their once formidable enemy was alive, and Prusias agreed to put him into their hands. Hannibal, finding that escape was now impossible, destroyed himself by poison at Nicomedia, in Bithynia, B.C. 183, in the SIXTY-fifth year of his age. [G.F.]

HANNO, the name of several disting. Carthaginians; the first, an African explorer, author of the 'Periplus of Hanno,' 6th cent. B.C.; the second, an admiral, defeated by the consul Lutatius, 243 B.C.; the third, a general, and rival of Hamilcar and Hannibal, died 204 B.C.

HANSARD, LUKE, an em. printer, 1752-1828.

HANSCH, M. G., a Germ. philos., 1683-1752.

HANS-SACHSE, a German poet, 1494-1576.

HANVILL, JOHN, a Latin poet, 12th century.

HANWAY, JONAS, an English merchant and historical writer, best known as a philanthropist and friend of the lower classes. He was the principal founder of the Marine Society and the Magdalen Hospital, and a great promoter of Sunday schools, 1712-1786.

HAQUIN, king of Norway, the first of the name, born 915, reigned 931-963; the second, reigned 978-995; the third, 1161-1162; the fourth, 1202-1204; the fifth, 1217-1263; the sixth, 1297-1319; the seventh, born 1338, governed Norway after 1345, under the name of his father, who was king of Norway and Sweden; married Margaret of Denmark, 1360; deposed his father and usurped the throne 1361; died 1380.

HARALD, king of Norway, the first of the name, died 933; the second, succeeded 963, and was killed 978; the third, born 1017, reigned over half Norway 1047, and was killed 1066; the third, a pretended son of Magnus III., began his career about 1130, usurped the throne, and was vanquished by another pretender 1136.

HARALD, king of Denmark, the first of the name known to historians, called the seventh, reigned 930-980; the eighth, succeeded 1014, and died in England 1017; the ninth, reigned 1076-80.

HARALD, a king of Jutland, 9th century.

HARCOURT, COUNT HENRI DE LORRAINE, a French military commander, died 1666.

HARCOURT, WILLIAM, earl of, a British officer, disting. in the American war, 1743-1830.

HARDEBY, G., an English monk, died 1360.

HARDENBERG, CHAR. AUGUSTUS, Prince Von, a Prussian minister of state, and a principal actor in the political transactions connected with the recent war, 1750-1822.

HARDENBERG, FRED. VON. See NOVALIS.

HARDI, ALEX., a Fr. dramatist, died 1630.

HARDICANUTE, King. of England, d. 1042.

HARDING, J., an Eng. annalist, 1378-1466.

HARDING, TH., a Rom. Cath. div., 1512-1572.

HARDINGE, NICHOLAS, an English scholar and poet, 1700-1758. His son, GEORGE, a jurisconsult and man of letters, 1744-1816.

HARDION, JAS., a Fr. historian, 1686-1766.

HARDOUIN, H., a Fr. musician, 1724-1808.

HARDOUIN, JOHN, a French Jesuit of great learning, remarkable for his opinions on the literary history of antiquity, 1646-1729.

HARDOUIN, J. S., a Fr. writer, 1735-1817.

HARDT, HERMANN VAN DER, a German philologist and hist. of the reformation, 1660-1745.

HARDT, IGNATIUS, a Ger. biblio., 1749-1811.

HARDWICKE, the earls of. See YORKE.

HARDY, A., a French dramatist, 1560-1631.

HARDY, SIR C., an English admiral, d. 1779.

HARDY, VICE-ADMIRAL SIR THOMAS MASTERMAN, captain of the Victory in the battle of Trafalgar, b. 1769, d. gover. of Green. Hosp. 1839.

HARE, DR. FRANCIS, bp. of Chichester, dist. as a learned writer and controversialist, died 1740.

HARE, HENRY, Lord Coleraine, a dist. scholar and collector of antiquarian subjects, 1693-1749.

HARENBERG, J. C., a Ger. hist., 1694-1774.

HARETH-BEN-HILIZA, an Arab. poet, 6th c.

HARGRAVE, F., an English jurist, 1741-1821.

HARIOT, TH., an Engl. algebraist, 1560-1621.

HARIRI, ABEN-MOH., an Arab. au., 1054-1121.

HARLES, T. CHR., a Ger. savant, 1738-1814.

HARLEY, ROBERT, earl of Oxford and Mortimer, disting. as a statesman in the reign of Queen Anne, and in conjunction with the celeb. Bolingbroke, was born 1661. He became speaker of the House of Commons in 1700, privy councillor and secretary of state 1704, chancellor 1710, and lord high treasurer, after his elevation to the peerage, from 1711 to 1715, when he received his dismissal.

The principal event of his administration was the peace of Utrecht concluded 1713, and he took no share in public business after his retirement. He was a great patron of literature, and author of some political pamphlets, but deficient in nearly all the qualities of statesmanship. From 1715 to 1717 he was confined in the Tower with an impeachment over his head, but was finally acquitted. He died in 1724. [E.R.]

HARLOW, G. H., an Eng. painter, 1787-1819.

HARMAR, JOHN, a class. trans., 1594-1670.

HARMENOPULUS, CONSTANTINE, a Germ. jurisconsult, grand chancellor of Constantinople in the reign of John Palæologus, 1320-1383.

HARMER, THOMAS, a dissenting minister, au. of 'Observations on the Scriptures,' 1715-1788.

HARO, DON LUIS DE, a Spanish statesman, the minister and favourite of Philip IV., 1598-1661.

HAROLD, the first of the name king of England, succeeded his father Canute the Great 1035, died 1039; the second of the name, son of Godwin, earl of Kent, usurped the throne 1066, and was vanquished the same year by William the Conqueror, and killed at the battle of Hastings.

HAROUN-AL-RASCHID, in English 'Aaron the Just,' a renowned caliph of Bagdad, contemporary with Charlemagne and the empress Irene, was born in Media 765, and succeeded his elder brother as fifth caliph of the Abasside dynasty in 786. He had already acquired immense popularity by his victories over the Greeks, and had made Irene a tributary of the caliphate. He now raised the empire of the Arabs to its highest pitch of grandeur, uniting the talents of a philosopher to those of a conqueror, and, like Charlemagne in the West, making his court the centre of arts and letters, and the refuge of men of learning from all parts of the Eastern empire. The Arabs never tire of their eulogisms upon the magnificence, generosity, and wisdom of this prince, as all the world has read in the 'Arabian Nights' Entertainments.' His reign was the Augustan era of the Arabian dominion, and his imaginative subjects have celebrated it as the age of enchantment and miracle. After the death of Irene, Haroun-Al-Raschid humbled her successor, the Emperor Nicephorus, still more deeply, made immense conquests among the Turks and other tribes of Asia, and subjugated the sect of Ali in his hereditary dominions. He died in 809, leaving his vast possessions divided under his three sons, which prepared the way for endless jealousies, and produced many civil commotions in after years. Haroun not only promoted learning and the arts in his dominions, but he was himself a poet, and was easily moved to tears by the recital of poetry. Yet he was often cruel, because, like a true child of the East, he was impulsive, and severe because politic. [E.R.]

HARPALUS, a Greek astronomer, 5th ct. B.C.

HARPALUS, the Greek governor of Babylon, appointed by Alexander the Great, killed 325 B.C.

HARPE, JOHN FR. DE LA. See LAHARPE.

HARPHIUS, H., a Flemish mystic, died 1478.

HARPSFELD, JOHN, an English prelate and religious wr., died 1578. His brother, NICHOLAS, a Greek scholar and ecclesiast. historian, d. 1583.

HARRIMAN, J., an Engl. botanist, 1760-1831.

HARRINGTON, H., a phy. and poet, 1729-1816.

HARRINGTON, J., a political wr., 1611-1677.

HARRINGTON, J., a lawyer and scholar, author of the life of Dr. Stradling, 1664-1693.

HARRINGTON, SIR J., an English poet, author of 'Epigrams and Letters,' 1561-1612.

HARRINGTON, JOHN, Lord, guardian of Elizabeth, daugh. of James I., and the friend and correspondent of Henry prince of Wales, 1591-1613.

HARRIOT, TH., an astronomer, 1560-1621.

HARRIS, G., a philological writer, died 1796.

HARRIS, GENERAL LORD GEORGE, a British officer, dist. in the Amer. war and India, 1759-1829.

HARRIS, J., a Gr. scholar and philos., known as a writer on art and the philosophy of language, 1709-1780. His son, of the same name, first earl of Malmesbury, a diplomat. and hist. wr., 1746-1820.

HARRIS, JOHN, a divine and mathematician, well kn. as the first projector and editor of a cyclopædia or dictionary of the sciences, died 1719.

HARRIS, WALTER, a medical writer, b. 1647.

HARRIS, W., author of sermons, died 1740.

HARRIS, W., a biographical writer, died 1770

HARRISON, J., inventor of the sea chronometer, for which he received a government premium of £20,000, 1693-1776.

HARRISON, JOHN, a general of the parliamentary army, executed after the restoration, 1670.

HARRISON, T., a dist. architect, 1744-1829.

HARRISON, WILLIAM HENRY, president of the United States, 1773-1844.

HART, G. V., a British officer, 1752-1832.

HARTE, WALTER, a poet and essayist, author of a history of Gustavus Adolphus, died 1773.

HARTLEY, DAVID, an English metaphysician of some note; born 1705 at Armley in Yorkshire; died in Bath 1757. Hartley's well-known, or rather, much-heard-of, work, entitled 'Observations on Man, his Frame, his Duty, and his Expectations,' occupies 3 volumes 8vo. It consists of three distinct parts. Adopting the sensational theory of the origin of human knowledge to its fullest extent—resolving Mr. Locke's 'Reflection' into a modification of sensation,—he endeavours first to explain all sensations and ideas, by material agency, viz., hypothetical vibrations of a hypothetical fluid, connected with the nervous system. It is not improbable that Hartley esteemed this theory of vibrations, his most important speculation: happily for the permanence of his repute he contributed to Psychology something much more valuable than one of those countless fancies, bubbling up in every age, but which attain no place in the History of Science. It is probably indisputable that since Aristotle's time the Law of Association, and its sway over the succession of mental phenomena, had not been so thoroughly studied or fully exposed as in the second division of Hartley's treatise. Hobbes and Locke had done little more than assert this great Law; but Hartley unfolded it with a clearness which left little to be desired. The last portion of the 'Observations' is occupied with discourses on human duty and virtue, on our relation to God, and hopes of a future life. Carried out logically, the materialistic views of the writer, on the fundamental problem as to the origin of Ideas, can never fail to issue in a scheme of simple negations on all these momentous theories: fortunately, however, Hartley's 'instincts' prevailed over his logic, and he has bequeathed much that is excellent and true. It cannot be denied however, that his book as a whole is rather a set of dissertations, than a compact treatise: its scientific value being confined to its illustration of the Law already referred to.—Hartley's life and character were beyond reproach. He was cheerful, placid, and actively benevolent. The Heart is often a trusty safeguard of the Head, amid the perils of Speculation. [J.P.N.]

HARTLEY, DAVID, son of the celebrated philosopher, dist. as a practi. man of science, 1729-1813.

HARTLEY, THOMAS, rector of Winwick in Northamptonshire, known as a pious and learned divine, author of 'A Discourse on the Kinds of Enthusiasm and Religious Experiences,' 'An Account of the Mystic Writers.' 'Paradise Regained,' 'Sermons,' &c. In the latter part of his life he became the personal friend of Swedenborg, and the first translator of many of his works, 1707-1784.

HARTSOEKER, NICHOLAS, a Dutch physician and experimental philosopher, 1656-1725.

HARTUNGUS, JOHN, a Germ. transl., d. 1579.

HARTZHEIM, JOS., a Ger. savant, 1694-1763.

HARVARD, JOHN, a nonconformist divine, and founder of a college in North America, died 1688.

HARVEST, G., author of sermons, died 1776.

HARVEY, SIR ELIAB, a British admiral, descended from the illustrious Wm. Harvey, d. 1830.

HARVEY, GABRIEL, a lawyer and poet, about 1545-1630. His brothers, JOHN and RICHARD, known as writers on judicial astrology, &c.

HARVEY, GIDEON, a physician, died 1700.

HARVEY, WILLIAM, M.D., the discoverer of the circulation of the blood, was born at Folkstone, Kent, A.D. 1578, and died in London, A.D. 1657, aged seventy-nine years.—This remarkable man, whose name is indissolubly associated with one of the most important discoveries ever made in physiological science, was educated first at the grammar school of Canterbury, and subsequently at Caius College, Cambridge, where he spent five years. He afterwards travelled through Germany and France, and proceeding thence to Italy, he fixed himself at Padua, the medical school of which city had at that time a high reputation, and there he became the pupil of Fabricius ab Aquapendente, the most distinguished anatomist of his age, from whom he acquired a knowledge of the valvular structure of the veins, which laid the foundation of his future fame. In 1602 he returned to England and began to practise as a physician in London; and in 1615 he was appointed professor of anatomy and surgery to the Royal College of Physicians. There can be no doubt that his particular opinions on the mechanism of the circulation were formed long before, but they were first publicly announced from the chair of the college to which he was now attached in the year 1616. We cannot enter into anatomical and physiological details in this place, and it must suffice to say, that Harvey for the first time demonstrated the double function of the heart in sending out blood from the left side, through the arteries, over the whole body, and in receiving it back by the veins to the right side, whence it is propelled into the lungs, where it loses its impurities, and is again rendered fit for use. This elementary truth, which is so familiar to us, was new in those days, and as it was opposed to the prevailing ideas upon the subject, it was regarded by his contemporaries as an audacious novelty; and for upwards of twenty years the propounder of this doctrine was assailed by every species of detraction and calumny. He had the good fortune, however, to survive these attacks, and to see his views universally adopted before his death; nor would it be easy to find a better instance of the application of the principles of the inductive philosophy to the investigation of natural phenomena than that supplied by the use which Harvey made of his knowledge of the internal structure of the veins, which, even in the hands of his master Fabricius, had been wholly unproductive. The veins have a feeble and imperceptible contractile power, if they have any at all, and Harvey at once saw that the valves were placed in these vessels to prevent the reflux of the blood in its progress back to the heart, and out of this conclusion mainly arose the discovery of the true theory of the circulation, with all its important consequences. Of this there can be no doubt, for there still exists in the museum of the College of Physicians six tabular views, as large as life, showing this peculiar structure of the veins, which were executed by him or to his order, and which were presented to that learned body by his collateral descendant, the earl of Winchelsea.—His right to the merit of this great discovery is incontestible, yet there have been those in modern times who have disputed it, and who have asserted that he was anticipated in his conclusions by several of the anatomists of the ancient world, and by some of his more immediate predecessors. The passages collected from the writings of antiquity by the diligence of such authors as Dutens go for nothing in an inquiry into the existence of a great physical fact, and touch Harvey's claims to the smallest possible extent; but one name deserves to be mentioned in connection with this subject, to wit, that of the celebrated and unfortunate Michael Servetus, the Spanish physician, whom Calvin and his consistory burned for heresy at Geneva. In the year 1553, a quarter of a century before Harvey was born, Servetus published a theological treatise, in which some singular passages occur on the functions of the heart and lungs, which, though vague, would seem to indicate that he had an obscure idea of the pulmonic circulation and its uses; but such loose speculations as Servetus indulged in cannot for a moment be compared to the severe methods and rigid deductions of Harvey, who took nothing for granted that could be experimentally proved. One of his rules was, that 'Nature herself is the most faithful interpreter of her own secrets' (De Generatione Animalium). He consulted her oracles and discovered the truth.—Harvey was physician successively to James I. and to his son, Charles I. In the train of the latter he visited Scotland in 1633, and he has left an account of an excursion which he made on that occasion to the Bass Rock, in the Frith of Forth; and having adhered to the fortunes of his patron, he was present, though not as a combatant, but as the guardian of the two young princes, Charles and James, at the battle of Edgehill, in 1642. During the fight he employed himself by reading a book under a hedge, but a large cannon ball grazing the ground close to him while he was so occupied, he removed with his charge to a distance from the scene of action. In 1651 his residence at Whitehall was plundered, and his manuscripts destroyed, a loss which he ever after deplored, as they contained the results of the experiments of a life. His works are not numerous, but they are valuable; and his treatise on the Generation of Animals is still a standard book. He died worth £20,000, which he bequeathed to his brother, Mr. Eliab Harvey, with the exception of a yearly sum of £56 for the annual delivery of an oration at the College of Physicians, which is still known as the Harveian oration. He was diminutive in stature, with a small, round, but expressive black eye. His temper was naturally choleric, and was rendered perhaps more so by severe attacks of the gout; and in his philosophical sentiments he is believed to have inclined to the opinions of his friend Hobbes, to whom he left a legacy of £10. There is a tradition that he destroyed himself by an over-dose of opium, to avoid the pain of a fit of his habitual malady; but this story is now discredited, as it has been ascertained that he died of a slight shock of paralysis, which his aged and feeble frame could not withstand. [J.M'C.]

HARWOOD, Sir Baswick, an English physician and writer on anatomy and physiology, d. 1814.

HARWOOD, E., a disting. divine, 1729-1794.

HASDRUBAL. See Asdrubal.

HASE, Theodore, a German theologian and biblical commentator, 1689-1731. His son, James, a classical writer, died 1723.

HASENMULLER, Daniel, a Ger. Orientalist, author of 'Janua Hebraismi Aperta,' 1651-1691.

HASLEWOOD, Joseph, one of the founders and editors of the Roxburgh Club, and the collector of a large library of black letter lore and Elizabethan poetry, 1769-1833.

HASSAN, a grandson of Mahomet, born 625, caliph after the murder of Ali, 660, died 661.

HASSAN-PACHA, grand vizier of the Ottoman emp., and a dist. military command., d. 1790.

HASSE, J. A., a Germ. composer, 1705-1783.

HASSEL, J. G. H., a Ger. geogra., 1770-1829.

HASSELQUIST, Frederic, a Swedish botanist, au. of a 'Journey to the Holy Land,' 1722-52.

HASTED, Edw., historian of Kent, 1732-1812.

HASTING, a Danish adventurer, died 890.

HASTINGS, Lady Eliza., dau. of the earl of Huntingdon, founder of schools, &c., 1682-1789.

HASTINGS, Francis Rawdon, son of the earl of Moira, born 1754, distinguished as a British officer in the American war, in Holland, and the East Indies, and governor-general of India from 1812 to 1822, governor of Malta 1824, died marquis of Hastings 1826.

HASTINGS, Warren, was born in 1733. He was the son of obscure parents, but he claimed an ancient and renowned descent, and from his early childhood it was his ambition to win back the domains of his ancestors. He was educated at Westminster School, and in 1750 was appointed a writer in the service of the East India Company. In the emergency through which the ability and valour of Clive saved the British possessions, his capacity was seen while the obscure clerk carried a musket as a volunteer, and he was chosen diplomatic agent at the Durbar. After having remained fourteen years in India he returned to Britain, still comparatively obscure; but his talents were remembered, and after being named second in council in Madras, he was, in 1774, appointed to the newly-created dignity of governor-general of Bengal. The bold measures which he took to defend the British interests from Hyder Ally is one of the great epochs in the history of the British Eastern Empire. By its audacious and somewhat unscrupulous character, his career startled and alarmed British statesmen on the morality of the policy which guided the British system in the Eastern Peninsula, and he was recalled to meet the celebrated impeachment moved by Burke on 4th April, 1786. The trial was begun on 13th February, 1788, when, according to Mr. Macaulay, 'The high court of Parliament was to sit according to forms handed down from the days of the Plantagenets, on an Englishman accused of exercising tyranny over the lord of the holy city of Benares, and the ladies of the princely house of Oude.' Political events turned public attention into other channels during the impeachment, and when it had been almost forgotten it ended in an acquittal in April, 1795. He spent his old age in retirement; the injury which his fortunes received by the expense of his defence being but partially remedied by the gratitude of the East Indian Company. He had a taste for letters, and wrote some secondary works now forgotten. He died on 22d August, 1818. [J.H.B.]

HATCHER, Thomas, an editor of the 16th ct.

HATFIELD, Thomas, bp. of Durham, secretary of Edward III., and companion-in-arms of Percy and Ralph Nevill, died 1381.

HATSELL, John, chief clerk of the House of Commons, and a writer on parliamentary subjects, 1733-1820.

HATTO, or ATTO-VERCELLENSIS, an Ital. prelate, known as an ecclesiastical writer, 10th ct.

HATTON, Sir Christopher, a courtier and dramatic writer, chancellor in 1587, died 1591.

HAUBER, E. D., a German historian, 1715-63.

HAUBOLD, C. C., a Germ. jurist, 1766-1824.

HAUFF, Wilhelm, a German prose writer, author of 'The Man in the Moon,' 'Extracts from the Memoirs of the Devil,' &c., 1802-1827.

HAUG, J. C. F., a German poet, 1761-1829.

HAUGWITZ, Chr. Henry Charles, count of, the Prussian statesman who signed the treaty of Pilnitz, born 1758, retired 1806, died 1832.

HAUKSBEE, Francis, an English philosopher known for his experiments in electricity, last cent.

HAULTIN, J. B., a Fr. numismatist, 1580-164[illegible]

HAUSER, Gaspard, a mysterious boy found in Nuremberg 1828, assassinated 1832.

HAUTEFEUILLE, John De, a Fr. physician and mechanic., au. of curious treatises, 1647-17[illegible]

HAUTERIVE, Maurice, Count De, a French diplomatist and political writer, 1754-1830.

HAUTEROCHE, Noel Le Breton De, French dramatic poet and actor, 1617-1707.

HAUY, Rene Just, a celebrated mineralogist, was born at Saint Just in 1743. He died in 18[illegible]—Sprung from poor parents, who were not able to give him an education, his excellent behaviour while a child, attracted the notice of some benevolent individuals in his native town, who induced his mother to take him to Paris. After some little time his kind friends obtained him a bursary at the College of Navarre. When he had completed his Gallini, then manager of the King's theatre, Haymarket, and at which period he produced the remaining six of his 'Grand Symphonies.' While in London, the greatness of his genius, and the amiability of his manners, brought him many friends, and rendered his success quite triumphant. At the close of this engagement Haydn returned to Vienna, and never afterwards left it. In 1795, Haydn commenced the composition of his 'Creation,' and was two whole years employed upon it. On one occasion, when asked why the Oratorio was not finished, Haydn answered with the utmost tranquillity 'I am long about it, because I wish it to last long.' This wish was a prophecy, his 'Creation' will last for ever. The 'Creation' was brought out in 1798, and two years afterwards he gave to the world his 'Seasons.' The last great work upon which his genius exerted himself, was two sets of quartetts. In his latter years he employed himself in setting accompaniments to some Scotch airs for the late Mr. George Thomson of Edinburgh. In 1805, he, by the advice of his physician, gave up all study, and from this time he never left his villa at Gumpendorff. The closing scene of this great composer's life was not less remarkable than his career was illustrious. The last time he appeared in public was at the performance of the 'Creation,' which was honoured by the presence of more than 1,500 people, amongst whom were many of the nobles and princes of Austria. 'Surrounded by the nobility of Vienna and his friends, by artists, by lovely women, whose eyes were fixed upon him, listening to the praises of God, which he himself had imagined, Haydn bid a glorious adieu to the world.' Soon after this, war broke out between France and Austria; this intelligence vexed him and exhausted the last remains of his strength. 'The French armies advanced rapidly, and on the 10th of May, 1809, having reached Schonbrunn about half a league distant from Haydn's villa, they fired next morning hundreds of cannon shot upon Vienna, that city so much beloved by him. Four bombs having fallen close to his house, his two servants, with terror depicted in their countenances, ran to him; the old man, by an effort, rose from his arm-chair, and with a dignified air, cried, 'Why such alarm! know that, where Haydn is, no evil can happen.' But this exertion was beyond his strength; a convulsive shivering prevented him adding more, and he was immediately conveyed to bed. On the 26th of May, he was almost completely exhausted; notwithstanding, he had his piano moved towards him, and sung three times with a voice as loud as he could, 'God save the Emperor.' These were his last words. At his piano he became insensible, and he expired on the morning of the 31st. Haydn was very religious. The commencement of all his scores are inscribed with one of the following mottoes 'In Nomine Domini,' or 'Soli Deo Gloria,' and at the end of them all 'Laus Deo.' His works are exceedingly numerous in all classes. Among them are 116 symphonies, 83 violin quartetts, 60 pianoforte sonatas, 15 masses, 4 oratorios, a grand 'Te Deum,' a 'Stabat Mater,' 14 Italian and German operas, 42 duets and canzonets, and 200 divertimentos for particular instruments. [J.M.]

HAYDON, Benjamin Robert, was born at Plymouth, 23d January, 1786; his father was a bookseller, and he was educated in early youth at Plympton Grammar School, where Sir Joshua Reynolds had been brought up. Haydon determined upon becoming a painter, contrary to the wishes of his parents. His father, however, assisted him for several years in the metropolis: he visited London in 1804, and became a pupil of the Royal Academy in 1805. He had the advantage of the acquaintance of Northcote, Opie, and Fuseli, as advisers, and of Jackson and Wilkie as fellow-pupils. His ambitious views of art were early developed: in 1807 he exhibited a picture of the 'Flight into Egypt,' purchased by Mr. Hope, which procured him a commission from Lord Mulgrave for 'Dentatus,' a picture which, from the dissatisfaction he felt at its being placed in the ante-room in the Royal Academy Exhibition of 1809, appears to have been the first cause of most of his subsequent trouble, for not imagining that others might not think so highly of the picture as he did himself, he made the supposed injustice a cause of quarrel with the Academy, and the notion of injustice, or rather owing to his inordinate vanity, a conspiracy to suppress him, developed itself into a monomania, and possessed his mind the whole of his life. Dentatus has been admirably engraved in wood by his pupil Harvey. — The encouragement, however, which Haydon got from Lord Mulgrave, both social and professional, gave a great impulse to his exertions, and Dentatus was succeeded by a considerable series of great works. He now, to make up some deficiencies of execution, devoted himself for half a year to the practice of portrait painting at Plymouth, and after his return to London he became an enthusiastic student of the Elgin Marbles, then recently brought from Greece; the excellence of which he professes to have been the first to point out to the British public, rather naively overlooking the claims of Lord Elgin himself, who had spent £52,000 in securing them and bringing them to England.—The following are Haydon's principal works in the order of their production:— In 1812 'Macbeth,' for Sir George Beaumont; in 1814 the 'Judgment of Solomon,' for which he was voted the freedom of his native town, and in this year he visited Paris; in 1820 'Christ's Entry into Jerusalem,' (now in America,) which produced him nearly £3,000 by its exhibition alone, in London, Edinburgh, and Glasgow; in 1821 'Christ's Agony in the Garden,' (in this year he was married); in 1823 'The Raising of Lazarus,' (now at the Pantheon,) in this year he was arrested for debt, and passed through the Insolvent Court; in 1826 'Pharaoh Dismissing the Israelites,' and 'Venus and Anchises; in 1827 'Alexander and Bucephalus,' for Lord Egremont, and 'Eucles;' in 1828 'The Mock Election in the King's Bench,' purchased by George IV.; in 1830 'Napoleon at St. Helena,' for Sir Robert Peel, a picture he afterwards repeated in small nearly thirty times; in 1832 'Xenophon's First Sight of the Sea,' in the retreat with the 10,000; in 1834 'The Reform Banquet,' for Lord Grey, 'Cassandra,' and 'Waiting for the Times;' in 1835 'Achilles at the Court of Lycomedes Discovering his Sex;' in 1836 'Samson and Delilah,' (this year he passed a second time through the Insolvent Court;) in 1838 'Christ Blessing Little Children,' for Liverpool; in 1839

'The Duke at Waterloo,' also for Liverpool; in 1840 he lectured (gratis) at the Ashmolean Museum, Oxford, and henceforth his time was divided between lecturing and painting; he found the former the more profitable pursuit, his lectures are published; in 1841 'The Anti-Slavery Convention,' and 'The Maid of Saragossa;' in 1842 'Curtius Leaping into the Gulf;' in 1843 the cartoon of the 'Entry of the Black Prince into London,' with King John of France prisoner; this was in competition for Westminster Hall, in which Haydon failed, a failure which some of his friends supposed to have been fatal to him; in 1844 'Alexander Killing the Lion,' and a large repetition of 'Napoleon at St. Helena,' which was purchased by the king of Hanover; in 1845 'Uriel and Satan;' and lastly, in 1846 the 'Banishment of Aristides,' and 'Nero Watching the Burning of Rome,' representing the evils both of democracy and of despotism: these last were two of a series of six which he had designed years ago, for the illustration of the old House of Lords.—These pictures Haydon exhibited as usual, but he was unusually unsuccessful with them. He had often lost by his exhibitions, but sometimes had gained large sums, as in the case of 'Christ's Entry into Jerusalem;' in this last exhibition he lost £111 11s. 5d., and this loss at a time when he was penniless, added to his deep disappointment at not being employed in the decoration of the Houses, at last overcame his all but indomitable energy, and he destroyed himself on the 22d of June of this year, 1846. One of the latest entries in his diary is:—'Tom Thumb had 12,000 people last week, B. R. Haydon, 133½ (the ½ a little girl). Exquisite taste of the English people.'—It may be supposed by some that Haydon was a martyr to his love of what is termed High Art; the facts of his life show anything but this. He began his career with almost unexampled encouragement, and appears even at all times to have found friends, who gave and lent him considerable sums of money, from £50 to £1,000, and his professional receipts were by no means small; from the years 1831 to 1836 inclusive, he received from this source alone £4,617 2s. 3d., an average of £750 per annum; yet he was always in difficulties sufficient to have harassed most men to death in as many months as Haydon endured them years: his debts amounted to about £3,000 at his death. The cause of common justice renders these details imperative, both from the extraordinary circumstances of Haydon's death, and his habitual accusations against the Academy for its jealous tyranny, and the people for their hopeless want of taste. Haydon had no other enemy than himself; he appears to have been wholly wanting in common sense; his ambition was so excessive that it destroyed his judgment, and his extraordinary energy wanted that counterbalancing ability to insure a real artistic success: he was impulsive and desultory, mistook the will for the deed, and neglected the commonest elements of excellence in execution; he was extremely mannered; with the exception of a large style of design (indicated, not executed), and a warm and powerful colouring, we miss every other requisite of a fine picture; yet such was his extraordinary vanity, that he identified the fate of the art of his country with that of his own efforts, and assumed all progress to have proceeded from himself, while perhaps no individual artist ever had less influence on the taste of his time, or even that of his own pupils, who do not retain a single trace of his style; indeed, Sir Charles Eastlake, Sir Edwin Landseer, and Lance, the fruit painter, Haydon's principal scholars, illustrate three as opposed paths, as the whole province of painting could possibly display.—(See Memoirs of B. R. Haydon from his Journals. Longman, 1853.) [R.N.W.]

HAYER, J. N. H., a Fr. relig. writer, 1718-80.

HAYES, Ch., an Eng. mathema., 1678-1760.

HAYES, W., a musical composer, 1708-1777.

HAYGARTH, J., a medical author, d. 1813.

HAYLEY, W., a poet and mis. wr., 1745-1820.

HAYM, N. F., an Ital. numismatist, 1670-1730.

HAYMAN, F., an English painter, 1708-1776.

HAYMO, a German commentator, died 853.

HAYNAU, Jules De, an Austrian general noted for his cruelty to the Hungarians in 1849, 1786-1853.

HAYNE, F. G., a Germ. botanist, 1763-1832.

HAYNE, Isaac, a colonel in the American army, executed by the English as a traitor 1781.

HAYNE, Th., a learned divine, 16th century.

HAYTON, the first of the name, k. of Armenia, 1224-1268; the second, 1289-1308.

HAYTON, an Armenian historian, died 1310.

HAYWARD, Sir J., an Eng. historian, d. 1627.

HAYWOOD, Elizabeth, a miscel. writer, author of 'The Female Spectator,' &c., 1693-1756.

HAZAEL, a king of Syria, 9th century B.C.

HAZLITT, William, a well-known essayist and critic of art and poetry, was the son of a unitarian minister, and was born at Maidstone 1778. He was in early life an artist, but not satisfied with his attainments in this profession, he came to London and commenced the career of an author in 1803, from which time till his death in 1830, he was constantly before the public as a journalist and miscellaneous writer. His largest work is the 'Life of Napoleon,' in 4 vols., but he is most esteemed for the philosophical spirit of his criticisms. His literary remains, with a biographical memoir, were published by his son shortly after his death.

HEADLEY, H., an English poet, 1766-1788.

HEAPY, T., a water-colour painter, 1775-1835.

HEARNE, S., an English navigator, 1735-92.

HEARNE, T., an Eng. antiquar., 1680-1735.

HEARNE, T., an archit. engraver, 1744-1817.

HEATH, Benj., a learned writer, last century.

HEATH, James, an historical writer, 1629-64.

HEATH, Jas., a dist. engraver, 1756-1834. His son, Charles, also an em. engraver, 1784-1848.

HEATH, Nicholas, archbishop of York and chancel. of Engld. in the reign of Q. Mary, d. 1560.

HEATHCOTE, R., a miscel. writer, 1721-1795.

HEBEL, J. P., a German poet, 1760-1818.

HEBER, or EBER, a patriarch of Syria, from whom it is supposed the Hebrews derive their name (Genesis x. 24).

HEBER, Reginald, a learned clergyman of the Church of England, 1728-1804. His son, of the same name, the well-known bishop of Calcutta, distinguished as a poet and essayist, 1783-1826. Richard, half-brother of Bishop Heber, known as a learned editor, 1773-1833.

HEBERDEN, William, M.D., F.R.S., a learned and distinguished English physician, was born at London in 1710. After the usual preliminary education at the Grammar School of St. Saviour, which he entered at the early age of seven, and where he remained till 1724, he was transferred to St. John's College, Cambridge. Here he graduated as B.A. in 1728, and as A.M. in 1732; and having resolved to follow medicine as a profession, he obtained his degree as M.D. in that university in 1739. He practised as a physician at Cambridge, giving lectures on materia medica at the same time in the university till the year 1746, when he removed to London, where he speedily attained to great eminence, and where he continued to reside ever afterwards. He died in Pall Mall on the 17th of May, 1801, in the ninety-first year of his age. Dr. Heberden was one of the best classical scholars of his time, and one of the most perfectly instructed medical men England has ever possessed. It was to a suggestion of his that the 'Medical Transactions' owe their origin, and he contributed to the first three volumes of that valuable publication many important papers; he is best known, however, by his 'Commentaries on the History and Cure of Disease,' a posthumous work, published by his son in 1802. [J.M'C.]

HEBERT, a French writer, 13th century.

HEBERT, James Rene, one of the Jacobin leaders of the French revolution, commonly called 'Père Duchesne,' from the name of his journal, was born at Alençon towards 1755, and executed with his accomplices Chaumette, Anacharsis Cloots, and others, on the 24th of March, 1794. He was the most brutal journalist of the period, and played a leading part in every conspiracy against the establishment of law and order, and in the detestable massacres of September, 1792. On the 10th of August preceding he had been installed among the magistrates of the people at the Hotel de Ville, and from this period he laboured to exalt the municipal authority above that of the convention. The Girondins were sacrificed in the struggle which ensued, but Robespierre and the Committee of Public Safety only awaited a proper opportunity, and arrested the party of Hébert, at the very moment they were threatening a new insurrection. The followers of Hébert and Chaumette, generally called 'Hébertists,' were atheists, and their leaders were as obscene and cruel in outward conduct as they were irreligious in heart. The charge on which they were executed was that of endeavouring to destroy the republic by immorality. [E.R.]

HECART, G. A. J., a Fr. philologist, 1755-1838.

HECHT, Christian, a Ger. divine, 1696-1748.

HECHT, Godfrey, a learned writer, d. 1721.

HECKEL, J. F., a Ger. philologist, d. 1715.

HECQUET, P., a Fr. med. author, 1661-1737.

HEDERIC, Benjamin, a German philologist, au. of a well-known Greek Lexicon, 1675-1748.

HEDIN, Sueno Andrew, a Swedish physician, and author of medical works, 1750-1821.

HEDGES, Sir Ch., a min. of state, d. 1714.

HEDIO, Gaspar, a Ger. reformer, 1495-1552.

HEDWIG, John, a Ger. botanist, 1730-1799.

HEDWIGA, a queen of Poland, 1371-1399.

HEDWIGA, St., a religious founder, d. 1243.

HEEM, J. De, a Dutch painter, 1600-1674.

HEEMSKIRCK, Martin Van Veen or, a Dutch painter, time of Michelangelo, 1498-1574.

HEEN, Chris., a Swiss numismatist, 1715-69.

HEENE, Lucas De, a Flem. paint.,

HEEREN, Arnold Hermann L learned professor and historian of Ger.,

HEERKENS, G. N., a Germ. poet,

HEGEL, George William Frede at Stuttgardt 1770, died at Berlin, in the fame, November 14, 1831. A philoso power and renown remind one of traditio ing a Pythagoras: he created a Schoo numbering in its ranks his most di contemporaries, but exciting a whole influence of Hegel diffused itself throu tics and religion, as well as through all lation of Germany. The principles on remarkable thinker constructed his syste fold. First, his discovery, or alleged d a universal law according to which Thou itself—the fundamental and sole law of Every thing or notion, says Hegel, ex mind, because it has, or is seen to have dictory: in other words, there is some or notion standing out right against opposition marking it off, or defining tion and its opposite, or contradictor elements essential to every act of thinki soon as these are realized, a third act or supervenes—viz., the effort to reconcile t tradictories, or to find some third, an higher notion, in which they unite Three elements, therefore,—a notion, dictory, and the solution of the contr a thesis, its anti-thesis, and the syn-thesi —represent a complete act of logic, or ment of dialectic; and on the type of this Hegel undertook to explain the entire action of Thought in its efforts to comp Universe. It were not easy to over-e surprising skill with which a task so no duous has been executed: in this respect 'Encyclopædia of Philosophical Science be a marvel. Thought is presented to ished reader, rising up from its barest through a gigantic scheme of ascendi until, having comprehended every form of possible knowledge, it reaches the A the Infinite. The attempt has indeed failure was as necessary and has been that of Babel; nevertheless, in makin had successes that might have achieved many minds instead of one: he has t on the methods and relationships of seve ments of knowledge, that will abide com his name, as a rare and beneficent cont philosophy. Secondly, Hegel's next yet more distinctive, is also mor Schelling before him had spoken of the the necessarily existing Unity—blending t whole variety of thought and things; b solute he deemed an Essence, not irreconc the notion of God. Hegel resolved th unintelligible—no obscure residuum—ab in philosophy. What, he asked, is Reali is the thing truly known, in the Cog Cartes? Is it other than Thought? self or my existence, because I think to the external world, as men term it, monstrated it a mere modification of th principle;—what is it too, then, save a of Thought? What need in such a case and Substances? Thought is at once Knowledge and Existence; the Ideal is the true and only Real. And so disappear for ever, unknown quantities or substances from philosophy; and science at last is adequate! Singular as this principle, taken by itself, must look to the English reader, the consequences of its union with Hegel's first assumption, are still more astounding. If the knowledge of Things can be expressed or referred to one universal movement of dialectic, are not Things themselves—all the reality we can reach—simply the evolution of Thought, according to this movement? In other words, does not Dialectic represent, nay create by its movements, all that we call the Universe? At this point Hegel starts farthest away from Schelling. Schelling's Absolute was primary, the great first and ultimate principle necessary to harmonize the variety of existence: according to Hegel the Absolute is evolved—created as well as risen to, by Thought;—God, in short, is not the discovery, but the law of dialectic; and exists nowhere nor in any manner, apart from our human consciousness! It is needful in candour to warn the student, that he must not judge of the verisimilitude of a scheme so extraordinary, by this barest outline. No remarkable system of thought, can fairly be separated from its details, inasmuch as these are the bridge by which alone we can pass over from ordinary modes of contemplation; and it will not be concluded that the high genius of Hegel failed to provide the strong semblance of such a bridge, seeing that multitudes of the keenest thinkers in Germany not only became passionate adherents of his doctrine, but put their sincerity to the test, by accepting all its practical conclusions. It were evidently out of the question to attempt here a formal criticism of Hegelianism: nevertheless there are a few general remarks on the whole set of these 'Philosophies of the Absolute,' which, from our British point of view, it may not be unfitting to venture, as the conclusion of this article. (See art. SCHELLING.) 1. There is one meaning and application of the term Absolute, legitimized and accepted in this country, which must be carefully distinguished from the common significance of the same term in Germany. Truths fundamental to, and inseparable from our human nature, are in our English phraseology, absolute, to that Nature: in other words, we must accept these as ultimate and inviolable conditions of human thought—expressive, as to speak, of the structure of that physical and psychical fabric, which is the composite being, Man. A transcendental philosophy of the Absolute, on the other hand, is not a philosophy aspiring to discern and rest on truths of the nature of the foregoing; but one which aims at grasping, defining, and unfolding the absolute principle of the whole universe: not a transcendental philosophy aspiring to discern the existence of a Primal Cause, a substratum and providence; but to apprehend the whole structure of that prime efficiency, to formalize it, and deduce from it the necessity of all that has been, that is, and that shall unfold. To Man, such a philosophy is simply unattainable. On the vexed question, whether it is possible to effect the transition from Metaphysics to Ontology—to infer from the existence of necessary truths, the existence of corresponding realities—one may hold by the affirmative with all tenacity, and yet repeat the assertion that a philosophy with such aims is utterly unattainable. From the intellectual and moral constitution of Humanity it may be legitimate to conclude something concerning the attributes of the Primal Cause: but to fathom the nature of the Cause, is beyond reach of all those faculties that belong to us. Humanity is but one force among myriads—one solitary though rich and potent Monad—and it cannot encircle or comprehend the Infinite. Nay, this is manifested, by the very progressiveness of our own nature. What is absolute to us, we reach by Intuition; and there is no part of humanity so educable as the Intuitive faculty. In the growth of this power lies the secret of the growth of civilization: and evidence abounds, that what we now discern of absolute or intuitive truth, is far from the measure of what may one day be accessible, without any transcendence of the sphere of Humanity. How vain then, how vainly audacious the attempt, through our present or realized insight, to reach the ultimate depths of Being! 2. To whatever extent we can discern the Absolute or Infinite, it clearly must be through reliance in the first place on those ultimate elements or constituents of human thought: and as well in logic, as in masonry, it were fatal to remove the foundation scaffolding, simply because we have ascended several stages above it. But, these philosophies of the absolute, destroy the foundation on which alone they can rest: the logical scheme of Hegel obliterates as entirely, human liberty, human personality, human morality in every one of its directest consequences, as the lowest materialistic systems. It is thus a practical paralogism, and issues in a defiance of that very Cogito of Des Cartes, to which at the outset it professes unquestioning allegiance. These irremediable defects inhere in most of our recent transcendental systems; which are liable, besides, to equally fatal specific objections. It is gratifying to know, that in Germany itself, they seem to have run their course; and that modern thinkers, with aspirations humbler but more real, are now working out the various invaluable hints which their founders have thrown, on themes sufficiently promising, such as the Philosophy of History. Hegel's works have been collected and published in a great many volumes by the most eminent of his disciples. [J.P.N.]

HEGESIPPUS, an ecclesiasti. historian, 2d ct.

HEGEWISCH, T., a Germ. histor., 1760-1815.

HEIDEGGER, J. H., a Swiss theologian and historian, an. of 'Historia Papatus,' &c., 1633-98.

HEIM, ERNEST, L., a German medical writer, 1747-1834. His brother, J. L. HEIM, a mineralogist, and writer on Thuringia, 1741-1819.

HEIN, PETER, a Dutch captain, 17th century.

HEINE, H., a German author, 1797-1847.

HEINECCIUS, JOHN GOTLIEB, a German lawyer, and antiquarian writer, 1681-1741. His brother, JOHN MICHAEL, an antiquar., 1674-1722.

HEINSE, J. J. G., a Ger. novelist, 1746-1803.

HEINSIUS, DANIEL, a Dutch philologist, historian, and Latin poet, 1580-1665. NICHOLAS, his son, a poet and classical editor, 1620-1681. ANTHONY, a member of the same family, grand pensionary of Holland, 1641-1720.

HEINZ, J., a Swiss painter, 16th century.

HEISS, J. DE, a German historian, died 1688.

HEISTER, LAWRENCE, a celebrated German physician and surgeon of the last century, was born at Frankfort on the 21st of September, 1683, and died at Helmstadt on the 18th of April, 1758. He was much distinguished in his day both as a physician and a surgeon, particularly as the latter, having acquired a practical knowledge of the art of surgery as a surgeon of the allied army in the low countries. He was successively professor of anatomy and surgery at Altorf and Helmstadt. His works are numerous, and embrace treatises on anatomy, surgery, and medicine, but they are now little consulted. [J.M'C.]

HELE, THOS., an English dramatist, d. 1780.

HELENA, ST., mother of Constantine the Great, and founder of a church on Calvary, 247-328.

HELIODORUS, a Greek mathematician, 2d ct.

HELIODORUS, a Gr. bishop and an., 4th ct.

HELIOGABALUS, a Roman emp., 218-222.

HELL, MAXIMILIAN, a Hungarian astronomer and writer on the magnet, &c., 1720-1792.

HELLOT, J., a French chemist, 1685-1766.

HELMAN, J. S., a Fr. engraver, 1743-1797.

HELMERS, J. F., a Dutch poet, 1767-1818.

HELMICH, W., a Dutch theolog., 1551-1608.

HELMONT, JEAN BAPTIST VAN, generally numbered among the alchymists, was a native of Brussels, and was born 1577. He was a public lecturer on medicine when only seventeen years of age, and at twenty-two received his diploma as a physician. Being rendered independent by his marriage with a lady of property in 1609, he displayed his benevolence by practising his profession gratuitously, and devoted his leisure to the studies of which his name has become such a famous representative. It is admitted that he was a great pioneer in chemical discovery, but there is also a fund of valuable truth under the obscure terms which are generally regarded as the mere conceits of his imagination. The archeus, for example, which makes a conspicuous figure in his works, is the mover of all the functions in the animal economy, and may be regarded as the vital aura which is the subject of so much popular curiosity, and the ridicule of so many learned professors, at the present day. It was from the archeus that Barthez derived his idea of a vital principle, and operated a revolution in physiology. The same element, or spiritual essence of life, is recognized by nearly all the old philosophers under different names, and there is now every prospect of its coming within the pale of experimental philosophy. Of course, it is not pretended to deny that Helmont's works abound in crude notions, and wild fantastic theories, but even in these cases the imaginative may often find the road to some true, and now forgotten principle, from which the author wandered away in the fire-mists with which he surrounded himself. Apart from all this, he was a perfect master of his art, and there is evidence of the astonishing cures he performed as a physician. He died in 1644, and in 1648 his collected works were published, according to his dying request, by his son, FRANCIS MERCURY VAN HELMONT, who was also a speculative writer, and lived 1618-1699. [E.R.]

HELMONT, M. VAN, a Dutch paint., d. 1726.

HELSHAM, R., a natural philosopher, d. 1738.

HELST, B. VAN DER, a Dutch pain., 1613-70.

HELTAI, G., a prot. wr. of Hungary, 16th ct.

HELVETIUS. The physicians and philosophers of this name are sprung from a family of the Palatinate, the first founders of which fled to Holland to avoid persecution at the period of the reformation.—1. JEAN FREDERIC, (SCHWEIZER), who bears the reputation of an alchymist, was first physician to the armies of the republic, and had several medals struck in honour of the services rendered by him, flourished 1625-1709.—2. JEAN ADRIAN, who carried the family name to Paris, by going there in his youth, was the son of the preceding, and was known in the city of his adoption as the Dutch physician. He was ennobled by Louis XIV. for his services, having been successively equerry, counsellor of the king, and inspector-general of hospitals. He is the author of several medical works, especially on fevers, on the plague, and on the extirpation of cancer, and is the discoverer of the curative virtues of ipecacuhana. Some of his works went through several editions during his lifetime and afterwards; lived 1661-1727.—One of his sons, 3. JEAN CLAUDE ADRIAN, became councillor of state and first physician to the queen, and was a member of most of the learned societies of Europe. His works are, 'Idée Générale de l'Economie Animale, et Observations sur la Petite Vérole,' and 'Principia Physica-Medica,' in which he attributes all diseases to the fermentation of the blood, and its irruption into the lymphatic vessels. Like the other members of his family, he was of an original and speculative turn, and his hypotheses generally provoked controversy. His son, the fourth and most famous of the name, is the subject of the following notice. [E.R.]

HELVETIUS, CLAUDE ADRIAN, born i Paris 1715, died December, 1771. The celebrit at one time enjoyed by Helvetius, rests on his wo De l' Esprit—a treatise on theoretical and practic morality. Starting from the ground that man a being simply and purely sensible, he rapidly i fers that morality signifies the search after pleas and effort to avoid pain. Nevertheless, as remar in the article EPICURUS, granting the postul the inquiry remains, how can one best attain p sure and avoid pain? And Helvetius desire raise men to the pursuit of large objects. contrasts with this view, the mean morality o purely self-seeking and vulgar-minded, with higher but still narrow morality of sects and ries, and this last with the generous and unfe action and serene enjoyments of the man sympathies are coextensive with his race. to be said, in justice to one whose merit thinker are not great, but often unduly and depreciated, that action according to l cepts, would, by no means frequently, be f jar with the results of a better system. H was a good and keen observer: hence the r Madame du Deffand, 'C' est un homme le secret de tout le monde.'—Besides hi he wrote a treatise De l' Homme. They and wearisome in the main. and befo mending their perusal even to a stu fullest leisure, it would be fair to say t thing good in them may be obtained cheaper rate.

HELVETIUS, J., a Dutch poet, las

HELVICUS, C., a German savant,

IV., eldest son of John of Gaunt, duke of Lancaster, fourth son of Edward III., and the Lady Blanche, born 1366, usurped the throne 1399, died 1413. HENRY V., son of the preceding, and Mary de Bohun, daughter of the earl of Hereford, born 1388, succeeded 1413, invaded France and fought the battle of Agincourt 1415, died 1422. HENRY VI., son and successor of the preceding, when only ten months old, 1422, crowned at Paris 1430, imprisoned by the faction of York, and killed in the Tower, 1471. HENRY VII., son of Edmund Tudor, earl of Richmond, and Margaret, a descendant of John of Gaunt, born 1456, defeated Richard III., and proclaimed king 1485, married to Elizabeth the heiress of the house of York, 1486, died 1509. HENRY VIII., second son of Henry VII. and Elizabeth, born 1491; succeeded his father, and married to Catherine of Arragon 1509; defeated the French army at the battle of Spurs, and the Scotch at Flodden, 1513; interview with Francis I. on the field of the cloth of gold, 1520; war with France 1522; treaty of peace 1526; married to Anne Boleyn 1533; to Jane Seymour after the execution of Anne 1536; to Anne of Cleves after the death of Jane Seymour, and to Catherine Howard after the divorce of the latter, 1540; to Catherine Parr 1543; invasion of France 1544; peace with Fr. and Scotland 1546; d. 1547.

HENRY. The emperors of Germany of this name are—HENRY I., son of Otho, duke of Saxony and Thuringia, born 876, reigned 919-936. HENRY II., great grandson of the preceding, born 972, king of Bavaria 995, succeeded Otho III. on the throne of Germany 1002, crowned emperor at Rome 1014, died 1024. HENRY III., brother and successor of Conrad II., reigned 1039-1056. HENRY IV., son of Henry III., born 1050, succeeded his father 1056, commenced the great war of investiture 1077, deposed by the diet of Mayence and died miserably 1106. HENRY V., son of the preceding, born 1081, reigned 1111-1125. HENRY VI., born 1165, succeeded his father, Frederic Barbarossa, 1190, died of poison 1197. HENRY VII., duke of Luxemberg, elected 1308, died 1313. Another HENRY, landgrave of Thuringia, was proclaimed emperor on the deposition of Frederick II. 1246, and died the following year.

HENRY, em. of Constantinople, reig. 1174-1216.

HENRY. The kings of France of this name are—HENRY I., born 1005, succeeded his father Robert, 1031, died 1060. HENRY II., born 1518, married to Catherine de Medicis 1533, succeeded his father Francis I. 1547, died of a wound received at a tournament 1559. HENRY III., third son of Henry II. and Catherine de Medicis, born 1551, elected king of Poland 1573, succeeded his brother Charles IX. 1574, assassinated 1589. For HENRY IV., called 'the Great,' see NAVARRE.

HENRY. The kings of Castile of this name are—HENRY I., born 1205, reigned 1214-1217. HENRY II., count de Transtamare, born 1333, maintained a contest for the throne, which he obtained 1366-1368, died 1379. HENRY III., reigned 1390-1406. HENRY IV., born 1423, succeeded his father John II. 1454, died, and was succeeded by his sister, Isabella of Castile, 1474.

HENRY, count of Portugal, killed 1112.

HENRY, king of Portugal, reigned 1578-1580.

HENRY, fourth son of John I. of Portugal and Philippine, sister of Henry IV. of England, known as Henry of Portugal, or the duke of Viseu, and disting. as a promoter of discovery, 1394-1463.

HENRY, king of Jerusalem, reigned 1150-97.

HENRY, the first of the name king of Cyprus, reigned 1218-1253; the second, 1285-1324.

HENRY, prince of Prussia, third son of Frederic William I., distinguished in the seven years' war, and as a diplomatist, 1726-1802.

HENRY OF BLOIS, bp. of Winchester, nephew of William Rufus, and brother of king Stephen, founder of the Hospital of St. Cross, died 1171.

HENRY OF GHENT, a scholastic phil., d. 1293.

HENRY OF HESSE, a German phil., d. 1397.

HENRY OF HUNTINGDON, an ancient chron., au. of a 'History of Engld. to A.D. 1154,' d. 1168.

HENRY, CHAS., M.D., a chemist, 1775-1836.

HENRY, DAVID, a Scotch printer, 1710-1792.

HENRY, F., a French mathematician, 1615-85.

HENRY, MATTHEW, the celebrated commentator on the Bible, was a native of Flintshire, where he was born at the farm-house of Broad Oak, the dwelling of his maternal grandfather, in 1662. His parents had retired to that place in consequence of his father, Rev. Philip Henry, having been ejected from his parish in the neighbourhood by the tyrannical act of uniformity. He was of a very weakly and delicate constitution in his childhood. But his mental faculties were remarkable for their precocious development and vigour; and as an evidence of this, it is said that he could read the Bible distinctly in his third year and the Greek New Testament in his ninth. At a very early age he received deep and lasting impressions of religion; insomuch that when he removed to a public academy at Islington, he was distinguished amongst his school-fellows not more by the superiority of his classical and general learning, than by his settled piety. In 1685, he entered Gray's Inn as a student of law, not with any view to the legal profession, but according to the fashion of the time, which considered law a branch of liberal education, and an excellent discipline for the youthful mind. But the bent of Henry's inclinations had been all along towards the ministry, and by a prudent economy of his time, he pursued his theological studies, while resident at that school of law. He began to preach at first in a room which his father had fitted for public worship, and to which the people in the neighbourhood were in the habit of repairing. After a few of these private trials, he went on a visit to a friend at Nantwich, where he preached with great acceptance; and the fame of his discourses having spread, he was invited to Chester, where he preached in the house of a merchant to a small audience which formed the nucleus of his future congregation. Such privacy was necessary at a period when the law imposed great restriction on the freedom of preaching. But in 1687, prudence or necessity led the government to adopt a more liberal policy, and license was granted to dissenters to preach. Mr. Henry having accepted a call to undertake the functions of the ministerial office in Chester, he was privately ordained, for the dissenters wisely avoided in those days all ostentatious display; and he had not been long settled in that town, when he drew around him a large and flourishing congregation. The duties of a minister were much more onerous then than they are now; and yet Mr. Henry found no difficulty in accomplishing all that was required: two long services on Sabbath, a discourse in the neighbouring villages almost every evening in the week, besides visits to the sick of his congregation, as well as to the poor prisoners in Chester jail. He continued twenty-five years pastor of that place, and during this period, he went through the Bible more than once in the course of expository lectures.—In 1712, he was translated to Hackney, London, and in that new sphere of ministerial labour, he determined to pursue the same course of exposition he had adopted in Chester. At the commencement of his ministry, therefore, he began with the first chapter of Genesis in the forenoon, and the first chapter of Matthew in the afternoon. Thus gradually and steadily grew his 'Exposition' of the Bible. A large portion of it consists of his public lectures, while many of the quaint sayings and pithy remarks with which it abounds, and which give so great a charm of raciness to its pages, were the familiar extempore observations of his father at family worship, and noted down by Matthew in his boyhood.—Worn out by his excessive labours both in the pulpit and the study, the constitution of Henry began to give way. On returning from a visit to his friends at Chester, the fatigue of travelling, increased by his corpulency, brought on a attack of paralysis, which laid him up at Nantwich, and in the triumphant exercise of faith and love, this great and good man was removed from the world and the church below on 22d June, 1714, in the fifty-second year of his age. [R.J.]

HENRY, N., a French Hebraist, 1692-1752.

HENRY, P. F., a Fr. historian, 1795-1833.

HENRY, P., a nonconformist divine, 1631-96.

HENRY, R., a Scotch historian, 1718-1790.

HENRY, S. E., a Fr. pharmacop., 1769-1832.

HENRY, W., an English chemist, 1775-1836.

HENRYS, CL., a Fr. jurisconsult, 1615-1662.

HENRYSON, R., a Scottish poet, 16th cent.

HENSLEN, P. G., a Ger. med. wr., 1733-1805.

HENZI, SAMUEL, a Swiss poet, and hero of one of Lessing's tragedies, executed for conspiracy, 1749. His son, RODOLPH, an author, 1731-1803.

HEPBURN, J. B., an Eng. linguist, 1573-1624.

HEPBURN, R., a miscell. writer, 1690-1712.

HERACLEON, a heretic of the 2d century.

HERACLIDES, a Grk. philosopher, 4th ct. B.C.

HERACLITUS, a celebrated Greek philosopher of Ephesus, lived in the 69th Olympiad, about 500 B.C. The principle of his theory is the recognition of the fire of life, and the ethereal element of wisdom, as the ground of all visible existences. Only fragments of his works have been preserved, which are written in the symbolic or transcendental manner of the Pythagoreans. [E.R.]

HERACLIUS, the first of the name emperor of the East, reigned 610-641; the second, HERACLIUS-CONSTANTINE, son of the preceding, survived him only three months.

HERACLIUS, or EREKLI, king of Georgia, succeeded by right when an infant, on the death of his father, 1648, obtained the government about thirty years subsequently; died 1708. HERACLIUS II., his grandson, b. about 1720, began his political career 1747, and died after a long reign 1798.

HERAULD, DIDIER, a Fr. scholar, 1579-1649.

HERAULT-DE-SECHELLES, MARIE JEAN, the friend of Danton, was born at Paris, of a noble family, in 1760, and when the revolution broke out had arrived at the post of advocate-general in the parliament of the capital. Notwithstanding the favour he enjoyed at court, Herault de Séchelles did not hesitate to join the popular party in the debates preceding 1789, and was present at the taking of the Bastile. In September, 1791, he was returned to the legislative assembly (the first biennial parliament) by the electors of Paris, and the year following represented the department of the Seine and Oise in the national convention. In each of these bodies he exercised great influence upon the direction of affairs, and when the constitution was accepted, he was made president of the national fête. For this post he was equally fitted by his eloquence as an orator, and the elegance of his person, for he was considered the handsomest man in France, but it was also the well-earned reward of his political honesty and patriotism. As events proceeded, the Committee of Public Safety was erected, and Herault became a member of it, in which capacity he received a letter from Lavater, who had been acquainted with him, expressing the surprise of the philosopher 'That a man placed so high by his birth, his education, his talents, the goodness of his character, and the sweetness of his manners, should become the accomplice of scoundrels, so gross, so ignorant, and so stupid as his colleagues.' Herault de Séchelles received this letter in committee, and smiling as he read it, observed to one of his companions, 'These people do not understand our situation!' On the division of parties, Herault sided with his friend Danton, with whom he was guillotined, 5th April, 1794; his affianced bride, a young lady of high birth, and remarkable for her beauty, vainly endeavouring to move the heart of Robespierre. On the scaffold, Herault de Séchelles stept forward to embrace Danton, but the executioner prevented him, which gave occasion to the last words uttered by the great chief: 'Miserable! tu n'empêcheras pas nos têtes de se baisir dans le panier' (wretch! you cannot hinder our heads from kissing in the basket). Herault de Séchelles is the author of several works, among others, of the 'Theory of Ambition,' published after his death, and of a work entitled 'Thoughts and Anecdotes.' [E.R.]

HERBART, J. F., a Ger. philosopher, b. 1776.

HERBELOW, BARTHOLOMEW D', professor of Syriac in the College of France, and author of 'Bibliothèque Orientale,' 4 vols. 4to, 1625-1695.

HERBERT, EDWARD, Lord Herbert of Cherbury, a distinguished writer on natural religion, and the last of his age to embody the principle of deism in the language of a refined philosophy, was born of an ancient family at Montgomery castle in Wales 1581, and died in London 1648. He was one of the most accomplished gentlemen at the court of James I., and distinguished himself by his romantic bravery in the service of the prince of Orange, and at a later period in the parliamentary army. His greatest work, 'De Veritate,' was published at Paris, where he was resident ambassador, 1624, and for a time he hesitated whether to give it to the world. 'Being thus doubtful in my chamber,' he writes in his 'Memoirs,' 'one fair day in summer, my casement being opened to the south, the sun shining clear, and no wind stirring, I took my book, De Veritate, in my hand, and kneeling on my knees, devoutly said these words: —O thou Eternal God, author of the light which now shines upon me, and giver of all inward illuminations, I do beseech thee, of thy infinite goodness, to pardon a greater request than a sinner ought to make. I am not satisfied enough whether I shall publish this book De Veritate. If it be for thy glory, I beseech thee give me some sign from heaven; if not, I shall suppress it. I had no sooner spoken these words, but a loud, though yet gentle noise came from the heavens (for it was like nothing on earth), which did so comfort and cheer me, that I took my petition as granted, and that I had the sign I demanded, whereupon also I resolved to print my book.' 'This,' he adds, 'how strange soever it may seem, I protest, before the Eternal God, is true; neither am I in any way superstitiously deceived herein, since I did not only clearly hear the noise, but in the serenest sky that ever I saw, being all without cloud, did, to my thinking, see the place from whence it came.' Some writers have accused Lord Herbert of hypocrisy, and others of vanity and self-delusion on this point, but, however extraordinary in a writer whose work was directed against belief in a revelation to a part of the world only, it is, to our mind, the highest proof of his sincerity. Besides this work, which was replied to by Gassendi, Lord Herbert is the author of Latin poems of great beauty, and of an Inquiry into the Errors of Paganism—'De Religione Gentilium, &c.' He was a general favourite, both at the English and French courts, and perhaps indulged in an excusable vanity on that account, but his frankness, generosity, and bravery, besides his great literary abilities, are acknowledged by all parties. [E.R.]

HERBERT, George, a younger brother of the preceding, is remarkable for the contrast exhibited by his life and character when compared with that of Lord Edward, in whose refinement of nature he shared most liberally. The tastes of George inclined him to the public life of a courtier, but he was educated for the church, and became rector of Bemerton, near Salisbury, where he settled down with a firm resolve to consecrate all his learning and all his abilities to advance the glory of that God which gave them; 'knowing,' he said, 'that I can never do too much for him that hath done so much for me as to make me a Christian.' George Herbert is remembered for the singular purity and beneficence of his secluded existence, and chiefly as the author of poems, often quoted for their earnest delineations of the soul's experience, and for the spirit of love and gentleness breathed into them. These simple, yet beautiful compositions are contained in his 'Remains,' together with 'The Country Parson's Character,' which exhibits his own rule of life, and is a picture of continued benevolence, and unwearied devotion to the service of others. He was born in 1593, and died of consumption in 1632. [E.R.]

HERBERT, William, earl of Pembroke, a great patron of letters, and himself a poet, 1580-1630. Sir Thomas Herbert, of the same family, author of travels, and assistant of Dugdale in his antiquarian labours, born about 1622. Mary Herbert. See Sidne

HERBIN, A. F. J., a Fr. Orientalist,

HERBST, J. A., a German musician

HERBST, J. F. A., a Ger. naturalist,

HERBURT, J., a Polish historian, 1

HERDER, Johann Gottfried Vo in 1744, in East Prussia. Younger th and older than Göthe and Schiller, he timately connected with all of these di men; and he shares with them the having created the literature of German is one of the most eloquent writers Europe; his works have the fervour with a brilliancy of fancy which almo poetical; and he is one of the few men united impressiveness and skill of c various and exact erudition, and orig comprehensiveness of philosophic tho father, a schoolmaster, was both too p ignorant to give facilities for the deve his son's genius: his early studies were by stealth. The kindness of a Russi carried him to Königsberg, where he st Kant and others, and was able to obta dinate appointment as a teacher. Aba study of medicine, he entered the chur 1764, at Riga, holding an appoint preacher, along with a mastership in th school, he gained celebrity by the d earnestness of his pulpit oratory. He a an author, and published some of the critical treatises on literature and a making one or two changes of place, he s five years as court-preacher at Bückeb principality of Schaumburg-Lippe. T produced several of his principal theolo In 1775, he was appointed to a theolog soraship at Göttingen; but the governm confirming the nomination, insisted on tion as to the professor's orthodoxy, t hesitated to submit. The difficulty w by the duke of Saxe-Weimar, who, l lous in his theology than George, king and aiming at gathering about him a spirits of his country, nominated him preacher and general superintendent o siastical consistory. In 1776, Herde Weimar; and in that little capital, the as the Athens of Germany, he spent th of his life, respected as a preacher, and promoter of education and other publi ments, and labouring unwearied in farious literary pursuits. He died in voluminous works fall into three secti logy; philosophy and history; and lit the fine arts. The third section is th he displays most decisively his felicit tion of dissimilar powers. Notice is es to his 'Spirit of Hebrew Poetry;' to t che Wälder,' which is a treatise on th as exhibited in art; and to those balla on the Spanish romances of 'The showed how very little was wanting to der an illustrious poet.

HERIOT, John, a miscel. writer, 1

HERISSANT, Louis Anth. Pros geologist and naturalist, 1745-1769.

L. Theodore, a diplomatist and histo

1811. J. T. HERISSANT DES CARRIERES, of the same family, a grammarian, 1742-1820.

HERITIER, CHARLES LOUIS DE BRUSELLE L', an eminent French botanist, an. of 'Flore de la Place Vendome,' b. 1745, found murdered 1801.

HERITIER, NICHOLAS L', a French translator and dramatic wri., d. 1680. His daughter, MARIE JEANNE DE VILLANDON, a novelist, 1664-1734.

HERLICIUS, D., a Ger. astrologer, 1557-1636.

HERMANN, J., a Ger. mathemat., 1678-1733.

HERMANN, J., a Ger. naturalist, 1738-1800.

HERMANN, PAUL, a Ger. botanist, 1646-95.

HERMANT, J., a French historian, 1650-1725.

HERMAS, Sr., author of a book entitled 'The Pastor,' and supposed to be the same mentioned in Rom. xvi. 14. The 'Pastor' of Hermas was highly esteemed by many of the early fathers, and Origen expresses his belief that it was divinely inspired. It contains an account of the visions of Hermas, said by him in a state of ecstacy, and to be understood in a symbolic sense: to which are added the excellent precepts of morality and piety, and 'Similitudes' or figures of truth. In the ninth of these similitudes an ancient white stone of immense magnitude is described, which had a new door opened in it; and in the 'visions' Hermas relates that he saw six young men or angels building a tower of square white stones, symbolic of the Christian Church. This book is further interesting as affording evidence that the early Christians believed in the ministration of angels around men. [E.R.]

HERMBSTÆDT, SIGISMUND FREDERIC, a German writer on practical chemistry, 1760-1833.

HERMELIN, SAMUEL GUSTAVUS, Baron, a Swedish mineralogist and statistician, 1744-1820.

HERMENGILDE, pr. of the Visigoths, k. 586.

HERMES, or MERCURIUS, TRISMEGISTUS, a revered priest and philosopher of Egypt, who is represented by Sanconiatho as the secretary and scribe of Cronus, and as the original author of the 'Cosmogony.' Although it creates some inconsistencies, he is supposed to be the same as Athothis, the second king of Egypt, who, Manetho says, 'Built the palaces at Memphis, and left some anatomical books, for he was a physician.' This supposition is founded on a passage in Sanchoniatho's 'Generations,' where we read, 'From Taautus (Miarain) descended Taatus (or Athothis), who invented the writing of the first letters; him the Egyptians call Thoor, the Alexandrians Thoth, and the Greeks Hermes.' These points may be examined in the fragments of Cory. The works extant under the name of Hermes are, 'Pymander, or the Power and Wisdom of God;' 'Asclepius, a Dialogue on the Deity, Mankind, and the World,' and some others supposed to be of less antiquity than these, and all alike regarded as supposititious. Their value, however, will be found very great in any attempt to determine the history of philosophy. In all likelihood the name belongs to two distinct persons, the later of whom was an Egyptian philosopher and legislator, and the earlier a deification of all the ancient philosophy and instruction of that mysterious country. [E.R.]

HERMES, G., a Prussian theolog., 1775-1831.

HERMES, J. A., a Ger. theologian, 1736-1821.

HERMIAS, a Christian philosopher, 2d cent.

HERMIAS OF ALEXANDRIA, a neo-plat., 5th c.

HERMILLY, V. D., a Fr. historian, 1707-78.

HERMODORUS, a Gr. philoso., 5th cent. B.C.

HERMOGENES, a Greek rhetorician, 2d cent.

HERMOGENES, a Latin jurist, 4th century.

HERNANDEZ, F., a Sp. naturalist, 17th cent.

HERO, a cel. mathematician and machinist of Alexandria, 3d cent. B.C. Another of the name distinguished as a military engineer about 6th ct.

HEROART, J., a Fr. medical author, d. 1627.

HEROD, surnamed 'the Great,' k. of the Jews, b. B.C. 71, named king by the Roman senate B.C. 40, married to Mariamne 38, gained possession of his kingdom 37, occupied in rebuilding the Temple B.C. 17-19, died in the seventieth year of his age.

HEROD, AGRIPPA. See AGRIPPA.

HEROD, ANTIPAS, son of the preceding, tetrarch of Galilee and Peræa, executed John the Baptist about A.D. 26, deposed by Caligula 39.

HERODES. See ATTICUS.

HERODIAN, a Greek historian, 3d century.

HERODOTUS. Very few facts connected with the biography of the 'Father of History' have come down to us. With the exception of the few data incidentally and indirectly supplied by himself, the notices of his life rest on comparatively recent or questionable authority. Herodotus was a native of Halicarnassus, a Dorian city in Asia Minor, was born B.C. 484, and was perhaps alive in the beginning of the following century. According to Suidas, his father was called Lyxas, and his mother Dryo, both descended from noble Halicarnassian families. Disgusted with the government of Lygdamis, the grandson of Artemisia, who was tyrant of his native city, he retired for a time to the island of Samos, whence he acquired the Ionic dialect, in which he afterwards composed his history. To collect the necessary materials for his great work, he entered, in early manhood, upon that course of patient and observant travel which was destined to render his name illustrious in all future ages. During his wanderings he visited almost every part of Greece and its dependencies, and many other countries, the affairs of which are treated in his work; investigating minutely the history, manners, and customs of the people. The shores of the Hellespont, Scythia, and the Euxine Sea; Syria, Palestine, Colchis, the northern parts of Africa, Ecbatana, and even Babylon, were the objects of his unwearied search. On his return from his travels he took a prominent part in delivering his country from the tyranny of Lygdamis. But the expulsion of the tyrant did not bring tranquillity to Halicarnassus; and Herodotus having himself become an object of dislike, again quitted his native city, and settled along with a colony from Athens, at Thurii, in the south of Italy, B.C. 443. Here he spent the remainder of his life, and here he wrote the work which has immortalized his name. The time and place of his death are matters of dispute. According to some he died at Thurii, and was buried in the market-place; while others assert that he died at Pella, in Macedonia. His history consists of nine books, which bear the names of the nine Muses. 'Next to the Iliad and Odyssey,' says Colonel Mure, 'the history of Herodotus is the greatest effort of Greek literary genius. The one is the perfection of epic poetry, the other the perfection of epic prose. Were it not for the influence which the prior existence of so noble a model, even in a different branch of composition, has evidently exercised on the historian, his title to the palm of original invention might rival that of his poetical predecessor. In the complexity of the plan (of his history), as compared with the simplicity of its execution; in the multiplicity and heterogeneous nature of its materials, and in the harmony of their combination; in the grandeur of its historical masses, and the minuteness, often triviality, of its illustrative details; it remains not only without equal, but without rival or parallel in the literature of Greece or of Europe.' [G.F.]

HEROLD, J. B., a Bavarian historian, 1511-81.

HEROLD, L. J. F., a Ger. comp., 1791-1833.

HERON, ROBERT, a miscel. writer, died 1807.

HEROPHILUS, a Grk. physician, 4th ct. B.C.

HERRERA, FR. DE, a Span. lyric, 16th cent.

HERRERA, FRANCESCO DE, called 'The Elder,' a Span. painter, 1576-1656. The younger of the same name, a paint. and architect, 1622-85.

HERRERA, G. A., a Spanish agricult., 16th ct.

HERRERA-TORDESILLAS, ANTONIO DE, a Span. hist., an. of a 'History of India,' 1565-1625.

HERRGOTT, M., a Ger. antiquar., 1694-1762.

HERRICK, HEARICK, or HIRECK, ROBERT, an English clergyman and poet, descended from Eric, a Danish chief subdued by Alfred the Great, and settled with his people in East Anglia, and intermediately from a well-known family in Leicestershire, was born 24th August, 1591. His uncle, Sir W. Heyrick, undertook the charge of his education at Cambridge, and having friends at court, he was presented to the living of Dean Prior in Devonshire, 1629. In 1648, he was deprived by Cromwell, and coming to London, assumed the lay habit, and in the course of the same year published his poems under the title of 'Hesperides, or the works, both Humane and Divine, of Robert Herrick, Esq.,' another collection in the same volume being styled 'His Noble Numbers, or his pious pieces, wherein (amongst other things), he sings the Birth of his Christ; and Sighes for his Saviour's Suffering on the Crosse.' The poems of Herrick were well received at the time, but were almost forgotten again till the time of Dr. Drake. They are now recognized as genuine effusions of the English muse, and the best of them are unsurpassed in melody, sweetness, and variety of rhythm, by any similar compositions in the English language. They afford admirable illustrations of old English manners, English feelings, and English scenery, and a noble strain of piety breathes through the whole volume, notwithstanding its frequent licentiousness. Herrick himself was painfully conscious of these blemishes, but the poor royalist, wanting his 'fifths,' and cast upon the streets of London, should not be too harshly censured for a fault to which Shakspeare himself was not superior. Being a bachelor, he had no home in the metropolis, and his best hours were given to the wits and courtiers of the period. Selden, Ben Jonson, Denham, Cotton, and Endymen Porter were among his friends. The date of his death is not known, but it was probably soon after 1660, when he was restored to his living by Charles II. 'A Genealogical Register of the name and family of Herrick,' was published by Jedediah Herrick, at Bangor, U.S., in 1846, and is a curious example of the pride of their English ancestry remaining wi lican descendants of this ancient famil

HERRMANN, F. A., a Fr. diploma.

HERSCHEL, WILLIAM, a distingu nomer, was born at Hanover on the 1 ber, 1738. He was the second o who were all educated as musicians, f same profession as their father. At of fourteen William was placed in the Hanoverian foot guards; but seeing th little prospect of promotion in his na he resolved to try his fortune in En he arrived about the end of 1757. encing the difficulties to which early quently exposed, he was engaged by Darlington to instruct a military ban then forming in the county of Durham had fulfilled this engagement he esta self as a teacher of music in the vicini Pontefract, and Doncaster, and conduct concerts and oratorios in these town he obtained the situation of organist and soon afterwards a more lucrative in the Octagon chapel in Bath, where successful as a teacher of music, and the public concerts. During his resid fax he acquired a considerable k mathematics, and having studied astr popular writings of James Ferguson, ous to see with his own eyes the won tial phenomena disclosed by the tele tunately for science he was unable to instrument for this purpose, and resolved to construct one with his After surmounting the difficulties v the practice of grinding and polishin completed in 1774 a five feet Newton with which he could see the satellite and the ring of Saturn. Not conten instrument he made for himself seve five feet, seven feet, eighteen feet, and Newtonian telescopes, besides Gregori inches, one foot, two feet, three feet, a focal length, and in order to get a go he ground and polished a large numb same tool, and selected the one which have the best figure. In this way he m than 200 seven feet, 150 ten feet, a twenty feet telescopes. His mechanical were carried on along with his optical invented and executed a number of sta ent forms for these instruments.—His observations with the telescope were m and subsequent years. They were pub Philosophical Transactions for 1780, to the periodical star in the neck o and the height of the lunar mountains. discovered what he at first thought a turned out to be a new planet, which Georgium Sidus, but which has n the name of Uranus, from its being turn. After this discovery, which e reputation over Europe, George III. enabled him, by the grant of a salar the whole of his time to astronomy. took up his residence at Datchet, n where he made many discoveries on triple stars, on the proper motion of lar system, the spots at the pole of Mars, d the nebulæ and cluster of stars observed by ssier and Mechain. On the 11th January, 81, he discovered a second and fourth satellite the Georgium Sidus, and in 1790 and 1799, ber five satellites, viz., the first, third, fifth, and th, all of which move in a retrograde direction, orbits almost perpendicular to the plane of the liptic.—Thus successful as an observer, he began 1781 to construct a thirty feet reflector, but e mirror, which was no less than three feet diameter, cracked in the cooling, and frustrated plan. This disappointment induced him to k for extraneous assistance in carrying out his ws; and on the recommendation of Sir Joseph nks, George III. offered to defray the expense a forty feet telescope, with a mirror four feet diameter, three and a-half inches thick, and ghing 2118 pounds. With this magnificent rument he discovered the sixth and seventh llites of Saturn, and also the spots, belts, flattening, at the poles of that planet. Till year 1820 Sir William Herschel communicated ost every year important papers to the Royal ety on nebulæ, clusters of stars, the construc- of the heavens, the motion of the solar system, ouble stars, and on the four new planets be- Mars and Jupiter. We owe to him also the very of invisible heating rays beyond the red mity of the spectrum. Sir William Herschel elected an honorary member of most of the ific institutions in Europe and America. In he received the honorary degree of Doctor of , and in 1816 he was presented with the deco- of the Guelphic order. In 1820 he was d the first president of the Astronomical So- and he published in the 1st volume of its Trans- , a paper on 145 new double stars. He had reached that age when the mind as well as the requires a cessation from labour. His health begun to decline, and on the 25th August, he died in the eighty-fourth year of his age. year 1788 Sir William married the widow hn Pitt, Esq., and left behind him only one the present Sir John Herschel. [D.B.]

(Herschel's Tomb in Upton Church.)

HERSCHEL, CAROLINE LUCRETIA, sister of the great Herschel, distinguished for the arduous assistance she rendered her brother in his astronomical pursuits, as well as for her own numerous and important observations, 1750-1848.

HERSCHELL, DR. SOLOMON, a Jewish rabbi, cele. for his learning and benevolence, 1760-1842.

HERSENT, G., a French divine, 1590-1660.

HERTIUS, J. N., a Germ. civilian, 1651-1710.

HERTSBERG, EWALD FREDERIC VON, a Prussian statesman, distinguished under Frederic the Great, 1725-1795.

HERVAS, L., a Spanish savant, 1735-1809.

HERVAY, NOEL, a schol. philosopher, d. 1323.

HERVET, G., a French savant, 1499-1584.

HERVEY, JAMES, a pious clergyman of the Church of England, an. of 'Meditations and Contemplations,' 'Theron and Aspasia,' &c., 1714-58.

HERVEY, JOHN, Lord Hervey of Ickworth, a poet and political writer, author of 'Memoirs of George II.,' only recently published, 1694-1743.

HERY, THIERRY DE, a med. author, d. 1599.

HESHUSIUS, T., a Germ. divine, 1526-1588.

HESIOD, an ancient Greek poet of uncertain date, whose works are chiefly valuable so far as they illustrate the Orphic philosophy and the mythology of the ancients. The ascertained fragments of his writings are the 'Theogony' or generation of the gods, and the 'Works and Days.' The latter is a kind of rude pastoral or calendar of agriculture, with occasional reflections. The fragment of another poem attributed to him entitled 'The Shield of Hercules,' and containing an account of the most celebrated heroines of antiquity, is considered doubtful. [E.R.]

HESNAULT, J., a French poet, 17th century.

HESS, J. J., a Swiss theologian, 1761-1828.

HEUMAN, CHR. A., a Ger. theolog., 1681-1764.

HEUSINGER, J. M., a Ger. critic and philologist, 1690-1751. His nephew, JAS. FREDERIC, a philologist and classical scholar, 1718-1778.

HEVELIUS, JOHN, a celebrated astronomer of Dantzic, author of 'Machina Cœlestis,' 1611-1687.

HEVIN, P., a French jurisconsult, 1621-1692.

HEYDEN, J. VANDER, a Dut. pain., 1637-1712.

HEWSON, W., a disting. physiologist, 1739-74.

HEYLIN, PETER, an Eng. historian, 1600-62.

HEYM, J., a Ger. lexicographer, 1759-1821.

HEYNE, CHRISTIAN GOTTLOB, was born in 1729, at Chemnitz, in Saxony, where his father was a poor linen-weaver. His education was gained through struggles as severe and protracted as any that have ever been undergone by men of letters; and it was in the midst of great poverty that he was able, in 1755, to publish his edition of 'Tibullus,' the first work that made him known as a classical scholar. So obscure was his position long after this, that, when he was appointed to the professorship of eloquence at Gottingen on the recommendation of Ruhnken, it cost some trouble to discover where he was. Entering on his duties at Göttingen in 1763, he passed nearly fifty years in that university, with unwearied industry, distinguished and varied usefulness, and brilliant and increasing reputation. In classical studies, his own peculiar department, he was especially noted for the fine spirit which he breathed into criticism, and for the richness of illustration which he threw on the ancient masterpieces of poetry from history and topography, and from the existing monuments of the fine arts. His 'Opuscula Academica' contains many admirable treatises; and there is great value in the critical apparatus embodied in his editions of Virgil, Pindar, Homer, and Apollodorus. Heyne died in 1812. [W.S.]

HEYWOOD, ELIZA, a novelist, 1693-1756.

HEYWOOD, JOHN, a dramatic poet of the age of Henry VIII., author of an apologue in verse, entitled 'The Parable of the Spider and the Fly,' and of some plays and epigrams, died 1565.

HEYWOOD, OLIVER, a noncf. div., 1629-1702.

HEYWOOD, THOMAS, an English actor and dramatist, author of 'A Woman Killed with Kindness,' and a great number of plays, of which the most part are lost, beginning of the 17th century.

HIÆRNE, URBAN, a Swd. nat. phil.,1641-1724.

HIBBERT, GEORGE, a merchant of London, distinguished for his public spirit as one of the founders of the West India Docks, and as a public speaker and member of parliament, 1757-1837.

HICKERINGILL, E., a military officer, afterw. in holy orders, kn. as a pamphleteer, 1630-1708.

HICKES, DR. GEORGE, a Saxon scholar and antiquarian writer, 1642-1715. JOHN, his brother, a nonconf. minister, exec. as a traitor 1685.

HICKS, FR., a classical editor, 1566-1630.

HICKS, W., a fifth monarchy man, 1620-1659.

HIDALGO, J. G., a Spanish artist, born 1656.

HIDALGO Y CASTILLA, DON MIGUEL, a priest, dist. as a patriot in Mexico, executed 1811.

HIEROCLES, an eclectic philosopher, 5th cent.

HIEROCLES, a topographical writer, 6th cent.

HIEROCLES, a Grk. grammarian, 7th century.

HIEROCLES OF BITHYNIA, governor of Alexandria, a writer against Christianity, and a great persecutor of the Christians in the time of Diocletian, 4th century.

HIERON, the first of the name king or tyrant of Syracuse, 478-467 B.C.; the second, 269-215 B.C.

HIERONYMUS, grandson and suc. of the preceding, murdered after reign. ten months, 214 B.C.

HIERONYMUS, ST. See JEROME.

HIFFERNAN, P., an Irish author, 1719-1777.

HIGDON, RALPH, an Engl. historian, d. 1363.

HIGGINS, G., an antiquarian wr., 1771-1833.

HIGGINS, J., an editor and divine, 16th cent.

HIGGONS, SIR THOMAS, an English ambassador and man of letters, 1624-1691. His younger son, BEVIL, a dramatist and historian, died 1735.

HIGGS, G., an English theologian, 1589-1659.

HIGHMORE, J., an Eng. painter, 1692-1780.

HIGHMORE, NATHANIEL, a celebrated English anatomist and physiologist, 1613-1684.

HIGUERA, J. R., a Span. Jesuit, 1538-1611.

HILARION, ST., a monastic founder, 292-372.

HILARY, a pope of Rome, suc. 461, d. 467.

HILARY, ST., a bishop of Arles, 401-449.

HILARY, ST., (HILARIUS PICTAVIENSIS), was born at Poitiers in France, and became bishop of his native town about the year 350. Though he had been trained in paganism, and did not embrace Christianity till he had arrived at manhood, yet his convictions were founded on enlarged intelligence, and his life was spent in earnest, powerful, and successful support of Trinitarian orthodoxy against the innovations of Arianism. At the synod of Bessieres, 356, he so provoked the Arian deputies, that on their application to the emperor, Constantius, he was banished into Phrygia. Here he remained in exile about four years, and composed his principal works. But his uncompromising opposition to Asiatic Arianism so enraged his opponents, that they petitioned for his recall, and the champion returned in triumph to Poitiers, where he died in 367. Four years before his death he had impeached Auxentius, bishop of Milan, but the accused unexpectedly proved his orthodoxy face to face with his accuser before the emperor Valentinian, and Hilary was expelled from Milan as an enemy to the peace of the church. His principal works are—Twelve Books 'De Trinitate,' a 'Tract upon Synods,' and 'Two Addresses to Constantius,' one a petition, and the other a coarse invective. In his commentaries on the gospel of Matthew, and on the Psalms, the chief portion is taken from Origen. Jerome compares his style to the Rhone, not for its copiousness, but for its quickness. But it is rugged, verbose, elaborate, and occasionally obscure. The best edition is the Benedictine, improved by Maffei, Verona, 1730, 2 vols. folio. [J.E.]

HILDEBERT, an archp. of Tours, 1057-1134.

HILDEBRAND, the proper name of Pope Gregory VII. See GREGORY.

HILDEBRAND, a Lombard king, 736-744.

HILDEBRAND, G. F., a Ger phy., 1754-1816.

HILDEBRAND, J., a Ger. theol., 1623-1691.

HILDEGARDE, SAINT, a German visionary, ab. of St. Rupert's Mt., on the Rhine, 1098-1180.

HILDERIC, a king of the Vandals, 523-530.

HILDERSHAM, a puritan divine, 1563-1631.

HILDIBALD, king of the Ostrogoths, 540-42.

HILKIAH, a high priest of the Jews, 7th c. B.C.

HILL, AARON, an English poet, 1685-1750.

HILL, ABRAHAM, an Eng. scholar, 1633-1721.

HILL, GEORGE, a Scottish divine, 1748-1820.

HILL, SIR JOHN, a miscell. writer, 1716-1775.

HILL, JOSEPH, a lexicog. and antiq.,1625-1707.

HILL, SIR RICHARD, Bart., eld. bro. of the col. Rowland Hill, kn. as a polemical wr., 1733-1808.

HILL, ROBERT, a self-taught Oriental scholar and critic, author of 'Remarks on Berkeley's Essay on Spirit,' &c., 1699-1777.

HILL, REV. ROWLAND, A.M., a popular and pious, though eccentric minister, was born at Hawkstone, Shropshire, in the year 1745. He was the sixth son of Sir Rowland Hill, Bart., of Hawkstone, in the parish of Hodnet. His views were early directed towards the ministry in connection with the Church of England; not, however, as a profession, but as affording him the best and most influential means of communicating to others those saving truths he felt of such vital interest and importance to his own soul. He was a very pious youth; and his strong impressions of religion were all the more remarkable that the higher classes generally in England at that time, were either indifferent to religion, or held most false and defective views as to the leading principles of Christianity. Sir Rowland's family were distinguished for the regard they cherished and exhibited for genuine piety. Richard, the eldest son, in particular, had early received serious impressions; and it was through his influence and correspondence that his younger brother, even while a scholar at Eton, was brought to attend to the one thing needful. From Eton, Rowland removed to Cambridge, and the principles which had been sown in his mind at Eton, acquired greater power and vitality during his residence at the university. He was a devoted and successful student, for his intense application to his studies appeared at his examination for his degree of bachelor of arts, and he carried off the palm over all his competitors by his superior acquirements in physical science, particularly in optics, mechanics, and astronomy. But his mind at the same time was ardently bent towards the ministry; and he began to exercise the sacred functions during his collegiate career, by not only holding meetings with some young friends of congenial views for prayer and mutual improvement, but even forming plans of Christian usefulness beyond the walls of the university. They visited, exhorted, and prayed in various parts of the town of Cambridge, particularly in the hovels of the poor and sick, and with the prisoners in the jail. Conduct, so much at variance with the propriety of established academic rules, drew down upon him and his friends, the indignation of the college authorities. Six of the young preachers, amongst whom were Whitfield and Beveridge, received sentence of expulsion from the university, and Hill was saved from a similar fate only by the weight of his family influence. Rowland loved to itinerate, and he retained the same fondness for open-air preaching after he was ordained. He was appointed to the parish of Kingston, Somersetshire, in 1773, and there in accordance with his favourite habits, he was instant in preaching almost every day in the week. The freshness and originality of his addresses attracted crowds to hear him. Nor was he admired by a vulgar and uneducated class only. Sheridan used to say 'I often go to hear Rowland Hill, because his ideas come red-hot from the heart;' and Dean Milner, the church historian, was so affected by hearing one of his sermons, that he went to the vestry on the conclusion of the service and said, 'Mr. Hill, I felt to-day—'tis this *slap*dash preaching, say what they will, that does all the good.'—Mr. Hill had a country house in Wales, where he erected a chapel, and was constantly engaged preaching throughout the neighbourhood during his summer residence. His wife kept a note of his various engagements; and when announcing them from the pulpit, he used to look to her on naming every place to see if he was correct. And so much was he accustomed to confide in her accuracy, that he used to say at the breakfast table, 'Where do I preach to-day?' Many persons of rank and fortune having become his stated hearers, Surrey chapel was built for him in 1782, and in that chapel a vast congregation assembled every Sabbath. His eccentricities of manner, his quaintness of expression, his anecdotes, and even witticisms in the pulpit, were quite forgotten and overlooked by the regular frequenters of this place of worship in the rich vein of sterling piety and spiritual instruction that ran through the service. In 1798, Mr. Hill went to Scotland on the invitation of Robert Haldane, and preached to crowds in Edinburgh in the circus and on the Calton Hill, as well as in various parts of the country. In 1824, he made another 'Gospel Tour,' as he called it, in Scotland, and after a brief stay, returned to his labours in Surrey chapel. He was a truly evangelical preacher, and he used to say 'Were I to live my life over again, I would preach just the same.' He closed his life and labours on 11th April, 1833. [R.J.]

HILL, ROWLAND, Lord, a British general distinguished in the late war, particularly in the peninsula, and at the battle of Waterloo, born 1772, appointed commander-in-chief 1828, created a viscount, and died 1842. Lord Hill was the son of Sir John Hill, who succeeded to the title of Sir Richard Hill, Bart., elder brother of him and of the celebrated minister of Surrey chapel.

HILL, SIR TH. NOEL, a younger broth. of Lord Hill, known as a peninsular officer, 1784-1832.

HILLEL, called 'the Elder' to distinguish him from the subject of the following notice, is regarded by Jewish writers as the most eminent among their ancient rabbis. He was born at Babylon, commencement of the 1st century B.C., and when about 40 years of age removed to Jerusalem, where he became chief of the Sanhedrim, and lived to the extraordinary age of 120 years. He was the first to classify the oral or traditional laws, subsequently embodied in the Mishna, or first part of the Talmud, and the transmission of which is verified in the work itself, at the commencement of the treatise Aboth or 'Ethics of the Fathers.' The other portion of the Talmud, called 'The Gemara,' contains expositions of the Mishna; the latter, therefore, is really the text-book of rabbinical lore, and hence the importance of its arrangement in a comprehensive digest. Hillel is always spoken of with respect for his humanity and patience, as well as his profound wisdom as a moralist. See SHAMMAI. [E.R.]

HILLEL, 'the Younger,' lived in the time of Origen, who is said to have been acquainted with him, about the middle of the 3d century. He was a great reformer of the Jewish calendar, his arrangement of which was nearer by far to astronomical exactness than that of Julian, which remained in use among Christians until its reform by Pope Gregory. Hillel has the reputation, also, of reforming the equinoctial and solstitial periods, and leaving behind him a correct text of the Bible, which he wrote with his own hand, besides contributing to the Talmud. He bears the title of Nasi, or prince of the captivity, and there is a tradition that he was privately baptized before his death by the bishop of Tiberias. [E.R.]

HILLER, M., a Ger. Orientalist, 1646-1725.

HILLIARD, N., an English painter, 1547-1619.

HILPART, JOHN, a Ger. divine, born 1627.

HILTON, WALTER, an English ascetic, 15th c.

HILTON, WILLIAM, R.A., an English historical painter, distinguished for his refined taste in design, and a harmonious and rich style of colouring, was born at Lincoln, 3d June, 1786, and died in London 30th December, 1839. He succeeded Fuseli in 1825 as keeper of the Royal Academy. Owing to the too great quantity, or bad quality of his vehicle, his pictures are already going to pieces. 'Serena,' and 'The Red Cross Knight,' presented to the National Gallery in 1841, is in too bad a condition to be exhibited. The morbid search after nostrums and glazing media, has been one of the most fatal obstructions to the establishment of a great school of painting in England.—(Art Union Journal, 1840.) [R.N.W.]

HILTZ, JOHN, a German architect, 15th c.
HIMERIUS, a Greek sophist, 4th century.
HIMLY, C., a German physician, 1772-1837.
HIMMEL, F. H., a Ger. musician, 1765-1804.
HINCHCLIFFE, JOHN, the son of a stable-keeper, rose to be bishop of Peterborough, 1731-94.
HINCKLEY, JOHN, an Engl. theol., 1617-95.
HINCMAR, archbishop of Rheims, known as a controversial and learned writer, 9th century.
HINDMARSH, ROBERT, a minister and controversial writer of the 'New Church,' author of 'A Seal on the Lips of Unitarians,' &c., died 1835.
HIPPARCHUS, a tynt. of Athens, 528-514 B.C.
HIPPARCHUS, the greatest Astronomer of Antiquity; or rather the founder of Astronomical Science. The dates of the birth and death of Hipparchus are lost; Ptolemy speaks of him as alive between 160 and 125 B C.: neither do any of his writings remain, excepting the Commentary on Aratus,—a production of his youth. It has often been asserted that he observed at Alexandria; but the careful criticism of Delambre leaves no ground for such a supposition: he laboured most probably in Bithynia; certainly at Rhodes. It is to Ptolemy that we owe our knowledge of Hipparchus, who in the fulness of his admiration applies to him the epithet—φιλόπονος καὶ φιλαλήθης (the lover of labour and truth); nor do we think that his successor has ever done him injustice, or sought, as Delambre would insinuate, to absorb a part of his glory into his own. As a pure observer, Hipparchus was probably never surpassed. Of course he wrought with rude instruments, affected by large errors; but all that the Observer himself had to do, was achieved with highest probity and sagacity, and shaped by a rare philosophic spirit. To collect and describe facts exactly, is a service always valuable to Science; more especially when Inquiry is in its infancy: but Hipparchus added the loftier faculty of knowing the precise description of facts, which ought to be observed—the facts pregnant with laws; and he succeeded, therefore, in laying the sure foundation of Astronomical Theory. The Ancients, it is well known, imagined the Earth motionless, and that all celestial bodies move uniformly in circles around it; but, as motions had been detected in the sky which are not uniform, it became the question, how, on the ground of these suppositions, can the observed irregularities be explained? A very fertile idea had been started by Plato and Eudoxus, that a heavenly body moving uniformly on a small circle, might be carried round the earth by a larger circle; and that apparent irregularities, would issue from the combination of these uniform motions. (See article PTOLEMY). Hipparchus appropriated the idea, and realized it; i.e. he laid down the actual machinery which would account for the precise irregularities observed. In this way he constructed a theory of the Sun and Moon; and originated that refined scheme which endured until the period of Copernicus. Knowing where to stop as well as how far to adventure, he only collected materials for the Planetary Theory,—afterwards completed by Ptolemy. We owe besides, to this great Observer the discovery of the Precession of the Equinoxes—a first essential to a knowledge of the motions of the Fixed Stars: he may be said to have invented Trigonometry, plane and spherical; and to have originated our graphical Geo
The reign of Induction in Physical Scienc began with Hipparchus.
HIPPASUS, a Pythagorean phil
HIPPIAS, an Athenian prince, killed
HIPPIAS OF ELIS, a sophist, 5th cen
HIPPISLEY, SIR J. C., a magistr., 1
HIPPO, a Pythagorean philoso., 5th c
HIPPOCRATES, a Gr. geometrician,
HIPPOCRATES. A name common t four physicians of antiquity, but generally for Hippocrates the 2d, who was in many the most celebrated physician of ancient times, and to whom the title of 'Father cine' has been applied. He was the son clides, a physician of Cos, in which islan born, in the year 460 B.C. His mother's Phænarete, by race a Heracleid, while belonged to the Asclepiadæ, as the desce Esculapius were called. His ancestors fo tions had resided in Cos, where they all have practised the healing art; but little that can be relied upon of the incidents o life, and what we have to say of him therefore scanty and unsatisfactory.—Hi received his elementary medical educatio father, and subsequently studied under H a physician of Selymbria in Thrace, who of the first persons to apply gymnastic ex the cure and prevention of diseases; a structions in general science and philoso Gorgias of Leontini, in Sicily, a distingu phist and orator of those times, who wou to have been the brother of Herodicus. T at which he lived was also favourable t velopment of his powers, for he was the porary of Socrates, Plato, Pericles, Herod Thucydides; and we may perhaps attribu circumstance, as well as to the complete ge professional education he had received, t and elegance of his style. On the dea father he left Cos, and travelled for twe through Greece and Asia Minor, passing his time in Macedonia, Thrace, and Thes as dates are wholly wanting, it is impossi in what years of his life these travels formed. The same uncertainty attaches all the subsequent movements of his life, possible to determine whether he lived per in Cos, the medical school of which he the highest pitch of eminence, or wheth lected some city of extra-Peloponnesian his fixed place of abode. He died at L Thessaly, though in what year is unknow age at the time of his death has been stated at eighty-five, ninety, one hundred and one hundred and nine years. He left Thessalus and Dracon, both of whom wer men; and a daughter whose name has preserved, but who married Polybus, also man.—An account of the medical syste pocrates would be unsuited to a work of but we may state generally that he was and sagacious observer of nature, and practice was regulated very much by th tions which a disease presented; hence been considered the founder of the dogm rationalists, in medicine, a sect of great and which is not perhaps wholly extin

y. That the humoral pathology, which maintained its ascendancy in Europe for twenty centuries, was originally derived from his theory of the ing fluids, which he divided into blood, phlegm, ack bile, and yellow bile, is certain; and there n be no doubt that many of his opinions on climate, diet, individual temperament, and the constitution of the atmosphere in the four different asons of the year, influenced the belief of the edical world down even to the age of Sydenham. He knew little or nothing of anatomy, and was not only unacquainted with the circulation of the blood, but with the distinction between arteries and veins, which he arranges in the same class with nerves and tendons; but in spite of this his fame was great, and numerous stories were invented after his death to illustrate his extraordinary celebrity. Thus he was said to have stayed the plague of Athens, though Thucydides, who has described it, and was himself a sufferer from it, makes no mention of him whatever. It has been also recorded that he was solicited by the inhabitants of Abdera to visit their city and to cure Democritus the philosopher of insanity, and there is extant a letter which is urged as a proof of this, though it be a manifest forgery; and that nothing might be wanting to impress upon posterity a sense of his universal authority, it is related of him that he refused an invitation from Artaxerxes Longimanus, king of Persia, to visit that country, together with a large sum of money, but that he declined it because Artaxerxes was the enemy of Greece. These and similar stories are now disregarded, and are looked upon as the fictions of a subsequent age.—Hippocrates wrote in the Ionic dialect of the Greek, and is considered by modern scholars a critical authority in that tongue. His works are generally published in two folio volumes with Latin translations; but there is considerable difference of opinion among critics as to what properly belongs to him in the Hippocratic collection, and what should be assigned to others, probably members of his own family. Those treatises which are received as the genuine compositions of Hippocrates are—I. The 1st and 3d Books of the Epidemics; II. The Prognostics; III. The Aphorisms; IV. The 1st and 2d Books of the Predictions; V. The Treatise on Air, Water, and Places; VI. The Regimen in Acute Diseases; VII. The Treatise on Wounds of the Head. [J.M'C.]

HIPPOLYTUS. Our space does not suffice to record the numerous and contradictory theories which have been formed regarding this remarkable man. Eusebius, Jerome, Gelasius, and Photius, in earlier times, have referred to him, but with an indistinct and inaccurate knowledge of him; the Benedictine monks could not dispel the obscurity which hung over him, and the hypotheses of Baronius, Tillemont, Fabricius, Le Moyne, Basnage, Cave, and others, still left the subject in mist and confusion. The very common opinion prevailed that he was a bishop in the East, and specially in some part of Arabia. It is now ascertained that he was a disciple of Irenæus, was a bishop of Portus Romanus—the harbour of Rome, after the reign of Trajan; and suffered martyrdom under Maximus about the year 236. His statue was accidentally dug up in 1551, and on its sides were inscribed a list of his works and the Paschal Cycle. All this is confirmatory of the description given of him by the Christian poet Prudentius. His works, so called, were published by Fabricius, in 2 vols. folio, and by Gallandi in the second volume of his Bibliotheca Patrum. Hippolytus, as attested by all antiquity, was a voluminous writer on a vast variety of subjects, the majority of which were of a polemical character. A list of his polemical, doctrinal, historical, and exegetical works, the greater part of which are lost, will be found in the first volume of 'Bunsen's Hippolytus and his Age.' A MS. was brought from Mount Athos in 1842, which was called a treatise 'On all Heresies,' and was deposited in the royal library in Paris. In 1846, M. Millar having looked into the book, considered it to be a lost work of Origen, and had it printed in 1851 by the Oxford University Press, under the title of 'Origen Philosophumena.' The Chevalier Bunsen eagerly read the publication, and brought to bear upon it the peculiar sageness and tact of his critical erudition. The result is, that he has proved that the treatise belonged not to Origen as its author but to Hippolytus. In the course of his discussions he has thrown great light on the times and creed of Hippolytus, as well as upon the theology and government of the Roman Church in the times of Severus and Commodus. Hippolytus was more a man of labour than of original thought; rather an honest and learned compiler than a writer of independent vigour. [J.E.]

HIPPONAX, a Greek satirist, 6th century B.C.

HIRAM, a king of Tyre, 1025-985 B.C.

HIRE, L. De La, a French painter, 1606-1656. His son, Philip, cel. as an astronomer, 1640-1719. Gabriel Philip, son of the latter, and successor in his employments, 1677-1719.

HIRSCHING, F. C. G., a Ger. savant, au. of a 'Dictionary of Celebrated Men,' &c., 1762-1800.

HIRT, Aloys, a Ger. archæologist, born 1759.

HIRT, J. F., a German theologian, 1719-1783.

HIRZEL, H., a German author, 1766-1833.

HJELM, P. J., a Swed. mineralog., 1746-1813.

HOADLEY, Benjamin, a prelate of the English Church, and a chief of the party whose principles were brought into fashion by the revolution of 1688, and the accession of the house of Hanover, was born at Westerham, in Kent, in 1676, and died at his palace in Chelsea, 1761. His ability as a controversialist, and his love of civil and religious liberty, became conspicuous in the strife of parties at the beginning of the last century, when he entered the field against Bishop Atterbury, and the High Church party. His share in this debate, and its intimate connection with the settlement of the new dynasty and the liberties of the country, was recognized by the House of Commons, who addressed the queen in his favour, and thus paved the way for his rapid promotion to the sees of Bangor, Hereford, Salisbury, and Winchester, which he held in succession. In 1717, while bishop of Bangor, he preached the sermon before the king which gave rise to the famous Bangorian controversy, in which Hoadley was assailed by the chiefs of the non-jurors, and with most effect by William Law, the doughty champion of authority, both in church and state. This controversy was brought to a close about 1720, without conciliating either the high church party, on the one hand, or the dissenters on the other, and without adding much to Hoadley's character for consistency. With a fine intellect, he was constitutionally compliant and easy, and seems to have been wanting in fidelity to his conscientious convictions. In a word, it is most difficult to justify the career of such a man on any other principles than those of a worldly policy, and of that preference for the good and the true which may often be indulged in as a kind of luxury. Besides his numerous controversial publications, Hoadley was author of 'An Account of the Life, Writings, and Character of Dr. Samuel Clarke,' prefixed to the posthumous works of the latter, published 1732: 'A Plain Account of the Nature and End of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper,' 1735; and a 'Letter' Addressed to Clement Chevalier, in 1756. [E.R.]

HOADLEY, BENJAMIN, eldest son of the preceding, was a physician and philosophical writer. He assisted Hogarth in composing his 'Analysis of Beauty,' and is well known as the auth. of a comedy entitled 'The Suspicious Husband,' 1706-1757.

HOADLEY, JOHN, the youngest son of Bishop Hoadley, was educated for the law, but finally entered the church, and enjoyed several valuable preferments. He is the author of several dramatic works and poems, 1711-1776.

HOAI-TSONG, an emperor of China, 1627-44.

HOARE, P., F.S.A., a dram. au., 1764-1834.

HOARE, SIR R. C., a county hist., 1758-1838.

HOARE, W., an English divine, died 1657.

HOARE, W., an ingenious artist, 1707-1792.

HOBBEMA, M., a Dutch painter, 1611-1699.

HOBBES, THOMAS, born at Malmesbury on the 5th April, 1588, died on 4th December, 1679:—'a great name in philosophy, on account both of the value of what he taught and the extraordinary impulse which he communicated to the spirit of free inquiry in Europe.' Criticism of Hobbes's speculations is here beyond our reach: the statement of a few facts regarding him will enable the student to judge whether the high eulogy just quoted, probably surpasses his deserts. So soon as Hobbes left Magdalen Hall, Oxford, we find those connections beginning which bound him, during a long life, in amity and confidence with the best families of England. Tutor to Lord Cavendish heir of the princely house of Devonshire, he travelled with him through France and Italy. Death struck the pupil only two years after the demise of his father the earl of Devonshire. Hobbes, stung with grief, travelled again; but returned in 1631, at the entreaties of the dowager countess, to teach the young earl, then only thirteen. An inmate of this noble house, which he virtually continued until his own decease, he mingled with all their extensive and distinguished circle; and lived in intercourse with the most celebrated literary men of his own and other nations. Kennet in his 'Memoirs of the Cavendish Family' offers an interesting glimpse of the philosopher's daily life. He dedicated the morning to exercise; the afternoon to study. Having climbed a hill and breakfasted, he went his rounds in the family, waiting also on distinguished strangers, and conversing on the themes which occupied him. At twelve o'clock he dined unceremoniously alone, and then returned to his study, where, with the companionship of his pipe, he devoted the hours to meditation and writing. The subjects occupying him were th that engage the human mind; an time had they engrossed the thoug man in England. Loving truth, n coveting the grounds of it—not in th without grounds, and averring w standing—he sought in an analysis Intellect and Affections, the basis o personal, social, and political: in o longed to discern his place in the reasonable being, and like a brave an man to assert it. The enterprise w and hazardous: novel, for in psyc not one predecessor: hazardous, be save one of the first order, would l the necessary freedom, under press throned and inveterate Ignorance a lived, and of influences insidious more alarming, springing from his ments. But Hobbes surmounted a can be said of him with perfect trut in his life nor writings, did he fail i effect on him of circumstances we trace; he thought as a freeman, seductions or frowns; nay,—the having given him Charles II. as a t —he perilled the royal favour, as sacrifice; to the honour of Charles that the philosopher's uprightness d the monarch's regard. It is easy long life of such a kind, thrown of those ages, could be no welcome need Cromwell himself have dread just contemporary appreciation tha it is our grief and shame, that cont der has its voices still; that men in m never read one page of this illustrio who desire their criticisms to be pa in making him a bugbear. Surely than evil lay at the root of his extra No man ever excited a wider an commotion. Clarendon, Cudworth, nison, Harrington, Henry More,—n of Warburton—'every young Churc would try his arms in thundering o cap.' Now as then, men will rep his opinions: that searcher for Trut and he erred like others. Few thou unaffected by much that will perish all, abides the Thinker,—a veritab ture, formidable, incorruptible, fr all these centuries, gnarled it may l lish oak, but also with roots pro by the Earth, while slighter g and disappear. Hobbes's style the didactic; clear and deep as the graver. Hallam says truly, that on change a word or expression in i exactest mathematical formula. I in distinctly expressing distinct tho alone is its aim. No more accepta recently been made to the stud philosophy and literature, than the of Hobbes's works in 16 volumes owe to Sir William Molesworth.

HOBE, CHARLOTTE DE, a Fren ting, for her sweetness and sensibil

HOBHOUSE, SIR BENJAMIN, a House of Commons and of the go of Mr. Addington, distinguished as the adver- of Pitt, and especially of his action against French republic, 1757-1831.

OBLER, FRANCIS, the well-known clerk of Mansion House, London, 1766-1844.

OCCLEVE, THOMAS, an English poet, 15th c.

OCHE. LAZARE HOCHE was born in 1768 ontreuil, near Versailles, where his father was er of the royal stag-hounds. Hoche entered army at the age of sixteen, and studied the ary sciences with great diligence. He was a us supporter of the republican principles h the French revolution called into activity, e rose rapidly into distinction in the wars st the allied sovereigns. He behaved with ir skill and courage at the siege of Dun- in 1793, and materially aided General Son- n defending that city from the English army the duke of York. He then received the and of the army of the Moselle, and on the nd 27th December, 1793, gained an impor- ictory at Weissenburg. He now fell under spicion of Robespierre and St. Just. He recalled from his command and sent to . The overthrow of Robespierre on the 9th idor, saved Hoche from the guillotine; and placed at the head of one of the armies of nvention, that acted against the Vendeans sanguinary civil war by which the west of was desolated. Hoche here displayed the es of a statesman, as well as those of a l. He reorganized his own army, which come under his predecessors as disorderly as ferocious. He practised, and he made his practise, humanity and good faith towards asantry. He won the confidence of the m priests; and by these means, and by with the greatest skill and energy against yalist bands as held out against him, Hoche plished the pacification of La Vendée and y; an achievement more difficult, and truly glorious than the most showy suc- of the other French generals of the revolu- wars. In 1795 Hoche defeated at Quiberon empt made by the French emigrants, with d of the English, to renew the war in Brit- and in 1796 he was placed at the head of pedition by which the French directory de- to drive the English from Ireland, and her a sister republic of France. Hoche on the 15th December, 1796, from Brest fleet of forty-three sail, and an army nearly strong; but this noble armament was ed by storms, and the frigate on board of Hoche himself had embarked, was separated he rest of the squadron, and with difficulty d the French coast. In 1797 Hoche re- the command of the army of the Sambre e Meuse, and prepared to invade Germany, strike as deep blows against Austria in her n provinces, as Buonaparte was then deal- her in the south. Hoche defeated the ians at Heffendorf, and was on the point ating his opponent, General Kray, and the army of the imperialists, when he was ed in the mid career of success by the news e pacification which Buonaparte and the duke Charles had agreed on at Leoben.— e died in 1797 after a short illness, at the early age of thirty-three. Many attributed his death to poison, but there seems to have been no ground for these suspicions. He was not only one of the bravest soldiers and most skilful generals that the French revolution brought forward, but he was also an accomplished statesman, a sincere patriot, and a man of honour, generosity, and integrity. Napoleon, in speaking of him at St. Helena, truly said,—'Had Hoche lived, I must have subdued him, or he would have subdued me.' Unfortu- nately for France the chance of her being saved by Hoche from Napoleon's despotism, was taken from her by the premature death of the best of the heroes of the republic. [E.S.C.]

HODGES, NATHANIEL, a med. au., 1672-1684.

HODGES, W., a landscape painter, 1744-1798.

HODGSON, JAMES, a mathema. wr., last cent.

HODGSON, DR. R., dean of Carlisle, a nephew and biographer of Bishop Porteus, died 1844.

HODIERNA, J. B., a Sicilian astro., 1597-1660.

HODY, HUMPHREY, a learned divine, 1659-1706.

HOEDT, GERARD, a Dutch paint., 1648-1733.

HOEL, the first of the name, duke of Brittany, 509-545; the second, killed by his brother, 547; the third, 594-612; the fourth, 953-980; the fifth, 1066-1084; the sixth, 1148-1156.

HOESCHEL, D., a Ger. Hellenist, 1556-1617.

HOEST, G., a Danish navigator, 1734-1792.

HOFER, ANDREW, was chief of the Tyrolese in their heroic war against the French and Ba- varians in 1809. The Tyrol had been ceded to Bavaria by Austria at the peace of Presburg. But the Bavarians and their French allies had treated with insult and injury the ancient rights and usages of the Tyrolese, which their Austrian sovereign had always respected. Hence the feel- ing of loyalty to the Austrian emperor was fervent in the Tyrol; and when Austria renewed war with France in 1809, the Tyrolese rose almost to a man in her cause. These brave mountaineers chose Hofer as their generalissimo. Hofer was at this time about forty-two years of age, and kept an inn in the village of Passayer. He showed him- self well worthy of his countrymen's confidence. Under his command the Tyrolese gave the French and Bavarian troops repeated and severe defeats, and for a time expelled them from the whole of the Tyrol. Hofer now acted as viceroy for the Austrian emperor; and throughout his career he was as eminent for moderation and humanity, as for intelligence and valour. When Austria capitu- lated to Napoleon by the treaty of Schönbrun, in October, 1809, she again ceded the Tyrol to Bavaria; and the Tyrolese were ordered to submit to their beaten and bitterest enemies as their lawful masters. They resisted gallantly; and it was only after repeated battles that the over- whelming armies of French, Saxons, and Bava- rians, which were now poured into the Tyrol, succeeded in quelling the brave mountaineers. Hofer for some time escaped the pursuit of his enemies, but he was at last captured on the 27th January, 1810. He was immediately sent to Mantua for trial before one of Napoleon's military tribunals. He was condemned to death, and ordered to be shot within twenty-four hours. He met his fate as a good Christian and a brave sol- dier. The spot on the bastion at Mantua, where he fell, is still visited as a holy place by his countrymen, who cherish with just pride the memory of their hero-martyr. [E.S.C.]

[Monument to Hofer at Inspruck.]

HOFER, J. A., a Tyrolese juriscon., 1765-1820.
HOFFBAUER, J. C., a Ger. philo., 1766-1827
HOFFMAN, DANIEL, a Germ. divine, d. 1611.
HOFFMAN, FREDERICK, a disting. German physician and writer on pathology, 1663-1742.
HOFFMAN, F. B., a Fr. dramatist, long time lit. critic of the 'Journal des Débats,' 1760-1828.
HOFFMAN, G., a Ger. medical au., 1572-1649.
HOFFMAN, JOHN JAMES, a literary savant of Basle, author of a 'Universal Lexicon,' 1635-1706. JOHN MAURICE, his son, a physician and professor, au. of some valuable works on botany, 1653-1727.
HOFFMAN, MAURICE, a Ger. physician and anatomist, best kn. as a wr. on botany, 1622-1698.
HOFFMANN, C., a Ger. med. author, d. 1648.
HOFFMANN, C. G., a Germ. jurist, 1692-1735.
HOFFMANN, CHR. LOUIS, a German physic. and prof., au. of a 'Theory of Disease,' 1721-1807.
HOFFMANN, ERNEST THEODORE WILLIAM, a Ger. dramatic writer and composer, 1776-1822.

HOFLAND, MRS. This popular authoress was the daughter of Mr. Robert Wreaks, a manufacturer of Sheffield, where she was born in 1770, and where, at the age of twenty-six, she was married to her first husband, Mr. Hoole. That gentleman dying two years afterwards, left her in embarrassed circumstances, and she published a volume of poems by subscription, with the proceeds of which she opened a school at Harrowgate, where she commenced the series of works which have rendered her name so popular, and effected so much good among young people. In 1808, she was married to Mr. Hofland, an admired landscape painter, and the year following she removed to London with him. In a few years, the fame of Mrs. Hofland was so well established that Queen Charlotte became her unsolicited patroness, and 'The Son of a Genius,' published in 1813, was translated into several of the continental languages. The works of Mrs. Hofland are chiefly in the form of novels, or of contributions to the magazines and annuals, but they are all marked by her desire to promote the improvement and elevation of character testimony of Mr. and Miss E other book in their time had good in Ireland, as the nove Mrs. Hofland died in 1844, as her domestic virtues, her happ conversational powers, as for have rendered her name familia
English literature.

HOFLAND, THOMAS CHR
tinguished landscape painter, f scenery and classic subjects, 17

HOGARTH, WILLIAM, was 10th December, 1697; he was early age to Gamble, a silversmi piration of his term in 1718, he in copper for the booksellers.
the only daughter of Sir James her father's consent, and set up ter with considerable success. H his remarkable series of satirical ing on the social abuses of his [Hogarth's Hou

lot's Progress' in 1734; the ' 1735; and the 'Marriage à la in the National Gallery. In an author in his 'Analysis with a View of Fixing the Taste.' In 1757 he wa painter to the king: he October, 1764, and was bu garth was a good painter a —(Nichols, Biographical 1782; Ireland, Hogart 1791.)

HOGENDORP, G. C. who greatly promoted th
Orange by the insurrecti
His brother, THIERRY, war under Louis Buona

HOGG, JAMES, the — erroneously it is on the 25th of Januar
He belonged to the shire, where he follo of his ancestors. His Macdonald,' acquired several successful l
siderable of which
'The Mountain M
in sundry sheep-f

to Edinburgh in 1810, with the view of living by his wits. He there published a volume of songs, 'The Forest Minstrel,' and conducted a periodical called 'The Spy,' which existed for about a year. It was not, however, until the appearance of 'The [Birth-place of James Hogg.]

Queen's Wake,' in 1813, that he became greatly distinguished as an author. Besides 'The Pilgrims of the Sun,' 'Queen Hynde,' and other poetical works, Hogg wrote numerous tales and novels, few of which are now much read. He was on terms of friendship with Scott, Wilson, and other literary magnates of Edinburgh, and the manner in which he was made to figure in the celebrated 'Noctes' of Blackwood—although sometimes complained of by himself—contributed not a little to his fame. With less masculine sense than Burns, and far inferior in tender and passionate earnestness, he yet possessed a higher creative fancy; and many of his pieces, such as 'Bonny Kilmeny,' are marked by a certain wild and dreamy fascination, unlike anything else with which we are acquainted. Hogg spent his later years at Altrive, on the Yarrow, where he died on the 21st November, 1835. [J.H.]

HOHENLOE, Alexander Leopold, prince of, and bishop of Sardica, celebrated for the surprising cures effected by him, was born in the principality of Hohenloe 1794, and died at Grosswaradin in Hungary 1849. The mother of the young prince was a woman of remarkable piety, and being left a widow when he was only two years of age, she had the entire control of his education. The religious habits induced upon him at home were confirmed by his attachment to the Jesuits when he went to Rome to complete his studies, and he at length embraced the ecclesiastical profession with the enthusiasm of a saint of the middle ages. He commenced his duties at Bamberg and Munich 1817, and his preaching, it is said, drew tears from the most insensible, and brought the most hardened to repentance. In 1821 the rumours of his miraculous power of healing began to spread abroad, and it is remarkable that his cures were chiefly effected by prayer, and that many of them are said to have been performed at a distance with as much effect as under his own hand. Space is not afforded us to recite particular instances, but he gave sight to the blind, hearing to the deaf, speech to the dumb, and caused the lame to walk. The derision which marks the recital of these facts by biographers who cannot dispute them, only proves their own want of that living faith and fervid charity which was the secret of the success of Prince Hohenloe. The flippant explanation of such phenomena by the sudden tension of the spirit, the 'force of imagination,' or by other kinds of mental impressions, is mere verbiage, unless it be understood that the spirit is also substance, as implied by Lord Bacon, who writes: 'There is the possibility of an action of one person upon another by the force of the imagination of one of those two persons; because as one body receives the action of another body, so, one spirit is adapted to receive the action of another spirit;' which agrees with what Dr. Heylin declares of touching for the scrofula, that he has 'Seen children brought before the king—some hanging at their mothers' breasts, and others in the arms of their nurses, all touched and cured.' There is every reason to believe that the cures of Prince Hohenloe were magnetic healings, rendered doubly powerful by the religious spirit associated with them; and that the substantive operation is the same in ordinary magnetism and in the cure of disease by faith, with a distinction which is more clearly traced in the article Mesmer. It is no disparagement of the mere facts in this case, that they were eagerly promulgated, and in some particular instances, perhaps, exaggerated by the Jesuits, whose re-establishment was greatly aided by them. Whether this 'new Xavier' lost his power, or chose to exercise it in private after the attacks that were made upon him by the sceptics is not known, but the fame of his performances had died away many years before his death. Prince Hohenloe is the author of several devotional treatises published between 1820-30. [E.R.]

HOHENLOE, L. C. F. Leopold, prince of, one of the most ardent enemies of the French revolution, in whose principality the emigrant nobles were permitted to organize their armies, and who furnished them with two auxiliary regiments, 1731-1799. His son, E. Aloys Joachim, distinguished in the same line of policy, and a marshal of France under Louis XVIII., died 1829.

HOHENLOE-INGELFINGEN, Frederick Louis, prince of, a distinguished general in the wars of the Fr. rev., and commander of the Prussian and Saxon army defeated at Jena, 1746-1818.

HOHENLOE-KIRCHBERG, prince of, a general of artillery in the service of Austria, died while commanding the army on the Rhine, 1796.

HOLBACH, Paul Thyry, Baron D', a Germ. mineralogist, and wr. on Nat. Religion, 1723-1789.

HOLBEIN, Hans, or Johannes, was born at Augsburg in 1498, his father and grandfather of the same name, being also natives of that city: the father, however, when Hans was about seventeen or eighteen years old only, settled in Basle in Switzerland, apparently in 1519. The celebrated Erasmus is said to have been one of the first to appreciate young Holbein, and an unauthenticated story is told that the earl of Arundel, passing through Basle, recommended him to try his fortune in England. He, however, finally made the visit to this country to escape the ill-temper of his wife: he came to London in 1526, bringing letters from Erasmus to Sir Thomas More, who ultimately for of the eight different epochs assigned to him, the oldest differs from the most recent by a period of 460 years. According to the theory which carries along with it the greatest amount of probability, Homer flourished in the second century after the taking of Troy, from about B.C. 1019 to B.C. 984, or from 165 to 200 years after the Trojan era, having been born about B.C. 1044. He appears to have been an Asiatic Greek, and a native of Smyrna, an Ionian city on the coast of Asia Minor; and from the circumstance of having been brought forth on the banks of the Meles, a river which ran beside the city, is said to have obtained the name Melisigenes. It is impossible, however, to come to any satisfactory conclusion on subjects which history has given us such scanty materials to determine. On one point all traditions agree, that he was afflicted with blindness; and his descriptions of external nature warrant the conclusion that this misfortune arose from accident or disease, and not from the operation of nature at his birth. The writers of antiquity unanimously considered the Iliad and Odyssey as the productions of a certain individual called Homer; and there is no evidence that the question of divided authorship was ever entertained by them. The existence of wandering minstrels is recognized in the early literature of Greece; and it has accordingly been inferred that the minute and accurate geographical knowledge which is displayed in his works, was acquired by the poet as he wandered from court to court, delighting his auditors with the 'Tale of Troy Divine.' 'Homer,' says Bentley, 'wrote a sequel of songs and rhapsodies, to be sung by himself for small earnings and good cheer, at festivals and other days of merriment; the Iliad he made for the men, and the Odysseis for the other sex.' Such, it is probable, was the state of the Homeric poems till the time of Pisistratus, who, aided by certain literary men, made a collection of the poet's works, superior in extent and accuracy to all that had preceded it, and thus preserved to future generations the noblest monuments of Greek genius. The poems attributed to Homer are the Iliad and Odyssey, to which some have added the Homeric Hymns. The Iliad stands first as the oldest, and also the most complete specimen of a national heroic poem. Its subject is the revenge taken by Achilles on Agamemnon for depriving him of his mistress, Briseis, during the siege of Troy, and the evils which in consequence befell the Greeks. The poem is divided into twenty-four books, which detail the movements of the besiegers during the period of Achilles' wrath, and end with the death and burial of Hector. The Odyssey, which is likewise divided into twenty-four books, contains the adventures of Ulysses when on his return from Troy to his native island Ithaca. The hymns, epigrams, &c., which are ascribed to Homer, are of very doubtful origin. 'In conception and portraiture of character,' says Colonel Mure, 'and the deeper vein of tragic pathos, Homer may be equalled, if not surpassed, by Shakspeare; in moral dignity of thought and expression by Milton; in the grace and delicacy of his lighter pictures by Petrarch and Ariosto; and in the gloomy grandeur of his supernatural imagery by Æschylus or Dante. But no one of these poets has combined, in a similar degree, those various elements of of which they may separately c with him.'

HOMER, H., a classical editor,
HOMILIUS, G. A., a Ger. con
HOMMEL, C. F., a German ju HONAIN, ABOU-YEZID, an A and translator of learned works, 9 HONDEKOETER, GILES, a painter, born 1588. GYSBRECHT pil, celebrated for the represent born 1618. MELCHIOR, son of his superior in the same line of ar HONDIUS, or DE HONDT, a the first of whom, JOST or JO guished as an engraver, especially 1611. His son, HENRY, called th traits and landscapes, 1578-161
HENRY for his portraits of the 1588-1644. WILLIAM, a son of portrait engraver, born 1601. A posed grandson of the first Hondi as a painter of hunting pieces, 16
HONE, N., an Irish enamel pa
HONE, WILLIAM, a miscellan political satirist, whose 'Every-da of acknowledged value; though p earlier part of his career for a par gy, he latterly became sub-edito newspaper, 1780-1842.
HONORATUS. There are tw
name in the Romish calendar; th
Arles and founder of the monaste
429. The second, bishop of M religious writer, born about 420 o
HONORE - DE - SAINTE - M
VANZELLE, called the fath., a Fr.
HONORIUS, son of Theodosiu
384, became emperor of the West
Arcadius emperor of the East, Theodosius 395; died, after being jugated by the Goths under Alari HONORIUS, the first of the Rome, 626-638; the second, 1124 distinguished for his political activ firming the order of St. Dominic a Assise, 1216-1227; the fourth, 12
HONORIUS OF AUTUN, profes of theology and metaphysics, died
HONTHEIM, JOHN NICHOLA
Catholic theologian, author of w effect a union among Christians, the political system of the Vatica HONTHORST, GERARD DE, a known in Italy as Gerardo della N
His brother WILLIAM, also a pai
HOOCH, P. DE, a Flemish pai
HOOD, ROBIN, a chivalrous ou of Richard I., whose exploits in are the subjects of many admired popular legends celebrate his ge in archery. The principal incide are to be found in Stowe, and a co of the ancient poems, songs, an to him was published by Ritson in HOOD, SAMUEL, Viscount,
mander, distinguished in several commencement of the last war, p bombardment of Havre; the de

De Grasse under Rodney; the siege of Toulon; and the capture of Corsica; after which he was named Governor of Greenwich Hospital, and promoted to the rank of admiral. Born at Farncombe in Devonshire, 1724, died 1816.

HOOD, SIR SAMUEL, a cousin and companion-in-arms of the preceding, died in the chief command of the East Indian fleet, 1814.

HOOD, THOMAS, the son of a bookseller in London, was born there in 1798. After receiving miscellaneous education, he was placed, in his tenth year, in the counting-house of a Russian merchant; but, after an interval of repose on account of ill-health, he learned the art of engraving. In 1821, having already contributed fugitive papers to radicals, he became sub-editor of the London Magazine; and for all the rest of his life he was author by profession, though he also frequently sold himself and his readers by inserting in his books humorous illustrations designed and etched by himself. His career was that of an honourable, lively, and industrious man, who was never able to raise himself above the necessity of toiling for a livelihood; and who, long suffering under ill health, continued bravely, even on his deathbed, his efforts to provide for his wife and children. Hood's humour was of an extremely singular cast. It was, in an unusual degree, intensely serious even when with strength of comic humour; and perhaps his chief defect lay in his incapacity of either combining these elements harmoniously, or giving himself to either without the other. As a punster he was inimitable; yet even here his most humorous flights bear with them a burden of thoughtful meaning which is hurtful to their comic effect. His two novels, 'Tylney Hall,' and the uncompleted story called 'Our Family,' are the least successful of his attempts. The chief collections of his witticisms are the 'Whims and Oddities,' and the Comic Annual.' In a volume containing The Plea of the Midsummer Fairies,' and other poems, he indicated the power of rising into a higher sphere of poetry. 'Eugene Aram's Dream' is very striking; and yet more pathetic is his well-known 'Song of the Shirt.' This wild and vigorous piece was written shortly before his death, which took place in 1845. [W.S.]

HOOFT, CORNELIUS VAN, an eminent Dutch poet and historian, 1581-1647.

HOOGE, P. DE, a Dutch painter, died 1708.

HOOGE, R. DE, a Dutch eng., abt. 1638-1720.

HOOGEVEEN, H., a Dut. Hellenist, 1712-91.

HOOGSTRAATEN, DAVID VON, a Latin poet, wrote a Dutch and Latin dictionary, 1658-1724.

HOOGSTRAATEN, JAMES VAN, a Dutch friar, one of the first opponents of the reform., d. 1527.

HOOGSTRAATEN, THIERRY VAN, a landscape painter of Antwerp, 1596-1640. His son, DAVID, a painter and poet, 1627-1678.

HOOK, JAMES, a composer of operas, melodramas and songs, distinguished for his amazing industry, 1746-1827. His son of the same name, dean of Worcester, author of some dramatic writings, but more celebrated as a controversial divine and political pamphleteer, died 1828.

HOOK, THEODORE EDWARD, born in London in 1788, was the son of a musical composer. Educated finally, he became, in his teens, a writer of opera and farces (some of them successful); while he was yet more famous for audacious practical jokes. He found his way into gay and aristocratic society through his ready wit and inexhaustible fertility of puns, his musical accomplishments, and his extraordinary feats of extemporaneous rhyming. In 1812, the liking which the Prince Regent had formed for him made him treasurer of the Mauritius, without either knowledge of business or common prudence. In 1818, he was sent home under a guard, being accused of peculation; and, though the criminal charge was dropped, he was held a debtor of government in a very large amount, which he never made any endeavours to discharge. He attempted, however, not unsuccessfully, to serve the ministry of the day, by establishing, in 1820, the 'John Bull' newspaper; and in it appeared his best witticisms, which indeed do not rise above the level of newspaper jesting. He wrote novels, the earlier of which, particularly 'Sayings and Doings,' were once fashionable. But for not a few years his career was both discreditable and really unhappy. He was tasking his mind in authorship, while the greater part of his time was engrossed by the gay society in which his wit made him so acceptable; his affairs were falling into irretrievable disorder through thoughtless extravagance; and his health was giving way under increasing habits of intoxication. He died in 1841. [W.S.]

HOOKE, NATHANIEL, a native of Ireland, known as a zealous catholic and historian of Rome, and as the assistant of Sarah, duchess of Marlborough, when compiling her memoirs, died 1763.

HOOKE, ROBERT, a mathematician and experimental philosopher, dist. for his numerous mechanical inventions and discoveries in science, 1635-1703.

HOOKER, JOHN, a learned historian and antiquarian, born about 1524, died 1601.

HOOKER, RICHARD, the famous author of the 'Ecclesiastical Polity,' was born about 1553, at the village of Heavitree, near Exeter. His own parents were in narrow circumstances, but the family had given several mayors to that city, and Richard was nephew of John Hooker, the historian, by whom he was introduced to Bishop Jewel. The latter provided for his education by sending him as clerk to Corpus Christi College, Oxford, and settling a pension upon him. In 1577 he was received Master of Arts, and two years later appointed professor of Hebrew. Having taken holy orders in 1584, he was presented to the rectory of Drayton-Beauchamp, in Buckinghamshire, and about a year afterwards became master of the temple in London, where, at that time, Walter Travers, a zealous puritan, was afternoon lecturer. The opposition between the doctrines taught by Hooker, a staunch episcopalian, in the morning, and those of the presbyterian in the afternoon, soon grew to an open controversy. Travers was at length put to silence by the court of High Commission, and published his appeal to the Privy Council, the answer to which by Hooker, was the germ of the work on which his celebrity now rests. The extensive learning and eloquent command of the resources of the English tongue displayed in that work have been the admiration of some of the greatest names in literature. It is hardly necessary to state that its principles are a defence of the English establishment, but it is kable at the same time for its anticipation e political doctrines of the Whigs, deriving overnment from the implied consent of the ple, or the free choice and judgment of the erned. The 'Ecclesiastical Polity,' is to this thor the armoury of the Anglican Church. Its 00. His life was written by Isaac Walton, and ublished with the second edition of Hooker's works in 1666, and has since been frequently reprinted with them. [E.R.]

HOOKER, Th., an English divine, 1586-1647.
HOOLE, Charles, a schoolmaster, author of several introductory works in Latin, 1610-1666.
HOOLE, John, a celebrated dramatic writer, translator of Ariosto and Tasso, &c., 1727-1803.
HOOPER, George, bishop of Bath and Wells, distinguished as an Oriental scholar and ecclesiastical antiquarian, 1640-1727.
HOOPER, HOPER, or HOUPER, John, bishop of Gloucester under Edward VI., author of many pious works, burnt in the time of Qu. Mary, 1555.
HOORNBEECK, J., a Dutch divine, 1617-66.
HOORNE, J. Van, a distingd. Scottish lawyer—
HOPE, Charles, a Scotch botanist, 1725-1786.
Lord President of the Court of Session, 1763-1851.
HOPE, John, celebrated for his works in HOPE, Thomas, illustration of art, especially of ancient costume and the life of the Greeks, died 1831.
HOPE, Sir Th., a Scotch lawyer, died 1646.
HOPITAL, Michael De L', a French states.
HOPITAL, cel. for his integrity, died 1573.
and diplomatist, Wm. Francis Anthony De L', HOPITAL, Marquis De St. Mesme, a Fr. mathem., 1661-1704.
HOPKINS, Ezekiel, a learned English prelate,
1633-1690. His son, Charles, a dramatist, 1664-1699. John, brother of the latter, author of 'Amasia,' a collection of poems, born 1675.
HOPKINS, Lemuel, an American physician, distinguished as a political writer, 1750-1801.
HOPKINS, Samuel, an American sectarian,
au. of a 'Treatise on the Millennium,' 1721-1803.
HOPKINS, Stephen, an American statesman,
dist. as an economist and mathematician, 1707-85.
HOPKINS, W., an English divine, 1647-1700.
HOPKINS, W., an Arian writer, 1706-1786.
HOPKINSON, Francis, a distinguished political writer of America, and an active promoter of American independence, 1738-1791.
HOPPERS, J., a Dutch diplomatist, 1523-76.
HOPPNER, J., a portrait painter, 1759-1810.
HOPTON, Arthur, a mathemat., 1588-1614.
HOPTON, Ralph, Lord, an Engl. general dist.
in the Low Countries, and as a royalist, d. 1652.
HOPTON, Susanna, a religi. wr., 1627-1709.
HORACE. Quintus Horatius Flaccus, was born near Venusia (now Venosa), a town on the confines of Apulia and Lucania, in the south of Italy, on the 8th of December, B.C. 65. The materials for his life are derived almost entirely from his own works. His father, who was a respectable freedman, exercised the profession of a collector of payments at auctions; and having, by this comparatively humble calling, realized a competency, which he invested in the purchase of a house and farm in the neighbourhood of Venusia, there settled as a small farmer. In this house the poet was born, and here he spent the years of his boyhood.
When he was about twelve years of age, his father,
not satisfied with the provincial school of Venusia, had him removed to Rome, and placed under the care of Orbilius, an old military man, whose academy was for a long period one of the first in Rome. Though by no means rich, he had a tender regard for the feelings of his son who was now to mix with boys of the highest class; and he accordingly provided him with the requisite dress and attendance of slaves, he himself watching over his morals with gentle severity. At the school of Orbilius, Horace was instructed in grammar, and in the Latin and Greek languages; Livius Andro-nicus being the class-book in the former, and Homer in the latter. Athens was at this time regarded as the university of the world; and thither Horace, in accordance with the prevailing practice, repaired in his eighteenth year, B.C. 46, to complete his education by a course of philosophy and science, under Greek masters. The advantages which he derived from his residence there are evinced by his familiarity with the whole range of Greek poetry, and especially with the terse and pointed language of the Comedians. But the civil wars which followed the death of Julius Cæsar, B.C. 44, interrupted him in his studious and peaceful retirement. The arrival of Brutus at Athens, roused the patriotic feelings of the youthful Romans, and, along with others, Horace ardently embraced the cause of the Republic. Though entirely inexperienced in war, he was promoted to the rank of military tribune, with the command of a legion, and in this character shared in the defeat at Philippi, B.C. 42. After the battle, having now forfeited his estate, he returned to Rome, where his poverty perhaps saved him from proscription;
and by acting as a clerk in the quæstor's office,
and practising the strictest economy, he contrived to live till he found means of making himself known to the poets Varius and Virgil, by whom his name was first mentioned to Mæcenas. The first interview with his future patron and friend seems not to have been satisfactory; for it was not till after nine months had elapsed that Mæcenas requested him to repeat his visit. This apparently unpropitious beginning, however, was soon followed by a friendship which speedily ripened into intimacy; and which introduced the poet to the highest and most refined society in Rome. The friend of the prime minister found easy access to the emperor; Horace was soon on terms of familiarity with Augustus, and enjoyed his friendship and patronage during the remainder of his life.
But the friendship of Mæcenas brought something more substantial to Horace than the mere increase of acquaintance in the higher circles—his patron made him independent for life by the gift of an estate in the Sabine territory, about thirty-four miles from Rome. The estate was not large, but it was prettily situated, and entirely suited to the tastes and wants of the poet. His admiration of the beautiful scenery in the neighbourhood of Tibur (Tivoli), induced him to hire or purchase a cottage in that romantic town; and all the later years of his life were passed between these two country residences and Rome. Horace died on the 19th of November, B.C. 8, at the age of fifty-seven—a few months after the death of his friend and patron Mæcenas. His works consist of two books of Satires, a book of Epodes, four books of Odes, two books of Epistles, and a treatise on the Art of Poetry. Want of space prevents us from offering a sketch of Horace's character as a man and as a poet. Though living on terms of intimacy with the great, he retained through life his cherished independence, and complimented his powerful patrons without the servility of flattery. His works have commanded the admiration of all succeeding ges; and though deficient, perhaps, in some of e highest elements of poetry, will continue to be d and studied as models of simplicity and cultsted taste. [G.F.]

ORAPOLLO. See ORUS APOLLO.

ORBERG, M., a learned English divine, au- of a 'Treatise on Hell Torments,' 1707-1773.

ORBERG, P., a Swedish painter, died 1814.

ORDT, COUNT DE, a Swedish officer in the e of Russia, au. of 'Historic Memoirs,' d. 1785.

ORMAN, W., a botanical author, died 1535.

ORMISDAS, pope of Rome, reigned 514-523.

ORMISDAS, the first of the name, king of , reigned 271-272; the second, 303-311; , usurped the throne, 457-460; the fourth, ul successor of the great Chosroes, 579-592.

ORN, the name of a distinguished family in en, the best known of whom are GUSTAVE, Horn, one of the lieutenants of Gustave phe, and field-marshal and constable of Sweden e reign of Christina, born 1592. ARVID RD, Count Horn, of the same family, prinstigator of the revolution of 1719, and chief e English party, 1664-1742. FREDERICK N, a general in the service of France, afterds counsellor to Adolphus Frederick and tave III., 1715-1796. The son of the latter, NT HORN, a man of letters, banished for his plicity with Anckærstroem, died 1823.

HORN, CHARLES EDWARD, a ballad and opera mposer, author of 'Cherry Ripe,' 'I've been aming,' and similar songs, 1786-1849.

HORN, F. CHR., a German critic, 1781-1837.

HORN, G., a Bavarian historian, 1620-1670.

HORN, J. VAN, a Swedish physician, 1662-1724.

HORN, or HORNES, PHILIP DE MONTMORENCI-NIVELLE, Count, a Spanish general of the Low Countries, executed for conspiring with the house of Orange 1568. His son, FLORIS DE MONTMORENCI, executed in Spain 1570.

HORNE, GEORGE, a learned English prelate, well known as the author of 'A Commentary on the Book of Psalms,' was born 1730, and was early distinguished as a diligent Hebrew scholar, and a partizan of John Hutchinson. His first publication was an ironical attack on Newton, in 1751, entitled 'The Theology and Philosophy in Cicero's Somnium Scipionis Explained; or a Brief Attempt to Demonstrate that the Newtonian System is agreeable to the Notions of the Wisest Ancients, and that mathematical principles are the only sure ones.' This was followed by several works of a similar character in the course of the next ten years, including attacks on Dr. Shuckford, and Dr. Kennicott, with the latter of whom, the young scholar, at a later period, became intimately acquainted. Horne took orders in 1753, was successively president of Magdalen College 1768, chaplain to the king 1771, vice-chancellor of the university of Oxford 1776, dean of Canterbury 1781, and bishop of Norwich 1790. He died in 1792, and was buried at Elham, in Kent. There can be no hesitation in pronouncing that Bishop Horne was a great biblical scholar, but too much inclined perhaps to write on subjects of which he had no true understanding. In proof of this it is enough to say, that the same hand which wrote in support of John Hutchinson, wrote against William Law. He is the author of many works besides the 'Commentary,' on which he bestowed nearly twenty years' labour, and the latter must always hold a distinguished place in biblical literature. [E.R.]

HORNECK, A., a German divine, 1641-1696.

HORNECK, O., a Ger. poet and hist., 1250-1310.

HORNEMANN, FREDERIC CONRAD, a celebr. Ger. traveller empld. by the African Soc., 1772-97.

HORNER, FR., a political economist, 1778-1817.

HORNIUS, GEO., a Ger. historian, 1620-1670.

HORNSBY, TH., an Eng. astronom., 1734-1810.

HORNTHORST, GERARD, a distinguished Dutch painter, 1592-1660.

HORREBOW, P., a Danish astron., 1697-1764.

HORREBOW, V., a Danish navigator, 1712-60.

HORROX, JEREMIAH, a distinguished discoverer in astronomy, author of a theory of lunar motion, afterwards verified by Newton, 1619-1641.

HORSBURY, J., a Sc. hydrograph., 1762-1836.

HORSLEY, JOHN, an antiq. savant, 1685-1731.

HORSLEY, SAMUEL, an English prelate, celebrated for his numerous works in theology, science, and classical literature, 1733-1806.

HORSTIUS, JAMES, a German physician, author of a work on Sleep-walking, 1539-1600. His nephew, GREGORY, a physician and medical author, 1578-1636. The son of the latter, of the same name, published his father's works in 1660, and his brother, DANIEL JOHN, was a writer on anatomy and editor of several medical works.

HORSTIUS, J. M., a Germ. editor, 1597-1644.

HORT, or HORTE, J., an Engl. div., d. 1751.

HORTA, GARCIAS AB., a Portu. herbal., 16th c.

HORTENSE EUGENIE DE BEAUHARNAIS, daughter of Josephine, the consort of Napoleon Buonaparte, and of the Vicomte De Beauharnais, her first husband, was born at Paris 1783, and married to Louis Buonaparte, the brother of Napoleon, in 1802. The match had been desired by the consul for political reasons, and it proved a most unhappy one. In 1806, Hortense became queen consort of Holland, and about a year afterwards was separated from her husband after giving birth to three sons:—1. NAPOLEON CHARLES, who died in infancy, and whose intended adoption by Napoleon was refused by Louis. 2. NAPOLEON LOUIS, who was baptized by the pope Pius VII., and instead of attaining the high destiny proposed for him, was killed in an insurrection at Romagna 1832; and 3. LOUIS NAPOLEON, the present emperor of the French. On the divorce of her mother, Josephine, Queen Hortense joined her in her retirement at Malmaison, and after her death in 1814, so soon followed by the fall of Napoleon, became an unprotected and calumniated wanderer, until her residence was fixed at Augsburg by the king of Bavaria. She died October 5th, 1837. Her disposition was modest and retiring: her influence at the court of Napoleon was generously exercised in favour of the distressed, and her affectionate solicitude for the emperor was fully manifested after the disaster of Waterloo. Hortense was duchess of St. Leu in virtue of a settlement made by the allies betw. the first fall of Napoleon and the hundred days. [E.R.]

HORTENSIUS, a German classic, 1501-1577.

HORTENSIUS, QUINTUS, a celebrated orator and consul of Rome, died B.C. 50.

HORTON, TH., a learned divine, died 1673.

HORUS APOLLO. See ORUS APOLLO.

HOSEA, a prophet of Samaria, 8th cent. B.C.

HOSEA, the last king of Israel, 8th cent. B.C.

HOSKINS, JOHN, an Engl. poet, 1566-1638.

HOSPINIAN, R., a Swiss controv., 1547-1626.

HOSPITAL, MICHAEL DE L'. See HOPITAL.

HOSSFIELD, J. W., a Ger. mathe., 1768-1837.

HOST, N. TH., a German botanist, 1763-1834.

HOSTE, JOHN, a Fr. mathematician, d. 1631.

HOSTE, PAUL, a French engineer, 1652-1700.

HOSTILIAN, a son of the emperor Decius, reigned some months with Gallus, and died 252.

HOSTUS, M., a Germ. antiquarian, 1509-1587.

HOTHAM, H., the admiral intrusted with the blockade of the western coast of France after the battle of Waterloo, and who received Napoleon on board the Bellerophon, 1776-1833.

HOTMAN, F., a Fr. jurisconsult, 1524-1590.

HOTTINGER, JOHN HENRY, one of the most learned of the Swiss reformers, especially in the Oriental languages, 1620-1667. JOHN JAMES, his son, also a classical scholar and theologian, author of Theological Dissertations, and an 'Ecclesiastical History of Switzerland,' 1652-1735.

HOTZE, J. C. VAN, an Austrian gen., k. 1799.

HOUARD, D., a Fr. jurisconsult, 1725-1802.

HOUBIGANT, CH. FR., a learned French priest, au. of a Latin version of the Bible, &c., 1686-1783.

HOUCHARD, JEAN NICHOLAS, a general of the French revolution, the successor of Custine in the command of the armies on the Moselle and the Rhine, executed on a charge of treason, 1740-93.

HOUDON, J. A., a French sculpt., 1741-1828.

HOUDRY, VINCENT, a Fr. Jesuit, 1631-1729.

HOUEL, J. P. L., a French painter, 1735-1813.

HOUGH, JOHN, bishop of Worcester, celebrated for his opposition to James II., 1651-1743.

HOUGHTON, MAJOR, an African trav., d. 1791.

HOULAGOU, a Mogul prince, died 1265.

HOUMAIOUN, the second Mogul sultan of Hindostan, born 1509. Being defeated in 1541 by Chir-Khan, he reconquered his kingdom in 1555, and died the following year.

HOUNG-WOU, a Chinese emperor, 1327-1398.

HOUSTON, W., a disting. botanist, died 1733.

HOUTEVILLE, C. F., a French ecclesiastic, author of 'La Vérité de la Religion Chrétienne, Prouvée par les Faits,' 1688-1742.

HOUTMAN, CORNELIUS, founder of the first Dutch factory in the East Indies, 1550-1608. His brother, FREDERIC, governor of Amboine, and author of a Malay dictionary, 1607.

HOVEDEN, ROGER DE, an English historian, of the times succeeding the annals of Bede, namely, from 731 to the third year of King John, 1202. His work is held in the highest esteem by the learned for its faithfulness.

HOW, WILLIAM, a botanist, 1619-1656.

HOWARD. The Howards are well known as one of the noblest families of England, and many of them have arrived at distinction. The principal are—THOMAS HOWARD, earl of Surrey, and third duke of Norfolk, an eminent statesman and naval and military commander, distinguished at the battle of Flodden, 1488-1554. EDWARD, a younger brother of the preceding, and admiral of England, killed in action with the French, 1512. HENRY, earl of Surrey, eldest son of Thomas, an accomplished chevalier, and the first polite writer of love verses in the English tongue, beheaded on a trumpery charge of high treason, 1516-1546. HENRY, second son of the poet, and earl of Northampton, known as a trimmer at court and as a man of letters, implicated in the murder of Overbury, 1539-1614. CHARLES, known as Lord Effingham and earl of Nottingham, and grandson of the duke of Norfolk, commander of the channel fleet on the invasion of England by the Spanish Armada, 1536-1624. THOMAS, earl of Arundel, and earl marshal in the reign of Charles I., known as a diplomatist and antiquarian, died 1646. HENRY, his second son, and sixth duke of Norfolk, by whom the Arundelian marbles, collected by his father, were presented to the university of Oxford, about 1668. CHARLES, eleventh duke of Norfolk, and formerly earl of Surrey, known as a statesman in opposition to Lord North and Pitt, 1746-1815.

HOWARD, CATHERINE, daughter of Lord Edmund Howard, third son of Thomas duke of Norfolk, married to Henry VIII. on his divorce from Anne of Cleves, 1540, beheaded 1549.

HOWARD, EDWARD, a lieutenant in the royal navy, author of 'Rattlin the Reefer,' 'Jack Ashore,' and other marine novels, died 1842.

HOWARD, FREDERIC, earl of Carlisle, son of Henry the fourth earl, and grandson of William fourth Lord Byron, known as a poet and a partizan of the government, 1748-1825.

HOWARD, GEORGE EDWARD, a poet, architect, and political writer, died 1786.

HOWARD, H., a miscellaneous writer, author of 'Memorials of the Howard Family,' 1757-1842.

[Birth-place of Howard, Clapton, Middlesex.]

HOWARD, JOHN, the philanthropist, was born at Hackney, London, in 1726. His father left an immense fortune, but in his will, expressly prohibited his getting the control of it till he had reached his twenty-fifth year. His guardians bound him an apprentice to a grocer. But having purchased his indentures, he left the business in disgust, and set out on a continental tour. On his return to London, he married his landlady, a widow considerably older than himself, out of pure gratitude for her attentions to him during a lingering sickness. But she dying soon after, he again resolved to travel, and went to Portugal with a view to examine the ruins of Lisbon after the earthquake. The vessel in which he sailed was attacked by a French privateer, and all on board made prisoners. Besides the loss of his liberty, he was subjected to various and severe privations in his place of confinement; and it was the recollection of his personal sufferings that awakened his sympathies for the inmates of prisons. Being released on an exchange of prisoners, he returned, and his first and earnest efforts were made to bring the subject before the public and the parliament of Britain. He now married a second time, but his wife died in a few years after, leaving him with an only child. For a time he resided on his estate at Cardington, Bedford, dividing his attention between the management of his property, and the domestic education of his son. But this son, becoming the subject of a hopeless derangement, was obliged to be placed in an asylum; and having no ties at home, he sought occupation in the pursuit of his favourite schemes of benevolence, the amelioration of prisons. With this view, he visited, in 1777, every prison in the United Kingdom, and published the result of his inquiries. The same course of investigations he resolved to pursue in foreign countries; and accordingly, in 1778 and the four following years he inspected all the public prisons of France, Switzerland, Germany, and Holland, afterwards extending his tour into the southern countries of Europe. He now entered on a new and different course of philanthropic pursuits, an inquiry into the causes and cure of the plague. His attention was now directed to those countries most subject to the ravages of that dreaded pestilence, the countries of the Levant. On his return to England, he published an account of the chief Lazarettos in Europe, and his object was so far gained by the attention of skilful and scientific men, as well as the general public being powerfully excited by his details. Commencing a second tour of inquiry, he resolved to travel through the eastern part of Europe with Egypt and Asia Minor. Leaving the shores of Britain in 1789, he hurried through Holland and Germany, anxious to reach Petersburgh, Moscow, and the shores of the Black Sea in the proper season. In his progress through the south of Prussia he had reached Kherson, when he was seized with malignant fever, which after a few days' illness, terminated his extraordinary career on 20th January, 1790. He was buried in a spot marked by himself about eight miles from Kherson, and a rude obelisk is erected over his grave, bearing the brief Latin inscription, 'Vixit proper alios,'—he lived for the good of others. His benevolence was not merely the effect of a warm and feeling heart, which sympathized deeply with the sufferings of humanity, it was based on Christian principles, for he lived and died strong in the faith of the gospel. [R.J.]

HOWARD, Sir R., an Eng. histor., 1626-1698.

HOWARD, S., a composer of ballads, d. 1783.

HOWARD, Sir W., a distin. lawyer, 13th cent.

HOWDEN, John Francis Caradoc, Baron, a native of Ireland, distinguished in the army, 1762-1832.

HOWE, Charles, a religious wr., 1661-1745.

HOWE, John, a nonconf. divine, 1630-1705.

HOWE, John, a noted politician of the reign of William III. and Queen Anne, in office under the latter, and succeeded by Walpole on the accession of George I., died 1721.

HOWE. Admiral Earl Howe was born in 1725, and was the second son of Lord Viscount Howe. He entered the navy at fourteen, and distinguished himself for courage and seamanship as he rose through the various ranks of the service to that of post-captain. In 1758 he succeeded (by his elder brother's death) to the family estates and honours; but he was true to the sea, and was in constant active employment to the end of the Seven Years' War. When France took part against England in the American war, Lord Howe was admiral of our fleet off the American coast, and gained great credit by successfully keeping the French admiral D'Estaign in check throughout 1778, though Howe's fleet was far inferior to that of his adversary. At the end of that year Howe returned to Europe, and performed the important service of relieving Gibraltar. In 1788 he was made an earl. At the commencement of the war against France in 1793, Howe took the command of the western channel fleet at the king's earnest and personal request. In the next year he succeeded in bringing the main French republican fleet to action, and gained the great victory of 'The Glorious First of June.' Lord Howe was now seventy years of age, but he lived to do his country more good service; and it was he who won back, by judicious kindness, many of our seamen to their duty in the alarming mutinies at the Nore and Spithead. Earl Howe died 4th August, 1799. [E.S.C.]

HOWE, Sir William, brother of the famous admiral, and successor of General Gage in the command of the British forces in America, d. 1814.

HOWEL, Lawrence, one of the non-juring divines, celebrated for his great learning, died 1720.

HOWEL-THE-GOOD, or HYWEL DDA, a famous legislator and king of all Wales, 10th cent.

HOWELL, James, an Eng. hist., 1595-1666.

HOWELL, W., a celebrated historian, d. 1683.

HOWLEY, W., abp. of Canterbury, 1765-1848.

HOWSON, John, a learned prelate, 1556-1631.

HOYLE, E., a writer on whist, &c., 1672-1769.

HUARTE, John, a Spanish philosopher, au. of a curious and valuable work, transl. into English by Carew and Bellamy, and entitled 'The Trial of Wits,' and first publisher of the alleged letter of Lentullus concerning the Saviour, born 1520.

HUBER, Francois, an eminent naturalist, was born at Geneva in 1750. He died in 1831.—Very early in life Huber manifested a great love for the pursuit of natural history. A cataract, however, showed itself in his eyes while he was still a youth, and before he arrived at manhood he had become totally blind. Before his eyesight failed he had had his attention drawn to the examination of bees. Having read the works of Reaumur and Bonnet, he believed that many of the statements made by those authors with regard to their history, were at variance with what he had himself observed; and to ascertain the correctness of his opinion became the chief object of his life. Huber was fortunate in finding an affectionate wife and an attached servant, who devoted their lives to him with the greatest tenderness and assiduity. Not being able to see himself, he made use of their eyes; and under his directions, and assisted by the invention of several kinds of glass hives, Madame Huber and the faithful Burnens were enabled to carry on their observations undisturbed and at leisure. By these means he succeeded in collecting together an immense number of facts with regard to the economy of bees which were before that time unknown. These he published at various times, and his different memoirs were collected by him and published in 1814. This rendered his name famous throughout Europe; a fame which was increased by the knowledge of the fact, that these accurate observations had been made by a man totally blind from his youth. M. De Candolle has named a genus of plants after him, Huberia. [W.B.]

HUBER, J., father of the preceding, an. of 'Observations on the Flight of Birds,' 1722-1750.

HUBER, JOHN, a native of Geneva, known as an artist in paper and writer on balloons, 1722-1790.

HUBER, JOHN JAMES, a native of Basle, cele. for his works in anatomy and botany, 1707-1778.

HUBER, JOHN RUDOLPH, a distin. painter, called the Tintoret of Switzerland, 1668-1748.

HUBER, MARY, a Swiss philos. wr., 1694-1759.

HUBER, MICHAEL, a native of Bavaria, translator of Gellert, Gesner, and Winckelmann into French, 1727-1804. LOUIS FERDINAND, his son, a journalist, 1764-1804. THERESE, a daughter of Heyne, and wife of the preceding, distinguished as a novelist, 1764-1829.

HUBER, SAMUEL, a Swiss divine, 16th cent.

HUBER, ULRIC, a Dutch savant, 1636-1694. His son, ZACHARIAS, also a learned wr., 1669-1732.

HUBERT DE L'ESPINE, a French traveller in Tartary, author of 'Description des admirables regions de Tartarie,' published at Paris, 1558.

HUBERT, F., a French engraver, 1744-1809.

HUBERT, M., a Fr. preac. and au., 1640-1717.

HUBERT, ST., the apos. of Ardennes, 7th cent.

HUBNER, JOHN, a German geographer and historian, 1668-1731. His son, of the same name, known as a man of letters, died 1758.

HUBNER, MARTIN, a Danish publicist, 1725-95.

HUDDART, J., a distin. navigator, 1741-1816.

HUDDE, JOHN, a Dutch mathem., 1640-1704.

HUDDESFORD, G., a burlesque poet, last ct.

HUDDESFORD, W., a naturalist of last cent.

HUDDLESTONE, ROBERT, a Scottish antiquarian, editor of a new edition of 'Toland's History of the Druids,' 1776-1826.

HUDSON, HENRY, an able English navigator, to whom we owe many important discoveries in the northern regions. Nothing is known respecting him till 1607, when he was sent out by a company of London merchants to seek a passage to India directly across the pole, many previous expeditions having failed to discover either a north-east or a north-west passage. Leaving the Thames on the 1st May, in a small vessel, with only ten men and a boy, he sailed for Greenland, which he reached in lat. 70°. Before he was stopped by ice, he had succeeded in advancing along the E. coast beyond the 80th parallel, considerably to the north of Spitzbergen, and returned by Nova Zembla and the North Cape. He made several other voyages in pursuit of the same object, during one of which he was in the service of the Dutch, and discovered the North American river which bears his name. In his last voyage, undertaken April 1610, he discovered the large gulf or inland sea named after him, and which, three years later, was carefully examined by Sir Thomas Button. Hudson was obliged to pass the winter in the southern part of it, so that on the return of summer his provisions were nearly exhausted, and he and his men were exposed to great hardships, being obliged to subsist upon moss and frogs. The men became mutinous, and resolved to turn the master and those faithful to him adrift, that the limited stock of provisions might last the longer. The ringleader was a young man named Green, of respectable connections, who had been benevolently brought out by Hudson in order to separate him from vicious companions, with whom he was leading a profligate life. The conspiracy broke out on the 21st of June; the captain was seized and bound, and with eight others, his staunchest friends, most of whom were sick or lame, was turned adrift amid floating ice, in the strait which bears his name. Some meal, and an iron pot, a fowling-piece and ammunition, were the only means allowed them of preserving their lives; and there can be no doubt that they soon perished miserably. Among the fourteen who remained on board were Robert Bylot and Habbakuk Pricket, to the latter of whom we owe the only account there exists of the latter part of Hudson's voyage. The wretch Green was killed soon after in an affray with the natives; Robert Ivet, the next most guilty after Green, died of starvation. Most of the rest reached the west coast of Ireland, after dreadful sufferings. [J.B.]

HUDSON, DR. JOHN, a critical au., 1662-1719.

HUDSON, TH., a portrait painter, 1701-1779.

HUDSON, W., a distin. botanist, 1730-1793.

HUE, FRANCIS, a valet of Louis XVI., author of a narrative of his last years, 1757-1819.

HUERTA, VICENTE GARCIA DE LA, a Spanish tragedian, editor of a critical edition of the best Spanish plays, 1729-1797.

HUET, PETER DANIEL, a French prelate, dist. as a philosopher and biblical scholar, 1630-1721.

HUFELAND, C. W., a Ger. phys., 1762-1836.

HUFNAGEL, G., a Flemish poet and naturalist, skilled as a painter of animals, 1545-1600.

HUGFORD, IGNAZIO, a painter, 1703-1778.

HUGH, or HUGUES, the name of several princes of the middle ages, the most distinguished of whom are—HUGH THE GREAT, son and successor of Robert as count of Paris, and father of Hugh Capet, died 956. HUGH CAPET, son of the preceding, and founder of the third dynasty of the kings of France, born 939, crowned at Rheims, 987, died 996. HUGH OF PROVENCE, king of Italy, died 947. HUGH I., duke of Burgundy, reigned 1075-1078, died 1093. HUGH II., reigned 1102-1142. HUGH III., a distinguished warrior and crusader, succeeded 1162, died in Asia 1193. HUGH IV., a crusader and companion-in-arms of St. Louis, 1218-1272. HUGH V., the last of the dukes of Burgundy of this name, reigned 1306-1315. Besides these, four kings of Cyprus an mentioned:—HUGH I., reigned 1205-1218. HUGH II., 1253-1267. HUGH III., called 'The Great,' 1267-1276. HUGH IV., king of Cyprus and Jerusalem, suc. Henry II. 1324, abdicated 1361.

HUGH, SAINT. The earliest saint of this name is a French prelate who administered the dioceses of Paris and Bayeux, died 730. Next in order of time is HUGH OF CLUNY, abbot of the monastery of that name, flourished 1023-1109. The third SAINT HUGH, a bishop of Grenoble, distinguished for having located Bruno and his companions in the Grande Chartreuse, lived 1053-1132.

HUGH OF AMIENS, a native of that place, afterwards prior of Cluny, kn. as a theologian, d. 1164.

HUGH OF BREGI, a bard of the 13th century.

HUGH OF FLAVIGNY, abbot of that place in 1097, and author of the 'Chronicle of Verdun.'

HUGH OF FLEURY, abbot of that place, and au. of 'De La Puissance Royale,' &c., 11th century.

HUGH OF POITIERS, a chronicler, 12th cent.

HUGH OF ST. CHER, a learned monk and cardinal, au. of a Bible Concordance, died 1263.

HUGH OF ST. VICTOR, a theologian, died 1140.

HUGHES, JOHN, a poet and miscellaneous writer, translator of Fontenelle's 'Dialogues of the Dead,' &c., 1677-1720. JABEZ, his brother, a classical translator, and miscel. writer, 1685-1731.

HUGHES, JOHN, a learned editor, 1682-1710.

HUGHES, GRIFFITH, a naturalist, last century.

HUGO, C. L., a French savant, 1667-1739.

HUGO, HERMAN, a Ger. Jesuit, 1588-1629.

HUGONET, W., a Fr. statesman, exec. 1477.

HUGTENBURGH, JAMES VAN, a Dutch landscape painter, born 1639. JOHN, his brother, distinguished as a painter of battle-pieces, 1646-1733.

HUGUES, VICTOR, French governor of Guadaloupe during the first revolution, 1770-1826.

HUGUET, M. A., a Fr. prelate, executed 1796.

HULDRICH, JOHN, a Swiss divine, 1683-1737.

HULL, THOMAS, a dramatic writer and actor, founder of the Theatrical Fund, 1728-1808.

HULLIN DE BOISCHEVALIER, L. J., a French writer, author of 'Repertoire Historique de la Révolution,' and 'De l'Empire,' 1742-1808.

HULLIN, P. A., a French general, 1758-1841.

HULLOCK, SIR JOHN, a disting. lawyer and judge, author of the 'Law of Costs,' 1764-1829.

HULME, NATHANIEL, a med. wr., 1732-1807.

HULSE, SIR S., an Eng. officer, died 1837.

HULSEMANN, J., a Ger. divine, 1602-1661.

HULSIUS, ANTHONY, an Oriental scholar and theologian of Holland, 1615-1685. HENRY, his son, a learned divine and professor, 1654-1723.

HULST, P. VANDER, a Dutch painter, famous for his flowers and insects, 1652-1708.

HULSWIT, J., a Dutch painter, 1766-1822.

HUMANN, J. G., a French minister of finance, member of several cabinets, 1780-1842.

HUMAYUN-NESIR-ED-DEENY MOHAMMED, second Mogul emp. of Hindostan, 1508-56.

HUMBERT, the first French cardinal, 11th ct.

HUMBERT, J. A., a French general, 1767-1823.

HUMBOLDT, WILLIAM VON, the brother of the illustrious author of 'Cosmos,' was born in Potsdam 1767, when his father was chamberlain to the Princess Elizabeth of Russia. In his youth —like all the young people of Germany at this period—he was influenced by the sentimental enthusiasm of which Goëthe's 'Werter' still remains the literary monument; and besides entering into friendly alliances with his fellow-students, he cultivated an intimacy with the most distinguished women of the age. Of the latter amiable sentiment, his 'Letters to a Female Friend'—translations of which have appeared in English—are a pleasing memorial. It is as the philosopher and statesman, however, that the name of William Humboldt has acquired an European reputation. The intimate friend of Schiller and Goëthe, his name is imperishably associated with the revival of philosophy and letters in Germany; and, as a statesman, with the political history of the court of Berlin. In 1800, two years after publishing his æsthetic essays under the title of 'Hermann and Dorothea,' he was appointed Prussian minister at Rome; and during the eight years that he resided there, acquired a wide reputation as an archæologist, and a master of historical philology. On returning home, he was appointed councillor of state, and minister of worship and education, and at once applied himself to the reform of existing institutions, and the organization of the university of Berlin,—a task of no slight consequence in the chaos of philosophical speculation with which he found himself surrounded. The wishes of the king being accomplished in this respect, Humboldt resumed his diplomatic career as ambassador to Vienna; and from 1810 to the congress of Aix-la-Chapelle in 1818, his name is associated with every important transaction in the politics of Europe. In 1819 his connection with the court of Prussia was broken off, in consequence of his attachment to constitutional principles, and his opposition to the decrees of Carlsbad, which introduced the censorship of the press, and certain measures controlling the universities. The agent in these transactions was the chancellor Hardenberg, who had become the tool of Metternich; and Humboldt having been dismissed from the ministry, henceforth devoted his whole time to literature. The remainder of his days were passed at his seat near Berlin, where he died on the 8th of April 1835, deeply regretted by the whole German nation. His works, which are of a miscellaneous character, generally bearing on history, archæology, and philology, including the remains of Eastern civilization, have been published at intervals since his death by his brother, Alexander von Humboldt, who is still the honoured friend and counsellor of the king of Prussia, and is revered as the patriarch of philosophy throughout Europe. William von Humboldt may justly be taken as a pattern of the depth and diversity of the German mind, and as the promise of a richer future for the German nation. He stands like the representative of the change from spirit to life, from idea to reality, in which the German mind is engaged; for he was one of the first and ablest who took this step. He adhered to the past, advanced boldly forward, and put his trust in humanity and his country.—(Lives of the Brothers Humboldt from the German of Klencke and Schlesier.) [E.R.]

HUME, SIR A., a naval officer, 1748-1838.

HUME, DAVID, born in Edinburgh, 26th April, 1711; died there on 25th August, 1776: unquestionably the most remarkable personage of the Augustan era of Scotland. Referring for the external details of Hume's life to his charming Autobiography, we shall require more than our usual space to characterize, however succinctly, the Philosopher, the Historian, and the Man.—I. The place and functions of the metaphysical speculations of this great Thinker, are not only peculiar but unique in the History of Modern Philosophy. At the period in question, Mental Science had fallen into the lowest possible state, not in Britain merely, but over Europe—that, viz., of a conscious inconsistency: principles were accepted and conclusions evaded; beliefs timidly relied on, betwixt which, and all grounds of certainty then acknowledged, lay an impassable hiatus. The sensational philosophy—always agreeable to the practical tendencies of the English mind, had just reached its culmination under guidance of the genius and earnestness of John Locke; and we were undergoing its consequences in the dwarfing of systematic morals, and the gradual impoverishment of religion; saving ourselves as to the mere form of Faith, by refuge in tradition, or, what is worst of all, willing subjection to gross paralogisms. When Science exists only through paltering with Reason, when it accepts as its function, the office, not of discerning Truth, but of finding excuses for Beliefs, it is Science no longer, but a corruption and hypocrisy; and however it may come, its destruction is a blessing. Hume appeared as the Destroyer. Gifted with an Intellect clear and fearless, he carried principles remorselessly to their consequences; and proved beyond question, that on the grounds of the existing philosophy, all Belief must disappear. If he reached Universal Scepticism, it may be said that he yet had a faith sounder than any in the Philosophy he destroyed; he trusted in the only ground of human certainty, viz., in our Human Reason; and had the rare courage to follow where it seemed to lead. It is not easy to conceive the degree of consternation spread through every region of existing speculation, by the 'Essay on the Idea of Necessary Connexion,' the 'Enquiry Concerning the Principles of Morals,' the 'Natural History of Religion,' and their other companions. Hume had divested himself by this time of the scholastic rudeness of the author of the 'Treatise on Human Nature,' and become one of the most pleasing and accomplished writers of any period. His blows resounded accordingly through all cultivated society: it was heard everywhere with amazement, that by a Logic apparently invincible, the basis of all certainty respecting Man, Nature, and God had been destroyed, and that doubt irremediable was the sole inheritance of our Race! It is needless to say that the resting-place of Humanity was saved; but not by invalidating the reasoning of the trenchant Scotchman. Hume's triumph was complete; only, it was the existing Philosophy that he laid in ruins. His logical demolition of the Idea of Cause, awoke in the spirit of the illustrious KANT that train of thought which has illumined Germany until now; and DR. REID, moved by the same influence, wrought less systematically, but in a corresponding direction, towards the foundation of the School which has played so wholesome a part in the re-edification of Mental Science.—In something of this light will History regard the Metaphysician Hume.—II. The clearness of Intellect sagacity that distinguished Hume, where more brightly than in his historical writings; although we perhaps more palpably, those defe him for his task as Destroyer. Eage skilful as sagacious, and incapabl fluenced by surrounding opinions, his political essays steadily surveyi most of those great truths regar which Adam Smith afterwards cla 'Wealth of Nations,' and which the at length accepts as its guide: nor come when the general reflections every page of the 'History of Engl to instruct and elevate the States during position of the 'History' of a rich philosophical treatise; History in the true significance of can anything be imagined mor than its usual connection on the a set of continuations and chronicl accurate in dates, but dry in wisd When Hume wrote, History as a was not known as it is now; and u had not the industry, accuracy, impartiality of his compatriot worse, he had no sympathy with th ful of the springs of action movin depicts: had he comprehended these, not have been known in Philosoph name of a Destroyer. His narrative the Stuarts and of the struggles whic is simply fictitious, and should be try his picture of Cromwell by the cently brought under light of the Carlyle.—III. The character of th person has been misunderstood and alike by friends and foes. His nat one, but not developed in some most No man of his time had a stronger larger intellectual capacity, finer courage, or a more rooted love o His temperament, too, was great had no violent passions, so that he temptations; he was delicate, and no malignity; he was candid and is impossible to concur with Adam approached as nearly to the idea wise and virtuous man as perhap human frailty will permit.' His has been already adverted to,—h pathy with the largest, the profound Human Nature. He treated the Pu not through malignity, but because preciate them: he knew nothing of t fice to the Unseen: the morals he simply calculations of visible conseq respects Hume was a wise man; but down his dislike of Enthusiasm to tranquillity of Wisdom. The hi indeed, seldom enthusiastic, beca cerned the meaning of the Love that in this various and complex U ciple acts singly, or ought to enj Hume had not this wisdom; he enthusiasm because he had no par the principle which sustained thos with their life-blood they purchase nd.—See Mr. Burton's excellent volumes on His philosophical works are out of print:

t and best edition, in 4 volumes, was pub-
by Mr. Black of Edinburgh. [J.P.N.]

[Tomb of Hume, Edinburgh.]

E, DAVID, a nephew of the great historian, iter on the Scotch criminal law, 1756-1838.
E, J. D., a disting. financier, 1774-1842.
MEL, J. N., a Ger. musician, 1778-1837.
MELIUS, J., a Ger. mathem., 1518-1562.
MPHREY, LAURENCE, a learned divine, of a 'Life of Bishop Jewel,' &c., 1527-1590.
MPHREYS, JAS., an eminent jurist, d. 1830.
MPHRY, OZIAS, a painter, 1743-1810.
NAULD, F. J., a Fr. anatomist, 1701-1742.
ND, W., a Bavarian historian, 1514-1588.
NERIC, a king of the Vandals, 477-485.
NNIADES, JOHN CORVINUS, vaivode of rania, and general of the Hungarian armies, ished against the Turks, died 1456.
NNIS, W., a poet, age of Elizabeth.
NNIUS, GILLS, a German divine, 1550-1603.
, NICHOLAS, also a dist. theolog., 1585-1643.
NNOLD, FR., a German Jesuit, last century.
NT, HENRY, an active English politician, rn about the year 1773. His name was great notoriety during the first quarter of teenth century, but little will probably be eard of him at its end. Yet he had some s of a peculiarly English and sterling char-His name is associated with the mob and ty, but he had considerable ancestral claims, e of the few of his remembered sayings is ert on Sir Robert Peel as the first of a of tradesmen who became a gentleman, e himself was the first of a race of gentle-o had become a tradesman. In early life he high Tory, but during the greater part of his areer he expressed extreme Radical doc-Whatever he did, whether in selling his rable blacking and his roasted corn, inas a substitute for coffee, or offering his to represent a county, he spread his doings the world with liberal profuseness, and was with any kind of notoriety, provided it dant. In 1830 he succeeded in entering parliament, where he remained for a short time as member for Preston. If not attended to in parliament, he always made himself heard. His voice possessed a peculiar shrillness which made it audible amidst all other ordinary sounds, and it was remarked that over all the shuffling and coughing of an impatient House, his speaking was as clearly heard as the ringing of a factory bell through the murmurs of a crowd. He died in 1835. [J.H.B.]

HUNT, JEREMIAH, a dissenting divine, au. of 'An Essay towards expl. the History and Revelations of Scripture in their several Periods,' 1678-1744.

HUNT, TH., a learned Hebraist, 1696-1774.

HUNTER, ALEX., a Scotch phys., 1729-1809.

HUNTER, ANNE, wife of John Hunter the celebrated anatomist, distinguished as a writer of lyrical poetry, 1742-1821.

HUNTER, CHR., an antiquarian, 1675-1757.

HUNTER, HENRY, a Scotch divine, author of 'Sacred Biography,' a translation of Lavater's Physiognomy, 'Lectures on the Evidences of Christianity,' &c., 1741-1802.

HUNTER, JOHN, a Scotch classic, 1747-1837.

HUNTER, JOHN, a Scotch commander and vice-admiral, distin. under Lord Howe, 1738-1821.

HUNTER, WILLIAM, a distinguished anatomist, physiologist, and physician, was born at Long Calderwood, in the parish of East Kilbride, in the county of Lanark, Scotland, on the 23d of May, 1718. He was the seventh of ten children, and being destined for the church was sent to the University of Glasgow at the age of fourteen, where he remained for five years. He now resolved to abandon the study of theology and to apply himself to medicine, and with this view became the private pupil of Dr. Cullen at Hamilton, with whom he remained for three years. He then proceeded to Edinburgh with the design of qualifying himself to become the partner of Cullen; but, in 1741, he repaired to London in search of fame and fortune, and found both. After studying under various masters of acknowledged ability he commenced as a lecturer on anatomy in 1746. In 1747, he became a member of the corporation of surgeons; in 1750, he graduated as a doctor of medicine at the University of Glasgow; and in 1756, he became a licentiate of the College of Physicians. He was afterwards successively elected physician to the Lying-in-Hospital; fellow of the Royal and Antiquarian Societies; professor of anatomy to the Royal Academy; physician extraordinary to the queen: and in 1781, president of the College of Physicians. He died on the 30th of March, 1783, in the sixty-fifth year of his age. In the course of a long and laborious life, devoted to the highest objects of science and humanity, Dr. Hunter had collected a magnificent anatomical museum, a valuable library of rare and curious books, and a considerable number of paintings and coins, all of which he bequeathed to the University of Glasgow, with a sum of £8,000 to support and augment the collection. This fine museum was transferred to Glasgow in 1807, where a very elegant building from a design by Stark had been erected for its reception at a cost of £12,000. Dr. Hunter was an active and zealous contributor to the medical literature of his time, and was engaged in some sharp controversies with several of his contemporaries on disputed points in anatomy and physiology; but the work by which he will be chiefly remembered is, 'The Anatomy of the Human Gravid Uterus,' one of the most splendid publications that ever issued from the press, and in collecting the materials for which he spent thirty years. It consists of thirty-four plates engraved by the most eminent artists of the day, with explanations in English and Latin, and appeared in 1775; but the treatise illustrative of it he did not live to publish. That duty was undertaken by his nephew, Dr. Baillie, who published in 1794 'An Anatomical Description of the Human Gravid Uterus and its Contents,' compiled chiefly from the MSS. of his uncle. [J.M'C.]

HUNTER, JOHN, the youngest brother of William Hunter, and one of the most remarkable men of his own or any other age. He was born at Calderwood on the 13th of February, 1728, and lost his father when he was ten years of age. He seems never to have exhibited any aptitude for scholastic learning, and there can be no doubt that his early education was greatly neglected, and that much of the obscurity of his style in after life was attributable to that cause. How he spent the first twenty years of his life is not ascertained, but there is a very general belief, amounting to something like a tradition, that he was apprenticed at the age of seventeen to a Mr. Buchanan, a cabinet-maker in Glasgow, who had married his sister Janet. If so, he must have been engaged in this mechanical occupation for three years, for it was not till the year 1748 that his brother William, now firmly established as a lecturer on anatomy, sent for him to London, and placed him in his anatomical theatre, where he soon became an expert dissector, and a complete anatomist. He studied surgery under the celebrated Cheselden; in 1751 he became a pupil in St. Bartholomew's; and in 1756 he was appointed house surgeon to St. George's Hospital. Notwithstanding the defects of his general education he rapidly surmounted all the difficulties that lay in his way, and by his extraordinary genius and great assiduity had acquired by the year 1761, a fixed position and an established reputation in the anatomical and surgical worlds. But his health began to suffer, and in that year he was appointed to the medical staff of the army, in which capacity he served for three years in France and Portugal, when he returned to London with renovated strength, and began that series of observations and experiments on the inferior animals, which laid the foundation of his fame as a comparative anatomist. He died suddenly on the 16th of October, 1793, in one of the apartments of St. George's Hospital, in the sixty-fifth year of his age. Of John Hunter's contributions to science during the last twenty years of his life it is impossible to give even an outline in this place, but they were numerous and of the highest value, nor is it too much to say that this remarkable man, by the vigour of his own talents, laid the foundation of all those improvements in surgery, physiology, and comparative anatomy, which have been made since his time. After his death, his museum, which had cost him £70,000, was bought by the government from his widow for £15,000, and by it was presented to the Royal College of Surgeons. John Hunter died childless, and as his brother William never married, t direct race of two men possessed of the high genius is extinct. [J.M'

HUNTER, ROBERT, author of the fam Letter on Enthusiasm, which has been attribu both to Swift and Shaftesbury, appointed gover of Jamaica, 1728, and died 1734.

HUNTER, WILLIAM, a Scotch physician, wr. on subjects connected with Hindostan, d. 18

HUNTINGDON, HENRY OF, author of General History of England from the Earl Accounts to the Death of Stephen, 12th centu

HUNTINGDON, SELINA, countess of, a mous name in the history of Calvinistic methodi was the second daughter of Washington, Ferrers. She was born in 1707, and left a wid by Theophilus Hastings, earl of Huntingdon, 1746. Previous to her husband's death, she received deep impressions of religion, and attac herself to the ministry of Whitfield — whom appointed. The ample jointure of which became possessed was almost wholly devoted the cause of religion in connection with the Met dist Christians. She founded the college of T veeka in Wales, in which young ministers w trained — studded destitute localities with chapels, and maintained a band of itiner preachers to supply them in rotation, carrying all the correspondence herself. On the metho body splitting into two, she espoused the Calv istic party under Whitfield. On the lease Treveeka expiring, she erected a more exten college at Cheshunt, Hertfordshire. The na of Lady Huntingdon is inseparably identified w the great revival of evangelical religion in t country during the eighteenth century, and i scarcely possible to estimate her services highly. For although some of her peculiar op ions may be disputed, yet her zeal and piety w unquestionable, and many parts in England this day are reaping the fruits of her Chris liberality and devotedness to the cause of ev gelical missions. She died at the advanced ag eighty-four, at her mansion-house in Spafield, her remains were deposited in the family v Ashby-de-la-Zouch, Leicestershire.

HUNTINGDON, WILLIAM, a sectarian pre of the party of Calvinistic methodists, auth many controversial works, 1744-1813.

HUNTINGFORD, GEORGE ISAAC, succe bishop of Gloucester and Hereford, distingu as a Greek scholar and theologian, 1748-183

HUNTINGTON, R., a learned div., 1636

HUNTON, PHILIP, a political writer, of the new college erected by Cromwell, die

HUPAZOLI, FRANCIS, a native of S remarkable for his great age, 1587-1702.

HUQUIER, J. G., a Fr. engraver, 1695

HURD, RICHARD, best known as the 'Dialogues Moral and Political,' and of on Chivalry and Romance,' which were in a collected edition of 3 vols. 8vo, 1762 son of a farmer, and was born at Co Staffordshire, 1720. As early as 174 tained a fellowship in Emanuel Colle 1757 was appointed rector of Thu Leicestershire. After this he was preacher to the society at Lincoln's archdeacon of Gloucester, 1767; bish field and Coventry, 1775; preceptor to the prince of Wales and the duke of York, 1776; and bishop of Worcester, 1781. In 1783 he declined the primacy offered to him by George III., and lived contented with the honours already showered upon him till 1808, when he expired in his sleep, after a few days' confinement to his bed. Hurd was a clever satirist, and a great proficient in polite literature. His Dialogues were a covert attack upon the 'big wigs,' and the principles of arbitrary government; but he seems to have outlived the discontented vanity, or the earnestness in the cause of freedom which dictated them, and to have subsided into the man of learned leisure, and the polite scholar. He was the friend and biographer of Bishop Warburton. A complete edition of his works which he had himself prepared for the press, was published in 1810, in 8 vols. 8vo. Much interesting information concerning the life, character, and works of Bishop Hurd will be found in volume VI. of Nichol's Literary Anecdotes. [E.R.]

HURDIS, JAMES, an English poet, 1763-1801.

HURE, CHARLES, a French theologian of the Jansenists, au. of a 'Dict. of the Bible,' 1639-1717.

HURET, G., a French engraver, 1610-1670.

HUSCUSKE, E. T., a Ger. philoso., 1761-1828.

HUSKISSON, WILLIAM, a British statesman, was born on the 11th of March, 1770. He was the son of a country gentleman, and succeeded to some landed property. In spending a few of his early years in France, he not only saw many of the striking events of the revolution, such as the capture of the Bastile, but had a personal intimacy with several of the actors in them, and joined the body called the 'Société de 1789.' Though this was one of the clubs of the moderate party, his connection with it brought on Huskisson a taunt of Jacobinism, at a time when French principles, as they were termed, were received with intense horror by the upper and middle classes in Britain. He showed an early soundness of opinion in economic matters, by offering a warning against the creation of fictitious paper-money by assignats. He returned to England in 1792, and in 1796 entered parliament as member for Morpeth. He filled several subordinate ministerial appointments, and made himself valuable by his sagacity and business capacity. He was one of the first practical statesmen, since Pitt had changed his views, whose conduct was influenced by the doctrines of free trade, and though his opinions are far behind those which have prevailed in the legislation of the present generation, he was viewed in his own day as a dangerous man, who had treacherous designs on the interests of his country. In 1821 he showed himself favourable to the modification of the corn laws, and in 1823 he carried the relaxation of the navigation act, which sanctioned reciprocity treaties. In 1827 he took the office of secretary to the colonies, and continued to hold it under the duke of Wellington. Having, on a point of etiquette, to offer his resignation, it was so readily accepted that the duke evidently desired to be rid of him. At the opening of the Liverpool and Manchester Railway on 15th September, 1830, he stumbled in hastily crossing before a train, which passed over him, and so wounded him that he only survived a few hours. [J.H.B.]

HUSS, JOHN, was born about 1370 at Hussinatz, a village in Bohemia. Though sprung of humble parents, he was sent to the university of Prague, and on completing his studies was admitted to priest's orders in 1400. The opinions of the English reformer Wycliffe having reached Bohemia, Huss, on mature consideration, was led to adopt them, and as a professor and preacher in Prague, he exposed with vehemence the abuses and vices of the Romish Church and clergy. The patronage of the queen Sophia protected him for a season, if not from molestation, at least from personal injury. But the archbishop of Prague was terribly provoked, and so were many of the clergy, by the intrepidity of Huss, and by his opposition in the university to Pope Gregory XII. In some fierce discussions which took place as to the balance of elective power among the youth of various nations attending the university, Huss, urged by his Realistic and national partialities, took the part of the Bohemians so effectively, that the German students, to the number of some thousands, withdrew, retired to Leipzig and founded its university in the year 1409. The reforming energy and perseverance of Huss so enraged his ecclesiastical superiors, that the archbishop of Prague ordered the Bohemian translation of the books of Wycliffe to be burned, and suspended Huss, while Pope John XXIII. solemnly excommunicated him. But the ardent spirit of the reformer did not quail, and both in his native village and at Prague he continued his denunciations of purgatory, indulgences, and clerical corruptions. Having at length opposed a papal bull which had been fulminated against Ladislaus, king of Naples, he excited such tumults that he was summoned to the famous Council of Constance, and though a 'safe conduct' had been granted him by the emperor Sigismund, he was nevertheless impeached, arrested, and cast into prison, and on his refusal to confess his guilt or retract, he was condemned as a heretic, and burnt on the 6th of July, 1415. The causes of this severe and unjustifiable treatment of Huss, may be found in his bold and unflinching honesty of purpose, in the sacerdotal enmity which his sermons and literary labours had stirred up against him, and especially in his avowed Realism, and his hatred of the German Nominalists, some of whom, such as Gerson, were his principal judges. His labours, history, and martyrdom, were not without abundant fruit in the succeeding century. [J.E.]

HUSSEIN-PACHA, a Turkish admiral, surnamed 'the Little,' fav. of Selim II., 1750-1803.

HUSSEIN-PACHA, the last king of Algiers, born 1773, proclaimed dey 1818, dethroned by the French under Marshal Bourmont, 1830.

HUSSEY, GILES, an Eng. painter, 1710-1788.

HUSSEY, SIR RICHARD, a British admiral employed in reducing the Ionian isls., 1776-1842.

HUTCHESON, FRANCIS, born in Ireland 8th August, 1694, died in Glasgow 1747. To Hutcheson must be awarded the honour of reviving speculative philosophy in Scotland. In 1729 he obtained the chair of Moral Philosophy in the university of Glasgow; and he certainly started that line of thinking in Psychological questions which Reid afterwards, with so great success, followed out. Besides manuals for the use of his class, he published during his lifetime the 'Inquiry into the Origin of our Ideas of Beauty and Virtue,' and an essay 'On the Nature and Conduct of the Passions and Affections.' His 'System of Moral Philosophy,' in 2 volumes 4to, appeared after his death. He energetically asserted the existence of Moral Sense, or a power to discern good in itself, and claimed for our Idea of the Beautiful, the character of originality and independence. Hutcheson's intellect was vigorous, and he evinced in all his writings singular freedom and freshness. There is an excellent life of him by Principal Leechman.

HUTCHINS, JOHN, an Engl. divine, an. of the 'Hist. and Antiquities of Dorsetshire,' 1696-1773.

HUTCHINS, THOMAS, a geographer and general of the United States of America, author of historical and topographical works, 1730-1789.

HUTCHINSON, ANN, a religious enthusiast of New England, banished from the colony by an ecclesiastical synod, and killed, with fourteen others of her family, by the Indians, 1643.

HUTCHINSON, JOHN, was an English gentleman whose name became famous as a speculative philosopher and interpreter of the Bible in the early part of last century, and is now generally mentioned with disparagement. The publication of Sir Isaac Newton's Principia in 1687, in which the philosopher supposed the planets to move through a vacuum, provoked Mr. Hutchinson, who was a great student of antiquity, and of the Hebrew Scriptures, to publish his work entitled 'Moses' Principia,' which appeared in two parts, 1724 and 1727. The design of Mr. Hutchinson was to demonstrate that a celestial matter pervades the whole creation, spiritual and natural, whereby Jehovah is master of the material worlds, whereas the theory of Sir Isaac Newton supposed a universe without a God, or a God who acts by arbitrary power. This philosophical doctrine, which is supported by the recent discovery of an interplanetary ether, was, in the work of Hutchinson, a pure deduction from the Scriptures, his principle being that the Hebrew language is perfectly formed, so as to convey perfect ideas, without the redundancy or deficiency of letters common to other languages; hence, that it was perfectly adapted to be the medium of a revelation, and that religion and philosophy were united in the system of Moses. Hutchinson attacked Dr. Woodward, anthor of a 'Natural History of the Earth,' as well as Sir Isaac Newton. He wielded his pen with the hand of a master, and with little respect for the feelings of his opponents. Among his adherents were Bishop Horne, Jones of Nayland, Julius Bate, Drs. Hodges and Wetherall, Parkhurst, Romaine, and Dr. Samuel Clarke. He was born at Springthorn in Yorkshire 1674, and died 1737. [E.R.]

HUTCHINSON, JOHN HELY, an Irish lawyer and statesman of distinguished talents, but remarkable selfishness, 1715-1794. His son, of the same name, a distinguished military officer, and successor of his brother as earl of Donoughmore, 1757-1832.

HUTCHINSON, THOMAS, the historian of the colony of Massachusets, born 1711, chief justice of that province, 1760, lieutenant-governor 1758-1770, governor to 1774, died 1780.

HUTCHINSON, W., a county hist., 1732-1814.

HUTTEN, JACOB, the founder of the 'Moravian Brethren,' whose successors are su been the adherents of Zinzendorf, 1

HUTTEN, ULRIC VON, a Ge miscellaneous writer, best known a the reformation, 1488-1523.

HUTTER, ELIAS, a German di Polyglott of the New Testament guages, and of a version of the He tinguished by many peculiarities, in Psalm is given in thirty languages,

HUTTER, LEONARD, a German polemical writer of the reformation

HUTTICH, J., a German archa mismatist, au. of 'Antiq. of Mayen

HUTTON, CHARLES, LL.D., a cultivator of Mathematical Scienc ing writer; born at Newcastle-on-1823. We owe to Dr. Hutton works on elementary mathematics
'Course designed for Cadets in the Academy,' in 3 vols. 8vo; but contributions to scientific literatur tionary of Mathematics,' in two lar and in another direction, his abri
Philosophical Transactions in 18
Hutton seems to have been a teacher; and accordingly he was pupils. His manners were simp equable and mild, and his attachm unalterable.

HUTTON, DR. JAMES, born at E died 1797: one of those Inquirers have power to seize the opportunit revolution in Science. Hutton's m of earning distinction in any depart research; and we owe him various i —for instance, he was the founder but it is in Geology that his nam mark of an epoch. During Hutto geology had not shaken itself free f and existing theories regarding t the Earth, were modelled on the id patriot Werner; who, misled by perience, considered all rocks a produced by the subsidence of mat through water. Hutton's importa consisted in the discovery, throug large class of rocks are igneous; existing forms of the surface of o from two opposing forces const and of whose efficiency we kn beginning nor the end. The ph established the truth of these vi anxious research, discovered by Tilt—viz.: a fine instance of gr out in veins at its junction with rocks; manifesting thereby indispu its igneous origin. Hutton's work of the Earth, abounds with philos many points of geological theor entitled to the name of predict first of all, the significance be of the previously well-known fact o stratification. On an occasion, come classical, he took his favour fessor Playfair and Sir James H near St. Abb's Head, where the Lammer muir are undermined by Playfair has left on record, how, his sagacity, the simple, and till then barren visible fact of one rock lying on the edges of another, became witness to enormous intervals and successive epochs, until 'the mind grew giddy by looking so far into the abyss of time,' and the awed listeners became sensible 'how much farther reason may sometimes go than imagination can venture to follow!'—Sustained by phenomena at once palpable, numerous, and conclusive, Hutton's important views rapidly made way among men of science: and, notwithstanding their novelty, and the stupendousness of the vista they open into the past, the popular belief has now accommodated itself to them, and revolts no more at the notion of the unfathomed Antiquity of the Earth, than at the august thought that the myriads of lustres in the Firmament, are worlds. This consummation came not without a struggle, but thanks to the 'press,' which could not aid Copernicus, the struggle in this case was neither severe nor prolonged. Hutton may be said to have revealed the second of the two dimensions of the Material Universe — the dimension, Time. — The student who has not read the affectionate biography of this philosopher by Professor Playfair, has still a rare treat in store. [J.P.N.]

HUTTON, M., an English prelate, 1529-1605.

HUTTON, WILLIAM, a self-educated author, chiefly of local histories and antiquities, 1723-1815.

HUXHAM, JOHN, a medical writer, died 1768.

HUYGHENS, CHRISTIAN, born at the Hague 14th April, 1629; died 8th June, 1695: a very successful and celebrated cultivator of the Mathematical and Physical Sciences. It requires a long narrative to sum up Huyghen's contributions and discoveries; to appreciate them in their relation to history and his time, is wholly incompatible with our space. In pure geometry he gave theorems for the quadrature of the Hyperbola, the Ellipsis, and the Circle; in Mechanics, he laid down the theory of the Pendulum, and its application to the Clock; he discerned the synchronism of the Cycloid, invented the theory of Involutes and Evolutes of Curves, and explored the doctrine of Centres of Oscillation: most important of all he announced the law of the motion of bodies revolving in circles, thereby grazing the law of gravitation. In Astronomy, we owe him the memorable discovery of Saturn's ring, at that time a most sagacious solution of very puzzling appearances. In Optics he laid the foundation of the theory of Undulations, explaining by means of it phenomena which by the theory of Emanation Newton could not touch. — Few cultivators of Abstract Science had a clearer, or more correct intellect than Huyghens; he showed this, more especially in his ready appreciation and powerful grasp of the Doctrine of Gravitation: he adopted the new view at the sacrifice of his previous attachment to the Vortices of Des Cartes, and this at a period of life when men have rarely freshness enough to alter their opinions. His works are collected in four 4to volumes. [J.P.N.]

HUYGHENS, C., a Latin poet, 1596-1687.

HUYGHENS, GOMARUS, a Roman Catholic theologian, professor of philosophy at Louvain, and the friend and defender of Quesnel, 1631-1702.

HUYOT, J. N., a French architect, 1780-1840.

HUYSMANS, HUYSMAN, or HOUSEMAN, CORNELIUS, a Flem. landscape painter, 1648-1727.

HUYSMAN, JAMES, a Flemish painter, executed the altar piece at St. James's, 1656-1696.

HUYSUM, JUSTUS VAN, called 'the Elder,' a Dutch landscape painter, 1659-1716. His son, of the same name, known as YOUNG HUYSUM, a painter of battles, 1684-1706. His son, JOHN, distinguished as a flower painter, 1682-1749.

HUZARD, J. B., a Fr. agriculturist, 1755-1839.

HVITFIELD, A., a Danish histor., 1549-1609.

HYACINTH, SAINT, a German friar, celebrated as apostle of Poland and Russia, 1183-1257.

HYDE, EDWARD. See CLARENDON.

HYDE, HENRY, a dramatic writer, died 1753.

HYDE, THOS., D.D., a dignitary of the Church of England, kn. as an Oriental scholar and au. of a 'History of the Medes and Persians,' 1636-1703.

HYDER-ALI, an Indian prince of Arabian origin, born in Mysore, 1718, took the field with his brother, who was in alliance with France, 1751, and in the interval between that period and 1780, acquired for himself an independent sovereignty, and nearly brought the presidency of Madras to ruin. His death occurred at a critical period in 1782, and he was succeeded by his son, Tippoo Saib, who was driven from the Carnatic in 1783.

HYGINUS, a pope of Rome, about 138-143.

HYGINUS, CAIUS JULIUS, a freedman of Augustus, and keeper of the palatine library, au. of an astronomical poem, and a book of fables.

HYPATIA, daughter of Theon of Alexandria, celebrated for her beauty, illustrious in her genius, and hallowed through all time by her mournful death. She was torn to pieces by the mob of Alexandria, in her earliest prime, in the year 415. Hypatia was a neo-platonist. Charmed by the reflection therein, of the noblest intellect of Greece, and attracted by its mysticism, she professed that philosophy in public lectures; and her purity and elevation of soul enhanced the fame accruing from her eloquence. The period of her teaching was that of the first conflicts of Christianity with Paganism: the religion of brotherly love was then too often a symbol of insurrection to the ignorant and the poor,—insurrection against culture as well as false worship, against intelligence as well as aristocracy and pride. Cyril, of Alexandria, a man of courage, but not averse from turbulence and tyranny on his own side, was Bishop: and he did not enough repress passions certainly not approved in his Evangel. He accounted Hypatia his personal foe; and probably did not regret that with the temples of her deities, a martyr fell. The character of this brilliant victim is traced with genuine sympathy by Mr. Kingsley in his recent romance—one of those fictions which are truer than most histories. [J.P.N.]

HYPERIDES, an Athenian orator, and partizan of the Byzantines, killed by Antipater, 322 B.C.

HYPERIUS, G. A., a Flemish theolog., 1511-64.

HYPSICLES, a Greek mathematician, 2d cent.

HYRCANUS, JOHN, or HYRCANUS I., succeeded his father, Simon Maccabeus, as high priest and prince of the Jews, B.C. 135, d. B.C. 107. HYRCANUS II., eldest son of Alexander Jannæus, became sovereign pontiff, B.C. 70, was dethroned by his brother Aristobulus, and restored by the Romans as a tributary prince 63, beheaded by Herod 29.

IACAIA, a Turkish adventurer, 17th century.

IACOUB-TCHELEBY, a son of Amurath I., strangled by order of Bajazet, 1389.

IANAKI, a Greek prince of Moldavia, 1708.

IBARRIA, JOACHIM, a Spanish printer, celebrated for his improvement of the art, 1725-1785.

IBAS, a bishop of Edessa in Mesopotamia, supposed to have favoured the doctrines of Nestorius, and deposed on that account by the council of Ephesus, 449. He was reinstated by the council of Chalcedon 451, and died 457.

IBBETSON, AGNES, a botanist, 1757-1823.

IBBETSON, JAMES, a divine and ecclesiastical historian, 1717-1781. His son, of the same name, learned in Saxon and Norman antiquities, 1755-90.

IBBETSON, J. C., a painter, died 1817.

IBBOT, BENJAMIN, a learned div., 1680-1725.

IBEK, an Arabian author, died 1348.

IBEK, AZ-ED-DEEN, sultan of Egypt, 1251-57.

IBN-AL-ATSYN, surnamed ARR-EDDYN, 'the glory of religion,' an Arabian historian, 1160-1233.

IBN-AL-ATSYR-ABOULSAADAT-MOBAREK, an Arabian grammarian and author, lieutenant to the king of Moussoul, 1150-1268.

IBN-AL-ATSYR-NASZ-ALLAH, an Eastern vizier under the son and suc. of Saladin, author of 'The art of the Writer and the Poet,' 1162-1239.

IBN-AL-COUTHYAH, author of a 'History of the Conquest of Spain by the Arabs,' died 978.

IBN-AL-DJOURY, an Arab. historian, d. 1201.

IBN-AL-FARADHY, a Spanish Arab, author of a 'Chronicle of Spanish Savants,' died 1012.

IBN-AL-FORAT, an Arab. historian, died 1405.

IBN-AL-KHETIB, surnamed 'the Tongue of Religion,' au. of a 'History of the Kings of Grenada,' and 'Lives of Spanish Writers,' 1313-1374.

IBN-AL-MOKAFFA, a Persian writer, d. 757.

IBN-AL-OUARDY, a geograp. writer, d. 1350.

IBN-AYYAS, an Arabian geographer and historian, author of a history of Egypt, &c., 16th cen.

IBN-CADHY-CHOBAH, a Mussulman doctor of the sect of Chafei, 1289-1386.

IBN-COTAIHAH, an Arabian historian, b. 829.

IBN-DJOLDJOL, an Arabian transla., 10th c.

IBN-DOREID, a celebrated Arabian philologist and poet, author of many works, 838-933.

IBN-EL-A'LAM, an astronomer, died 985.

IBN-EL-AWAM, an agriculturist, 12th century.

IBN-FAFEDT, a mystic poet, 1181-1235.

IBN-KHALDOUN, an Arabian magistrate, celebrated as an historian and jurist, author of a 'History of the Arabs and Berbers,' 1332-1406.

IBN-KHILCAN, an Arabian historian, 1211-81.

IBN-WASIL, an Arabian diplomatist, historian, philosopher, and jurisconsult, 1207-1268.

IBN-YOUNIS, an astronomer, 979-1008.

IBRAHIM I., governor of Africa under Haroun-al-Raschid, and founder of a dynasty, died 809. Another of the name in the same line of princes called IBRAHIM II., died 902.

IBRAHIM I., an illustrious sultan of the race of the Ghaznevides, distinguished by the extension of his empire into India, and by the promotion of the arts and sciences in his dominions, reigned 1058-1099. IBRAHIM II., or I peror of Hindostan, succeeded 151

IBRAHIM, brother and succe
IV., as sultan of Turkey, in 1640,

IBRAHIM, a pacha of Egypt,

IBRAHIM, grand vizier unde exec. for treasonable correspon. wit

IBRAHIM, caliph of Bagdad, 74

IBRAHIM-BEY, a famous M vanquished by Mehemet Ali in 180

IBRAHIM-EFFENDI, a Turk
verted to Christianity, translator o into the Arabian tongue, 1641-169

IBRAHIM-EFFENDI, a native became a dignitary of the Otto introduced printing in 1728.

IBRAHIM-EL-GAUHARY,
Ibrahim and Mouradbey, sultan o
guished as a father of the people,

IBRAHIM-EL-HALEPY, an stantinople, celebrated as a jurisco

IBRAHIM-MANSOUR-EFFE
adventurer, who embraced Maho introduced the discipline of Europ ish armies; after serving Ali-Pa he wrote a 'Memoir of Greece and his government; he at length
Paris, on account of destitution, 1

IBRAHIM-MOLLAH, a T. viz

IBRAHIM PASHA, the son
Mehemet Ali in the government also the chief instrument in esta nasty, and deserves to rank with the founders of empires. He was in Roumelia 1789, and enjoyed h triumph at Cairo in 1819, after subj habees, and wresting from their towns of Mecca and Medina. In as suzerain, demanded the aid of mament to suppress the Greeks, Ibrahim, whose name had become f out the East, and who had introduc discipline into his armies, pointed commander of the expedition.
years he overran the Morea, whi extended field of ruin and bloodshe length compelled to retire by the at Navarino by the combined fle
France, and Russia, on the 20th o
In 1831 he was sent by his father 24,000 infantry, four regiments forty pieces of artillery, to the co which he effected so completely as one hundred and fifty miles of Co which juncture a Russian army m cept him, and he concluded a tre which several provinces were adde government. In 1839, the Porte recover Syria, and on the 24th of gained the battle of Nezib, by whi again opened to Constantinople; b forces of England, Austria, Russ were drawn up between him and Acre being reduced by bombardm of Egypt and the Porte were settled by their joint masters. After the evacuation of Syria, Ibrahim applied himself to the arts of peace in Egypt, and when Mehemet Ali became incapable of continuing the government, he was made viceroy according to the terms of succession granted in the firman of the sultan in 1841. He enjoyed this dignity only two months and ten days, and died in November, 1848, when he was succeeded by his nephew, Abbas Pasha. Ibrahim Pasha was a man of debauched habits, but a great soldier and sagacious statesman. As may be supposed, in a country like Egypt, just emerging from the barbarism of ages, and in a family which had fought its way out of obscurity, he was quite unlettered, but nevertheless, well acquainted with the courtesies of European society. [E.R.]

IBRAHIM-TCHAOUICHKEKHIE, a bey of Egypt, raised to the throne of the Mamelukes, 1760, poisoned in the attempt to deliver his country from the usurpation of the Turks, 1760.

IBYCUS, an Italian lyric poet, 560 B.C.

IBZAN, judge of Israel after Jephthah.

IDACIUS, a Spanish chronicler, 4th century.

IDES, EVERARD YSBRANTZ, a German traveller, [illegible] of a 'Journey from Moscow to China,' 18th ct.

IDMAN, N., a Swedish savant, 18th century.

IDRIS, GAWR, a Welch astronomer, whose [illegible] he is borne by one of the highest Welch moun[illegible]s, date unknown.

[illegible]ENICHEN, G. A., a Ger. savant, 1709-1759.

[illegible]ERMAK, a Cossack chieftain, died 1583.

[illegible]ETZELER, C., a Swiss architect, 1734-1791.

[illegible]EZDEDJERD, the first of the name, a Sassan[illegible] king of Persia, reigned 399-419; the second, [illegible] endeavoured without success to introduce the [illegible]hip of Zoroaster into his dominions, reigned [illegible]457; the third, last king of the Sassannide [illegible]sty, succeeded 632, vanquished by the Arabs [illegible] assassinated in his retreat 650.

[illegible]FLAND, A. W., a German actor, 1759-1814.

[illegible]GNARRA, N., a Neapol. antiqua., 1728-1808.

[illegible]GNATIUS, patriarch of Constantinople, d. 878.

[illegible]GNATIUS, foun. of the Jesuits. See LOYOLA.

[illegible]GNATIUS, ST., surnamed THEOPHORUS, one [illegible]he apostolic fathers, or first doctors of the [illegible]ch, bishop of Antioch in Syria about 69, suffered [illegible]rdom 107 or 116. He is the author of [illegible]ters,' which are translated in Archbishop [illegible]e's compilation.

[illegible]GOR, the first of the name, grand duke of [illegible]ia, 913-945; the second, grand prince, 1146-7.

[illegible]GRE, JOHN, a Swedish philologist, professor [illegible]etry and eloquence at Upsala, 1707-1780.

[illegible]GEN, CONRAD, a Germ. Hebraist, 1689-1753.

[illegible]GDEFONSE, ST., archb. of Toledo, 607-669.

[illegible]GICINO, B., an Italian poet, 15th century.

[illegible]GLIVE, JACOB, a printer and letter-cutter, re[illegible]kable as a controversialist, and author of the [illegible]ed book of Jasher, 1730-1763.

[illegible]GLYRICUS, FLACIUS, the Latinized name of [illegible]atthias Flacius, or Francowitz, a German theolo[illegible]an, 1520-1575.

IMAD-EDDALAH, a king of Persia, died 949.

IMAD-EDDYN, a Persian histor., 1125-1201.

IMBERT, B., a French poet, 1747-1790.

IMBERT, J. G., a French painter, 1654-1740.

IMBERT, W., a French author, 1743-1808.

IMBONATI, C. J., an Italian Orien., d. 1687.

IMHOF, G. W., Dutch gov. of India, 1705-50.

IMHOFF, JOHN, or JAMES WILLIAM, a German historian and genealogist, 1651-1728.

IMISON, an English mechanician, died 1788.

IMPERATO, F., a Neapolitan painter, died 1565. His son, JEROME, a painter, died 1620.

IMPERATO, F., a Neapolit. naturalist, 16th c.

IMPERIALE, F., a Genoese poet, 14th century.

IMPERIALI, G. B., an Italian physician, author of some admired Latin poetry, 1588-1623. His son, GIOVANNI, a writer of medical history and biography, 1602-1670.

IMPERIALI, GIUSEPPE RENATO, a Genoese noble, cardinal, and governor of Ferrara, disting. for his probity, talents, and learning, 1651-1737.

IMPERIALI, G. V., a Genoese poet, died 1645.

IMPERIALI-LERCARI, F. M., doge of Genoa when it was cannonaded by Louis XIV., 1684.

INA, king of the West Saxons, 689-726.

INCHBALD, ELIZABETH, the daughter of a Suffolk farmer, was born in 1753. At the age of sixteen, she eloped from home, with no more blameable design than the foolish one of seeking her fortune. Miss Simpson very soon became the wife of Mr. Inchbald, a respectable London actor, by whom she was brought on the stage, and played for a good many years. After 1784, she wrote plays, amounting to nineteen, several of which were very successful: her comedy of 'Wives as they Were and Maids as they Are' is still acted. She edited three collections of plays. Her best literary works were her two novels: 'A Simple Story,' 1791; and 'Nature and Art,' 1796. She lived prudently and irreproachably, and accumulated several thousand pounds, which she bequeathed chiefly to the Roman Catholic poor. She died at Kensington in 1821. [W.S.]

INCHOFER, MELCHIOR, a Hungarian Jesuit, jurisconsult, historian, and theologian, 1584-1648.

INCLEDON, B. C., a cel. vocalist, 1764-1826.

INEZ DE CASTRO. See CASTRO.

INGE and HALSTAN, joint k. of Sw. 12th ct.

INGE, the younger, a k. of Sweden, 12th cen.

INGE, two kings of Norway, 12th and 13th ct.

INGEBURGE, queen of France, 1193-1236.

INGEGNERI, A., a Venetian poet, 16th cent.

INGENHOUSZ, JOHN, a Dutch physician and chemist, au. of 'Exp. on Vegetables,' 1730-1799.

INGHEW, W. VAN, a Dutch pain., 1651-1709.

INGHIRAMI, CURZIO, an Italian antiquarian, author of 'Etruscan Antiquities,' 1614-1655.

INGHIRAMI, TOMASO FEDRA, an eminent Italian poet and orator, 1470-1516.

INGIALD, a king of Sweden, 7th century.

INGLIS, HENRY DAVID, a miscellaneous writer, first known under the assumed name of Derwent Conway, born in Scotland 1795, d. 1835.

INGLIS, HESTER, the writer of some beautiful manuscripts preserved at Oxford, 16th century.

INGLIS, SIR JAMES, a Scotch officer and partizan of the French, author of the well-known 'Complaint of Scotland,' died 1554.

INGLIS, JOHN, D.D., a Scottish divine, author of a 'Defence of Ch. Establishments,' 1796-1834.

INGOUF, F. R., a French engraver, 1747-1812. His brother, P. CHARLES, an eng., about 1746-99.

INGRAM, ROBERT, a theologian, 1727-1804.

INGRASSIAS, GIOVANNI FILIPPO, a native of Sicily, dist. as a physician and anatomist, 1510-80.

INGUIMBERT, J. D., an Italian theologian, founder of an hospital and pub. library, 1683-1757.

INGULPHUS, abbot and historian of the monastery of Croyland in the time of William the Conqueror, born in London about 1030, died 1109.

INNES, Louis, a French priest, secretary of James II., and author of his Memoirs, born 1650. His brother, Thomas, an antiq. wr., 1662-1744.

INNOCENT. The popes of Rome of this name are—Innocent I., a saint of the Roman calendar, flourished in the time of Alaric, 402-417. Innocent II., pope in the age of Abelard and Arnold, with whose doctrines, as well as with rival popes and kings, he was kept in continual conflict, 1130-1143. Innocent III., a pope of extraordinary spirit and political sagacity, who arrived at despotic authority over the kings of Europe, and pursued the most sanguinary measures against the Waldenses and other heretics, 1198-1216. Innocent IV., pope, 1243-1254. Innocent V., one of the most celebrated theologians of the age, succeeded and died 1276. Innocent VI., reigned 1352-1362. Innocent VII., 1404-1406. Innocent VIII., who laboured to promote a union among the Christian princes, in order to withstand the Turks, predecessor of Alexander VI., 1484-1492. Innocent IX., elected and died 1591. Innocent X., a great enemy of the treaty of Westphalia, and the doctrines of Jansenius, 1644-1655. Innocent XI., distinguished for his enmity to Louis XIV., for his extreme austerity, and for having proscribed the teaching of Molinos, 1676-1689. Innocent XII., disting. as a good and enlightened prince, 1692-1700. Innocent XIII., reigned 1721-1724.

INTERIANO DE AYALA, Juan, a Spanish monk, known as a poet and wr. on art, 1656-1730.

INTIERI, B., an Italian economist, died 1757.

INTORCETTA, Prosper, a learned Sicilian Jesuit and missionary to China, 1625-1696.

INVEGES, A., a Sicilian historian, 1595-1677.

IOUSAF-ABOU-'L-HAXEX, a Moorish king of Grenada, began to reign 1048.

IPHICRATES, a famous general of Athens, defeated the Lacedæmonians 392 B.C., and relieved Sparta when invaded by Epaminondas 368, died some time after 357 B.C.

IPHITUS, king of Elis, celebrated as the founder of the Olympic games, 8th century B.C.

IRAILH, A. S., a French historian, 1719-1794.

IRBY, Fr. Paul, a naval officer, 1779-1844.

IRELAND, John, author of 'The Life of Henderson,' and 'Hogarth Illustrated,' died 1789.

IRELAND, John, dean of Westminster, distinguished as a theological writer and patron of learning, and as a contributor to the earlier numbers of the Quarterly Review, 1762-1842.

IRELAND, Samuel, a collector and publisher of literary curiosities, disgraced by the publication of the pretended Shakspeare MSS., which appeared in 1796, and had been forged by his son, of whom he was the unconscious dupe, died 1800.

IRENAEUS, St., was a native of Asia Minor, and a disciple of Polycarp. He is supposed, when still a young man, to have come to Gaul along with Pothinus, by whose instrumentality several churches were formed, the most famous of which were those of Lyons and Vienne. On the death of Pothinus, in A.D. 177, he succeeded him as bishop of Lugdunum (Lyons). This high office he continued to hold till his death about the end of the

His ministry was a series of active, zeal devoted personal labours, and he struggl for the purity and the enlargement of th
The current controversies, such as that a proper time of keeping Easter, attra attention, and in the name of the Gallic chu resisted with vigour the incipient encroach the bishop of Rome. His great literary his refutation of the Valentinian form
Gnostic heresy, and is usually named Haereses. The original Greek, with the of a few fragments preserved by succeed ters, has been lost, and the remainder of is in a barbarous Latin version. He is a posed to have written the graphic and account of the persecution endured by the of Lyons and Vienne, which is still exta form of a letter. The character of Iren that of an honest, ardent, and amiable pastor — possessed of a well-instructed versant in the various phases of theologic but often seduced into puerility by the a methods of interpretation then so preva bewitching. The common idea, that was a martyr, rests on no good fou
None of the writers of his own age, immediately after it, ever allude to such
The editio princeps of his works was, u charge of Erasmus, published at Basel, 1
—the excellent edition of Grabe app
Oxford in 1702, folio, and in Paris in 171 the care of Benedictine Massuet. There editions by Grynaeus, Basel, 1571, G
Paris, 1570; and Feuardentius, Cologn
But the best, and most recent edition, is 8vo, Leipzig, 1853, edited by Stieren, and with the prefaces of the preceding editi with ample notes and prolegomena.

IRENE, empress of the East, like Ma of Scots and some of the Medici, is one marked characters in whom the reader o becomes personally interested to a degre ceeding his sense of justice in the case, a powers of fascination not unfrequently c pen of the historian at the distance of age at Athens of a private family about 752, raised to the throne of Constantine by riage with Leo IV., who succeeded his father after the celebration of their nuptials, in 775 in consequence of the death of Leo, she be gent of the empire for her son Constantin the tenth year of his age, and the court of tinople was soon a perpetual scene of int counterplot, which led to the most ruthles
In this struggle, the uncles of the young fired with as much ambition, and endo infinitely less personal grace and love of the beautiful Athenian, were ranged on with the iconoclasts, and Irene on the ot ported the worship of images, and had th and firmness of purpose to carry her poin was finally decreed in a council held at N
In the meantime, the education of her so she never meant to exercise the suprem was totally neglected; and when he a maturity, and was put in forcible possess father's authority by the troops, he not on incapable, but most unscrupulous and cr exercise of his authority. With a reckless and ambitious woman like Irene on the watch for her opportunity, and his subjects alienated in disgust, it is not surprising that her emissaries were at last able to seize on the person of the emperor, and having done so, they put out his eyes, and proclaimed Irene—the only person that had shown any capability of sustaining the weight of government. She had reigned five years sole empress, and was negotiating a marriage with Charlemagne, which would have united the Eastern and Western empires, when Nicephorus, the grand treasurer, became leader of a revolt, and having brought over some of her eunuchs to his party, succeeded in dethroning her. A few months afterwards, she died in exile at the isle of Lesbos, A.D. 803, still in the vigour of her years, and in all likelihood broken-hearted by her fall. We ought to have mentioned that Irene obtained some advantages over the Saracens during her regency, and concluded a treaty of peace with Haroun-al-Raschid. [E.R.]

IRETON, Henry, son-in-law of Cromwell, distinguished as a parliamentary general in the civil war, and lord deputy of Ireland after the establishment of the commonwealth. He was one of those who signed the warrant for the king's death. Born 1610, died at Limerick 1651.

IRGENS, Olans, a Norway savant, last cent.

IRICO, J. Andrew, a learned Italian, disting. as a theologian, philos., and historian, 1704-1782.

IRLAND, B., a French jurisconsult, 1551-1612.

IRNERIUS, called also Wernerus, Warnerus, or Guarnerus, a lawyer of Bologna, regarded as the restorer of the Roman law in the middle ages, born about 1065, died after 1138.

IRVING, Rev. Edward, was a native of Dumfriesshire, having been born at Annan on 15th August, 1792, of respectable parentage. His eccentricities began to display themselves at school, for even in boyhood he was singular in his dress, manner, and phraseology. Of all the branches of education, he excelled in arithmetic and mathematics, and his superiority in these departments appeared so decidedly during his curriculum at the college of Edinburgh, that as the foremost of all competitors, he was appointed mathematical teacher in the burgh school of Haddington, and the year following in the school of Kirkaldy. The latter situation he held seven years, when Irving become a licentiate in the Church of Scotland, and going on a visit to Edinburgh, he happened to preach in St. George's church. One of his hearers on that occasion was Dr. Chalmers, who engaged him to be assistant-minister in the parish of St. John's, Glasgow. Although he was not esteemed there a popular preacher, his great talents and peculiar eloquence were appreciated by a select, but devoted band of admirers, who sounded his praises far and wide, till his fame reached London. In 1822, Mr. Irving was invited to preach in the church of the Caledonian Asylum in London, then vacant, and soon after elected minister of the chapel, Dr. Chalmers introducing him to his new charge in August of that year. London is so immense a field, that a preacher even of moderate talents can reckon almost with certainty on obtaining an audience. Much more a preacher like Irving, who, to high and undoubted talent, united great eccentricity in sentiment and manner. An eloquent speaker, he yet indulged in a quaint style formed on the model of the Elizabethan age; delivered his discourses with prodigious energy; and made fearless indiscriminate attacks on everything—civil as well as ecclesiastical—he considered wrong or faulty. Such a preacher was soon surrounded by multitudes. It became 'the fashion' to attend Mr. Irving's church. People of all ranks and characters, literary men, philosophers, statesmen, commons, and noblemen of the highest name and influence, flocked to his church. Within a year after his settlement in the metropolis, he published a volume of discourses, which he entitled 'For the Oracles of God, four orations; For Judgment to Come, an argument in nine parts.' So extraordinary was the demand for this volume, that three large editions were sold within six months.—From his great popularity, Mr. Irving was called frequently to plead the cause of many charitable and Christian institutions. In 1824, he preached the annual sermon for the London Missionary Society; and on that occasion, as he had acquired the habit of protracting the services to an unusual length, he exhausted himself so much, that he was obliged to pause twice to rest himself. The discourse was afterwards published under the title: 'For Missionaries after the Apostolic Schools, a series of orations in four parts,' and dedicated to his friend Coleridge. In the following year he preached the annual sermon for the Continental Society, and on that occasion, too, disgusted many even of his friends and admirers by extending the services to more than four hours' duration. He wished to train his own mind to habitual occupation with religious thoughts, and as he thought others should do so too, he refused to abridge his discourses.—Mr. Irving, through the influence of Coleridge, became strongly inclined to mysticism, and, having commenced the study of unfulfilled prophecy, which he preposterously held out as the key to the right interpretation of the Bible, he gradually plunged into a sea of the grossest absurdities. Attaching himself to what was called 'The Albury School of Prophets,' he not only adopted Millennarian views respecting the personal reign of Christ on the earth, but began to entertain some singular opinions of the model Christian church. These opinions, leading him to conceive that it was want of faith that prevented the miraculous gifts of the primitive age from being enjoyed by the church in modern times, he with his flock, being true believers, laid claim to the power of working miracles, and speaking with unknown tongues. These wild extravagances, together with the sad errors in doctrine into which Mr. Irving fell, compelled the courts of the Church of Scotland to interfere. He was at length declared no longer belonging to her communion, and he with his deluded flock, who followed blindly in all his vagaries, withdrew from Regent Square church to a new chapel that was built for his reception. Exhausted by anxiety and incessant labours, Mr. Irving's iron constitution gave way, and, while on a tour through his native country, undertaken for his health, he died at Glasgow, Dec. 8, 1834, in the Cathedral of which his remains were interred.—The Irvingites still form a considerable body, and a scheme is at present being carried out for building churches in all the large towns of the United Kingdom in connection with this sect. Towards the completion of this scheme, it is reported that Henry Drummond, Esq., the eminent London banker, has given the munificent donation of £100,000. [R.J.]

IRWIN, EYLES, an English poet, 1751-1817.

ISAAC, son of Abraham and Sarah, 2266 B.C.

ISAAC, a patriarch of Armenia, died 1440.

ISAAC, ANGELUS, emperor of the East, proclaimed on the day when Andronicus Commenus was killed by the populace 1185, dethroned and deprived of his sight by Alexis, his brother, 1195, reinstated by the crusaders, and put to death the same year by Alexis Ducas, 1204.

ISAAC COMMENUS, emperor of the East 1057, abdicated 1059, died in a monastery 1061.

ISAAC KARO, a Spanish rabbi, 15th century.

ISAAC LEVITA, a rabbin of the 16th century.

ISAACSON, H., an Eng. chronolo., 1581-1654.

ISABELLA OF AUSTRIA, daughter of Philip II., king of Spain, and of Elizabeth of France, born 1566, married to Albert, son of the emperor Maximilian, 1598, deprived of the sovereignty of the Low Countries, which she had received after the death of her husband in 1621, died 1633.

ISABELLA OF BAVARIA, daughter of Stephen II., duke of Bavaria, born 1371, married to Charles VI. of France, 1385, died miserably at Paris, after a reign marked by intrigues and crimes, 1435.

ISABELLA OF CASTILE, queen of Spain, daughter of John II. king of Castile, born 1450, married to Ferdinand V., king of Arragon, 1469, died 1504. The reign of Ferdinand and Isabella is the most glorious in the Spanish annals, and from the year 1492, they bore the title of 'king' in common. In her rgn. the inquisition was founded.

ISABELLA OF FRANCE, daughter of Philip the Fair, born 1292, married to Edward II. of England 1308, dethroned her husband with the aid of her paramour, Lord Mortimer, 1326, confined in the castle of Risings by her son Edward III., on attaining his majority, 1330, died 1358.

ISÆUS, an Athenian orator, 4th century B.C.

ISAIAH, a prophet of the Jews, son of Amos, and nephew of Amaziah, k. of Judah, 7th ct. B.C.

ISCANUS, JOSEPH, a Latin poet, died 1224.

ISELIN, ISAAC, a Germ. philosopher, 1728-82.

ISELIN, J. C., a Germ. Orientalist, 1681-1737.

ISEMBERT OF XAINTES, a French architect, employed to finish Old London Bridge 1209.

ISIASLAV, the first of the name grand duke of Russia, reigned 1054-1078; the second, 1146-1154; the third, 1157-1161.

ISIDORE, archbishop of Thessalonica, 15th ct.

ISIDORE OF ALEXANDRIA, a saint and partizan of Athanasius, b. in Egypt abt. 318, d. 404.

ISIDORE OF CHARAX, a Gr. geographer, 1st c.

ISIDORE OF MILETUS, a Greek architect, employed by Justinian at Constantinople, 6th cent.

ISIDORE OF PELUSIUM, a saint, and disciple of Chrysostom, author of Letters valued for their remarks on Scripture passages, on theological questions, and on church discipline, d. about 440.

ISIDORE OF SEVILLE, a saint, and ecclesiastical writer and historian, distinguished for his piety and erudition, born about 570, died 636. A collection of spurious canons intended to prove that all ecclesiastical authority emanated from the see of Rome, was a long time attributed to him, but they have been proved to be the forgeries of an ecclesiastical writer of the 8th century, known as ISIDORE MERCATOR, or PECCATOR.

ISLA, J. F., a Spanish Jesuit, 1714-1783.

ISLEIF, an Icelandic historian, 11th century.

ISHMAEL, a son of Abraham and Hagar, and the supposed father of the Arabians, 2280 B.C.

ISHMAEL, founder of the dynasty of the Sophies in Persia, 1487-1524. ISHMAEL II., his grandson, succeeded 1576, poisoned 1577.

ISOCRATES, a famous Athenian orator and teacher of rhetoric, was born about 436 B.C., and was a contemporary of Socrates. He is reckoned by Cicero among the first to perfect the melody of Greek prose, and was so warmly attached to his country, that he took no food after the fatal battle of Cheronea, and four days afterwards died of starvation and grief in the ninety-eighth year of his age. There are some discourses and epistles still extant under his name; and it is recorded that he never, by writing or accusation, injured a single individual.

ISRAEL BEN AARON, a Prussian rabbi, author of 'The Light of Israel,' published 1701.

ISSELT, M. D'., a German historian, d. 1597.

ISTLIVANFIUS, NICHOLAS, vice-palatine of Hungary, and historian of that country, died 1615.

ISTRIA, VINCENTELLO D'., viceroy of Corsica, born 1380, made viceroy 1421, executed 1434.

ITALINSKI, A., a Polish diplomatist, d. 1827.

ITAND, J. M. G., a Fr. physician, 1775-1838.

ITTIGIUS, TH., a Ger. theologian, 1644-1710.

ITURBIDE, or YTURBIDE, DON AUGUSTUS, a Mexican officer, born of a distinguished family in 1784, is remarkable for his sudden elevation to the supreme power as emperor of Mexico, and for his tragical fate after he had played his part in the drama of Mexican independence. When the yoke of Spain was shaken off by some of the American provinces in 1816, Iturbide was in command of the royal army of the north, occupying Guanaxuato and Valladolid, and a false charge of disloyalty being preferred against him, he retired from active service, in reality, as it appears, to watch events, and to find means in the ruin of the Spaniards for the gratification of his ambition. His plans being matured, and a command offered to him, he declared for the independence of the Mexican people, and having freed his country of the common enemy, he outwitted the republicans, and was proclaimed emperor by a coup d'etat, May 18th, 1822. Unable to maintain his authority in a state of anarchy, which only a real king of men could have controlled, he tendered his abdication in the March following, and being handsomely provided for, covenanted to reside in Italy. From Italy, notwithstanding, in the beginning of 1824, he removed to England, and encouraged by the division of parties in Mexico, addressed a letter to the congress, offering his services as a private officer, to restore order—not waiting an answer, however, but embarking for the seat of empire with a magnificent imperial mantle, proclamations, crosses, uniforms, and insignia of all kinds, with which to caparison and dazzle the poor Mexicans. The message of Iturbide was received and read in congress on the 28th of April, and its writer instantly proclaimed an outlaw; who, ignorant of the fact, arrived in person on the 12th of July, only to be shot on the 19th, and thrown into an unhonoured grave, without coffin or shroud, like a dog. It is evident there was no national feeling in favour of this adventurer, as was indeed hardly possible in such a country and under such circumstances, yet the event might have been very different had he returned earlier. The rich and populous state of Guadalaxara, where the military command was in the hands of Bustamenti, was in favour of Iturbide, and in revolt against the supreme government, but was subjugated by congress about a month before his arrival. One last chance was thrown in his way by La Garza, under colour of making him prisoner, but Iturbide had neither the nerve nor the address to profit by it, and the soldiers he might have commanded, had he been a Napoleon, led him to execution. [E.R.]

IVAN, the first of the name prince of Georgia, began to reign 1057; the second, grandson of the preceding, distinguished in the war with the Turks in 1123; the third, grandson of the latter, reigned about the middle of the 12th century.

IVAN, an Armenian prince in the service of the kings of Georgia, died 1231.

IVANOFF, a Russian dramatist, 1777-1816.

IVAR WIDFAMNE, the founder of a line of Swedish and Danish kings in the 7th century.

IVES, EDWARD, an English traveller, d. 1786.

IVES, JOHN, an Engl. antiquarian, 1751-1776.

IVETEAUX, N. V., a French poet, 1559-1649.

IVO, IVES, or YVES, bishop of Chartres, au. of a collection of decrees, canons, &c., 1035-1115.

IWAN. The Russian sovereigns of this name are—IWAN I., who succeeded his father in the principalities of Vlodomir, Moscow, and Novogorod, 1328, and died 1340. IWAN II., his grandson, reigned 1353-1358. IWAN III., the conqueror of the Tartars under Achmet Khan, the first to adopt the black eagle, and claim the sovereignty of all the Russias, 1438-1505. IWAN IV., grandson of the preceding, and first czar of Russia, surnamed 'the Terrible' on account of his cruelties, but a great promoter of commerce and civilization, 1530-1584. IWAN V., who, being deaf and dumb, was associated with his brother, Peter I., reigned 1682-1696. IWAN VI., poisoned in infancy, 1740, to make way for Elizabeth, daughter of Peter I.

IXNARD, M., a French architect, 1723-1795.

IXTLILXOCHITL, FERDINAND D'ALVA, au. of a history of the old Mexican kings, 17th cent.

IZAACKE, R., historian of Exeter, died 1700.

IZIOCALT, the fourth king of Mexico, and real founder of its government, reigned 1433-1455.

IZMAILOV, a Russian journalist, 1780-1832.

IZQUIERDO, DON EUGENIO, a Spanish diplomatist, signed the truce of Fontainebleau, d. 1816.

IZZEN-CHOLLACH, a French poet, last cent.

J

JAACOB, a learned Talmudist, 16th century.

JAAPHAR-EBN-THOPHAIL, an Arabian philosopher, author of 'The Improvement of Human Reason, exhibited in the Life of Hai Ebn Yokdan,' a philos. romance, transl. by Ockley, d. 1198.

JABALOT, F. F., an Ital. theol., 1780-1834.

JABINEAU, H., a Fr. eccles. wr., died 1792.

JABLONOWSKI, C. G., a Ger. nat., 1756-87.

JABLONOWSKI, JOSEPH, Count, grandfather of Stanislaus, king of Poland, known as a poet and translator; died commencement of last century. JOSEPH ALEXANDER, Prince Jablonowski, of the same family, founder of a literary society which bears his name, and author of a biography of the great Polish generals, 1712-1777.

JABLONOWSKI, ULADISLAS, a Polish general in the service of Fr. at St. Domingo, 1769-1802.

JABLONSKI, DANIEL ERNEST, a Hebrew scholar and protestant divine of Germany, 1660-1741. JOHN THEODORE, his brother, a distinguished lexicographer, 1654-1731. PAUL ERNEST, son of Daniel, a theolo. and lear. wr., 1693-1757.

JACKSON, ANDREW, president of the United States, was born in South Carolina, on the 15th of March, 1767. His father, a settler of Scottish descent, died early, leaving him, with two older brothers, to the care of their widowed mother. He early showed a hardy self-relying nature, and when but a boy he shouldered a musket in the war of independence. With the versatility of employment peculiar to the progressive character of the new republican empire, he became a lawyer as well as a soldier; and he was at the same time a judge of the supreme court of Tennessee, and a major-general in the army of the United States. This was the character in which he was to reap his great renown. He had spent many years in the harassing and inglorious conflicts with the Indians on the frontier, when the second war with Britain called him to more distinguished services. In 1815 he signalized himself by the defence of New Orleans. On this occasion he showed that somewhat haughty disregard of civil rights, which was a conspicuous feature of his character; and perhaps it was well for the constitution of the United States that in the midst of his triumphant popularity he found himself surrounded by legal difficulties and dangers. He was subjected to damages for proceedings affecting private parties consequent on his suspending the constitution, and enforcing martial law at New Orleans. There has been no statesman from whom, had opportunity served him, the constitution of the States was likely to run so much risk. He depended on his military renown and democratic principles for the votes and support of the multitude, and might thus in a less firmly settled government have been a very dangerous man. After having served in various public capacities, he became, in 1824, a candidate for the presidency. Though he had the largest number of votes, no one had a sufficient number to be elected, and Adams was selected by the representatives, according to the constitution. In 1828 Jackson was elected by a large majority. The older party viewed this event as the ascendancy of principles fraught with danger to the United States; and this feeling was echoed from other countries, when it was seen that his policy was connected with territorial aggression, and the aggrandizement of the slave-holding interest. On the renewal of the charter of the United States Bank, a main instrument of influence to the federal government, he boldly trusted to popular support, and used his veto against the chambers of congress. His presidency lasted until 1837. He died on 8th June, 1845. [J.H.B.]

JACKSON, ARTHUR, a noncf. div., 1593-1666.

JACKSON, CYRIL, an eminent div., 1746-1819. His brother, WILLIAM, bishop of Oxford, a classical translator and mathematician, 1750-1815.

JACKSON, JOHN, a portrait pain., 1778-1831.

JACKSON, JOHN, a famous controver. divine, philosophical writer, and chronologist, 1686-1763.

JACKSON, JOSEPH, a letter-founder, 1733-92.

JACKSON, ROBERT, a physician and profes. writer, especially on the fevers of Jamaica and America, and the use of cold water, 1751-1827.

JACKSON, THOMAS, a learned div., 1579-1640.

JACKSON, WILLIAM, a musical composer and writer; distinguished also as a painter, 1730-1804.

JACKSON, WILLIAM, an Irish protestant clergyman, convicted of a treasonable correspondence with France; d. of poison at the bar, 1795.

JACOB, the patriarch of the Bible, is supposed to have been born abt. 2206 B.C., and d. abt. 2061.

JACOB, a Cistercian monk, and native of Hungary, killed while preaching a crusade, 12th c.

JACOB, AL BARDI, or BURADÆUS, a bishop and apostle of the Monophysites in the 6th century.

JACOB, BEN HAJIM, a rabbi of the 16th cent.

JACOB, BEN NAPTHALI, a learned Jew to whom, in conjunction with Ben Aser, the invention of the Masoretic points is ascribed, 5th century.

JACOB, EDWARD, an antiquar. wr., d. 1788.

JACOB, GILES, a writer of numerous works on legal subjects and in polite literature; among which are his 'Lives and Characters of English Dramatic Poets,' 'Law Dictry.,' &c., 1690-1744.

JACOB, HENRY, founder of the first congregational or independent church in England, and author of theological treatises by which that reform was promoted, died about 1624. His son, of the same name, a learned writer, 1606-1652.

JACOB, JEHUDAH LEON, a Spanish Jew. an. of a 'Descrip. of the Temple of Solomon,' 17th ct.

JACOB KOLB, G., a Fr. antiq., 1775-1830.

JACOBÆUS, OLIGER, a Danish antiquarian, naturalist, and literary savant, 1650-1701. His son, JAMES, a learned writer, died 1738.

JACOBI, A. R., a Ger. jurisconsult, 1746-1825.

JACOBI, FREDERICK HENRY, born at Dusseldorf, 25th January, 1743; died at Munich, where he was President of the Academy of Sciences, 10th March, 1819. Jacobi, distinguished preeminently as a writer—no German in modern times having attained a style of greater lucidity and beauty—led the reaction which followed on the various scepticisms arising in the speculations of Kant, and explained in our article on that philosopher. The scepticisms chiefly related to the question—how far are we entitled to infer the existence of an external reality, from the existence of a primary conception? Jacobi opposed to them an imperturbable dogmatism,—asserting with unshrinking confidence, the legitimacy and sufficiency of such conclusions as the following:—'I think, or have an idea of the Supreme Being—therefore he exists.' It cannot be doubted that this faith-philosophy, as it was designated, had considerable, and a very salutary influence in recalling to logicians the authority of our Intuitions; but Jacobi f a true and philosophic faith is not sy with blind confidence in whatever may in the mind; it is confidence justified by and defensible on grounds capable of and vindicated. He exceeded in this even the excesses of the Scottish School;
his expositions are everywhere disting acuteness, and adorned by so remarkab that his disciples have named him a mod
The correspondence of this celebrated perhaps the most interesting of any left us. Goethe declared that it and sums up a whole century. Jacob considered the founder of a School; and had no slight influence in moulding the Schleiermacher.

JACOBI, JOHN GEO., brother of the a dist. professor and wr. of polite liter., 1

JACOBILLI, L., an Italian savant, 1

JACOBS, F. C. W., a Ger. critic, b. 1

JACOBS, JURIEN, a Swiss painter, 1

JACOBS, LUCAS, a Dutch painter, 1

JACOBS, P. F., a Flemish painter, 1

JACOBSEN, M., a Spanish commdr.,
the Armada was saved from total ruin,

JACOBSON, JOHN CH. GOTTFRIED
'Technological Dict. of All the Arts,' &c.

JACOPI, J., an Italian anatomist, di

JACOPONE, or JACOPO DA TOD monk, whose real name was JACOPO DETTI, author of ascetic writings an which have given him a place among th
Italy. The best known of these is t
'Stabat Mater Dolorosa;' died 1306.

JACOTIN, PETER, a Fr. geograph., 1

JACOTOT, JEAN JOSEPH, celeb. as a plan of universal education, successive of artillery under Napoleon, secretary to ter of war, member of the chamber of tives 1815, prof. of literature at Louvain, tor of the military school of Belgium, 17

JACQUARD, or JACQUART, MARI celebrated as the inventor of a loom for ing of damasks, was born at Lyons 1752 1834. He was the son of a common and first exhibited his machine in 1 which, it has been adopted in every m of Europe and America, and is admitte an epoch in the weaving art. He was by Napoleon to an employment in the toire des Arts et des Metiers,' and t
Lyons has erected a statue to his memo

JACQUELIN, J. A., a Fr. poet, 177

JACQUELINE, countess of Holland,

JACQUELOT, ISAAC, a prot. div., 1

JACQUEMARD, S., a Fr. poet, 177

JACQUEMIN, J. B., a Fr. geomet., 1

JACQUEMONT, VICTOR, a celebrat naturalist and traveller in the East Indi

JACQUES, M. J., a Fr. theologian, 1

JACQUET, EUGENE VINCENT, a and an. of works on the East. languages

JACQUET, J. C., a Fr. pamphleteer,

JACQUET, LOUIS, a French Jesu of a 'Parallel between the Greek an tragic writers,' 1732-1794.

JACQUET, PETER, a Fr. jurisconsul

JACQUIER, F., a learned mathemat.

QUIN, A. P., a French author, 1721-1780.
QUIN, NICOLAS JOSEPH, a Dutch botanist, of a magnificent work entitled 'Floræ Aus- with 500 coloured engravings, 1727-1817.
LOT, N., a Fr. physiologist, 1738-1793.
K, C., a German engraver, 1763-1809.
K, M., a German jurisconsult, 1783-1833.
ER, J. W., a German divine, born 1647.
LLON, a duke of Lithuania, born about ited the kingdom of Poland to his own marriage with Hedriga, and reigned as s V., 1386, died 1434.
MANN, C. J., a German savant, d. 1804.
, RICHARD, an English poet, 1715-1781.
, JOHN, a professor in Vienna, disting. iental and biblical scholar, died 1817.
LOT, HUBERT ALEXIS, a French geo- born about 1640, died 1712.
B, L. H. VON, a German economist and her of the school of Kant, 1759-1827.
ABERT, J., a Swiss exp. phil., 1712-68.
BLICUS, a Syrian novelist, 2d century.
BLICUS, a Platonic philosopher, 4th cent.
BLICHUS, or IAMBLICHUS, the fa- Neo-platonist and pupil of Porphyry, was t Chalcis, and died about the year 333. atonism was far from pure, for it was adul- with many orientalisms, and degraded perous superstitions. Yet his contemporaries lavish in their praises of his genius. His on Pythagoras contains a life of that pher, full of ridiculous puerilities and por- and has also several chapters on ethics and ry. The book 'On the Mysteries,' is an to prove the divine origin and perfection Egyptian worship, with its theosophic doc- and mystic ceremonies. Many of his other such as his Commentaries on some of Dialogues, are lost. His treatise on the was published by Gale, Oxford, 1678, This Jamblichus is often confounded with wo persons of the same name. [J.E.]
ES. The saints of this name are—1. The brother of Saint John, put to death by Agrippa 44. 2. A bishop of Jerusalem, of St. Simon and St. Jude, killed by the 62. 3. A bishop of Mesopotamia, 4th cen.
ES. The kings of Scotland of this name MES I., son of Robert III., born 1394; in England by Henry IV. and Henry V., 23; succeeded to the throne 1406; mur- 437. JAMES II., son of James I., born succeeded 1437; killed at the siege of Rox- 460. JAMES III., son of James II., born succeeded 1460; killed near the field of kburn 1488. JAMES IV., born 1472; suc- his father James III. 1488; married Mar- daughter of Henry VII. of England, 1503; at Flodden field 1513. JAMES V., son cessor of the latter at the age of eighteen , 1513; married Madeleine, daughter of I., 1536; died, when his only child, Mary, ht days old, 1542. JAMES VI., grandson preceding by his daughter Mary, who was to Henry Stuart, Lord Darnley, born 1566; d at Stirling by the insurgent nobles 1567; lizabeth as king of England 1603; d. 1625.
ES I., king of England, same as James Scotland. JAMES II., his grandson, suc- ceeded his brother, Charles II., 1685; lost his throne and took refuge in France 1688; landed in Ireland; and lost the battle of the Boyne 1690; died 1701.

JAMES I., king of Arragon, born 1206, suc. 1213, died 1216. JAMES II., reigned 1285-1327.

JAMES I., king of Majorca, son of James I., king of Arragon, flourished 1248-1311. JAMES II., grandson of James I., reigned 1324-1349.

JAMES OF BOURBON, count of La Marche, and second husband of Jeanne II., queen of Naples, whom he married after the death of Beatrix of Navarre, his first wife, died 1438.

JAMES OF MAJORCA, third husband of Jeanne I., queen of Naples, whom he married on being delivered from his three years' imprisonment in an iron cage, 1362; died duke of Calabria 1375.

JAMES OF VITRI, a French cardinal and historian, persecutor of the Albigenses, died 1244.

JAMES OF VORAGINE, an Ital. prelate, d. 1298.

JAMES, JOHN THOS., D.D., bishop of Calcutta after the death of Bishop Heber, 1786-1829.

JAMES, ROBERT, a physician and professional writer, auth. of a 'Medical Dictionary,' and celeb. for the preparation of a fever powder, 1703-1776.

JAMES, THOS., auth. of school-books, d. 1804.

JAMES, THOMAS, a distinguished navigator and discoverer, author of a curious journal, 17th c.

JAMES, THOMAS, a learned divine and collector of curious MSS., author of a 'Treatise on the Corruption of Scriptures, Councils, and Fathers,' 1571-1632. His nephew, RICHARD, a distinguished scholar, 1592-1638.

JAMES, WILLIAM, a land surveyor, distinguished as the first projector of the Manchester and Liverpool railway, and regarded as the father of the railway system, 1771-1837.

JAMES, WILLIAM, a naval historian, d. 1827.

JAMES, SIR W., an E. Indian officer, 1720-83.

JAMESON, G., a Scotch painter, 1586-1644.

JAMESON, W., an English savant, author of 'Spicilegia Antiquitatum Ægyptii,' last century.

JAMET, P. C., a French author, born 1701.

JAMI, an Oriental poet, 1414-1494.

JAMIESON, REV. JOHN, a Scottish seceding minister, born at Glasgow 1759, ordained at Forfar in 1786, translated to Edinburgh 1797, author of many popular professional works, but is best known to the world at large by his 'Historical Account of the Culdees of Iona,' his 'Hermes Scythicus,' and above all by his 'Etymological Diction. of the Scottish Language.' Died at Edinburgh 1838.

JAMIN, N., an ascetic of Brittany, 1730-1782.

JAMYN, AMADIS, a French poet, 1538-1585.

JANE. See JEANNE, JOAN.

JANEWAY, J., a nonconform. divine, 1636-74.

JANI, CH. D., a German philosopher, 1743-90.

JANICON, FRANCIS MICHAEL, a French protestant, known as a political writer, 1674-1730.

JANIN, JOSEPH, a French historian, 1715-94.

JANITIUS, C., a Polish historian, 1616-1643.

JANNES and JAMBRES, the name by which Paul calls the magicians who resisted Moses in Egypt, and supposed to be the same as Jamne and Jotape mentioned by Pliny, and as the Johanni and Mamre of the Talmud.

JANOSKI, J. D., a Polish savant, 1720-1786.

JANSEN, H., a French translator, 1741-1812.

JANSENIUS, CORNELIUS, bishop of Ghent, author of a 'Harmony of the Gospel,' 1510-1576.

JANSENIUS, James, professor of divinity at Louvain, an. of Scripture Comment., 1547-1625.

JANSSEN, Cornelle, (Cornelius Jansenius), was born in a hamlet called Accoy, close upon Leerdam, in Flanders, in A.D. 1585. In 1602 he went to study at Louvain, but his severe industry brought on a malady which required change of air, and the young student repaired to Paris, where he formed a friendship with Jean du Verger de Hauranne, better known as the Abbé St. Cyran in the subsequent history of Jansenism. The two friends retired to Bayonne, where they spent several years in earnest study and meditation. On returning to Louvain, Janssen was elevated to the principality of the college of St. Pulcheria, became doctor of theology in 1617, and was added to the number of professors in ordinary. Twice was he sent by his college to Spain on business of moment. He was raised to the bishoprick of Ypres in 1635; a work written by him against France for forming alliances with protestant states having contributed to secure him such patronage from the court of Spain. He died of the plague in 1638, in the fifty-third year of his age. A large part of his life—at least twenty years of it—had been spent in studying and collecting the works of Augustine. The result of his labours—his 'Augustinus,' scarcely finished at his decease—he submitted to the judgment of Pope Urban VIII. His friends published the posthumous volumes at Louvain in 1640. The Jesuits, who were favourers of Pelagianism, were its bitter and truculent opponents. Five propositions were selected to be condemned, and after many scenes of strife and papal anathema, the Bull Unigenitus was issued by Pope Clement XI., which put under ban the evangelical doctrines of Quesnel, Janssen, and the whole party. Port-royal, the happy abode of so many of them, had before this time been razed to the ground by Jesuit malice and intrigue.

JANSSEN, or JOHNSON, Cornel., a Dutch portrait painter, disting. in England, 1590-1685.

JANSSENS, A., a Flemish painter, 1569-1631.

JANSSENS, Victor Honorius, a Flemish painter, disting. in historical subjects, 1664-1739.

JANTET, A. F., a Fr. mathemat., 1747-1805.

JANUARIUS, a bishop and saint of the Romish Church, beheaded in the perseco. under Diocletian.

JANVIER, Antide, a French mechanician and writer on the chronometer and orrery, 1751-1835.

JANVIER, Dom Rene Ambroise, a learned French monk and editor of Hebrew, 1614-1682.

JAPHETH, the third son of Noah, and the Japetes of profane history, ancestor of the Greeks.

JAQUELOT, Isaac, a Fr. divine, 1647-1708.

JAQUOT, Blaise, a Fr. jurist, abt. 1580-1632.

JARCHI, Solomon Ben. See Raschi.

JARD, Francis, a Fr. preacher, 1675-1768.

JARDEL, a Fr. archæologist, died after 179

JARDIN, N. H., a Fr. architect, 1720-179

JARDINE, G., a Scotch philosopher, 1743-1

JARDINIER, C. D., a French engr., 172

JARDINS, Mary Catherine Des, a F novelist, best kn. as Madame de Villedieu, d

JARDYN, Karl Du. See Dujardin

JARNOWICK, G. M., a cel. violinist, 17

JAROPOL or JAROPOLK, the firs name, grand duke of Russia, reigned 97 second, grandson of the preceding, 1132

JAROSLAW, or JAROSLAV, Geo duke of Russia, a great patron of lear

JARRIGE, Peter, a French Jesu

JARRY, Lawrence Guilhard preacher, kn. as a poet and relig. w

JARS, Francis De Rochechou De, a French officer, disting. in t Bastile for his singular courage, d

JARS, Gabriel, a Fr. miner

JARVIS, John, an Irish a as a painter on glass, born abo

JASON, a tyrant of Thessa

JAUCOURT, Louis, Che med. wr., and contrib. to the JAUGEON, N., a Fr. ar

JAULT, Aug. Fr., a Fr

JAUREGUI-Y-AGUIL ish painter, poet, and tra

JAUSSAUD, L. De, a

JAUSSIN, L. Arnau

JAY, John Michae and advocate of the pa

JAY, John, an Am

JAYADEVA, a cel

JEACOCKE, Ca celebrated as a debu of the Moral Chara

JEAN EVAN Capuchin of Louv in 1639. He is 'De Regno De introduction to jects ever wri comparable t this eulogium second part in 1690 an Animæ et Soul and ascent of Love,' soul's g and of God, admi valu inanism, 1736-1786. SAMUEL, his uncle, a ned editor of the nonjuring party, afterwards hysician, died 1772. SIR RICHARD JEBB, son of Sam., physicn. to Geo. III., 1729-1787. EDAIA, H., RABBI, surnamed Habbedrasci, wish poet and theologian of Spain, 13th cent. EFFERSON, THOMAS, an eminent American esman, was born in 1743, at Shadwell, in Vir- . He was educated as a lawyer, and combin- with his professional training great scholarship, a capacity of expressing himself with ease and sion, he became of eminent service in drawing locuments connected with the establishment merican independence, and otherwise aiding e arrangements connected with that great . He prepared the first draught of the De- tion of Independence, which was revised by klin and Adams. In a document relating to sposal of his estates in his old age, he gave rief and distinct account of his history:—'I of age in 1764, and was soon put into the nation of justices of the county in which I and at the first election following I became f its representatives in the legislature; was e sent to the old Congress; then employed two with Mr. Pendleton and Mr. Wythe on the re- and reduction to a single code of the whole of the British statutes, the acts of our assem- nd certain parts of the common law; then d governor; next to the legislature, and to ress again; sent to Europe as minister-pleni- tiary; appointed secretary of state to the government; elected vice-president and pre- ; and, lastly, a visitor and rector of the uni- y of Virginia.' His opinions were strongly sed on the principles of government and the legislation of the United States He was a ugh republican, and the opponent of the tive party; but it requires to be kept in that this opposition was derived from the old can school of abstract republicanism, and ity of citizenship, and had little harmony the later anti-federalism, and its appeals to influence to accomplish conventional purposes. while he abolished primogeniture and the h establishment, he also restrained the slave and his sentiments were in favour of the abo- of slavery. In 1801 he succeeded the elder s as president, by choice of the House of Re- tatives, who had to decide between him and ponent, on account of an equality of votes. is no doubt that this choice was eminently ous to the stability of the constitution, when known that his rival was the unscrupulous ever Colonel Burr. Jefferson filled the office ht years, and from the year 1809 he lived rement in Virginia, until his death on the July, 1826, the anniversary of the declara- t independence, and the day on which his and rival, the elder Adams, died. [J.H.B.]

FFERY, J., a div. and moralist, 1647-1720.

FFERY, TH., a nonconfor. divine, last cen.

FFREY, FRANCIS, one of the most masterly and most eloquent writers in the English nage, was a very remarkable instance of the mination of different and dissimilar faculties, as s of indefatigable energy and rapid versati- in the employment of mental powers. During twenty-five years when his literary labours would have seemed to be incessant, he was practising the legal profession with activity and increasing success: he was the leading barrister in the Scottish courts, while he continued to vindicate his place as the first literary critic of his time; and in his declining years, when literature had ceased to be for him anything more than an amusement, he gained, by his knowledge and acuteness and industry on the bench, an eminent reputation among the best judges that have administered the law of Scotland. He, too, the good lawyer and celebrated writer, was a singularly eloquent and effective speaker; fluent, refined, and masterly in public oratory, and in private society one of the most brilliant of talkers. In his writings, again, to say nothing of the variety of information involved in the diversified fields over which he expatiated, there is an admirable union and an harmonious balancing of vigorous thought with impressive representation: gay and graceful wit, sometimes luxuriating too keenly to be good-natured, alternates with the natural expression of serious feelings which are always refined and not infrequently profound; and an imagination almost fertile and original enough to have made him a poet, throws over all his writings a wealth of felicitously illustrative imagery hardly ever employed to garnish so much of active and sagacious thinking.—Francis Jeffrey was born at Edinburgh in October, 1773. His father, a lawyer by profession, was one of the deputy-clerks or registrars of the Court of Session, the supreme law-court of Scotland. After having passed six years at the High School of Edinburgh, he studied at the university of Glasgow for two sessions of six months each, and afterwards, in his eighteenth year, resided for a few months at Oxford. His youth was spent in industrious reading, which embraced classics, history, ethics, criticism, and the Belles Lettres: he was indefatigable in practising composition, and in early manhood wrote many verses. At the age of twenty-one, he was admitted to the Scottish bar, where, for not a few years, he was so little employed as to have full leisure for literary pursuits. The first number of the Edinburgh Review, which contained five papers of Jeffrey's, appeared in October, 1802, when he was just twenty-nine years old; and he became its editor after the first two or three numbers. The celebrity which the Review at once attained was owing more, in an incalculable degree, to him than to any other of the contributors: the papers which he furnished to it were for many years very numerous, and were those on which its critical authority rested; and his skill and industry in editing were very valuable. At first considerably open in its politics, the Review soon became decidedly Whiggish; and the Quarterly was established as a rival. But, for a good many years after this, its energy suffered no perceptible diminution; and the exertions of its editor were unrelaxed, in spite of the claims of a professional practice, which was now becoming very great. In the meantime, in 1802, he had married a relation of his own, whom he soon lost, to the deep grief of a heart keenly awake to the domestic and friendly affections. In 1813 he married a grand-niece of John Wilkes, crossing to the United States to bring her home. In 1815 he became the occupant of the beautiful villa of Craigcrook, near Edinburgh, which, improved by his fine taste, became a place of meeting for many of the most distinguished persons in Europe. In 1816 Jeffrey's

[Craigcrook Castle.]

eloquence as a public speaker found for the first time an adequate field; trial by jury, which had hitherto been confined in Scotland to criminal causes, being then extended to civil questions. From this time till he ceased to practise, he was the acknowledged leader of the Scottish bar. In 1820, and again in 1821, he was elected Lord Rector of the university of Glasgow by the students, an honour which has since been cordially accepted by some of our most eminent literary men and statesmen. In 1829 his professional brethren authoritatively acknowledged his standing, by appointing him Dean or President of the Faculty of Advocates. He immediately resigned the editorship of the Review, which had long been burdensome and undesirable. At this point his literary life may be said to close. During the twenty-seven years, he had contributed to the Review about two hundred articles. A new stage in his history opened with the accession of the Whigs to political power. In December 1830, he was appointed Lord Advocate, an office which, besides many other duties, involves those of a secretary of state for Scotland. He necessarily entered parliament, but too late for eminent success, being now in his fifty-eighth year, without adequate training for the peculiar arena, and with a voice already broken so far as to deprive him in a great measure of the advantages which had belonged to his powers of oratory. His chief speeches in the House of Commons were made in support of those measures of reform in parliamentary representation and civic government, which it was his official duty to introduce. In May, 1834, he was raised to the bench as one of the judges in the Court of Session, assuming, according to the Scottish fashion, the honorary title of Lord Jeffrey. He delighted in his judicial duties; and no man ever performed them better. The remaining years of his life were spent in peace and honour. Never was old age more kindly or more placid; and, when the last scene arrived, the regrets of a whole community were poured on his grave. In 1841, an attack of bronchitis, the disease which had often distressed and at length destroyed him, compelled him to seek repose for some months. In 1843 he published, with unfeigned reluctance, three containing selections from his 'Contrib the Edinburgh Review.' He died at Edin the 26th of January, 1850, leaving a wi survived him but for a very short tim daughter, whose husband, Mr. Empson (a dead), became the third editor of the E Review.

JEFFREYS, George, Lord, an Engl yer, whose name, though he was a man derable ability, is better known by the than the capacity of its owner, was bo year 1648. He was the sixth son of a mo wealthy country gentleman, unable to g more than a good education as a barrister, had thus to fight his way in the world—a to which he brought abilities, perseverance utterly unscrupulous nature. Until he h tered his nerves by dissipation, he was n tute of courage, and he first obtained attending an assize at Kingston during the when other members of the profession wer ened away. He became recorder of Lon gradually rose, until, in 1683, he beca justice of the King's Bench. In this after Monmouth's rebellion, he lent hims in the spirit of a savage chief than of an judge to the exterminating policy of the co his judicial condemnations obtained the teristic name of Jeffreys' campaign. He mediately rewarded with the office of l chancellor, when he transferred his servi less sanguinary sphere. His wild reckles demeanour, his dissipated life, and his u lous perversion of the judicial function in matters, mixed up with an able discharg duty in other questions, make a curious a narrative in the memoirs of Jeffreys by W Conscious of danger, if not of guilt, at the tion, he disguised himself as a sailor, an at Wapping to attempt an escape. A ma he had terrified from the judgment-seat nized his ferocious eyes glaring from a tav dow, and gave the alarm. He was with rescued from popular vengeance, and re the Tower, where he died, on the 19t 1689.

JEFFREYS, Geo., an Eng. poet, 167
JEFFRIES, John, an Am. physic., 17
JEGHEN, Chr., a Ger. engraver, 157
JEHAN-GHIR, Abul Muzaffer N
deen Mohammed, emperor of Hindos and successor of Akbar, 1605, died, afte dist. by the encouragem. of art and litera
JEHOAHAZ, king of Judah, about 60
JEHOAHAZ, king of Israel, 848-832
JEHOIACHIN, king of Judah, about
JEHOIAKIM, king of Judah, 608-597
JEHORAM, a king of Judah, 888-885
JEHOSHAPHAT, king of Judah, 913-
JEHU, a prophet of Israel, about 932
JEHU, a king of Israel, reigned 876-8
JEKYL, or JEKYLL, Sir Joseph, lawyer and statesman of the reign of G 1664-1738. His brother, Thomas, a c and author, dates unknown. Their de Joseph, an eminent barrister, solicitor-g
the prince of Wales, 1752-1837.

JELAL ED DEEN ROUMI, a Per. poe

JELGERHIUS, J., a Dutch paint., 1776-1836.
JELLINGER, C., a Germ. theolog., 17th cen.
JENISCH, BERNARD, Baron De, a German orientalist, and historian of Persia, 1734-1807.
JENISCHIUS, P., a Flem. savant, 1558-1647.
JENISHID, or GIARNSCHID. See DJEMCHID.
JENKIN, R., a learned divine, 1656-1727.
JENKIN, W., a nonconfor. divine, 1612-1685.
JENKINS, DAVID, a famous judge and royalist, author of 'Reports and Polit. Tracts,' &c., 1586-1667.
JENKINS, HENRY, a native of Yorkshire, who died in poverty when 169 years of age, 1670.
JENKINS, SIR LEOLINE, a native of Glamorganshire, ambassador at the Hague in the reign of Charles II., and a distinguished civilian, 1623-85.
JENKINSON. See LIVERPOOL.
JENKINSON, ANTHONY, an English gentleman who was sent out (1558-1559) to inquire into the commercial resources of Central Asia. He was the first Englishman who crossed the Caspian, and the first person who in modern times has given an account of that sea. He reduced its dimensions in longitude; and made many other accurate determinations of geographical positions.
JENKS, BENJAMIN, a clergyman of the Church of England, author of 'Prayers and Offices of Devotion,' 1646-1724.
JENNENS, CHARLES, a gentleman of fortune, the suggestor of oratorios in England, died 1773.
JENNER, CH., an English poet, 1737-1774.
JENNER, EDWARD, M.D., F.R.S., the discoverer of vaccination, was born at Berkeley, in Gloucestershire, on the 17th of May, 1749. He was the son of his father, who was vicar of Berkeley, early in life, and the direction of his education devolved upon his brother, the Rev. Stephen Jenner. He displayed at an early age a taste for natural history, and being destined for the profession of medicine he was apprenticed to Mr. Ludlow of Sodbury, near Bristol, a respectable provincial practitioner; and subsequently removed to London in 1770, where he became for two years a house pupil of the celebrated John Hunter. On the completion of his education in London he returned to his native place, where he began business as a general practitioner, and soon acquired an extensive and well-deserved reputation. In 1798, he made the discovery with which his name is now perpetually associated, namely, that a pustular disease on the teats of cows, and supposed to be identical with the disease called the 'Grease' in the heels of horses, had such a relationship to the disease of small-pox, that if inserted into the human constitution it would be protected against the terrible disease. This great fact was announced publicly by Dr. Jenner in 1798, but it was coldly received, and both the public and the profession were extremely sceptical as to its truth. It is now too firmly established to be shaken, though the amount of protection is not so great as at one time supposed; still the saving of human life from this discovery has been immense, and assuredly scientific medicine has never bestowed upon humanity a more precious gift than the practice of vaccination. It was proposed to reward this distinguished physician by a grant of £30,000, but the House of Commons would only give £10,000, and even that with difficulty. It is melancholy to be obliged to state that Jenner's life was embittered by the controversies to which his discovery led, and that an amiable, a virtuous, and an accomplished man, was disturbed by petty squabbles, to which his nature was utterly abhorrent. He died on the 26th of January, 1823, in the seventy-fourth year of his age, and was buried on the 3d of February in the chancel of the parish church of Berkeley. [J.M'C.]

JENNINGS, DR. DAVID, a dissenting minister of great learning, author of 'An Appeal to Reason for the Truth of the Holy Scriptures,' and a posthumous work on 'Jewish Antiquities,' 1691-1762.

JENNINGS, HENRY CONSTANTINE, a celebrated collector of antiquities and objects of vertu and natural history, author of works connected with religious and philosophical inquiries, 1731-1819.

JENSON, N., a French printer, 1420-1483.

JENYNS, SOAME, a country gentleman, known in the political world as a member of parliament, and partizan of Sir Robert Walpole, and distinguished in literature as one of the most elegant and ingenious writers of his age. Besides poems, essays, and political tracts, he is the author of 'A Free Inquiry into the Nature and Origin of Evil,' published 1757, and 'A View of the Internal Evidence of the Christian Religion,' which became the subject of a considerable controversy, born in London 1704, died 1787.

JEPHSON, R., an Irish dramatist, 1736-1803.

JEPTHAH, a judge of the Hebrews, 1243-37 B.C.

JEREMIAH, one of the Jewish prophets, 630 B.C.

JEREMIAH, patriarch of Constantinople, 1572.

JERNINGHAM, EDWARD, an English poet and dramatist, author of 'The Rise and Fall of Scandinavian Poetry,' &c., 1727-1812.

JEROBOAM, the first of the name king of Israel, 962-943 B.C. The second, 817-776 B.C.

JEROME, or according to his full Latin name, EUSEBIUS HIERONYMUS SOPHRONIUS, was born of Christian parents at Stridon, a town of Dalmatia, about the year 331. After enjoying high educational advantages under his father, he was sent to Rome to prosecute his studies. On being baptized he made a tour into Gaul, and remained for a few years at Treves, carrying out his likings for Christian and ecclesiastical literature. On leaving Gaul, the probability is that he returned to Rome, and at Aquileia, in 370, he composed his earliest theological essay—the first-born of a numerous progeny. Here also he formed his intimacy with Rufinus, a friend whom afterwards he so heartily abused. In 373 he carried himself, his library, and some friends to the East, passed through Thrace and the other provinces on his line of journey, and on his arrival at Antioch one companion died, and himself was visited with an alarming illness. This malady seems to have darkened his spirit, and deepened his resolution to live in cloistered solitude. Soon after he retired to a desert east of Antioch, and spent four years in ascetic torture, hard literary labour, and self-education. His retreat was at length invaded by controversy, for Meletius and Paulinus fought for the pre-eminence in the church at Antioch, and he espoused the interest of the latter. In 379 he returned to Antioch, and was ordained a presbyter. The next year he visited Constantinople, where for three years he enjoyed the friendship and patronage of Gregory of Nazianzus.

Here he translated the Chronicon of Eusebius, and portions of the works of Origen. The contests at Antioch still raged, and Meletius being dead, Pope Damasus summoned Paulinus and his party to Rome, in order to ascertain the bearings of the quarrel. In the conferences held on the subject, Jerome officiated as secretary, and the pope became so interested in him, that he retained him in the Western capital, and urged him especially to the revisal of the Latin version of the Bible. But his passion for a monastic life led him to describe its virtues and glories in such impressive pictures, that the ladies of Rome were filled with his enthusiasm, and so much did the furor spread, that husbands, brothers, and fathers denounced Jerome, and the very populace insulted him. On the death of Damasus, his discretion prompted him to leave Rome, and he returned to the East in 385. There immediately followed him two wealthy devotees, the widow Paula, and her daughter Eustochium. With these ladies and their female attendants, Jerome travelled through the Holy Land, and having visited Egypt, he finally settled at Bethlehem, in 386, where Paula erected four religious establishments, three for nuns, and one for monks. This latter monastery Jerome governed for many years, and spent the remainder of his life in the composition of many religious works. In the great controversies of the period he bore no inactive share. The Pelagians, whom he had so bitterly castigated, were at length tempted to retaliate with secular hostility, and a band of them invaded his retreat, and so endangered his life, that he was obliged to spend two years in secrecy and exile. Safety being restored, he returned in 418 to his cell; but his exhausted nature at length sunk amidst unceasing labours and mortifications, and he died at the age of ninety, on the 30th September, 420.—The life of Jerome was a busy one. He wrote on almost every subject. Biography, history, theology, biblical translations, polemics, and commentaries on a very large portion both of the Old and New Testaments, kept him in incessant toil. His Latin style is pure and terse on the whole. He excelled all his contemporaries in erudition. He wanted the glowing fancy of Chrysostom, and the serene temper and symmetrical intellect of Augustine, but he was beyond them both in critical skill and taste. His faults lie upon the surface; a hot and hasty disposition, which so resented every opposition, and magnified trifles, that in his towering passion, he heaped upon opponents opprobrious epithets and coarse invective. Haste, eagerness, and acerbity, appear also in his letters and expositions. His mode of life must have greatly aggravated this touchiness and irascibility, as it deprived him of the mollifying influence of society and friendship. His heart was estranged from human sympathies; and save when lighted up by the ardours of his indignant passion, it was like his own cell, cold, gloomy, and uninviting. The works of Jerome will always maintain for him the esteem of Christendom. There is in them a great deal that is baseless, fanciful, and one-sided, but very much that is useful and instructive in exegesis and theology. In the Vulgate, the Old Testament was translated by him directly from the Hebrew, and the New Testament is a revision of previous translations. The first of those works, great and meritorious as it is, was received with some suspicions, under which the translator was very impatient and fretful. The first edition of Jerome's work was that of Erasmus, Basel, 9 vols. folio, 1516. The Benedictine edition appeared in 5 vols. folio, 1693-1706. The best edition is that of Vallarsi, in 11 vols. folio, which originally appeared at Verona, 1736-1742, and was reprinted in quarto at Venice in 1766-72, in 24 parts, usually bound in 11 volumes. [J.E.]

JEROME EMILIANI, a Venetian officer in the Austrian service, afterw. a rel. founder, 1481-1537.

JEROME OF PRAGUE, an intimate friend of John Huss, and like him a martyr of the truth, is said to have copied the writings of Wickliffe at Oxford, and to have studied at the universities of Paris, Heidelberg, and Cologne. His career as a reformer dates from 1400 to his death at the stake in 1415, and the scenes of his activity were in Bohemia, Poland, and Hungary. He was a man of great learning and dignity of manner, and endured his fate so courageously as to excite the admiration of his enemies, who have also testified to the superiority of his character.

JEROME OF SANTA FE, a Spanish Jew, remarkable for his conversion to Christianity, and his writings against the errors of the Jews, 15th c.

JERUSALEM, J. FR. WILLIAM, a German divine, author of 'Letters on the Mosaic Religion and Philosophy,' on 'German Literature,' &c., 1709-1789. The suicide of his son, 'Young Jerusalem,' suggested to Goethe the story of Werter.

JERVAS, CHARLES, an Irish portrait painter, who became fashionable as an artist. He published a translation of Don Quixote; died 1739.

JERVIS, JOHN. See ST. VINCENT.

JESSEY, HENRY, an eminent clergyman who suffered imprisonment at the Restoration for his nonconformity. He was a learned Oriental scholar, and distinguished for his biblical knowledge. Minister of St. George's, Southwark, during the Commonwealth; died 1633.

JESUA, LEVITA, a Spanish rabbi, 15th cent.

JEUFFROY, R. V., a French gem and medal engraver, 1749-1826.

JEWEL, JOHN, bishop of Salisbury in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, is distinguished as one of the ablest and most eloquent writers against the Romish Church. His 'Apology for the Church of England' is the work by which he is best known; but he is the author of many controversial treatises equally learned and judicious, and most of them are rendered agreeable reading by the historical and antiquarian notices dispersed through them. The most important of these is the controversy with Dr. Harding, arising out of a sermon preached by Bishop Jewel at St. Paul's Cross, and usually called his 'Challenge Sermon.' The works of this eminent prelate have been recently published by the Parker Society. [E.R.]

JEZZAR or DJEZZAR, a common Mamelukе who rose to be pacha of Acre and Saida. He held the former place, under the direction of Sir Sidney Smith, against the whole force of Napoleon, who was compelled to raise the siege 21st May, 1799. Jezzar died in 1804.

JOAB, the general of King David, d. 1001 B.C.

JOACHIM, a relig. founder of Spain, 1130-1202.

JOACHIM, GEORGE, a savant of the Tyrol, known as an astronomer, 1514-1596.

[House of Joan of Arc]

N OF ARC. The proper name of this and pure-hearted woman was JEANNE and her birth-place the village of Dom- n the borders of Lorraine. Here she first e ight in 1410, and being the child of poor , she was inured to servitude, and acquired tr a ordinary skill as an equestrian, which er w ards so valuable to her, by riding the to water. She was piously educated, and about thirteen years of age—as appears r own history, which is best collected from ess of her trial at Rouen—she began to sions, and to be informed of her mission deliverance of France. In 1428-9, the all Europe were turned upon the city of , the siege of which was closely pressed En glish, in alliance with the Burgundians, Char les VII., despairing of his throne, had led. the deputies of the French towns still ing under his government, at Chinon, to ate upon their approaching ruin. This was tical moment chosen by Jeanne Darc, or pointed to, as she averred, by her celestial nts, for the deliverance of her country. She ated herself to Baudricourt, the governor of neighbouring town of Vaucouleurs, and nded to be conducted to the French court. nsions, and the extreme danger of the were urged in vain, and in due course she ved at Chinon, inspired the phantom of a g with a share of her own spirit, and was sented to the assembly. The popular enthu- asm rose to the highest pitch when Joan ap- ared at the head of the troops in armour, her autiful hair hanging in ringlets upon her houlders, her soldier's bonnet adorned with white eathers, and the sword of St. Catherine to point the way to victory. In due time, on the 29th of April, 1429, La Pucelle entered the city of Orleans, and finally accomplished the strange presages of her early life by conducting the king to Rheims, where he was crowned in her presence on the 17th of July. Here, according to all that she stated afterwards, her mission was ended, but Dunois, the French commandant, commonly called the bastard of Orleans, persuaded her to remain with the army, as a consequence of which, she was taken prisoner by the English at Compeigne, after performing prodigies of valour, on the 24th of May, 1430. Her trial and condemnation on a charge of sorcery is one of the foulest blots in history, and is to be attributed, not to the English authorities only, but at least in as great a degree to the ecclesiastical party, headed by Pierre Cauchon, the bishop of Beauvais, who had a quarrel with Charles VII., and chose this method to revenge himself. It is pitiable to read in the process of her trial the exquisite mental torture to which this poor girl was subjected—after being bound with iron chains—by a crowd of subtle theologians, who had prepared their questions beforehand, with a view to entrap her into contradictions, in order to sustain the charge of demoniac intercourse. Her answers, however, were wonderfully consistent. She declared that her mission was from God, because she had been prepared for it for years past by celestial agents, the chief of whom were Saint Marguerite and Saint Catherine, who appeared richly clothed, and crowned, and always accompanied with a brilliant light. She called them her holy protectresses. To the question, how they could speak, being pure spirits, without members, she answered she knew not, it was the will of God; she only knew that their voices were sweet, and their language beautiful, their counsel holy! It was again objected that they were mere appearances, without reality: 'Whether they be apparent or real,' said the heroine, 'I have proved them, and I would rather lose my head than deny their being. I am as sure of it,' she added, 'as I am of my faith in Jesus Christ.' She was asked what they advised her in regard to the process: she answered, 'To reply without fear.' 'Whether they hated the English?' She said 'They desired them to return to their own country.' One of her judges tried the purity of her imagination, by asking her if St. Michael had appeared clothed or naked. 'Think you,' she said, 'that God has not the means of clothing his spirits?' Such questions were multiplied and twisted into every variety of form, to disconcert her if possible, but she preserved her dignity and modesty through all, and ended by an admonition addressed to the infamous Cauchon, 'Oui, je suis envoyée de Dieu—yes! my mission is of God! You say that you are my judge. Have a care what you do, for you stand in great danger!' She knew her fate, as she told the earl of Warwick, who visited her in prison, and she was prepared to die whenever God pleased, but she would fain have returned to her father and mother, and kept their flocks again, and her sister and her brothers would have been so glad to see her! She was burnt alive, the virgin-martyr of French liberty, on the 31st of May, 1431, in the twenty-first year of her age, and it is remarkable that her dying predictions in regard to the final expulsion of the English were literally accomplished. Jeanne Darc never shed any blood with her own hand, but rode into the midst of the enemy at the head of her troops, who followed her with unbounded confidence in her supernatural powers. [E.R.]

JOAN OF NAPLES. This accomplished and ill-fated princess was the daughter of Charles, duke of Calabria, and granddaughter of Robert, king of Naples, to whose authority she succeeded in right of her deceased father 1343. In order to unite the claims of the two branches of the house of Anjou, and secure the tranquillity of her reign, King Robert had married her to Andrew, youngest son of Carobert, king of Hungary, when they were both children. The match was not a happy one, either for the princess or her subjects, by whom Andrew, a man of unamiable and gross disposition, was about equally beloved, and a conspiracy being formed against him, he was murdered in 1345. In 1347 the queen married her kinsman Louis of Tarentum, who had been her lover, and was the principal instigator of the conspiracy; and the circumstances led to a war in which Charles III., duke of Durazzo, became a principal actor, and Avignon with its territory was ceded to the pope by Queen Joan. Louis survived these events till 1362, when Joan was married again to James of Arragon, and for a fourth time, in 1376, to Otho of Brunswick. Eventually, Charles of Durazzo usurped the throne of Naples, and caused the queen to be suffocated in 1381. The daughter of Charles, known as JOAN II. of Naples, who succeeded to his ill-gotten power in 1414, and died 1435, was married successively to William, the son of Leopold of Austria (1404-6), and to James, count of La Marche (1415). She was a woman of profligate character, and no redeeming virtues are recorded of her. Joan I., on the other hand, who possessed commanding talents, and governed her dominions with great skill, has had many apologists, and Laharpe has made her history the subject of one of his tragedies. [E.R.]

JOAN, POPE, the subject of a scandalous story which relates that a woman was elected to the papacy under the name of John in the middle of the 9th century, and that she reigned for nearly two years and a-half, when she was taken with labour-pains in the way to the Lateran Basilica, and compelled to discover her sex. It is held by some that the story has been clearly disproved, but even grave historians assert that women of scandalous lives had great influence over the papal councils at that period, and perhaps there are few historical events truer than this story if it be understood by metonymy—one thing being put for another not altogether unlike it. Pope Joan is understood to have been an English woman, and to have acquired her reputation by teaching divinity, disguised in man's clothing. The first to mention this delectable piece of scandal was Marianus Scotus, a monk of the abbey of Fulda, who died in 1086, and a full account of her life, attributed to F. Durant, was published at Geneva, in 1578. Its refutation, if it may be considered such, is due to the learned protestant David Blondel, who displeased the protestants thereby as much as he had gratified them by his book 'De Episcopis et Presbyteris.' In 1785, however, a work was published by Humphrey Shuttleworth, entitled 'A Present for a Papist, or the History of the Life of Pope Joan, proving that a woman called Joan really was Pope of Rome.' See JOHN. [E.R.]

JOANES, VICENTIO, a Sp. painter, 1523-1579.

JOASH, a king of Israel, 832-817 B.C.

JOASH, a king of Judah, 870-831 B.C.

JOAZAR, high priest of the Jews, 614-630 B.C.

JOBELOT, J. F., a Fr. jurisconsult, 1620-1702.

JOBERT, LOUIS, a Fr. antiquarian, 1637-1719.

JOCONDUS, JOHN, an Ital. archit., 16th cen.

JODELLE, S., a French dramatist, 1532-1573.

JODRELLE, R. P., an En. dramatist and critic, au. of 'Illustrations of Euripides,' 1745-1831.

JOECHER, C. T., a Ger. historian, 1694-1758.

JOECK, C., a Ger. map engraver, 1763-1809.

JOFFRID, an abbot of Croyland, supposed to be the original founder of Cambr. univer., 12th c.

JOHANNOT, C. H. A., a Ger. pain., 1800-1837.

JOHN, the forerunner of the Saviour, commenced his preaching to the Jews and baptizing 29, and was executed by Herod Antipas, 32.

JOHN, the apostle and evangelist, commenced preaching the gospel, shortly after the crucifixion, in Asia Minor and among the Parthians. He was the first bishop of Ephesus, and the writer of the gospel kn. by his name and of the Apocal., d. 99.

JOHN, the first saint of the name, commonly called CLIMACHUS or SCHOLASTICUS, was abbot of the monastery of Mount Sinai, and lived from 525 to the early part of the next century. Another ST. JOHN was patriarch of Alexandria, and lived about 550-619. A third was a native of Provence, and founder of a monastic order, 1161-1213. A fourth, surnamed 'De Dieu,' was a native of Portugal, and celebrated as a founder of charitable institutes, 1495-1550. A fifth, commonly called John De Santa Crusa, or John De Yepez, known as the associate of St. Theresa in reforming the Carmelites, 1542-1591. And besides these, the first pope of this name.

JOHN, the name of several ecclesiastics and prelates, the most celebrated of whom are—JOHN SCHOLASTICUS, patriarch of Antioch, a compiler of canons, &c., died 578. JOHN OF SALISBURY, bishop of Chartres in 1164, author of a life of Becket, died 1182. JOHN OF PARIS, a learned Dominican and theological writer, died 1304. JOHN OF RAGUSA, a popish prelate, known as a public character and disputant against the Hussites, about 1426-1448. JOHN DE CHELIN, a popish bishop and reformer, 16th century. And JOHN, bishop of Chiemsee in Bavaria, author of 'Onus Ecclesiæ,' same period.

JOHN I., elected pope 523, and sent ambassador to Constantinople by Theodoric, the Arian king of Italy, after which he was imprisoned and died in confinement, 526. JOHN II., reigned 533-535. JOHN III., 560-573. JOHN IV., 640-642. JOHN V., 685-686. JOHN VI., 701-705. JOHN VII., 705-707. JOHN VIII., author of many letters which are still preserved, 872-882. JOHN IX., 898-900. JOHN X., distinguished as a military leader by the conquest of the Saracens in Italy, elected 914 or 915, imprisoned and put to death 928. JOHN XI., elected at the age of twenty-five, 931, died in prison 933. JOHN XII., born 938, elected 956, deposed on account of his debaucheries 963, died 964. JOHN XIII., reigned 965-972. JOHN XIV., succeeded 964, died in prison 985. JOHN XV., elected and died 985. JOHN XVI., succeeded 986, and died, after a pontificate of ten years, disturbed by the pretensions of Crescentius, who proclaimed himself consul, 996. JOHN XVII., elected and died 1003. JOHN XVIII., reigned, as nearly as can be ascertained, 1004-1009. JOHN XIX., 1024-1033. JOHN XX. or XXI.,

Engraved by J. Brown

JOHNSON.

succeeded 1276, and died by an accident 1277. JOHN XXII., author of works on medicine and alchymy, reigned 1316-1334. JOHN XXIII., elected 1410, deposed 1415, died 1419. An antipope, named JOHN XVII., was inhumanly murdered, 998; and Pope Joan, whose story is considered fabulous, is sometimes called JOHN IX.

JOHN, king of England, youngest son of Henry II., born 1166, succeeded his brother Richard Cœur De Leon, and is supposed to have murdered Prince Arthur, 1199; invaded France 1214, signed the great charter 1215, died 1216.

JOHN, king of France, the first of the name, a posthumous son of Louis X., born and died 1316. JOHN II., son of Philip V., born 1319, succeeded 1350, taken prisoner by the Black Prince at the famous battle of Poitiers 1356, died 1364.

JOHN, king of Jerusalem, and regent emperor of Constantinople during the minority of Baldwin II., flourished 1204-1237.

JOHN I., emperor of the East, surnamed Zimisces, succeeded 969, poisoned 975. JOHN (COMNENUS) II., son of Alexis Commenus, born 1088, succeeded 1118, and died after a glorious reign, 1143. JOHN (DUCAS) III., surnamed Vataces, born 1193, succeeded 1222, died after a reign of thirty-three years, distinguished by his conquests and good government, 1255. JOHN IV. See LASCARIS. JOHN V. See CANTACUZENUS. JOHN VI. and VII. See PALÆOLOGUS.

JOHN I., king of Castile and Leon, born 1358, succeeded his father Henry II. 1379, died 1390. JOHN II., born 1405, succeeded his father Henry III. 1406, died 1454.

JOHN I., king of Portugal, born 1357, usurped the throne 1384, died 1433. JOHN II., born 1455, succeeded 1481, died 1495. JOHN III., succeeded 1521, died 1557. JOHN IV., chief of the house of Braganza, born 1604, delivered his country from the Spaniards and proclaimed king 1640, died 1656. JOHN V., born 1689, succeeded 1705, died 1750. JOHN VI., born 1767, became regent in consequence of the mental incapacity of his mother, the queen regent, 1793, returned to Brazil, and took the title of emperor on the invasion of the French, 1808, succeeded his mother 1816, returned to Portugal 1821, died 1826.

JOHN I., king of Sweden, called JOHN SVERKERSON, reigned 1216-1222. JOHN II., same as John, king of Denmark. JOHN III., born 1537, succeeded 1568, abdicated 1592.

JOHN, king of Denmark, born 1455, succeeded his father, Christian I., 1481, king of Norway 1483, king of Sweden 1497, dethroned by the Swedes 1512, died 1513.

JOHN ALBERT, k. of Poland, reig. 1492-1496.

JOHN OF AUSTRIA, a natural son of the emperor Charles V., distinguished in the service of Philip II. of Spain at the bat. of Lepanto, 1546-78.

JOHN OF GAUNT, or GHENT, du. of Lancaster, third son of Edward III., and father of Henry IV., king of England, born at Ghent 1340, died 1399 This prince greatly distinguished himself in the French wars, and acquired great popularity in England as the patron of Wickliffe. See LANCASTER.

JOHN HIRCANAS, son of Simon Maccabæus, whom he succeeded as high priest and prince of the Jews, B.C. 135, died, after a reign of 29 years, distinguished by his victories and reforms, B.C. 106.

JOHN OF PISA, a dis. architect, 13th century.
JOHN OF UDINO, an Italian painter, d. 1561.
JOHNES, THOMAS, a gentleman of Shropshire, distin. as a man of taste and letters, 1748-1816.
JOHNSON, CH., a dramatic wr., died 1748.
JOHNSON, JOHN, one of the nonjuring divs., known as a learned and religious wr., 1662-1725.
JOHNSON, M., a painter, reign of James II.
JOHNSON, M., an antiquarian, died 1755.
JOHNSON, R., a grammarian, died 1720.

[Birth-place of Samuel Johnson.]

JOHNSON, SAMUEL, the son of a bookseller, was born at Lichfield in 1709. Beginning his studies at Oxford in 1728, he was obliged by poverty to retire after three years without taking a degree. He became successively, an usher in Leicestershire, the drudge of a bookseller in Birmingham, and the head of a school established with some money he acquired by marrying, in 1736, a widow who was much older than himself, but to whom he was sincerely attached. The school speedily failed; and, in 1737, removing to London, Johnson entered on his long course of literary toil. His reputation rose very slowly: the greater part of his time was wasted, for many years, on desultory and occasional efforts; he had an unhealthy constitution, and a strong tendency to hypochondriac melancholy. For the twenty-five years during which he struggled for a livelihood, he had no leisure either for systematizing his knowledge, or for concentrating his thoughts; and when, at length, he obtained a small competency, he was already fifty-three years of age, with decayed strength and soured temper, and with a weariness of labour which made him too glad to enjoy in indolent repose the fame he had so hardly won. The works which, in these adverse circumstances, Johnson produced, were celebrated beyond measure in the latter half of his century; and, though they add disappointingly little to our stock either of solid knowledge or of literary invention, they are extraordinary monuments both of vigour and originality in thinking, and of great though ponderous power of expression.—During his long period of hard labour, the mere quantity of his writings was very great. A large proportion of them appeared in 'The Gentleman's Magazine' or as pamphlets; and most of these are quite forgotten. His two poetical satires, 'London,' and 'The Vanity of Human Wishes,' are striking specimens of reflection and diction; but neither they nor his tragedy of 'Irene' entitle him to be considered as a poet. 'Rasselas,' written in a week to pay for his mother's funeral, is one of the most interesting and characteristic of his works. His two sets of periodical essays, 'The Rambler' and 'The Idler,' are in no respect comparable to their models of Queen Anne's time. For eight years from 1747, Johnson's attention was chiefly engaged by his 'Dictionary of the English Language,' a work highly honourable to the author in the circumstances in which it was produced, but possessing little of real philological value.—In 1762, after having, though a devoutly religious man, refused to take orders, Johnson obtained, through Lord Bute, a pension of three hundred a-year. Not long afterwards he was received into the house of Mr. Thrale. He was thenceforth the dictator of a large society of accomplished persons, and the acknowledged chief of the literature of his day. In 1765 appeared his edition of Shakspeare, the preface to which, with all its shortcomings, is a very fine and instructive contribution to the philosophy of poetical art; his 'Journey to the Hebrides,' the liveliest of his writings, was published in 1775; and his 'Lives of the Poets,' the last of his works, appearing in 1781, is remarkable alike for its impressive composition, and for its mixture of valuable truth and strong prejudice in criticism. Johnson died in 1784, at his famous house in Bolt-Court. In 1790, his reputation was revived and extended by Boswell's 'Life.' This curious collection of sayings, the most minute record that was ever taken down from any man's lips, is now generally held to convey a more favourable impression of his real strength, both in thought and in language, than anything in the works which he wrote and published. [W.S.]

JOHNSON, SAMUEL, a learned divine, famous for his zeal against popery, in the reign of James II., for which he underwent many penalties and cruel personal suffering; author of 'Julian the Apostate,' &c., 1649-1703.

JOHNSON, SAMUEL, a dramatic writer and actor, au. of 'All Alive and Merry,' &c., d. 1773.

JOHNSON, T., an eminent herbalist, d. 1644.

JOHNSON, T., a classical editor, last century.

JOHNSON, SIR W., an Irish officer, d. 1774.

JOHNSTON, ARTHUR, a Scotch physician, distinguished as a Latin poet, author of 'Delicæ Poetarum Scoticorum,' &c., 1587-1641.

JOHNSTON, C., an Irish wr., au. of 'Chrysal, or the Adventures of a Guinea,' died about 1800.

JOHNSTON, JOHN, a physician of Poland, distin. as a naturalist and historian, 1603-1675.

JOHNSTONE, BRYCE, D.D., a Scottish divine, author of a 'Commentary on the Revelation,' 1747-1805. His nephew, JOHN, a Scottish min., and ed. of Dr. Johnstone's Sermons, 1757-1820.

JOHNSTONE, CHEVALIER DE, a military adventurer in the service of Charles Edward the Pretender, au. of 'Mem. of the Rebellion,' b. 1720.

JOHNSTONE, G., a member of parliament, and political agent of the English government, author of 'Thoughts on our E. Ind. Acquisitions,' d. 1787.

JOHNSTONE, JAMES, a Scottish and physiological inquirer, 1730-1802.
JOHN, a med. wr., and biogr. of Dr. Pa
JOHNSTONE, J. H., an Ir. actor, 1
JOINVILLE, JOHN, Sieur De, a Fr whose 'Life of St. Louis' is one of the able documents of the middle ages, 122
JOLIVET, JEAN BAPTISTE MOY
De, a French statistician and financier,
JOLLY, ALEX., a Scotch prelate, 17
JOLY, CLAUDE, a Fr. writer, au. of for the Education of a Prince,' 1607-17
JOLY, CLAUDE, a Fr. rel. writer, 16
JOLY, GUY, the confidential secreta grapher of Cardinal De Retz, 17th cent
JOLY, J., a Fr. poet and translator,
JOLY, J. R., a French historian, 17
JOLY, M. A., a Fr. comic writer, 16
JOLY, M. E., a French actress, 176
JOLY, PH. L., a Fr. lexicographer, 1
JOLY-CLERC, N., a Fr. naturalist, JOLY-DE-BEVY, LOUIS PH. Jos lawyer and theologian, author of 'Le Outrage,' 1736-1822.
JOLY-DE-FLEURY, W. F., a Fre
procureur-général after D'Aguissau, 17
JOMELLI, NICOLO, a celebrated co musician of Naples, 1714-1774.
JON-ARESON, an Icelandic poet, 1 JONÆ or JONAS, RUNOLPH, an scholar, author of philological works, di
JONAS, a Jewish prophet, died abo
JONAS, ARNGRIM, a learned histori tiquarian of Ireland, 1545-1640.
JONATHAN, a high priest and lea
Jews, dist. in the war with Syria, killed
JONES, DAVID, a Welch poet, died
JONES, EDWARD, a Welch musician
JONES, GEORGE MATTHEW, a na
au. of 'Travels in Norway, Sweden,' &c
JONES, GRIFFITH, a Welch minist
by his zeal for religion and education, 1
JONES, GRIFFITH, a miscel. writer, with Dr. Johnson and Goldsmith, 1721
JONES, HENRY, an Irish dramatist,
JONES, INIGO, was born in Lon
1572. He was patronised in early William earl of Pembroke, who is s have sent him to Italy to study landsc ing: he took up architecture later, al after his return. The little attention this art in his first visit to Italy is Crewe Hall, Cheshire, positively att
Jones, and St. John's College, Oxfo
Grotto at Wilton; the first in what is Elizabethan style, and the latter, abortiv at the classical. The Elizabethan, a m of the Renaissance imported from Countries, supplanted the Tudor in En last remains of ecclesiastical style, whi come generally obnoxious after the p against all such religious expressions gent Somerset, and after the fires of S yet in the comparatively distant time
Jones, attempts at the Gothic were ra difference or neglect, rather than from gious animosity.—Jones was himself pioneer to the revival of classical ta country, which was thoroughly establis

Christopher Wren, though both committed the grossest inconsistencies of style in their own restorations of old buildings.—Jones visited Italy a second time in 1613-14, and on this occasion seems to have completely mastered the principles of the Italian Renaissance, as exemplified in the buildings of Palladio and others, of which in Whitehall Banqueting House we have a noble monument of his own production, but yet only a small fraction of the magnificent palace, which report gives Charles I. the credit of having wished to carry out as opportunity afforded: the whole design of this truly royal palace may be seen in several sheets in Campbell's 'Vitruvius Britannicus;' it was to have had seven courts, and its extreme dimensions would have been 1,152 feet by 720 feet; a scale of magnificence which perhaps may be termed visionary, in spite of the experience of any age since the time of the Roman emperors. The building at Whitehall was executed in the reign of James I., 1619-21; he was surveyor of works, and he was appointed about the same time to restore the then St. Paul's Cathedral, to which old Norman and Gothic structure he added some years afterwards (1639) a Corinthian portico and other Renaissance features, the whole of which, however, were destroyed in consequence of the great fire of 1666. Jones was but little more fortunate in St. Paul's, Covent Garden; this absurdly overrated structure, little better than a barn as regards any ornamental feature, was built for the earl of Bedford in 1631, and was destroyed by fire in 1794, but was faithfully restored by Hardwick in the following year: it is valuable as an example of extreme simplicity and agreeable proportions. Greenwich Hospital is another, and one of his most successful works, erected by his nephew and son-in-law, Webb.—Jones died in London in 1652, aged eighty. Webb, who married his only daughter, published some of his designs; and a complete edition of his works was published by Kent, 1770. Jones's copy of 'Palladio,' with which he travelled in Italy, and containing his own marginal notes, is still preserved in Worcester College, Oxford.—(Walpole, Anecdotes of Painters, &c., Bohn, 1849.) [R.N.W.]

JONES, Jeremiah, a learned div., 1693-1724.

JONES, John, an English divine, last century.

JONES, John, a medical writer, 16th century.

JONES, John, a Hebrew scholar, 1575-1636.

JONES, John, an American phys., 1729-1791.

JONES, John, LL.D., a philological writer, and minister of the unitarians, died 1827.

JONES, John Gale, a celebrated political character of the period of the French revolution, distinguished as a leading member of the London Corresponding Society, 1771-1838.

JONES, John, a Welch lawyer and man of letters, au. of a 'History of Wales,' &c., 1772-1838.

JONES, John, a Welch antiq., 16th and 17th c.

JONES, Leslie Grove, aid-de-camp of the duke of Wellington in the peninsular war, and commandant of Brussels during the battle of Waterloo, afterw. kn. as a poli. writer, 1779-1839.

JONES, Owen, a Welch antiquary, 1740-1814.

JONES, Paul, a naval commander in the interest of the colonists during the American war of independence, was born at Selkirk, in Scotland, 1736, and died in poverty at Paris, 1792. He was a man of dauntless courage, and great ability as a sea captain, and was for a long period the terror of the coasts of Great Britain and Ireland. His principal action was a combat off Flamborough head with the convoy of the Baltic fleet in 1779, in which he proved the victor, and captured the two frigates opposed to him. He was complimented for his success on this occasion by an invitation to Paris, where the cross of military merit and a sword of honour were presented to him by the king. The congress of the United States also voted him a golden medal for his services during the struggle for independence, but though his valour merited such an acknowledgment, it is difficult to find any trace of republican virtue in his conduct, unless an intense hatred of the English be esteemed such. At the conclusion of the war he entered into the service of the Russians, and retiring in disgust solicited a command from Austria and France, which, however, he did not obtain. 'Full of vanity,' says a French writer, 'he believed that only a king was worthy of such an admiral!' His career is at once an example and a warning, for it points to the unhonoured grave which awaits all those, whatever their present reputation and talents, who are led by their selfish passions, instead of principle, even in the path of glory. Paul Jones had neither the wisdom nor the ambition to adopt the country that he had so well served, and instead of the Washington of the seas, it is difficult to regard him in any other light than that of a bold buccaneer. [E.R.]

JONES, Rice, a Welch poet, 1715-1801.

JONES, Thomas, a Welch divine, 1756-1807.

JONES, William, an em. mathe., 1680-1749.

JONES, William, commonly called 'Trinity Jones,' or 'Jones of Nayland,' and well known for his public spirit and ability as a writer, was a clergyman of the Church of England, born at Lowick, in Northamptonshire, 1726, and appointed perpetual curate of Nayland, in Suffolk, where he went to reside about 1776. He was the intimate friend and biographer of Bishop Horne, to whom in early life he had presented the doctrines of John Hutchinson, of which they were both distinguished advocates. His works are—'A Full Answer to Bishop Clayton's Essay on Spirit,' 1753; 'The Catholic Doctrine of the Trinity Proved from Scripture,' 1757; 'An Essay on the First Principles of Natural Philosophy,' 1762; 'Remarks on the Confessional,' 1764; 'Physiological Disquisitions, or Discourses concerning the Natural Philosophy of the Elements,' 1781; 'A Course of Lectures on the Figurative Language of the Holy Scripture,' 1787; and, when the French revolution broke out, a series of tracts well known by their title of 'The Scholar Armed against the Errors of the Times;' and 'A Letter from Thomas Bull to his brother John,' written in support of government. His 'Memoirs of Bishop Horne,' to whom he became private chaplain after his elevation to the see of Norwich, were published in 1795, with an introductory exposition of the theological and philosophical doctrines of Hutchinson. Jones of Nayland was the original projector of the British Critic; and besides his literary endowments was a great proficient in church music. He died in 1800. [E.R.]

JONES, Sir William, whose researches in Oriental literature, and his surpassing genius as a translator from the Eastern languages, have rendered his name illustrious throughout Europe, was born in London, 1746, son of Mr. William Jones, an eminent mathematician, and devoted himself to the study of the Oriental languages while a student at Oxford. When twenty-four years of age, he translated the life of Nadir Shah from the Persian into French, and, in 1771, published a grammar of the Persian language, which still maintains its ground as a work of standard value. Between this period and 1783, when he received an appointment as judge in the supreme court of judicature in Bengal, this laborious student published his commentaries on Asiatic poetry, written in Latin; and we may here remark, that it is difficult to say whether his fine taste for poetical composition, or his extensive learning and philosophical insight, is the more admirable characteristic of his genius. On his arrival in India, he established an Asiatic Society for the purpose of collecting materials to illustrate the history, learning, and antiquities of the East; and as he succeeded in rallying the learned around him, the publication of their transactions commenced almost immediately. He died suddenly in the heat of this career, so new to English learning, in 1794; and his collected works, with a life by Lord Teignmouth, have since been published in an edition of 13 volumes 8vo. To Sir William Jones belongs the merit of a great originator, as well as that of an unrivalled linguist. Until his appearance, and the impetus given by him to the study of Asiatic literature, the English scholar might well blush for the little that had been achieved in that direction by our own countrymen. The encouragement, indeed, has been miserably small, compared with the necessities of the case; and, at this moment, the officers of the Asiatic Society can tell us what volumes of invaluable matter must remain buried in obscurity, even on their own shelves, for want of funds. We ought to add, that Sir William Jones was an accomplished lawyer, a warm lover of freedom, and, as an Indian judge, indefatigable and irreproachable. [E.R.]

JONG, L. De, a Dutch painter, 1616-1697.

JONGE, N., a Danish geographer, born 1727.

JONIN, G., a French poet, 1596-1638.

JONSIUS, John, a German savant, 1624-1659.

JONSON, Benjamin, was born at Westminster in 1573. His father, a Scotsman by descent, dying in his boyhood, the widow married a bricklayer; and Ben Jonson is said to have been taken from Westminster school and obliged to work at his stepfather's trade. We read also of his having enlisted as a soldier, and served in the Low Countries. On the other hand, the obscure accounts we have of his youth represent him as having studied both at Oxford and at Cambridge; and it is certain that, in one way or another, he had obtained a good education, and was especially a ripe and exact Latin scholar. He cannot have been much older than twenty, when, like so many men of genius in the later part of Elizabeth's reign, he attached himself to the theatres. He became an actor, but was a bad one; and his life was chiefly spent in play-writing, amidst the fluctuations of success incident to that pursuit, and the alternations of poverty with something little better, which made up the history of almost every one of our old dramatists. But his fame stood very high in his own time. In the most brilliant period of Shakspeare's career, Ben Jonson was the only man who contested the palm with him; and, in the whole history of the Old English drama, none but

[The Globe Theatre.]

Beaumont and Fletcher come nearer, or so near, to the excellence of the great master. He is vigorous, not graceful, a skilful and reflective artist, rather than an impulsive or imaginative poet; but there is great force in his comic pictures of character, and a striking pomp of eloquence in his tragic dialogue.—In 1598, he exhibited his first successful piece, the prose comedy of 'Every Man in his Humour;' after several other plays, his dignified tragedy of 'Sejanus' appeared in 1603; 'Volpone,' a comedy in blank verse, abounding both in eloquence and poetry, was played in 1605; in 1609, came 'The Silent Woman,' a comedy constructed with great regularity and admirable skill; and the roll of his good plays was closed in 1610, by the lively and energetic comedy 'The Alchemist.' In 1619, he was appointed poet-laureate. But his later years were spent in poverty; and his natural gloominess of temper was aggravated both by the failure of his popularity and by ill-health. He died in 1637, and was buried in Westminster Abbey. His uncompleted 'Sad Shepherd,' a pastoral drama, and many of his lyrics, show a delicacy both of poetical feeling and of diction, beyond anything that appears in his other works; and his learning, especially in philology, is proved by several prose dissertations. [W.S.]

JORAM, a king of Israel, 887-876 B.C.

JORDÆNS, J., a distin. Flemish painter, pupil of Adam Van Vort and Reubens, au. of many works in the churches in the Netherlands, 1594-1678.

JORDAN, Camille, a political orator and statesman of the French revolution, and member of the chamber during the hundred days, 1771-1821.

JORDAN, C. S., a Prussian writer, 1700-1746.

JORDAN, Dorothea, an eminent English actress, born in the neighbourhood of Waterford 1762, was the daughter of Captain Bland, an Irish gentleman. She adopted the stage for a profession as the means of support for her mother, a lady of Wales, with whom her father had eloped. She first appeared at Dublin in the character of Phebe, in 'As You Like It;' and afterwards gained considerable repute as a juvenile tragedian. Her next engagement was at the York theatre; where she remained for three years, and took the name of Mrs. Jordan, though never married, by which name she was thenceforward known. Her debût in London was in the part of Peggy, in 'The Country Girl;' in which, and in Nell in 'The Devil to Pay,' she proved equally successful. Her line of business was now fixed; but she also occasionally appeared in the pathetic characters of tragedy. Her celebrity betrayed her into an alliance with a royal duke, with whom she for some time resided in great splendour; but (such is the uncertainty of such connections) she died at St. Cloud, 5th July, 1816, in poverty and obscurity, notwithstanding a long and brilliant theatrical career. The circumstances attending her seclusion were mysterious, and are not cleared up by Mr. Boaden's biography, notwithstanding the ample means of information possessed by him. Indeed, the impression left upon the mind by his narrative is, that Mrs. Jordan did not die at the place and time stated; but lived probably under another name in England for seven years longer; after which, a liquidation of her debts was publicly advertised. Be this as it may, her theatrical career was one of the most illustrious; and her style of that natural sort which commands the approbation of the best judges. As a woman, too, her heart seems to have been of the kindest, and her domestic duties to have been performed with exemplary attention and devotion to the best interests of her family. [J.A.H.]

JORDAN, J. C., a Bohemian scholar, d. 1740.

JORDAN, Sir Joseph, an English admiral, obtained a victory over the Dutch, 1672.

JORDAN, T., a dramatic wr., time of Charles I.

JORDANO. See Giordano.

JORDEN, E., an English chemist, 1569-1632.

JORDENS, G., a Dutch jurisconsult, last cent.

JORNANDES, a Gothic historian, 6th cent.

JORTIN, Dr. John, flourished about the middle of last century, having been born in 1698, and died 1770. He, and his patron Archbishop Herring, are fair exponents of the learning and doctrine of the Church of England, and of the spirit by which it was animated at that period. Jortin was rector of St. Dunstan's in the East, and afterwards of Kensington, near London. He is the author of 'Discourses Concerning the Truth of the Christian Religion,' 'Remarks upon Ecclesiastical History,' 'Remarks upon the works of Erasmus,' 'Miscellaneous Observations upon Authors, Ancient and Modern,' and of various other criticisms and learned tracts. His private character was most estimable; and his public life marked in a high degree by independence and integrity. This is saying a good deal for a minister of the Church of England in an age of compromise and difficulty, and such, it is well known, was the first generation or two which followed the revolution of 1688. [E.R.]

JOSEPH, son of Jac. and Rachel, 2113-2003 B.C.

JOSEPH I., emperor of Germany, born 1676, king of Hungary 1689, king of the Romans 1690, succeeded his father, Leopold I., as emperor, 1705, died 1711. Joseph II., son of the emperor, Francis I., and of Maria Theresa, born 1741, king of the Romans 1764, emperor after the death of his father 1765, but did not really govern until the death of Maria Theresa, when he became king of Hungary and Bohemia, 1780, died 1790. Joseph II. was the brother of Marie Antoinette, and was remarkable for his ambition and activity as a reformer and statesman.

JOSEPH, or JOSEPH EMMANUEL, king of Portugal, born 1714, suc. his father, 1750, d. 1777.

JOSEPH-ALBO, a Spanish rabbi, 15th cent.

JOSEPH of Exeter, a Latin poet who accompanied Richard I. to Palestine, au. of heroic poems on the Trojan war and the crusades, 12th c.

JOSEPH, Meir, an Italian rabbi, 1496–1554.

JOSEPH of Paris, or Father Joseph, whose proper name was Francis Le Clerc Du Tremblay, an agent of Cardinal Richelieu, 1577-1638.

JOSEPHINE, first wife of Napoleon Buonaparte, and empress of the French, was by birth a creole, and was born at Martinique, 1763. Her maiden name was Marie Joseph Rose Tacher-De-La-Pagerie, which she exchanged for that of Madame de Beauharnais, when she married the viscount of that name at the age of fourteen, for which purpose she was brought to France by her father, in terms of a previous betrothal. As the pretended memoirs of her life cannot be trusted, we omit the scandal connected with her residence at the court of Marie Antoinette, and simply record the fact that she became the mother of two children, Eugene and Hortense—the latter of whom became queen of Holland. In 1787, her mother then suffering from illness, she returned to Martinique, and remained in the island till her safety was threatened by the insurrection, three years later, when she escaped to France, and rejoining her husband, who was a chief of the constitutionalists, made her house the rendezvous of the politicians and men of letters belonging to his party. The viscount de Beauharnais was executed under the ascendency of Robespierre in 1794; and Josephine, saved with difficulty by Tallien, met Napoleon soon afterwards at the house of Barras, and was married to him in 1796. From that period till her divorce in 1809, her history is identified with the emperor's, not only personally but politically. Passionately devoted to him as a man, his glory as a sovereign was also dearer to her than her own happiness, and the unbounded influence she exercised over him was never abused, as Napoleon himself acknowledged, by a word of bad counsel. It had been predicted twice over, at Martinique and in France, that Josephine would be queen; and as stormy scenes would sometimes occur between her and the emperor, she has been heard to exclaim, 'They speak of your star, but it is my star that rules these events!' And, in fact, Buonaparte was greatly indebted to her political talents and her fascinating manners, if not for his elevation to the throne, at least for his welcome among the influential circles of Parisian society. Her divorce was urged by the family of Napoleon, and by such statesmen as Fouché and Talleyrand, for the sake of an heir to the throne and the consolidation of the new dynasty; and, when resolved upon, Josephine meekly retired to Malmaison, and was succeeded by the Austrian bride of her husband. She saw the emperor for the last time in January, 1814; on the 4th of April he abdicated, and, on the 29th of the month following, Josephine breathed her last in the arms of her children. Like her husband, she was born for empire; and he, however blinded by dynastic ambition, must have lived to feel that her divorce was as mistaken in policy as it was indefensible in principle, and cruel in the execution. It is singular, and only poetical justice to add, that Josephine, after all, should have given an heir to Napoleon in the person of her grandson, the present emperor, Louis Napoleon. [E.R.]

JOSEPHUS, FLAVIUS, the historian of the Jews, descended, on his father's side, from the high priests of his nation, and, on his mother's from the Asmonean princes, was born at Jerusalem in the year 37. He was remarkable from boyhood for the promise of those high qualities which he afterwards displayed as a commander and man of letters; and after studying in every school of learning, submitting himself to the initiation of the Essenes, and even mortifying his flesh in the desert, he attached himself to the Pharisees, and acquired a high reputation among them for his prudence and wisdom. After a visit to Rome at the age of twenty-six, to intercede for some of his countrymen who had been condemned by Felix, he was appointed commissioner from Jerusalem to the disturbed district of Galilee, and shortly after became its governor. Unable to prevent the internal dissensions which prevailed among the Jews from ripening into a revolt against the Romans, Josephus reluctantly undertook the conduct of a war of which he foresaw the issue, and for forty-seven days defended Jotapata against the whole force of Vespasian and Titus. After the fall of the city, Josephus saved his life by a stratagem worthy of Machiavel, and saluted his conquerors as the future masters of the world,—the issue of the war, and the elevation of Vespasian and Titus, he avers, having been shown to him in dreams. He accompanied Titus to the siege of Jerusalem, and endeavoured to act as mediator, but was repulsed by his countrymen as a traitor. Finally, he lived in honour at Rome, and is supposed to have died about the year 95. The works of Josephus are his 'Jewish Antiquities,' the defence of his history 'Against Appion,' 'The Martyrdom of the Maccabees,' and his noble 'History of the Jewish Wars,' which is that of an eye-witness of all he relates. Besides these, which are among the most interesting and valuable remains of antiquity, he wrote his own 'Life,' the public portion of which is further amplified in the 'Wars.' We learn from the former that he was thrice married, first, at the instance of Vespasian, to a captive virgin, who soon afterwards left him; second, to a lady of Alexandria, whom, he says, 'I forsook, because her manners pleased me not, although she was the mother of my three children!' and, thirdly, to a native of Candy, 'endowed with as laudable manners as any other woman whatsoever.' Opinions differ as to the reliability of some things that Josephus relates, but in matters personal, his disclosures are as candid as they are edifying. The politic shrewdness of Jacob, the learning of the ancient priesthood, and the valour of his ancestors, the Maccabees, were all united in him. It is no slight proof of his worldly wisdom, that he survived the destruction of his people, the last unexceptionable Jew of the whole race. [E.R.]

JOSEPIN, a painter of Naples, 1560-1640.

JOSHUA, the successor of Mos chief and leader of the Jews, abt. 1 JOSI, HENRY, a connoisseur in a of the prints in the British Museum, JOSIAH, a king of Judah, 639-6
JOSQUIN-DEPROZ, a Flem. mu
JOUBERT, BARTHOLOMEW C
general of the French republic, bor at the battle of Novi when fightin Russians under Suwarrow, 1799.
JOUBERT, F., a learned Fr. prie
JOUBERT, L., a Fr. med. writer
JOUFFROY, J. DE., a Fr. cardi
JOUFFROY, THEODORE S., a Fr translator of Reid and Dugald Ste thor of 'Leçons sur le Droit Naturel, JOUFFROY D'ABBANS, CL. F
De, a French mechanician and cap to whom the Academy of Sciences the honour of having first applied s gation, contrary to the received opi land and America in favour of Fulto JOUIN, A., a Jansenist and poet, JOURDAIN, ALPHONSE, count and founder of the city of Montauba
JOURDAIN, AMABLE L. M. MI
ELLET, a French dentist, afterward scholar, author of 'Tableau de l Gouvernement, de la Religion, et de de la Perse,' 1788-1818.
JOURDAIN, F. C., a Fr. archæo.
JOURDAN, A. J. L., a Fr. jurist, JOURDAN, JEAN BAPTISTE, a French revolution, born 1762, appo of division 1793, general-in-chief o
Italy, and marshal of France, 1803-battle of Vittoria, fought in support o parte, 1813, gov. of the 'Invalides,' 1
JOURDAN, MATHIEU JOUVE called 'JOURDAN COUPE TETE,' a n man shape, who became a leader of murderers during the French revolu ercised supreme power at Avignon t of the republican forces under Chois martin, 1791, executed 1794.
JOUSSE, DANIEL, a Fr. lawyer
matician, au. of 'Traité de la Sphere,' JOUVANCY, J., a Jesuit hist., 1
JOUVENET, J., a French painte
JOVELLANOS, GASPAR MELC distinguished literary savant, statesm matic poet of Spain, born 1744, mini 1799, killed in an insurrection, 1812.
JOVIANUS, FLAVIUS CLAUDI succeeded Julian the Apostate as emp and restored Christianity 363, died 3
JOVINIAN, an Italian reformer,
JOVINUS, a native of Gaul, co
367-370. His grandson, of the sa tained the title of emperor 411, kille
JOVIUS, PAUL, an Italian hist.,
JOY, RT. HON. H., an Irish judg
JOY, JOYE, or GEE, JOHN, a bi dist. as a promoter of the reformatio
JOYCE, J., a miscel. writer, 176
JOYNER, W., an English poet, 1
JUAN OF AUSTRIA. See JOHN
JUAN OF AUSTRIA, a natural
IV., king of Spain, dist. as a general

UAN Y SANTACILIA, Don George, or N Jorge Juan, a Spanish mathematician engineer, 1712-1774.

UBA, the first of the name, king of Numidia, ceeded his father Hiempsel, B.C. 50, joined pio and Cato against Cæsar 49, died by his hand when the cause was lost by the defeat Pharsus, B.C. 46. The second of the name, and successor of the preceding, was led a captin Cæsar's triumph, but afterwards made king Mauritania, and married to the daughter of patra and Antony. He distinguished himself naturalist, historian, and philoso., d. A.D. 23.

UBE, Augustus, a Fr. historian, 1765-1824.

UDA, Leo De, a Ger. reformer, 1482-1542.

UDA, Hioug, a Jewish rabbi, 11th century.

UDAH, the fourth son of Jacob and Leah, and father of the existing race of Jews.

UDAH HAKKADOSH, or the holy, a learned i, born in Galilee about 120, distinguished as founder of the school of Tiberius, and as the piler of the Mishna, died 194.

UDAS LEVITA, a Spanish rabbi, 1090-1140.

UDAS MACCABÆUS, a valiant leader of the s in the persecution of Antiochus Epiphanes, ceeded his father Mattathias, in the line of the monean princes, B.C. 166, fell, heroically fight- against overwhelming numbers, B.C. 160.

UDITH, a heroine of the Jewish nation, whose tory is recorded in the well-known book of that me, the date and the authorship of which are h uncertain, but which probably dates after Babylonish captivity.

UEL, Nicholas, a Danish admiral, 1629-97.

UENIN, G., a French theologian, 1650-1713.

UENIN, P., a French historian, 166?-1749.

UGLARIS, A., an Italian Jesuit, died 1653.

UGLER, J. F., a Ger. philologist, 1714-1791.

UGURTHA, a king of Numidia, vanquished the Romans and starved in prison, 106 B.C.

ULIA, a martyr of Carthage, killed 440.

ULIA, the only daughter of the emperor Au- us, and wife of Marcellus and Agrippa, equally brated for her beauty, her debaucheries, and genius, starved to d. by order of Tiberius, 14.

ULIA, daughter of Germanicus and Agrippina, a victim to the intrigues of Messalina, 17-41.

ULIA, a daughter of Julius Cæsar and Cor- e, and wife of Pompey the Great, d. B.C. 53.

ULIA DOMNA, second wife of the emperor rus, and mother of Caracalla and Geta, dist. the patroness of arts and letters, 170-217.

ULIAN, an Italian theologian, 5th century.

ULIAN, a Spanish prelate and theologian, and ent of the Roman calendar, died 690.

ULIAN, Flavius Claudius, emperor of me, nephew of Constantine the Great; famous history because of his effort to re-establish the mes and worship of Paganism; hence named Apostate. He was born at Constantinople in 1., and died at the age of thirty-two, of a wound ceived near Ctesiphon, in the midst of his con- st with Sapor, king of the Persians. The life of his remarkable person was altogether singular. Escaping death,—always imminent during his earlier years,—chiefly through protection of the clemency to which the jealousy and avarice of his cousin, the possessor of the purple, had doomed him, he grew up a philosopher, first instructed by Christian bishops, and then an attached pupil of the school of Athens. The necessities of Constantius recalled him to the capital, and procured his adoption as Cæsar: but, haunted by guilty terrors, the Emperor virtually banished him to Gaul, under guise of assigning him that exhausted and perturbed region as a Province. In a position thus inauspicious, the extraordinary military and administrative talents of Julian first burst forth. Repression had not broken the spring in him; neither had a life of study unfitted him for action. He restored discipline, consolidated and inspired the legions, overthrew the Germans and pacified Gaul. Deprived of his government by the sleepless enmity of Constantius—for the hatred of the timid is never asleep—he was proclaimed Augustus by the soldiery, and had just entered on civil war, when the death of his unworthy relative opened his path to the throne. Then Julian began the work for which he imagined that Fate had prepared him,—a work in itself impracticable; and the attempt to perform it involved him in controversies so bitter, and actions so questionable, that it would have been vain now to attempt to disentangle his motives, even had the history of these times been much more reliable than any early history is. It is alleged that he revolted from the unjust repugnance of the Church to Philosophy as such, and hated its intolerance. Unfortunately, the early Church was intolerant, and had learnt too soon the process by anathema. and it is equally true, that intolerance was especially foreign alike to the religion of Rome, and the philosophy of Athens; the first having ever admitted without scruple, new gods to seats on its Olympus; and the latter, inspired by the Alexandrines, endeavouring at that period to discern the secret meaning of all forms and modes of Mythology,—resolving them into symbols But if Julian had been moved solely by a respect for liberty, he would have remained firm by his earliest measures—viz., the restoration of the old gods, and the equal protection of their worships. On the contrary, he persecuted those he blamed as persecutors, closed their schools, and launched into all the excesses of REACTION. The great and catholic moral pointed by his history is this—no Power can revive in this world, that which even a REVOLUTION has destroyed. The destruction of ancient systems, although by apparent violence, is never possible, unless new moral elements, and forces, have been born and risen into efficiency, —in other words, until these systems have ceased to represent the life of the world, and become unfit to evolve the future. In matters of Religion especially, reaction can, on this account, replace the form only: the faith has gone, and the husk—the ceremony and the dogma—can never be propped up as a verisimilitude.—Julian had much activity, and as already stated, singular administrative skill; but the weakness inherent in every Reactionist, passed with him too, into its usual, if not unfailing issues—fanaticism and frenzy. [J.P.N.]

JULIANA, a woman of remarkable talents and military courage, who possessed great influence at the courts of the Mogul emperors of Hindostan. She was the daughter of a Portuguese named Augustin Dias D'Acosta, and was born in Bengal, 1658. Died 1733.

JULIANA, a devotee of the reign of Edward III., who immured herself in a stone cell at Norwich, and having suffered from extreme mortification, wrote a book of devotion entitled 'Sixteen Revelations of the Love of God,' containing an account of her visions, or the 'Showings' by which her reflections were illustrated. The MS. of this work was preserved by the monks, and published by a learned catholic named Cressy, in 1670, who could discover nothing concerning her history beyond the hints which are scattered through the work itself. It appears, however, that she was about thirty years of age when the principal of her visions occurred, in the year 1373, and that she was severely tempted, and deeply experienced in what the mystics regard as the spiritual life. Her book was reprinted in the quaint language of the period in which it was written, by G. H. Parker, in 1843. The most interesting of her visions is one of the Virgin Mary, which Juliana has related with an artlessness and sense of wonder which it is impossible to accuse either of insincerity or extravagance. [E.R.]

JULIEN, P., a French sculptor, 1731-1804.

JULIEN, S., a Swiss painter, 1736-1799.

JULIO ROMANO. See ROMANO.

JULIUS, the first of the name, pope of Rome, a partizan of Athanasius, and a saint of the Roman calendar, reigned 337-352. The second, one of the most unscrupulous political intriguers that ever occupied the papal chair, distinguished as a soldier and a magnificent patron of arts and letters, born 1441, reigned 1503-1513. The third, in whose time the council of Trent was re-opened, reigned 1550-1555.

JULYAT, FLEURY, a French poet, 16th cent.

JUMELIN, J. B., a French chemist, 1745-1807.

JUNCKER, CHR., a Ger. philolo., 1668-1714.

JUNCKER, G. H., a Ger. med. wr., 1680-1759.

JUNG STILLING. See STILLING.

JUNGE, JOACHIM, a native of Lubeck, eminent as a math. and natural philosopher, 1587-1657.

JUNGER, J. F., a Germ. dramatist, died 1797.

JUNGERMANN, GODFREY, a Ger. translator and commentator, died 1610. His brother, LOUIS, a botanist, 1572-1653.

JUNIUS, ADRIAN, a Dutch savant, 1512-1575.

JUNIUS, FRANCIS, a French scholar, professor of divinity at Leyden, and fellow-labourer with Tremellius upon his Latin version of the Old Testament, author of commentaries and theological works, 1545-1602. His son, of the same name, born at Heidelberg, em. as a philolo., 1589-1677.

JUNKER, G. A., a German Jesuit, 1716-1805.

JUNOT, ANDOCHE, a marshal of the French empire, and duke d'Abrantes, born 1771, entered the army as a volunteer 1791, distinguished at the siege of Toulon 1793, general of division in Egypt 1801, governor of Paris 1804, commander of the army in Portugal 1806, lost the battle of Vimiera, and compelled to capitulate, 1808, afterwards gov. of the Illyrian provinces, and d. 1813.

JUNOT, LAURA PERMON, wife of the preceding, and duchess of Abrantes, distinguished as a novelist, but chiefly by her 'Memoirs,' 1784-1838.

JURAIN, CL., a French antiquarian, died 1618.

JURET, FR., a French poet, 1553-1626.

JURIEU, PETER, a famous protestant theologian, born at Men, in the Orléannais, 1637; died at Rotterdam, where he occupied theology, and was pastor of the Walloo 1713. He was a great partizan of Wil and engaged protestants and catholics i versy with about equal animosity. Th his works is a 'Critical History of Doct Modes of Worship.'

JURIN, JAMES, an English physicia as a mathematician and natural philos., 1

JURINE, L., a Swiss naturalist, 1751

JUSSIEU, ANTOINE DE, an eminent was born at Lyons in 1686. He died in possessed an extensive knowledge of bo filled the situation of professor of that the Jardin du Roi at Paris.

JUSSIEU, BERNARD DE, a celeb tanist, and a younger brother of the a also born at Lyons, in 1699, and died in derived his taste for botany from his br through his interest was nominated, in tanical demonstrator at the Jardin du R XV., wishing to make an extensive bota den at Trianon, intrusted the execution a intendence of it to Bernard de Jussieu. left behind him very few writings, but theless exercised a great influence upon of botany in France; and his arrangeme plants cultivated in the garden of Tr shown by his catalogues, proves that he menced practically demonstrating the method so beautifully and fully carried o wards by his celebrated nephew.

JUSSIEU, ANTOINE LAURENT DE, of the above, and upon whom his uncle' seems to have fallen, was born at Lyons He died in 1836. He was appointed, assistant to Lemonnier, the professor of and, in 1777, obtained the general admi of the Jardin du Roi. In his lectures, a memoir of the new arrangement of plan royal garden, he explained for the first tim and with precision, the fundamental prin the natural method of arrangement of pla in 1789, he published his 'Genera Plant work which employed him four years in out. In this excellent work, he has ca satisfactorily the first principles of the classification of his uncle Bernard, and found and sagacious manner in which h plied these principles to the institutio natural families has caused the Jussieus to be adopted by almost all botanists th the world. In 1793, when the royal ga remodelled, and became the Jardin des Jussieu was appointed professor of rural and afterwards was chosen by his colleag director and treasurer of the museum o History. Like his uncle, Bernard, he ha almost totally blind for some years b death.

JUSSOU, H. C., a Ger. architect, 175

JUSTEL, CHRISTOPHER, a French and ecclesiastical antiquarian, whose wo trate the history of France in the mid 1580-1649. His son, HENRY, editor of s father's MSS., 1620-1693.

JUSTI, JOHN HENRY THEOPHILUS, mineralogist, author of a 'Treatise on M 'Mineralogy,' 'Chemistry,' &c., 1720-17

urnamed 'The Martyr,' but anciently her,' was born about the beginning century, of pagan parents, at Flavia lous), the ancient Shechem or Syria. He was brought up in the re-arents, and studied in succession the etic, Pythagorean, and Platonic phi-t none of them fully satisfied his inquisitive mind, though the last d him. Meeting with an old and istian in one of his solitary walks by e was surprised by the conversation, n ignorance of many things, and the Hebrew Scriptures. This in-length to his conversion, when he young man. His subsequent life the earnest diffusion of the faith embraced. He visited Alexandria, ranger in Rome. He suffered death Antoninus, in A.D. 165 or 166; and rded, his prime accuser was a Cynic the name of Crescens. The mode dom is uncertain; some affirming scourged and beheaded, and others put to death in secret. The best n are in the form of apologies—one,
A.D. 150, addressed to Antoninus cond to Marcus Aurelius about the e 'Dialogue with Trypho the Jew,' genuineness of which has been untacked, is a defence of Christianity assaults and prejudice, and is founded nal discussion. The argument is e types and prophecies of the Old t the interpretation is often fanciful Doubts are entertained about the other works ascribed to him, such n,' and 'Cohortation to the Greeks,' pistle to Diognetus, and the tract rchy of God.' Some other spurious assigned to him, and many of his been lost. As Justin continued to of a philosopher, so he never re-philosophizing spirit. His Platonic peculiar colouring to his views and ny Christian doctrines, and some of were not learned in the school of His erudition, however, is always Christianity; but his style is often expressive. His works in whole have often been published. The was published by Robert Stephens, 51. A better editio appeared under laranus, Paris, 1742. Thirlby pub-logues, London, 1722, in a tall and o, and the last and best edition,
, was issued from the press at Jena, 8vo, 1844. The separate pieces en reprinted, and not a few of them slated into English. Useful informae, times, and theology of Justin, may hop Kaye's 'Writings and Opinions yr,' Cambridge, 1829, and especially n works of Semisch on the subject,
Hamburg, 1842-1848. [J.E.]

Roman historian, 2d century.

, emperor of the East, born 450, astasius 518, made Justinian his e empire, and died 527.

JUSTIN II., son of Vigilantia, sister of Justinian, suc. the latter, 565, died in retirement, 578.

JUSTINIAN I., emperor of Constantinople, was the son of a farmer, and of the sister of Justin, who from entering the army as a simple soldier, had become emperor, and was succeeded by his nephew, then in the forty-fifth year of his age, 527. Some months before the death of his uncle, Justinian had persuaded him to consent to his marriage with Theodora, a well-known actress and courtezan, who was declared Augusta, and crowned the same day as her husband. About the same time, Belisarius, the friend and future general of the new emperor, was married to Antonina, a professional companion of Theodora; and to the intrigues and jealousies stirred up by these two women is to be attributed the principal part of the untoward circumstances which have cast a stain on the personal character of Justinian. The political events of his reign may be summed up in the wars of Belisarius and the eunuch Narses, who obtained splendid successes over the Persians in the East, and the Vandals and Goths in Italy, and in the terrible sedition which broke out at Constantinople in 532, and was extinguished in the blood of thirty thousand persons. In the latter case, Justinian would have fled from his capital, and in all probability have lost his crown, but for the courage and talents of Theodora, whose vices were gilded by some of the rare qualities befitting an empress. The glory of his reign is the famous digest of the Roman law, known generally as the Justinian Code, which was compiled out of the Gregorian, Theodorian, and Hermogenian codes, by ten of the ablest lawyers of the empire, under the guiding genius of the jurisconsult, Tribonian. Their labours consist—1. of the 'Statute Law,' or Justinian code, properly so called; 2. the 'Pandects,' a digest of the decisions and opinions of former magistrates and lawyers,—these two compilations consisted of matter that lay scattered through more than two thousand volumes, now reduced to fifty; 3. the 'Institutes,' an abridgment, in four books, containing the substance of all the laws in an elementary form; 4. the laws of modern date, including Justinian's own edicts, collected into one volume, and called the 'New Code.' These labours, which a Cæsar had not been able to accomplish, were completed by the year 541; and we can only lament that Christianity was not in its prime at that epoch, whereby the spirit of natural right and equity had been infused into them, in place of the dogmas of authority. Besides this important work of imperial reform, Justinian was a great builder and engineer, and works of public utility were kept constantly in progress in all parts of the empire. He was remarkable for temperance and chastity, and not less so for his great learning and diligent application to business; but his religious bigotry, and his weakness in the hands of Theodora, marred all his good qualities. Died in the eighty-third year of his age, 565. [E.R.]

JUSTINIAN II., surnamed 'Rhinotmetus,' became emperor of the East on the death of his father, Constantine, 686, when he was about sixteen years of age. He was deposed and banished for his cruelty, by his general, Leontius, 695; regained his throne ten years afterwards, and, exhibiting the same ferocious disposition, was assassinated, 711.

JUSTINIANS, THE, or, GIUSTINIANI OF VENICE, descended from the emperors of that name, form a long roll of famous names. The principal of these are—LORENZO, or ST. LAURENT, the first patriarch of Venice, a man of remarkable public and private virtue, author of sermons, letters, and ascetic tracts, 1380-1465. LEONARDO, his younger brother, distinguished as an Oriental scholar and poet, procurator of St. Mark, 1388-1446. BERNARDO, his son, procurator and member of the council of ten, author of a life of Lorenzo Giustinian, and of letters and speeches delivered by him on various occasions, 1408-89. BERNARDO, uncle of the latter, a learned ecclesiastic and dignitary of the order of St. George, author of a 'History of the Military Orders,' published 1692. SEBASTIAN, ambassador to England in the reign of Henry VIII., 1515-1519. ORSATTO, a Greek translator and poet, 1538-1603. POMPEIUS, a celebrated general and historian of the Flemish wars, 1569-1616. MARC-ANTONIO, elected doge of Venice 1684, died, after sustaining a war with the Turks, 1688. NIC.-ANTONIO, a learned theologian, who became bishop of Padua, and edited an edition of Athanasius, and a chronology of the bishops of his see, 1712-1796. ANGELO, proveditor of Treviso when the state was invaded by Buonaparte in 1797. [E.R.]

JUSTINIANS, THE, or GIUSTINIANI OF GENOA, assumed the name without the right of descent. The principal of the family are—AUGUSTIN, bishop of Nebo, or Nebbio, and the most learned man of his age, 1470-1536. JEROME, a tragic writer, born about 1560. HORACE, a learned cardinal, risen from a poorer branch of the family, died at Rome 1649. MICHEL, a learned ecclesiastic, author of many works left in MS., 1612-1680. VINCENT, a famous connoisseur, whose collection of engravings forms the 'Giustinian Gallery,' published 1640. FABIO, a learned prelate, adopted into the family when a youth, 1579-1627.

The name occurs in other parts of Venice and Genoa; of these we GIOVANNI, a native of Candy, disti poet, died about 1556; and LAU
RENZO, a professor at Naples, autho works, &c., 1760-1825.

JUVARA, F., a Sicilian architect

JUVENAL, DECIUS JUNIUS, a man satirist, was born at Aquinum, at the beginning of the reign of C first satire being directed against Pa of Domitian, Juvenal was exiled to pretence of an appointment, and di advanced age, 128. Only sixteen of main, most of which are considere of that class of writing. They have by Dryden, Gifford, and others.

JUVENAL, the name by which named W. Jouvenneaux is known, a

JUVENAL, or JOUVENAL DE
French statesman who owed his elev
ing Charles VI., born about 1350, di son, of the same name, archbishop o historian of Charles VI., died 1473.

JUVENCUS CAIUS VECTIUS
one of the earliest Christian poets, b

JUVENEL, F., author of a ' Crusade under the Pontificate of 'History of the Moors in Spain,' a of the Popes,' 17th century.

JUXON, WILLIAM, successively
ford, bishop of London, and archbis bury, was a prelate of great learni membered for his fidelity to Charl attended at the Isle of Wight, and quests he received on the scaffold. H of a sermon, entitled 'The Subjec
Lamentation on the Death of Britain Charles,' published 1649, and 'Some upon the Act of Uniformity,' 1662.

K

KAAB. See CAAB.

KAAS, NICHOLAS, the principal of the four regents appointed to govern Denmark during the minority of Christiern I., born 1535, chancellor 1573, regent 1588, died 1594.

KAAU-BŒRHAAVE, ABRAHAM, a Dutch anat. and phy., nephew of the illustrious Bœrhaave, and court physician at Petersburgh, 1713-1753.

KABBESE, J., a Dutch painter, died 1660.

KABEL, A. VANDER, a D. pain., 1631-1695.

KACUFFER, C. T., a Ger. hist., 1757-1830.

KADLUBEK, or KODLUBKO, VINCENT, a Polish historian, and bishop of Cracow, died 1223.

KAEMPF, J., a Bavarian physician, 1733-87.

KAEMPFER, ENGELBERT, (1651-1716), a traveller and naturalist, was a native of the principality of Lippe-Detmold in Germany. In the service of Sweden and the Dutch he visited most countries of the East; and has recorded his many curious and interesting observations in two works, 'Amoenitates Exoticae,' and a 'History of Japan.' In 1693 he returned to Amsterdam, and the following year took the degree of Doctor of Physic at Leyden; and settling in his native place was appointed physician to the prince. This brought him into extensive practice, which his death. A genus of the ginger mimeæ,) is named after him.

KAESTNER, ABRAHAM GOTT mathematician and astronomer, auth works in pure and mixed math., and tion of the Immortality of the Soul,'

KAFOUR, a sultan of Egypt, di

KAHLE, L. M., a Ger. jurisconsu

KAHLER, W. or J., a Ger. divin

KAI-KAOUS, a king of Ivan o history is not well ascertained, 7th

KAI-KAOUS, a Turkish sultan,

KAI-KAOUS II., a Turkish sult

KAI-KHASRON, the name of the first of whom reigned 1192-121
1237-1244; the third, 1266-1283.

KAIN, H. L. C., a French actor,

KALB, JOHN, Baron De, a Fre became major-gen. in the American action under General Gates, 1732-1

KALCREUTH, COUNT ADOLP
a field-marshal of Prussia, disting seven years' war under Frederick th
the wars of the French revolution,

KALDI, GEORGE, a learned Jesuit of Hungary, ... of theology at Olmutz and Presburgh. d. 1634.
KALE, or KELF, W., a Dutch paint., 1630-93.
KALKBRENNER, CHRISTIAN, a Prussian Jew, ...wn as a musical composer and historian, 1755-... His son, CHRISTIAN FREDERICK, distin...ed as a pianist, 1784-1849.
KALL, ANE, a Danish historian, 1743-1821.
KALL, J. CHRISTOPHER, a Prussian philo... and Oriental scholar, 1714-1775. His son, ...OLAS CHRISTOPHER, the same, born 1749.
KALLGREW, a Swedish dramatist, 1751-1795.
KALM, PETER, a Swedish naturalist, professor ..., author of 'A Naturalist's Tour in North ...a,' and of 'Dissertations on the Agriculture ...mmerce of Sweden,' 1715-1779.
KALRAAT, ABRAHAM VAN, a Dutch painter ...ulptor, 1643-1699. His brother, BERNARD, ...uished as a landscape painter, 1650-1721.
KAMBLI, M., a Ger. sculptor, about 1717-86.
KAMENSKI, COUNT, a Rus. general, last ct.
KAM-HI, or KHANG-HI, a Chinese emperor, ... patron of arts and letters, reig. 1661-1722.
KAMPEN, J. VAN, a Dutch painter, 17th cen.
KAMPENHAUSEN, BARON BALTHAZER DE, ...ian historian and publicist, 1772-1823.
KANDJATOU, a khan of the Moguls, 1291-95.
KANDLER, J. J., a German artist, dist. for ...anty of his figures on porcelain, 1706-1776.
KANNI, J. A., a Ger. Orientalist, 1773-1824.
KANT, IMMANUEL, born at Konigsberg, 21st ... 1724; in which city he spent a long life of ... years in the tranquillity so acceptable to a ... he died on 24th February, 1804.—It has ...ned to two of Europe's most illustrious ...en since the revival of Philosophy, to ...take the same momentous problem regard... the Grounds and Limits of Human Knowledge: ...ram, almost contrasted in character, but each ...ention to his age, offering a solution so pro... and suitable, that his works stand as an ...rum which, as its commencement, a spacious ... of Metaphysical History will ever be dated: ... Inquirers were KANT and JOHN LOCKE. ...nasted in mental character—for, while Locke, ...ipating in the peculiar genius of his country, ... not to adventure beyond the concrete—the ...cal—the objective,—the intellect of Kant ...sted an analytic power, an ability to pierce ...gh abstractions and construct Systems, cer... never surpassed since the days of Aristotle, ...se two great men were so placed, that in ... common revolt against scepticism and ...atism, it fell to them as if through necessity, ...ook at their common subject from those ...ate points of view, which in philosophy, ...stood for the most part also as contrasted. ...Hard by the dogmatism of less discreet Car... ..., who were ever inclined to arrest in...uisitive Inquiry, by interposing the obstacle ...so-called Innate principle or truth—Locke ...erted our harmony with the External World, ...hastened to vindicate for its action on Mind, ...important part which that action plays in the ...struction of human knowledge: Kant, on the ...er hand, lived in times when the claims on ...half of Sensation—instituted by Locke—had ...en risen to excess; when the figurative expres...n of the Englishman, that the mind is a tabula rasa had become accepted as a literal maxim; and the unrelenting scepticism of Hume had driven from systematic philosophy all recognition of Energy in Mind, Personality in Man, or of Permanence Substance and Truth, in Nature or anywhere. Accordingly, it was his distinctive vocation to reassert the Force of the Thinking principle, to re-establish it as a Power, co-ordinate, and at least coequal with the External Universe: and he accomplished his task so thoroughly, that the despotism of mere Sensationalism can never reappear in the progress of modern thought. Inevitably, perhaps, from his position, Kant's tendencies lean unduly towards Idealism: nevertheless, profiting by his long posteriority to Locke, the solution offered by the profound and penetrating German, is assuredly the completest which our human Intellect has yet elaborated; and, however surprising to the English reader, it may be also asserted, that by no one, since the Stagyrite wrote, has clear and definite thought been expressed more clearly, or more conscientiously guarded from possible misapprehension. We shall endeavour as distinctly as we can—encumbered by the necessary brevity—to offer an appreciation of Kant's remarkable labours.—I. Two considerations are essential to a right apprehension of the achievements of the sage of Konigsberg: First; as it is necessary to repeat, his effort was to establish the grounds and limits of Human Knowledge—destroying scepticism on the one hand, and discrediting dogmatism on the other: and Secondly; He sought to accomplish this double object by defining exactly the spheres of those two factors of all knowledge—the Mind and Nature; thus rescuing Truth from doubt, although Sensation alone might not account for it, and by rigorously appreciating and surveying the action of the purely Mental Force, warning us not to mistake for real, what is merely notional. To carry out the foregoing aim was the effort of Kant's life; and his philosophy was hence rightly designated the Critical Philosophy: although he has surveyed many departments of Doctrine, his efforts point everywhere rather to Criticism, than to Doctrine; he has shown rather how Philosophy may become a Science, than filled in the matter of the Science. Taking his writings as a whole—even allowing that the whole is a composite of isolated parts—they go with the strong light of Criticism nearly around all possible knowledge. The mind manifesting its energies mainly under three Modes, usually discriminated as the Intellect, the Emotions, and the Will (see article KRAUSE), —KANT has tracked its corresponding laws and methods of action, in his classical treatises—the Critique of the Pure Reason—the Critique of the Judgment—and the Critique of the Practical Reason. To complete the two latter works, several of his smaller treatises are needful as a supplement; but, with this addition, they may be justly esteemed as contributions yet unsurpassed, to the disentangling of difficulties in theoretical and practical Morals, and to the establishment of fundamental canons in Æsthetics. Both works abound in passages of noble Eloquence: the Critique of the Practical Reason presents the best appreciation offered by any modern Thinker, of the system of Epicurus, and the morality of Stoicism: the Critique of the Judgment achieved an influence in Germany which even the superficial student of the literature of that country will not fail to recognize; and in the section on Teleology, the philosophical rudiments appear, of that recent method in Natural History, which will constrain a reconstruction of all the Sciences of Organization.—It is, however, of the Critique of the Pure Reason only, that, in illustration of Kant's manner, we shall here give any particular account.—II. As the foundation of this memorable Critique, Kant inquires, what characteristics must attach to Knowledge drawn simply from Sensation, or from Experience? Sensation, or experience, can inform the mind of facts only, of things that are, because they are felt; it never can show that a thing must be, or that it is universally. The characteristics of necessity and universality, then, cannot come from experience; the products of which must be empirical, and can never rise higher than generalizations: so that whenever either characteristic inheres in a notion, we are obliged to infer that the said notion is, in thus far, not a pure product of experience, but an experience viewed and modified by some quality or energy of the thinking faculty. The criterion obtained, let the Intellect, or the Pure Reason be examined; and the factors of the whole separated, after a full analysis of its contents. The Pure Reason, or the Faculty of Knowing, operates in three different modes—First, that of SENSIBILITY, or our power to construct representations of objects by means of the sensations they produce: Second, the Faculty which co-ordinates, unites, and discerns the relations of these representations, or the UNDERSTANDING: and Third, that loftier Faculty which bestows on Knowledge its highest Unity—passing beyond Sensibility and the Understanding, and seeming to descry Ultimate and Eternal Laws;—this faculty is the REASON.—Of the contents of the Sensibility then, what are the a posteriori, and what the a priori elements? What portion of a perception is Empirical, and what Necessary and Universal? The perception of a fact or thing as existing, is clearly empirical; but we cannot perceive anything without conceiving it as necessarily existing in Space and Time: these conceptions no mere apprehension of empirical existence can supply; therefore they are Forms of our Sensibility,—qualities or forces belonging to the perceiving agent, by which a new nature, so to speak, is impressed on the thing perceived. With regard to the Understanding again, we discern that it universally classes objects under certain determinate relations, which relations it considers universally applicable: these relations, therefore, or the Categories, are the Laws, or Formal principles of the Understanding—its constituent elements—or rather the Conditions under which alone, in virtue of its structure, it can work. In his determination of the Categories, Kant analyses alongside of Aristotle; nor, if the works of the two great men are compared, will it appear, that, to the philosopher of Konigsberg, thought had advanced for so many centuries, in vain. One of the Categories of the Understanding is the relation of Cause and Effect: the Student will at once discern how easily under this view of it, the German disposed of the otherwise bewildering speculations of Hume. Beyond Sensi

Understanding lies the Reason, gov a priori Ideas, one of which elevat conception of the Soul, or to the t
Unity of Man; a second, the ground
Cosmology; and a third, that const tion of God.—How limited the glin
by these abrupt words, of the ampli perb proportions of the Critical Phil let the Student be assured that for t in History the problem it underto entirely solved: no longer does the Subjective Human Knowledge conta visited, or unexplored corners.—III.
now ventured as to the labours of Ka nounced in ignorance of the question they have given rise. Numerous the proposed on his table of the Categori exceptions to other interior peculi system: but these—whatever their weight—little affect the merits of his symmetrical scheme. We have s that its tendencies lean unduly towa and it is necessary now, to show i ner the foregoing speculations open the questio vexata of modern th supreme difficulty of existing metap Critical Philosophy, has indeed sav sary Truths by referring them to Mind—conditions under which alone Organism can operate: but, what i between these Laws subjective, and objective Realities? Space and Time elements of the Sensibility—do they n Universe as well as for Us? Is that r purely Ideal, by which the marvels o are placed before the mind, spark Infinity and evolving through all Categories of the Understanding, aga tion for instance of Cause and Eff
they are necessitated through the natu
derstanding itself, are they all purel
Is there not a world of phenomena, laws which are their exact counterp bring us into whose presence, our Int ture is the instrument? So, finally o
—the Idea of God is a necessity w only a subjective necessity,—does no sity conduct us towards a Real, eve creating, all-sustaining Omniscience will not learn without dismay that Ka legitimacy of every attempt to effect a Reality, from the region of the Specul
By a process that at least is ingen which he is supported by our own Hamilton, he did effect a bridge to alities of Ontology; he assumed the God as a consequence of the Law nevertheless, it is his dictum, that th
tions of the Sensibility and the v Intellect, authorize our belief in no ob terpart; and that Existence, as recogn is a mere Noumenon—a thing origina tion, but unknown as to its qualities, able. Doubtless one is startled by such but it were folly to underrate the di checked the advance of Kant. Many a efforts to remove it; with what succe the place to declare: with not a few to accomplish the feat seems to have passed accomplishment. Nevertheless, on the occur-of such difficulties, even when they seem to ouch the insuperable, it is something to discern their existence need not surprise us; and that their appalling magnitude is no reason for ate despair (article LEIBNITZ). The question st which Inquiry is here impinging, has to do the lowest down—the least accessible portion human Nature. As we have remarked elsethe faculty of Intuition, the power to look h Sensation into Realities—INTUERI—is, gh the most educable, the most difficult to ead, and the least educated of all the forms rgy appertaining to Mind. It acts, indeed y mind, but it acts imperfectly; rarely does through reflection, or, as yet, so that we plain its operations. Let the student turn William Hamilton's celebrated memoir on ntation and Representation; he will find how sadly men have erred, and how toil-they have laboured, before that single act itive Perception could be described! That Intuition, as we now understand it, is the act constraining our acceptance of an e reality, corresponding to Kant's subjec-ws or Forms of the Sensibility: is it not hen, that a deeper and clearer view, in the maining and corresponding directions, shall us to assert as authoritatively, concerning jectivity of Laws which we apprehend in antime, simply as regulating Forms of the tanding and the Reason? Between these ses of Forms or constituent elements, and ms of Space and Time, there is much in n; especially this vital characteristic—no tive doubt can destroy our practical belief ey have real correlatives. Nay, it may be even—as Kant rightly asserts with regard Practical Reason, or the Law of Morality—thout that belief, or rather that INTUITION, alities would not operate. Perception indeed

s no conscious voluntary act; the working Understanding and the Reason, on the other o involve one; and it appears safe to aver alesa for the conviction, that we are con-about a great and real Universe, apart e Thinking Subject, the Human Will would o urge the Understanding to evolve its s, or the Reason to aspire after that Unity which, in obedience to its nature, it s to attain.—It were unsuitable to close this ct notice of the Philosophy of Kant, without concerning the character and aspects of the pher. We have said that he lived in tran, devoted to meditation. But it were wrong y him the abstracted sage. His benevo-and simplicity were great; he much relished
, mingling with its innocent gaieties; and he loved by the young. He was a man of un-chable probity; and that sincerity which is ght arm of Genius in its contests for Truth, nseparable from his nature. His ideas in morals been surpassed in elevation by no writer in ory; he never uttered a word or committed a ence to the world, derogatory to man's highest ure, or which the sternest virtue would recall.
ous lover of Truth, he proclaimed and vindial liberty of Thought and Speech: Philosophy, with Kant, was no make-believe—neither the formula of a School, nor an affectation of the Salon
—but an earnest discernment of the rights and duties, the functions privileges and position of Humanity, and therefore a reverential offering by our Human Reason to the august Power that formed it.—There are now excellent editions of Kant's collected works in German, by his pupils;
good French translations of several of them; an English version of the Critique of the Pure Reason by Mr. Hayward, and one of his Ethics by Mr.
Semple. [J.P.N.]

KAO-TSOU-OUTI, a Chinese emp., 355-422.

KAO-TSOU, the first of the name, emperor of China, founder of the Tang dynasty, reigned 619-626, d. 635; the second, founder of the Haou-Tein dynasty, reigned 935-942; the third, founder of the Haou-Han dynasty, reigned 947-951.

KAO-TSOUNG, the first of the name, emperor of China, reigned 648-684; the second, 1127-1161.

KAPNIST, VASILI V., a Rus. poet, 1756-1813.

KARAMSIN, NICHOLAS MICHÆLOVITCH, historiographer-royal of the empire of Russia, councillor of state in 1826, author of a History of Russia, and works in polite literature, 1765-1826.

KARNKOWSKI, S., a Polish hist., died 1603.

KAROLI, J., a Hungarian divine, 16th century.

KARPIUSKI, F., a Polish dramatist, d. 1823.

KARSTEN, W. J. G., a German physician and mathematician, 1732-1787. His brother, F. C. S. KARSTEN, an agriculturist, 1751-1829. Their nephew, DIDIER L. GUSTAVE KARSTEN, a learned mineralogist, 1768-1810.

KATE, L. T., a Dutch grammarian, last cent.

KATER, H., an Eng. mathematician, 1777-1825.

KATONA, S., a Hungarian hist., 1732-1811.

KAUFMANN, MARY ANNE ANGELICA CATHERINE, a French lady remarkable for her talents in painting and music, 1741-1807.

KAUNITZ-RIETBERG, WENCELAUS ANTHONY, prince of, an Austrian states., 1710-1794.

KANTZ, CONSTAN. F., an Aus. hist., 1735-97.

KAY, or CAIUS, THOMAS, head master of University College, Oxford, author of a work written in vindication of the superior antiquity of Oxford, in a controversy with Dr John Kaye of Cambridge, died 1572.

KAY, or KEY, W., a Dutch painter, 1520-1568.

KAYE, KEYE, CAY, or CAIUS, JOHN, a learned physician, founder of Caius College, Cambridge, of which he was the first master, author of professional works, and a Hist. of Cam., 1510-73.

KAYSSLER, A., a Ger. philosopher, d. 1822.

KAZWINI, ZACHARIAH BEN MOHAMMED BEN MAHMOUD, an Ar. geogra. and nat., d. 1283.

KEACH, BENJAMIN, a baptist wr., 1640-1704.

KEAN, EDMUND, one of the greatest tragic actors of which England can boast, and possessed of decided genius for the drama, was, on his mother's side, great-grandson of Harry Carey, reputed author of 'God save the King.' The date of his birth is dubious, but he is stated to have been born in Castle-Street, Leicester Square, in November, 1787; but to have himself asserted that 17th March, 1790, was his birth-day. He seems to have been placed on the stage when an infant, and to have thus appeared in processions and pageants both at Drury Lane and the Haymarket theatres. At these periods he was remarked for his shyness, but attracted the sympathy of Miss Tidswell, an actress of some standing, who was able to recommend him to a manager in Yorkshire, where he acted under the name of Carey. Hamlet, Lord Hastings, and Cato, were the parts which even then he was capable of filling; and he showed besides much elocutionary skill in recitations from Milton and Shakspeare, which attracted the attention of Dr. Drury, who sent him to Eton school, where he remained three years, and acquired considerable knowledge of Latin. After this, he played Hamlet and Shylock, first on the Birmingham stage, and afterwards at Edinburgh, Sheerness, Sevenoaks, Tunbridge Wells, and Swansea. At about the age of nineteen, we find him at Waterford, in Ireland, where he acted Douglas, and obtained a wife, remaining there two years, after which he visited Weymouth, Exeter, and Taunton. At Dorchester, he is said to have performed, not only in tragedy and comedy, but in opera and pantomime. By the intervention of Dr. Drury, he was ultimately recommended to the committee of Drury Lane theatre; at which theatre he made his debût 26th January, 1814, as Shylock, to a meagre house, but the few who were present became convinced of his genius; the critics were in his favour, and on waking the next morning the young actor found himself famous. His Richard the Third, Hamlet, and Othello, confirmed the favourable impression. His career was thenceforth assured, and his successes were of the most brilliant description. As a contrast to the classical style of the Kemble school, his acting was impulsive, fiery, and startling. After several seasons of triumph in England, Scotland, and Ireland, he visited America, being induced to that step by some private circumstances which permit not detail. On his return to England, he became manager of the Richmond theatre, and died in the house attached thereto, 15th May, 1833. His funeral was numerously attended by distinguished persons, and he was interred in the cemetery belonging to the old church at Richmond, near the grave of Thomson and Burbage. A cenotaph has since been placed on the church wall by his son, Mr. Charles Kean, the present manager of the Princess's theatre. Had the father been as prudent as the son has proved, his life would have been happier, and his ultimate triumph more decided. His genial aptitude for acting was indisputable, and the lightning-flashes frequent during his extraordinary performances, astonished the critic as much as the ordinary spectator. We have certainly had no performer whom the conscientious biographer can cite as his superior in tragic effect and passionate elocution. [J.A.H.]

KEANE, JOHN, Lord, son of Sir John Keane of Belmont, dist. as an officer in the peninsular war, and for his capture, in 1839, of Ghuznee; 1780-1844.

KEATE, GEORGE, a poet and miscel. writer, au. of an 'Account of the Pelew Islands,' 1729-97.

KEATING, G., an Irish historian, d. abt. 1625.

KEATS, JOHN, was born in London in 1796. Some years of his boyhood were spent in a school at Enfield. There he received classical impressions which moulded the form of his youthful fancy and feelings, producing a singularly interesting, though anomalous, kind of images, by their mixture with the romantic ideas which modern poetry afterwards inspired. When he was about fifteen [illegible] was apprenticed to a surgeon in L[illegible] poetry had taken close possession of h[illegible] the art was enthusiastically practised [illegible] he published a volume of poems, whi[illegible] noticed. Next year appeared 'Endym[illegible] Romance.' This poem displayed a p[illegible] of imagination over judgment, so d[illegible] prompt a doubt whether even maturer [illegible] have qualified the writer to attain ve[illegible] cellence; but it has an affluence of im[illegible] ideality, and an exquisite grace of fe[illegible] make it to poetical minds one of the [illegible] tive of all poems. It was criticised b[illegible] the Quarterly Review with savage se[illegible] attack affected the young poet very [illegible] has even been said to have caused or [illegible] the consumptive symptoms which s[illegible] themselves. He published, however, [illegible] new volume, containing, among ot[illegible] 'Hyperion,' 'The Eve of Saint Agne[illegible] and 'Isabella.' In a paper on his for[illegible] which now appeared in the Edinburg[illegible] was justly said by Jeffrey, that, with [illegible] both of matter and of diction, no bo[illegible] more fitly put into the hands of a read[illegible] to ascertain whether he had 'a nativ[illegible] poetry and a genuine sensibility to [illegible] charm.' The poetry of Shelley, and th[illegible] may be pointed to as the earliest in[illegible] those poetical tendencies which have [illegible] developed by Tennyson and his school[illegible] sought renovation of health in Italy, [illegible] He died at Rome in December, 1820, [illegible] recently completed his twenty-fourth y[illegible]

KEATS, SIR R. G., a naval officer, [illegible]

KEBLE, JOSEPH, an Eng. lawyer, [illegible]

KEDER, N., a Swedish antiquarian, [illegible]

KEENE, EDMUND, bishop of Ely, [illegible]

KEILL, JOHN, a Scotch mathemati[illegible] 1721. His brother, JAMES, a ph[illegible] medical author, 1673-1719.

KEISAR, W. DE, a Flem. painter, [illegible]

KEISER, R., a German musician, [illegible]

KEITH. See ELPHINSTONE.

KEITH, GEORGE, a Scotch secta[illegible] works for and against the Quakers, d[illegible]

KEITH, JAMES, youngest son of W[illegible] earl marshal of Scotland, distinguishe[illegible] marshal in the service of Prussia, 169[illegible]

KEITH, THOMAS, a professional [illegible] and mathematician, author of '[illegible] Works in Geometry,' &c., 1759-1824.

KELAOUN, sultan of Egypt, 1279[illegible]

KELGREN, H., a Swedish poet, 17[illegible]

KELLEHOUN, MORITZ, a Ger. pai[illegible] director of the academy at Munich, 17[illegible]

KELLER, J. B., a Swiss statuary, [illegible]

KELLER, G., a German historian, [illegible]

KELLER, D. L. CHR., Count, a Pr[illegible] matist, kn. at the congress of Vienna, [illegible]

KELLERMANN, FRANCIS CH[illegible] duke of Valmy, a famous general of [illegible] revolution, was born at Strasburgh 17[illegible] bracing the military profession when [illegible] risen to the rank of camp-marshal, be[illegible] in several political missions, before the [illegible] ment of the revolution. In 1791, he w[illegible] to a command in the army of the Mos[illegible]

d himself in organizing the defence of the er against the emigrants and the duke of swick. On the 19th of September, 1792, he ed, by forced marches, at the head of twentyhousand men, his famous junction with Duez, and, the following day, intrenched on the s of Valmy, resisted an attack of forty-five and Prussians and twenty thousand Aus-
. This famous victory was the first in the of successes which marked the career of the ic and the empire, and was gained by the ll-provided levies of the patriots over exced troops. On the same day the national tion was assembled in Paris. On the morhe republic was proclaimed, and the news
g in the camp of Valmy after their victory, e occasion of great rejoicings, in the midst ich the duke of Brunswick with his army ed the frontier. Escaping the denunciations tine, who sought his ruin, Kellermann was ted, in 1795, commander-in-chief of the army Alps and Italy, and in a short time found f auxiliary to Napoleon, whose star rose him. His position afterwards was that of a r and peer of France; and, like many others order, he made peace with the Bourbons on l of the emperor. He died in 1820. [E.R.]

LLEY, EDWARD, the seer and companion of r Dee in his alleged intercourse with spirits, orn in Worcester 1555, and is said to have ducated at Oxford, but, leaving the university tly, was captured in Lancashire, and for some it is supposed, lost his ears. It must have oon afterwards that he made the acquainof Dr. Dee, who was at first persuaded that r 'had been brought into unison with him by tion of the angel Uriel,' for as early as 1589 ad separated again. The cause of their dis-ent was Kelley's indulgence in magical pracfor the sake of gain, which the Doctor could lerate; and, left to himself, our adventurer ly lived handsomely upon his profits, but ed the honour of knighthood from the Em-Rodolph. It was the popular belief that outlived the time of his compact with the
and was carried off bodily by infernal spirits sight of his wife and children—but accordunadorned history he was imprisoned for averies, and died of the injuries he received endeavouring to escape, in 1595. He is thor of poems on chemistry and on the philo-
's stone, and was the penman of several ses, which are printed in Casaubon's 'Rela-of What Passed for Many Years Between and Some Spirits,' published 1639. Some particulars concerning him will be found in 's 'Funeral Monuments;' and there are MSS., both of his and Dr. Dee's, in the lean Museum at Oxford. [E.R.]

LLISON, M., a catholic divine, died 1641.

LLY, HUGH, an Irish dramatist, 1739-77.

LLY, JOHN, an English clergyman, author Practical Grammar of the Ancient Gaelic, guage of the Isle of Man,' 1750-1809.

LLY, MICHAEL, an Irish singer, 1762-1826.

LP, JUSTUS J., a Ger. philologist, 1650-1720.

EMBLE, GEO. STEPHEN, a popular actor and ger, br. of the cel. J. P. Kemble, 1758-1822.

EMBLE, JOHN PHILIP, next to Garrick, the most eminent of English actors, but in style, the contrast of his great predecessor, being as reflective as he was impulsive. His father, Roger Kemble, was theatrical manager at Prescot, in Lancashire, and in that county, John Philip was born, February, 1757. He was educated first at the Roman Catholic Seminary of Sedgeley Park, Staffordshire; and afterwards at the college of Douay, being intended for one of the learned professions. His own course, however, had been already determined on, and he commenced active life as an actor at Liverpool, after which he visited York and Edinburgh. At Liverpool he acted in a tragedy of his own composition, called 'Belisarius;' and soon after published a volume of 'Fugitive Pieces,' which, however, he sought to suppress. His appearance in London took place 30th September, 1783, at Drury Lane, when he performed 'Hamlet,' with extraordinary applause; though it was five years before he became leading tragedian. About that period, too, he succeeded to the management of the theatre, which he conducted till 1801, during which he restored some good old plays, and produced some original pieces, including a musical entertainment of his own, entitled 'Lodoiska.' Next year, he became the manager and the purchaser of a sixth share of Covent Garden theatre, but the destruction of the edifice by fire in 1809, caused him much trouble, which, after its rebuilding, was increased, in consequence of the prices being augmented, and the boxes arranged too exclusively for the accommodation of the aristocracy. Public disturbances, known by the name of the O. P. Riots, ensued, and continued for several nights. On his retirement from the stage, 23d July, 1807, Mr. Kemble was complimented with a public dinner, which was attended by persons of rank and talent. He died at Lausanne, in Switzerland, 26th February, 1823, of a paralytic attack. Mr. Kemble's style of acting was eminently regulated by art; his performances were premeditated, and as little as possible was left to natural impulse. This style was most suited to the artificial characters of the drama, such as Cato, Coriolanus, Hamlet, King John, Jaques, and Penruddock. In his different managements, Mr. Kemble brought his learning to bear on the business and decorations of the stage, which is, accordingly, indebted for some of its earliest reforms to him. But he preferred building his reputation on the old drama, to risking it in the production of novelty—the ill consequences of which mode of proceeding, ultimately resulted in the total fall of the two patent theatres, which are now superseded by smaller establishments. [J.A.H.]

KEMBLE, PRISCILLA, widow of the preceding, formerly wife of the actor Brereton, 1755-1845.

KEMENI, prince of Transylvania, 1660-1662.

KEMP, JOSEPH, a dist. composer, 1778-1824.

KEMP, J. T., a Dutch missionary, 1748-1811.

KEMPELLEN, WOLFGANG, Baron, a Hungarian dramatist and mechanician, inventor of the famous automaton chess-player, 1734-1804.

KEMPER, J. M., a Dutch juriscon., 1776-1824.

KEMPIS, THOMAS A, whose real surname was HEMMERKEN, or HAMMERLEIN, was born at Kempen near Cologne in 1380, was educated at the school founded by Gerhard Groote at Deventer, to which he was sent at the age of thirteen; entered seven years afterwards the convent of St. Agnes, formally assumed the monastic habit in 1406, and finally became the superior of the same establishment. His was an earnest practical piety, and his writings are deeply embued with his peculiar devotional spirit. A tinge of ascetic mysticism is very apparent in his so-called works. The work by which he is best known in this country is the 'Imitation of Christ,' (De Imitatione Christi,) which is but the title of the first book of a larger treatise, (De Contemptu Mundi). It is, however, suspected not to be of his composition, the probability being that the work was only translated by A Kempis, but in reality composed by the Chancellor Gerson of the university of Paris. Thomas A Kempis died in 1471, aged ninety-two; not one of those Titans who win immortality by intellectual prowess, but one of those humbler saints whose calm and meditative piety surrounds their memory with an undying fragrance. [J.E.]

KEN, TH., bp. of Bath and Wells, and one of the seven sent to the Tower by James II., 1637-1711.

KENDAL, G., a Calvinistic divine, died 1663.

KENDRICK, J., an Amer. navigator, d. 1800.

KENICIUS, P., arbp. of Upsala, 1555-1636.

KENNAWAY, SIR J., an East Indian officer and diplomatist, time of Tippoo sultan, 1758-1836.

KENNEDY, JAMES, a relig. founder of Scotland, bishop of St. Andrews, and lord chancellor, and one of the regency time of Jas. III., 1405-66.

KENNEDY, J., a chronologist, d. about 1770.

KENNEDY, J., a Scotch antiquarian, d. 1760.

KENNEDY, WILLIAM, a Scottish lawyer and antiq., an of the 'Annals of Aberdeen,' 1759-1836.

KENNET, WHITE, an English prelate, dist. as a political partizan in the time of Atterbury and Sacheverel, author of historical and antiquarian works, 1660-1728. His brother, BASIL, a learned divine and antiquarian, 1674-1714.

KENNETH, the first of the name, king of Scotland, 604-606; the second, reigned 823-854; the third, succeeded 978, assassinated 994.

KENNEY, J., an Irish dramatist, d. 1849.

KENNICOTT, BENJAMIN, an Eng. div., dist. as an Orient. scholar and biblical critic, 1718-83.

KENRICK, W., a miscellaneous wr., d. 1779.

KENT, EDWARD AUGUSTUS, duke of, fourth son of George III., and father of Queen Victoria, born 1767, commander of the British forces in North America 1799, governor of Gibraltar 1802, married to Victoria Maria Louisa, widow of the hereditary prince of Leiningen, and youngest daughter of the d. of Saxe-Coburg, 1818, d. 1820.

KENT, JAMES, was born at Winchester, in 1700, where at an early age, he was admitted into the choir of the cathedral under the tuition of Mr. Vaughan Richardson, then organist. He afterwards became one of the children of the Royal Chapel, where, under the care of Dr. Croft, he laid the foundation of his future greatness. The first situation which Kent obtained was organist of the chapel of Trinity College, Cambridge; and his next and last was organist of Winchester chapel and college, where he continued to his death, which occurred in 1776. As a composer of sacred music Kent's fame stands on a secure basis, and many of his anthems will take rank amongst the most sublime musical works of any age or country. [J.M.]

KENT, WILLIAM, a Eng. painte

KENYON, LLOYD, Lord, chief King's Bench, first distin. as cou George Gordon along with Mr. Erski

KEPLER, JOHN, a distinguishe was born at Wiel, in Wirtemberg, December, 1571. His father, Henr an officer in the army who had redu poverty by his extravagance. His erine Guldemar, gave premature b John Kepler, who was a sickly chi covering with difficulty from smal sent to school in 1577. Having bec his father was obliged to keep a tav dingen, and his son John was take to perform the functions of a s father's house. When he was in year, he was received into the monastery at Maulbron, established tion as preparatory for the universit where he was admitted as Bachelor returning to the school to compl course of study, he took his degre 1591, holding the second place in th While attending the mathematic Mæstlin, a disciple of Copernicus, h opinions of his teacher, and wrot prove that the primary motion wa the rotation of the earth. In 159 willingly made to accept the astron Gratz, though he knew little of the was thus forced to study astronomy he devoted all his leisure time, and energy to study the size and the planets, and their orbits. Findi law in the planetary distances, he m attempts of the wildest and mo character, but though he ventur them in 1596 in his 'Prodromu graphical Dissertation,' he obtai results, and was satisfied with the li which his ingenuity had procured 1597 he made a foolish marriage widow, and in addition to pecuniary which this involved him, he was o into Hungary to escape from the the catholics. Though he was so his professorship by the states of not occupy it long. Tycho, whom Prague in 1600, induced him to bec tant, but he was not fairly settle office till he was attacked with a and embroiled in a quarrel with Kepler came to Prague in 1601, Ty him to the emperor, who gave hi Imperial Mathematician on the cond ing Tycho in his calculations. T work was the computation of the Rud the expense of which was defraye Upon the death of Tycho, in 160 ceded him as principal mathem emperor, with a handsome salary, p imperial treasury, and partly from Silesia. In 1606, Kepler publish ment to Vitellio,' in which he treat part of astronomy, and had very n on the law of refraction, afterwards Snellius. In 1611, he published an admirable work, which laid the the science of optics. In this work he gives the theory of the telescope,—describes the astronomical one with two convex lenses,—expounds the spherical aberration of lenses, and the law of total reflexion at the second surfaces of bodies. The work, however, on which his fame rests, is his 'New Astronomy, or Commentaries on the Motions of Mars,' published in 1609. In this work he proves that Mars moves in an elliptical orbit, in one of the foci of which the sun is placed, and that the Radius Vector, or the line joining the planet and the sun describes equal areas in equal times. These two great discoveries, the first made in physical astronomy, he extended to all the planets in the solar system, and it was through them that Newton, Hooke, Halley, and Wren, independently arrived at the great law of the diminution of gravity with the square of the distance. In the midst of the studies which led Kepler to these fine discoveries, he was harassed with pecuniary difficulties which were the bane of his existence. His salary was ever in arrears, and the treasury of Rudolph was always empty. Upon the death of the emperor, however, in 1612, Kepler's arrears were paid. Mathias, the brother and successor of Rudolph, re-appointed him imperial mathematician, and he was permitted to accept of the professorship of mathematics at Linz, in Austria. He had lost his wife and one of his children by small-pox in 1611, and his family now consisted of a daughter born in 1602, and a son born in 1607. He married a second time in 1615, and added to his family three sons and two daughters, who, along with their mother, survived him. About this time, Kepler was summoned to the diet at Ratisbon, to give his opinion on the reformation of the calendar, a subject upon which he published a short essay. His pension was again in arrears, and in order to support his family he was obliged to compose what he calls 'a vile prophesying almanack,' which, he adds, 'is scarcely more reputable than begging, unless from its saving the emperor's credit, who abandons me entirely, and would suffer me to perish with hunger.' In 1617, there appeared one of the most interesting of his works, entitled 'The Harmonies of the World.' It is dedicated to James I. of England, and is remarkable as containing his celebrated law that the squares of the periodic times of the planets are as the cubes of their distances. This law occurred to him on the 8th March, 1618, but from a blunder in his calculations he rejected it. Having discovered his error on the 15th May, he recognized with transport the absolute truth of a principle which for seventeen years had been the object of his incessant pursuit. He was almost frantic with joy; 'the die is cast' he exclaimed, 'the book is written to be read, either now or by posterity, I care not which. It may well wait a century for a reader, as God has waited 6,000 years for an observer.' In the same year Kepler published the three first books of his 'Epitome of the Copernican Astronomy,' the fourth, fifth, sixth, and seventh appearing in 1622. In 1620, Sir Henry Wotton, the English ambassador at Venice, visited Kepler while passing through Germany. He urged the astronomer to take up his residence in England, assuring him of a welcome and an honourable reception; but neither the welcome nor the reception, which is all the encouragement he would have got, would have released him from his pecuniary difficulties. 'If the imperial mathematician, therefore,' as Sir David Brewster (Martyrs of Science, p. 243) has remarked, 'had no other assurance of a comfortable home in England than that of Sir Henry Wotton, he acted a wise part in distrusting it, and we rejoice that the sacred name of Kepler was thus withheld from the long list of distinguished characters whom England has starved and dishonoured.' Notwithstanding his own pecuniary difficulties, the emperor Ferdinand, in 1622, ordered the whole of Kepler's arrears to be paid, including those due by Rudolph and Mathias, and he supplied also the necessary funds for completing the Rudolphine Tables. The wars of the reformation, however, interfered with this and with every peaceful pursuit. Kepler's residence at Linz was blockaded by the catholic peasantry, and his library sealed up by the Jesuits; and it was not till 1628 that the Rudolphine Tables, founded on the observations of Tycho, and his own laws, appeared at Ulm in a folio volume. The Grand Duke of Tuscany sent him a gold chain in testimony of his approbation of this great work, and Albert Wallenstein, duke of Friedland, munificently invited him to reside at Sagan, in Silesia. With the emperor's permission he accepted this offer, took his family to Sagan in 1629, and by the duke's influence obtained a professorship in the university of Rostock. Finding it difficult in this remote locality to obtain payment of his imperial pension, the arrears of which were 8,000 crowns, he went to the imperial assembly at Ratisbon, to obtain them. The vexation which the failure of this attempt occasioned, and the fatigue of his journey, threw him into a catarrhal fever, which was accompanied with an imposthume in his brain, the result of excessive study. Medical skill failed, and he died on 5th November, o. s., 1631, in the sixtieth year of his age. His remains were interred in St. Peter's churchyard, at Ratisbon, and on his tombstone was placed an inscription written by himself. This monument was destroyed in the wars which desolated Germany, and it was not till 1803 that the prince bishop of Constance erected a handsome monumental temple near the place of his interment, surmounted by a marble bust of Kepler. Between 1594 and 1630, Kepler published 33 separate works, and he left behind him 22 volumes of MSS., four of which contained his correspondence. The correspondence was published by Hansch, in 1718, but no part of the other MSS. now in the library of the Imperial Academy of Sciences at St. Petersburg, have been thought worthy of publication. See Mr. Drinkwater Bethune's Life of Kepler, and his life in Sir David Brewster's Martyrs of Science, second edit. [D.B.]

KEPPEL, Augustus, an English admiral, son of William, earl of Albemarle, distinguished in action with the French off Ushant, 1725-1786.

KERALIO, L. Felix Guinement De, a Fr. savant, historian of the war between Russia and Turkey, 1731-1793.

KERCKRING, T., a Dutch anatomist, d. 1693.

KERESSTUNG, Aloys J. De, a Hungarian savant, au. of a 'Comp. of Univ. Hist.,' 1763-1825.

KERGUELIN-TREMAREC, YVES JOSEPH DE, a French navigator and naval hist., 1745-97.

KERI, F. B., a Hungarian historian, d. 1769.

KERI, J., a Hungarian philosopher, died 1685.

KERL, J. C., a German organist, 17th century.

KERN, VINC. DE, a Ger. surg. wr., 1760-1829.

KERR, ROBERT, a surgeon of Edinburgh, distinguished as a naturalist and historian, died 1814.

KERRICK, THOMAS, an English divine, au. of 'Observations on Gothic Architecture,' d. 1828.

KERSAINT, ARMAND GUY SIMON, Count De, a French naval officer and public writer, attached to the Girondins, executed 1793.

KERSEY, JOHN, an Eng. mathemat., 17th ct.

KESSEL, JOHN VAN, a Flem. pain., 1626-1690. His son, FERDINAND, also a painter, 1660-1696. His nephew, NICHOLAS, same profes., 1684-1741.

KESSEL, T. VAN, a Dutch engraver, b. 1620.

KESTNER, C. W., a Ger. med. wr., 1694-1747.

KETEL, C., a Dutch painter, 1548-1602.

KETT, HENRY, an English divine, 1761-1825.

KETT, WILLIAM, leader of an insurrection in the reign of Edward VI.; defeat. by Warwick, 1549.

KETTILMUNDESON, MATTS, or MATHIAS, administrator of Swed. on the flight of Birger, 1317.

KETTLEWELL, JOHN, a pious and learned div., au. of 'Measure of Chr. Obedience,' 1653-95.

KEULEN, J. VAN, a D. pain., 1580, d. 1656.

KEULEN, J. VAN, a D. map engr., last cent.

KEULEN, L. VAN, a D. mathemat., d. 1610.

KEYM, PAUL, a mystic writer, on the principles of Jacob Bœhmen, one of a numerous class who have treated of mystic subjects scholastically, without the experience of intuition and temptation. He is briefly alluded to by Poiret in his epistle, De Auctoribus Mysticis, § 47. [E.R.]

KEYSLER, J. J., a Ger. antiquary, 1689-1743.

KEYZER, A. and H. DE, D. painters, 17th ct.

KHADIJAH, first wife of Mahomet, died 628.

KHAIN-BEG, a pacha of Egypt, died 1522.

KHAISANG, a Chinese emperor, 1281-1311.

KHALED, an Arabian general, surnamed by Mahomet 'The Sword of God,' dist. 630-642.

KHOSROU, king of Persia. See CHOSROES.

KICKX, J., a Flem. botanist, 1772-1831.

KIDD, SAMUEL, a divine and Oriental scholar, au. of 'Illustra. of Chinese Symbols,' 1801-1843.

KIDDER, R., a learned prelate, died 1703.

KIEFFER, J. D., a Fr. Orientalist, 1767-1833.

KIEN-LONG, emperor of China in the time of Lord Macartney's embassy, a poet and patron of literature, born 1710, reigned 1735-1800.

KIERINGS, A., a Dutch painter, 1590-1646.

KIERMAN, G., a Swed. statesman, last cent.

KIERNANDER, JOHN ZECHARIAH, a Swedish missionary to the East Indies, 1711-1799.

KIESEWETTEN, CHRISTOPHER GOTTFRIED, a Ger. musician, dist. as a violin player, d. 1827.

KIESEWETTER, J. G. C. CHRISTOPHER, a German philologist and philosopher of the school of Kant, died about the end of last century.

KILBYE, R., an English divine, died 1617.

KILLIGREW, CATHERINE, wife of Sir H. Killigrew, an ambassador, dist. for her skill in the learned languages and poetry, abt. 1530-1600.

KILLIGREW, MARGARET, second wife of William Cavendish, duke of Newcastle, au. of the life of her husband, and 'Miscellanies,' d. 1673.

KILLIGREW, WILLIAM, a courtier and dramatic writer of the reign of Charles II., 1605-93. His brother, THOMAS, a famous humourist, and favourite of Charles II., author of several plays, and some time political resident at Vienna, 1611-82. HENRY, a third brother, also a writer of plays, and chaplain to James, duke of York, born 1612, date of his death unknown. ANNE, wife of the latter, dist. for her beauty, her unblemished virtue, and her skill in hist. painting, au. of poems, d. 1685.

KILMAINE, C. J., a French general, 1754-99.

KIMBER, ISAAC, a dissenting minister, known as a biographical and historical writer, 1692-1758. His son, EDWARD, author of a 'History of England,' and miscellaneous works, died 1769.

KIMCHI, DAVID, a famous rabbi of Spain, in high repute among all denominations of biblical scholars, as a Scripture commentator and grammarian, was born at Narbonne, where he passed the greater part of his life, towards the end of the 12th century. His father, JOSEPH KIMCHI, who flourished about 1160, and his brother, MOSES, were eminent Oriental scholars, and expositors of Scripture, to which character the latter added that of a moralist; but neither of them acquired a reputation comparable with that of rabbi David. The respect in which he is held by the Jews is greatly enhanced by his defence of Maimonides, as arbitrator between the French and Spanish Jews in 1232. His philological works furnished Buxtorf with the materials for his 'Thesaurus' and 'Lexicon;' and his commentaries have been largely incorporated with the Bibles of Venice and Basle. For the catalogue raisonné of his writings, which include a Talmudic Dictionary, see the 'Bibliotheca Hebraica' of John Ch. Wolf, published at Hamburgh, 1715-1733. Kimchi died in Provençe at an exceeding old age, 1240. [E.R.]

KING, EDWARD, a youthful poet, who was drowned on his passage to Ireland in 1637, and whose fate is cel. by Milton in his poem of Lycidas.

KING, EDWARD, a biblical critic and antiquary, author of 'Munimenta Antiqua,' 'Remarks on the Signs of the Times,' 'Hymns,' &c., 1724-1807.

KING, GREGORY, an engraver and heraldic painter, author of 'Natural and Political Observations and Conclusions upon the State and Condition of England,' and distinguished for the part he took in state ceremonials, 1648-1712.

KING, JOHN, D.D., a controversial divine of the Church of England, 1652-1732. His son, of the same name, a physician, 1696-1738.

KING, JOHN, a learned prelate, distinguished as a preacher and speaker in the Star Chamber, about 1559-1621. His son, HENRY, chaplain to Charles I., and dean of Rochester, author of Sermons and Poems, 1591-1669. JOHN, brother of the latter, a dignitary of the church, and author of Sermons, &c., died 1639.

KING, JOHN GLEN, an eccles. antiq., d. 1787.

KING, PETER, nephew of the illustrious John Locke, distinguished for his ecclesiastical learning, born 1669, lord chancellor 1725, died 1733.

KING, PETER, great grandson of the preceding, distinguished for his speeches and writings on subjects of political economy, 1775-1833.

KING, CAPTAIN PHILIP PARKER, made four voyages (1817-1822) to the coast of Australia; and added greatly to our knowledge of the intertropical portions of that continent.

KING, RICHARD, a polemical writer, 1749-1810.
KING, SIR RICH., a naval officer, 1771-1834.
KING, RUFUS, an Am. statesman, 1755-1827.
KING, THOMAS, a cel. dramatic wr. and actor, author of 'Love at First Sight,' &c., 1730-1805.
KING, WILLIAM, LL.D., a humorous writer of remarkable fertility in the reign of Queen Anne, famous for his satires on the characters and events of the day, 1663-1712.
KING, WILLIAM, an elegant writer, 1685-1763.
KING, DR. WILLIAM, successively dean of St. Patrick's, bishop of Derry, and archbishop of Dublin, was born at Antrim in Ireland, but descended from a Scottish family, in 1650, and commenced his career, as a divine, as chaplain to the archbishop of Tuam in 1676. He died in 1729, and is now chiefly remembered for his treatise, 'De Origine Mali,' on the origin of evil, which produced animadversions from Bayle and Leibnitz, which belongs, in fact, together with his 'Discourse on Predestination,' &c., to a widely-extended controversy on the attributes of God, continued through many years at the commencement of last century, and including the names of the most eminent churchmen and freethinkers of the day. Archbishop King did not reply to the censures of Bayle in his life-time; but, after his death, answers were found in MS., and were embodied in the notes upon a new edition of the work, published by Edmund Law, who was opposed to him on his fundamental principle of analogy. The endeavour of the Archbishop had been to reconcile the existence of evil with the goodness of God, without supposing a source of evil co-eternal with Deity; and his method of argument was to represent the divine attributes as essentially different from the moral attributes of the human mind, which are used as their signs; while the opposite writers held them to be the same, but infinitely greater. The key to this controversy will be found in Clissold's lectures on the 'Connection between Theology, Psychology, and Physiology.' [E.R.]
KINGSBOROUGH, EDWARD, Viscount, a fellow of the Antiquarian Society, au. of a valuable work on 'The Antiquities of Mexico,' 1795-1837.
KINGSMILL, ANDREW, a puritan divine and moralist, 1538-1569. His relation, THOMAS, professor of Hebrew at Oxford, from 1569 to 1579.
KINGSTON, ELIZABETH CHUDLEIGH, duchess of, a profligate woman of the court of George III., 1720-1788.
KINNAIRD, THE HON. DOUGLAS, known as a friend of Byron, and a patron of letters, 1786-1830.
KINSKI, F. J., an Austrian general, 1739-1805.
KIŒPING, N. M., a Swed. trav., 1630-1667.
KIPLING, THOMAS, dean of Peterborough, a professor of divinity at Cambridge, author of a pamphlet on the Thirty-nine articles, &c., d. 1822.
KIPPING, H., a German philologist, died 1678.
KIPPIS, ANDREW, D.D., an English Socinian minister, kn. as a biographical and miscellaneous writer, founder of the 'New Annual Register,' and author of a 'History of Knowledge, Learning, and Taste in Great Britain.' The best known of his works is the 'Biographia Britannica,' 1725-1795.
KIRBY, JOHN JOSHUA, an artist patronised by George III., author of 'The Perspective of Architecture,' and father of the celebrated Mrs. Trimmer, 1716-1774.

KIRBY, REV. WILLIAM, an eminent entomologist, was born in Suffolk in 1759. He died in 1850. He was educated at Cambridge, and in the year 1782, was admitted into holy orders. In 1796, he became rector of Barham, having done the duties of curate of that parish for fourteen years. He first studied botany, and while collecting the plants of the neighbourhood in which he lived, he had his mind directed to the study of entomology. A little 'lady bird' or 'lady cow' (Coccinella 22 punctata), one day attracted his attention on the window, and his admiration was so much excited, that he began to collect insects with as much zeal as he had already done plants. He has published many valuable papers and memoirs on various entomological subjects, in the 'Linnæan Transactions' and 'Zoological Journal'—but his great fame as an entomologist is derived from his 'Monographia Apum Angliæ,' or History of English Bees—his 'Introduction to Entomology,' in conjunction with Mr. Spence, and his description of the insects in the 'Fauna boreali Americana' of Sir John Richardson. The first of these works at once stamped him as one of the best entomologists of the day; and had he written nothing else, his fame would have been established. The second has been translated into German and French, and has gone through six or seven editions in this country, and combines the popular form with great scientific merit. Mr. Kirby conscientiously performed his duties as a clergyman; he was beloved by his parishioners, and enjoyed the esteem and friendship of most of the naturalists of his own country, as well as of the continent of Europe and America. He was honorary president of the Entomological Society of London, fellow of the Royal, Linnæan, Zoological and Geological Societies, and honorary member of several societies abroad. His life was prolonged to the venerable age of ninety-one. [W.B.]
KIRCH, GOTTFRIED, a celebrated German astronomer, 1639-1710. His wife, MARY MARGARET WINCKELMANN, assistant of her husband, and author of astronomical works, 1670-1720. CHRISTIAN FREDERIC, son of the preceding, an astronomical observer and author, 1694-1740.
KIRCHER, ATHANASIUS, generally called 'Father Kircher,' was a Jesuit of great learning and varied abilities, born at Geysen, near Fulda, in Germany, 1601; died at Rome, in the situation of a professor of Hebrew and mathematics, 1680. His accomplishments seem to have ranged from the lowest to the highest point of the scale of human ingenuity; including many useful discoveries in his experimental philosophy, and some of the most abstruse subjects of inquiry in his speculations. His works, which were written in Latin, consist of thirty-six volumes, twenty-two of which are in folio, and nearly all the rest in 4to. In such a mass of writing and learned research, it may be supposed there is a good deal of trifling import; but in his case, as in others of a similar kind, the extent of his labours has been the greatest obstacle to the due appreciation of them. Kircher's favourite subject was the hieroglyphics of Egypt, and the school of Champollion glory over his dark guesses, as so many detected crimes against their new canon of criticism. It may be said, however, that he made the best he could of his traditional and other materials used scholastically; collecting with much labour, and putting together with marvellous ingenuity, the scattered notices which he found in ancient writers, and sparing no pains in making his own observations. Besides his literary and professional labours, Kircher travelled in China. He also collected a valuable museum of antiquities, which he bequeathed to the college of Rome. [E.R.]

KIRCHER, CONRAD, a Germ. divine, 17th ct.

KIRCHER, H., a Ger. missionary, 1608-1676.

KIRKALDY, W., a partizan of Mary Stuart, queen of Scots, executed at Edinburgh 1573.

KIRKLAND, T., a medical author, 1721-1798.

KIRKPATRICK, JAS., an East Indian officer, known for his works in Oriental learning, d. 1812.

KIRMANI, an Arabian author, 14th century.

KIRSTEN, KIRCHSTEIN, or KIRSTENIUS, G., a German physician and botanist, 1613-1660.

KIRSTEN, M., a philologist, 1620-1678.

KIRSTEN, PETER, an Arabian scholar, physician to Queen Christina, b. in Prussia 1577-1640.

KIRWAN, RICHARD, born in Galway in the middle of the last century, died 1812. A distinguished chemist, was originally, it is said, destined for the bar, but ultimately prosecuted chemistry and mineralogy. He published a work on the 'Temperatures of Different Latitudes,' 'Elements of Mineralogy,' 'Essay on the Analysis of Mineral Substances,' 'Essay on Phlogiston,' 'Essay on Geology,' 'on Manures,' &c. It was his work on 'Phlogiston' which gained him most notoriety. It was distinguished by the able defence which he made of a bad cause; but which was thoroughly refuted by Lavoisier, who succeeded in banishing for ever this myth from the field of chemistry. He was undoubtedly the first chemist who appreciated the importance of inorganic substances as manures, and who advocated a knowledge of the constitution of minerals as being the only criterion of their true position in nature. [R.D.T.]

KIRWAN, W. B., an Irish divine, celebrated for his pulpit oratory, dean of Killala after his conversion to protestantism, 1754-1805.

KITCHENER, WM., an eccentric physician, author of 'The Cook's Oracle,' &c., 1775-1827.

KITE, CHARLES, a medical author, died 1811.

KLAPROTH, HEINRICH JULIUS VON, son of the famous chemist of that name, distinguished as an Oriental scholar and critic, was born at Berlin in 1783. He abandoned the pursuits of his father, after making considerable progress in them, for the fascinating studies connected with the history and antiquities of the East; and as early as 1802, commenced the 'Asiatic Magazine' at Dresden. In 1805 he accompanied a Russian embassy to China; and in the three years, 1807-1810, was employed by the Academy of St. Petersburg in exploring the Caucasian mountains. On returning to Germany in 1812, he was appointed professor of the Asiatic languages at Berlin. In 1815 he visited Paris with the allies, and was so charmed with its attractions, that France became his adopted country, and the remainder of his days were devoted to the propagation of Asiatic literature, including the organization of the Asiatic Society, in that capital. The works of Klaproth embrace nearly all the subjects of interest connected with Eastern learning,—races, languages, monuments, and general history. We may m
French, a Criticism of Ch Chemistry translated from tation on the Roots of the his editorial labours on Died at Paris 1835.

KLAPROTH, MARTIN
gerode, 1743, died 1817.
laboratories at Quedlinbu without any very distingui roth became in his twenty-Valentine Rose, who, howeve
he established a laboratory
Berlin, and afterwards, w established, he became att was one of incessant la volumes, with materials fo of upwards of 200 analyses
cuted with such accuracy, the present day, with all t quent improvements, are was the discoverer of uranin (although anticipated by anticipated by Crawford an oxide of cerium, which he contributions to processes were invaluable; probably developed more of the char stances. Klaproth was selfish, and exhibited the his character, by the hon bestowed on the education lentine Rose. He was also religious principles, which and enabled him to avoid side, and infidelity on the KLASS, FRED. CHR., a d. abt. 1800. His brother

KLAUBER, J. S., a G

KLEBER, JEAN BAP
of the French revolution, vices in Egypt, where he

KLEIN, B., a Germa

KLEIN, E. F., a Ger

KLEIN, F. A., a Ger

KLEIN, G. M., a Ge

KLEIN, J. T., a Ge

KLEIST, E. C. Von

KLEIST, H. Von,

KLEIST VON NOL
H. FERDINAND EMI
sian general, 1763-18

KLENKER, J. F.,

KLINGEMANN,

KLINGENSTIER
philosopher and ma
upon Optics, an edit

KLINGER, F. M.

KLINGSTET, C

KLINTBERG, C

KLOCKER, D.,

KLOPSTOCK, was highly celebra
a new direction fr
the greater vers was born in 172
Saxony. After studying theolog views, and devo

hifted his residence from place to place, reg a considerable time at Copenhagen, whither ad been invited with a pension; and the last y years of his life were passed at Hamburg, re he died in 1803. His greatest work, the ed epic called 'The Messiah,' was published ly in 1748, but not completed till 1773. Its ned dignity, its overflow of feeling, and its icidity of diction, have long ceased to receive admiration which was once lavished on them.
odes, especially those of a religious cast, are much valued by his countrymen, in spite of frequent obscurity. He made himself known ectably also by philological writings. [W.S.]

LOPSTOCK, MARGARET, wife of the pre-g, author of a tragedy entitled 'The Death
bel,' and 'Letters from the Dead,' d. 1758.

LOSE, F. J., an English composer, d. 1830.

LOTZ, C. A., a German critic, 1738-1771.

LUBER, J. L., a Ger. jurisconsult, 1762-1840.

LUGEL, G. S., a Ger. mathema., 1739-1812.

LUIT, A., a Dutch historian, 1735-1807.

LUPFEL, E., a Ger. theologian, 1733-1811.

METH, D., a Hun. astronomer, 1783-1825.

NAPP, G. C., a Ger. theologian, 1753-1825.

NAPTON, GEO., an Eng. pain., 1698-1788.

NARSKI, S., a Polish savant, 1700-1775.

NEIP, CHR. H., a Germ. painter, 1748-1825.

NELLER, SIR GODFREY, a famous portrait r, who was born at Lubeck about 1648, and ned great distinction in England in the reigns arles II., James II., and William III. Many s portraits are at Hampton Court. He died esperous circumstances 1723.

NIAJENIN, J. B., a Russian poet, 1742-91.

NIBB, REV. WILLIAM, distinguished for his ons in the cause of negro emancipation, was in 1800. He arrived in Jamaica in 1824, to r as teacher of a baptist school, and in 1829
e pastor of the mission church at Falmouth.
efforts to improve their condition secured the gratitude and affection of the poor negroes, provoked the jealousy and hostility of the ers. After suffering many indignities in ica, he returned to England to advocate his rite cause, and his heart-stirring appeals in r of total emancipation no doubt had their e of influence in inducing the British legis-e to pass the great measure of 1833. He afterwards returned to Jamaica, and died llow fever in 1845.

NIGHT, E., a comic actor, 1774-1826.

NIGHT, G., a speculative philosopher, last c.

NIGHT, HENRY GALLY, M.P., distinguished man of taste and letters, author of 'Ecclesial Architecture of Italy,' 'Architectural Tour Normandy,' and many works in classical and literature, 1786-1846.

NIGHT, RICHARD PAYNE, a gentleman of rse, distinguished for his taste, his knowledge assical literature and antiquities, and as a er of the arts, author of 'A Discourse on the hip of Priapus, in Sicily,' 'An Essay on the Alphabet,' &c., 1750-1824.

NIGHT, S., a learned divine, died 1746.

NIGHT, TH., a dramatic writer, died 1820.

NIGHT, TH. AND., brother of R. P. Knight, n veg. physiology and horticulture, 1758-1838.

NIGHTON, HY., an old chronicler, 15th ct.

KNIGHTON, SIR W., a physician and courtier finally private secretary to George IV., d. 1836.

KNITTEL, F. A., a Ger. minister, 1721-1792.

KNOES, O. A., a Swedish savant, died 1804.

KNOLLES, R., an English historian, d. 1610.

KNOLLES, SIR ROBERT, a famous warrior of the reign of Edward III., called by French historians Canolle; he is said to have built Rochester bridge with his spoils acquired in France, 1317-1407.

KNOLLIS, SIR F., an Eng. statesman, d. 1596.

KNORR, G. W., a German engraver, 1705-61.

KNORR-A-RUSENORTH, CHRISTIAN, a famous Oriental scholar and cabalistic wr., 1636-89.

KNOTT, ED., a learned Jesuit, 1580-1656.

KNOWLER, W., an English divine, 1699-1767.

KNOWLES, T., a learned divine, 1723-1802.

KNOWLTON, T., an antiquarian, 1692-1782.

KNOX, JOHN, a tradesman of London, author of 'A Systematic View of Scotland,' written from his own observations, which had for their object the settlement of new towns in connection with a herring fishery on the N. E. coast of Scotland, d. 1790.

KNOX, JOHN, was born at Gifford in East Lothian in 1505. In his boyhood he attended the grammar school of Haddington, and in the year 1522 he was sent by his father to the university of Glasgow, and the name of Johannes Knox stands among the incorporati of that year. His preceptor was Mair, or Major, at that time professor of philosophy and theology, who removed in the following year to St. Andrews, whither Knox seems to have followed him, and where he taught the current philosophy. Before his twenty-fifth year Knox was ordained to the priesthood. But his examination of popish theology as usually taught did not satisfy him, and from the writings of Jerome and Augustine he turned to the study of the Scriptures themselves. By degrees he renounced scholastic theology as useless and unsound; and about the year 1535, his mind began that decided process of scrutiny and repudiation which ended in his withdrawal from St. Andrews, and the vengeful arm of Cardinal Beaton, and in his formal avowal of protestantism about the year 1542. He soon found an asylum at Langniddrie, in the house of Hugh Douglas, to whose sons he acted for a short time as tutor. The principles of the reformation had now been spreading for some time — the stake had been consuming its victims—the murder of Cardinal Beaton had produced an immense excitement, the conspirators still held the castle of St. Andrews, and as it was reckoned a place of safety, Knox and his pupils took refuge in it at Easter, in the year 1547.
Here he taught and exhorted, and being called to the ministry, exercised also the functions of a Christian pastor, and solemnly dispensed for the first time in public in Scotland the ordinance of the Lord's Supper, after the primitive and protestant mode. But in the month of June, a French fleet came to the assistance of the Regent Arran, invested the castle, and forced it to capitulate.
Knox and some others were transported to Rouen, confined on board the galleys, and loaded with chains. After a severe and unhealthy imprisonment of nineteen months, he was liberated in February, 1549, and repaired to England, was at once recommended to the English council, and sent by Cranmer to preach in Berwick. For two years he continued there, labouring with characteristic ardour, exposing the delusions of popery with no unsparing hand, and gaining hosts of converts to the cause of the reformation. Tonstall, bishop of Durham, cited him to Newcastle, and the undaunted Knox delivered a public vindication in presence of the bishop and the learned priests of his cathedral, and so increased his fame, that the privy council in London appointed him one of King Edward's chaplains, with a salary of £40 a-year. He was consulted also about some changes in the Book of Common Prayer, and general form of service for the English Church. His plain speech in the north of England made him many enemies, so that he was summoned to appear at London, where he had already declined a living, and commanded to vindicate himself; and he was there in full enjoyment of the royal patronage, when King Edward died, 6th July, 1553. After the accession of Mary he left the capital, preached in various parts of the country, and was married at Berwick to Marjory Bowes, a young lady to whom he had been long and warmly attached. Finding himself in increasing jeopardy, he left the kingdom and landed at Dieppe, on the 20th January, 1554; set out the next month and travelled through France to Switzerland, was cordially received by the leading divines of the Helvetic churches, returned to Dieppe in order to gain information from his native land; went back to Geneva and won the friendship of Calvin; was again at Dieppe to learn still more of his family, and the cause of truth in Scotland; took charge for a brief time of a disturbed church at Frankfort, revisited Geneva, and recrossed the channel in 1555. After visiting his wife at Berwick, he preached in Edinburgh and various parts of the country, patronised by many of the nobility and gentry; dispensed the Lord's

[Knox's Pulpit at St. Andrews.]

Supper in Ayrshire, the region of the Scottish Lollards; was in consequence of his zealous labours ordered to sist himself before a convention of the clergy, in the church of the Blackfriars at Edinburgh, but the summons was set aside, and the 'diet deserted.' Being about this time chosen pastor of the English congregation at with his family departed for Switz remained in Geneva for the two follo The English version, usually called Bible, was made at this time by exiles, and here, too, Knox blew 'The of the Trumpet against the Monstrou of Women.' A series of changes fa the reformation had in the meanwhile place in Scotland, the protestants multiplied, the prospect of coming had banded them together, and Kno invitation, landed at Leith 2d May, sooner was it known to the terrified that the ardent reformer had returne was proclaimed an outlaw. Joinin brethren, he repaired to Perth, an zealously against idolatry, while the the Queen Regent, and the accidenta priest so enraged the mob, that they several religious houses and churches the altars, and defaced the pictures This tumult, the origin of which has misrepresented, Knox distinctly ascri 'rascal multitude.' The Queen Rege her host to quell these riots; and the leaders, aware of her ultimate desig army in self-defence, but a treaty pr hostile engagement. The 'lords of t tion' were now alarmed into activity. down to St. Andrews, and soon, as t his instructions, the popish worship wa abolished, and the church stripped at idolatrous symbols. This example w but not as peacefully followed in many of the kingdom; and so there per valuable works of art, which had be by their application to superstitiou When his party had obtained tempor sion of Edinburgh, Knox was chosen the city, but he retired with the prote on the approach of the regent, made tour, and preached in many of the l After being formally ordained at Ed 1560, he pursued with ceaseless zea of reformation: a Confession had b drawn up, a Book of Discipline was the organization of the church was so that the first General Assembly of the Scotland was held at Edinburgh, December, 1560. No sooner had Q arrived in Scotland, than she had a lo with the stern reformer, after a sermo offended her. This was followed meetings, but to no purpose. Knox's this time were bold, defiant, and tongue was a match for Mary's s was accused of high treason, but spite of all the malignant influenc and court. After being about thr widower, he married in March, 1564 daughter of Lord Ochiltree, and co the royal blood of Scotland. His the abbot of Crossraguel about thi familiar to most readers. The refo vered amidst growing difficulties—the the queen with Darnley, and its mel sequences—the attempt to restore assasination of Rizzio—his own ishment, and the queen's refusal of permission for him to return to Edinburgh. Darnley was murdered—Mary wedded Bothwell—soon resigned in favour of her son, appointed the earl of Murray regent during his minority, and fled to England —the good regent was assassinated, but Knox still kept his post at Edinburgh. Yet the regent's death, and his own multifarious anxieties and labours during these critical times preyed upon his constitution, and in October, 1570, he was struck with apoplexy. In the course of a few weeks he was able to preach again, but not with his wonted vigour. In the meantime the queen's party gained strength by the weakness of Knox, the abilities of Maitland, and the defection of Kircaldy of Grange; and when the civil war broke out he retired to St. Andrews, still carrying on by tongue, pen, and counsel, the great work to which his life had been devoted. During the cessation of arms he returned to Edinburgh, and shone out in his pristine style when, on hearing of the massacre of St. Bartholomew, he denounced in glowing terms Charles IX. of France. His grief, however, soon seized his emaciated frame, and after a very brief period of increasing debility, he died 24th November, 1572. Two days afterwards his body was interred in the churchyard of St. Giles. The funeral was attended by an immense concourse of weeping and afflicted people, as well as of the resident nobility, when Regent Morton pronounced over him the well-known eulogium, 'There lies he who never feared the face of man.' Knox was of small stature, and by no means of a robust constitution. His character has been pourtrayed very differently by various writers. Indiscriminate eulogy would here as much out of place as sweeping censure would be unjust. The reformer was cast upon an age of violence and change, and he needed a correspondent energy. Elegance and delicacy of language were not common at the period, and would have been crushed in the tumult. Knox wrote and wrote his honest thoughts in transparent style, in terse and homely simplicity, and with less of uncouthness and solecism than might be imagined. He was obliged to appear not like a scholar in the graceful folds of an academic toga, but as a warrior clad in mail, and armed at all points for self-defence and aggression. It must have been a mighty mind that could leave its impress on an entire nation, and on succeeding ages. He was inflexible in maintaining what he deemed to be right, and intrepid in defending it. His life was menaced several times, but he moved not from the path of duty. The genial affections of home, friendship, and kindred, often stirred his heart amidst all his sternness and decision. In short, he resembled the hills of his native country, which with their tall and splintered precipices, their shaggy sides, and wild sublimity of aspect, often conceal in their bosom green valleys, clear streams, and luxuriant pastures. [J.E.]

KNOX, ROBERT, an East Indian officer, au. of 'A History of the Island of Ceylon,' pub. 1681.

KNOX, VICESIMUS, a clergyman of the Church of England, distinguished as a theological writer and essayist, was born in 1752; and, though educated at Oxford, received his degree of D.D. from Philadelphia. He was considered an eloquent preacher, and much in vogue for preaching charity sermons, &c.; died 1821. His son, Rev. THOMAS KNOX, D.D., succeeded him as master of Tunbridge grammar school, and in the rectories of Rumwell, and Ramsden Crays, in Essex. Died suddenly, 1843.

KNUPFER, N., a German painter, 1603-1660.

KNUTSSON, TORKEL, grand marshal and senator of Sweden, beheaded at Stockholm 1305.

KNUTZEN, or KNUZEN, MATHIAS, a German fanatic and atheist, in great notoriety about 1674.

KNUTZEN, M., a Ger. philosopher, 1713-51.

KOB, J., a German philosopher, 1598-1661.

KOCH, C. W., a native of Strasburgh, distin. for his researches in middle age antiquities, and author of 'The Revolutions of Europe,' 1737-1813.

KOECHER, H. F., a Ger. Orient., 1747-1792.

KOECK, P., a Flemish engraver, 1490-1550.

KOEGLER, J., a Jesuit missionary, 1680-1746.

KOEHLER, J. B., a German critic, 1742-1802.

KOEHLER, JOHN DAVID, a learned German, author of laborious works in history and archæology, 1684-1755. JOHN TOBIAS, one of his fifteen sons, a learned numismatist, 1720-1767.

KOENIG, E., a naturalist of Basle, 1658-1731. His son, of the same name, a mathem., 1678-1752.

KOENIG, F., a Ger. mechanician, died 1833.

KOENIG, G. M., a German savant, author of a Latin Biographical Dictionary, &c., 1616-1699.

KOENIG, H. G., a Ger. bibliopole, 1697-1757.

KOENIG, J. G., a dist. Ger. botanist, 1728-85.

KOENIG, S. H., a Swiss theologian, 1670-1750. His son, DANIEL, translator of Arbuthnot on Ancient Coins, killed by a mob at the age of twenty-two, 1725-1747. SAMUEL, brother of the preceding, prof. of philosophy and ethics, 1712-57.

KOEPPER, J. H. J., a Ger. Hellenist, 1755-91.

KOERNER, CHR. GODFREY, a literary savant of Saxony, kn. as a wr. on æsthetics, 1756-1831.

KOERNER, THEODORE, son of the preceding, celebrated as a lyrical poet and dramatic author, and for his patriotism and courage as a soldier, born 1788, shot on the plains of Leipzig when fighting against the French, 1812.

KOES, FREDERIC, a Danish astr., 1684-1766.

KOETS, R., a Flemish painter, 1655-1725.

KOHL, J. P., a German historian, 1698-1778.

KOIALOWICZ, ALBERT, a learned Polish Jesuit, au. of a 'History of Lithuania,' 1609-1674.

KOLBE, or KOLBEN, PETER, a German astronomer, author of a 'Description of the Cape of Good Hope,' 1675-1726.

KOLLER, BARON F., an Aus. gen., 1767-1826.

KOLLMAN, A. F. C., a Ger. com., 1756-1829.

KONIGSMARK, MARIA AURORA, countess of, celebrated for her share in the political transactions of the period, as the mistress of Augustus II., king of Poland, and mother, by the king, of the famous Marshal Saxe, 1678-1768.

KORTHOLT, CHRISTIAN, a Lutheran divine, flourished in Germany, 1633-1694. His grandson, of the same name, also a theologian, 1709-1751.

KOSCIUSKO. THADDEUS KOSCIUSKO was born in 1756, of a noble but not wealthy Lithuanian family. He was educated for a military life; and, while young, he went to America with other volunteers, and served the United States in their war of independence against England. He acquired high credit there for skill and courage, and rose to the rank of general in the American army. At aber, 1832. Mention of this ingenious and nd metaphysician is introduced here, with ple view of recommending to the English t one of the most judicious successors of His writings are altogether fertile. In so the writer is aware, he is the first who has ghly supplanted the old division of the mind culties, by proposing to examine it under its normal modes of action—as it thinks, feels, wills. In itself a great reform, suggested e by Kant's scheme of three Critiques; rause has many other claims that would fully be recognized by a thoughtful English- [J.P.N.]

AUSE, F., a German painter, 1706-1754.
AUSE, G. F., a Prus. officer, 1768-1836.
AUSE, G. F., a Ger. jurisconsult, 1718-84.
AUSE, J. C., a Prussian historian, 1749-99.
AUSE, J. C. H., a Prus. savant, 1757-1808.
AUSE, J. G., a Ger. philologist, 1684-1736.
AUSE, KRAUSS, or KRAUS, J. Baptiste, d prelate of the Benedictine order, 1700-62.
USE, S. A., a Dutch painter, 1760-1825.
Y, Baron De, a native of Hungary, dist. neral in the Austrian service, died 1801.
BEL, T. F., a Ger. geographer, 1729-93.
UTZER, Rodolph, a celebrated musical er and performer on the violin, 1767-1831.
YSIG, F. L., a Ger. physician, 1770-1839.
DENER, Bourcard Alex. Constance, De, a Russian diplomatist, 1744-1802. His ULIETTE VIETINGHOFF, Baroness De er, authoress of 'Valerie,' a romance founded own life, and afterwards celebrated as a ess, time of Napoleon, 1766-1824.
MMACHER, F. A., a rel. wr., 1768-1845.
NITZ, J. G., a German compiler, 1728-96.
SE, Ch., a German savant, 1753-1827.
SEMARK, Baron De, a Prussian general, rds political ambas. to France, died 1821.
SINSKI, J. T., a Polish mission., d. 1754.
HN, C. G., a Ger. med. author, 1754-1840.
N, M., an Austrian savant, 1709-1765.
, E. M., a German poet, 1731-1790.
L, H., a German naturalist, 1797-1821.
LMAN, Quirinus, a native of Prussia, celebrated for his prophecies, for which he was burned alive in Russia 1689. A list of forty-two works written by him is given in Adelung's 'History of Human Folly.'

KUHN, J., a Prussian savant, 1647-1693.
KULM, J. A., a German anatomist, 1680-1745. His brother, John George, a physician, d. 1731.
KULMANN, E., a Russian poetess, 1808-1825.
KUNCKELL, J., a German chemist, 1630-1702.
KUNRATH, H., a Ger. alchymist, died 1605.
KUSTER, G. G., a Ger. historian, 1695-1776.
KUSTER, L., a German critic, 1670-1716.
KUTTNER, C. G., a German trav., 1755-1805.
KUTUSOFF. See Koutousoff.
KUYCK, J. Van, a Dutch painter on glass, born 1530, suffered at the stake 1572.
KUYP, or CUYP, A., a Dutch pain., 1606-67.
KUYPERS, G., a Dutch Orientalist, last cent.
KYDERMYNSTER, or KIDDERMINSTER, Richard, a learned eccles. and antiquar., d. 1531.
KYNASTON, Sir Francis, a courtier of the reign of Charles I., dist. as a poet, 1587-1642.
KYNASTON, John, an Eng. divine, 1728-83.
KYRLE, John, a distinguished benefactor, immortalized in the writings of Pope as 'The Man of Ross,' died at the age of ninety in 1754.

[Kyrle's Summer House.]

L

AN, H. Vander, a Dutch engrav., b. 1690.
AR, or LAER, Peter Van, a Dutch pain- alled, from his style, Bamboccio, 1613-1675.
BACO. See Abaco Anthony.
BADIE, John, a French Jesuit, who became rkable as a preacher of new doctrines, and had followers in France and Germany, 1610-1674.
BAN, the father of Rachel and Leah, and the ison of Nahor, about 1800 B.C.
BARRE, S., a French architect, 1764-1824.
BARTHE, P., a Fr. traveller, 1760-1824.
BASTIE, Joseph Bimard, Baron De, a ch archæologist, editor of a new edition of rt's 'Science des Médailles,' 1703-1742.
BAT, John Baptist, a French missionary, n. of several relations of his travels, 1663-1738.
BBE, C., a French jurisconsult, 1582-1657.
BBE, P., a French antiquarian, 1594-1680.
BBE, Ph., a learned Fr. Jesuit, 1607-1667.

LABBEY, F., a French antiquarian, 1653-1727.
LABE, Lousie, surnamed 'the beautiful rope-maker,' a native of Lyons, distinguished for her extraordinary talents and courage in arms at the siege of Perpignan; besides her poems in three different languages, she is the author of a dramatic piece, entitled 'Débat de la Folie et de l'Amour,' 1526-1566.
LABÉDOYERE, Charles Angelique Francois Huchet, Count De, one of Napoleon's generals, shot for rejoining the emperor, 1786-1815.
LABEO, the surname of several Roman families, the most celebrated members of which are—Quintus Fabius, consul, 197 B.C. Antistius, a senator and jurisconsult, died 31 B.C. Caius Antistius, son of the preceding, a jurisconsult and historian. Antistius, a proconsul and painter, of the 1st century; and Attius, a poet, and contemporary of Nero, 1st century.

LABERIUS, a Roman dramatist, died B.C. 44.
LABEY, J. B., a French geometr., 1750-1825.
LABIENUS, TITUS, a Rom. general, k. 45 B.C.
LABORDE, A. DE, a French poetess, last cen.
LABORDE, H. F., Count De, a Fr. officer, d. 1833.
LABORDE, JEAN BAPTISTE, a French Jesuit, and writer on the mechanism of electricity, d. 1777.
LABORDE, JEAN JOSEPH DE, a gentleman of fortune, who became banker to the court of France, and was executed 1794. His son, F. G. JOSEPH, a deputy to the constituent assembly, died in England 1801. His third son, A. L. JOSEPH, count de la Borde, a liberal deputy of the restoration, aid-de-camp to the king after 1830, author of an itinerary of Spain, and of several political and antiquarian works, 1774-1841.
LABORDE, JOHN BENJAMIN DE, first valet de chambre to Louis XV., distinguished as a composer and writer on the hist. of music, exec. 1794.
LABORIE, J. B. P., a Fr. physician, 1797-1823.
LABOULLAYE-MARILLAC, P. C. MADELEINE, Count De, a French chemist, 1774-1824.
LABOUREUR, J. LE, a Fr. historian, 1623-75.
LABRADOR, J.. a Spanish painter, died 1600.
LABRE, B. J., a monk of La Trappe, 1748-76.
LABROUSSE, CLOTILDA SUSANNA COURCELLES DE, born 1741, was an ascetic of the order of St. Francis, who became greatly celebrated by her prophecies at the period of the French revolution. Her impulse was to travel over the world, in order to convert the whole human race by her preaching, but her superiors refused their consent, and she addressed a memorial on the subject, with an account of her life, to M. Pontard, the constitutional bishop of Dordogne. This document came into the hands of Dom Gerle, once a monk, who in 1759 entered into a correspondence with her, and in 1790 endeavoured to introduce her into the national assembly. She afterwards went to Rome, preaching to the populace on her way, and proposing to herself the conversion of the pope, but she was arrested in Italy, and imprisoned in the castle of St. Angelo till 1796, when the directory procured her liberation. Two years later she returned to Paris with the French troops, and was surrounded with a circle of believers till her death in 1821. The duchesse de Bourbon published some curious particulars concerning her in 1791, and her works were collected by Bishop Pontard in 1797. Lamartine has perpetuated the mistaken belief that she died in the castle of St. Angelo, while the chair of the illuminée was occupied by Catherine Theos, the new flame of Dom Gerle, at Paris. [E.R.]
LABRUNE, J. DE, a French historian, d. 1743.
LABRUYERE. See BRUYERE.
LA-CAILLE, NICOLAS LOUIS DE, born March 15, 1713, died March 21, 1762; a celebrated French astronomer; one of the best Observers in modern times. He had no superior in industry, activity, and honour; and few men have ever handled instruments, equal to him in that enviable power, which enables the Observer to produce exactness of result, even though his instrument be imperfect. La-Caille was honourably connected with that measurement of the degree of the meridian in France, which rectified Picard's erroneous estimate, and went to establish the true shape of the Earth; but his principal achievements lay at the Cape of Good Hope, where he remained four years surveying the southern heavens. Afte places of about ten thousand stars, he Paris and published the results of his v works are numerous, the chief being the * Astronomiæ and the Cœlum Australe.
pal catalogue has recently been recom
every care, and republished. No name tion ranks higher than La-Caille's.
LACARRY, GILES, a French Jesui fessor of polite literature, philosophy, logy, celebrated as a numismatist, 160
LA-CATHELINIERE, NICHOLA
DE, one of the most daring of the Ven born 1760, executed at Nantes 1794.
LACAZE, L. DE, a Fr. medical writ
LACEPEDE, BERNARD GERMAI
DE LA VILLE SUR ILLON, Count De, French naturalist, pupil of Buffon and author of 'Histoire Naturelle des Q
Ovipares et des Serpents,' 'Histoire N
Poissons,' 'Histoire Naturelle des Cé 1756-1825.
LACHAN, G. DE, a French antiqua
LACKMAN, A. H., a Germ. philol.,
LA-CLOS, PETER AMBROSE FRA
DERLOS DE, a French officer after the editor of the 'Journal des Amis de la C and author of 'Les Liaisons Danger
'Poèsies Fugitives,' 1741-1803.
LACOMBE, F., editor of the 'Lett tina Queen of Sweden,' a 'Diction
French,' &c., 1733-1795.
LACOMBE, J., a miscellaneous wr of a 'History of Christina, queen of Sw 1801. His brother HONORE LA
PREZEL, a writer on jurisprudence, bo
LACOMBE-SAINT-MICHEL, JE
a French officer, and conventionalist, 1
LA-CONDAMINE, C. M. DE, a Fr.
an. of travels in the interior of America,
LACRAIX, S. F., a Fr. geometrician, LACRETELLE, P. H., a French tinguished for his writings on jurispr the reform of the criminal code, 1751-LACRUZ, J. DE, a Spanish painte
LACRUZ, J. INEZ DE, a relig. poete
LACRUZ, M. DE, a Sp. his. painte
LACRUZ-Y-CANO, R., a Sp. drama
LACTANTIUS. LUCIUS CAECILIU
TIUS FIRMIANUS, was in all probabil of Italy, and born about the middle century. He studied rhetoric in Africa, of Arnobius. His own fame as a teacher art was so extensive, that Diocletian in settle at Nicomedia, and open a school
But his career in this Greek city was so successful as might have been anti imperial patronage; and therefore he hours, not to rhetoric, but to literary When an old man, he superintended t of Crispus, son of Constantine, and have died in Gaul, perhaps about 330.
cipal work of Lactantius is his 'Divin divided into seven books; designe paganism, and show, in various ways, purity and lustre of the Christian fait tius wrote also two tracts 'On the An and 'On the Workmanship of God,' a Symposium, an Itinerary, and numer

d Poems. The disquisition 'On the Death of the ersecutors,' which many critics have assigned to ther Caecilius, describes the miserable fate of se who attempted to suppress Christianity by ord and fire. The style of this Father has en been admired, and he has been called the ristian Cicero. Certainly he excels all his con-poraries in the classical form of his style, in graceful and rhythmical construction of his iods, and the easy and lucid sequency of his ses. His knowledge of theology was very erficial and inaccurate. The editio princeps of works was printed at Subiaco, in 1465, and ny other editions have followed at various es and in various places. His book 'On the ath of the Persecutors' has been twice translated o English, by Gilbert Burnet 1687, and by Sir vid Dalrymple 1792. [J.E.]

LACY, Don St., a Spanish general, 1775-1817.

LACY, John, a dramatic wr. and actor, d. 1681.

LACYDES, a Greek philosopher, B.C. 241.

LADERCHI, J., an Italian historian, d. 1738.

LADERCHI, J. B., an Ital. jurist, 1538-1618.

LADISLAUS, k. of Bohemia. See Uladislas.

LADISLAUS, k. of Poland. See Uladislas.

LADISLAUS I., king of Hungary, born 1041, ceeded 1079, died 1095, and was canonized for iety by Celestin III., 1198. Ladislaus II., the infant, succeeded and died the same r, 1200. Ladislaus III. succeeded 1272, assas-ted, after a life of debauchery and a disgrace-reign, 1290. Ladislaus IV., the same as dislas V., king of Poland, succeeded his fa-in the latter dignity, 1435, and was elected by Hungarians, 1440, killed in battle by the Sul-Amurath, 1444. Ladislaus V. succeeded in the year of his age, 1444, and died suddenly 1458. slaus VI., son of Casimir IV., king of Po-and called, according to the Polish form of name, Uladislas II., became king of Bohemia and king of Hungary 1490, died 1516.

DISLAUS, or LAUNCELOT, king of Naples, 1376, suc. his father Charles (Durazzo) III. defeated by Louis of Anjou 1411, died 1414.

DVOCAT, J. B., a Fr. Hebraist, 1709-1765.

DVOCAT, L. F., a Fr. philoso., 1644-1735.

ELIANUS, a Rom. emp., procl. and kil. 266.

ELIUS, Caius, a Roman commander, com-on-in-arms of Scipio Africanus, consul B.C. 190. son, of the same name, surnamed 'The Wise,' as an orator and man of letters, consul B.C. 140.

LAENNEC, R. T. H., a Fr. physic., 1781-1826.

LAER, Peter De. See Laar.

LAEVINUS, Marcus Valerius, a naval com-nder of Rome, opposed to Philip of Macedon, hom he defeated B.C. 214, consul 210, died 205.

LAEVINUS, Publius Valerius, con., B.C. 280.

LAEVIUS, Torrentinus, archbishop of Meck-lin, distinguished as a Latin poet and ed., d. 1595.

LAFAGE, R. De, a Fr. des. and engr., 1654-84.

LAFAYE, A. De, a Swiss minister, died 1618.

LAFAYE, J. Elie Laniget De, a French ma-thematician, 1671-1748. His brother, Jean Fran-çois, a diplomatist and man of letters, 1674-1731.

LAFAYETTE, Gilbert Motier De, a French arshal, dist. in the wars with the Engl., b. 1428.

LAFAYETTE, Louise Motier De, maid of nour to the queen of Louis XIII., and founder of convent of Chaillot, where she died, 1665.

LAFAYETTE, Marie Madeleine Pioche De La Vergne, Comtess De, a cel. novl., 1632-93.

LAFAYETTE, Marie Paul Jean Roch Yves Gilbert Motier, Marquis De, one of the most illustrious names in the annals of modern history, was born at Chavaignac, in Auvergne, 1757, and commenced his career at the court of Louis XV., at the period when hostilities were commencing between Britain and her American colonies. At the age of twenty he left the arms of his bride, and, fitting out two vessels with arms and provisions, sailed for Boston; was received by Washington and his army with acclamations, and, joining their ranks as a volunteer, was wounded in his first action near Philadelphia, and commanded the vanguard of the patriot army at the capture of New York. On returning to France, when peace was concluded with the mother country, Lafayette found himself in possession of an immense popularity, and presently took his seat with the notables, convoked in 1787. The questions of public right in ferment at this crisis are matters of history. Lafayette embraced the popular cause, and was the first to demand the convocation of the estates-general. Elected deputy to the latter body in 1789, he proposed the 'Declaration of Rights,' which he had brought from the free soil of America, as the preliminary of a constitution. Proclamation of this world-renowned document was made July 22, and it furnished the French people with the metaphysical reasons for the 'sacred right of insurrection'—a well-known phrase of Lafayette's. Meanwhile the Bastile had been taken July 14, the national guard organized, and Lafayette appointed to the command. In this capacity he rode a white charger, and shone the impersonation of chivalry, and twice the royal family owed their preservation to his address and courage—the greatest of these occasions being the march on Versailles, 5th and 6th of October. Some months later, 12th May, 1790, he joined Bailly in forming the club of Feuillants to counteract the Jacobins—formerly 'the friends of the constitution,' to which his party had belonged before its final transformation. The arrest of the king at Varennes, being followed by the petition for his deposition on the field of Mars, Lafayette lost much of his popularity by assisting Bailly to disperse the people, which was not accomplished without bloodshed. In the lull of the popular enthusiasm he returned to his native fields, the national guard, on his retirement, presenting him with a bust of Washington, and a sword forged from the bolts of the Bastile. When the coalition was formed, and their armed troops threatened the frontier, he was appointed general of one of the armies opposed to them. While in this command, the progress of the Jacobins, and the outrages committed upon the royal family, provoked him to address letters of remonstrance to Paris, and these not producing any effect, he was chivalrous enough to leave his troops and appear at the bar of the assembly. Before leaving the capital on this occasion, he had arranged with the king for a review of the national guard, when the 'constitution' was to be saved by a coup de main; but the review was countermanded in the night, Lafayette rejoined his army, was burnt in effigy by the sansculottes of Paris, and, at length, endeavouring to escape from France, was captured by the Austrians and imprisoned at Olmutz. He was confined from the failure of the constitution to the assumption of power by Buonaparte, and released in 1797. Lafayette had no share in any of the events connected with the death of the king and the reign of terror, and, in the years following, rejected every overture of the consul and emperor. His first movement in public was made after the battle of Waterloo, when he endeavoured to preserve the chamber of representatives in being, on the principle that it derived its authority from the electors—not from Buonaparte, by whom it was convoked—and with the view of restoring the public liberties. These arguments were urged upon Blucher and Wellington without effect, and Lafayette returned to private life. In the year 1818, he became a member of the chamber of deputies, and, resuming his career as an advocate of constitutional principles, had the satisfaction of seeing the dream of his life realized in 1830. It was to Lafayette, intrusted with the power of a dictator, in his original character of commander of the national guard, that Louis Philippe owed his elevation to the throne. Time, wiser or more capricious than he, allowed him to see the stone hurled at the feet of his idol, and he carried this saddest of all lessons with him into eternity, 1834. [E.R.]

LA-FERTE-IMBAULT, MARIA THERESA GEOFFRIN, Marchioness De, celebrated for her literary abilities, 1715-1791.

LAFFITTE, JAMES, the principal of a famous banking establishment at Paris, distinguished in political history as an Orleanist, 1767-1844.

LAFFON-LADEBAT, a political writer of the legisl. assembly and council of elders, 1746-1829.

LAFITAU, J. F., a French Jesuit, distinguished by his accounts of the North American Indians, and the discoveries of the Portuguese, died 1740. His brother, PETER FRANCIS, a French prelate and ecclesiastical historian, 1685-1764.

LAFITE, MA. ELIZ. DE, a Fr. writer, 1750-94.

LAFOND, C. PH., a Fr. violinist, 1776-1842.

LAFONT, JOSEPH DE, a dramatist, 1686-1725.

LAFONTAINE, AUGUSTUS HENRY JULIUS, a celebrated German romance writer, 1756-1831.

LAFONTAINE, JOHN DE. See FONTAINE.

LAFOREY, SIR F., a Brit. admiral, 1767-1835.

LAFORGE, J. DE, a French poet, 17th century.

LAFOSSE, C. DE, a French painter, 1640-1716. His nephew, ANTHONY, a drama. poet, 1653-1708.

LAFOSSE, J. B. J. DE, a Fr. engrav., b. 1721.

LAFOSSE, J. F., a Fr. preacher, 1734-1813.

LAFOSSE, STEPHEN W., and his son, PHILIP STEPHEN, dist. as veterinary surgeons, last cent.

LAGARAYE, CLAUDE TOUS. MAROT, Count DE, dist. as the founder of schools for the young, and hospitals for the aged and sick, 1675-1755.

LAGARDE, ANTHONY ESCALIN DES AIMARS, Baron De, a cel. naval tactician and diplom., d. 1578.

LAGARDE, PHILIP BIDARD DE, a French dramatic writer and man of letters, 1710-1767.

LAGARDIE. See GARDIE.

LAGERBRING, S., a Swed. historian, 1707-88.

LAGERLOEF, PETER, professor of eloquence at Upsala, and historian of N. Europe, 1648-1699.

LAGERSTROEM, MAGNUS VON, a Swedish savant, translator, and natural philos., 1696-1759.

LAGNY, T. F. DE, a Fr. mathema., 1660-1734.

LAGOMARSINI, J., an Ital. sav

LAGRANGE, a Fr. classical tra

LAGRANGE, JOSEPH DE CHA dramatist, cel. for his precocious tal

LAGRANGE, JOSEPH LOUIS, 25th January, 1736, died at Pa 1813; a man prevented only by LAPLACE, from being held, by co the most illustrious geometer of The honourable rivalry of these gr most life-long; nor could it be ea any special date which was forem Living at a time when the exige demanded, and its possessions poi thods and great conquests, their constitute its Modern Epoch: n then to the other, the glory of t was due. Speaking of the sum o ments, this perhaps may, witho said,—if Laplace, to some extent compeer in the range of his view, more of an encyclopædic force, t which belongs to intensity in th neralizing, and therefore to taste composition, must be awarded to Analyst ever possessed a finer app thod, than the illustrious Piedn name accordingly is inscribed am every department of Inquiry whi notice. This especial characteristic best appear through a brief synop achievements.—I. In reference t Lagrange to bestow on the Infinit a logical place in pure Analysis, it be asserted that success was com less his positive success has be Previous to his time, that Calculus regarded as a powerful Instrume portant positive results. Indeed, that ever-memorable section of t could not be said that attention h its philosophical basis, so much a of its methods; nor had the expo Leibnitz or D'Alembert rendered unnecessary to the solidity and Transcendental Analysis. Desirous symmetry, Lagrange proposed to ation alike of Infinitesimals and attach the new Power to the old presenting differentials as co-effic cessive terms of the Infinite Se a Function in which the variable increment. The validity of his function thus modified, must be the series known as Taylor's Th strongly contested: but apart fro it is very certain that by resting the Calculus, on the doctrine of I do not get rid of the Idea of a L we can attach no notion to an Equ which is an Infinite Series, exce and apparently definite side exp of that Series: and besides, in eve the Calculus of Functions thus ba Geometrical or Dynamical Proble ter was reduced to the necessity employing the logic and phrase Unless however, as vitiated by th most technical defect at the thresh of the Theorie des Fonctions cannot be questioned. If Lagrange has not succeeded in discarding the consideration of Limits, he has presented Analysis in no greater dependence upon it, than are other branches of Science. After the publication of that remarkable work, it could nowhere be said that the extraneous element inhered in the Method of treatment, but only that it belonged to the nature of the thing treated: and—as a necessary and immediate effect of this disentangling—every pure and positive Method in Analysis assumed its proper generality, and put forth its natural power. The student who would appreciate the gain thus accruing from the Theorie des Fonctions, may refer to what it accomplished in the treatment of Series; or what is yet more special, to its exposition of the nature and treatment of Contacts.—II. The earliest achievement of Lagrange in pure Analysis, was equally illustrative of the peculiar character and grasp of his genius,—we mean the discovery of the Method of Variations. Almost from the rise of Geometrical Science, problems of maxima and minima, had been a favourite and at the same time a difficult exercise with Inquirers: separate solutions varying in ingenuity had through the contest of wits, been attained for specific problems, but it was reserved for the differential calculus to produce that general method—foreshadowed by Fermat—which diminished the intellectual interest of such problems, by rendering them all easily resolvable. But as this difficulty disappeared, a new class of problems, related to the previous class but much less manageable, gradually absorbed attention; and singularly enough this too became the chosen battle-ground on which the best spirits of Europe contested for superiority. The history of the problem of the solid of least resistance is well known; but it was only one incident in the rivalry of mathematical genius. Now the relation between the new class of problems—problems of Isoperimeters as they were termed—and the old maxima and minima, is the following: a problem regarding a maximum or minimum is this,—to find those values of certain unknown quantities, which constitute a certain specified function or combination of these quantities, a maximum or minimum: an Isoperimetrical problem on the other hand is this,—to determine a function or combination of certain unknown quantities, so that some other specified and determinate function of that function, shall be a maximum or minimum. The great access of difficulty and complicacy here, is apparent; and to these new problems Lagrange applied a new method, as grasping, as exhaustive as the method of the Differential Calculus in the simpler case. And not only did his Calculus of Variations put an end to all efforts after special solutions; but it became, like the simpler calculus, a general method of immense comprehensiveness and power: even now, its resources and applications are not more perhaps than generally sketched out.—III. Next in order of complicacy, if not of difficulty, are the achievements of Lagrange in the Methods of Rational Mechanics. This great division of Mathematical Science, also consisted, previous to the publication of the Mecanique Analytique, of separate analytic artifices, whose authority rested on a number of separate general principles. Lagrange combined the whole; or rather he rose above those separate and special principles; producing a method of contemplating mechanics, and a course of procedure, that involved and connected them all. The Principle of Virtual Velocities became in his hands the foundation and summing up of all Statics; and by a dexterous use of D'Alembert's theorem in Dynamics, he succeeded in reducing all Dynamical investigations under the category of strict Statics. His new calculus of Variations was indispensable as an instrument; and it enabled him to realize to the utmost, the grand necessity of his intellect, viz.: to co-ordinate, what he found separate; and so to establish the fixed and final Method of the Science. It is rare that a work like the Mecanique Analytique comes to be valued at once; nor has this work been so: nevertheless, it has been of greater service to Dynamical Theory than the achievements of any man since the times of Galileo. Through some strange caprice, Lagrange, after concluding his imperishable volumes, conceived a strong distaste alike at the subject and his own labours. He did not open the printed volume for a long time; and his thoughts found refuge in meditation on the History of Religion and Medicine. His friends have said, that what the Analyst thought, on these apparently incongruous subjects, would have made the fortune of several ordinary writers.—IV. What we have said of Lagrange refers mainly to his remarkable influence on Method in Analysis. His specific discoveries are as remarkable, although unsuited—even an enumeration of them—to a work like this. It were wrong, however, to omit his crowning achievement in reference to the mechanism of our Solar System; especially characteristic as it is, of the commanding genius of the man. He and his compeer had worked elaborately at the problem of perturbations—that problem which Newton bequeathed to after time. That the several bodies of the Solar System importantly influence each other, and so affect the arrangements of the system, was a consequence of the Law of Gravitation; but the result, or the harmony of those perturbations had yet to be discerned. Drawing his conclusion from a large induction, Laplace had asserted the invariability of major axes of the Planetary Orbits, and of course, the Stability of the System as a fact: Lagrange, from a higher flight, showed the necessity of that Invariability, and therefore of the permanency of the Planetary Mechanism. It was indeed a great discovery: he proved that because of the dispositions of the Planets,—their arrangement nearly in one plane, the uniformity of the directions of their motions, and the proximity of their orbits to the circular form, this stability must exist: so that, if present arrangements come to an end, it will be through no imperfection; but because, that—gorgeous though they are—they are somehow subject to the doom of all finite things, and—notwithstanding their augustness—only part of some development yet more gigantic, beats of the pulse of a still grander life. It is not easy to estimate the amount of this advance beyond the position of Newton, who thought that our system contained the seeds of dissolution, and that, in the words of Leibnitz, a time would come, when Deity, would require to interfere and re-adjust his worn-out mechanism!—The life of Lagrange had some anxieties, but it was crowded with honours. Called to Berlin by the great Frederick, he early obtained the position due to him. Afterwards, for many years, he resided in Paris, in command of the first employments. By rare fortune he escaped the fate of Lavoisier—when 'in a moment a head fell which the world might not replace in a century:' and with Laplace he shared the early labours and glories of the Ecole Normale. Take him as a whole, abstract science has in modern times possessed no other servant so great. [J.P.N.]

LAGRENEE, LOUIS JOHN FRANCIS, a French historical painter, 1724-1804. His brother, JOHN JAMES, called the younger, 1740-1821. The nephew of the latter, ANSELM LOUIS, 1775-1832.

LAGUERRE, L., a French painter, 1663-1721.

LAGUERRE, M. J., a cel. cantatrice, 1755-83.

LAGUILLE, L., historian of Alsace, 1658-1742.

LAHARPE, A. E., a Fr. general, 1754-1796.

LAHARPE, F. C., a Swiss republ., 1754-1838.

LAHARPE, JEAN FRANCOIS DE, born at Paris in 1739, was the son of an artillery captain of Swiss extraction. In early manhood he became an author by profession. His strength lay in literary criticism, which at length became his chief employment. He is a useful and judicious critic, though not a profound one; and his analyses of celebrated works are especially instructive. Much may be learned as to modern literature, and a little as to that of Greece and Rome, from his voluminous 'Lycée, ou Cours de la Littérature,' which contains lectures he delivered in Paris from 1786. He died there in 1803. [W.S.]

LAHIRE, PHILIP DE, a French mathematician and astronomer, 1640-1719. His son, GABRIEL PHILIP, a geometrician, 1677-1719. JEAN NICHOLAS, brother of the latter, a botanist, 1685-1717.

LAHIRE, S. V. See VIGNOLES.

LA-HUERTA, G., a Span. painter, 1645-1714.

LAHYRE, L. DE, a French painter, 1606-1656.

LAINEZ, ALEX., a French poet, 1650-1710.

LAINEZ, or LAYNEZ, JAMES, a Sp. Jesuit, general of the order after Loyola, 1512-1565.

LAINEZ, S., a French opera singer, died 1822.

LAING, ALEXANDER, a Scotch antiquarian and miscellaneous writer, editor of the 'Eccentric Magazine,' 1778-1838.

LAING, ALEX. GORDON, an African explorer, born at Edinburgh, 1794, murdered on the route from Timbuctoo, 1826.

LAING, MALCOLM, a Scotch hist., 1762-1819.

LAING, W., a Scotch bookseller, 1764-1832.

LAIRE, FRANCIS XAVIER, a French librarian, au. of a 'Catalogue of Printed Books from the Invention of the Art to the year 1500,' &c., 1738-1801.

LAIRESSE, G., a Flemish painter, 1640-1711.

LAIS, a Sicilian courtezan, assassina. B.C. 350.

LAISNE, ANTHONY, a Fr. archæologist, 17th c.

LAJARD, P. A., a Fr. statesman, 1757-1808.

LAKE, ARTHUR, a dignitary of the Church of England, known as a religious writer, died 1626.

LAKE, GERARD, first Viscount Lake, an English general, distinguished in Germany during the seven years' war, and as commander-in-chief in India, 1744-1808.

LALA, a female painter, 1st century B.C.

LALAMANT, JOHN, a disting. savant, 17th c.

LALANDE, J DE, a Fr. lawyer,

LALANDE, JOSEPH JEROME L DE, born July 11, 1732, died in Par 1807; an observer of much industry, minous writer, who contributed someth vance of astronomy, and much to a di knowledge of it. He was one of the vans whom Frederick the Great gat him; and he conducted the observator by that eccentric monarch at Berlin. turn to Paris he pursued his researche municating memoirs to the Academy He assisted Clairaut with materials putation of the return of Halley's lished an account of the transit of Ven his great work on astronomy, which four 4to volumes; and drew up his eight thousand stars. He also edite many elementary treatises. The cata lande has been recently published in and is of considerable value. His sy historical works have given place to though the 'Traité' may still be co advantage by the student. We owe al the completion of Montucla's valuab Mathematics.

LALANDE, M. RICHARD DE, a poser, celebrated for his ballet music.

LALANE, P., a French poet, died

LALAUNE, NOEL DE, a Fr. divine

LALLEMAND, BARON, a Fr. gen.

LALLEMAND, J. B., a Fr. painte

LALLEMANDET, J., a Fr. theol.,

LALLEMANT, J. P., a learned J as a great adversary of the Jansenists

LALLEMANT, L., a learned Jesuit

LALLEMANT, P., an ascetic writ

LALLEMANT, RICHARD COUTER printer and editor, known for his fin the classics, 1726-1807. His brother, was associated with him in these wor ther brother, RICHARD XAVIER FE MANT DE MAUPAS, was vicar-general and president of the Academy of Roue

LALLEMENT, W., a journalist, 1

LALLI, GIOV. B., an Italian poet,

LALLOUETTE, A., a Fr. author,

LALLOUETTE, F. P., a theologia

LALLOUETTE, J. F., a Fr. compos

LALLOUETTE, P., a Fr. physici

LALLY, THOMAS ARTHUR, Coun of Tullendally, or Tollendal, in Irel scended from one of those devoted the Stuarts who became naturalized i who there acquired distinction in th the crown. He was born in Dauphi began his military career in an Ir commanded by his uncle, General D greatly distinguishing himself at the si Menin, Ypres, and Furnes, and partic battle of Fontenoy (dating from 1733 was appointed (1756) commandant-g French possessions in the East Ind arrival there, at the end of April, 1 declared with the English, over whom a series of successes, but was at len before Madras, and then besieged in upon which he had been compelled Here, with less than a thousand me the whole English army for several months, and only surrendered when reduced to the last extremity, January 16, 1761. He now became the prisoner of the English, but was soon liberated, and, returning to France, was arrested on a charge of treason. All the perils and toils he had undergone were rewarded by the corrupt administration of that expiring monarchy by his judicial murder, in the vain effort to hide from the public eye their own factious dishonesty. He was dragged to the scaffold with a gag in his mouth to prevent him from addressing the people, and was executed May 9, 1766. [E.R.]

LALLY-TOLLENDAL, Trophimus Gerard, Marquis De, son of the preceding, was born at Paris, 1751, and though he was ignorant of his parentage until the eve of his father's execution, he devoted himself to obtain the re-establishment of his good name. His filial efforts were virtually crowned with success in 1778, though the last judicial form was never completed in consequence of the troubles of the period, and in 1783 he obtained possession of his estates. In 1789 he became a deputy of the noblesse to the estates-general, and was one of the most popular members of that body when it changed its name to the national assembly, and commenced the erection of a constitution. In the fruitless labours directed to this end he was a warm supporter of Lafayette; but, despairing of the monarchy and the constitution, he retired with Necker, in September, 1790, and published an address to the French people. After the 10th of August, 1792, he was arrested by the Jacobins, but escaped the massacres of September, and arrived safely in England; where, as a royalist, and a writer in the interest of the emigrants, he enjoyed a small pension from the government. He was authorized to return to France by the first consul in 1801, but took no part in public affairs till the restoration, when he became a member of the privy council, and, in that capacity, accompanied Louis XVIII. to Ghent during the hundred days of 1815. After the second restoration he was made a peer of France; and, remaining true to his principles, resisted the attempts of the Bourbons to resume their arbitrary power. He died a few weeks before the revolution of July, 1830, and has left a name in considerable repute both as an historico-political writer and a poet. [E.R.]

LALONDE, F. R., a Fr. antiquarian, 1685-1765.

LALUZERNE, Cæsar Henry, a nephew of Malesherbes, min. of foreign affairs under Necker.

LALUZERNE, Cæsar William Cardinal De, one of the clerical deputies to the estates-general, and the first to propose the establishment of a representative system in France, author of several theological and political works, 1738-1822.

LAMA, J. B., a paint. and architect of Naples, abt. 1508-1579. Another of the same name, b. 1660.

LAMA, Julia, a Venetian painter, last century.

LAMANNA, J., a Sicilian poet, 1580-1640.

LAMANON, R. P., a Fr. naturalist, 1752-1787.

LAMARCK, or as his real name is, Jean Baptiste Pierre Antoine De Monet, an eminent naturalist, was born at Bazantine in Picardy in 1744. He died in 1829. A soldier in his youth, he had already begun to distinguish himself, when an accident compelled him to relinquish the army. Like many other naturalists, Lamarck's first study was botany. The first work he published was the 'Flore Française,' which, appearing at a time when Rousseau had made botany fashionable, met with an astonishing degree of success. Other botanical works soon followed, and for some time Lamarck seemed completely occupied with these, and works of a more speculative kind, which do not now add much to his reputation. In 1793 he was appointed to a chair attached to the museum of natural history at the Garden of Plants, which had for its object the history of insects and the lower animals, which Linnæus had arranged under the general name of worms. At this time he was fifty years of age, and the study of zoology was nearly new to him. Such, however, were his zeal and assiduity in preparing himself for the duties of his chair, that in a few years he had made himself thoroughly master of the subject; and his great and excellent work, the 'Histoire des Animaux sans Vertébres,' will ever entitle him to take his place in the very first rank of zoologists. As a conchologist, Lamarck's name stands pre-eminent, and the Lamarckian arrangement of shells is still that of the present day. A sad affliction overtook him in his latter days. He gradually lost his sight, and for some years before his death he was totally blind, while an injudicious investment of his money in some swindling schemes, reduced him in his old age to comparative poverty. [W.B.]

LAMARQUE, F., a Fr. conventiona., 1755-1839.

LAMARQUE, Max., a Fr. general, 1770-1832.

LAMB, Lady Caroline, daughter of the earl of Besborough, and wife of the Hon. William Lamb, afterwards Lord Melbourne, distinguished as a novelist and fugitive writer, 1786-1828.

[House of Charles Lamb.]

LAMB, Charles, the son of a barrister's clerk, was born in London in 1775. He was educated at Christ's Hospital; and, being disqualified by stammering from being sent to college on the foundation, he became, in 1792, a clerk in the India House. He retained this place for thirty-three years, living with a sister, to whom he devoted himself in circumstances of melancholy interest, and indulging those literary tastes which constituted his happiness.

He died in 1834. From the days of his schoolboy friendship with Coleridge, he always continued to associate with men of letters; no one could have been more admired or liked than he was by his friends; and during the last period of his life his name was one of the most famous of the day, though few of those who knew it were really familiar with his works. He was a man of unquestionable though eccentric genius. His sphere of thinking was very confined, but he moved in it with great independence; his fancy was lively and original, but very irregular; he had great power both of pathos and of quiet humour, and oscillated capriciously between the two extremes; and his taste, keenly alive to the beautiful, was gratified not less by the oddest puns which his teeming fantasy suggested to him. His style is characterized by a singular engrafting of modern peculiarities on the diction of our Old English writers; and hetook equal delight in rapturously expatiating on the beauties of Elizabethan literature, and in observing and chronicling the oddities of contemporary life in the aspect in which it presented itself to him. His tragedy of 'John Woodvil,' published in 1801, is a disjointed series of beautiful imitations of the old dramatists: some of his smaller poems are strangely touching. He criticised with intuitive fineness of feeling in his 'Specimens of the English Dramatic Poets' (1808); and there are suggestive criticisms, especially on the drama and the stage, in others of his productions. The most notable of these are the fantastically beautiful 'Essays of Elia.' [W.S.]

LAMB, George, younger brother of Lord Melbourne, a reviewer and sec. of state, 1784-1834.

LAMB, Sir James Bland Burges, Baronet, only son of George Burges, Esq., known as a journalist and miscellaneous writer, 1752-1825.

LAMBALLE. The Princess Lamballe, whose fate is one of the most piteous stories of the French revolution, was a descendant of the house of Savoy-Carignan, and was born at Turin, 1749. In 1767 she married the Prince de Lamballe, son of the Duc de Penthièvre, and the year following was left a widow at the age of eighteen. Her subsequent history is closely connected with that of Marie Antoinette, who made her the superintendent of her household, and the agent of her bounty. The queen and the princess were passionately attached to each other; and the latter, who had escaped to England at the commencement of the horrors of 1792, hastened back again when she heard that the queen was in prison, and with heroic fortitude asked, and obtained permission to share her misfortunes in the Temple. This indulgence was thought too merciful by the commune of Paris, who ordered her, at the end of August, to be imprisoned separately in La Force. Immense sums of money, and many agents among the dangerous party were set in motion to save her, but even Hébert and Lhuilier could not conduct her in safety through the ranks of the assassins at the outside of the prison, on the fatal 3d September. The circumstances of her murder are too horrible to repeat. Her head was afterwards paraded at the top of a pike before the windows of the Temple, and conveyed in the same manner, in the midst of a drunken saturnalia, to the Palais Royal. The Duc D'Orleans, who was dining within, went to the window, writer is assured by a connection of in the room at the time, said to his 'It is only Lamballe; I know her by hair!' Writers of all parties ag Princess de Lamballe was as goo beautiful. Lamartine has given Marie Antoinette, which was found the princess after her assassination, to provide for her own safety by re the old Duc de Penthièvre. This le unknown, is a touching proof of which united the unhappy princesses

LAMBARDE, W., an emin. lawy auth. of a Treatise on the Saxon Law

LAMBECIUS, P., a Dutch histo

LAMBERT, a king of Italy, reign

LAMBERT, brother and successor of Spoleto in 917, duke of Tuscany posed and deprived of his sight by h

LAMBERT, a Benedictine chroni

LAMBERT, a bishop of Arras, di

LAMBERT, Anne Therese, a lady distinguished for her literary patronage of learning, authoress of lished after her decease in 1733.

LAMBERT, A. B., an Eng. botan

LAMBERT, C. F., a laborious Fr historical and archæological subjects,

LAMBERT, F., a protestant theo

LAMBERT, G., an English paint

LAMBERT, John, a general mentary forces during the civil wa markable for his opposition to the especially of Richard Cromwell. the counter-revolution he was pr contest with Monk, as the chief o republicans, but was arrested, and a ration banished to Guernsey. His arts of peace was shown in retir devotion to horticulture and flower was born about 1620, and educate He became a Roman Catholic, and

LAMBERT, John Henry, a G matician and philosopher of Fr. de the ablest geometrician of the 18th

LAMBERT, Jos., a Fr. religious w

LAMBERT, Mich., a Fr. musicia

LAMBERT, S., a Fr. Jesuit and

LAMBERTI, A., a Neapolitan m

LAMBERTI, B., an Italian paint

LAMBERTI, L., an Ital. Helleni

LAMBERTY, W. De, a Fr. polit

LAMBESE, Charles Eugene colonel of the royal allemands unde and a noted enemy of the revolution, LAMBIN, Dionysius, or De of eloquence and of Greek and Lati the college of France, author of valu taries and translations, 1516-1572.

LAMBINET, P., a Fr. bibliopolis

LAMBRECHTS, C. J. M., a ju political character of Belgium, 1753-

LAMBRUN, Margaret, the wid adherent of Mary Stuart, remarkab tempt to assassinate Queen Elizabet

LAMBTON, John George. S

LAMBTON, William, an Engli ductor of a great trigono. survey of I

LAMESENGERE, P. De, a Fr. au., 1761-1831.
LAMET, Adrian Augustine De Bussy De, doctor of the Sorbonne, dist. as a casuist, d. 1691
LAMETH. Three brothers of this name became marked characters in the events of the French revolution, and all had previously distinguished themselves in the cause of American independence, following in the wake of Lafayette.—1. Alexandre, the most noted of them, born 1760, distinguished himself in the estates-general by his project for organizing the army, which was instantly adopted. He served in the army of the north under Luckner and Lafayette, and, sharing in the flight of the latter, was captured by the Prussians, and imprisoned at Magdeburgh during the three years 1792–1795. Being set at liberty, he next entered into commercial pursuits at Hamburgh, and returning to France under the consulate, obtained a prefecture. In this capacity he served the state strenuously to the first restoration, but lost favour by accepting office under Napoleon during the hundred days. In 1821 he was returned to the chamber of deputies, and was an active member of the opposition till his death, in 1829. He wrote a 'History of the Constituent Assembly,' which is valuable as the work of an eye-witness. 2. Charles, the next in importance, born 1757, was one of the first among the noblesse to go over to the third estate in the estates-general, when they formed themselves into a national assembly. He was at first devoted to the people, and was dangerously wounded in a duel with Lautrec, fought on their interest. At a later period he shrunk from the gulf that was opening under his feet, and became more decidedly a constitutionalist. He served in the army of the north as general of artillery under Lafayette, and fled with the rest of the party, in August, 1792. Returning to France in 1800, he accepted military service under Napoleon. He was elected to the chamber of deputies in 1830, and died a partizan of Louis Philippe 1832. 3. Theodore, a constitutionalist like his brothers, was a member of the legislative assembly, fled to Switzerland during the reign of terror, 1793, and is only known subsequently as a representative during the hundred days. Died, aged 81, 1837. The Lameths possessed military skill and personal courage; but they were drawn into the popular cause by vanity and the example of others, and soon lost heart in the movement. [E.R.]
LAMETHERIE, Jean Claude De, a French physician, dist. as a natur. and phil., 1743-1817.
LA-METTRIE, Julian Offroy De; born at St. Malo 1709, died at Berlin 1751:—one of a group of eccentric, and in the main not disreputable persons, whom, under the name of philosophers, Frederick the Great collected at Berlin. It were needless to enumerate, and an utter waste of time, to criticise the works published by La-Mettrie, on what he called philosophy: the man had neither heart nor head; dissolute, foolish, and frivolous, he obtained his degree of repute and influence, through a certain reckless insolence and devil-may-care gaiety. He belonged to the set which produced that stupidest and dullest of works the Système de la Nature. For Frederick, some apology may be conceived: he brought great men around him, as well as persons like La-Mettrie; and his own position of resistance and contest, induced him into a certain sympathy with resistants, irrespective of any critical appreciation of their worth. But for writers and thinkers of the La-Mettrie class, there is neither apology nor palliation. Opposing what they term bigotry, they are themselves the most inveterate bigots; attributing received opinions to ignorance, they have never undergone the labour of acquiring any knowledge; without morals, they undertake to dogmatize on morality; incapable of earnest thought, they venture to propagate systems of philosophy! [J.P.N.]
LAMEY, Andrew, a Ger. historian, 1726-1802.
LAMI, Bernard, a Fr. ecclesiastic, dist. as a mathematician and religious writer, 1645-1715.
LAMI, F., a French philosopher, 1636-1711.
LAMI, J., an Italian archæologian, 1697-1770.
LAMIA, governor of Syria, 1st century B.C.
LAMIO, L. M., a Fr. missionary, 1765-1831.
LAMIRAL, Dominique Harcourt, a French traveller and writer on Africa, 1750-1795.
LAMMA, Augustine, a Venetian pain., 16th c.
LAMONNÆ, B. De, a Fr. savant, 1641-1728.
LAMOTHE-LE-VAYER, P. De, a French savant, member of the academy, and preceptor in the royal family, author of works which afford valuable illustrations of the remains of antiquity, 1588-1672.
LA-MOTTE, Anthony Houdart De, a Fr. poet, dramatic author, and critic, 1672-1731.
LA-MOTTE, F., an Austrn. musician, 1751-81.
LA-MOTTE, Jeanne De Valois, Countess De, an infamous woman connected with the court of France, implicated with the pretended Count Cagliostro and the Cardinal de Rohan in the fraud of the diamond necklace, by which undeserved disgrace was entailed upon the Queen Marie Antoinette; born of poor parents at Fontette, in Champagne, 1757, died in London 1791.
LA-MOTTE-FOUQUE, Frederick Heinrich Karl, Baron De, a German poet and novelist, descended from an ancient Norman family, best known as the author of 'Undine' and for his war songs, 1777-1843. His wife, Caroline, also a novelist, died 1831.
LA-MOTTE-PIQUET, Toussaint Wm., Count De, a cel. naval commander of France, 1720-1791.
LAMOURETTE, Adrian, a philosophical divine and constitutional prelate of France, connected with Mirabeau in the revolution, 1742-1794.
LAMOUREUX, a French sculptor, born 1674.
LAMOUROUX, John Vincent Felix, a French naturalist, professor at Caen, 1770-1825.
LAMPE, F. A., a Fr. protes. theol., 1683-1729.
LAMPILLAS, F. X., a Span. Jesuit, 1739-98.
LAMPLUGH, T., an English prelate, 1615-91.
LAMPREDI, U., a Neapol. savant, 1761-1836.
LAMPRIDIO, B., an Italian poet, 16th cent.
LAMPRIDIUS, Aelius, a Latin histor., 4th c.
LANA, F. De, an Italian mathem., 1637-1700.
LANA, Ludov., an Italian painter, 1597-1646.
LANA-PERZI, F., an Italian Jesuit, 1631-87.
LANCAROT, ——, a Portuguese navig., 15th c.
LANCASTER. The royal house of Lancaster flourished in two lines. The first commences with Edmond, son of Henry III. and Eleonora of Provençe, and brother of Edward I., employed by the latter as ambassador to Philip of France, and afterwards as commander in the expedition for the recovery of Guienne. Born in London, 1245; died at Bayonne, 1296. Thomas, his son and successor in the earldom, cousin-german to Edward II., headed the confederacy of barons against Piers Gavaston, and, finally, shared the responsibility of his death with Hereford and Arundel. He was at length taken in arms against the sovereign, and beheaded at Pomfret, 1322. HENRY (previously earl of Leicester), brother and heir of Thomas, joined the conspiracy of Isabella and Mortimer against Edward II., and received the king into his custody at Kenilworth. He was freed from this charge on account of his too great humanity; and, when fortune changed, was appointed guardian and protector of the person of his son, Edward III. He died 1345. HENRY, his son, (previously earl of Derby,) after vainly endeavouring to make peace with John, king of France, under the mediation of the pope at Avignon, was sent with an army into Normandy, and took part in the victory of Poictiers and the subsequent French wars. About this time his title was changed to duke of Lancaster, this degree of nobility being then newly introduced into England. He died 1362.—The next duke of Lancaster commences a new lineage, that of the princes opposed to the house of York. The first in the line was JOHN OF GAUNT, or GHENT, third son of Edward III., born 1339. He was married successively to the daughter of Henry, the last duke, who died without male issue, and to the daughter of Peter, king of Castile. His name is one of the most celebrated in English history, and in the chivalry of the middle ages. Died 1399. HENRY OF HEREFORD, the successor of John of Gaunt in the dukedom, was son to him by his first wife. He claimed the crown by descent, by the mother's side, from Edmond the first earl, who was popularly supposed to be the elder brother of Edward I., and to have been deprived of the succession by his father for personal reasons. He became king by deposing Richard II., 1399, and was a prince of great ability and valour. He reigned till his death in 1422, and was succeeded by his son, Henry V. The son of the latter also inherited the crown as Henry VI., and in his reign the feuds of York and Lancaster broke out, which ended in the union of the two houses in the person of Henry VII. See YORK. [E.R.]

LANCASTER, CAPTAIN, afterwards SIR JAMES, had command of one of three ships fitted out in 1591 for the first English expedition to India by the Cape. The object was less to establish trade than to harass the Portuguese; but the result was unfortunate. One of the ships was sent home from the Cape with the sick, another was wrecked on the coast east of the Cape; Lancaster's ship only reached India. On her return, however, she was driven by storms to the West Indies and lost, Lancaster and seven men escaping and returning to England in a French vessel. In 1594 he made a predatory voyage to Brazil against the Portuguese. His most important services, however, were rendered in his conduct of the expedition sent out to India by the East India Company in May, 1601, soon after their charter was obtained. In compliment to his zeal in promoting the discovery of a north-west passage, the existence of which he firmly held, Baffin named after him the sound leading from Baffin's Bay (Sea?) to the Arctic Ocean. His death occurred in 1620. [J.B.]

LANCASTER, JOSEPH, well known mulgator of the system of national edu troduced by Dr. Bell, was born in Lond scure parents, of the Quaker persuasion
He commenced his career by opening a poor children in St. George's Fields, and publicly known for his enthusiasm in th had adopted. He died at New York i circumstances, 1838.

LANCELLOTI, or LANCILLOTI, a learned Italian writer, historian of the gation of Mount Olivet,' to which he and author of 'Impostures of Ancient &c., flourished about 1575-1643.

LANCELLOTTI, G., an It. jur., abt.
LANCELOT, A., a Fr. antiquarian, 1
LANCELOT, CL., a Fr. grammarian,
LANCHARES, A., a Sp. painter, 158
LANCILOTTI, F., an Ital. painter, 1
LANCILOTTI, J., an Italian painter,

LANCISI, GIAMMARIA, or JOANNE an Italian physician, eminent as an anat physiologist, was born at Rome in 1654, after an undisturbed professional career,
He surpassed the anatomists of his da ralizing on form; and while demonstr fundamental structure of the arterial the joint action of the nerves and the bl motion of the heart, he drew the attenti students to more remote causes of stru motion, and recommended the study of Having discovered the lost copper plate tachius, he edited a set of tables from t besides the value of his own writings to fession, bequeathed a magnificent library volumes to the Hospital of the Holy G was physician and chamberlain to seve between 1688 and his death in 1720, and ber of many learned societies, as well as of polite literature.

LANCJEAN, REMI, a Flem. painter,
LANCON, N. F., a Fr. jurisconsult, 1
LANCRE, PETER DE, a provincial cou France, whose name is celebrated in many witchcraft, and as a writer on demonology
LANCRET, N., a French painter, 169
LANCRINCK, PROSPER HENRY, a German extraction, employed by Sir Pet painting the grounds, landscapes, flow ments, and sometimes the draperies of h pal pictures, born about 1628, died 1692.

LANDAIS, or LANDOIS, PETER, a minister of Francis II., duke of Brittany, his tailor, executed by conspirators, 1485.

LANDEN, J., an Eng. mathematician,

LANDENOLFE, the first of the nam of Capua, 884-887; the second, prince of and Capua, succeeded 982, assassinated

LANDER, RICHARD and JOHN, w pleted the solution of the great problem geography left half-finished by Mungo P born in Cornwall—Richard in 1804, his brother two years later. The former aban trade of a printer, to which both were b in order to accompany Captain Clapper second journey to Africa, in the capacity dant. On the death of Clapperton at 13th September, 1827, he proceeded to Funda, intending thence to trace the Niger to its embouchure; but meeting with hostile natives, and being without a companion to cheer him, he was obliged to make for Badágry, on the bight of Benin, by the nearest route. He reached it in safety on the 21st November, two years two months and fourteen days after his departure from it with Clapperton; and soon after took ship to England. Having submitted to government a plan for exploring the lower courses of the Niger, which was approved of, and confidence being reposed in him, from the intelligence, address, and bravery he had already exhibited, Lander was commissioned, by instructions dated 31st December, 1829, to trace the course of the river from Katunga, to the sea, to Lake Tchad, or wherever its stream should carry him. 'My brother,' says Lander in his account of the journey, 'eagerly volunteered to accompany me, which the government refused to allow him a passage, or make him even the promise of a reward.' John's name is mentioned in the instructions; and to him was assigned the duty of making inquiries, as far up as Boussa and Yaoori, for the books and papers that belonged to Mungo Park, believed to be in possession of the chief of that country. Richard himself was allowed all the articles that he asked for his personal convenience during his journey, together with 200 dollars in coin, and leave to draw for more at Badágry if required; his wife was to receive £100 during the ensuing year, and on his return a gratuity of £100 was to be paid to himself. On such slender means, and such slight expectations, did these two enterprising and high-minded young men undertake one of the most difficult missions, and accomplish one of the most interesting and important discoveries of modern times. 'Science,' says Lieutenant Becher, 'was not out of the question; and all depended on that energy quality of mind, determination of purpose, and daring feature in the character of our countrymen without which science itself is of little avail.' (Introduction to Journal in Family Library.)

The Landers left England on the 9th January, 1830, and departing from Badágry on the 31st March with a small escort, crossed the country to Katunga, following Clapperton's route in his second journey. Thence they turned northward to Boussa without separating, as originally contemplated, visited the scene of Park's lamented fate, and discovered some portions of his property, but not his journal, or any papers of value. From Yaoori, on the 2d August, they began the descent of the river, and without serious molestation reached as far as Kirree. Here they were detained and made prisoners, and taken down the river to Eboe, within the delta. At this place, by the promise of a considerable ransom, for which a written promise was given to a friendly chief, King Boy, they were delivered from the imminent danger of being sold as slaves, and they pursued their homeward course. On the 18th November, 1830, the adventurous travellers reached the sea by the river Nun (Brass river of the English), one of the principal branches of the Niger, which has its mouth in the bight of Benin,—and thus set for ever at rest the long-disputed question of the course of this great river. The feelings of satisfaction and gratitude which now filled their minds at the success of their mission, and their deliverance from so many dangers, were speedily changed to those of bitter regret and disappointment, by the disgraceful conduct of a countryman. Captain Lake, of the English brig Thomas, on board of which they were taken at the mouth of the river, peremptorily refused to honour their draft for goods and arms in favour of King Boy; and the kind-hearted chief was driven from the ship with terrible threats. On their return home, however, orders were sent out to pay the proper demand. The Landers found their way home from Fernando Po by Rio de Janeiro, and reached Portsmouth on the 10th June, 1831. On their voyage to Rio, they learned that Lake and his crew met a violent death at the hands of pirates. By the kindness of Lord Goderich, then colonial secretary, Richard Lander was placed in circumstances of 'honourable competence,' and a government appointment promised to his brother. To Richard also was awarded the first prize given by the Royal Geographical Society, value fifty guineas; and at the same meeting at which it was presented, the African Association, which had accomplished so much for discovery on that continent, was incorporated with the Geographical Society, and thus no longer maintained a separate existence. In the following year, the Landers returned to Africa with the expedition projected by Mr. M'Gregor Laird and other gentlemen of Liverpool, for the purpose of establishing a settlement on the Upper Niger, and opening trade with the interior. From causes, however, which might have been avoided, and could again be foreseen and met, this expedition proved a total failure. Among the great number who perished were the two Landers; Richard, from wounds received in an affray with the natives, and John, from the effects of the climate. An interesting account of their discoveries, their joint production, published before leaving England, forms three volumes of Murray's Family Library. [J.B.]

LANDI, Chev. G., an Ital. painter, 1756-1830.

LANDI, Cos., an Ital. numismatist, 1521-64.

LANDI, Count J., an Ital. moralist, 16th cen.

LANDI, Ortensio, an Ital. wr., d. abt. 1560.

LANDI, Vergusio, a military chief, 14th cen.

LANDINO, C., an Italian classic, 1425-1504.

LANDO, a pope, who reigned six months in 913.

LANDO, a prince of Capua, reigned 842-862.

LANDO, Conrad and Lucius, the chiefs of one of the troops of mercenaries that overran Italy in the 14th century.

LANDO, M., gonfalonier of Florence in 1378.

LANDO, P., doge of Venice after Gritti, 1539-45.

LANDON, C. P., a French painter, 1760-1826.

LANDON, Letitia Elizabeth, the daughter of an army agent resident in London, became favourably known to poetical readers while she was hardly beyond the years of childhood, by many pieces of verse published in the Literary Gazette. In 1824, while she was still very young, appeared, with her early signature of L.E.L., the first of her volumes which attracted general notice. It contained, with smaller pieces, 'The Improvisatrice.' Other poems of considerable extent showed her to possess much affluence of fancy, and excellent power of expressing romantic emotion. Her strength, however, was wasted, like that of Mrs.

Hemans, in a constant succession of small pieces contributed to magazines and annuals; nor did she ever fulfil the promise of high genius held out by her youthful effusions. She was the authoress, also, of three sentimental novels. In 1837 she married Mr. Maclean, the governor of the settlement at Cape Coast; and, accompanying her husband to Africa, she died there in 1838, in consequence of having taken an over-dose of medicine. [W.S.]

LANDUS, an Ital. physician, assassinated 1562.

LANE, Sir Richard, a statesman of the reign of Charles I., who made him lord chief baron of the exchequer, and one of the privy council. He is the author of 'Reports' in the court of exchequer in the reign of King James, and in 1640 was counsel for the earl of Strafford. Died in 1650 or 1651.

LANFRANC, archbishop of Canterbury, was born at Pavia in 1005. When but a young man, and after having studied at Bologna, he travelled into France, stayed for a time at Avranches, and entered the monastery of Bec, of which he ultimately became the prior. His teaching here attracted immense crowds of students from all the countries of Europe. William, duke of Normandy, appointed him in 1062 abbot of the monastery of St. Stephen at Caen. He refused the archbishoprick of Rouen, but as counsellor to the Conqueror he came over to England, and was by his influence elected to the see of Canterbury in 1070, and he remained in this high office till he died, May, 1089. Lanfranc was a man of independent spirit, and was no vulgar flatterer of popish pretensions, while he stoutly contested the pre-eminence with Thomas, the archbishop of York. He was also a politician of no mean order, and took an active share in all the business of church and state. He was besides one of the early founders and expositors of the scholastic philosophy. He has left commentaries on the Epistles of Paul, a tract on transubstantiation, and some letters. His works were published by Luc D'Achery, in one volume folio, at Paris, 1648; and in England by Dr. Giles, Oxford, 1844, in two volumes, 8vo. [J.E.]

LANFRANC, an Ital. wr. on surgery, 13th cen.

LANFRANC, or LANFRANCO, Giovanni, an Italian painter, pupil of A. Caracci, 1581-1647.

LANFREDINI, J., an Ital. cardinal, 1680-1741.

LANG, Ch. N., a Swiss naturalist, 1670-1741.

LANG, or LANGE, John Michael, a German divine and Oriental scholar, 1664-1731.

LANGALLERIE, Philip De Gentil, Marquis De, a military officer who served thirty-two campaigns in the French army, and, in consequence of a quarrel with his superiors, entered into the service of Austria, and was subsequently known at the courts of Poland and the Hague. He was imprisoned by the Austrians on a charge of intriguing with the Turks, and died at Raab, 1717.

LANGARA, Don J., a Sp. admiral, 1730-1800.

LANGBAINE, Gerard, an English divine, author of several learned works in history and theology, 1608-1658. His son, of the same name, author of 'English Dramatic Poets,' &c., born 1656.

LANGBEIN, A. F., a Ger. writer, 1737-1835.

LANGDALE, Lord, Henry Bickersteth, a celebrated English lawyer, 1783-1851.

LANGDALE, Sir Marmaduke, an English officer, dist. in the civil wars as a royalist, d. 1661.

LANGE, Anne Frances Elizabet
actress, born at Genoa of Fr. parents,
LANGE, C., a German philologist, d
LANGE, F., a French painter, 1676-
LANGE, F., a French writer on law,
LANGE, J., a Prussian physician, 14
LANGE, J., a German jurisconsult,
LANGE, J., a German philologist, di
LANGE, J. R., a Flemish painter, di LANGE, Laurence, a Swedish tra ployed as ambassador to China by Peter and appointed governor of Irkoutsk on from his third mission in 1737. He p narrative of his travels, which contain teresting information on China and the LANGE, Rodolph, provost of Mu tinguished for his learning, and for his revival of polite literature in Germany,
LANGE, W., a Danish savant, 1622-LANGEBECK, James, a learned philologist of Jutland, author of works
ing Danish history and antiquities, 1710
LANGELAND. See Longland.
LANGENDYK, P., a Dutch poet, 17
LANGERON, Count Andrault De officer in the service of Russia, 1763-183
LANGES, N. De, a Fr. antiquarian,
LANGETTI, J. B., an Ital. painter,
LANGHAM, Simon De, an English rose to be abbot of St. Peter's, Westmi finally, archbishop of Canterbury and car name occupies a considerable place in t of the reign of Edward III., who seized t ralities of his see, and was a long while with him and his party. He died at 1376, but his body was solemnly remo
Benet's chapel in Westminster Abbey, tomb still exists.

LANGHORNE, Daniel, an English
as a writer on British history and antiq.

LANGHORNE, John, known as a mi writer and poet, was born at Kirkby S Westmoreland, 1735, and lived by his po a tutor and curate in the Church of Eng was the author of many fugitive pieces, from about 1759 to 1765, when he beca tributor to the 'Monthly Review,' and, period to his death, in 1779, enjoyed c repute in the literary world—such as it
In 1804, his son published an edition of with a life of the author; and his brot liam, who died before him in 1772, had cal skill, and assisted Langhorne in a of Plutarch.

LANGLE, H. M., a Fr. composer, 17
LANGLE, J. M., a French divine,
His son, Samuel, author of a 'Letter ferences between the Church of Englan
Dissenters,' died 1699.

LANGLES, L. M., a Fr. Orientalist,
LANGLEY, B., an English architect,
LANGLOIS, Eustace Hyacinthe designer, engraver, and antiquarian, 17
LANGLOIS, J., a French journalist,
LANGLOIS, J. B., a French Jesuit,
LANGLOIS, M., a Latin poet of the LANGRISH, B., an Eng. mod. write
LANGTOFT, P., an Eng. chronicler, LANGTON, Stephen, an English

ucated in France, and appointed to the see of anterbury by Innocent III., in the reign of King ohn. The quarrel on this occasion, between the pope and the crown, brought the kingdom under an interdict, and the king was compelled to yield possession of the diocese, upon which Langton entered in 1213. Langton was a learned man, and wrote commentaries on the Scriptures. He also became a strenuous advocate of the independence of the English Church, and manfully resisted the tyranny of the pope. Died 1228. [E.R.]

LANGUET, HUBERT, a French diplomatist and political writer, who, being a protestant, narrowly escaped the massacre of St. Bartholomew, and died in the service of the prince of Orange, 1518-1581.

LANGUET DE GERGY, JEAN BAPTISTE JOSEPH, a doctor of the Sorbonne, distinguished as a charitable founder, 1675-1753. His brother, JEAN JOSEPH, a member of the French Academy, and archbishop of Sens, also distinguished for his benevolence, 1677-1753.

LANGUSCO, PHILIP, Count De, a Guelph leader, who held the supreme power at Pavia from 1300 to 1313, died a prisoner at Milan 1315.

LANIERE, N., an Italian musician, 1568-1646.

LANINO, B., a Lombard painter, died 1558.

LANJUINAIS, JOSEPH, a French ecclesiastic, converted to protestantism, and an associate of the encyclopædists, died about 1808.

LANJUINAIS, JEAN DENIS, nephew of the preceding, distinguished as a great Oriental scholar and lawyer, but more especially for his consistent advocacy of constitutional principles, under every change of the French government, from the assembly of the states-general to the restoration. He is the author of many political and learned works, and was a considerable contributor to the reviews and journals. Born at Rennes 1753, died 1827.

LANNAY, CH. DE, an able general of Brabant, at first in the service of Charles V., about 1470-1527.

LANNAY, J. C., a Dutch poet, 1738-82.

LANNEAU, PETER ANTHONY VICTOR ARGY DE, a French grammarian and ecclesiastic, 1758-1830.

LANNES, JEAN, Duc De Montebello, one of Napoleon's marshals, was born at Guienne 1769, and apprenticed to a dyer. In 1792, he entered the army as a volunteer, and distinguished himself in the first campaign of Italy, and afterwards in the principal actions which have shed such a lustre on the French arms. He was mortally wounded at the battle of Essling, in 1809; and Napoleon uttered the remarkable eulogium upon him, that he had become greater by every day's experience. At first, he said, Lannes had more valour than genius (which, but his spirit was continually mounting above the level of his courage; and he, whom he had found a pigmy, he lost a giant! [E.R.]

LANOUE, DENIS DE, a Fr. printer, died 1650.

LANOUE, FRANCIS DE, one of the most celebrated Calvinist captains of the 16th century, distinguished in the principal actions fought with the League, and killed at the siege of Lamballe, 1590-1591. He is the author of 'Military and Political Dissertations.' His son, ODET, a man of letters, was also in the military service of Henry IV.; and STANISLAUS LOUIS DE LA NOUE, of the same family, served in the French armies in the campaign of 1741 and 1756, and was killed in the affair of Saxenhausen, 1760. He is the author of 'New Military Constitutions.' His life was written by Toustain.

LANOUE, J. S. DE, a Fr. dramatist, 1701-61.

LANSBERG, J., a Bavarian ascetic, died 1539.

LANSBERGHE, P., a Flem. astron., 1561-1632.

LANSSELUIS, P., a Sp. Hebraist, 1580-1632.

LANTARA, S. M., a French painter, 1745-78.

LANTIEN, S. F. DE, a Fr. author, 1736-1826.

LANZANI, A., a Lomb. painter, 1645-1712.

LANZI, LUIGI, an Italian antiquarian and philologist, and writer on the fine arts, 1732-1810.

LANZONI, J., an Italian savant, 1663-1730.

LAO-TSEE, LAO-TSEU, or LAA-KIUN, a Chinese philos., who is regarded as the reformer of the sect of Tao-Tsee, flourished in the 6th c. B.C.

LAPARA, L., a French engineer, 1651-1706.

LAPEROUSE, JEAN FRANÇOIS GALAUP DE, was born at Alby, dep. of Tarn, 1741. At the age of fifteen he was appointed a midshipman in the French navy, and served with great distinction at home, in the East Indies, and in Canada, up till the peace of 1783. Soon after, he was put in command of an expedition destined to explore the Pacific, with instructions admirably laid down, but embracing a range of discovery much too wide for one expedition to overtake in a reasonable time. The French government had been excited by the example of England, and longed to reap such a harvest of glory as had been recently gained for her by her most accomplished and successful navigator.—La Perouse was to determine everything left incomplete by Cook, to fill up every gap in the maritime geography of the globe. Verification of Cook was not contemplated; for the French authorities had full confidence in his accuracy, and La Perouse regarded his memory with 'unbounded veneration.' The expedition consisted of two fine frigates, the Boussole and Astrolabe, fitted out in the most complete manner, and with such a staff of scientific men as had never before been sent afloat. Yet there is hardly an expedition on record which ended so disastrously, and to which a like melancholy interest has so long attached. On the 1st August, 1785, the expedition sailed from Brest, and proceeded westwards by the straits of Magellan; and after visiting several islands in the Pacific, hastened to fulfil instructions by making the American coast in lat. 59° N., and exploring it southwards from the point where Cook had begun his examination, going north. But as La Perouse found it impossible to reach this latitude earlier than June (1786), and as his instructions obliged him to be in China by February, too little time remained for a satisfactory survey of this broken coast. He arrived at Monterey in September, repaired the ships there, and crossing the Pacific westwards, fixed the position of the Ladrone and Bashee islands, and on 2d January, 1787, cast anchor at Macao. The work appointed for the succeeding summer was an investigation of the coast of Tartary from Corea towards the N.E. This La Perouse successfully accomplished, and was the first to give an accurate coast outline of those regions. From Kamtschatka, with the permission of the Russian governor, he sent M. de Lesseps home to France, overland, with his journals and despatches; a duty which this enterprising young man safely fulfilled, and was thus the first who crossed through the whole length of the old world. The expedition now sailed south to the Navigator's islands, where twelve persons belonging to the ships, among whom was M. de Langle, captain of the Astrolabe, were killed in an unexpected attack by the natives. La Perouse soon after reached Botany Bay, where he refitted for his third voyage. Before proceeding upon this, however, he fortunately sent home by some English ships the journals and charts of his various discoveries from the time M. de Lesseps had left. His plan of operations for the future was laid down in a despatch, dated 7th February, 1788; this proved to be the last communication ever made by him. He sailed from Botany Bay in the same month, and from that date till the year 1826, all trace of the expedition was lost—its fate was involved in complete mystery. In 1791, an expedition was sent out under D'Entrecasteaux (q. v.), in search of the lost navigators; but no intelligence was obtained. No further effort was made by the French: but the fate of La Perouse was a constant subject of inquiry to the voyagers of other nations. At length, in May, 1826, Captain Dillon, in the ship St. Patrick, returning from Valparaiso to Pondicherry, and calling at the island of Tucopia, in the northern part of the New Hebrides group, to learn the fortunes of some persons landed there in 1813, from the ship Hunter, Captain Robson, on board of which Dillon had been at the time, found in possession of one of those persons who was a Lascar, a silver sword guard, on which he thought he could trace the initials of La Perouse's name. His curiosity was strongly excited, and he at once instituted inquiries among the natives. From some of them who had visited the adjoining isles, he found that two ships had been many years before wrecked on one to the N.W. called Vanikoro, or Recherche isle; and that several articles of French manufacture were in possession of the islanders. With this intelligence he returned to India; and in January, 1827, was sent out in command of a ship, the Research, to make a full investigation of the facts. He returned to Calcutta in April; and in February, 1828, reached Paris with many relics of Perouse's ships, collected at the island of Vanikoro. Several brass guns were raised from a coral reef; and many articles were purchased from the natives—as fragments of a theodolite, barometer tubes, iron bolts and bars, pieces of china, the backboard of a ship with the fleur-de-lis carved upon it, a silver candlestick, a ship's bell with the inscription 'Bazin m' a fait,' millstones, &c. Count Lesseps, who was still living, believed the backboard to be that of the Boussole, that the guns and millstones were the same as he had seen in the ships; and Sir William Betham determined certain armorial bearings on the bottom of the candlestick to belong to the family of Colignon, the name of the botanist who was on board the Boussole. The natives asserted to Captain Dillon that one of the ships had struck, and then gone down in deep water, at a place pointed out by them; and that the other ran on a coral reef, and kept together till the crew had landed upon the island, where they remained five months, and then sailed away in a small vessel of their own construction. It appears clear, therefore, that it was the Boussole which stuck upon the reef, Astrolabe that went down. Whether La was among those who left the island, a was the fate of those who thus braved the of the sea, must ever remain an imp mystery. Captain Dillon was received w favour by Charles X., and rewarded with sion of 4,000 francs. In the following French navigator Dumont D'Urville confi observations of Captain Dillon, and brou additional relics, raised from the reef o the Boussole went to pieces.

LAPIS, GÆTANO, an Ital. painter, 170

LAPLACE, PETER DE, a French m killed at the massacre of St. Bartholome of 'Commentaries on the State of Reli the Commonwealth,' 'The Use of Moral phy,' and 'The Excellence of the Chris ligion,' 1526-1572.

LAPLACE, PETER ANTHONY DE, a laneous writer, and translator of many works into French, including a wretched of Shakspeare and Otway, 1707-1793.

LAPLACE, PIERRE SIMON, Marquis at Beaumont-en-Auge, near Honfleur, in 1749, died in Paris on 5th May, 1827.

vain indeed to propose to present wit rigorous limits of our volume, either the or the achievements of this titanic G The works of his illustrious compeer La are also, in their detail, utterly remote f preciation, unless by masters in math science; but then, through the exquisite that great man, his perfect conception of and his eminent possession of that blend fusing imagination, which—on whatever cerns itself withal—demands, as a neces imposition of unity and symmetry,—the of the ordinary onlooker, cannot rest achievement of his, without discerning s of its import and beauty, and of its valu tending or rearranging some large d Analysis. That La Place had nothing Æsthetic Faculty, it would require inde thing beyond hardihood to assert,—seeing the Systeme du Monde he has left a r all Modern Astronomy, unsurpassed, fo cuity and elegance, in any Scientific Literat a verdict scarcely less favourable must nounced on parts of the Essai Philosoph les Probabilites and those exquisite, but and brief sketches of Mathematical History theless, it is unfortunately true, that in massive works—especially in that one his imperishable monument, the M Celeste—he has shown so great a negli disdain of art in composition, that to and chiefly through this defect, it is, to instructed, a heaviest labour to peruse it. ing apparently always of results, and ever of methods, he starts from one mod position to another, with perplexing r not caring apparently, provided he can co or rather present in successive order the has to expose, from what source his exhibit them comes, or whether or not set down as flowing easily and natural each other. Something of this appare gence ought undoubtedly to be laid to the character of his enterprise—one that could have been rivalled in its vastness at no former time, and which no one has ventured to undertake again; it was not like that which fell to the lot of Newton, viz.: the privilege to explain and establish for ever a grand Law of Nature,—but the pursuit of that Law through all the intricacies of the actual Universe, the tracking of it as modified by conditions and circumstances, and the precise evaluation of its effects. Still further; it seems by no means unlikely, that this overweight—so to speak—of his subject-matter, allowed him to permit himself that supreme indifference, which has so often induced reprehension, regarding the claims and discoveries of his predecessors and rivals. Lagrange's name, for instance, rarely mentions; one of the finest analytic discoveries of that Geometer he simply calls 'the formula [illegible] of the second book of the Mecanique Celeste;' he treats more summarily still, the remarkable deserts of our own Brook Taylor; nor indeed would any one go to his volumes for information in History, unless he is first in possession of the substantive merits of all our Analysts. If envy, or any feeling akin to it, gave rise to the singular reticence, the jealousy must indeed have been morbid; for, irrespective of the debt we owe him for his immense compositions, Laplace had achieved enough, of distinct and positive discovery, to secure as enduring a fame as will fall to any man, since the lifetime of Newton. His strokes, it is true, are apart and rugged; but they are both wide and deep. With an infelicity remarkable in him, Napoleon is said to have contemptuously designated Laplace the 'infinitesimal philosopher.' Infelicitously; inasmuch as scarcely any epithet could have been selected less applicable: there is no modern mathematician whose power of generalizing was more astonishing, or in whose mind it more preponderated. Open almost at any page, for instance, of the Introductory Theorie des Probabilites:—from the opening chapter which unfolds the yet unfathomed mystery of Generating Functions, down to the end—there are sown through it, as if broadcast, the germs of fresh methods—such as that with regard to definite integrals—and of wholly unsuspected mirrors. It is the same with all writings of his, whether on the metaphysics of his subject; ever and anon we find the largest views indicated in a casual or unpretending phrase; and—in still more palpable illustration—it may be permitted us to quote that far-famed 'Nebular Hypothesis,' which, be it exactly accurate or not, leads the astonished imagination—searching a solution of the fundamental constitution of our planetary system—back into the depths of ages, when organized orbs were not, or existed only in the foresight of the Generic Powers, that were then preparing their birth! From a mind of such a stamp, and indeed from no other, could have sprung his specific and lustrous contributions to Astronomy, for instance—the discovery of the long inequality of Jupiter and Saturn—the settlement of the old puzzle regarding the acceleration of the mean motion of the Moon—the theory of Jupiter's Satellites—or that earliest indication of conditions of stability within our system. Beyond and above all, however, the crowning glory of the 'infinitesimal philosopher' is unquestionably the power that conceived, and the corresponding fortitude that executed the Mecanique Celeste. This book, as we have said, had no predecessor; and a second Laplace must arise, ere it shall be threatened by a rival. Extending to five quarto vols. of investigation generally abrupt through its overcondensation, it is divided into the sixteen books whose general titles we subjoin. 1. The General Laws of Equilibrium and Motion. 2. The Law of Universal Gravitation, and the Motion of the Centres of Gravity of the Celestial Bodies. 3. The Figure of the Celestial Bodies. 4. The Oscillation of the Sea and the Atmosphere. 5. The Rotation of the Celestial Bodies. 6. Particular Theories of the Planets. 7. Theory of the Moon. 8. Theory of the Satellites of Jupiter, Saturn, and Uranus. 9. Theory of Comets. 10. Miscellanea, Refraction, &c. 11. Figure and Rotation of the Earth. 12. Attraction and Repulsion of Spheres, and the Statics and Dynamics of Elastic Fluids. 13. Oscillation of Fluids covering Planets. 14. Precession, Libration, and the Ring of Saturn. 15. Supplement to Book II. 16. Further views concerning the Satellites.—Within this immense programme—placed as if parenthetically—one finds the most striking notices on almost every important problem of mechanical physics; any one of which, would have made the fortune of an ordinary mathematician. The Student, betaking himself to Laplace, must not go, however, under any delusion. To the best informed we have said, the perusal of this stupendous work is no holiday task: nor should that valuable assistance be declined, afforded by the annotated translation of the Mecanique, munificently presented to the world by the excellent American Dr. Bowditch.—In an unhappy hour for the completeness of his fame, Laplace went aside from the field of pure science to become a politician. The cause of Napoleon's displeasure with him is unknown; certainly the Emperor himself gave no correct account of it. For many reasons, indeed, we should consider Laplace quite unlikely to take successful part in that great game, in which Empires were the stakes; but that had signified less, if he had preserved an ordinary constancy. To the First Consul, he had dedicated the First Edition of the Mecanique,—not living to publish a second. But from the Second Edition of the Theorie des Probabilites—published after the Restoration—he meanly struck out the former dedication to Napoleon Empereur. One has required so often to lament political degeneracy among Scientific men in France, and their proneness to bend the knee before existing power, that it is refreshing to turn to the unsullied integrity of our late illustrious Arago.—Another charge, commonly brought in this country against our mathematician, we are constrained in all honesty to repudiate; at the very least, we demand the verdict of Not Proven. Originating, we believe, in Professor Robison's feverish book on continental Free Masonry, and further sustained by mistaken views as to the relations of the 'Nebular Hypothesis,'—the rumour has gone wide abroad, among the religious public of Great Britain, that this great Geometer professed himself, or was an Atheist. It is scarcely necessary to say that Laplace never wrote on Ontology: but we deem it incumbent to add, that after a careful review of his written works, with reference to this interesting point, we are prepared to disallow the title of any one to repeat such an assertion. In the present state of thought and language on such matters, there is no rule which ought to be more sacred than this,—Sentiments ought never to be imputed; nor that right tampered with, which belongs to every man—the right to define and designate his own. Concerning those loftier verities of Ontology, vision, alas! does not come equally clearly to all! But one's apprehension of Realities so aweple, must not be measured by his degree of glibness in speech, or that often irreverent aptness in the repetition of words and formulas, which in itself, argues, after all, nothing superior to the parrot's faculty. To the failings of this great French Geometer, the splendour even of his achievements, ought, indeed, in nowise to blind us: in regard to the relations of his inner soul to the Infinite, if we cannot rest without curiosity, at least let us judge justly, in charity, and with hope—recalling, in all humility, his own last words on Earth—Ce que nous connaissons est peu de chose; ce que nous ignorons est immense! [J.P.N.]

LAPO, JAMES, or JACOPO, of which it is the diminutive, a distinguished Florentine artist, died 1262. His son, ARNOLPHO, an architect and sculptor, died 1300. Another LAPO, or JACOPO, distinguished as a canonist, died 1381; and RICCIO DI LAPO, a painter of Florence, and grandfather of Giottino, was born 1330.

LAPPOLI, MATTHEW, an Italian painter, died 1504. His son, J. ANTHONY, a painter, 1492-1552.

LARA, a celebrated Spanish family, the founder of which was Ferdinand Gonzalez, count of Castile and Lara, died 970. In 1130, the family was divided into two branches, the first with MANRIQUE DE LARA, who took the title of viscount of Narbonne, for its stock; and the second deriving from ORDOGNO PEREZ, and preserving the title of count of Lara, until it became extinct in the latter half of the 14th century. The members of this family played an important part in the civil wars of Castile, under Alphonso X., Sancho IV., Ferdinand IV., and Alphonso XI., with whom they often disputed the crown.

LARCHER, P. H., an eminent French critic and Hellenist, anthor of remarks on Voltaire's philosophy of history, under the title of a 'Supplement,' &c., 1726-1812.

LARDIZABAL, DON MANUEL DE, minister of Ferdinand VII., 1750-1823.

LARDNER, DR. NATHANIEL, a learned dissenting minister, author of 'Credibility of the Gospel History,' 'Letter on the Logos,' 'A Vindication of Three of our Saviour's Miracles,' 'The Testimonies of the Ancient Jews and Pagans in favour of Christianity,' a 'History of Heretics,' &c. Dr. Lardner was educated among the presbyterians, and, in 1729, became assistant minister at Crutched Friars, 1684-1768.

LA REVEILLERE-LEPEAUX, LOUIS MARIE, described by Napoleon as a hot and sincere patriot, and a fanatic by temperament, was born 1753, and became a member of the constituent assembly, the convention, the council of elders, and the directory. He had a considerable share in the direction of affairs, and was chief of the sect of Theophilanthropists. His peculiar talents led him t tention to the details of business, w
Barras the exercise of authority. Di
LARGILLIERE, N., a Fr. painter
LARIVE, J. M. DE, a Fr. tragedia
LARIVEY, P. DE, a Fr. dramatis
LARIVIERE, P. J. H., a member assembly and convention, dist. amon dists, whose fate he escaped by flight.
LA ROCHEFOUCAULD. See CAULD.
LA ROCHEJAQUELEIN. See R
LEIN.
LA ROMANA, MARQUIS DE, a Sp
dist. against the French in the late w
LAROON, M., a Dutch painter, 1
LARREY, DOMINIQUE JEAN, B
brated military surgeon, and devote Napoleon Buonsparte, who pronoun most virtuous man that he had know LARREY, ISAAC DE, a French hi reformed religion, who fled to Holland cation of the edict of Nantes, au. of England,' a 'Hist. of Louis XIV.,' &c
LARRIVEE, H., a French actor, LARROQUE, MATTHEW DE, a F
tant and controversial divine, 1619-16
DANIEL, a protestant minister, and Véritables Motifs de la Conversion la Trappe,' 1660-1731.
LARRUYA, E., a Span. statistici
LARUE, GERVAIS DE, a Frenc and antiquarian savant, author of Trouvères,' &c., 1751-1835.
LARUE, J. S. DE, a Fr. historian,
LARUETTE, J. L., a French acto
LA SALLE, ANT. C. L. COLLINE
general of cavalry, killed at Wagram,
LA SALLE, H., a French author,
LASCA, the assumed name of A.
a burlesque poet and novelist of Flor LASCARIS. Two learned Greek were among the fugitives who quitte nople in 1454. The first, CONSTANTI died at Messina 1493. He is the first book printed in the Greek ch
second, ANDREW JOHN LASCARIS, family, distinguished as a scholar and was patronised by Leo X., and becam the Greek college founded at his Died at Rome 1535. Constantine L erally called BYZANTINUS, and John John, RHYNDACENUS.
LASCARIS, A., an Ital. economis
LASCARIS, P., grand mas. of Malt LASCARIS, THEODORE, a Greek as THEODORE I., son-in-law of A emperor of Constantinople. After that city by the crusaders in 1203, sessed himself of Bithynia, Lydia, the Archipelago, and of a part of P
he formed into a kingdom, with Nic tal, and reigned over it from 1206 1222. The second of the same nam succeeded his father, John Ducas, Nicæa 1255, and died 1259. The so named JOHN LASCARIS, succeeded years of age, and died the same year.
sor was Michael Palæologus.

…S CASES. The count of this name, MARIN …PH EMMANUEL AUGUSTE DIEUDONNE, was …renchman of patrician origin, whose history is …d of a chivalrous devotion to Napoleon Buona…rte. He was born at the chateau of Las Cases, …the department of the Haute-Garonne, in 1766, …nd acquired distinction in several actions as a …aval officer: among these, was the storming of …ibraltar by the combined fleets of France and …pain. At the outbreak of the French revolution, …e joined the emigrants at Coblentz, and after …aring in the fruitless efforts of the Vendean war …nd the expedition to Quiberon, settled in Eng…nd. He was among the first of the emigrants …return to France on the invitation of Napoleon; …d having engaged himself as a volunteer under …nadotte, when the English attacked Flushing …1809, he became known to the emperor, and …nally rose high in his confidence. His loyalty …poleon shone the brighter for his reverses in …and the year following, when he accompanied …o St. Helena, and remained in the closest inti… with him for eighteen months. At the close …h day, Las Cases noted all that transpired, …very thought expressed by the emperor, in a …k, which has since been published as a 'Me… of Sainte Hélène;' and in the perusal of … it must be remembered, that it came under …e of Napoleon, leaf by leaf, as it was writ… This modern Bayard was at length sent a …er to England, and treated with every indig…ot to say petty spite, by the government of …ne, under Lord Castlereagh. The Emperor …e at last interfered in his favour, and he was …d to pass the remainder of his days in peace …vicinity of Paris. Died 1842. [E.R.]

…SCO, or LASKI, JOHN A, a Polish theolo…n, as a promoter of the reformation, d. 1560.

…SCY, or LACY, PETER, Count De, an Irish … who entered into foreign service after the …st of Ireland by William III., and became a …arshal of Russia, and governor of Lithuania, …1751. His son, JOSEPH FRANCIS MAURICE, … De Lascy, born at St. Petersburg 1725, be… a marshal in the service of Austria, d. 1801.

…SERNA SANTANDER, CH. AN., a learned …an, an. of 'Dict. Bibliographique,' d. 1813.

…SIUS, L. O., a Ger. philologist, 1675-1750.

…SNE, M., a French engraver, 1596-1667.

…SSALA, M., a Spanish poet, 1729-1798.

…SSALLE, A. DE, a Fr. metaph., 1754-1829.

…SSELS, RICHARD, an Oxford scholar, who …e a convert to Romanism, and wrote 'Travels …y,' born 1603, died at Montpellier 1668.

…SSO, ORLANDO DI, an eminent musician of …ia, author of a great number of sacred com…ons, 1520-1596. His works were published …ons, RUDOLPH and FERDINAND, both of …distinq. themselves in the same profession.

…SSONE, J. M. F., a Fr. physician, 1717-88.

…SSUS, a Greek poet, about 500 B.C.

…SSUS, P., a French pathologist, 1741-1807.

…STESIO, NOEL, an Ital. savant, 1707-1792.

…STMAN, PETER, a Dutch painter, 1581-1649.

…on, NICHOLAS, a painter and engr., b. 1619.

…ATAPIE, F. DE PAULE, a French botanist, …or of 'Hortus Burdigalensis,' 1739-1823.

…ATHAM, JOHN, an English physician, eminent …n ornithologist and antiquarian, author of 'A General Synopsis of Birds,' in 6 vols. 4to; an 'Index Ornithologicus;' and 'A General History of Birds.' The latter is contained in 10 vols. 4to, and is esteemed his greatest work. Born at Eltham in Kent 1740, died 1837.

LATHAM, JOHN, a physician of London, author of several contributions to the Medical Transactions, and of a work on 'Diabetes,' 1761-1843.

LATIL, J. B. M. A. ANTHONY DE, cardinal and archb. of Rheims, conf. of Charles X., 1761-1839.

[Birth-place of Latimer.]

LATIMER, HUGH, one of the early English reformers, was born at Thurcaston, near Mount Sorrel, in Leicestershire, about 1472. After taking his degree at Cambridge, he entered into holy orders, and was quite a zealot on behalf of popery. The influence of Thomas Bilney induced him to scan the subject more thoroughly, and to study the Bible. His eyes were gradually opened, and at the age of fifty-three he renounced Romanism. His bold opinions against many Romish errors soon made him notorious in his own university and elsewhere. He even ventured to remonstrate with Henry VIII. on the sin and danger of prohibiting the Bible in English. Through the patronage of Thomas Cromwell he was appointed to a living in West Kinton, Wiltshire, where he preached with great earnestness and fervour the evangelical truths of the reformation; and he first became chaplain to Ann Boleyn and then bishop of Worcester in 1535. When the act of the six articles was passed, he dissented, and proved his sincerity by resigning his bishoprick. For his disinterestedness and firmness he was committed to the Tower, where he lay a prisoner for six years; and though the accession of Edward led to his liberation, he would on no account resume the government of his see. No sooner had Mary ascended the throne, than Latimer, as might be anticipated, became a marked object of papal vengeance. He refused to fly from the royal citation, conscious that his hour was come. After a manly vindication of his opinions, he was, along with Ridley, condemned to the flames. On the day of his martyrdom at Oxford, 16th October, 1555, he appeared in a shroud, was, with his fellow-sufferer, bound by an iron chain to the stake, and five bags of gunpowder were fastened round his body. The faggots were kindled, and Latimer, turning to Ridley, cried with prophetic voice, 'Be of good comfort, master Ridley, and play the man. We shall this day light such a candle, by God's grace, in England, as, I trust, shall never be put out.' Latimer's sermons, which were collected and published, London, 1825, in two octavos, are distinguished by quaint and homely sense, and pointed and vigorous admonition, the offspring of a playful temper, a happy disposition, and a sincere and noble heart. [J.E.]

LATIMER, W., a dist. scholar of the 16th cent.

LATINI, BRUNETTO, a literary savant, and partizan of the Guelfs, author of 'Trésor de Toutes Choses,' a species of encyclopædia, written in French, and inventor of the Terza Rima. He was one of the first teachers of Dante, 1220-1294.

LATINI, LATINO, an Italian critic, 1513-1593.

LATOMUS, J., an adv. of Luther, died 1544.

LA TOUCHE-TREVILLE, LOUIS RENE MADELAINE LAVASSOR DE, vice-admiral of France, and deputy of the noblesse, 1745-1804.

LATOUR, THEODORE, a general and count of the Austrian empire, born 1780, appointed minister of war, and barbarously murd. by the popul. 1848.

LATOUR-MAUBOURG, MARIE VICTOR FAY, Marquis De, a royalist general, mimster of war in 1820, afterw. gov. of the 'Invalides,' 1756-1831.

LATOUR. See DE LATOUR, TOUR.

LATREILLE, PETER ANDREW, one of the greatest entomologists of France, member of the Academy of Sciences, and professor at the Museum of Natural History, 1762-1833.

LATROBE, B. H., an Eng. architect, d. 1820.

L'ATTAIGNANT, GABRIEL CHARLES DE, a French ecclesiastic, known as a popular poet and gallant, 1697-1779.

LATUDE, HENRY MAZERS DE, a French courtier, who was liberated from the Bastile in 1784, after an imprisonment of thirty-five years, occasioned by his intrigues against Madame Pompadour. He is the author of 'Memoirs,' which have made his name cel. throughout Europe, 1724-1804.

LAUD, WILLIAM, archbishop of Canterbury, and favourite minister of Charles I., was a prelate of great learning, and in all probability of sincere intentions, but he was carried away by the high sacerdotal and regal doctrines which prevailed under the Stuarts. He was born at Reading 1573, became fellow of St. John's College 1593, obtained a living in the Church of England 1607, and was appointed chaplain to James I. in 1611. With Laud's abilities and doctrines, promotion followed as a matter of course, and it became the aim of his life to unite the three kingdoms in one profession of religion. The power of the Star Chamber, courts of high commission, fines, penances, and all the means he could command, were strained to this purpose. Since the Union, the Scotch presbyterians had infused much of their own spirit into the English puritans, and when Prynne, Bastwick, and Burton, came bleeding from the scaffold, such a spirit was aroused as only the blood of those who had provoked it could allay in the minds of the people. It was in 1628 that Laud succeeded the duke of Buckingham as prime minister; in 1630 he became chancellor of Oxford; in 1633, archbishop of Canterbury, and chancellor of the university of Dublin: and in 1637, he procured that decree of the Star Chamber which destroyed the liberty of the press, and made him the universal censor and demi-gorgon of opinion in England. With full allowance for all urged in favour of his zeal for religio cause of learning, it is neither surpris regretted that he shared the fate Pity for an infirm old man, and the bigotry of his enemies, would persua wise. The historian, however, is bou choice between these emotions and the tion of a nation, to be followed eventu horrors as those of the French revolu was declared guilty of treason by a bi der, and executed on Tower Hill, 1645.

LAUDER, SIR TH. DICK, Baron novelist and miscellaneous writer, kno tributor to Blackwood's and Tait's Ma for his works descriptive of Scottish s at Edinburgh 1784, died 1848.

LAUDER, W., a Scotch writer, k false accusations of plagiary agt. Milt

LAUDERDALE, DUKE OF, an En man, minister of Charles II. from 167

LAUDERDALE, JAMES MAITLA a statesman of the party of Fox, bor ceeded his father as a Scotch peer 17 seat in the House of Lords as one of t tative peers of Scotland 1790, created United Kingdom, and became chancel land 1806, died 1840. The earl of La author of 'Letters to the Peers of Sco lished 1794, and devoted the last ten life to agricultural pursuits.

LAUDIVIO, L., an Italian poet, 15

LAUDON, GIDEON ERNEST, Baro brated Austrian gen. of Scotch descent

LAUDOUNIÈRE, RENE DE, a Fr man, distinguished in an attempt Florida, when nearly all his comp massacred by the Spaniards, author Notable de la Floride,' published 1586, after his adventure.

LAUGIER, A., a French chemist,

LAUGIER, M. A., a miscel. writer

LAUGIER DE TASSY, a Fr. hist

LAUJOU, P., a French dramatist,

LAUNAY, or LAUNEY, BERN JOURDAN, Marquis De, governor of t the commencement of the French re born in that fortress, of which his fa vernor before him, in 1740. The circ which he was placed by the attack of were so unprecedented, that it is n the most contradictory charges have b against him. Early in July, 1789, h by three strangers above the comme asked him what he intended to do if should be attacked? 'My conduct,' 'is regulated by my duty; I shall defe afterwards, he caused an immense qua der to be transferred from the arsenal tile, and, on the 14th of the month, the besieged and taken. Rather than yiel had seized a cannoneer's match to place, but he was turned back from t by two of his own officers with fix After the capitulation of the garrison h murdered, and his head paraded throug with six others, elevated on pikes. of his body is not known.—The Ba d in 1383, and when it was destroyed only prisoners were found in it. It was levelled ground as the monument of an arbitrary which had endured for ages; and the Me- of Latude, who had issued from its gloomy ls in 1784, after a confinement of thirty-five , were in all probability a great provocative destruction. [E.R.]

[Siege of the Bastile.]

LAUNEY, J. B. De, a Fr. deputy, 1752-1831.

LAUNOY, J. De, a doctor of the Sorbonne, own as a theologian and critic, 1603-1678.

LAURA, or LAURI, F., an Ital. paint., 1623-94.

LAURAGUAIS, Louis Le Felicite, Duc De ranois, and Count De, a French dramatist and miscellaneous writer, 1733-1823.

LAURATI, P., an Italian painter, 1282-1340.

LAUREMBERG, W., a Ger. physician, 1547-1612. His son, John, a mathematician, d. 1658.

LAURENBERG,, P., a physician, naturalist, and astronomer, 1585-1639. His brother, John, a Greek and Latin poet, hist., and math., 1590-1658.

LAURENCE, French, professor of civil law at Oxford, known as a miscellaneous writer, died 1809. His brother, Richard, professor of Hebrew, archbishop of Cashel, and a distinguished theologian, 1760-1839.

LAURENS, Andrew Du, a French physician and anatomist, died 1609. His brother, Honorius, archbishop of Embrun, under Henry IV., d. 1612.

LAURENS, Henry, an American statesman and ambassador, 1724-1792. His son, John, a dist. officer and friend of Washington, killed towards the close of the war at the age of twenty-six.

LAURENS, L. Des, a Fr. theologian, died 1671.

LAURENT, J. A., a Fr. painter, 1763-1833.

LAURENT, P., a French engraver, 1739-1809.

LAURENT, Peter Joseph, a mechanic of Flanders, celebrated as an hydraulic engineer, and the construction of artificial limbs, 1715-1773.

LAURIERE, E. J. De, a Fr. jurist, 1659-1728.

LAURISTON, James Alexander Bernard Law, marquis of, a diplomatist and marshal of France, grandson of Law, the financial projector, was born 1768. He was distinguished in the wars of the empire, and became ambassador to England as the bearer of the propositions of peace, or rather, of preliminaries of peace between Great Britain and France in 1802. He was promoted to the highest rank under Louis XVIII., and d. 1828.

LAUTREC, Odet De Foix, Seigneur De, one of the bravest captains of France in the 16th century, died at the siege of Naples 1528.

LAUWERS, N., a Flemish designer, born 1620.

LAUZUN. The Duke de Lauzun, formerly Count Antonine Nompar de Caumont, is the hero of an intrigue with Mademoiselle de Montpensier, the granddaughter of Henry IV., to whom, it was alleged, he was secretly married. Died, after a long imprisonment and exile, 1723.

LAVALETTE, Anth. De, a cel. Jesuit, whose shameful practices in the middle of last cent. contributed to the expulsion of his order from France.

LAVALETTE, Marie Chamans, Count De, a distinguished soldier of the French revolution, who was born 1769, and, becoming a favourite of Buonaparte, was appointed director-general of the post office, and counsellor of state under the empire. He shared the misfortunes of the emperor in 1814, but resumed his functions and promoted the cause of Napoleon during the hundred days, for which, after the restoration, he was condemned to death. By the aid of his wife, and three English gentlemen at that time in Paris, he had the good fortune to escape from prison. Died 1830.

LAVALETTE, Emilie Louise De Beauharnais, countess of, and wife of the preceding, deserves a separate notice for her conjugal fidelity and courage. Being a niece of the empress Josephine, she was married to Lavalette at the instance of Napoleon towards the close of the last century, and after the condemnation of her husband in 1815, whose execution was fixed for the 21st of December, she exchanged clothes with him in prison, and thus enabled him to escape. For her conduct on this occasion she was accused, along with her accomplices, of a conspiracy against the state; and though the charge could not be supported, the anxiety she had undergone, and the loss of her husband, ended in insanity.

LAVALLEE, John, Marquis De, a Fr. drama. and miscellan. writer in the magazines, 1747-1815.

LAVATER, H., a Swiss physician, 1560-1623.

LAVATER, John Gaspar, the famous writer on physiognomy, was born at Zurich 1741, and died in 1801 of the wounds which he received when his native town was taken by the French, under Massena, when he was busy in the streets animating the defenders and aiding the sufferers. He was pastor of the principal church in his native place, and has left a high character for moral purity and benevolence of disposition. His 'Physiognomy,' consisting indeed only of fragments, or materials, towards a system, was published in 4 volumes 4to, 1775, illustrated with numerous engravings. The popularity it immediately acquired was due, in some measure, to the fact that many of the heads were portraits, and his descriptions often a good-humoured satire upon well-known characters. Some of his hints are very valuable, and his inductions sufficiently supported by facts; but there are many crude observations, and proofs of hasty generalization, which have done much perhaps to prevent physiognomy from making any considerable progress. Besides this popular work, Lavater wrote 'Aphorisms on Man,' 'Jesus the Messiah,' 'Swiss Lays,' 'Spiritual Hymns,' 'A Look into Eternity,' and 'The Secret History of a Self-Observer.' He is unjustly ridiculed for his belief in spirits, and their agency in human affairs, which is nevertheless a characteristic common to the greatest names in literature and history. His real fault is want of method, without which the greatest philosophical insight must fail to create a system. It cannot be denied, however, that he excels as a moralist, and the more, perhaps, for this very deficiency. As an art-writer he may be more open to criticism, yet his work contains many valuable precepts. [E.R.]

LAVATER, L., a Swiss theologian, 1527-1586.

LAVAUR, W. De, a French author, 1653-1730.

LAVAUX, C., a French advocate, 1747-1836.

LAVAUX, J. C. T., a Ger. lexicog., 1749-1827.

LAVICOMTERIE DE ST. SAMPSON, Louis, a political writer, and partizan of the French revolution, au. of 'Crimes des Rois de France,' d. 1809.

LAVINGHAM, R., a prior of Bristol, au. of an abridgment of Bede's History, close of 14th cent.

LAVINGTON, George, bishop of Exeter, chiefly known for his 'Enthusiasm of the Methodists and Papists Compared,' was born 1683, and died 1762. This work, possessing singular humour, and marked by much learning, is utterly deficient in a true appreciation of the facts contained in the Diary of Wesley. As the raillery of a gentleman and a scholar, the book may be unexceptionable, but it is a singular production for a prelate of the church, and can only be excused by the extravagances it was intended to correct, and the ignorance of its author. Besides this amusing work, and its continuation applied to the Moravians, Bishop Lavington published some occasional sermons. [E.R.]

LAVOISIER, Antoine Laurent, born in Paris 1743, guillotined 1794. With the advantages of birth and station, Lavoisier acquired an excellent education, distinguishing himself at an early period by the precocity of his talents. Although Lavoisier might probably have gained celebrity by the discovery and determination of the characters of new bodies, he chose a more important field, viz. that of generalization, and of thus explaining the bearings of what appeared to others isolated facts of comparatively little import. It was by making use of the discovery of oxygen by Priestley that he was enabled to supply a theory of oxidation and combustion, which has stood the test of three quarters of a century, although he has laid himself open to the charge of at least want of candour in appearing to deprive Priestley and Rutherford of the credit of their discoveries of oxygen and nitrogen. By this theory he extinguished the idea of phlogiston which had only served to obscure all new discoveries. Another valuable contribution to the science by Lavoisier, was the chemical nomenclature which he is understood to have invented, and which is still retained, having served as the basis of all subsequent improvements in this important branch of the literature of the science. Occupied in his researches on respiration, and in the discharge of his government duties, he was suddenly deprived of life during the horrors of the French revolution. [R.D.T.]

LAW, Edmund, bishop of Carlisle, was born at Cartmel, in Lancashire, and lived 1703-1787. He was the author of an 'Inquiry into the Ideas of Space, Time,' &c., published 1734 or 1735, in a controversy with Dr. Clark, arising out of a previous translation by Law of Archbishop upon the Origin of Evil. His othe 'Considerations on the Theory of Re flections on the Life and Character of the works of Locke, with a life and p to these his sermons and lesser tra physical and theological subjects. I posed to the doctrine of analogy assun bishop King and Bishop Brown, ar the moral attributes of the human m same as those of the divine, only t greater in the latter case. See King

LAW, Edward. See Ellenbor

LAW, John, the celebrated financi was born at Edinburgh, son of a b smith there, about 1670; and being thematician and accountant, was emp government to bring the accounts of into order. Thus initiated into the l finances and of public business, and restless, scheming disposition, it appe that the industry of the country was for want of money to employ it. Tl famous project for a Land Bank. A mercial theory prevailed at that time its rise from the recent introduction o and the supposition that a large cur tutes the wealth of a country without commercial wants. The Bank of E the British banks generally, had act mistaken notion, created great ments and irritation, by suddenly li loans when they discovered the drain it created. It was at this juncture th forward with his scheme for issuing equal to the value of all the lands in t and on his proposal being rejected b ment of Scotland, carried it to the e finally procured its adoption by the leans, regent for Louis XV., their rity. Hitherto bank notes had not France. Mr. Law commenced his 1717, and between that period and 17 bubble burst, France was converted stock exchange, and at last covere Our limits do not admit of particula so difficult of explanation as financia but the basis of Law's project was paper money may be multiplied to provided there be security in fixed the truth is, if the bulk of a currenc beyond the actual wants of commerce, or separate coins and notes, must proportion. In the working out of L a trading company was created whi veyed to it the whole province of L the possessions of France on the bank sissippi, which, besides, obtained by charters and property of the Senegal India Company, and the China Comp came the sole public creditor by farmi of the taxes and revenues of the Ki ruin of this vast machinery at that p ment, and with the suddenness that was produced by an edict of the reg 1720, reducing the value of the note of Mr. Law's protestations, to an equa of the French coinage, which, in form frequently been altered by the gover its convenience. This breach of faith instantly stopped their circulation, the deplorable results of which went nigh to produce an insurrection of the people. Law became an exile, and after wandering in England, Holland, and Germany, at last died in Venice, fully convinced of the solidity of his system, 1729. See LAURISTON. [E.R.]

LAW, WILLIAM, one of the most powerful and original of English writers in the interest of religion, was born at Kingscliffe, in Northamptonshire, 1686, and educated for the Church of England at Emmanuel College, Cambridge, where he took the degree of M.A., and obtained a fellowship in 1711. On the death of Queen Anne, 1714, he refused to take the necessary oaths of allegiance to the new dynasty, and thus cut himself off from all hope of preferment in the church. In 1717, the Bangorian controversy was commenced by the attack of Hoadley on the principles and practices of the nonjurors, and Law defended his cause in 'Three Letters,' remarkable for their logical compactness and command of language. In 1721 and 1726, he made a further exhibition of his principles in 'Remarks on the Fable of the Bees,' and 'The Unlawfulness of Stage Entertainments.' In the latter year he also published his 'Christian Perfection,' and in 1729 his 'Serious Call to a Devout and Holy Life.' This work is universally acknowledged to be the most stirring appeal to the practical, common sense of mankind, in behalf of religion, ever written, and its 'characters' are not inferior for humour and conception to those of La Bruyère. It is the only work by which Law is known to the public at the present day. Our author had now become domesticated in the family of Gibbon, as tutor to the historian's father, with whose sister, Miss Hester Gibbon, and her friend, Mrs. Hutcheson, he afterwards established himself at Kingscliffe in the capacity of chaplain and almoner. After the 'Serious Call,' he published one of the most powerful of his logical works, entitled 'The Case of Reason,' in answer to Tindal's 'Christianity as Old as the Creation;' and this, excepting such correspondence as he carried on—in which he was a great master—was the last production of his pen before his adoption of the principles of Jacob Behmen. His acquaintance with those works may be traced to the years between 1733-1736. In 1737, he sprang like the eagle from fresh fastnesses, and published his book of the 'Sacrament' in answer to Hoadley, which unfolds his new philosophical divinity in the happiest manner. In 1739 appeared his 'Christian Regeneration,' which is really another 'Serious Call,' written from higher ground, followed by his 'Earnest and Serious Answer to Dr. Trapp,' who had attacked his 'Christian Perfection' and 'Serious Call.' In 1740 his 'Appeal' was given to the public, the aim of which is to confute Arianism and Deism from the very nature of things; and, in the same year, a rejoinder to his opponent, entitled, with a fine sense of the humorous, 'Dr. Trapp Vindicated from the Imputation of being a Christian.' In 1746, his 'Way to Divine Knowledge' opened the grounds of a positive religion, founded on the principles contained in the writings of his master. It was followed by the 'Spirit of Prayer,' introductory to the 'Spirit of Love,' published 1752, which is a masterly demonstration that the wrath to be quenched is not in God, but the creature, who can possess no goodness by birth of his natural parents. Law died in 1761, immediately after completing the most eloquent and perfect of all his works, 'An Humble, Earnest, and Affectionate Address to the Clergy.' It is not easy to do justice to his character and influence in few words; but he was the first teacher of Wesley, who afterwards quarrelled with him; and England owes him a great debt in the revival of evangelical religion, and the reaction against the worldliness of the church establishment, which characterized the commencement of last century. However mistaken in the foundations of his mystical system, he was always guided by high principle, even to the matter of his bachelorship, which he maintained to the end of his days. Besides the works we have mentioned, he edited an edition of Bœhmen, in 4 volumes 4to, which are embellished with drawings, made by a German named Frere. There are likewise some minor tracts from his pen, not included in our enumeration, and among these is a dialogue on 'Justification,' between a churchman and a Calvinistic methodist, published 1759, in answer to Beveridge. All the memoirs of Law are miserably deficient in appreciation of his genius and consistency. [E.R.]

LAWES, HENRY, the court musician of Charles I., and the composer of Milton's 'Comus,' &c., 1600-1662. His brother, WILLIAM, also a musical composer, the subject of the next notice.

LAWES, WILLIAM, a celebrated composer, was the son of Thomas Lawes, vicar-choral of Salisbury, of which city he was a native. In his early life he was a member of the choir of Chichester, from which place he was called to become one of the gentlemen of the chapel royal in 1602, and afterwards one of the church musicians to King Charles I. He lost his life at the siege of Chester, in the year 1645. [J.M.]

LAWLESS, JOHN, an Irish agitator, 1772-1837.

LAWRENCE, FRENCH. See LAURENCE.

LAWRENCE, J., an Eng. agricul., 1756-1836.

LAWRENCE, S., an E. Indian gen., 1697-1775.

LAWRENCE, THOS., an English physician and medical wr., an. of the life of Harvey, 1711-1783.

LAWRENCE, SIR THOMAS, P.R.A., was born at Bristol, 4th May, 1769. He obtained an early reputation at Bath as a portrait painter in crayons, and as early as 1787 established himself as a portrait painter in oils in London, where four years afterwards, 1791, he was elected an associate of the Royal Academy, and in 1795 an academician; he had previously succeeded Sir Joshua Reynolds as painter to the king. He was knighted by the prince regent in 1815, and in 1820 succeeded West as president of the Royal Academy. He died in London, 7th January, 1830.—Sir Thomas had perhaps, since the days of Vandyck, an unrivalled career as a portrait painter; he, however, owed his chief success to the skilful flattery of his female portraits, the complexions of which left nothing to be desired: his male pictures, as a rule, bear no comparison with his female; besides being ill-proportioned, they are wanting in manly character; still his portraits of the emperor Francis, of Pius VII., and of the Cardinal Gonsalvi, in the Waterloo Gallery at Windsor, are among the greatest masterpieces of the art extant.—

(Williams, The Life and Correspondence of Sir Thomas Lawrence, 1831.) [R.N.W.]

LAWSON, Sir John, a naval commander and royalist, killed in action with the Dutch, 1665.

LAX, Rev. W., an eminent astronomer, d. 1836.

LAYA, J. L., a French dramatist, 1761-1833.

LAYARD, C. P., a divine and scholar, d. 1803.

LAZARUS, prince of Servia, 1386.

LAZERI, P., an Italian theologian, 1710-1789.

LAZIUS, Wolfgang, a learned physician, and writer on history and antiquities, 1514-1565.

LAZOWSKI, a Polish refugee, distinguished as an active agent in the Fr. revolution, died 1793.

LAZZARA, N., an Ital. archæologist, 1744-1833.

LEACH, Wm. Elford, an eminent naturalist, and curator in the British Museum, 1790-1836.

LEAD, Jane, was a mystical writer, whose works date from 1683, or thereabouts, to the close of the century, and who died in 1704. She wrote from her own experience of the spiritual life, and the state of departed spirits, but qualified by a previous acquaintance with the system of Boehmen. Her works are a 'Revelation of Revelations,' explaining a portion of the Apocalypse, 'The Laws of Paradise given forth by Wisdom to a Translated Spirit,' 'The Wonders of God's Creation Manifested in the Variety of Eight Worlds,' &c. This woman, of singular learning and experience, belonged to a society of 'illuminati,' presided over by Dr. Pordage, and, at a later period, to the 'Philadelphians,' among whom Dr. Francis Lee was eminent. The latter has written the life of Jane Lead, and some prefaces to her works. She lived at a period when some great development from the spiritual world was universally expected, but especially in Germany. See Swedenborg. [E.R.]

LEAH, the wife of Jacob, and mother of Reuben, Simeon, Levi, Judah, Issachar, Zebulun, and Dinah, dates uncertain.

LEAKE, John, a phys. and medi. wr., d. 1792.

LEAKE, Richard, one of the bravest officers that ever served in the English navy, created master-gunner of all England, and celebrated for his skill in pyrotechnics, 1629-1696. His son, Sir John, admiral of England, celebrated for the relief of Gibraltar, &c., 1656-1720. Stephen Martyn Leake, nephew and biographer of Sir John, distinguished in heraldry and numismatics, 1702-1773.

LEANDER, a French ecclesiastic, died 1667.

LEANDER, a youth of Abydos, who was accustomed to swim across the Hellespont in order to visit his mistress on the opposite shore, and was at last drowned in a tempest, date unknown.

LEANDER, St., archbishop of Seville, 6th cen.

LEAPOR, Mary, the daughter of a poor gardener, authoress of original poems of great merit, and 'The Unhappy Father,' a tragedy, 1711-1735.

LEARCHUS, a Greek sculptor, B.C. 700.

LEBAILLY, A. F., a Fr. author, 1756-1832.

LEBAS, J. P., a French designer, 1707-1784.

LEBAS, P. F. J., a member of the French convention and Committee of Public Safety, killed himself when arrested with Robespierre, 1765-94.

LEBAUD, P., a French historian, 16th century.

LE BEUF, John, a Fr. historian, 1687-1760.

LEBID, Ben Rabiat, an Arab. poet, died 673.

LEBLANC, Claude, b. 1669, secretary of war to Louis XV. during the years 1713-1726, d. 1728.

LEBLANC, F., a Fr. numismatist, d

LEBLANC, H., a painter of Lyons,

LEBLANC, J., a French poet, died

LEBLANC, J. B., a French author,

LEBLANC, Marcel, a Jesuit missio au. of a 'Hist. of the Revol. of Siam,'

LEBLANC, R., a French classic, abo

LEBLANC, T., a Fr. commentator,

LEBLANC, V., a Fr. traveller, abt.

LEBLANC, W., bishop of Toulon, di as a philologist and Latin poet, 1520- nephew, of the same name, also a Latin poet, 1561-1601.

LEBLANC DE GUILLET, Anthon called, a dramatic author, 1730-1799.

LEBLOND, G. M., a Fr. numisma.,

LEBLOND, J. B., a Fr. naturalist,

LEBLOND, W., a Fr. mathematician,

LEBON, Jos., a mem. of the conv.,

LEBRET, H., a Fr. historian, died a

LEBRUN, A. L., a French author,

LEBRUN, C., a cele. French painter,

LEBRUN, C. F., duke of Placentia, statesman and scholar, time of Napo.,

LEBRUN, D., a French jurisconsult,

LEBRUN, J. B. P., a French painter,

LEBRUN, L., a Jesuit and poet, 16

LEBRUN, Pierre, a French theolo 'Histoire des Pratiques Superstitieuses,'

LEBRUN, Pigault, a Fr. novelist,

LEBRUN, Ponce Denis Ecouchar the most celebrated of French lyric poets at Paris, 1729-1807.

LEBRUN-DESMARETTES, J. B., writer, au of a 'Life of St. Paul,' &c., LECAT, C. N., a surgeon of Picardy,

LECCHI, G. A., an Ital. mathema.,

LECENE, C., a Calvinist minister,

LECERF, P., an ecclesiastical wr.,

LECERF DE LA VIEVILLE, J. B lor of Normandy, and a wr. on music, LECLERC, David, professor of Geneva, 1591-1665. His brother, St physician and scholar, died 1676.

LECLERC, John, nephew of the p laborious theological writer and critic, w are well known, and frequently quot learned. The most famous of his writi biblical history, and consist of commen written in Latin, lived 1657-1736. H Daniel, celebrated as a medical write tomist, 1652-1728. Laurent Josse son of John, also a learned writer, died

LECLERC, John, a French painter,

LECLERC, J. B., a member of the F vention, and writer on music, 1755-182

LECLERC, M., a dramatic writer,

LECLERC, N. G., a French physici of 'Histoire Physique, Morale, Civile, de la Russie,' 1726-1798.

LECLERC, P., a famous Jansenist,

LECLERC, S., a cele. Fr. engraver,

LECLERC, Victor Emanuel, a Fr ral, who distinguished himself in Italy married to Pauline, the sister of Nap afterwards became the wife of Prince Ca hese. Leclerc, who entered the republic a volunteer, was born in 1772, and died low fever on an expedition to St. Domi LECLERCQ, C., a French missionary, 17th ct.

LECOAT, YVES MARIA GABRIEL P., a French admiral, appointed by Buonaparte military chief of the port of Boulogne, 1757-1826.

LECOCQ, R., a politician of the 14th cent.

LECOINTRE, LOUIS, called 'Lecointre of Versailles,' a deputy to the legislative assembly and the French convention, and a bitter enemy of the Girondists, born 1750, died unnoticed 1805.

LECOMTE, F., a French sculptor, 1737-1817.

LECOMTE, J., a Latin poet, died 1707.

LECOMTE, L., a Jesuit and astronomer, author of 'Memoirs on the State of China,' died 1729.

LECOMTE, L., a French sculptor, 1643-1695.

LECOMTE, M., a female engraver, born 1719.

LECONTE, A., a French jurisconsult, d. 1586.

LECONTE, L. J. F., a French author, d. 1740.

LE-CONTEUR, JOHN, a native of Jersey, dist. as an officer of the British army in India, where he became the prisoner of Tippoo Sultan, 1761-1835.

LECT, JAMES, a lawyer of Geneva, 1560-1614.

LEDERLIN, J. H., a Ger. philolog., 1672-1737.

LEDERMUTTER, M. F., a physician of Nuremberg, an. of a work on the microscope, 1719-1760.

LEDESMA, A. DE, a Spanish poet, 1552-1623.

LEDOUX, C., a French architect, 1736-1806.

LEDRU, A. P., a French botanist, 1761-1831.

LEDRU, N. P., a French physician, 1731-1807.

LEDWICH, E., an Irish antiquary, 1739-1823.

LEDYARD, JOHN, a famous American traveller, born at Groton, in Connecticut, 1751. After a residence among the Indians he came to England, and sailed with Captain Cook on his second voyage, the narrative of which he published. His next enterprise was a pedestrian tour round the globe; but being prevented from continuing his journey by the Russian government, he returned to London, and was employed by the African Association. He had proceeded as far as Grand Cairo, with the design of penetrating the interior of that interesting country, when he died of a virulent disease, 1788.

LEE, ANNE, sometimes considered the founder of the Shaking Quakers, was born at Manchester, 1735, and after becoming the mother of several children, whom she lost at an early age, gave herself up to religious contemplation, with the conviction that the union of the sexes was the original sin. The society to which she attached herself had been founded by three prophets from the Cévennes, who came to London in 1705, and it was greatly advanced by a person named James Wardley, in 1747. Anne Lee, having become the marked medium of a spiritual manifestation, was recognized as their spiritual head, or 'mother in Jesus Christ,' in 1771. In 1774, she accompanied some of her people to America, in order to escape persecution, and after travelling through New England, fixed her abode in the neighbourhood of Albany, where she died, or, in the language of her proselytes, 'withdrew from their bodily view,' 1784. Her case is a very remarkable one. Among other statements, she declared that no one had entered into heaven until the year 1776, which marked the commencement of a new dispensation; and she claimed for herself to be regarded as the 'Bride of the Lamb,' mentioned in the 12th chapter of the Apocalypse. Her followers increased to a considerable number after her death, and, for a short time at least, established a community of goods. [E.R.]

LEE, CHARLES, a British officer, who engaged in the service of General Washington in the American war of independence, died 1782.

LEE, EDWARD, archbishop of York in the reign of Henry VIII., and a zealous opposer of Luther, 1482-1544.

LEE, FRANCIS, a learned writer on philosophical, scriptural, and mystical subjects, was a physician, descended, by his mother, from the Percies of Northumberland, and by his father from the same family as the earls of Lichfield. He was born in 1660, and being left an orphan when between four and five years of age, was educated under the care of his aunt, Mrs. Elizabeth Jenkins. On receiving a fellowship at Oxford, he became tutor to Sir W. Dawes, afterwards archbishop of York, and at a later period to the son of Lord Stawell, with whose family he remained on terms of intimacy many years after. From 1691 to 1694 he travelled in Italy, and practised as a physician for some time at Venice. In 1708 he was in London. In 1719 he went to France, and died on his journey at Gravelines. It is a curious circumstance that he was known to Peter the Great, and, at his request, drew up proposals for the advancement of his kingdom, the spirit of which, if not the form, has continued to guide the czars of Russia. His works are very numerous, but they were all published anonymously, or in the names of others. Some of them were collected in two volumes octavo, and published for the benefit of his wife and daughter, but these were by no means his most important labours—among which may be reckoned his 'History of the Montanists.' His mystic poems are among the highest of that class, and his scriptural commentaries, though false in essential principles, exceedingly ingenious. [E.R.]

LEE, HENRY, an American general, who commenced his career in the army of independence, and was afterwards governor of Virginia, 1756-1818.

LEE, NATHANIEL, an English dramatic writer, author of the 'Rival Queens,' &c. Having attempted the stage as an actor without success, he directed his powers to dramatic composition, and produced a number of tragedies. He latterly became insane, and was two years an inmate of Bedlam, died 1692.

LEE, RACHEL FANNY ANTONINA, a lady of fortune, an. of an 'Essay on Government,' d. 1829.

LEE, SAMUEL, a nonconf. divine, 1625-1691.

LEE, Rev. SAMUEL, D.D., late regius professor of Hebrew in the university of Cambridge, and a great master of biblical and Oriental literature, was originally a poor carpenter, and was born in the neighbourhood of Shrewsbury, 1783. He is one of the most remarkable instances on record of perseverance in self-education under the most embarrassing circumstances, rewarded at last by the highest success in the honourable career he had chosen. His principal works are a Hebrew Grammar, a Hebrew Lexicon, and a new translation of Job. He was editor of the Scriptures in the Arabic, Persian, and Malay languages. Died 1852.

LEE, SOPHIA, a novelist and dramatic writer, author of 'The Chapter of Accidents,' and of three stories in the 'Canterbury Tales' of her sister, Miss Harriet Lee, born in London 1750, died 1824.

LEECHMAN, W., a Scottish divine, 1706-1785.

LEEM, CANUTE, a savant of Norway, 1697-1774.
LEEPE, J. A. VAN., a Dut. painter, 1664-1720.
LEEUW, G. VANDER, a Dutch paint., 1643-88. His br., PETER, of the same profession, 1644-1705.
LEEUWEN, S., a Dutch jurist, 1625-1682.
LEEVES, WILLIAM, a country clergyman, and composer of sacred music, author of the air of 'Auld Robin Gray,' 1749-1828.
LEFEBRE, V., a Flemish engraver, born 1642.
LEFEBURE, S., a French engineer, died 1770.
LEFEBURE, L. H., a Fr. botanist, 1754-1839.
LEFEBVRE, A. B., a Fr. engineer, 1734-1807.
LEFEBVRE, FRANCIS JOSEPH, duke of Dantzic, a marshal and peer of France, commander of the imperial guard at the battle of Jena, 1755-1820.
LEFEBVRE, P., a French author, 1705-1784.
LEFERON, J., a Fr. wr. on heraldry, 16th cent.
LEFEVRE, A. M., a Fr. antiquarian, last cent.
LEFEVRE, CL., a French painter, 1633-1675.
LEFEVRE, F. A., a Jesuit and poet, 1670-1737.
LEFEVRE, J., a French astronomer, d. 1706.
LEFEVRE, J., an old chronicler, died 1390.
LEFEVRE, N., a French philologist, 1544-1612.
LEFEVRE, N., a French chemist, died 1674.
LEFEVRE, P. F. A., a drama. au., 1741-1813.
LEFEVRE, R., a cele. portrait painter, d. 1677.
LEFEVRE, T., a French savant, 1615-1672.
LEFEVRE DE BEAUVRAY, PETER, au. of a 'Dict. of Hist. and Philosophical Research,' b. 1724.
LEFEVRE DE LA BODERIE, WILLIAM, a learned Orientalist, part editor of the Polyglott Bible of Antwerp, 1541-1598. His brother, ANTHONY, an able negotiator, and the discoverer of the treason of Biron, author of an account of his embassies to England, died 1615.
LEFEVRE-GINEAU, LOUIS, professor of natural philosophy and mechanics in the college of France, distinguished also as a politician, and for his share in the introduction of the new system of weights and measures, 1751-1829.
LEFORT, FRANCIS JAMES, a native of Geneva, who became the favourite of Peter the Great, and the founder of the Russian army, 1656-1699.
LEFREN, LAURENCE OLAVESON, a Swedish savant, author of 'Discourses in Philosophy and Theology,' 1722-1803.
LEFRERE, J., a French historian, died 1583.
LEGALLOIS, JULIAN J. C., a phys. of Brittany, au. of 'Exp. on the Principle of Life,' 1775-1814.
LEGAUFFRE, A., a French jurist, 1568-1635.
LEGAY, LOUIS P. P., a Fr. author, 1744-1826.
LEGENDRE, ADRIAN MARIE, born in Paris 1751, died there on the 16th January, 1833. A mathematician who would have been at the head of the most illustrious School in modern Europe, had he not possessed as compeers LAGRANGE and LAPLACE. The contributions of Legendre to Analysis, were numerous and important, but it is less easy to give an account of them, as they consist rather of individual achievements in various departments of Science, than in the completion and co-ordination of comprehensive theories. But it may be said of him with perfect justice, that he rarely touched a subject without advancing our knowledge of it, and connecting his name permanently with its progress: we owe him, for instance, the celebrated proposition regarding the spherical excess in Trigonometry; and in his memoir on the Orbits of Comets, is the earliest proposal to employ the fertile method of the L
Legendre's chief works are his Exer
cul Integral, in which he first sketch mination and development of Elliptic a subject afterwards treated by him
the Traite des Fonctions Elliptiqu Theorie des Nombres; and his Ele metrie,—a work of high elegance.
of this work into English with import by Legendre himself, was edited b Brewster, and is well known in this attracted, at the time of its public derable notice, by the fresh impuls discussions on the vexed question of —a subject which at different perio had much occupied M. Legendre.
not true that the effort of the French surmount the difficulty by aid of the m of Functions, met with any success; his process, and the criticisms to subjected, seem to lead pretty near seat of that difficulty. If a proposit demonstrated, or is made to lean on or paralogisms, there is no doubt that exists where there ought to be non imperfection must be either a flaw i tive process, or an inadequate state damental principles,—the axioma sufficient to sustain the whole scien certainly no flaw in the logic of Geo therefore must exist in the list of a indeed appears the opinion of all Ge most have fallen into the error of su the defect necessarily relates, to t that specific proposition, where d appears. This is in nowise a legi ence: and nothing but failure coul effort to supply the deficiency by n or axioms regarding parallel lines.
faculties can lay down no axioms finity, and are not entitled to the any postulate. Infinity, in our high expression of it, is simply the negatio and no qualities can be predicate it, unless they be negations, or the which the qualities of a series of fin be shown to tend. The imperfection Geometry cannot, accordingly, have mediately to do with the theory of it merely happens that in our usual existence of some fundamental defec when that theory is treated of. Th seems to lie in Euclid's inadequate co necessarily distinctive nature of two butes of geometrical quantity—form a
The Greek Geometer did not trace o in which we acquire our notions of th and he did not therefore recognize it that the attribute of form has no d the attribute of magnitude. The Universal Belief, indeed, amply sust sition—'If any figure exists or is must exist or be conceivable with t whatever its magnitude;' or any ment, involving the truth, that in o of the Geometrical qualities of an alone is definite; Magnitude beis and an analysis of the process reveals the root of that belief;

Magnitude involving an estimate of the distance of the object, while the notion of Form is, at its source, independent of every variable quantity. Now, the foregoing axiom, or some one akin to it, is involved in Legendre's mise en equation, as well as in the subsequent processes of Euclid himself; and—that step justified—Legendre's process is correct. It does not, however, require aid from the notation or procedures of Functions, to remove the long known imperfection in Geometry: a judicious use of the principle now referred to, being quite adequate, without our departing from ordinary methods.—Legendre's life was spent in privacy and strenuous labour in the service of Science. He was not a favourite with any of the governments of France; but felt satisfied with the moderate competency that accrued from the application of his attainments. [J.P.N.]

LEGENDRE, GILBERT CHARLES, marquis of Aubin Sur Loire, an antiquarian and historical writer, 1688-1746.

LEGENDRE, LOUIS, one of the principal actors in the French revolution, was born at Paris, 1756, and commenced life as a sailor. The year 1789 found him occupied as a butcher, and well prepared by the roughness of his two professions to take a part in popular tumults. He was soon recognized as leader of the people in his own quarter, and greatly distinguished himself at the storming of the Bastile. His influence now became very considerable, and he took an active part in the insurrectionary movements of the 5th and 6th of October, 1789, when the people marched upon Versailles—of the 20th of June, 1792, when they invaded the Tuileries—and of the 10th of August following, when the guard were massacred, and the royal family imprisoned. He acted between Danton and the lower classes of the people as founder of the Cordeliers Club in October, 1789; and it is a singular trait of the savage sincerity which existed between these men, that they covenanted whichever of the two should detect the other in any defection from the popular cause should poinard him. Legendre made his way from the convention into the Committee of Public Safety, and he was the principal mover in favour of Danton, when accused by Robespierre. The latter easily talked him down, and when Danton was executed, Legendre fawned upon the destroyer until the 9th Thermidor, when he saved his friend by joining the reaction. He was the chief instrument of the convention in defeating the subsequent attempt of the Jacobins, and finally became a sober member of the council of 500. He died in 1797, and by bequeathing his own body for dissection, made it appear somewhat less powerful that he should have proposed to cut up the body of Louis XVI. among the eighty-six departments of France. [E.R.]

LEGENDRE, L., a French historian, 1655-1733.

LEGER, ANTHONY, a learned protestant divine of Piedmont, 1594-1661. His nephew, JOHN, also a learned divine, pastor of the Walloon church of Leyden, and author of a history of the Vaudoise churches, 1615-1670.

LEGER, FRANCIS BARRY BOYLE ST., a barrister-at-law, known as a fugitive wr., 1799-1829.

LEGER, F. P. A., a Fr. dramatist, 1765-1823.

LEGER, ST., bishop of Antrim, and one of the most important personages of the 7th century.

LEGGE, GEORGE, baron of Dartmouth, commander of the fleet in the interest of James II., died while imprisoned in the Tower, 1647-1691.

LEGGIER, P., a French dramatist, 1734-1791.

LEGNANO, STEFANO MARIA, commonly called 'Il Leganino,' an Italian hist. painter, 1660-1715.

LEGOBIEN, C., a French historian, 1653-1708.

LEGONIDEC, J. F. MA-MAU. AGATHO, a native of Brittany, dist. as a Celtic scholar, 1775-1838.

LEGOTE, P., a Spanish painter, died 1662.

LEGOUVE, J. B., a French gentleman, distinguished as a man of letters, 1730-1782. His son, GAB. MA. JEAN BAPTISTE, a dramatist, 1764-1813.

LEGRAIN, J., a French historian, 1565-1642.

LEGRAND, ALBERT, a Dominican preacher, au. of the 'Lives of the Saints of Brittany,' d. 1640.

LEGRAND, ANTHONY, a French ecclesiastic and theologian, the first to reduce the philosophy of Descartes to the scholastic method, 17th century.

LEGRAND, J., a French moralist, 1350-1422.

LEGRAND, J., a French historian, 1653-1733.

LEGRAND, JAMES WILLIAM, a famous architect, and writer on the edifices of Paris, 1743-1807.

LEGRAND, L., a French theologian, 1711-1780.

LEGRAND, L., a Fr. jurisconsult, 1588-1664.

LEGRAND, M. A., a French actor, 1673-1728.

LEGRAND, PETER, a celebrated buccaneer, dist. against the Spaniards time of Louis XIV., d. 1670.

LEGRAND, S. A. M., a Fr. Orient., 1724-1784.

LEGRAND D'AUSSAY, PIERRE JEAN BAPTISTE, a learned Fr. Jesuit and fabulist, 1737-1800.

LEGRAS, J., a French singer, 1739-1794.

LEGRAS, N., a French Hebraist, 1675-1751.

LEGRAS, P., a French sculptor, 1656-1719.

LEGUANO, S. M., an Ital. painter, 1660-1715.

LEGUAT, F., a French traveller, died 1735.

LEHMANN, C. G., a German savant, author of a 'Précis of the Natural Hist. of Man,' 1765-1823.

LEHMANN, J. G., a Ger. mineralogist., d. 1767.

LEIBNITZ, GODFREY WILLIAM; born at Leipzig, 3d July, 1646; died at Hanover, 14th November, 1716: his tomb may be seen at the extremity of the Grand Alley near the gates; it is a small temple, with the inscription Ossa Leibnitzii. There has been but one man in modern Europe who, in the attributes either of universality or intensity of genius, can be named as compeer to the marvellous intellect we are now to contemplate—his compatriot, GOETHE. The sphere of the latter, indeed, lay chiefly within the domain of our human sentiments, and the strifes, the defeats, and victories of Practical Life; nevertheless, across this fundamental diversity, it is easy to recognize a co-ordinate catholicity and force, raising both to conscious and serene supremacy, and stamping them as law-givers. Within the vast regions of speculative Thought, there was no department unvisited by the ever-living activity of Leibnitz, or unillumed by his brilliancy: nor—in consequence of the very profoundity of his conceptions—is there any writer, whose speculations it is more easy to divest of their relation to occasion and time, and present as a contribution to all ages. Jurisconsult, historian, theologian, naturalist, mathematician, metaphysician of the highest order—Leibnitz has left everywhere the firm impress of his all-piercing Intellect, and sleepless industry; there being not more than one of those large ranges of thought, that can well be described and presented now, apart from commemoration of his achievements. A Jurisconsult by early profession and predilection, he descended, like a flash, towards the necessary principles of all Law—and alone in his time, recognized the pre-eminent grasp and philosophy of the Jurisprudence of ROME. A philosophical Jurist, it is the fashion with men of practice and detail, to scorn as no lawyer, but rather as the jurist of the closet or the drawing-room: the industry and accuracy of Leibnitz however, might well affright the most plodding practitioner; and he showed that the philosopher alone, can attain the faculty to track and interpret those practical labyrinths. We appeal to his Essay, Nova Methodus Discendæ Docendæque Jurisprudentiæ, to the Traite Sur le Droit de Souveraineté et d'Embassade, or to the elaborate Codex Juris Gentium Diplomaticus. Solicited by the elector of Brandenburg to prepare a memoir of that rising House—how untiring the energy he displayed! Throwing off in the way of bye-play such treatises as the Disquisitio de Origine Francorum, the Accessiones Historicæ in two vols. 4to, and various pieces in the Collectanea Etymologica, — he prepared for the House of Brandenburg, a history from the era of its birth, such as the greatest of European States might not unjustly envy;—the results of which immense and conscientious labours, are now republishing by M. Pertz. Again, as Naturalist, —with foresight like GOETHE, and a superior method—let his wonderful PROTOGÆA speak for him! Catching apparently, at a glance of the phenomena — unanalyzed as all these then were —the main force of their indications, he seizes firmly the two grand originators of present inorganic forms, viz.: the aqueous and the igneous: and the honour fell to him, first among Europeans, to repudiate the common opinion that petrifactions are mere freaks of Nature, but instead, relics of her history. The Protogæa, indeed, is rather a sketch than a finished work, —a mode of composing not unusual with Leibnitz; for, although no man was less of a visionary, his conceptions of the attainable, extended far beyond what even an age could accomplish. In the Protogæa, and wherever he has left his track, his power to discern the extent of any sphere of Thought, and to lay down its grander outlines, seems even more vigorous than his power to fill in details: without such a faculty, indeed, he could not have been the Lawgiver:— over the unparalleled diversity of Ideas, which our modern world owes to his genius, no intellectual Force could have held sway, unless its instinct of Unity, or its faculty of Generalizing, had been at least as strong as its ambition to acquire. With the exception, perhaps, of the great Name already mentioned, modern Literary History exhibits a grander spectacle nowhere, than the Intellect of this Hanoverian, moving with so supreme a power, through so wide a diversity of regions, and, in its own sovereign fashion, subjecting all to itself. —But we must speak much more in detail, of the Metaphysical, Religious, and Mathematical Speculations of this illustrious Man.—I. The writings and achievements of Leibnitz in Mental Philosophy are great and various. One important work, is purely psychological—Nouveaux Essais sur l'Entendement Humain. It is avowedly a critique on on the Understanding: and notwith Reid, Stewart, and Cousin, have sinc not overstepping justice to term it t able criticism to which that Essay has subjected. None of Locke's mistakes doctrines of Des Cartes, escapes the e man Philosopher; and very few of t which the general views of the Eng since received, are not initiated in th work. Had Mr. Stewart and his imm cessors in this country, been earlier ac these Essays—which are not in the e tens—much of their own exposition taken on a mere scientific form. achievements of Leibnitz in this fie the sphere of mere psychology. T fold, and as follows;—FIRST: — S the true Cartesian foundation—avow Human Mind can obtain no concep Existence, save through its Intuitio had recently asked with clear and re what ultimate information reaches these intuitions,—what mean we by Substance, which is the basis of all External or Independent Being? F fortunately, not only the method, specific psychology of Des Cartes, Thinker described our primary Idea as characterized in the main by th Extension; and in stern logical ded thus fallacy, he reared his huge, but Scheme of Pantheism. Logical to t his views took fast hold on Philosophy gloomy despotism challenged, until i and fell at the command of Leibnitz. greater Thinker inquired afresh,—w our primary Idea of Substance? Wha Notion, which—in virtue of the neces Being—we accept as the foundation o External Existence? Is it, that such mere extension—an inert mass, on w are impressed, or within which, as m tions, they proceed? Or, on the co the conception of ACTIVE FORCE, i it? Can we form a rational conce external Substance, unless as an ergy, which, by its inherent Activiti self known to us? Leibnitz, by s the foregoing question, succeeded i associating the Idea of Cause, indi the Idea of Substance: he broke down for ever, Spinozistic Pantheism; an the ground of his own scheme of MON wrong, perhaps, to speak of the celeb of Monads as a System properly so c events, it is by our accepting it as an that it most readily becomes intelligibl lish Mind. What know we then of E cept that it is a Force? What for insta tal—that 'Geometer of inanimate Nat an Energy or simple Power, having t assimilate what is external, and there a fabric in accordance with definite law Animal, if not an Energy alike prim sible, unfolding its Nature and attrib the forms into which it constrains wha milates? What is Man—save a loftier ating sovereignly on what is around it proper sphere, and, so to speak, establishing its per dynasty? Stretch higher still; what else ese worlds, those vast globes swimming in Ether, t Potentates or Primal Faculties; or what those glatier and unseen Intelligences among whom as nisters, the Eternal has apportioned his offices? pose for a moment under the Idea of the Exter- Universe, according to this conception of it, I say if an illustration could be found, more apt impressive? No dead Extension, of which the nd can frame no conception; but, around and r us—beneath our feet in the dust, and aloft ough the great vault of Heaven—Energy and ion; Existence synonymous with Force; the rs and forms of Things, but indices of Powers e are! That primary notion of Substance— bridge across which we pass to our conception Realities,—analyze it profoundly as you will, you find it represented best by the scheme of ads.—Oftener than once it has been asserted the more one gets rid of the mere terms forms of modern Speculation, the more me conscious of rising into unexpected har- y with Leibnitz. A truth still more deeply as one analyses his SECOND great metaphysi- conception—his notion, viz.: of PRE-ESTAB- ED HARMONY. This very remarkable scheme naturally out of that of Monads. If Ex- ce is we apprehend it, is the development Independent individual Energies, how comes it one Energy does not distract or possibly anni- te another, but rather assists it? How are mulation, intercourse, progress, possible? Is it simply because the sphere, the necessities, the re of each Monas, are primarily, by sovereign supremest Wisdom, adjusted to all that en- ns it? To appreciate these questions aright, us reflect on Man. The utmost we can predi- e of Man is this,—he is a primal Force, building a wonderful scheme of nerves, and by that in- mentality, holding intercourse with everything ernal. But how is that intercourse realized? n receives through these nerves nothing but sations. No image or direct picture of any- ng without, is ever substantially presented to n;—how then, on being aroused by a simple sation, does the Monas read its cause, or touch great Universe that hems it in? This ques- n reaches the mystery of our Intuitions, or that nolite and inexplicable Faculty, by which we ing from what IS FELT to what IS: and by form of speech can the nature or affluence of at faculty be better indicated, than by the term re-established Harmony. We spring towards e cause of sensation, simply because the Soul,— ke every Monas—is by pre-adjustment, in per- ct harmony with all things; and because in the ighest stage of self-consciousness, that Harmony is known. In ourselves in fact, we possess the rm of all things: the Soul is a glorious micro- osm, within which every phenomenon and law, ery form and energy, has its correspondent and unterpart: so that, the stroke of an undulation on the ear, the stroke of another on the eye, reveal, beyond doubt or illusion, that wonderful Universe of colours and sounds; so that, at the stroke of another sensation, Space, Time, Extension, Form, Externality—all spring up as by miracle; and so that, these subjective relations or Categories of the Understanding, and those more spiritual Ideas of the Reason, are known to be counterparts of material systems wherein these relations are realized, and of farther off and as yet scarcely descried, pure but real Intelligences. Go to the roots of the mysterious subject, and in something of this sort, all theories of perception and all such philosophies must end. And if this, or aught like it be true, no marvel that the theory of our Intuitions—examined apart—should have been found so fraught with difficulty and fertile of doubt. Self-consciousness being the highest and last attainable knowledge; that which lies at the root of our being, is not likely to be discerned, or reduced within logical theme, while culture is only painfully unfolding. To have defined the strict but extensive domain of INTUITION, is, we believe, one of the main glories of KANT: not only, however, need it cause little uneasiness that he accounted so many of those laws and Ideas, subjective only; but, it may be asserted, that as Humanity advances, others now but dimly recognized as dreams, will advance through clearer Subjective reality, into fullest Objective distinctness.—II. A very large amount of meditation and personal exertion were given by Leibnitz not only to the subject-matter of RELIGION, but also to the affairs of the CHURCH. We can refer in this place, only to the leading results of his Thoughts, and the spirit in which he approached such themes. Recognizing through a high metaphysic, the necessary existence of God in his fullest personality, he bows before him as Creator of the sublunary Machine, and as Ruler of Spirits. Because He is a Being of perfect Wisdom, no work of His can be other than perfect; hence, says Leibnitz, the condition of things around us, is the 'best possible;'—an Optimism with which he endeavours to reconcile the mystery of Physical and Moral Evil, in his Theodicée. Evil, he conceives the sign and consequence of limitation; and that each Monas inferior to the Supreme, must experience limitations, simply because it is Finite. Whether, by this striking and ingenious scheme, Leibnitz has succeeded better than others, in reconciling with Man's Intellect and Heart, that painful mystery of Evil—that painfullest mystery of SIN—it were beside our purpose at present to inquire. But it is necessary to remark that the optimism of the Hanoverian differs toto cælo, from that of Pope and Bolingbroke. According to the 'Essay on Man' the maxim 'whatever is, is best,' simply represents an imaginary co-existence of all forms and grades of Being, from zero up to Deity; while Leibnitz strove to demonstrate, that the Universe is a compact Harmony, in which each Being has indeed an independent place, but an independence insured by the necessity of its Existence to the Existence and Life of all others. The two views stand in utter contrast: the one deducing harmony from activity and duty; the other, identifying independence with simple isolation.—More important, however, than any attainable positive result on matters so mysterious, appear to us, the Spirit and Method moving these Inquiries. Satisfied that no Faith could be real, or even intelligible, unless its foundations were detected in the Human Reason,—Leibnitz, in this sense, was a Rationalist. Attached to the Church, he yet sought incessantly for the ground of its Beliefs: and on no occasion did he falter in his adhesion to that law of Human Liberty, which is the source of Toleration. It is needful to keep the foregoing truth in view, to interpret aright the position of Leibnitz with regard to the affairs of the Church. Attracted, like every great Mind and Statesman of that time, by the influence of Church questions on the peace and destinies of Europe—he conceived the project of reconciling differences; and he conducted a remarkable correspondence with Bossuet and Pelisson, with the view to discern a basis of reconcilement. For once Leibnitz's practical sagacity was in fault:—Bossuet soon informed him, that truth belonged to the Church alone; that the only possible aim of dealing with the Protestants of Augsburg, was that they might recant and re-enter the Church. Bossuet had not reached the position of Leibnitz: nor did he care, in political transactions, to acknowledge what he well knew—viz.: that although Religion, like every Transcendental subject, must rest on what 'passes all Understanding,'—even the greatest of its verities can have no hold or standing place, if dissevered from relationship with the Reason of Man. An external Rule in Morality grows into a Principle, only when it has become harmonized with the Moral Nature of the Agent: and so, Transcendental Propositions, are Dogmas only and not Beliefs, until they have possessed themselves of what is universal and inherent in the REASON, which avows adhesion. But between the Mind and all transcendental Truth, there is this natural Harmony; and on such conviction Leibnitz grounded his hopes. The age of the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes however, was not —any more than those recent ones through which the world has rolled—an age for 'Religious Union.' To this phase of our Philosopher's activity belongs the work recently published in this country under the title 'A System of Theology, by G. W. Von Leibnitz.' His recent Editor Guhrauer, has quite traced the origin of this treatise. Its real title is 'An Exposition by a Protestant, of the Doctrine of the Catholic Church, made with a view to re-establish Unity.' Leibnitz simply desired to express, with that specific aim, the most catholic views then held by the Church.—III. Pass now, however, into an undebateable land. Not one, in which the vast powers of our remarkable Thinker are most conspicuously shown; but where neither they nor his achievements can be subject of dispute. The epoch we write of, was one of great Mathematicians: but, on the continent, Leibnitz was Primus inter Primos; and this, although he was not a professional mathematician. He did not attain this place, through mere ingenuity or success in the solution of problems; although in neither, when he pleased, was he ever second: but through that rooted attachment to Method, which characterized all his intellectual nature. In Dynamics and Mathematics, his achievements uniformly tended towards the generalization and perfecting of the foremost conceptions floating in his time; and he cared little for distinction of any other kind. That memorable success of his, which will ever retain his name in the foremost rank of scientific Discoverers, was of this class. We allude, of course, to the Infinitesimal Calculus; the honour of which, it is a signal national misfortune, that our En maticians endeavoured so vainly to him. That NEWTON also discovered ful method, no Historian of Science the regret is, that in course of the of these Kings and Peers, any could have induced our Countryma tion the pretensions of his rival. H have said: did rivalry really exist?

true sense. Not in their respective not in the nature of their respective f these were incommensurable. It habit, with writers English and Fore pare these two vast Intelligences: b fered, as intense and limited power, the glance of an Eagle—surveying the a Universe. Which Potentate was g accordingly not easy to decide. W bend before the Image of the immortal piercing to the depths of one universa terial Nature: is the spectacle less ad Mind, contained by no limits, and, upb pathies large and various as the bond intelligence with matter, penetrating and if not always discerning Laws, more nearly to their discovery than its greatest predecessors? Dugald St well and unhesitatingly declare—that and Science, in their widest signific more by the universality of Leibnit special subject could have lost throug sion of his powers.—The private ha illustrious Inquirer, were those of student. He mingled freely—person as by correspondence—with all the men of his time; but his hours were in his chair. He was of small stat bent: his head very large, and wit piercing eyes. So long as Germany supremacy in the Empire of Though macy that has raised her above both Roman fame—she will cherish as one precious monuments, that little templ tects the Oasa Leibnitzii.

LEICESTER. See DUDLEY.

LEICESTER, THOMAS WILLIAM,
Viscount Coke, distinguished for hi encouragement of agriculture; born to the peerage, after sitting in parli years as a partizan of the Whigs, 183

LEICH, J. H., a German philologi

LEIGH, CHARLES, a physician and
au. of a 'Natural History of Lancashi

LEIGH, SIR EDWARD, a theologia and critic, distinguished in public life of parliament, a member of the assemb and a colonel in the parliamentary ser an author, by his 'Critica Sacra,' 160

LEIGHTON, ALEXANDER, a Sc and physician, professor of moral at Edinburgh, and author of 'Zion'
'The Looking-glass of the Holy works being reputed as seditious, I prosecuted by the Star Chamber, and lated. He is said to have died insane prisonment of eleven years, 1568–161

LEIGHTON, ROBERT, son of th became an episcopalian, and is k able theologian and eloquent preache

EISMAN, J. A., a German painter, 1604-1698.
EISSEGUES, CORENTIN URBAIN JAMES RAND DE, vice-admiral of France, disting. he capture of Guadaloupe, &c., 1758-1832.
EJAY, C., an ecclesiast. wr. of Geneva, d. 1552.
EJAY, GAB. F., a Fr. philologist, died 1734.
EJAY, GUY MICHEL, an advocate of the parent of Paris, distinguished by publishing a glott Bible, 1588-1674.
EJEUNE, J., a French priest, 1592-1672.
EJEUNE, P., a French missionary, 1592-1664.
EKAIN, H. L., a French actor, 1728-1778.
ELÆ, CL. M., a French poet, 1745-1791.
ELAND or LAYLONDE, JOHN, a famous antiarian, born in London at the commencement of 16th century. He was educated for the church, after taking holy orders became chaplain and arian to Henry VIII., who, in 1533, appointed his 'Antiquary,' with a commission to investi- 'England's antiquities, and peruse the libra- of all cathedrals, abbeys, priories, colleges, and es where any records, writings, or secrets of quity were deposited.' He executed this com- sion with the most unwearied diligence, and in 1552, after suffering two years from mental ngement. Twelve volumes of his MSS. were rwards deposited in the Bodleian library, and remaining portion in the Cottonian collection he British Museum. They have been greatly rted to by antiquarian and historical writers, some portion of them published.
ELAND, JOHN, a learned presbyterian minis- located in Dublin, and dist. by his analysis refutation of deistical writings, 1691-1766.
ELAND, THOS., a divine and classical scholar, n in Dublin 1722, author of a 'History of Ire- d,' a 'Life of Philip of Macedon,' &c., d. 1785.
ELIE, A. DE, a Dutch painter, 1755-1820.
ELLI, HERCULES, an Italian painter, architect, ptor, and engraver, Bologna, about 1700-1766.
ELLI, J. A., an Italian painter, 1591-1640.
ELONG, JAS., a priest of the oratory at Paris, as an historian and bibliographer, 1665-1721.
ELY, SIR PETER, a famous portrait painter of restoration, whose family name was Vander en. He was born in Westphalia, 1617, and re- ved the honour of knighthood from Charles II. d 1680.
LEMAIRE, J., a Dutch navigator, died 1616.
LEMAIRE, JEAN, a French historian and poet, o flourished about 1473-1547.
LEMAIRE, M. E., a French classic, 1767-1832.
LEMAN, THOMAS, a Church of England clergy- an, distinguished by his researches in Roman and itish antiquities, 1751-1827.
LEMARE, P. A., a Fr. grammarian, 1766-1835.
LEMAURE, C. N., a Fr. cantatrice, 1704-1783.
LEMENE, F., an Italian poet, 1634-1704.
LEMENS, B. VAN, a Flem. painter, 1637-1704.
LEMERY, L. R. J. C., a Fr. astron., 1728-1802.
LEMERY, N., a French chemist, 1645-1715.
LEMETTAY, P. C., a Fr. painter, 1726-1760.
LEMIERRE, A. M., a Fr. dramat., 1723-1793.
LEMIRE, A., a Brabant historian, 1573-1640.
LEMIRE, N., a French engraver, 1724-1801.
LEMOINE, F., a French painter, 1688-1737.
LEMOINE, J., a French cardinal, died 1313.
LEMOINE, P., a French poet, 1602-1672.
LEMOINE, S., a protestant divine, 1624-1689.

LEMON, G. W., an Eng. etymologist, 1726-97.
LEMONNIER, ANICET C. GABRIEL, a French hist. painter, and pupil of Vien; Rouen, 1743-1824.
LEMONNIER, NICHOLAS, a French professor, author of 'Cursus Philosophiæ,' 1675-1757. His eldest son, PETER CHARLES, a learned astronomer, first teacher of Lalande, 1715-1799. His second son, LOUIS WILLIAM, distinguished as a physician and experimental philosopher, and a contributor to the Encyclopædia, 1717-1779.
LEMONNIER, P. R., a dramatic wr., 1731-96.
LEMONNIER, W. A., a class. transl., 1721-97.
LEMONTEY, PETER EDWARD, a member of the French assembly, distinguished as a poet and historian, by his 'History of the Regency,' his remarkable work entitled, 'An Essay upon the Monarchic Establishment of Louis XIV.,' and various dramas and poems, 1762-1826.
LEMOS, P. J., Count De, a Spanish statesman, born about 1560, president of the council of the Indies 1609, viceroy of Naples 1611, died 1634.
LEMOS, THOS., a learned Spanish monk of the Dominicans, au. of 'Panoplia Gratiæ,' 1550-1629.
LEMOT, F. F., a French sculptor, 1773-1827.
LEMOYNE, JEAN BAPTISTE, or, more correctly, MAYNE, a French opera compos., 1751-96.
LEMOYNE, J. L., a French sculptor, 1665-1755. His son, J. BAPTISTE, same prof., 1704-78.
LEMOYNE, P., a French Jesuit, 1602-1671.
LEMPRIERE, JOHN, best known as the author of a 'Classical Dictionary,' first published in 1788, was an English scholar and divine, born at Jersey about 1775, appointed to the rectory of Meeth in Devonshire, 1811, died 1824.
LEMUET, P., a French architect, 1591-1669.
LEMUET, R., a Fr. mathematician, died 1739.
LENCLOS, ANNE, or NINON, DE, a woman of pleasure, remarkable for her personal charms, and her influence over the men of learning, of the 17th century, born at Paris 1616, died 1706.
LENFANT, A. C. ANNE, a French Jesuit and preacher, born 1726, massacred in Sept., 1792.
LENFANT, J., a French painter, 1615-1674.
LENFANT, JAMES, a protestant minister and controversialist, author of a history of the 'Council of Constance,' 'History of Pisa,' 'History of the Wars of the Hussites,' &c., 1661-1728.
LENG, JOHN, bishop of Norwich, disting. as a classical translator and commentator, 1665-1727.
LENGLET-DUFRESNOY, NICHOLAS, a Fr. ecclesiastic, who was five times committed to the Bastile for his writings and independent conduct, author of a 'Method for Studying History,' 'History of the Hermetic Philosophy,' &c., 1674-1755.
LENGUICH, GODFREY, an historian and publicist of Dantzic, 1690-1744. CHARLES BENJAMIN, of the same family, a numismatist, 1742-1795.
LENNARD, SAMPSON, a companion-in-arms of Sir Ph. Sidney, disting. as a translator, died 1633.
LENNEPH, J. D. VAN, a D. Orient., 1714-71.
LENNOX, CHARLOTTE, of whose personal history little is known, save that she was the daughter of Colonel James Ramsay, lieutenant-governor of New York, and a youthful widow, distinguished herself as a novelist and dramatic writer and translator, in the time of Dr. Johnson. She was highly esteemed by her personal friends, Johnson and Richardson, but outlived them, and died in penury in the eighty-fourth year of her age, 1804.

LENOIR, A., a French archæologist, 1762-1839.
LENOIR, J. C. P., a Fr. magistrate, 1732-1807.
LENOIR, N., a French architect, 1726-1810.
LENOIR, STEPHEN, a celebrated maker of mathematical instruments, 1744-1832. His son, P. S. M. LENOIR, accompanied the savants in Napoleon's expedition to Egypt, 1776-1827.
LENOTRE, A., a famous gardener, 1613-1700.
LENS, A. C., a Flemish painter, 1739-1822.
LENS, BERNARD, a designer and engraver, flourished in London 1659-1725. His son, of the same name, an engraver and painter of London, born 1680. Another BERNARD LENS, also an engraver, was born at Brussels about 1730.
LENTHAL, WILLIAM, speaker of the House of Commons in the parliament of Charles I., from which office he was dismissed by Cromwell in 1653, but re-elected in the following year, and also in the rump parliament. Born 1591, died after the restoration, when he was pardoned by the king, 1663.
LENTULUS, the surname of a branch of the famous Cornelian family of Rome, the principal of whom are—PUBLIUS CORNELIUS LENTULUS, an accomplice of Catiline, consul 71 B.C., strangled in prison 66. LENTULUS SPINTHERUS, a friend of Cicero, and a partizan of Pompey. CNEIUS CORNELIUS LENTULUS, surnamed Gætulicus, consul A.D. 26. LUCIUS, son of the latter, put to death for conspiracy in the reign of Caligula.
LENTULUS, a supposed proconsul of Judæa, to whom a letter, describing the Saviour, has been attributed, but which is pronounced a fabrication.
LENTULUS, a mimic, or comedian, 1st century.
LENTULUS, C., a German savant, 17th cent.
LENTULUS, CÆSAR J., a Swiss officer in the service of Austria, 1683-1744. His son, R. SCIPIO LENTULUS, dist. in the seven years' war, 1714-86.
LENZ, C. G., a German savant, 1763-1809.
LEO, a disciple of Plato, killed 350 B.C.
LEO, archbishop of Thessalonica, 9th century.
LEO, an ecclesiastic and hist. of Ionia, 10th cen.
LEO, 'the grammarian,' one of the authors of the Byzantine History, begun by Theophanes, wrote his part about the year 1013.
LEO I., pope of Rome in the age of Attila, and a saint of the Roman calendar, author of letters, sermons, &c., and distinguished by the surname of 'Great,' reigned 440-461. LEO II., who introduced the custom of sprinkling with holy water, and is also acknowledged a saint, reigned 682-683. LEO III., re-established, after a conspiracy, by Charlemagne, whom he crowned emperor, 795-816. LEO IV., who was principally engaged in restoring the city, and securing it against the Saracens, 847-855. LEO V., elected, and deposed, and died in prison, within a few weeks, in 903. LEO VI., who is also believed to have died in prison, after reigning about six months, in 928. LEO VII., famous as a disciplinarian, and an advocate for the marriage of priests, 936-939. LEO VIII., whose reign was one long scene of political disturbance, 963-965. LEO IX., a saint of the Roman calendar, distinguished by his efforts to reform the clergy, and for his capture by the Normans, who defeated him near Beneventum, born 1002, reigned 1049-1054. LEO X.; see next article. LEO XI., a pope of the Medici family, like Leo X., succeeded and died a month after his election in 1605. LEO XII., whose reign was disturbed by the Carbonari and other secret societi was chiefly occupied with the internal states, and in political negotiations, reigned 1823-1829.—An anti-pope, contested the papacy with Benedict V
the name of Gregory VI., in 1012.
LEO X., POPE. GIOVANNI DE MED son of Lorenzo the Magnificent, w
Florence on the first day of December, was early destined to the church,
tonsure when but a boy seven years year following got several ecclesiast ments. At the age of eleven he w cardinal by the title of S. Maria in Three years afterwards he took up his Rome as one of the princes of the chu the election of Alexander VI. he was retire to Florence. After some turns in consequence of the broils among states of Italy and France, he was ra popedom in 1513, under the name of crowned with unusual pomp and ceren successor of the Galilean fisherman.
of political generosity graced the com of his reign. His great desire was to the peace of Europe, and he entered with Louis XII. He also renewed th the famous Lateran council, and broug a conclusion in 1517. Afterwards he leagne against Francis I., but ultimat into a concordat with him. As the ti ebbed and flowed, he made occasiona to rouse the Swiss against the Fr leagued himself with Maximilian and H of England, and at a future period, same purpose, with Charles V. in 1521.
able conspiracy on the part of some o nals against him was discovered in Cardinal Petrucci, who was at the hea condemned and strangled in prison.
fence Leo created at this period in one one new cardinals. He carried the Roman see to a pitch of unparalleled and the grateful citizens of his capit statue in his honour. His heart wa the defeat of the Turks, and he end combine the princes of Europe ag
The project which seems always t cupied his mind, was the expulsion of power from Italy, but in the midst of h at Milan and Parma, he suddenly died, ber, 1521, not without great suspicion been poisoned. The completion of the Peter was another of his cherished pl papal indulgences issued to raise th funds, created or fostered that discont in a short time to the reformation i Leo was at first wishful of gentle m ward Luther, but ultimately published bull which Luther so publicly and cont burnt before the gate of Wittember the brief pontificate of Leo was so u his patronage of literature and the arts ficent, as was exhibited in his restor Roman academy, his founding of the tute and the establishment in Rome press, his encouragement of search af manuscripts, his handsome treatment letters, such as Musurus, Ariosto, an mentation of the library of the Vatican, and propitious employment of Raffaelle the painter a variety of immortal works. As the head of Italian ducal house, Leo would have eclipsed all compeers. Though his character and actions not in all respects comport with the idea of his ng visible head of the church, yet he is better n very many of his predecessors. His talents re good, though his erudition was not profound. s tastes were fine in the arts, but his politics re crooked, and his diplomatic schemes had more ning than wisdom about them. In all his ns for the popedom, he never forgot the ad- cement of the house of the Medici. Apart m his ecclesiastical status, he must be regarded ne of the zealous and successful co-operators in evival of letters. [J.E.]

EO I., emperor of the East, surnamed 'the x' and 'the Great,' was a Thracian of obscure h, and succeeded to the throne of Constanti- e 457. After restoring peace to the empire, h had been rent by religious quarrels, and de- ated by the barbarians, he died 474. Leo II., amed 'the Younger,' grandson of the preced- , succeeded him, and is supposed to have been oned ten months afterwards, 474. Leo III., amed 'the Isaurian,' distinguished by his suc- es against the Saracens, reigned 717-741. Leo grandson of the latter, and husband of the on Irene, reigned 775-780. Leo V., sur- ed 'the Armenian,' dethroned Nicephorus, and ned for seven years, disturbed by the inroads e Bulgarians, and the religious struggles of the ge-worshippers, 813-820. Leo VI., surnamed e Philosopher,' distinguished himself by the de- of the Hungarians; but sustained a disastrous with the Saracens, who at last defeated him, 911. He was succeeded by his brother, Alex- er, and his son, Constantine VI., and is the hor of an esteemed work on Tactics.

EO I., prince or king of the Armenians, esta- hed in Cilicia, began to reign 1123, was taken one by John Commenus in 1137, and died in on 1141. Leo II., called 'the Great,' grand- n of the preceding, obtained the permission of e emperor, Henry VI., and the pope, Celestine II., to take the title of king, and reigned 1185- 219. Leo III., who greatly aggrandized his ingdom, reigned 1269-1289. Leo IV., succeeded 305, and was dethroned and slain by a Mongul eneral 1308. Leo V., who saw his kingdom de- astated by civil wars, and the invasion of the Mamelukes and Turcomans, reigned 1320-42. Leo VI., proclaimed king 1361, was chased from his kingdom by the sultan of Egypt 1375, and, retir- ing into France, died there 1393.

LEO, the Hebrew, a cabalist of the 15th cen.

LEO, John, surnamed 'Africanus,' a traveller and geographer, born of Moorish parents, who was converted to Christianity by Leo X., and, becom- ing an Italian scholar, translated into that lan- guage his 'Description of Africa,' originally writ- ten in Arabic, died about 1526.

LEO, Leonardo, an eminent musician, re- garded as one of the greatest opera composers of Naples, 1694-1745.

LEO of Marsi, a chronicler of the 12th cent.

LEO of Modena, a learned rabbi, died 1654.

LEO of Orvieto, an Ital. chronicler, 12th c.

LEO, Pilatus, first professor of Greek at Flo- rence, who lectured there about 1360.

LEON, Diego, a Spanish general and partizan of Espartero, born 1804, executed 1840.

LEON, F. L. De, a Spanish poet, 1527-1591.

LEON, P. L. De, a Spanish historian, 16th c.

LEONARD, N. G., a French poet, 1744-1793.

LEONARD, St., an anchoret of Limousin, founder of a monastery near Limoges, died 559.

LEONARDI, F., a Venetian painter, 1654-1711.

LEONARDI, J., a religious founder, 1540-1609.

LEONARDO, A., a Span. painter, 1580-1640.

LEONARDO, J., a Span. painter, 1616-1658.

LEONE-Y-GAMA, Antonio, cele. for his ex- tensive knowledge of Mexican antiquities, d. 1802.

LEONIDAS, the first of the name, king of Sparta, immortalized by his glorious defence of the pass of Thermopylæ against Xerxes, reigned 491-480 B.C. The second of the name, began to reign B.C. 257, was banished, and replaced by Cleom- brotus, 254, recovered his throne 239, died 238.

LEON-LEAL, F. De, a Span. painter, 1610-87.

LEONTIUS, an ecclesiastical historian, 6th cen.

LEOPARDI, A., a Venetian architect, d. 1510.

LEOPARDI, J., an Italian poet, 1798-1837.

LEOPOLD, duke of Lorraine, father of Francis I., emperor of Germany, was the son of Charles IV., and was born 1679. He was restored to his dukedom, of which Louis XIV. had despoiled him by the peace of Ryswick, 1697, and was married to Elizabeth of Orleans, niece of Louis XIV., d. 1729.

LEOPOLD of Austria, elected duke of Ba- varia, after the death of Henry the Proud, 1138-42.

LEOPOLD, margrave of Austria, and a saint of the Roman calendar, succeeded 1096, married Agnes, sister of the emperor Henry V., and died 1139. He was canonized 1485. Leopold I. or II., surnamed 'the Glorious,' third son of Albert I., succeeded as duke of Austria 1308, and compelled Louis of Bavaria to divide the empire with his brother, Frederick; died 1313. Leopold II. or III., surnamed 'the Courageous,' born about 1350, took a part in the Italian wars, and was slain in a battle with the Swiss, 1386.

LEOPOLD I., emperor of Austria, born 1640, succeeded his father, Frederick III., 1658, died 1705. Having defeated the Turks in 1664, the commencement of his reign was signalized by a truce of twenty years which he concluded with them. From 1672 to 1679, he sustained a dis- astrous war with Louis XIV., which was then concluded by the peace of Nimeguen. A truce of twenty years with Louis XIV. did not prevent a renewal of hostilities in 1688, which were termi- nated by the peace of Ryswick in 1697. During this latter interval, the Hungarians, headed by Tekeli, and supported by the Turks, rose in arms 1677, and even besieged Vienna, which was re- lieved by Sobieski and the Poles 1683. The other principal events of his reign were the elevation of Hanover into an electorate 1692, of Brandenburg into a kingdom 1702, and a new war with the Turks, who were conq. by Prince Eugene 1697.

LEOPOLD II., emperor of Germany, second son of Francis I. and of Maria Theresa, was born 1747, and succeeded his brother, Joseph II., 1790. The events of his reign were some successes obtained over the Turks, a quarrel with Prussia, terminated by the treaty of Sistow 1791, the troubles in Belginm 1790, and the famous declaration of Pilnitz against the French revolution. He died March 2, 1792, and was succeeded by his son, Francis II.

LEOPOLD, A. D., a Germ. author, 1691-1753.

LEOPOLD, C. G. De, a Swed. poet, 1756-1829.

LEOPOLD, G. A. S., a Germ. wr., 1755-1827.

LEOWITZ, C., a Bohem. astrologer, died 1574.

LEPAUTRE, Anthony, a French architect, 1614-1691. His brother, John, a designer and engraver, 1617-1682. Peter, son of Anthony, a sculptor, 1659-1744.

LEPAYS, R., a French poet, died 1690.

LEPEKHIN, J. I., a learn. Russian, 1739-1802.

LEPELLETIER, C., a Fr. theologian, d. 1743.

LEPELLETIER, C., a Fr. financier, 1683-1689.

LEPELLETIER, J., a French savant, distinguished in art, languages, mathematics, medicine, and alchymy, 1633-1711.

LEPELLETIER - DE - SAINT - FARGEAU, Louis Michael, one of the old French noblesse, and a deputy of his order to the estates-general in 1789, was born in Paris 1760, and inherited a large fortune from his parents. On the 4th of August of the year first mentioned, he voted for the abolition of feudal privileges, and, what is more, carried the decree into full effect in his own person. When the estates-general resolved itself into a constituent assembly, St. Fargeau joined the patriots of the left, and was returned again to the national convention in 1792. His votes in the process against the king had great influence over the court, and led immediately to his own death. On the eve of the king's execution, and before the votes were summed up, St. Fargeau had stepped out for refreshment, and was in the act of paying the restaurateur, when a stranger, who proved to be one of the king's body guard, suddenly approached and asked him if he were not Lepelletier who had voted for the king's death? he replied 'yes,' and added that he had voted as his conscience had dictated. 'Scélérat,' exclaimed his interrogator, 'voilà ta récompense!' and instantly run him through with a sword which he had concealed under his cloak. Lepelletier St. Fargeau was the author of several works on law and politics, and of a life of Epaminondas. [E.R.]

LEPIDUS, Marcus Æmilius, the Roman triumvir, had been ædile B.C. 52, prætor 49, and consul with Cæsar 46. The latter, when he became dictator, made Lepidus general of the cavalry, and, on Cæsar's death, he divided the empire with Octavius and Mark Antony. At first he had the whole of Spain and Gallia Narbonensis, but on the defeat of Brutus and Cassius, he was compelled to exchange those provinces for Africa, which left him without any real authority in the state. He was included in the triumvirate of B.C. 37, but was deserted by his troops, and banished to Circeii by Augustus. Died 12 or 13 B.C.

LEPRINCE, A. X., a Fr. painter, 1799-1826.

LEPRINCE, J., a French painter, 1733-1781. His sister, Marie Leprince De Beaumont, a writer of works for young people, 1711-1780.

LEROUX. J. J., a Fr. med. writer, 1749-1832.

LERY, J. D., a French navigator, 1534-1611.

LE SAGE, Alain, born in 1668, was the son of a lawyer in Brittany, and, being left an orphan in childhood, lost his patrimony through the carelessness of his guardian. In 1692, after having studied at the Jesuit college of Vannes, he came where he was admitted as an advocate, betook himself exclusively to literature. H was for many years very obscure; few of were successful, and he long wrote for theatres only. Whatever the reason been, he received no share of the patrona the government lavished on many men much inferior to him; but he was well re good society. Entering on the study of literature, and using the comedies of that with ability, but with little success, in he turned the Spanish models to a more use in his comic novels. Some of these a the liveliest and wittiest of their class, an able as cool and observant dissections o weaknesses. The earliest of them, appe 1707, was 'The Devil on Two Sticks' (L Boiteux), avowedly a continuation of a story. His most celebrated work, 'G though it has been charged with pla seems to have really been as much his ow sign as it certainly was in those details, wh stituted its eminent merit. In 'The Ad of Guzman D'Alfarache,' he confessedly largely from a Spanish original. Le Sag Boulogne in 1747.

LESAGE, G. L., a learned physician, 17

LESCAILLE, James, a Dutch prin dist. himself as a poet, 1610-1677. His Catherine, a poetess and dramat. wr., 16

LESCAN, J. F., a Fr. mathemat., 174

LESCURE, L. M., a French royalist,

LESKO, the names of several dukes o the best known of whom are Lesko IV., rei 913. Lesko V., 1194-1202. Lesko VI.

LESLEY, A., a Scottish antiquary, 16

LESLEY, John, bishop of Ross, in celebrated as the advocate and ambassado Stuart, in whose defence he wrote several works, born 1527, retired to the continent became bishop of Constance 1593, die monastery of Guirtenberg, near Brussels,

LESLIE, John, a native of Scotland, successively bishop of the Orkneys and c and Clogher in Ireland, and is distingu linguist; he died more than a hundred 1671. His son, Charles, author of th books, entitled 'The Snake in the Grass, Short and Easy Method with the Deist guished also by his adherence to the Pre consequence of which he lost all hope ment in the church, was born in Irel 1650, and died 1732.

LESLIE, Sir John, born at Largo shire, 16th April, 1766, died 3d Novem at his seat at Coates. Leslie's life was one, and he rose to a considerable place He succeeded Professor Playfair in th mathematics in the university of Edinb on the death of that eminent man, he a ceeded him in the chair of natural philoso contributions of Sir John Leslie to Briti were various: he occupied himself with rimental theory of Heat, and produced, a several delicate instruments, such as t ential thermometer,—his claim to the however, has been strongly contested. I easy to challenge for him very sound ju

...ch impartiality in his philosophical estimate of ...er Inquirers; nor was his style of exposition, ...itten or oral, remarkably well suited to a philo...phical subject. Still, he had the faculty of in...tion, and a dash of what, in one sense, may be ...med genius. His knowledge was extensive; ...reading having been vast, and his memory ...arkably tenacious. Leslie at one time ob...ed a singular popular repute, from the effort of ...Church, to hinder his induction as pro...or of mathematics. The hostile charge was ...of some form of infidelity, based on his espousal ...me's views as to the Idea of Necessary Con...ion. The interference failed, and certainly was ...icious. It is not often that inferences as to ...ical life or religious sentiment, based on spe...ive views, have been approved by succeeding ...s. If Leslie's doctrine was incorrect under ...oint of view, that of his opponents was quite ...tenable, viewed from another. The contro...y, however, gave rise to many ingenious pamph...among which was the Essay on Cause and ...t, of the late Dr. Thomas Brown. [J.P.N.]

LESSER, AUGUSTIN CREUSE, Baron De, a ...atic author and man of letters, 1771-1839.

LESSER, F. C., a Germ. naturalist, 1692-1754.

LESSING, GOTTHOLD EPHRAIM, the son of a ...eran pastor, was born, in 1729, at Kamenz, ...pper Lusatia. In 1746 he entered the Univer...of Leipzig, where he continued to prosecute ...literary studies with extraordinary activity, and ...many directions, but showed a strong disinclin...n to attach himself to any professional pursuit. ...dissatisfaction of his father, who was both a ...r man and severely orthodox, was increased by ...intimacy which the youth contracted with ...yers, and by his writing one or two little thea...cal pieces. After being recalled home, and ...siting Berlin, he completed his academical course ...Wittemberg.—In 1753 he cast himself fairly on ...he world as a man of letters, taking up his abode ...at Berlin, where he remained for seven years. ...Even in this opening stage of his career, he firmly ...established his position as the earliest and most ...energetic of the pioneers who prepared the way ...for an original development of German literature. ...His chief friends and coadjutors at this time were ...the philosophical Jew, Moses Mendelssohn, and ...Nicolai, the author and bookseller. With these he ...co-operated in laying the foundation of criticism ...in Germany, by the 'Bibliothek der Schönen Wis...senschaften,' and the 'Literatur-Briefe.' His stu...dies in Italian, Spanish, and German, directed ...especially to the drama, furnished him with abun...dant materials for his denunciation of the dryness ...and formality of the French taste, which then ...prevailed among his countrymen. His own imi...tation of the English drama, having no higher ...model than Lillo, produced at first nothing better ...than his domestic tragedy in prose called 'Miss ...Sara Sampson.' About this time, however, he ...partly composed, also in prose, his vigorous and ...impressive tragedy of 'Emilia Galotti,' a modern ...adaptation of the story of Virginia. To this period ...likewise belong his 'Fables,' which, both the me...trical and the prose ones, are very striking pieces ...of reflection, and, like all his other writings, mo...dels of clear and symmetrical style.—For five years, ...from 1760, he lived at Breslau, as secretary to the commandant. Here he seems to have been less steadily industrious than before, mixing a good deal in society, and having for a time a strange fondness for the hazard-table. But, at Breslau, among his military acquaintances, he planned or composed his spirited drama, 'Minna von Barnhelm.' Here also the study of the arts of design, to which, as exhibited in the master-pieces of Greece, Winckelmann was now inviting attention, led him to begin the composition of that which is the most valuable of all his works, 'Laocoon,' or an 'Essay on the Limits of Poetry and Painting,' which was published in 1766. The title of this admirable work indicates but imperfectly its commanding scope. The comparison instituted is between Poetry on the one hand, and the Arts of Design on the other; and between the several Fine Arts (Poetry included), as contrasted with each other. The purpose of all these arts being assumed to be substantially the same, those differences of process are indicated, which arise between the arts by reason of the differences in their instruments. This, like all Lessing's other philosophical speculations, is merely a fragment, a collection of hints, not the exposition of a system; but the principles which he has here established go farther towards founding a just theory of literature and art, than any other æsthetical work that could be named. — For some years after leaving Breslau, Lessing led a shifting and uncomfortable life His longest residence was at Hamburg, where he became, by necessity, not from choice, director of a theatre set on foot by some sanguine lovers of the drama. One satisfactory fruit of this abortive undertaking, was the series of masterly criticisms on celebrated plays, which he called the 'Hamburgische Dramaturgie.' In 1770, after marrying the widow of a Hamburgh merchant, he removed to Wolfenbüttel, being appointed keeper of the library. Here he spent the last eleven years of his troubled life, but not in peace. He was, indeed, meritoriously active and useful in discharging the duties of his office; but he became entangled more hotly than ever in those theological controversies, which he seems to have entered at first only as the champion of literature and the drama, but in which he now became the assailant in his turn. His deviations from orthodox belief were denounced loudly on his publishing a piece called 'Fragments of an Anonymous Writer,' which he asserted to have been discovered in manuscript in the library, but which was confidently alleged to have been composed by himself. His dramatic poem, also, 'Nathan the Wise,' published in 1780, while it is fine and interesting as a series of epic pictures and solemn thoughts, is at least equivocal in its religious aspect. Lessing's last work was his short treatise on 'The Education of the Human Race.' A voluminous correspondence, and many critical papers and notes, are brought together in the collected editions of his works. After much sickness and vexation, he died at Wolfenbüttel in 1781. [W.S.]

At the date of Lessing's birth, it could hardly be said that a national German Literature existed, nor had those peculiar philosophic and critical movements begun which have now long inspired its peculiar life. But the period was auspicious for a revival. Frederick the Great had just burst the limits that restrained the political influence of Northern

Germany, and by a series of exploits unparalleled in modern warfare, was evoking the heroic in Teutonic genius, and teaching his people self-respect and self-dependence, by his vigorous compulsion of Europe to recognize Prussia as one of her integrant nations. Lessing was the Frederick of Thought. By nature wholly Teutonic, he too, sounded a trumpet call; and with a restless energy in nowise inferior to Frederick's, an activity and plenitude of resources that overlooked no opportunity, he dashed, now into this region of dormant literature, now into that unpenetrated department of philosophy, until he had laid the foundation of almost every conquest that has illustrated the recent ever-memorable career of his kindred. The earliest efforts of this remarkable person lay in that direction in which he accomplished one of his latest and greatest triumphs, viz.: literary Criticism and Æsthetics. His History of the Theatre; on Letters on Literature; his Life of Sophocles; his Dramaturgy; his Fables perhaps, and his Theory of the Apologue, belonged to a career which culminated in the Laocoon,—that great classic treatise on the respective limits and characteristics of Painting and Poetry. Without forgetting the immense debt that must ever be held due to Winckleman, it may be averred with justice, that in Lessing's Laocoon, all those rich thoughts and aspirations concerning Art, which so enrich modern Teutonic speculation, find their natural root. Striking at once at the principle of distinction, he establishes, that as the arts of Design labour for the gratification of the outward sense, their proper sphere is within the Beautiful; whereas Poetry and written thought, appeal to the Imagination, which can reconcile itself even to deformity. 'The consequences,' says Goethe, 'of this splendid thought were illumined to us as by a lightning flash; all the criticism that had hitherto passed sentence was thrown away like a worn-out garment; we thought ourselves redeemed from all evil, and fancied that we might venture to look down with some compassion upon the otherwise so splendid sixteenth century, when, in German sculptures and poems, they knew how to represent Life only under the form of a well-bedizened fool, Death under the misformed shape of a rattling skeleton, and the necessary and accredited evils of the world under the image of a Devil in Caricature.'—Lessing, however, did not confine himself to precepts, he led the way by his own admirable dramas, to the practical revival of that highest and profoundest Art. Beginning with a drama of common life, Miss Sarah Sampson, he entered a vigorous protest against the frivolities of the super-classic school, and asserted the true function of the Drama. Next and far more perfect, Minna Von Barnhelm; then his still greater work, Emilia Galotti; and he crowned his triumph by the incomparable Nathan the Wise. Incapable of their reach of imagination, and by no means gifted with the amazing penetrating power of a Shakspeare or a Goethe, nevertheless, Lessing has been surpassed by few in that species of Drama, named the moral Drama—rather one, which, in the largest sense, aims at manifesting systematically, through the Dramatic form, the sphere and aspects of some great principle. His analytic faculty was of the first order; his conce equalled in definiteness; and his mo sion especially excelled in chastity an cision. Who has read Nathan, and c sight of him? Few creations surpass the qualities of repose and elevation; of the inferior characters fail to at ponding admiration. It was Lessing work—the song of the Swan: but its provoked more than an empty and they have raised many hearts to the ception we can form of the virtues and Tolerance.—The intellect and influ sing extended far beyond the range and the Drama: nor perhaps, has h

Germany, or rather his profound appre tendencies, and foresight of their effects ing illustration and record, than in t Wolfenbuttel Fragments. The work although shaped and annotated by Le remarkable writings first stirred that issued in the memorable critical and ra of Germany. In these Fragments sp formal attack on the then unquestio
Protestant Churches—the absolute au
Scriptures. These writings are declar Historical documents, which, like al documents, must be subjected to the cism: it is asserted that the foundati tianity are not solely in the gospels be modified by Inquiry, their text much of it repudiated as spurious:
all the while not losing its trust which is in the heart and the reason were, of course, quite out of place to favourably or unfavourably, these Wolf positions: the important point is, th conduct of Lessing, they foreshadowed for evil, so much of the future of Germ —how new they were at the time, a reclamations of Pastor Goeze of Ha dealt with them after the manner
ma. Lessing followed up with his Education of the Human Race, in tempts to shadow out more definitely, future relation of Humanity to the velation.—It is more difficult to stat sion the attitude of Lessing toward philosophy properly so called. Practi and earnest, he thought and specula reference to practical problems and int theless, the speculative schemes of h decessors could not be indifferent to after Lessing's death, disclosed in cert Mendelssohn, the particulars of a priv tion, tending to establish that his fri into the pantheism of Spinoza. The such conversation must ever be prote as breach of confidence; and it is almo a source of misrepresentation;—what not, in the frankness and confiden course, give utterance at times to me pressions, as if they were his abiding much is unquestionable—Lessing has one solitary word inconsistent with a fir sion in the Personality of Man. This indeed, belongs to a class of minds misapprehended—minds, which none
so far akin to them, can rightly

Otherest in antagonism, or in a critical attitude, thinkers like Lessing do not generally express their whole thought; they dwell only on the part of the common thought, from which they dissent. So far, however, from being ruled by mere negations, it is certainly more probable that their dissent arises from a completer view and possession of truth; and that their effort is confined, to the desire to separate truth from error, or, at all events, from non-essentials. Be that as it may, the writer of whom we speak, stands fitly as the herald of the modern era in his native land:—he polished his mother tongue and made it classical; and as we have seen, he initiated several of the more remarkable movements for which our Teutonic brethren are now famous. His life was that of a brave unbending literary man. Not exempt from the disasters of such a life, he was not exempt from all its errors: but even amidst error he possessed himself,—he did not resign the freedom, or compromise the dignity of the Thinker. [J.P.N.]

LESSIUS, LEONARD, a learned Jesuit, successively professor of philosophy and divinity at Louvain, 1554-1623.

LESTANG, ANTHONY DE, a French savant, author of a 'History of the Gauls,' d. 1613 or 1617.

LESTERPT-BEAUVAIS, B., a partizan of the Girondists in the convention, executed 1793.

LESTRA, F., a French traveller, 17th century.

LESTRANGE, or LETRANGE, RENE D'HAUTEFORT, Viscount De, gov. of Puy in the interest of the Leaguers, seneschal 1595, died about 1621.

L'ESTRANGE, SIR ROGER, a partizan of Charles I., famous as a political writer, and translator from the learned languages, 1616-1704.

LESUEUR, EUSTACE, one of the greatest painters of France, called the French Raphael, 1617-55.

LESUEUR, J., a French historian, died 1681.

LESUEUR, J. F., a Fr. composer, 1763-1837.

LESUEUR, PETER, a French wood engraver, 1636-1716. His son, of the same name, who died 1698, and his son, VINCENT, died 1743, followed the same art. Their nephew, NICHOLAS, d. 1764.

LESUEUR, TH., a famous mathematician, au. of 'Principles of Natural Philosophy,' &c., 1703-70.

LESUIRE, R. M., a French author, 1737-1815.

LETHIEULLIER, SMART, a native of Essex, distinguished as a naturalist and antiquarian, died 1760.

LETI, GREGORIO, author of an immense number of works on history, which are generally regarded as more entertaining than trustworthy, was born at Milan in 1630, and died 1701. Among his works are a 'History of Sixtus Quintus,' three volumes, 1669; a 'History of Philip II.,' 1679; a 'History of England,' 1682; 'The Cardinalism of the Roman Church;' 'Life of Queen Elizabeth;' 'The Nepotism of Rome,' &c.

LETROSNE, W. F., a Fr. economist, 1728-1780.

LETTICE, JOHN, an English clergyman, known as a poet and miscellaneous writer, 1737-1832.

LETTSOM, JOHN COAKLEY, a native of the West Indies, distinguished in London as a physician, author of professional works and writings on natural history, 1744-1815.

LEU, J. J., a Swiss author, 1689-1768.

LEU, PH. DE, a French engraver, born 1570.

LEUCHT, C. L., a Ger. jurisconsult, 1645-1716.

LEUCIPPUS, a Greek philosopher, who lived between the 4th and 5th centuries B.C., and to whom the first idea of the atomic system is attributed, which was afterwards perfected by his disciple Democritus. Kepler and Descartes were much indebted to the ancient doctrines of these masters for the explanation of the planetary vortices. Bacon remarks that Democritus and Leucippus were so much taken up with the particles of things as to neglect their structure.

LEUCKFELD, J. G., a Ger. savant, 1668-1726.

LEUSDEN, J., a Dutch Hebraist, 1624-1699.

LEUTINGET, N., a Ger. historian, 1547-1612.

LEUWENHOECK, ANTOINE, a celebrated naturalist, was born at Delft in 1632. He died in 1723. His first title to distinction was derived from the superior skill he manifested in cutting glasses for microscopes and spectacles. He afterwards became more famous for the use he applied the microscope to. His whole life, which was a long one, was devoted to making anatomical observations and experiments, and researches in natural history; and his numerous papers in the Philosophical Transactions of London show his industry and perseverance. His observations upon the continuous nature of arteries and veins; upon the composition of the blood; upon the structure of the crystalline lens of the eye; upon the spermatic animalcules; and the history of some of the more minute animals as observed by the microscope, have established his reputation as an accurate observer, and diligent inquirer into the secrets of nature. His fame during his lifetime had spead far and wide; and when Peter the Great of Russia passed in 1698 by Delft, Leuwenhoeck was expressly invited to an interview with his majesty, and delighted him by exhibiting through his microscope the circulation of the blood going on in the tail of an eel. [W.B.]

LEVACHER, G., a French surgeon, 1693-1760.

LEVAILLANT, FRANCIS, a native of Guiana, dist. as an African trav. and naturalist, 1754-1824.

LEVASSOR, M., a French historian, 17th cent.

LEVE, ANT. DE, a cele. Span. general, d. 1536.

LEVEQUE, P., a French historian, 1713-1781.

LEVER, SIR ASHTON, a gentleman of fortune, who impoverished himself by collecting a museum of natural history, which was exhibited in Leicester Square from 1775 to 1785. Died 1788.

LEVER, THOMAS, an eloquent minister of the reign of Edward VI., au. of sermons, &c., d. 1577.

LEVERIDGE, R., a famous singer, 1670-1758.

LEVESQUE, L. C., a Fr. authoress, 1703-1745.

LEVESQUE, P. C., a learn. histor., 1736-1812.

LEVESQUE-DE-CARAVALIERE, P. A., the author of 'Poésies de Roi du Navarre,' 1697-1762.

LEVESQUE-DE-POUILLY, L. J., a French magistrate and political writer, 1691-1750. His son, J. SIMON, also an author, and member of the Academy of Inscriptions, 1734-1820.

LEVI, the third son of Jacob and Leah.

LEVI, DAVID, a tradesman of London, remarkable for his self-acquired learning, author of 'Letters to Dr. Priestley, in answer to his Letters addressed to the Jews,' a 'Hebrew-English Dictionary,' a 'Hebrew Grammar,' 'The Rites and Ceremonies of the Jews,' &c., 1740-1799.

LEVI-BEN-GERSHOM, a learned rabbi and disciple of Aristotle, born in Provençe, 1290-1370.

LEVIEUX, R., a Fr. painter, time of Louis XV.

LEVINGSTON, JAMES, a Scottish royalist, created by Charles I. Lord Levingston of Almont and earl of Callendar, died 1672.

LEVIS, FRANCIS, Duke De, a French marshal, distinguished in Canada, 1720-1787. His son, PIERRIA MARIA GASTON, Duc De Levis, a member of the constituent assembly, known as a political writer and moralist after the restor., 1764-1830.

LEVIZAC, JOHN PONS VICTOR LECOUTZ DE, au. of several works on French literature, d. 1813.

LEWELLIN. See LLYWELYN.

LEWENHAUPT, A. L. COUNT DE, a Swedish general, who died in Russia after a captivity of ten years, 1719; author of 'Memoirs,' published 1757.

LEWENHAUPT, C. E., of the same family as the preceding, sent to Finland against the Russians in 1742, and, failing of success, beheaded in 1743.

LEWIS, JOHN, a Church of England divine, dist. for his antiquarian learning, au. of a 'History of John Wickliffe,' 'History and Antiquities of the Abbey Church of Faversham,' &c., 1675-1746.

LEWIS, MATTHEW GREGORY, a popular novelist, author of 'The Monk,' &c., 1773-1818.

LEWIS, CAPTAIN MERIWETHER, had the joint conduct with Lieutenant Clarke (q.v.) of the first expedition across the Rocky Mountains undertaken by the United States government.

LEY, or LEIGH, SIR J., an em. lawyer, created Baron Ley and earl of Marlborough, 1552-1628.

LEY, JOHN, a controversial divine, 1583-1662.

LEYBOURN, W., a mathemat., d. about 1690.

LEYDECKER, MELCHIOR, a Dutch theologian, au. of 'The Rep. of the Hebrews,' &c., 1652-1721.

LEYDEN, JOHN, a Scotch physician, eminent as a linguist, antiquary, and poet, 1775-1811.

LEYDEN, JOHN OF, a famous leader of the anabaptists, was a tailor's apprentice at the Hague at the close of the 15th century, and his proper name was John Boccold, or Bockels. The events which have handed his name down to posterity form a bloody episode in the history of the Reformation. The movements of Luther had been preceded by political and social commotions in Germany, and as it gained strength, the spiritual freedom which it promised was carried down into these disaffected elements. Political sects everywhere sprung up, who grounded their dogmas in the religious principles of the reformers, and raised the cry of equality against the princes and nobles who had so long oppressed them. The ignorant, the poor, the hopeless, the turbulent, swelled these dangerous bodies to scores of thousands, and they were only vanquished in one principality to rise with fresh vigour in another, and begin a new reign of terror under other and more daring leaders. One such was John of Leyden, who began to acquire influence among them in 1533, about which time he associated himself with the anabaptist Mathison. The name of the party was derived from the alleged necessity of rebaptism into the church, (that of infants being held invalid,) and as the church with them was also the state, this baptism became as the oriflamme of an armed propaganda which threatened every form of existing order. In 1534, the city of Munster was divided into two hostile camps, the anabaptists having become so numerous as to proclaim a new religious and political constitution. The prince-bishop was soon deprived of all authority, and collecting his adherents around him, and adding to their number troops of mercenaries, he laid regul
'New Israel.' Meanwhile, John of wife had been proclaimed king and more than six months their devote fended the city. At length, in Ju troops were admitted by treason i of night, but not to an easy conques was disputed street by street, and th ber of the anabaptists perished in th city afterwards being delivered up eight days. John of Leyden, and so accomplices, were taken alive, and ex nary, 1536, with the cruelty usual a
The anabaptists accepted the free pr Reformation without the Bible, in they laid claim to particular inspira Quakers, their more peaceful succes the subjects of preternatural co visionary hallucinations, which often and demoniac possession. See S CER.

LEYDEN, J. G. VAN, a D. chro

LEYDEN, LUCAS VAN. See JA

LEYSER, A., a Prussian jurist,

LEYSER, POLYCARP, a theologi fession of Augsburg, 1552-1601.
nephew, of the same name, a literary 1728. JOHN, of the same family, merous works in favour of polygamy

LEYSSENS, N., a Flemish paint

LETO, A., a Spanish painter, 17

LEYVA, J. DE, a Spanish paint

LEZARDIERE, MARIE PAULI of 'Theorie de la Politique de la M caise,' 1754-1835.

LEZAY - MARNESIA, CLAU
ADRIAN, Marquis De, a man of let a deputy to the estates-general, a tempts in 1790 to form a colony in 1735-1800. His son, ADRIAN, Co
Marnesia, a political wr. and diplom

LHOMOND, C. F., a Fr. gramm

L'HOPITAL. See HOPITAL.

L'HOSE, NESTOR, a Fr. Orientali

LHUYD, EDWARD, a Welch antic of an 'Irish-English Dictionary,' Britannica,' &c., 1670-1709.

LHUYD, LHWYD, or LHOYD
antiq., au. of a 'History of Cambria.

LIANS, T. P. DE, a Span. paint

LIARD, JOSEPH, a Fr. engineer.

LIBANIUS, a famous rhetorician tioch, and educated at Athens, anth oratorical and moral treatises, mos still extant, flourished in the time
Julian, about 314-390. Libanius of St. Basil and John Chrysostom.

LIBANIUS, G., a German scien

LIBARID, a Georgian general, w self independent in 1045, and was

LIBARIUS, A., a German phy guished as the first to speak of the blood from one living being to anot

LIBERALE, G., an Italian paint

LIBERALE, V., an Italian paint

LIBERATUS, an eccles. writer

LIBERGE, M., a Fr. jurisconsult

LIBERI, C. P., an Italian painte

LIBERIUS, the successor of Jul

352. At first the friend of Athanasius, he xiled on his account by the emperor Con-us, but afterwards most weakly and wickedly ibed to the Arian tenets. Liberius, how-t last died a good catholic in 366.

ICKI, J., a Polish poet of the 17th century.

URNIO, N., a Venetian savant, 1474-1557.

ETI, F., an Italian philosopher, 1577-1657.

HERIE, L., a French painter, died 1687.

HTENAU, WILHELMINA EUKE-RIETZ, ess Von, a favourite of Frederick-William f Prussia, author of 'Memoirs,' 1754-1820.

HTENBERG, GEORGE CHRISTOPHER, a l philosopher and moralist, author of many of wit and humour, including a satire on stem of Lavater, entitled 'The Physiognomy ils,' and really distinguished for his contri-s to the physical sciences, 1742-1799.

HTENSTEIN, JOSEPH WENCESLAUS, Von, an Austrian field-marshal, 1696-1772.

HTENSTEIN, JOHN JOSEPH, Prince Von, strian general and diplomatist, time of Na-, 1760-1833. His cousin, ALOYS GON-z, distinguished himself at Leipzig 1813, and campaigns of 1814-1815.

HTNER, M. G., a Ger. fabulist, 1719-83.

CINIUS, CAIUS, a Roman poet, 1st c. B.C.

CINIUS, CAIUS FLAVIUS, a native of Dacia, scure origin, who was born about 263, and e emperor of Rome in 312. He was de-d by Constantine 323, and put to death the following. His son, FLAVIUS VALERIUS, had been declared Cæsar in 317, was put to at Constantinople in 326.

CINIUS-STOLO, a Roman plebeian, who be-tribune B.C. 375, and consul 363 and 360.

CINIUS-TEGULA, a Roman poet, 200 B.C.

DDEL, DUNCAN, a Scotch physician and ma-tician, founder of a professorship, 1561-1613.

DEN, J. H., a Swedish writer, author of a tory of the Poets of Sweden,' mid. of last cen.

DNER, B., a Swedish poet, 1759-1793.

EBE, CH. S., a Gr. numismatist, 1687-1736.

EBLE, PH. L., a French ecclesiastic, au. of Limits of Charlemagne's Empire,' 1734-1813.

EMAKER, N., a Flemish painter, 1575-1647.

ERRE, J. VAN, a Flem. painter, abt. 1530-83.

EUTAUD, J., a Fr. astronomer, 1660-1733.

EUTAUD, J., a Fr. anatomist, 1703-1780.

IEVEN, COUNT VON, a Swedish general and or, dist. at Narva and Pultowa, 1670-1733.

IEVENS, J., a Flemish Hellenist, 1546-1599.

IEVENS, J., a Dutch painter, 1607-1663.

IGARIO, P., an Italian painter, 1686-1752.

IGHTFOOT, DR. JOHN, a Hebrew scholar divine of the period of the parliamentary wars, n in Staffordshire 1602, died, vice-chancellor Cambridge, 1675. He was a great master of biblical learning, and was much admired for his per and disinterested conduct in the difficult es through which he had to pass. The Polyglott ble, and Poole's Synopsis Criticorum, are among e great works promoted by him. His own works re published in 2 vols. folio, 1684, a second ition in 1686, and one of three vols. in 1699. n octavo vol. of his 'Remains,' with some notices f his life, was published by Strype.

LIGHTFOOT, JOHN, a Church of England inister, who dist. himself as a botanist, 1735-88.

LIGNAC, JOSEPH ADRIAN LE LARGE DE, a priest of the oratory at Paris, distinguished as the author of several curious works in natural history and theology, died 1762.

LIGNE, CHARLES JOSEPH, Prince De, was born of an ancient family at Brussels in 1735, and distinguished himself as a general in the Austrian service from the period of the seven years' war to the congress of Vienna, during the session of which he died, in 1814. He is author of several political works, and of 'Memoirs' of great interest. His works were collected in 6 volumes 8vo, 1817.

LIGONIER, JOHN, earl of, a companion-in-arms of Marlborough, born 1678, commander-in-chief 1757, died 1770.

LIGORIO, PIERO, an architect and antiquary of Naples, who shared the direction of the works at the Vatican with Michelangelo, and that of the erection of St. Peter's with Vignola. He died in 1583, and his MSS. and designs collected from the antique, form thirty folio volumes.

LIGOZZI, J., an Italian painter, 1543-1627.

LIGUORI, A. M. DE, an ascetic wr., 1696-1787.

LILBURNE, JOHN, a famous English republican, whose merits far surpass the reputation in which he has been held, was born of an old family in the county of Durham, 1613, and, after receiving a common education, became a clothier in London. He was thoroughly imbued with the temper of the times, and was first known to the public through a prosecution of the Star Chamber for complicity with Bastwick. His intrepid defence of his rights as a free-born Englishman, before that dreaded bar of the high church party, gained for him the familiar appellation of 'free-born John.' He was condemned to receive 500 lashes at the cart tail, and to stand in the pillory; but his spirit was only aroused by this disgraceful punishment, his name became the watchword of a large and tumultuous party, and the House of Commons voted the sentence 'barbarous and illegal.' Such a man was not likely to be 'slow' when active measures were resorted to by the parliament. He fought bravely at Edge Hill and Marston Moor, and became lieutenant-colonel under the earl of Manchester; for an assault upon whose character he suffered imprisonment, and underwent many hardships His chief fault was the want of a more statesman-like spirit, so that he was continually sinking from the leading position he might have held, in virtue of his integrity and intrepidity, to that of a demagogue. He boldly accused Cromwell and Ireton of treason, and the former tried, in vain, to make him comprehend the real situation of affairs, and seems at last to have given him up in despair, and to have prosecuted him from necessity, while he valued his steady qualities and incorruptible nature. Reduced to quiescence under the iron hand of the Protector, his political enthusiasm subsided into the religious, and the famous John Lilburne became a preacher among the Quakers. Died 1657. [E.R.]

LILIEBLAD, G., a learned Swede, 1651-1710.

LILIECRANTZ, J., a Sw. statesm., 1730-1815.

LILIENBERG, J. G., chancellor of Sweden, and president of the council of mines, in the reign of Frederick I., died at the end of the last century. His brother, ERIC GUSTAVUS, served in France under Marshal Saxe 1740, and died 1770.

LILIENTHAL, M., a Germ. divine, 1686-1750

LILIO, Luigi, in Latin, Lilius, an Italian mathematician, author of the plan for reforming the calendar effected by Gregory XIII., died 1579.

LILLO, George, an English dramatic writer, famous in the delineation of domestic tragedy, author of 'George Barnwell,' 'Fatal Curiosity,' 'Arden of Faversham,' and other pieces. Lillo carried on the business of a jeweller, and was a man of unblemished character, 1693-1739.

LILLY, John, a dramatic writer, author of 'Endymion' and 'Midas,' acted before Queen Elizabeth, and of a famous pamphlet, entitled 'Martin Mar-Prelate,' about 1553-1600.

LILLY, William, whose reputation as an astrologer raised him to considerable importance at the time of the parliamentary wars, was born in Leicestershire, 1602, and was in service in London as a bookkeeper, when his master died, and gave him the opportunity of marrying his widow. This lady possessed a small fortune of about £1,000, and dying six years afterwards left him master of considerable leisure, and of the art of invoking spirits, which he had derived from the instruction of Evans, a Welch clergyman, and from the study of Cornelius Agrippa. The first public trial of his art, however, was an attempt to discover a buried treasure in the cloisters of Westminster Abbey with the use of the divining rod, the chief movers in which were Ramsay and Scot. The actors in this scene were terrified from their purpose by a storm which threatened to bury them beneath the ruins of the abbey, and Lilly, who claims the merit of having 'laid the spirits' by which it was raised, attributed their failure to the want of faith and better knowledge in his companions. In 1634 Lilly ventured on a second marriage, which proved unfortunate as a commercial speculation, for though the bride possessed a dowry of £500, she spent more than she brought. In 1644 he published the first of his almanacks, which he continued during the remaining thirty-six years of his lifetime, under the title of 'Merlinus Anglicus.' The predictions contained in this ephemeris, and his interpretation of the three suns which appeared in the heavens that year, on the birth-day of Prince Charles, brought our astrologer a valuable reputation, and he was soon consulted by both the political parties who divided the kingdom. There can be no doubt that his advice was often well-founded, and his predictions frequently verified by the events; but it is just as certain that he was a man of no character. He was a double-dealer and a liar by his own showing, but as stanch a believer in his own honesty as in the truth of his art, and perhaps as decent a man as a trading prophet could well be under any circumstances. It is some excuse that he was courted by noble and crowned heads at home and abroad, and richly rewarded by them. In 1648 the parliament of England gave him an annual pension of £100, which he threw up in disgust two years afterwards on receiving some affront; yet he was able to lay out large sums in the purchase of landed property. He died in 1681, leaving works of great interest in the history of astrology, and of some importance as characterizing the times in which he lived, and the historical persons with whom he was associated. [E.R.]

LILY, William, first master of St. Paul's school, author of a well-known Latin grammar, 1468-1522. His son, George, a dignitary church, and writer of history, died 1559. P brother of George, and his son of the same were also distinguished in the church, and th ter, who died in 1614, is author of 'Sermon

LIMBORCH, H. Van, a D. painter, 1680-

LIMBORCH, Philip, pastor of a congre of Dutch Remonstrants, and professor of di was born at Amsterdam 1633, and died in p sion of a high personal character and repu 1712. He was nephew, by the mother's si Episcopius, and edited some of his papers i junction with Hartsoeker. His own work 'Theologia Christiana,' a defence of Arminian ciples; a 'History of the Inquisition,' a 'Com tary on the Apostolic Writings,' &c.

LIMIERS, H. Ph. De, born of French p in Holland, cele. as a critic and historian, d

LIMNÆUS, J., a German publicist, 1592

LINACRE, Thomas, a physician and s greatly distinguished in the reigns of Henr and Henry VIII., 1460-1524.

LINCK, J. H., a German naturalist, 1674

LIND, James, an English physician, dieс

LINDANUS, W. D., a native of Dort, guished as a controversial divine, and the of the Roman Catholic Church, 1525-1588.

LINDBLOM, A., a Swedish prelate, 174

LINDEN, J. A. Vander, a D. phys., 1

LINDERN, F. B. Von, a Ger. botan., 168

LINDET, A. T., a French priest, and m of the convention, 1743-1823. His brother Robert Lindet, a member of the Comm Public Safety, died 1825.

LINDSAY, Sir David. See Lyndsay

LINDSAY, J., a nonjuring minister of E an. of a 'History of the Regal Succession,' c

LINDSAY, R., a Scottish historian, 16th

LINDSEY, Theophilus, a Church of E divine, afterwards known as a preacher and on Socinianism, 1723-1808.

LINDWOOD, W., an English divine, die

LINGARD, Dr. John, the Roman C historian of England, was born in Win 1771, and made his first appearance as a in 1805, when he wrote a series of lette Newcastle Courant, entitled 'Catholic Vindicated.' To Dr. Lingard belongs honour of refusing a cardinal's hat. He a life of 'illustrious obscurity,' 1851.

LINGLOIS, P. F., a French jurist, 1

LINGUET, Simon Nicholas Hen brated political writer and historian, executed after taking an active part in revolution, 1794.

LINIERE, F. P. De, a French poet

LINIERS-BREMONT, Don S Spanish commander, who defended B against the English in 1806-7, and h with Buonaparte, was shot by a pa tionists, 26th August, 1809.

LINLEY, Thomas, a distinguish poser, received his first instructions Thomas Chilcott, and afterwards brated Paradies. Linley was for m ductor of the oratorios and con and has been called the restorer Handel, in the same sense as Ga plays of Shakspeare. Linley w became joint patentee of Drury Lane theatre his son-in-law, Richard Brinsley Sheridan, hich establishment he, for many years, con- ed the musical department of the entertain- ts. He composed music for the following es, namely 'The Duenna,' 'The Carnival of ice,' 'Selima and the Royal Merchant,' 'The ip,' 'The Spanish Maid,' 'The Stranger at me,' 'Love in the East,' and many other es. His madrigal for four voices,—

'Let me, careless and unthoughtful lying,
Hear the soft winds above me flying,' onsidered equal in all respects, and superior to many of the most celebrated compositions of same class. Linley died in London in 1795, was buried in Wells cathedral, in the same with his daughters, Mrs. Sheridan and Mrs. ell. [J.M.]

INLEY, THOMAS, a son of the preceding, cele- ed as a violinist, drowned at the age of twenty- 1778. His younger son, WILLIAM, a writer composer of songs, born about 1767.

INN, WILLIAM, a minister and protestant op of New York, 1752-1808. His son, JOHN ER LINN, a distinguished poet, 1777-1804.

